Que le libérateur du monde fût esclave,
Et que ce vaste Etna vît se figer sa lave
Sous des bouches soufflant on ne sait quels venins,
Et que ce géant fût garrotté par des nains!

Il serait inouï que cette altière France
Par qui s’est envolé l’archange Délivrance,
Après avoir sonné les sublimes beffrois,
Et mis les nations hors du cachot des rois,
Et déployé pour tous les peuples sa bannière,
Fût de la liberté des autres prisonnière,
Et livrée aux geôliers par ceux dont elle a fait
La force, en ces grands jours où le droit triomphait!
Cela ne sera pas! Quelle que soit l’injure,
Quelque affreuse que semble être cette gageure
Du funeste Aujourd’hui contre le fier Demain,
Nous sommes les vivants profonds du droit humain;
Ayons foi. Ces fléaux et ces rois d’un autre âge Passeront. Quels que soient l’affront, le deuil, l’outrage, L’énigme et la noirceur apparente du sort,
On cesse de haïr la nuit quand l’aube en sort!
Et, France, tu vaincras, ô prêtresse, ô guerrière,
Tes tyrans par l’épée et Dieu par la prière!
Oui, prêtres, nous prions. Je crois, sachez-le bien.
Comme le vert palmier craint l’autan libyen,
Nous craignons pour nos fils votre enseignement triste;
Ah! vous ébranlez tout, prêtres. Mais Dieu résiste.
Nous l’avons dans nos cœurs, et pas déraciné.
Je veux mourir en lui, car en lui je suis né;

Et je sens dans mon âme où tout l’aime et le nomme

Que c’est du droit de Dieu qu’est fait le droit de l’homme.
LE CHŒUR
Une fois que le vrai s’est mis en marche, il va
Droit au but, et toujours l’avenir arriva.
LE POËTE
Esprit humain, nul vent ne te cassera l’aile.
Jamais rien ne pourra troubler le parallèle
Entre l’ordre céleste et l’humaine raison;
L’aurore frémirait derrière l’horizon
Des propositions que lui ferait l’abîme.
L’enchaînement sans fin suit une loi sublime;
Toute ombre est une fuite; et toujours le moment
Superbe, où blanchira le bas du firmament,
Vient quand il doit venir, et jamais la Chaldée
Ni l’Inde aux yeux rêveurs n’ont vu l’aube attardée;
Nul souffle au fond du ciel n’éteint l’éternel feu;
L’infini conscient que nous appelons Dieu
Soutient tout ce qui penche, entend tout ce qui pleure.
Aucun fléau ne peut demeurer passé l’heure;
Nulle calamité n’a droit de s’arrêter;
Dieu ne permettra pas à la nuit de rester.

Dieu ne laissera pas continuer le crime.
Croit-on que le soleil manquerait à la cime
Qui l’attend, lui le grand visage souriant?
Comprendrait-on l’étoile oubliant l’Orient?
Le devoir de l’obstacle est de se laisser vaincre.
Demain nous appartient; rien ne pourra convaincre
Le jour qu’il ne doit pas se lever du côté
Du droit, de la justice et de la vérité.
Dieu supprime le mal, les fléaux, les désastres
Par la fidélité formidable des astres.
LE CHŒUR
France, songe au devoir. Sois grande, c’est ta loi.
LE POËTE
Et fais de ta mémoire un redoutable emploi
En y gardant toujours les villes arrachées.

Enseignons à nos fils à creuser des tranchées,
À faire comme ont fait les vieux dont nous venons,
À charger des fusils, à rouler des canons,
À combattre, à mourir, et lisons-leur Homère.
Et tu nous souriras, quoique tu sois leur mère,
Car tu sais que des fils qui meurent fièrement

Sont l'orgueil de leur mère et son contentement.
France, ayons l'ennemi présent à la pensée,
Comme les grands Troyens qui, sur la porte Scée, S'asseyaient et suivaient des yeux les assiégeants.
Ces rois heureux autour de nous sont outrageants;
Aimons les peuples, mais n'oublions pas les princes.
En même temps restons penchés sur ces provinces
Qui sanglotent, en proie aux fléaux jamais las.
Soyons amers et doux. La question, hélas!
Est toute dans ce mot sans fond : les misérables;
Ceux-ci sont monstrueux; ceux-là sont vénérables;
Réprimons ceux d'en haut; secourons ceux d'en bas;
Prodiguons l'aide immense en songeant aux combats.
Peuple, il est deux trésors, l'un clarté, l'autre flamme,
Qu'il ne faut pas laisser décroître dans notre âme,
Et qui sont de nos cœurs chacun une moitié,
C'est la sainte colère et la sainte pitié.

XXIII

LES PETITS

GUERRE CIVILE

La foule était tragique et terrible; on criait :
À mort! Autour d’un homme altier, point inquiet,
Grave, et qui paraissait lui-même inexorable,
Le peuple se pressait : À mort le misérable!
Et, lui, semblait trouver toute simple la mort.
La partie est perdue, on n’est pas le plus fort,
On meurt, soit. Au milieu de la foule accourue, Les vainqueurs le traînaient de chez lui dans la rue — À mort l’homme! — On l’avait saisi dans son logis;
Ses vêtements étaient de carnage rougis;
Cet homme était de ceux qui font l’aveugle guerre
Des rois contre le peuple, et ne distinguent guère
Scévola de Brutus, ni Barbès de Blanqui;

Il avait tout le jour tué n’importe qui;
Incapable de craindre, incapable d’absoudre,
Il marchait, laissant voir ses mains noires de poudre;
Une femme le prit au collet : — À genoux!
C’est un sergent de ville. Il a tiré sur nous!
— C’est vrai, dit l’homme. — À bas! À mort! qu’on le fusille!
Dit le peuple. — Ici! Non! Plus loin! À la Bastille!
À l’arsenal! Allons! Viens! Marche! — Où vous voudrez,
Dit le prisonnier. — Tous, hagards, les rangs serrés, Chargèrent leurs fusils. — Mort au sergent de ville!
Tuons-le comme un loup! — Et l’homme dit, tranquille :
— C’est bien, je suis le loup, mais vous êtes les chiens.
— Il nous insulte! À mort! — Les pâles citoyens Croisaient leurs poings crispés sur le captif farouche;
L’ombre était sur son front et le fiel dans sa bouche;

Cent voix criaient : — À mort! À bas! Plus d’empereur!
On voyait dans ses yeux un reste de fureur

Remuer vaguement comme une hydre échouée;
Il marchait, poursuivi par l'énorme huée,
Et, calme, il enjambait, plein d'un superbe ennui,
Des cadavres gisants, peut-être faits par lui.
Le peuple est effrayant lorsqu'il devient tempête;
L'homme sous plus d'affronts levait plus haut la tête;
Il était plus que pris; il était envahi.
Dieu! comme il haïssait! comme il était haï!
Comme il les eût, vainqueur, fusillés tous! — Qu'il meure!
Il nous criblait encor de balles tout à l'heure!
À bas cet espion, ce traître, ce maudit!
À mort! c'est un brigand! — Soudain on entendit
Une petite voix qui disait : — C'est mon père!

Et quelque chose fit l'effet d'une lumière.
Un enfant apparut. Un enfant de six ans;
Ses deux bras se dressaient suppliants, menaçants.
Tous criaient : — Fusillez le mouchard! Qu'on l'assomme!
Et l'enfant se jeta dans les jambes de l'homme,
Et dit, ayant au front le rayon baptismal :
— Père, je ne veux pas qu'on te fasse de mal!
Et cet enfant sortait de la même demeure.
Les clameurs grossissaient : — À bas l'homme! Qu'il meure!
À bas! finissons-en avec cet assassin!
Mort! — Au loin le canon répondait au tocsin.
Toute la rue était pleine d'hommes sinistres.
— À bas les rois! À bas les prêtres, les ministres,
Les mouchards! Tuons tout! c'est un tas de bandits!
Et l'enfant leur cria : — Mais puisque je vous dis
Que c'est mon père! — Il est joli, dit une femme,
Bel enfant! — On voyait dans ses yeux bleus une âme;
Il était tout en pleurs, pâle, point mal vêtu.
Une autre femme dit : — Petit, quel âge as-tu?
Et l'enfant répondit : — Ne tuez pas mon père!
Quelques regards pensifs étaient fixés à terre,
Les poings ne tenaient plus l'homme si durement.
Un des plus furieux, entre tous inclément,

Dit à l’enfant : — Va-t-en! — Où? — Chez toi. — Pourquoi faire?
— Chez ta mère. — Sa mère est morte, dit le père.
— Il n’a donc plus que vous? — Qu’est-ce que cela fait?
Dit le vaincu. Stoïque et calme, il réchauffait

Les deux petites mains dans sa rude poitrine, Et disait à l’enfant : — Tu sais bien, Catherine?
— Notre voisine? — Oui. Va chez elle. — Avec toi?
— J’irai plus tard. — Sans toi je ne veux pas. — Pourquoi?
— Parce qu’on te ferait du mal. — Alors le père Parla tout bas au chef de cette sombre guerre :
— Lâchez-moi le collet. Prenez-moi par la main,
Doucement. Je vais dire à l’enfant : À demain!
Vous me fusillerez au détour de la rue,
Ailleurs, où vous voudrez. — Et, d’une voix bourrue :
— Soit, dit le chef, lâchant le captif à moitié.
Le père dit : — Tu vois. C’est de bonne amitié.
Je me promène avec ces messieurs. Sois bien sage.
Rentre. — Et l’enfant tendit au père son visage,
Et s’en alla, content, rassuré, sans effroi.
— Nous sommes à notre aise à présent, tuez-moi,
Dit le père aux vainqueurs; où voulez-vous que j’aille? —
Alors, dans cette foule où grondait la bataille,
On entendit passer un immense frisson,
Et le peuple cria : Rentre dans ta maison!

PETIT PAUL

Sa mère en le mettant au monde s’en alla.
Sombre distraction du sort. Pourquoi cela?
Pourquoi tuer la mère en laissant l’enfant vivre?
Pourquoi par la marâtre, ô deuil! la faire suivre?
Car le père était jeune, il se remaria.
Un an, c’est bien petit pour être paria;
Et le bel enfant rose avait eu tort de naître.
Alors un vieux bonhomme accepta ce pauvre être;

C’était l’aïeul. Parfois ce qui n’est plus défend
Ce qui sera. L’aïeul prit dans ses bras l’enfant Et devint mère. Chose étrange et naturelle.
Sauver ce qu’une morte a laissé derrière elle;

On est vieux, on n’est plus bon qu’à cela; tâcher
D’être le doux passant, celui que vont chercher, D’instinct, les accablés et les souffrants sans nombre,
Et les petites mains qui se tendent dans l’ombre;
Il faut bien que quelqu’un soit là pour le devoir;
Il faut bien que quelqu’un soit bon sous le ciel noir,
De peur que la pitié dans les cœurs ne tarisse;
Il faut que quelqu’un mène à l’enfant sans nourrice
La chèvre aux fauves yeux qui rôde au flanc des monts;
Il faut quelqu’un de grand qui fasse dire : Aimons!
Qui couvre de douceur la vie impénétrable,
Qui soit vieux, qui soit jeune, et qui soit vénérable;
C’est pour cela que Dieu, ce maître du linceul,
Remplace quelquefois la mère par l’aïeul,
Et fait, jugeant l’hiver seul capable de flamme,
Dans l’âme d’un vieillard éclore un cœur de femme.

Donc l’humble petit Paul naquit, fut orphelin,
Eut son grand œil bleu d’ombre et de lumière plein,
Balbutia les mots de la langue ingénue,
Eut la fraîche impudeur de l’innocence nue,
Fut cet ange qu’est l’homme avant d’être complet;
Et l’aïeul, par les ans pâli, le contemplait
Comme on contemple un ciel qui lentement se dore.
Oh! comme ce couchant adorait cette aurore!

Le grand-père emporta l’enfant dans sa maison,
Aux champs, d’où l’on voyait un si vaste horizon
Qu’un petit enfant seul pouvait l’emplir. Les plaines
Étaient vertes, avec toutes sortes d’haleines
Qui sortaient des forêts et des eaux; la maison
Avait un grand jardin, et cette floraison,

Ces prés, tous ces parfums et toute cette vie
Caressèrent l’enfant; les fleurs n’ont pas d’envie.

Dans ce jardin croissaient le pommier, le pêcher,
La ronce; on écartait les branches pour marcher;
Des transparences d’eau frémissaient sous les saules;
On voyait des blancheurs qui semblaient des épaules,
Comme si quelque nymphe eût été là; les nids

Murmuraient l’hymne obscur de ceux qui sont bénis;
Les voix qu’on entendait étaient calmes et douces;
Les sources chuchotaient doucement dans les mousses;
À tout ce qui gazouille, à tout ce qui se tait,
Le remuement confus des feuilles s’ajoutait;
Le paradis, ce chant de la lumière gaie,
Que le ciel chante, en bas la terre le bégaie,
En été, quand l’azur rayonne, ô pur jardin!
Paul étant presque un ange, il fut presque un éden;
Et l’enfant fut aimé dans cette solitude,
Hélas! et c’est ainsi qu’il en prit l’habitude.

Un jardin, c’est fort beau, n’est-ce pas? Mettez-y
Un marmot; ajoutez un vieillard; c’est ainsi
Que Dieu fait. Combinant ce que le cœur souhaite
Avec ce que les yeux désirent, ce poëte
Complète, car au fond la nature c’est l’art,
Les roses par l’enfant, l’enfant par le vieillard.
L’enfant voisine avec les fleurs, c’est de son âge;
Et l’aïeul vient, sachant qu’il est du voisinage;
Et comme c’est exquis de rire au mois d’avril!
Un nouveau-né vermeil, et nu jusqu’au nombril,

Couché sur l’herbe en fleurs, c’est aimable, ô Virgile!
Hélas! c’est tellement divin que c’est fragile!
Paul est d’abord bien frêle et bien chétif. Qui sait?
Vivra-t-il? Un vent noir, lorsqu’il naquit, passait,
Souffle traître; et sait-on si cette bise amère

Ne viendra pas chercher l’enfant après la mère?
Il faut allaiter Paul; une chèvre y consent.
Paul est frère de lait du chevreau bondissant;
Puisque le chevreau saute, il sied que l’homme marche,
Et l’enfant veut marcher. Et l’aïeul patriarche
Dit : C’est juste. Marchons. Oh! les enfants, cela
Tremble, un meuble est Charybde, une pierre est Scylla,

Leur front penche, leur pied fléchit, leur genou ploie,
Mais ce frémissement n’ôte rien à leur joie.
Frémir n’empêche pas la branche de fleurir.
Un an, c’est l’âge fier; croître, c’est conquérir;
Paul fait son premier pas, il veut en faire d’autres.
(Mères, vous le voyez en regardant les vôtres.)
Frais spectacle! l’enfant est suivi par l’aïeul.
— Prends garde de tomber. C’est cela. Va tout seul.
Paul est brave, il se risque, hésite, appelle, espère,
Et tout à coup se met en route, et le grand-père
L’entoure de ses mains que les ans font trembler,
Et, chancelant lui-même, il l’aide à chanceler.
Et cela s’achevait par un éclat de rire.
Oh! pas plus qu’on ne peut peindre un astre, ou décrire
La forêt éblouie au soleil se chauffant,
Nul n’ira jusqu’au fond du rire d’un enfant;
C’est l’amour, l’innocence auguste, épanouie,
C’est la témérité de la grâce inouïe,
La gloire d’être pur, l’orgueil d’être debout,
La paix, on ne sait quoi d’ignorant qui sait tout.

Ce rire, c’est le ciel prouvé, c’est Dieu visible.

L’aïeul, grave figure à mettre en une bible,
Mage que sur l’Horeb Moïse eût tutoyé,
N’était rien qu’un bon vieux grand-père extasié;
Il ne résistait pas au charme, et, sans défense,
Honorait, consultait et vénérait l’enfance;
Il regardait le jour se faire en ce cerveau.

Paul avait chaque mois un bégaiement nouveau,

Effort de la pensée à travers la parole,
Sorte d’ascension lente du mot qui vole,
Puis tombe, et se relève avec un gai frisson,
Et ne peut être idée et s’achève en chanson.
Paul assemblait des sons, leur donnait la volée,
Scandait on ne sait quelle obscure strophe ailée,
Jasait, causait, glosait, sans se taire un instant,
Et la maison était ravie en l’écoutant.
Il chantait, tout riait, et la paix était faite;
On eût dit qu’il donnait le signal de la fête;
Et les arbres parlaient de cet enfant entr’eux;
Et Paul était heureux; c’est charmant d’être heureux!

Avec l’autorité profonde de la joie
Paul régnait; son grand-père était sa douce proie;
L’aïeul obéissait, comme il sied. — Père, attends.
Il attendait. Non. Viens. — Il venait. Le printemps
A sur le vieil hiver tous les droits du jeune âge.
Comme ils faisaient ensemble un bon petit ménage,
Ce petit-fils tyran, ce grand-père opprimé!

Comme janvier cherchait à plaire au mois de mai!
Comme, au milieu des nids chantant à leurs oreilles,
Erraient gaiement ces deux naïvetés pareilles
Dont l’une avait deux ans et l’autre quatrevingt!
Un jour l’un oublia, mais l’autre se souvint;
Ce fut l’enfant. La nuit pour eux n’était point noire.
L’aïeul faisait penser Paul, qui le faisait croire.
On eût dit qu’échangeant leur âme en ce beau lieu,
Chacun montrait à l’autre un des côtés de Dieu.
Ils mêlaient tout, le jour leurs jeux, la nuit leurs sommes.
Oh! quel céleste amour entre ces deux bonshommes!
Ils n’avaient qu’une chambre, ils ne se quittaient pas;
Le premier alphabet, comme le premier pas,
Quelles occasions divines de s’entendre!

Le grand-père n’avait pas d’accent assez tendre
Pour faire épeler l’ange attentif et charmé,
Et pour dire : Ô mon doux petit Paul bien-aimé!
Dialogues exquis! murmures ineffables!
Ainsi les oiseaux bleus gazouillent dans les fables.
— Prends garde, c’est de l’eau. Pas si loin. Pas si près.

Vois, Paul, tu t’es mouillé les pieds. — Pas fait exprès.
— Prends garde aux cailloux. — Oui, grand-père. — Va dans l’herbe.
Et le ciel était pur, pacifique et superbe,
Et le soleil était splendide et triomphant
Au-dessus du vieillard baisant au front l’enfant.

Le père, ailleurs, vivait avec son autre femme.
C’est en vain qu’une morte en sa tombe réclame,
Quand une nouvelle âme entre dans la maison.
De sa seconde femme il avait un garçon,
Et Paul n’en savait rien. Qu’importe! Heureux, prospère, Gai, tranquille, il avait pour lui seul son grand-père!
Le reste existait-il?
Le grand-père mourut.

Quand Sem dit à Rachel, quand Booz dit à Ruth :
Pleurez, je vais mourir! Rachel et Ruth pleurèrent;
Mais le petit enfant ne sait pas; ses yeux errent, Son front songe. L’aïeul, parfois, se sentant las,
Avait dit : — Paul! je vais mourir. Bientôt, hélas!
Tu ne le verras plus, ton pauvre vieux grand-père

Qui t’aimait. — Rien n’éteint cette douce lumière, L’ignorance, et l’enfant, plein de joie et de chants,
Continuait de rire.
Une église des champs,
Pauvre comme les toits que son clocher protége,
S’ouvrit. Je me souviens que j’étais du cortége.
Le prêtre, murmurant une vague oraison,
Les amis, les parents, vinrent dans la maison

Chercher le doux aïeul pour l’aller mettre en terre;
La plaine fut riante autour de ce mystère;
On dirait que les fleurs aiment ces noirs convois;

De bonnes vieilles gens priaient, mêlant leurs voix;
On suivit un chemin, creux comme une tranchée;
Au bord de ce chemin, une vache couchée
Regardait les passants avec maternité;
Les paysans avaient leur bourgeron d’été;
Et le petit marchait derrière l’humble bière.
On porta le vieillard au prochain cimetière,
Enclos désert, muré d’un mur croulant, auprès
De l’église, âpre et nu, point orné de cyprès,
Ni de tombeaux hautains, ni d’inscriptions fausses;
On entrait dans ce champ plein de croix et de fosses,
Lieu sévère où la mort dort si Dieu le permet,
Par une grille en bois que la nuit on fermait;
Aux barreaux s’ajoutait le croisement d’un lierre;
Le petit enfant, chose obscure et singulière,
Considéra l’entrée avec attention.

Le sort pour les enfants est une vision;
Et la vie à leurs yeux apparaît comme un rêve.
Hélas! la nuit descend sur l’astre qui se lève.

Paul n’avait que trois ans.
— Vilain petit satan!

Méchant enfant! Le voir m’exaspère! Va-t-en!
Va-t-en! Je te battrais! Il est insupportable.
Je suis trop bonne encor de le souffrir à table.
Il m’a taché ma robe, il a bu tout le lait.
À la cave! Au pain sec! Et puis il est si laid! — À qui donc parle-t-on? À Paul. — Pauvre doux être!
Hélas! après avoir vu l’aïeul disparaître,
Paul vit dans la maison entrer un inconnu,
C’était son père; puis une femme au sein nu,

Allaitant un enfant; l’enfant était son frère.

La femme l’abhorra sur-le-champ. Une mère
C’est le sphinx; c’est le cœur inexplorable et doux,
Blanc du côté sacré, noir du côté jaloux,
Tendre pour son enfant, dur pour celui d’une autre.
Souffrir, sachant pourquoi, martyr, prophète, apôtre,
C’est bien; mais un enfant, fantôme aux cheveux d’or,
Être déjà proscrit n’étant pas homme encor!

L’épine de la ronce après l’ombre du chêne!

Quel changement! l’amour remplacé par la haine!

Paul ne comprenait plus. Quand il rentrait le soir,
Sa chambre lui semblait quelque chose de noir;
Il pleura bien longtemps. Il pleura pour personne.
Il eut le sombre effroi du roseau qui frissonne.
Ses yeux en s’éveillant regardaient étonnés.
Ah! ces pauvres petits, pourquoi donc sont-ils nés?
La maison lui semblait sans jour et sans fenêtre,
Et l’aurore n’avait plus l’air de le connaître.
Quand il venait : — Va-t-en! Délivrez-moi de ça!
Criait la mère. Et Paul lentement s’enfonça
Dans de l’ombre. Ce fut comme un berceau qu’on noie.
L’enfant qui faisait tout joyeux, perdit la joie;
Sa détresse attristait les oiseaux et les fleurs;
Et le doux boute-en-train devint souffre-douleurs.
— Il m’ennuie! il est sale! il se traîne! il se vautre!
On lui prit ses joujoux pour les donner à l’autre.
Le père laissait faire, étant très-amoureux.

Après avoir été l’ange, être le lépreux!
La femme, en voyant Paul, disait : Qu’il disparaisse!

Et l’imprécation s’achevait en caresse.
Pas pour lui.

— Viens, toi! Viens, l’amour! viens, mon bonheur!
J’ai volé le plus beau de vos anges, Seigneur,
Et j’ai pris un morceau du ciel pour faire un lange.
Seigneur, il est l’enfant, mais il est resté l’ange.
Je tiens le paradis du bon Dieu dans mes bras.
Voyez comme il est beau! Je t’aime. Tu seras

Un homme. Il est déjà très-lourd. Mais c’est qu’il pèse
Presque autant qu’un garçon qui marcherait! Je baise
Tes pieds, et c’est de toi que me vient la clarté! —
Et Paul se souvenait, avec la quantité
De mémoire qu’auraient les agneaux et les roses,
Qu’il s’était entendu dire les mêmes choses.

Il prenait dans un coin, à terre, ses repas.
Il était devenu muet, ne parlait pas,
Ne pleurait plus. L’enfance est parfois sombre et forte.

Souvent il regardait lugubrement la porte.

Un soir on le chercha partout dans la maison;
On ne le trouva point; c’était l’hiver, saison
Qui nous hait, où la nuit est traître comme un piége;
Dehors des petits pas s’effaçaient dans la neige...

On retrouva l’enfant le lendemain matin.
On se souvint de cris perdus dans le lointain;
Quelqu’un même avait ri, croyant, dans les nuées,
Entendre, à travers l’ombre où flottent des huées,
On ne sait quelle voix du vent crier : Papa!
Papa! Tout le village, ému, s’en occupa,
Et l’on chercha; l’enfant était au cimetière.
Calme comme la nuit, blême comme la pierre,
Il était étendu devant l’entrée, et froid;

Comment avait-il pu jusqu’à ce triste endroit
Venir, seul dans la plaine où pas un feu ne brille?

Une de ses deux mains tenait encor la grille;
On voyait qu’il avait essayé de l’ouvrir.
Il sentait là quelqu’un pouvant le secourir;
Il avait appelé dans l’ombre solitaire,
Longtemps; puis il était tombé mort sur la terre,
À quelques pas du vieux grand-père, son ami.
N’ayant pu l’éveiller, il s’était endormi.

FONCTION DE L’ENFANT

Les hommes ont la force, et tout devant eux croule;
Ils sont le peuple, ils sont l’armée, ils sont la foule;
Ils ont aux yeux la flamme, ils ont au poing le fer;
Ils font les dieux; ils sont les dieux; ils sont l’enfer;
Ils sont l’ombre et la guerre; on les entend bruire,
Rugir et triompher; ils peuvent tout détruire,
Et, plus hauts et plus sourds que le sphinx nubien,
Fouler aux pieds le vrai, le faux, le mal, le bien,
Les uns au nom des droits, d’autres au nom des bibles;
Ils sont victorieux, formidables, terribles;
Mais les petits enfants viennent à leur secours.

L’enfant ne suit pas l’homme, ayant les pas trop courts,
Heureusement; il rit quand nous pleurons, il pleure
Quand nous rions; son aile en tremblant nous effleure,
Et rien qu’en nous touchant nous transforme, et, sans bruit,

Met du jour dans nos cœurs pleins d’orage et de nuit.
Notre hautaine voix n’est qu’un clairon superbe;
C’est dans la bouche rose et tendre qu’est le verbe;
Elle seule peut vaincre, avertir, consoler;
Dans l’enfant qui bégaie on entend Dieu parler;
L’enfant parfois défend son père, et, dans la ville
Frémissante de haine et de guerre civile,
Il le sauve; et le peuple, apaisé, rayonnant,
Dit : Lequel doit la vie à l’autre maintenant?

Il suffit quelquefois de ce doux petit être,
Plus brave qu’un soldat et plus pensif qu’un prêtre,
Pour rallumer soudain, sous son vol d’alcyon,
Dans une populace un cœur de nation,
Pour que la multitude aveugle ait des prunelles,
Pour qu’on voie accourir des sphères éternelles
La raison, la pitié, l’amour, la vérité,
Et pour que, sur les flots d’un noir peuple irrité,

La Justice, euménide effrayante et sans voile,
Se dresse, ayant au front le pardon, cette étoile!
Il arrive parfois, dans les temps convulsifs,
Quand tout un peuple écume et bat les durs récifs,
Qu’un enfant brusquement, dans cette haine amère,
Blond, pâle, accourt, surgit, voit son père ou sa mère,
Fait un pas, pousse un cri, tend les bras, et, soudain,
Vainqueurs pleins de courroux, vaincus pleins de dédain,
Hésitent, sont hagards, comprennent qu’ils se trompent,
Sentent une secousse obscure, et s’interrompent,
Les vainqueurs de tuer, les vaincus de mourir;
Cette fragilité, faite pour tout souffrir,
Vient nous protéger tous, eux, dans leur ombre noire,
Contre leur chute, et nous contre notre victoire;
Les hommes stupéfaits sont bons; l’enfant le veut.
Sainte intervention! Cette tête s’émeut
Au moindre vent, elle est frissonnante, elle tremble;

Cette joue est vermeille et délicate; il semble
Que des souffles d’avril elle attend le baiser,
Un papillon viendrait sur ce front se poser;
C’est charmant; tout à coup cela devient auguste
Et terrible; arrêtez! l’innocent, c’est le juste!
Éblouissement! l’ombre est vaincue; on dirait
Qu’au ciel une nuée entr’ouverte apparaît
Et jette sur la terre une lueur énorme;
Tout s’éclaire; le bien, le vrai, reprend sa forme;

Et les cœurs terrassés sentent subitement
Se calmer ce qui mord, se taire ce qui ment,
Et s’effacer la haine et la nuit se dissoudre.

On croit voir une fleur d’où sort un coup de foudre.

QUESTION SOCIALE

Ô détresses du faible! ô naufrage insondable!
Un jour j’ai vu passer un enfant formidable,
Une fille; elle avait cinq ans; elle marchait
Au hasard, elle était dans l’âge du hochet,
Du bonbon, des baisers, et n’avait pas de joie;
Elle avait l’air stupide et profond de la proie
Sous la griffe, et d’Atlas que le monde étouffait,
Et semblait dire à Dieu : Qu’est-ce que je t’ai fait?
Dieu. Non. Elle ignorait ce mot. Le penseur creuse, L’enfant souffre. Elle était en haillons, pâle, affreuse,
Jolie, et destinée aux sinistres attraits;
Elle allait au milieu de nous, passants distraits,
Toute petite avec un grand regard farouche.

Le pli d’angoisse était aux deux coins de sa bouche;
Tout son être exprimait Rien, l’absence d’appui,
La faim, la soif, l’horreur, l’ombre, et l’immense ennui.
Quoi! l’éternel malheur pèse sur l’éphémère!

On entendait quelqu’un rire, c’était sa mère;
Cette femme, une fille au fond d’un cabaret,
N’avait pas même l’air de savoir qu’on errait
Dehors, là, dans la rue, en grelottant, sans gîte,
Sous le givre et la pluie, et qu’on était petite,
Et que ce pauvre enfant tragique était le sien.
Cette mère, pas plus qu’on ne remarque un chien,
N’apercevait cet être et sa sombre guenille.
Sorte de rose infâme ignorant sa chenille.

Elle-même jadis avait été cela.

Maintenant, Margoton changée en Paméla,
Elle offrait aux passants des faveurs mal venues,
Chantante; elles étaient toutes deux demi-nues,
L’une pour les affronts, l’autre pour les douleurs;
La mère, gaie, avait au front d’horribles fleurs;
Il arrivait parfois, vers le soir, à la brune,
Que la mère et l’enfant se rencontraient, et l’une
Regardait son passé, l’autre son avenir.

Voir l’une commencer et voir l’autre finir!
Ô misère!
L’enfant se taisait, grave, amère.

Cette femme, après tout, était-elle sa mère?
Oui. Non. Ceux qui mêlaient autour d’elles leurs pas
En parlaient au hasard et ne le savaient pas.
L’infortune est de l’ombre, et peut-être cet ange
N’avait-il même pas une mère de fange,
Hélas! et l’humble enfant, seul sous le firmament,
Marchait terrible avec un air d’étonnement.
Elle ne paraissait ni vivante ni morte.
— Mais qu’a donc cet enfant à songer de la sorte?
Disait-on autour d’elle. — Est-ce qu’on la connaît?
Non. Les gens lui donnaient du pain qu’elle prenait
Sans rien dire; elle allait devant elle, indignée.
Pour moi, rêveur, sa main tenait une poignée
D’invisibles éclairs montant de bas en haut;
Ses yeux, comme on regarde un plafond de cachot,
Regardaient le grand ciel où l’aube ne sait naître

Que pour s’éteindre, et tout l’ensemble de cet être
Était on ne sait quoi d’âpre, de bégayant,
Et d’obscur, d’où sortait un reproche effrayant;
La ville avec ses tours, ses temples et ses bouges,

Devant son front hagard et ses prunelles rouges
S’étalait, vision inutile, et jamais
Elle n’avait daigné remarquer ces sommets
Qu’on nomme Panthéon, Étoile, Notre-Dame;
On eût dit que sur terre elle n’avait plus d’âme,
Qu’elle ignorait nos voix, qu’elle était de la nuit
Ayant la forme humaine et marchant dans ce bruit;
Et rien n’était plus noir que ce petit fantôme.

La quantité d’enfer qui tient dans un atome
Étonne le penseur, et je considérais
Cette larve, pareille aux lueurs des forêts,

Blême, désespérée avant même de vivre,
Qui, sans pleurs et sans cris, d’ombre et de terreur ivre,
Rêvait et s’en allait, les pieds dans le ruisseau,
Némésis de cinq ans, Méduse du berceau.

XXIV

LÀ-HAUT

QUERELLE D’ASTRES

LÀ-HAUT

Un jour l’étoile vit la comète passer,
Rit, et, la regardant au gouffre s’enfoncer,
Cria : — La voyez-vous courir, la vagabonde?
Jadis, dans l’azur chaste où la sagesse abonde,
Elle était comme nous étoile vierge, ayant
Des paradis autour de son cœur flamboyant,
Et ses rayons, liant les sphères, freins et brides,
Faisaient tourner le vol des planètes splendides;
Rien n’égalait son nimbe auguste, et dans ses nœuds
Sa chevelure avait dix globes lumineux;
Elle était l’astre à qui tout un monde s’appuie.
Un jour, tout à coup, folle, ivre, elle s’est enfuie.

Un vertige l’a prise et l’a jetée au fond Des chaos où Moloch avec Dieu se confond.
Quand elle en est sortie, elle était insensée;
Elle n’a plus voulu suivre que sa pensée,
Sa furie, un instinct fougueux, torrentiel,
Mauvais, car l’équilibre est la vertu du ciel.
Devant elle, au hasard, elle s’en est allée;
Elle s’est dans l’abîme immense échevelée;
Elle a dit : Je me donne au gouffre, à volonté!
Je suis l’infatigable; il est l’illimité.
Elle a voulu chercher, trouver, sonder, connaître,
Voir les mondes enfants, tâcher d’en faire naître,
Aller jusqu’en leur lit provoquer les soleils,
Examiner comment les enfers sont vermeils,
Voir Satan, visiter cet astre en sa tanière,
L’approcher, lui passer la main dans la crinière,
Et lui dire : Lion, je t’aime! Iblis, Mammon, Prends-moi, je viens m’offrir, déesse, à toi démon!
Elle s’est faite, ainsi que l’air, fuyante et souple,

Elle a voulu goûter l’âcre extase du couple;
Et sans cesse épouser des univers nouveaux;

Elle a voulu toucher les croupes des chevaux
De la foudre, et, parmi les bruits visionnaires,
Rôder dans l’écurie énorme des tonnerres;
Elle a mis de l’éclair dans sa fauve clarté;
Elle a tout violé par curiosité;
Et l’on sent, en voyant ses flamboiements funèbres,
Que sa lumière s’est essuyée aux ténèbres.
Les soleils tour à tour l’ont. Elle a préféré
À la majesté fixe au haut du ciel sacré,
On ne sait quelle course, audacieuse, oblique,
Étrange, et maintenant elle est fille publique.

Et la comète dit à l’étoile : — Vesta,
Tu te trompes. Je suis Vénus. Quand Dieu resta,
Après que le noir couple humain eut pris la fuite,
Seul dans le paradis, Satan lui dit : Ensuite?
Et Dieu vit que l’amour est un besoin qu’on a,
Et que sans lui le monde a froid; il m’ordonna
D’aller incendier le gouffre où tout commence,
Et Dieu mit la sagesse où tu vois la démence.
Depuis ce jour-là, j’erre et je vais en tous lieux
Rappeler à l’hymen les mondes oublieux.
J’illumine Uranus, je réchauffe Saturne,
Et je remets du feu dans les astres; mon urne

Reverse un flot d’aurore aux fontaines du jour;
Je suis la folle auguste ayant au front l’amour;
Je suis par les soleils formidables baisée;
Si je rencontre en route une lune épuisée,
Je la rallume, et l’ombre a ce flambeau de plus;
L’océan étoilé me roule en ses reflux;
Sur tous les globes, nés au fond des étendues,
Il est de sombres mers que je gonfle éperdues;
J’éveille du chaos le rut démesuré;

Voici l’épouse en feu qui vient! l’astre effaré,
Regarde à son zénith, à travers la nuée,
L’impudeur de ma robe immense dénouée;

De mes accouplements l’espace est ébloui;
Dès qu’un gouffre me veut, j’accours et je dis : Oui!
Je passe d’Allioth à Sirius; ma bouche
Se colle au triple front d’Aldebaran farouche;
Et je me prostitue à l’infini, sachant
Que je suis la semence et que l’ombre est le champ;
De là des mondes; Dieu m’approuve quand j’ébauche
Une création que tu nommes débauche.
Celle qui lie entr’eux les univers, c’est moi;
Sans moi, l’isolement hideux serait la loi;
Étoiles, on verrait de monstrueux désastres;
L’infini subirait l’égoïsme des astres;
Partout la nuit, la mort et le deuil, augmentés
Par la farouche horreur de vos virginités.
J’empêche l’effrayant célibat de l’abîme.
Je suis du pouls divin le battement sublime;
Mon trajet, à la fois idéal et réel,
Marque l’artère énorme et profonde du ciel;
Vous êtes la lumière et moi je suis la flamme;
Dieu me fit de son cœur et vous fit de son âme;
Ô mes sœurs, nous versons toutes de la clarté,
Étant, vous l’harmonie, et moi la liberté.

XXV

LES MONTAGNES

DÉSINTÉRESSEMENT

Le Mont-Blanc que cent monts entourent de leur chaîne,
Comme dans les bouleaux le formidable chêne,
Comme Samson parmi les enfants d’Amalec,
Comme la grande pierre au centre du cromlech,
Apparaît au milieu des Alpes qu’il encombre;
Et les monts, froncement du globe, relief sombre
De la terre pétrie aux pieds de Jéhova,
Croûte qu’en se dressant quelque satan creva,
L’admirent, fiers sommets que la tempête arrose.
— Grand! dit le Mont-Géant. — Et beau! dit le Mont-Rose.

Et tous, Cervin, Combin, le Pilate fumant
Qui sonne tout entier comme un grand instrument,
Tant les troupeaux le soir l’emplissent de clarines,
Titlis soufflant l’orage au vent de ses narines,
Le Baken qui chassa Gessler, et le Rigi
Par qui plus d’ouragan sur le lac a rugi,
Pelvoux tout enivré de la senteur des sauges,
Cenis qui voit l’Isère, Albis qui voit les Vosges, Morcle à la double dent, Dru noir comme un bourreau,

L’Orteler, et la Vierge immense, la Jungfrau
Qui ne livre son front qu’aux baisers des étoiles,
Schwitz tendant ses glaciers comme de blanches toiles,
Le haut Mythen, clocher de la cloche Aquilon,
Tous, du lac au chalet, de l’abîme au vallon,
Roulant la nue aux cieux et le bloc aux morènes,
Aiguilles, pics de neige et cimes souveraines,
Autour du puissant mont chantent, chœur monstrueux :
— C’est lui! le pâtre blanc des monts tumultueux!

Il nous protége tous et tous il nous dépasse;

Il est l’enchantement splendide de l’espace;
Ses rocs sont épopée et ses vallons roman;
Il mêle un argent sombre aux moires du Léman;
L’Océan aurait peur sous ses hautes falaises,
Et ses brins d’herbe sont plus fiers que nos mélèzes;
Il nous éclaire après que l’astre s’est couché;
Dans le brun crépuscule il apparaît penché,
Et l’on croit de Titan voir l’effrayante larve;
Il tresse le bleu Rhône aux cheveux d’or de l’Arve;
Sa cime, pour savoir lequel a plus d’amour
Et quel est le plus grand du regard ou du jour,
Confronte le soleil avec le gypaëte;
La nuit, quand il se dresse, énorme silhouette,
Croit voir un monde sombre éclore à l’horizon;
Il est superbe, il a la glace et le gazon;
L’archange à son sommet vient aiguiser son glaive;

Il a, comme son dogue, à ses pieds le Salève;
Il tisse, âpre fileur, les brouillards pluvieux;
Sa tiare surgit sur nos fronts envieux;
Ses pins sont les plus verts, sa neige est la plus blanche;
Il tient dans une main la colombe Avalanche
Et dans l’autre le vaste et fauve aigle Ouragan;
Il tire du fourreau, comme son yataghan,
La tourmente, et les lacs tremblent sous sa fumée;
Il plonge au bloc des nuits l’éclair, scie enflammée;

L’immensité le baise et le prend pour amant;
Une mer de cristal, d’azur, de diamant,
Crinière de glaçons digne du lion Pôle,
Tombe, effrayant manteau, de sa farouche épaule;
Ses précipices font reculer les chamois;
Sur son versant sublime il a les douze mois;
Il est plus haut, plus pur, plus grand que nous ne sommes;
Et nous l’insulterions si nous étions des hommes.

XXVI

LE TEMPLE

LE TEMPLE

Joie à la terre, et paix à celui qui contemple!
Écoutez, vous ferez sur la montagne un temple,
Et vous le bâtirez la nuit pour que jamais
On ne sache qui l’a placé sur ces sommets;
Vous le ferez, ainsi l’ordonne le prophète,
Du toit aux fondements et de la base au faîte,
Avec des blocs mis l’un sur l’autre simplement,

Et ce temple, construit de roche sans ciment,
Sera presque aussi haut que toute la montagne.
Les forêts qu’un murmure éternel accompagne,
L’Océan qui bondit ainsi que les troupeaux
Et n’a point de fatigue et n’a point de repos,
Les monts sans tache, blancs comme les cœurs sans vice,
C’est tout ce que verront du seuil de l’édifice
Les hommes qui viendront par cent chemins divers;
Car vous aurez compris qu’il faut que l’univers
Ait autour de ce temple une grave attitude.
Et vous l’aurez bâti dans une solitude,
Afin qu’il soit tranquille, et pour que l’horizon
Convienne à cette auguste et farouche maison.
Et les hommes, pasteurs, apôtres, patriarches,
Regarderont le temple, et monteront les marches,
Et sous la haute porte ils baisseront le front.
Quand ils seront entrés, voici ce qu’ils verront :

Au-dessous d’une voûte en granit, située
Si haut qu’il semblera qu’elle est dans la nuée,
Entre quatre grands murs nus et prodigieux,
Dans une ombre où partout on sentira des yeux,
Tout au fond d’une crypte obscure, une statue
Se dressera, d’un voile insondable vêtue,

Et de la tête aux pieds ce voile descendra;

Et, plus que sur Isis, et plus que sur Indra,
Plus que sur le Sina, plus que sur le Calvaire,
Les ténèbres seront sur ce spectre sévère,
Colosse par une âme inconnue habité;
Et l’on n’en verra rien que son énormité.
La figure sera haute de cent coudées,
Et d’un seul bloc; jamais les Indes, les Chaldées,
Et les sculpteurs d’Égypte ayant l’énigme en eux,
N’auront rien maçonné de plus vertigineux.
Nul ne pourra lever le voile aux plis de pierre.
Personne ne saura s’il est une paupière
Pouvant s’ouvrir, un œil pouvant verser des pleurs,
Sous ce masque, et s’il est quelqu’un sous les ampleurs
De ce suaire aux yeux humains inabordable;
Et tous contempleront l’Ignoré formidable.
Pourtant on sentira que ce spectre n’est pas
La haine, le glacier, le tombeau, le trépas;
Qu’il semble un spectre, étant sous le plus lourd des voiles,
Mais que ce noir linceul peut-être est plein d’étoiles;
On sentira qu’il aime, et que l’on est devant
Le seul être, le seul esprit, le seul vivant.
Grands, petits, faibles, forts, le géant et l’atome,
Sentiront l’univers présent dans ce fantôme;
D’une peur confiante envahis par degrés,

Ils seront effrayés et seront rassurés;
Le vieillard et l’enfant, l’ignorant et le mage,
Frémissants, comprendront qu’ils sont devant l’image
De la Réalité suprême, et qu’en ce lieu Jéhova, Jupiter et Brahma pèsent peu;
Que là s’évanouit tout dogme et toute bible,
Et que rien n’est méchant, quoique tout soit terrible.

Oui, terrible, mais bon; formidable, mais doux.
Dans ce temple, payens, chrétiens, parsis, indous,

Tous ceux, fakir, santon, rabbin, flamine, bonze,
Qu’une religion tient dans sa main de bronze,
Sentiront cette main s’ouvrir et les lâcher.

Le ciel; de l’idéal pétri dans du rocher,
On ne sait quoi de tendre au fond de cette pierre,
Une forme de nuit debout sur la frontière
De l’inconnu, muette et rigide, et pourtant
D’accord avec le monde immense palpitant,
L’âme qui fait tout naître et sur qui tout se fonde,
Voilà ce que ce temple, en son ombre profonde,

Fera vaguement voir à ceux qui passeront.
Les autres temples, faits de ce qui se corrompt,
Bâtis avec l’erreur, la démence et la fable,
Faux et vains, et faisant bégayer l’ineffable,
Autels que la raison en montant submergea,
Se seront écroulés depuis longtemps déjà
Au vaste ébranlement du genre humain en marche;
Mais celui-ci, n’ayant point de koran, point d’arche,
Point de prêtres, aucun pontife, aucun menteur,
Entouré de l’abîme et seul sur la hauteur,
Demeurera debout sur la terre où nous sommes,
Et ne craindra pas plus le passage des hommes
Que l’étoile ne craint le vol des alcyons.

Il n’expliquera point au cœur les passions,
À l’esprit le problème, et la tombe à la vie;
Mais il fera germer chez tous l’ardente envie
De monter, de grandir, et de voir au delà.
Où? Plus loin. Le zénith que Thalès contempla,
Les constellations, ces effrayants fulgores,
Que regardaient errer les pâles Pythagores,
Les orbes de la vie obscure entre-croisés,
La science qui cherche et dit : Jamais assez!
Ne contesteront point ce temple, et, dans l’espace,
Par tout le gouffre et par toute l’ombre qui passe

Il sera vénéré, n’ayant point ici-bas
Aggravé par l’erreur nos douleurs, nos combats,
Nos deuils, et n’ayant point de reproche à se faire.

Sous l’âpre voûte ayant la rondeur d’une sphère,
La statue, impassible et voilée, aura l’air
De rêver, attentive aux forêts, à la mer,
Aux germes, à l’azur, aux nuages, aux astres;
Pas de frises aux toits; aux murs pas de pilastres;

Le granit nu qu’aucun ornement n’interrompt;
Et, rien ne remuant, les hommes trembleront;
Et les méchants seront mal à l’aise; et les justes,
Et les bons, et tous ceux dont les cœurs sont augustes,
Les sages, les penseurs, sentiront le plein jour
Sur leur âme, leur foi, leur espoir, leur amour,
Comme sous le regard d’une énorme prunelle.

Derrière la statue, une lampe éternelle
Brûlera, comme un feu dans l’antre aux visions,
Et, cachant le foyer, montrera les rayons
De façon à lui mettre une aurore autour d’elle,
Pour enseigner au peuple ému, grave et fidèle,
Que cette énigme est bien une divinité,
Et que si c’est la nuit c’est aussi la clarté.
Le colosse sera noir sur cette auréole;
Et nul souffle, nul vent d’orage, nul éole
Ne fera vaciller l’immobile lueur.
Les sages essuieront à leur front la sueur
Et sentiront l’horreur sacrée en leurs vertèbres,
Devant cette splendeur sortant de ces ténèbres,
Et comprendront que l’Être ignoré, mais certain,
Brille, étant le lever de l’éternel matin,
Et pourtant reste obscur, car aucune envergure,

Aucun esprit ne peut saisir cette figure;
Il est sans fin, sans fond, sans repos, sans sommeil.

Et pour être Mystère il n’est pas moins Soleil.

XXVII

À L’HOMME

À L’HOMME

*

Si tu vas devant toi pour aller devant toi,
C’est bien; l’homme se meut, et c’est là son emploi;
C’est en errant ainsi, c’est en jetant la sonde
Qu’Euler trouve une loi, que Colomb trouve un monde.
Mais, rêvant l’absolu, si c’est Dieu que tu veux
Prendre comme on prendrait un fuyard aux cheveux,
Si tu prétends aller jusqu’à la fin des choses,
Et là, debout devant cette cause des causes,
Uranus des païens, Sabaoth des chrétiens,
Dire : — Réalité terrible, je te tiens! —
Tu perds ta peine.

*

Ajuste, ô fils quelconque d’Ève,
N’importe quel calcul à n’importe quel rêve,
Ajoute à l’hypothèse une lunette, et mets
Des chiffres l’un sur l’autre, à couvrir les sommets
De l’Athos, du Mont-Blanc farouche, du Vésuve,
Monte sur le cratère ou plonge dans la cuve,
Fouille, creuse, escalade, envole-toi, descends,
Fais faire par Gambey des verres grossissants,
Guette, plane avec l’aigle ou rampe avec le crabe,
Crois tout, doute de tout, apprends l’hébreu, l’arabe,
Le chinois, sois indou, grec, bouddhiste, arien,
Va, tu ne saisiras l’extrémité de rien.
Poursuivre le réel, c’est chercher l’introuvable.
Le réel, ce fond vrai d’où sort toute la fable,

C’est la nature en fuite à jamais dans la nuit.

Le télescope au fond du ciel noir la poursuit,

Le microscope court dans l’abîme après elle;
Elle est inaccessible, imprenable, éternelle,
Et n’est pas moins énorme en dessous qu’en dessus.
Des aspects effrayants sont partout aperçus;
Le spectre vibrion vaut le soleil fantôme;
Un monde plus profond que l’astre, c’est l’atome;
Quand, sous l’œil des penseurs, l’infiniment petit
Sur l’infiniment grand se pose, il l’engloutit;
Puis l’infiniment grand remonte et le submerge.
Mère terrifiante et formidable vierge,
Multipliant son jour par son obscurité
Et sa maternité par sa virginité,
Chaste, obscène, et montrant aux mornes Pythagores
Son ventre ténébreux d’où sortent les aurores,
La nature fatale engendre éperdûment
Des chaos d’où jaillit cette loi, l’élément.
Elle est le haut, le bas, l’immense ombre, l’aïeule;
Toute sa foule étant elle-même, elle est seule;
Monde, elle est la nature; âme, on l’appelle Dieu.
Tout être, quel qu’il soit, du gouffre est le milieu;

Pas de sortie et pas d’entrée; aucune porte;
On est là. — C’est pourquoi le chercheur triste avorte;
C’est pourquoi le ciel juif succède au ciel romain;
C’est pourquoi ce songeur épars, le genre humain,
Entend à chaque instant vagir de nouveaux cultes;
C’est pourquoi l’homme, en proie à tant de noirs tumultes,
Rêve, et tâte l’espace, et veut un point d’appui,
Ayant peur de la nuit tragique autour de lui;
C’est pourquoi le messie est chassé par l’apôtre;
C’est pourquoi l’on a vu crouler, l’un après l’autre,
Ayant tous fait fléchir aux peuples le genou,
Brahma, Dagon, Baal, Odin, Allah, Vishnou.
L’idolâtrie échoue. Elle est, sur tout abîme,
Et dans tous les bas-fonds, le même essai sublime

Et la même chimère inutile, créant
Toujours le même Dieu pour le même néant.

*

Il est pourtant, ce Dieu. Mais sous son triple voile
La lunette avançant fait reculer l’étoile.
C’est une sainte loi que ce recul profond.
Les hommes en travail sont grands des pas qu’ils font;
Leur destination, c’est d’aller, portant l’arche;
Ce n’est pas de toucher le but, c’est d’être en marche;
Et cette marche, avec l’infini pour flambeau,
Sera continuée au delà du tombeau.
C’est le progrès. Jamais l’homme ne se repose,
Et l’on cherche une idole, et l’on trouve autre chose.
Cherchez l’Âme; elle échappe; allez, allez toujours!
*

Teutatès, Mahomet, Jésus, les antres sourds,
Les forêts, le druide et le mage, et ces folles
Augustes, qu’Apollon emplissait de paroles,
Et les temples du sang des génisses fumants,
N’arrivent qu’à des cris et qu’à des bégaiements.

L’à peu près, c’est la fin de toute idolâtrie.
La vérité ne sort que difforme et meurtrie
De l’effort d’engendrer, et quel que soit l’œil fier
Du fœtus d’aujourd’hui sur l’embryon d’hier,
Quelque mépris qu’Orphée inspire à Chrysostome,
Quel que soit le dédain du koran pour le psaume,
Et quoi que Jéhova tente après Jupiter,
Quoi que fasse Jean Huss accouchant de Luther,
Quoi qu’affirme l’autel, quoi que chante le prêtre,
Jamais le dernier mot, le grand mot, ne peut être
Dit dans cette ombre énorme où le ciel se défend,
Par la religion, toujours en mal d’enfant.

C’est parce que je roule en moi ces choses sombres,
C’est parce que je vois l’aube dans les décombres,
Sur les trônes le mal, sur les autels la nuit,
C’est parce que, sondant ce qui s’évanouit,
Bravant tout ce qui règne, aimant tout ce qui souffre,
J’interroge l’abîme, étant moi-même gouffre;
C’est parce que je suis parfois, mage inclément,
Sachant que la clarté trompe et que le bruit ment,
Tenté de reprocher aux cieux visionnaires

Leur crachement d’éclairs et leur toux de tonnerres;
C’est parce que mon cœur, qui cherche son chemin,
N’accepte le divin qu’autant qu’il est humain;
C’est à cause de tous ces songes formidables
Que je m’en vais, sinistre, aux lieux inabordables,
Au bord des mers, au haut des monts, au fond des bois.
Là, j’entends mieux crier l’âme humaine aux abois;
Là je suis pénétré plus avant par l’idée
Terrible, et cependant de rayons inondée.
Méditer, c’est le grand devoir mystérieux;
Les rêves dans nos cœurs s’ouvrent comme des yeux;
Je rêve et je médite; et c’est pourquoi j’habite,
Comme celui qui guette une lueur subite,
Le désert, et non pas les villes; c’est pourquoi,
Sauvage serviteur du droit contre la loi,
Laissant derrière moi les molles cités pleines
De femmes et de fleurs qui mêlent leurs haleines,
Et les palais remplis de rires, de festins,
De danses, de plaisirs, de feux jamais éteints,
Je fuis, et je préfère à toute cette fête
La rive du torrent farouche, où le prophète
Vient boire dans le creux de sa main en été,
Pendant que le lion boit de l’autre côté.

XXVIII

ABÎME

ABÎME

L’HOMME

Je suis l’esprit, vivant au sein des choses mortes.
Je sais forger les clefs quand on ferme les portes;
Je fais vers le désert reculer le lion;
Je m’appelle Bacchus, Noé, Deucalion;
Je m’appelle Shakspeare, Annibal, César, Dante;
Je suis le conquérant; je tiens l’épée ardente,
Et j’entre, épouvantant l’ombre que je poursuis,
Dans toutes les terreurs et dans toutes les nuits.
Je suis Platon je vois; je suis Newton, je trouve :
Du hibou je fais naître Athène, et de la louve
Rome; et l’aigle m’a dit : Toi, marche le premier!
J’ai Christ dans mon sépulcre et Job sur mon fumier;
Je vis! dans mes deux mains je porte en équilibre
L’âme et la chair; je suis l’homme enfin, maître et libre!

Je suis l’antique Adam! j’aime, je sais, je sens;
J’ai pris l’arbre de vie entre mes poings puissants;
Joyeux, je le secoue au-dessus de ma tête,
Et, comme si j’étais le vent de la tempête,
J’agite ses rameaux d’oranges d’or chargés,
Et je crie : — Accourez, peuples! prenez, mangez!
Et je fais sur leurs fronts tomber toutes les pommes;
Car, science, pour moi, pour mes fils, pour les hommes
Ta séve à flots descend des cieux pleins de bonté, Car la Vie est ton fruit, racine Éternité!
Et tout germe, et tout croît, et, fournaise agrandie,
Comme en une forêt court le rouge incendie,
Le beau Progrès vermeil, l’œil sur l’azur fixé,
Marche, et tout en marchant dévore le passé.

Je veux, tout obéit, la matière inflexible
Cède; je suis égal presque au grand Invisible;
Coteaux, je fais le vin comme lui fait le miel;
Je lâche comme lui des globes dans le ciel.
Je me fais un palais de ce qui fut ma geôle;
J'attache un fil vivant d'un pôle à l'autre pôle;
Je fais voler l'esprit sur l'aile de l'éclair.
Je tends l'arc de Nemrod, le divin arc de fer,
Et la flèche qui siffle et la flèche qui vole
Et que j'envoie au bout du monde, est ma parole.
Je fais causer le Rhin, le Gange et l'Orégon
Comme trois voyageurs dans le même vagon.
La distance n'est plus. Du vieux géant Espace
J'ai fait un nain. Je vais, et, devant mon audace,
Les noirs titans jaloux lèvent leur front flétri;
Prométhée, au Caucase enchaîné, pousse un cri,
Tout étonné de voir Franklin voler la foudre;

Fulton, qu'un Jupiter eût mis jadis en poudre,
Monte Léviathan et traverse la mer;
Galvani, calme, étreint la mort au rire amer;
Volta prend dans ses mains le glaive de l'archange
Et le dissout; le monde à ma voix tremble et change;
Caïn meurt, l'avenir ressemble au jeune Abel;
Je reconquiers Éden et j'achève Babel.
Rien sans moi. La nature ébauche; je termine.
Terre, je suis ton roi.
LA TERRE

Tu n'es que ma vermine.
Le sommeil, lourd besoin, la fièvre, feu subtil,
Le ventre abject, la faim, la soif, l'estomac vil,
T'accablent, noir passant, d'infirmités sans nombre,
Et, vieux, tu n'es qu'un spectre, et, mort, tu n'es qu'une ombre.

Tu t'en vas dans la cendre, et moi je reste au jour;
J'ai toujours le printemps, l'aube, les fleurs, l'amour;

Je suis plus jeune après des millions d’années.
J’emplis d’instincts rêveurs les bêtes étonnées.
Du gland je tire un chêne et le fruit du pepin.
Je me verse, urne sombre, au brin d’herbe, au sapin,
Au cep d’où sort la grappe, aux blés qui font les gerbes.
Se tenant par la main, comme des sœurs superbes,
Sur ma face où s’épand l’ombre, où le rayon luit,
Les douze heures du jour, les douze heures de nuit
Dansent incessamment une ronde sacrée.
Je suis source et chaos; j’ensevelis, je crée.
Quand le matin naquit dans l’azur, j’étais là.
Vésuve est mon usine, et ma forge est l’Hékla;

Je rougis de l’Etna les hautes cheminées.
En remuant Cuzco, j’émeus les Pyrénées.
J’ai pour esclave un astre; alors que vient le soir
Sur un de mes côtés jetant un voile noir,
J’ai ma lampe : la lune au front humain m’éclaire;
Et si quelque assassin, dans un bois séculaire,
Vers l’ombre la plus sûre et le plus âpre lieu S’enfuit, je le poursuis de ce masque de feu.
Je peuple l’air, la flamme et l’onde; et mon haleine
Fait, comme l’oiseau-mouche, éclore la baleine;
Comme je fais le ver, j’enfante les typhons.
Globe vivant, je suis vêtu des flots profonds,
Des forêts et des monts ainsi que d’une armure.
SATURNE

Qu’est-ce que cette voix chétive qui murmure?
Terre, à quoi bon tourner dans ton champ si borné,
Grain de sable, d’un grain de cendre accompagné?
Moi dans l’immense azur je trace un cercle énorme;

L’espace avec terreur voit ma beauté difforme;
Mon anneau, qui des nuits empourpre la pâleur,
Comme les boules d’or que croise le jongleur,
Lance, mêle et retient sept lunes colossales.

LE SOLEIL

Silence au fond des cieux, planètes, mes vassales!
Paix! Je suis le pasteur, vous êtes le bétail.
Comme deux chars de front passent sous un portail,
Dans mon moindre volcan Saturne avec la Terre Entreraient sans toucher aux parois du cratère.
Chaos! je suis la loi. Fange! je suis le feu.
Contemplez-moi! Je suis la vie et le milieu,
Le Soleil, l’éternel orage de lumière.
SIRIUS

J’entends parler l’atome. Allons, Soleil, poussière, Tais-toi! Tais-toi, fantôme, espèce de clarté!
Pâtres dont le troupeau fuit dans l’immensité,
Globes obscurs, je suis moins hautain que vous n’êtes.
Te voilà-t-il pas fier, ô gardeur de planètes,
Pour sept ou huit moutons que tu pais dans l’azur!
Moi, j’emporte en mon orbe auguste, vaste et pur,
Mille sphères de feu dont la moindre a cent lunes.
Le sais-tu seulement, larve qui m’importunes?
Que me sert de briller auprès de ce néant?
L’astre nain ne voit pas même l’astre géant.

ALDÉBARAN

Sirius dort; je vis! C’est à peine s’il bouge.
J’ai trois soleils, l’un blanc, l’autre vert, l’autre rouge;
Centre d’un tourbillon de mondes effrénés,
Ils tournent, d’une chaîne invisible enchaînés,
Si vite, qu’on croit voir passer une flamme ivre,
Et que la foudre a dit : Je renonce à les suivre!
ARCTURUS

Moi, j’ai quatre soleils tournants, quadruple enfer,
Et leurs quatre rayons ne font qu’un seul éclair.

LA COMÈTE

Place à l’oiseau comète, effroi des nuits profondes!
Je passe. Frissonnez! Chacun de vous, ô mondes,
Ô soleils! n’est pour moi qu’un grain de sénevé!

SEPTENTRION

Un bras mystérieux me tient toujours levé;
Je suis le chandelier à sept branches du pôle.
Comme des fantassins le glaive sur l’épaule,
Mes feux veillent au bord du vide où tout finit;
Les univers semés du nadir au zénith,
Sous tous les équateurs et sous tous les tropiques,
Disent entre eux : — On voit la pointe de leurs piques;
Ce sont les noirs gardiens du pôle monstrueux. —
L’éther ténébreux, plein de globes tortueux,
Ne sait pas qui je suis, et dans la nuit vermeille
Il me guette, pendant que moi, clarté, je veille.
Il me voit m’avancer, moi l’immense éclaireur,
Se dresse, et, frémissant, écoute avec horreur
S’il n’entend pas marcher mes chevaux invisibles.
Il me jette des noms sauvages et terribles,

Et voit en moi la bête errante dans les cieux.
Or nous sommes le nord, les lumières, les yeux,
Sept yeux vivants, ayant des soleils pour prunelles,
Les éternels flambeaux des ombres éternelles.
Je suis Septentrion qui sur vous apparaît.
Sirius avec tous ses globes ne serait
Pas même une étincelle en ma moindre fournaise.
Entre deux de mes feux cent mondes sont à l’aise.
J’habite sur la nuit les radieux sommets.
Les comètes de braise elles-mêmes jamais
N’oseraient éclairer des flammes de leurs queues
Le chariot roulant dans les profondeurs bleues.
Cet astre qui parlait je ne l’aperçois pas.

Les étoiles des cieux vont et viennent là-bas,
Traînant leurs sphères d'or et leurs lunes fidèles,
Et, si je me mettais en marche au milieu d'elles
Dans les champs de l'éther à ma splendeur soumis,
Ma roue écraserait tous ces soleils fourmis!
LE ZODIAQUE

Qu'est-ce donc que ta roue à côté de la mienne?

De quelque point du ciel que ta lumière vienne,
Elle se heurte à moi qui suis le cabestan
De l'abîme, et qui dis aux soleils : Toi, va-t-en!
Toi, reviens. C'est ton tour. Toi, sors. Je te renvoie!
Car je n'existe pas seulement pour qu'on voie
À jamais, dans l'azur farouche et flamboyant,
Le Taureau, le Bélier, et le Lion fuyant
Devant ce monstrueux chasseur, le Sagittaire,
Je plonge un seau profond dans le puits du mystère,
Et je suis le rouage énorme d'où descend
L'ordre invisible au fond du gouffre éblouissant.
Ciel sacré, si des yeux pouvaient avoir entrée
Dans ton prodige, et dans l'horreur démesurée,
Peut-être, en l'engrenage où je suis, verrait-on,
Comme l'Ixion noir d'un divin Phlégéton,
Quelque effrayant damné, quelque immense âme en peine,
Recommençant sans cesse une ascension vaine,

Et, pour l'astre qui vient quittant l'astre qui fuit,
Monter les échelons sinistres de la nuit!
LA VOIE LACTÉE

Millions, millions, et millions d'étoiles!
Je suis, dans l'ombre affreuse et sous les sacrés voiles,
La splendide forêt des constellations.
C'est moi qui suis l'amas des yeux et des rayons,
L'épaisseur inouïe et morne des lumières.
Encor tout débordant des effluves premières,

Mon éclatant abîme est votre source à tous.

Ô les astres d’en bas, je suis si loin de vous
Que mon vaste archipel de splendeurs immobiles,
Que mon tas de soleils n’est, pour vos yeux débiles,
Au fond du ciel, désert lugubre où meurt le bruit,
Qu’un peu de cendre rouge éparse dans la nuit!
Mais, ô globes rampants et lourds, quelle épouvante
Pour qui pénétrerait dans ma lueur vivante,
Pour qui verrait de près mon nuage vermeil!
Chaque point est un astre et chaque astre un soleil.
Autant d’astres, autant d’immensités étranges,
Diverses, s’approchant des démons ou des anges,
Dont les planètes font autant de nations;
Un groupe d’univers, en proie aux passions,
Tourne autour de chacun de mes soleils de flammes;
Dans chaque humanité sont des cœurs et des âmes,
Miroirs profonds ouverts à l’œil universel,

Dans chaque cœur l’amour, dans chaque âme le ciel!
Tout cela naît, meurt, croît, décroît, se multiplie.
La lumière en regorge et l’ombre en est remplie.
Dans le gouffre sous moi, de mon aube éblouis,
Globes, grains de lumière au loin épanouis,
Toi, zodiaque, vous, comètes éperdues,
Tremblants, vous traversez les blêmes étendues,
Et vos bruits sont pareils à de vagues clairons,
Et j’ai plus de soleils que vous de moucherons.
Mon immensité vit, radieuse et féconde.
J’ignore par moments si le reste du monde,
Errant dans quelque coin du morne firmament,
Ne s’évanouit pas dans mon rayonnement.
LES NÉBULEUSES

À qui parles-tu donc, flocon lointain qui passes?
À peine entendons-nous ta voix dans les espaces.
Nous ne te distinguons que comme un nimbe obscur

Au coin le plus perdu du plus nocturne azur.
Laisse-nous luire en paix, nous, blancheurs des ténèbres,

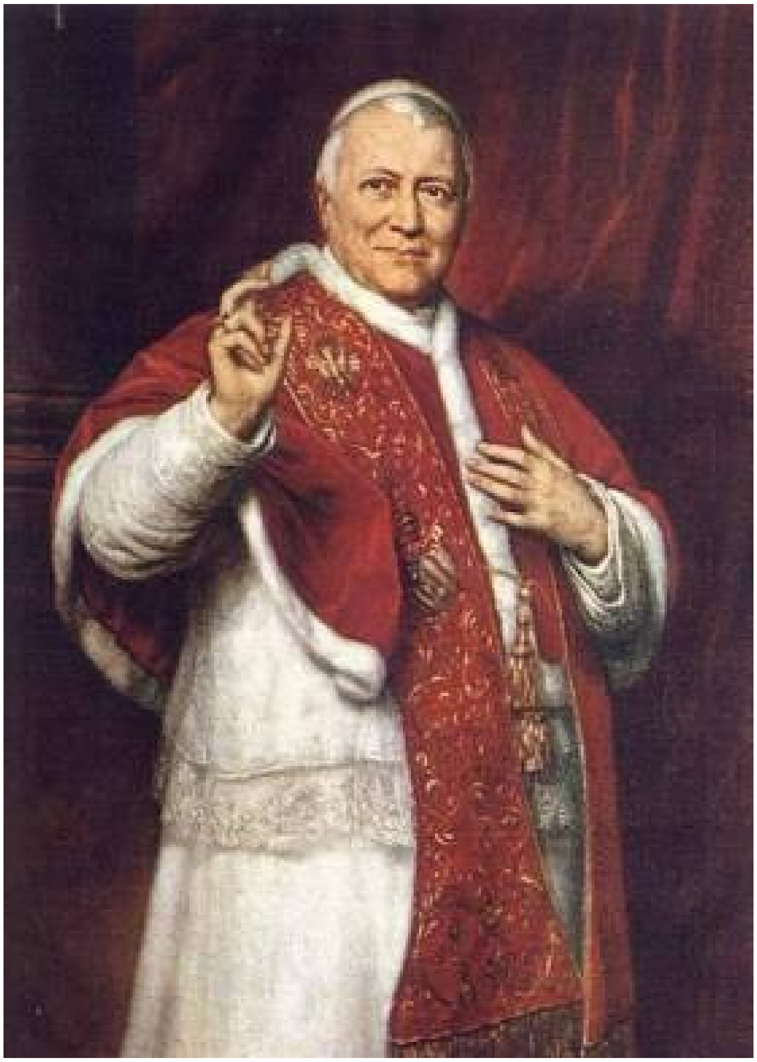
Mondes spectres éclos dans les chaos funèbres,
N’ayant ni pôle austral ni pôle boréal;
Nous, les réalités vivant dans l’idéal,
Les univers, d’où sort l’immense essaim des rêves,
Dispersés dans l’éther, cet océan sans grèves
Dont le flot à son bord n’est jamais revenu;
Nous les créations, îles de l’inconnu!
L’INFINI

L’être multiple vit dans mon unité sombre.
DIEU

Je n’aurais qu’à souffler, et tout serait de l’ombre.

LE PAPE

This poem was published in 1878, but had in fact been almost entirely written in 1874-1875. Infamous for its anticlericalism and criticism of the new third Republic, the poem attacks the rigid organisation of the Catholic Church and satirises Pope Pius IX because of his support for Napoleon III.



Pope Pius IX

TABLE DES MATIERES

Scène première — Sommeil
PAROLES DANS LE CIEL ÉTOILÉ
LES ROIS ENTRENT
LE PAPE SUR LE SEUIL DU VATICAN
LE SYNODE D’ORIENT
UN GRENIER
LE PAPE AUX FOULES
L’INFAILLIBILITÉ
EN VOYANT PASSER DES BREBIS TONDUES
PENSIF DEVANT LE DESTIN
ON CONSTRUIT UNE ÉGLISE
EN VOYANT UNE NOURRICE
UN CHAMP DE BATAILLE
LA GUERRE CIVILE
IL PARLE DEVANT LUI DANS L’OMBRE
MALÉDICTION ET BÉNÉDICTION
EN VOYANT UN PETIT ENFANT
UN ÉCHAFAUD
PENSIF DEVANT LA NUIT
ENTRANT À JÉRUSALEM
Scène deuxième — Réveil

Scène première — Sommeil

Le Vatican. La chambre du Pape. La nuit.

LE PAPE, dans son lit.

Ah! je m’endors! — Enfin!

Il s’endort.

PAROLES DANS LE CIEL ÉTOILÉ

O vivants, hommes, femmes,
Dormez. Apaise-toi, noir tumulte des âmes.
Oubli! trêve! ô méchants, reposez-vous. Assez!
Vous devez être las puisque vous haïssez.
Voici l’heure de paix que la terre réclame.
Le cœur divin envoie au cœur humain sa flamme.
La pensée a grandi car le rêve est venu.
Homme, ne te crois pas plongé dans l’inconnu;
Tu connais tout, sachant que tu dois être juste;
Le sort est l’antre noir, l’âme est la lampe auguste;
Dieu par la conscience inextinguible unit
L’innocence de l’homme aux blancheurs du zénith.
Va, ta tête est au ciel par un rayon liée.
La vie est une page obscurément pliée
Que l’homme en mourant lit et déchiffre en dormant.
Le sommeil est un sombre épanouissement.
Il est des voix, il est des pas, il est des ondes;
Tout se mêle : clameurs, rumeurs, vagues profondes,
Foules blêmes, troupeaux pensifs, essaims joyeux;
Tout marche au but divin sous les éternels yeux.
Responsabilité, pèse, voici ton heure,
Du haut des deux, et rends l’âme humaine-meilleure.
Les noirs vivants ont tous au pied le même anneau.
Sens, ô berger, le poids énorme de l’agneau.
Frêles puissants, tâchez que l’ombre vous tolère;
Le gouffre est irrité d’une bonne colère;
Le gouffre est menaçant, mais c’est contre le fort
L’atome avec raison compte, lorsqu’il s’endort,
Sur la protection terrible des abîmes.
Dormez, Vertus, dormez, souffrances, dormez, crimes,
Sous la sérénité du firmament vermeil.

Heureux l’homme qui sent à travers son sommeil

Que les étoiles sont sur la terre levées
Pour protéger le faible et l’humble et leurs couvées,
Qui tâche de comprendre en dormant, et qui sent Qu’un immense conseil mystérieux descend!
Laissez passer sur vous les astres vénérables,
Et dormez. O vivants, princes, grands, misérables,
A cette heure au fantôme en son linceul pareils,
Ayez le tremblement du rêve en vos sommeils.
Que l’âme veille en vous!

*

LES ROIS ENTRENT

LES ROIS

Salut, Pape. Nous sommes
Les tout-puissants, les rois, les maîtres.

LE PAPE

Salut, hommes.

LES ROIS

Prêtre, nous sommes rois.

LE PAPE

Pourquoi?

LES ROIS

Rois à jamais.

LE PAPE

Et Dieu?

LES ROIS

Tu sais qu’il est sur terre des sommets.

LE PAPE

De la hauteur de Dieu je ne vois qu’une plaine.

LES ROIS

Nous sommes grands, vainqueurs, forts.

LE PAPE

Tout est l’ombre humaine.

LES ROIS

Nous sommes les élus.

LE PAPE

L’homme à l’homme est égal.

LES ROIS

Nous sommes ce que sont l’Horeb et le Galgal,
Ce qu’est le Sinaï par dessus les campagnes;
Nous sommes une chaîne auguste de montagnes;
Nous sommes l’horizon par Dieu même construit.

LE PAPE

Les monts ont au front l’aube et les rois ont la nuit.
Dieu n’a pas fait les rois.

LES ROIS

N’es-tu pas roi toi-même?

LE PAPE

Moi! régner! non!

LES ROIS

Alors, qu’est-ce que tu fais?

LE PAPE

J’aime.

*

LE PAPE SUR LE SEUIL DU VATICAN

Je parle à la Cité, je parle à l’Univers.

Écoutez, ô vivants de tant d’ombre couverts,
Qu’égara si longtemps l’imposture servile,
Le sceptre est vain, le trône est noir, la pourpre est vile.
Qui que vous soyez, fils du Père, écoutez tous.
Il n’est sous le grand ciel impénétrable et doux
Qu’une pourpre, l’amour; qu’un trône, l’innocence.
L’aube et l’obscure nuit sont dans l’homme en présence
Comme deux combattants prêts à s’entre-tuer;
Le prêtre est un pilote; il doit s’habituer
A la lumière afin que son âme soit blanche;
Tout veut croître au grand jour, l’homme, la fleur, la branche,
La pensée; il est temps que l’aurore ait raison;
Et Dieu ne nous a pas confié sa maison,
La justice, pour vivre en dehors d’elle, et faire
Grandir l’ombre et tourner à contre-sens la sphère.
Je suis comme vous tous, aveugle, ô mes amis!
J’ignore l’homme, Dieu, le monde; et l’on m’a mis
Trois couronnes au front, autant que d’ignorances.
Celui qu’on nomme un pape est vêtu d’apparences;
Mes frères les vivants me semblent mes valets;
Je ne sais pas pourquoi j’habite ce palais;
Je ne sais pas pourquoi je porte un diadème;
On m’appelle Seigneur des Seigneurs, Chef suprême,
Pontife souverain, Roi par le ciel choisi;
O peuples, écoutez, j’ai.découvert ceci.
Je suis un pauvre. Aussi je m’en vais. J’abandonne
Ce palais, espérant que cet or me pardonne,
Et que cette richesse et que tous ces trésors
Et que l’effrayant luxe usurpé dont je sors
Ne me maudiront pas d’avoir, vécu, fantôme,
Dans cette pourpre, moi qui suis fait pour le chaume!

La conscience humaine est ma sœur, et je vais
Lui parler; j’ai pour loi de haïr le mauvais
Sans haïr le méchant; je ne suis plus qu’un moine
Comme Basile, comme Honorât, comme Antoine;
Je ne chausserai plus la sandale où la croix
S’étonne du baiser parfois sanglant des rois.
Peuples, jadis Noé sortit rêveur de l’arche;
Je sors aussi. Je pars. Et je me mets en marche
Sur la terre, au hasard, sous le haut firmament,
Dans l’aube ou dans l’orage, ayant pour vêtement,
Si cela plaît au ciel, la pluie et la tempête,
Sans savoir où le soir je poserai ma tête,
N’ayant rien que l’instant, et les instants sont courts;
Je sais que l’homme souffre, et j’arrive au secours
De tout esprit qui flotte et de tout cœur qui sombre;
Je vais dans les déserts, dans les hameaux, dans l’ombre,
Dans les ronces, parmi les cailloux du ravin,
Errer comme Jésus, le va-nu-pieds divin.
Pour celui qui n’a rien, c’est s’emparer du monde,
Que de marcher parmi l’humanité profonde,
Que de créer des cœurs, que d’accroître la foi,
Et d’aller, en semant des âmes, devant soi!
Je prends la terre aux rois, je rends aux Romains Rome,
Et je rentre chez Dieu, c’est-à-dire chez l’Homme.
Laisse-moi passer, peuple. Adieu, Rome.

*

LE SYNODE D’ORIENT

LE PATRIARCHE D’ORIENT, tiare au front, en habits pontificaux; les évêques l’entourent; mitres et chapes d’or.

  Chantez,
Allégresse et louange! ô tribus, ô cités,
Chantez dans le vallon, chantez sur la montagne.
Sabaoth est l’époux, l’Église est sa compagne,
Peuple, je suis l’apôtre, et je bénis les cieux.

Entre un homme vêtu de bure noire, une croix de bois à la main.

L’HOMME

Bénir le ciel est bien, bénir l’enfer est mieux.

LE PATRIARCHE

L’enfer!

L’HOMME

          Oui, c’est-à-dire, ô prêtre, les misères.
Bénis cela. Bénis les pleurs, les cœurs sincères;
Mais flétris, où le bien contre le mal combat;
Bénis le dénûment, le haillon, lé grabat,
Le bagne, dont la chaîne épouvantable passe;
Bénis l’humble esprit sombré et la pauvre âme lasse;
Bénis tous ceux pour qui jamais tu ne prias;
Bénis les réprouvés, bénis les parias,
Et ce total des maux qui sur terre est la sommé
Des salaires. Bénis l’enfer.

LE PATRIARCHE

Quel est cet homme?

L’HOMME

Évêque d’Orient, l’évêque d’Occident
Te salue, et je suis ton frère. Sois prudent Et sois pensif; car Dieu, sache-le, prêtre, existe.

LE PATRIARCHE

C’est vous, Père! vêtu d’un linceul!

LE PAPE

Je suis triste.

LE PATRIARCHE

Vous le premier sur terre!

LE PAPE

Hélas!

LE PATRIARCHE

Triste de quoi?

LE PAPE

De la douleur de tous et de ta joie à toi.

Il fait un pas et regarde fixement le Patriarche.

Prêtre, on souffre! et le luxe odieux t’environne!
Commence par jeter par terre ta couronne.
La couronne est gênante à l’auréole. Il faut
Choisir de l’or d’en bas ou du rayon d’en haut.
Sache, ô pasteur joyeux, que les peuples frissonnent;
Sache que le ciel pâle est plein d’heures qui sonnent
Le tocsin des berceaux, le glas des nouveau-nés.
Prends garde aux innocents dont tu fais des damnés.
Crains le mal qui flamboie et que toi-même attises
Avec tes vanités, avec tes convoitises.
Frère, ne soyons pas des prêtres désastreux.
N’imitons pas les rois qui se volent entr’eux
Les Alsaces, les Metz, les Strasbourg, les Hanovres.
Prêtre, à qui donc as-tu pris ta richesse? Aux pauvres.
Quand l’or s’enfle en ton sac, Dieu dans ton cœur décroît.
Apprends qu’on est sans pain et sache qu’on a froid;
Les jeunes filles vont rôdant le soir dans l’ombre.
Tes rochets, ta chasuble aux topazes sans nombre,
Ta robe où l’Orient doré s’épanouit,
Sont des spectres qui sont noirs et vivants la nuit,
Et qui prennent Jésus dans sa crèche, et le tuent.
Sache qu’au lit public les femmes s’habituent
Parce qu’il faut céder, se rendre, et vivre enfin,
Le riche ayant le vice et le pauvre la faim.
Que te sert d’empiler sur des planches d’armoire
Du velours, du damas, du satin, de la moire,
D’avoir des bonnets d’or et d’emplir des tiroirs
De chapes qu’on dirait couvertes de miroirs?
O pauvres que j’entends râler, forçats augustes,
Tous ces trésors, chez vous sacrés, chez nous injustes,
Ce diamant qui met à la mitre un éclair,
Cette émeraude où semble errer toute la mer,

Ce resplendissement sombre des pierreries,
C’est votre sang, le lait des mamelles taries,
C’est le grelottement des petits enfants nus!
C’est votre chute au fond des gouffres inconnus!
Le faste de ce prêtre, ô pauvres, représente
Ce que vous n’avez plus, votre vie innocente,
Le loyer du logis, le tison du foyer,
La dignité du cœur qui ne veut pas ployer,
Le travail qui s’accroît par l’épargne qui monte,
Votre joie, et l’honneur des femmes, et ta honte, Prêtre! — Rends ces trésors aux pauvres! Rends-les tous!
Escarboucles chez eux, immondices chez nous!
Quoi! tandis que là-haut l’immense Éternel pense;
Tandis que sans fatigue et sans fin il dépense
La lumière, et maintient les soleils au complet,
Pour que tout marche et vive, et pour prouver qu’il est;
Tandis que dans cette ombre où court le météore,
Il nous regarde avec ses prunelles d’aurore;
Tandis qu’il met au monde énorme un tel ciment
Que rien ne s’est défait dans le bleu firmament
Le jour où dans le ciel que d’autres cieux pondèrent,
Les formidables vents démuselés grondèrent;
Tandis qu’il fait rôder plus d’astres dans les cieux,
Plus d’éclairs, plus de voix, plus de bruits, plus de feux,
Plus de prodiges, noirs ou sereins, sur les grèves,
Sur les monts, dans les bois, que l’homme n’a de rêves;
Tandis qu’il est. cet être inconcevable-là.
Nous prêtres, nous vieillards, drapés d’un falbala,
Plus chargés de bijoux que des filles publiques,
Tournant vers les faux biens nos extases obliques,
Tandis que lui, celui qui ne prend ni ne vend,
Lui le sombre Seigneur de la foudre, est vivant,
Nous, sous quelque portail d’église ou d’abbaye,
Nous offrons et montrons à la foule ébahie,
Sous la pourpre d’un dais et les plis d’un camail,
Un petit bon Dieu rose avec des yeux d’émail!
Un Jésus de carton! un Éternel de cire!

On le promène, on chante, on prêche, on le fait luire,
En marchant doucement.de crainte qu'un cahot,
En secouant l'autel, ne casse le Très-Haut!
Chaque temple a son saint qu'il rente et divinise.
Tandis que le monceau des hommes agonise
Et que la haine couve en d'âpres, cœurs grondants,
Tandis que la famine aux effroyables dents
Dévore l'atelier, le grenier, la chaumière,
Nous étalons, avec des effets de lumière,
Des bonshommes de bois au fond d'un corridor,
Brodés d'or, cousus d'or, chaussés d'or, coiffes d'or;
Nous avons des saints-Jeans et des saintes-Maries
Que nous emmaillotons dans des verroteries!
Nous dépensons Golconde à vêtir le néant.
Et, pendant ce temps-là, le vice est un géant.
Et le lupanar s'ouvre, affreux bagne des vierges!
Et je vous le répète, allumez tous vos cierges,
Faites le tour du temple en file, deux à deux,
Vous n'empêcherez pas que cela soit hideux!

Oui, pendant ce temps-là, parce qu'il faut qu'on mange,
Parce que votre luxe a pris son pain, un ange,
Une âme, une innocence entrera dans la nuit!
Pour vêtir de brocard l'idole qui reluit,
Les colombes. du ciel deviendront des orfraies!
Oui, des femmes de chair et d'os, des femmes vraies,
Honnêtes, fleurs d'amour et lys de chasteté,
Paîront de leur pudeur et de leur nudité,
De toutes leurs vertus mortes et dissipées,
Votre imbécillité d'habiller des poupées!
Entendez-vous cela! Comprenez-vous cela!
Trouvez-vous que je parle assez haut! Dieu parla
Jadis de cette sorte aux songeurs sur les cimes;
Et nous quand sur l'autel, pensifs, nous nous assîmes,
Prêtres, ce n'était pas pour être des démons.
O mes frères, aimons, aimons, aimons, aimons!

Prêtres, la croix de bois et la robe de bure,
Le front haut chez les rois, et pas d’autre courbure
Que le fléchissement des âmes devant Dieu!
Quoi! les rois sont la roue et vous êtes l’essieu!
Le peuple est sous vos pieds, parce qu’il est la base,
Et vous faites rouler sur lui ce qui l’écrase!

Sachez que vos grandeurs sont des chutes! Sachez
Que le fourmillement lugubre des péchés,
O noirs vendeurs du temple, emplit votre opulence
Et que Jésus, ayant au flanc le coup de lance,
S’est enfui, se voilant la face, n’ayant pu
Voir le peuple affamé sous le prêtre repu!
Ne pouvant voir cela, Christ a dû disparaître!
Il s’en va. Car pour lui les diamants du prêtre
Ont la même lueur que les yeux du chacal.
O froc de bure, ô saint haillon pontifical,
Sois ma splendeur. Je sens rentrer sous cette robe
L’âme que le manteau de pourpre nous dérobe;
Je revis. Du linceul le prêtre est bien vêtu.
Il devient sous la bure exemple, honneur, vertu,
Serviteur de qui souffre et juge de qui règne;
Comme il est faible, il faut que le tyran le craigne;
Car les faibles sont pleins de la force de Dieu.
Sa robe noire passe à toute heure, en tout lieu,
Parmi les deuils, les maux, les fléaux, les désastres,
Et quand il la secoue il en tombe des astres!
Il en tombe le vrai, le bien, le beau, le grand!
Prêtres, votre richesse est un crime flagrant!
Vos cœurs sont-ils méchants? Non, vos têtes sont dures.
Frères, j’avais aussi sur moi ce tas d’ordures,
Des perles, des onyx, des saphirs, des rubis.
Oui, j’en avais sur moi, partout, sur mes habits,
Sur mon âme; mais j’ai vidé cela bien vite
Chez les pauvres.

LE PATRIARCHE

Seigneur et docteur, grand lévite,
Pape sublime, évêque illustre et souverain,
Les tables de la loi sont un livre d’airain;
Nul n’y peut rien changer, pas même toi, mon père.

UN ÉVÊQUE

Il faut que l’homme souffre afin que Dieu prospère;
L’or du temple éblouit le pauvre utilement.
Il faut la perle au dogme et l’astre au firmament;
Il faut que les vivants, foules, essaims; mêlées,
Volent à la lueur des mitres constellées;
Cette clarté leur est nécessaire en leur nuit.
Le temple opulent sert et l’autel pauvre nuit.
Il sied que le pasteur comme un soleil se lève.

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

Parlons des rois avec précaution; leur glaive
Jette à peu près la même ombre que notre croix;
Le temple a Dieu pour base et pour cime les rois;
Dieu croule si les rois tombent.

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

La foule est faite
Pour le maître, qu’il soit soldat, juge ou prophète;
Le prêtre est le premier des maîtres; le second C’est le roi.

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

Le soc dur fait le sillon fécond;
Oui, déchirons! Ainsi l'on sème, ainsi l'on fonde;
Et l'épi sera beau si la plaie est profonde.

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

Frère, Dieu n'a jamais voulu qu'on le comprît.

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

Le royaume des cieux est aux pauvres d'esprit;
Donc peu d'écoles, point de science, un seul livre.

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

Les peuples ont pour loi d'être en bas et de suivre;
Et leur ascension est faite quand vers nous.
Ils montent les degrés dès temples à genoux,

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

La pensée en dehors du dogme est de l'ivraie.
C'est la justice juste et la vérité vraie
Que j'affirme. Anathème à l'homme révolté!

AUTRE ÉVÊQUE

Nous avons dans nos mains la terrible clarté.
Il faut que la lumière éclaire, ou qu'elle brûle.
Le prêtre est infidèle à son Dieu s'il recule
Et si, devant l'impie, il hésite à pencher

Le flambeau jusqu’au tas de paille du bûcher.

LE PATRIARCHE

Ce qu’on nomme aujourd’hui liberté, c’est l’abîme.
Et c’est là que dit l’effrayant Kéroubime
Debout sur le mur noir de l’infini. Croyez.
Soyez des cœurs tremblants, soyez des fronts ployés,
Obéissez. Le prince est un prêtre; le prêtre
Est un prince. Vouloir comprendre, vouloir être,
Vouloir penser, c’est faire obstacle à Dieu. Vivants
Qui sous l’énormité redoutable des vents
Résistez, vous avez des âmes insensées.
Dieu maudit vos efforts, vos travaux, vos pensées,
Et votre raison, sœur de l’antique péché,
Et votre vain progrès, sinistrement léché
Par la langue de feu qui sort du lac de soufre.
Voilà les vérités qui jaillirent du gouffre
Le jour où sur l’Horeb le tonnerre a brillé.

LE PAPE

Frères, figurez-vous, — je me suis réveillé!

LES ÉVÊQUES

Qu’entendez-vous par là?

LE PATRIARCHE

Qu’est-ce que tu médites?

LE PAPE

Je ne crois plus un mot de tout ce que vous dites!

LE PATRIARCHE

Quoi! vous seriez l'horrible et vivant démenti
De vos prédécesseurs glorieux?

LE PAPE

    J'ai senti
Un mécontentement inquiétant dans l'ombre.

LE PATRIARCHE

Le pilote aveuglé, c'est le vaisseau qui sombre.
Ne changez pas de route! O Père, n'allez pas
Du côté de la nuit, du côté du trépas!

LE PAPE

Je marche vers la vie.

LE PATRIARCHE

    Il faudra rendre compte.

LE PAPE

Certes!

LE PATRIARCHE

Songez au ciel. Vous en tombez.

LE PAPE

J’y monte.

LES ÉVÊQUES

O sombre cécité!

LE PAPE

Je vous dis que je vois.
J’étais sur un sommet doré, sur un pavois,
Dans l’encens, dans les chants et les épithalames.
J’ai senti tout à coup l’immense poids des âmes;
Et je suis descendu, sachant que je montais.
Le dogme n’a d’appuis, l’Église n’a d’étais
Que nos fragilités; tâchons qu’elles soient pures.
Oui, j’ai vu les douleurs, oui, j’ai vu les souillures,
J’ai vu le bien gisant, j’ai vu le mal debout,
Et j’ai songé. Ciel noir! les crimes sont partout,
Mais il n’est qu’un coupable, et c’est le responsable.
J’ai vu les maux nombreux plus que les grains de sable,
Les forfaits plus épais que les branches des bois,
L’infâme orgie en rut, l’innocence aux abois,
Et j’ai dit en moi-même, en voyant les deux mondes
Pleins de brocanteurs vils et de. vendeurs immondes :
Ce prêtre sur l’argent hideusement penché,
Ce juge qui chuchote à voix basse un marché,

Cette fille à l’œil fou, cette bohémienne,
Qu’est-ce qu’ils vendent là? Leur âme? Non, la mienne!
Alors j’ai pris la fuite, épouvanté, voulant
Être bon, m’arracher tous ces crimes du flanc,
Guider, sauver, guérir, supprimer les Sodomes,
Bénir, et rendre enfin Dieu respirable aux hommes!

LE PATRIARCHE

Vous avez un devoir, foudroyer.

LE PAPE

Avertir.

LE PATRIARCHE

Songez au Dieu vengeur.

LE PAPE

Je songe au Christ martyr.

LE PATRIARCHE

Roi...

LE PAPE

La chaire changée en trône est impudique.
Pauvre et nu, Jésus règne; et, roi, le prêtre abdique.

Prêtre, j’ai le roseau de Jésus à la main;
Roi, je n’ai plus qu’un sceptre; et pour le genre humain
Je ne suis plus qu’un prince obéissant aux princes,
Concédant, consentant, tremblant pour mes provinces,
Courtisan du plus fort, à céder toujours prêt;
Jamais la royauté du prêtre n’apparaît
Sans une transparence affreuse d’esclavage.
Je ne fais point partie, ô prêtres, du ravage,
Du supplice et du meurtre, et ne veux point m’asseoir
Parmi ces rois sur qui tombe l’éternel soir.
J’aime! je sens en moi la grande clarté vivre.

LES ÉVÊQUES

Guide-nous, mais suis-nous. Pour guider, il faut suivre.

LE PAPE

Jamais. Je suis sorti, plein d’horreur et d’effroi,
De toute votre nuit! Quoi! l’on eût dit de moi :
Terre, cet homme avait la garde d’une idée,
La plus haute que l’ombre ait jamais possédée,
Clarté sainte au-dessus du gouffre obscur des cœurs;
En dépit des vents noirs rapidement vainqueurs
Et vite évanouis, cet homme était le mage
Mystérieux, chargé du mutuel hommage
Que se doivent les cieux et les âmes, rapport
Et lien entre un mât frissonnant et le port,
Échange de lueur entre l’abîme et l’homme.
Quoi! parce que de vains simulacres qu’on nomme
Princes, maîtres, seigneurs, chefs, souverains, césars,
Parce que de faux dieux, composés de hasards,
Ou du hasard de vaincre ou du hasard de naître,
Parce que des puissants que le néant pénètre
Sont venus le trouver, lui le veilleur qui n’a

Ici-bas d’autre droit que de dire Hosanna
Et de montrer du doigt là-haut l’âme éternelle,
Lui qui doit, fils de l’aube, ému, vivant en elle,
Toujours songer, pleurant sur le mal châtié,
Au moyen de changer la lumière en pitié;
Quoi! parce que ces rois, quoi! parce que ces ombres,
Parce que ces faiseurs de cendre et de décombres
Sont venus à sa porte, et durs, fiers, belliqueux,
Ont dit : sois avec nous! — cet homme est avec eux!
Quoi! cet homme, le monde étant dans les ténèbres,
Offrait dans son bazar aux acheteurs funèbres,
O terreur! le rayon qui blanchissait le ciel!
Lui l’éclaireur suprême et providentiel,
IL bénissait l’affreuse éruption des laves!
Cet homme s’était fait marchand de ces esclaves,
La vérité, l’honneur, la justice et la loi,
Prenait le droit au peuple et le donnait au roi;
Priait pour ce qui tue et contre ce qui tombe!
Cet homme a fait lancer la foudre à la colombe!
Il a fait de Jésus le valet d’Attila!
Quoi! l’on eût dit de moi : Regardez; le voilà!
Il avait en dépôt notre âme, il l’a perdue!
L’aurore se levait, cet homme l’a vendue!
Il a prostitué l’étoile du matin!:
Non! non!

LE PATRIARCHE

Vous blasphémez, Pape!

LE PAPE

Prêtre hautain,
Sois humble! Autel doré, dédore-toi, rayonne!
Plaie au flanc du Christ, bouche auguste qu’on bâillonne

Ouvre tes lèvres, parle, et dis la vérité!
Rentre en ton patrimoine, homme déshérité.
Femmes, enfants, ayez des droits. Peuple, aie une âme.
A moi, prêtres! Prêchez le vrai que je proclame, Soyez simples de cœur. Soyez, sous le ciel bleu,
Près des petits enfants pour être près de Dieu.
Plus le pontife est doux, plus le temple est sublime.

Tout s’évanouit et s’efface autour du pape.

Quoi! plus de prêtres! Quoi! plus de temple! — L’abîme.
Tout disparaît. Jadis Babel ainsi croula.
Me voilà seul! Plus rien que l’ombre.

UNE VOIX AU FOND DE L’INFINI

Je suis là.

*

UN GRENIER

L’hiver. Un grabat.
UN PAUVRE. Sa famille près de lui.

LE PAUVRE

Je ne crois pas en Dieu.

LE PAPE, entrant.

Tu dois avoir faim. Mange.

Il partage son pain et en donne la moitié au pauvre.

LE PAUVRE

Et mon enfant?

LE PAPE

Prends tout.

Il donne à l’enfant le reste de son pain.

L’ENFANT, mangeant.

C’est bon.

LE PAPE, au pauvre.

L’enfant, c’est l’ange.
Laisse-moi le bénir.

LE PAUVRE

Fais ce que tu voudras.

LE PAPE, vidant une bourse sur le grabat.

Tiens, voici de l’argent pour t’acheter des draps.

LE PAUVRE

Et du bois.

LE PAPE

Et de quoi vêtir l’enfant, la mère,
Et toi, mon frère. Hélas! cette vie est amère.
Je te procurerai du travail. Ces grands froids
Sont durs. Et maintenant parlons de Dieu.

LE PAUVRE

J’y crois.

*

LE PAPE AUX FOULES

A travers la douleur, l’angoisse, les alarmes,
Du fond des nuits, du fond des maux, du fond des larmes,
Venez à moi vous tous qui tremblez, qui souffrez,
Qui râlez, qui rampez, qui saignez, qui pleurez,
Les damnés, les vaincus, les gueux, les incurables,
Venez, venez, venez, venez, ô misérables!
Je suis à vous, je suis l’un de vous, et je sens
Dans mes os votre fièvre immense, agonisants!
Venez, déguenillés, réprouvés, multitude!
Je suis le serviteur de votre servitude,
Et de votre cachot je suis le prisonnier;
Le premier chez les rois, parmi vous.le dernier.
Votre part est la bonne, elle est la plus auguste;
Le riche a beau bien faire, être sage, être juste;
Quiconque a les pieds nus marche plus près de Dieu.
Le ciel noir montre plus d’astres que le ciel bleu.

Je vous aime, et n’ai pas d’autre raison pour être,
Fils, le prêtre du-juge et le juge du prêtre.
Je ne suis qu’un pauvre homme appartenant à tous.
O souffrants, aidez-moi. Je tâche d’être doux.
Venez, partageons tout,’ le froid, la faim, les jeûnes.
Je suis vieux chez les vieux et jeune avec les jeunes;
Je suis l’aïeul du père et l’enfant des petits;
J’ai tous les âges; fils, j’ai tous les appétits,
Toutes les volontés, toutes les convoitises;
Je suis, comme l’agneau qu’attirent les cytises,
Attiré par les deuils, les dénûments, les pleurs;
Je veux avoir ma part de toutes les douleurs;
J’ai droit à tous les maux qu’on souffre sur la terre;
Je suis l’universel étant le solitaire;
O pauvres, donnez-moi tout ce que vous avez,

Vos jours sans pain, vos toits sans feu, vos durs pavés,
Vos fumiers, vos grabats tremblants, vos meurtrissures,
Et le ciel étoile, plafond de vos masures.

O vous qui n'avez rien, donnez-moi tout. Venez,
Tous les malheureux! nus, sanglants, blessés, traînés
Par tous les désespoirs et sur toutes les claies;
Apportez-moi vos fiels, apportez-moi vos plaies,
Afin qu'à votre nuit je mêle un peu de jour,
Et que je fasse avec vos haines de l'amour.
Venez, haillons, sanglots, plaintes, colères, âmes!

Fils, le malheur et moi, partout où nous passâmes
Nous avons tous les deux, chacun à sa façon,
Prouvé, lui qu'il a tort, et moi qu'il a raison.
Il a tort, car on pleure, et raison, car on aime.
Le malheur a cela de tendre et de suprême
Qu'on aime d'autant plus que l'on a plus souffert;
Le malheur c'est le ciel obscurément offert.
Vous avez les douleurs et moi j'ai les dictâmes.
Je suis l'ambitieux qui veut prendre les âmes;
N'avoir rien secouru, c'est là la pauvreté;
On aura des besoins devant l'éternité;
Il serait imprudent, à l'heure où le soir tombe,
De s'offrir à celui qu'on trouve dans la tombe
Sans avoir fait d'épargne et rien mis de côté.
Souffrants, apportez-moi votre calamité.
Je suis l'aide, l'ami, l'appui. Venez, misères,
Lèpres, infirmités, indigences, ulcères,
Quiconque est hors l'espoir, quiconque est hors la loi.
La douleur m'appartient. J'appelle autour de moi
L'esprit troublé, le cœur saignant, l'âme qui sombre;
Et je veux, entouré des détresses sans nombre,
Qui naissent sur la terre à toute heure, en tout lieu,
Arriver avec tous les pauvres devant Dieu!
Venez, vous qu'on maudit! Venez, vous qu'on méprise!

Tous les misérables viennent autour de lui de tous côtés.

UN PASSANT

Qu’est-ce que tu fais là, vieillard?

LE PAPE

Je thésaurise.

*

L’INFAILLIBILITÉ

Ah! je suis l’Infaillible!

Ah! c’est moi qui vois clair!

Et Dieu?

Dieu ne sait pas ce que savait Kepler,
Ce que trouva Newton, ce qu’a vu Galilée;
Il est dépaysé sous la voûte étoilée;
Il a tous les défauts possibles; dur, cassant,
Jaloux, inexorable, irascible; il consent
A l’arrestation du soleil par un homme;
Il damne l’univers pour le vol d’une pomme;
Il foudroie au hasard, il châtie à côté;
Il tue en bloc; il met le diable en liberté;
Molière le ferait sermonner par Alceste;
Il extermine un bouge, il épargne l’inceste,
Détruit Sodome, et donne à Loth un exeat;
Il double d’un enfer son paradis béat;
Il ne sait ce qu’il fait, tant il est susceptible,
Et tâche de brûler notre âme incombustible
Dans un monstrueux lac de bitume et de poix.
Ah! vous avez voulu lui mettre un contre-poids!
Oui, vous avez voulu corriger, j’imagine,
Ce Dieu qui du chaos tire son origine,
Qui maudit, sans savoir pourquoi, le genre humain,
Et qui marche en tâtant du bâton le chemin;
Il a, certes, besoin d’un guide en sa nuit noire,
Et, grâce au compagnon qui l’aide, on aime à croire,
Malgré Pascal doutant et Voltaire niant,
Que Dieu peut-être aura moins d’inconvénient.
Donc son chien est le pape, et je comprends qu’en somme,

L’aveugle étant le dieu, le clairvoyant soit l’homme.

Dérision lugubre! Insulte au firmament!

Donc le pape jamais ne chancelle et ne ment;
Donc jamais une erreur ne tombe de sa bouche;
L’infaillibilité formidable et farouche
Luit dans son œil suprême...

O nuit! pardonne-leur!
Être un homme, un jouet quelconque du malheur,
Moins libre que le vent, plus frêle que la plante,
Le passant inquiet de la terre tremblante,
Une agitation qui frissonne et qui fuit,
Un peu d’ombre essayant de faire un peu de bruit,
Être cela! sentir derrière soi l’abîme
Et devant soi le gouffre, et se croire la cime!
Avoir l’affreux squelette en ce vil corps charnel,
Et dire à Dieu : Je suis ton égal. Éternel!
Je suis l’autorité, je suis la certitude,
Et mon isolement, Dieu, vaut ta solitude;
Le pape est avec toi le seul être debout
Sur cet immense Rien que l’homme appelle Tout;
Tout n’est rien devant moi comme devant toi, Maître.
Je sais la fin, je sais le but, je connais l’Être;
Je te tiens, ma clef t’ouvre, et je suis ton sondeur,
Dieu sombre, et jusqu’au fond je vois ta profondeur.
Dans l’obscur univers je suis le seul lucide;
Je ne puis me tromper; et ce que je décide
T’oblige; et quand j’ai dit : Voici la vérité!
Tout est dit. Quand je veux que tu sois irrité,
Quand j’ai dit la loi, l’ordre, et le point où commence
Ta colère, et l’endroit où finit ta clémence,
Tu dois courber ton front énorme dans les cieux!
Le grand char étoile tourne sur deux essieux,
Dieu, le Pape.

O soleils! astres! gouffres des êtres!
Que dites-vous du pape infaillible, et des prêtres,
Des conciles mettant le pied sur vos hauteurs,
Que dis-tu de ce tas de sinistres docteurs,
Ciel terrible, imposant leur néant au mystère,
Et tâchant d’ajouter à Dieu le ver de terre !

*

EN VOYANT PASSER DES BREBIS TONDUES

Les sombres vents du soir soufflent de tous côtés.
O brebis, ô troupeaux, ô peuples, grelottez.
Où donc est votre laine, ô marcheurs lamentables?
Allez loin de vos toits et loin de vos étables,
Sous le givre et la pluie, allez, allez, allez!
Où donc est votre laine, ô pauvres accablés,
Vous qui nourrissez tout, hélas! et qu’on affame?
Peuple, où donc sont tes droits? Homme, où donc est ton âme?
O laboureur, où donc est ta gerbe? O maçon,
Constructeur, bâtisseur, où donc est ta maison?
Où donc sont les esprits mis sous votre tutelle, Docteurs? Et ta pudeur, ô femme, où donc est-elle?
Hélas! j’entends sonner les clairons triomphants;
Vierge, où sont tes amours? mère, où sont tes enfants?
Grelottez, ô bétail, dépouillé, pauvres êtres!
Votre laine n’est pas à vous, elle est aux maîtres,
Elle est à ceux pour qui’ le chien aboie, à ceux
Qui sont les rois, les forts, les grands, les paresseux!
A ceux qui pour servante ont votre destinée!

C’est à vous cependant que Dieu l’avait donnée,
Cette laine sacrée, et dans la profondeur
Dieu maudit les ciseaux lugubres du tondeur!
Ah! malheureux en proie aux heureux! Honte aux maîtres!
Où donc sont ces bergers qu’on appelle les prêtres?
Nul ne te défend, peuple, ô troupeau qui m’es cher,
Et l’on te prend ta laine en attendant ta chair.

La nuit vient.

Ils courent par moments; les coups inexorables
Pleuvent, et l’on croit voir, avec ces misérables,
La vérité, le droit, la raison, l’équité, ,

Tout ce qu’on a de juste au fond du cœur, fouetté!
Où donc la conduit-on, cette foule hagarde,
Tremblante sous le soir terrible? qui la garde?
Comme ils sont harcelés, effrayés, éperdus!
Où vont ces sombres pas par derrière mordus?
Ils courent... — on dirait le passage d’un songe.

La bise souffle et semble un serpent qui s’allonge.
Est-ce que le mystère est lui-même contre eux?
Pourquoi tant d’aquilons sur tant de malheureux?
S’il est des anges noirs volant dans ces ténèbres,
Je les implore! ô vents, grâce! ô plafonds funèbres,
Ayez pitié! l’on souffre. Ah! que d’infortunés!
Qui donc s’acharne ainsi sur les pauvres? Donnez
D’autres ordres, esprits de l’ombre, à la tempête!
Dans l’échevèlement sauvage du prophète
Le vent peut se jouer, car le prophète est fort;
Mais soufflant sur le faible en pleurs, le ciel a tort.
Oui, je te donne tort, ciel profond qui m’écoutes;
C’est trop d’ombre. Oh! pitié! Des deux côtés des routes
Tout est brume, erreur, doute; et le brouillard trompeur
Les glace et les aveugle; ils ont froid, ils ont peur.

L’obscurité redouble.

De qui ce vent farouche est-il donc le ministre?
Allez, disparaissez à l’horizon sinistre.
Passe, ô blême troupeau dans la brume décru.
Que deviennent-ils donc quand ils ont disparu?
Que deviennent-ils donc quand ils sont invisibles?
Ils tombent dans ce gouffre obscur : tous les possibles!
Ils s’en vont, ils s’en vont, ils s’en vont, nus, épars
Sur des pentes sans but croulant de toutes parts.
O pâle foule en fuite! ô noirs troupeaux en marche!
Perdus dans l’immense ombre où jadis flottait l’arche!
Nul deuil n’est comparable à l’affreux sort de ceux
Qui s’en vont ne laissant que du rêve après eux.

Le destin, composé d’énigmes nécessaires,
Hélas! met au delà de toutes les misères,
De tout ce qui gémit, saigne et s’évanouit,
Le morne effacement des errants dans la nuit!

*

PENSIF DEVANT LE DESTIN

Tout ce qui pense, vit, marche, respire, passe,
Va, vient, palpite, naît et meurt, demande grâce.
Il n'est pas sur la terre un homme qui n'ait fait
Une faute; et le sort des neveux de Japhet
C'est de souffrir; chacun verse une larme amère,
La mère sur l'enfant et l'enfant sur la mère.
Pourquoi tant de détresse et de calamité?
Pourquoi le grondement du gouffre illimité?
Pourquoi le côté noir du dogme et de la bible?
Parce que nous péchons. De là l'ombre terrible,
Et les religions toutes pleines d'enfers.
Tous les abîmes sont à notre marche offerts.
Terreur! dit Eleusis. Damnation! dit Rome.
De la bête de proie à la bête de somme,
Du soldat au forçat, du serf à l'empereur,.
Tout est vengeance, effroi, haine, morsure, horreur.
L'être créé n'a droit qu'à des destins funèbres;
La menace lui tend le poing dans les ténèbres.
Avance, c'est la nuit. Recule, c'est l'enfer.
Homme, il est Prométhée; ange, il est Lucifer.

*

ON CONSTRUIT UNE ÉGLISE

L’ARCHEVÊQUE

Hommes qui bâtissez une église, il importe
D’en faire magnifique et superbe la porte
Pour que la foule y puisse entrer facilement;
Employez-y le bronze et l’or, le diamant,
L’onyx, le saphir; rien n’est trop beau pour l’église;
Que la façade soit auguste, et qu’on y lise
Ce nom, Jéhovah, comme à travers des éclairs;
Que le clocher répande un hymne dans les airs
Et que son tremblement se communique aux âmes;
Et que le peuple sente, enfants, vieillards et femmes,
En regardant ce temple avec un saint frisson,
Qu’on a sur le seigneur mesuré la maison
Et la grandeur du lieu sur la grandeur de l’hôte;
Que la crypte soit vaste et que la nef soit haute;
Que l’homme entende là passer confusément
La faute et le pardon, divin chuchotement;
Que le saint-livre ouvert soit sur la sainte-table;
Que l’évêque ait son trône et Jésus son étable;
Que les, prêtres, par qui vos torts sont expiés,
Aient une natte épaisse et tiède sous leurs pieds;
Que l’âme croie, en l’ombre où flottent les saints-voiles,
Entrevoir une obscure éclosion d’étoiles
Comme au fond des forêts dans la vapeur des soirs;
Qu’on y sente osciller les vagues encensoirs;
Que l’autel, entouré d’un solennel murmure,
Ait la splendeur sinistre et sombre d’une armure,
Car le céleste esprit combat l’esprit charnel; .
Et nul ne doit sans crainte approcher l’Éternel;
Pas d’ornement grossier, pas de matières viles;
Quand Salomon disait aux bâtisseurs de villes :

— Bâtissez sur la roche et non sur le limon —
Hiram, maçon du temple, écoutait Salomon;
Donc obéissez-moi. Faites un fier mélange
Du Raphaël pudique et du grand Michel-Ange;
Peignez sur la muraille Adam qu'Ève tenta,
Moïse au Sinaï, Jésus au Golgotha,
Les Géants terrassés malgré leur haute taille,
Job, et l'effarement des chevaux de bataille;
Tout ce qui foudroya, tout ce qui rayonna,
Festin de Balthasar et noces de Cana,
Doit faire flamboyer et resplendir les fresques;
Mariez l'arc lombard aux ogives moresques;
Que la statue alterne avec les noirs tableaux;
Une église doit être un large espace, enclos
De bons murs, préservé des vents et des tempêtes;
Prêtres, emplissez-la de fleurs les jours de fêtes;
Tout ce qui vient du ciel, l'église le contient;
Un roi qui la voudrait orner comme il convient,
Épuiserait Golconde et n'y pourrait suffire;
Prodiguez-y l'airain, le jaspe et le porphyre
Que n'atteint pas la rouille et né mord pas le ver.

LE PAPE

Et mettez-y des lits pour les pauvres l'hiver.

*

EN VOYANT UNE NOURRICE

Mère, je te bénis. La nourrice est sacrée.
Après l’éternité la maternité crée;
Eve s’ajoute à Dieu pour compléter Japhet;
Et l’homme, composé d’âme et de chair, est fait
Du rayon de l’abîme et du lait de la femme.
L’ineffable empyrée est une vaste trame
De souffles, de beauté, de splendeur et d’amour.
Qu’est-ce que la nature? Un gouffre, un carrefour,
Une rencontre; et tout vient pêle-mêle éclore.
Ce que la femme donne à l’enfant, c’est l’aurore;
Il coule autant de jour d’un sein que d’un soleil;
D’une sombre mamelle au fond du ciel vermeil
Les étoiles sont l’une après l’autre tombées;
Les Pléiades en haut, en bas les Machabées,
Sont des groupes pareils; toute clarté descend
Et devient notre esprit et devient notre sang.
Et dans tous les berceaux l’infini recommence;
Et l’Éternel emploie à la même œuvre l’immense,
En ce monde où l’enfant sans l’astre est incomplet,
La goutte de lumière et la goutte de lait.
O bénédiction, sois à jamais sur l’homme!

Rêveur.

Et pourtant, ô vivants, quand je songe à Sodome,
A Carthage, à Moloch, à tous vos noirs exploits,
A tous les attentats faits par toutes vos lois,
Je frissonne. Dracon est pire que Tibère.
L’aréopage est l’antre où Satan délibère.
Vous avez eu raison d’aveugler la Thémis
Par qui tant de forfaits stupides sont commis,
Car souvent, en voyant le mal, la violence
L’emporter, elle aurait horreur de sa balance.

Il arrive parfois que les lois d’ici-bas,
Lois qui frappent Jésus et sauvent Barabbas,
Lois dont l’étrange glaive au hasard tranche et tombe,
Du cri d’un nouveau-né font l’appel de la tombe.
Oui, l’épouvante en est venue à ce degré.
Un jour, je m’en souviens, — quand j’étais égaré
Jusqu’à me croire roi, moi qui suis ton esclave,
O devoir! — sous les murs d’un cachot, froide cave,
J’ai vu, c’était à Rome, une femme attendant.
On l’avait condamnée au gibet, et pendant
Qu’on dressait la potence et qu’on creusait là fosse,
Cette femme avait dit au juge : Je suis grosse.
Et le juge avait dit : Soit. Alors, attendons.
— Oh! si je ne sentais le ciel plein de pardons,
Comme je frémirais pour l’homme et pour son âme! —
Qu’est-ce qu’on attendait? ceci : que cette femme
Donnât la vie, afin de lui donner la mort.
Ainsi les hommes font dans l’énigme du sort Pénétrer leurs décrets sans que leur raison tremble!
La mort, la vie, étaient sur cette femme ensemble.
Leur lueur éclairait le cachot étouffant;
Horreur! à chaque pas de l’une vers l’enfant
L’autre faisait un pas vers la mère, et, dans l’ombre,
Vers elle, l’un riant et charmant, l’autre sombre,
Et chacun apportant la clef de la prison,
Deux fantômes venaient du fond de l’horizon.
Être en proie à la loi! Quel deuil! — Mon cœur se serre.
Ainsi le code humain peut finir, ô misère!
Par avoir la figure obscure d’un bandit!
Et l’enfant, si le ciel l’eût fait parler, eût dit :
Tu commences, ô loi, par me tuer ma mère.
O triste loi sans yeux, dans cette angoisse *amère,
La malheureuse a beau trembler, frémir, prier,
Tu charges son enfant d’être son meurtrier;
Son sang tient mon berceau, déjà sombre, encor vide,
Et de moi, l’innocent, tu fais un parricide.
Tu me fais faire un crime à moi qui ne suis pas.

Je nais, je tue. — Hélas! — La loi prend un compas,
Pèse l'urne du mal, la trouve peu remplie,
Mesure un crime, ajoute un meurtre, multiplie
Un attentat par l'autre, un forfait par un deuil,
Dans un affreux berceau fait éclore un cercueil,
Attend qu'un enfant naisse, ordonne qu'on bâtisse
Un tombeau sur sa tête, et dit : C'est la justice!
Elle veut, au milieu de ce saint univers,
Quand les cieux versent l'aube et sont tout grands ouverts,
Devant le jour sans fin, devant l'azur sans voiles,
Dans le fourmillement des fleurs et des étoiles,
Qu'une mère éperdue ait horreur du moment
Où son enfant naîtra sous le bleu firmament! —
J'ai vu cela. Si bien que cette misérable
Était là, regardait fuir l'heure inexorable,
Écoutait dans la nuit le glas dire : Il le faut!
Et sentait dans son sein remuer l'échafaud.

*

UN CHAMP DE BATAILLE

DEUX ARMÉES EN PRÉSENCE

LE PAPE

J’ai peur. Je sens ici comme une âme terrible.
L’homme est la flèche, ô cieux profonds, l’homme est la cible!
Mais quel est donc le bras qui tend cet arc affreux?
Pourquoi ces hommes-ci s’égorgent-ils entr’eux?
Quoi! peuple contre peuple! ô nations trompées!

(S’avançant entre les deux armées.)

De quel droit avez-vous les mains pleines d’épées?
Que faites-vous ici? Qu’est-ce que ces pavois?
Que veulent ces canons? Hommes que j’entrevois,
Dans l’assourdissement des trompettes farouches,
Plus forts que des lions et plus vains que des mouches,
Pour le plaisir de qui vous exterminez-vous?
Tous n’avez qu’un seul droit, c’est de vous aimer tous.
Dieu vous ordonne d’être ensemble sur la terre.
Dieu, sous sa douce loi, cache un devoir austère;
Comme à l’érable, au chêne, à l’orme, au peuplier,
Il vous a dit de croître et de multiplier.
Aimez-vous. Les palais doivent la paix aux chaumes.
O rois, des deux côtés vous voyez des royaumes,
Des fleuves, des cités, la terre à partager,
Des droits pareils aux loups cherchant à se manger,
Des trônes se gênant, les clairons, les chimères,
La gloire; et moi je vois dés deux côtés des mères.
Je vois des deux côtés des cœurs désespérés.
Je vois l’écrasement des sillons et des prés,
La lumière à des yeux pleins d’aurore ravie,
Le deuil, l’ombre, et la fuite affreuse de la vie.
Je vois les nations que la mort joue aux dés.

Mais qui donc êtes-vous, hommes qui m’entendez?
Quoi! vous êtes le nombre et vous êtes la force!
Vous êtes la racine et la tige et l’écorce,
Le feuillage et le fruit de l’arbre universel;
Le désert et le sable, et la mer et le sel
Sont à vous; vous avez toutes les étendues;
Si vous voulez planer, vos ailes éperdues,
Hommes, ont l’infini pour s’y précipiter;
Vous pouvez rayonner, adorer, enfanter;
Les astres et les vents vous donnent des exemples,
Les vents pour vos essors, les astres pour vos temples;
Vous êtes l’ouvrier qui tient tout dans sa main;
Vous êtes le géant de Dieu, le genre humain;
Et vous aboutissez à de vils chocs d’armées!
Et le titan se fait le forçat des pygmées!
Vous êtes cela, peuple, et vous faites ceci!
Mais alors l’impossible existe! Oui, c’est ainsi!
C’est parce que deux rois, deux spectres, deux vampires,
Parce que deux néants s’arrachent deux empires,
Parce que l’un, ce jeune, et l’autre, ce vieillard,
Semblent grands à travers on ne sait ruel .brouillard,
Étant, le jeune, un fou, le vieux, un imbécile,
C’est parce qu’un vain sceptre entre leurs mains oscille
A tous les tremblements du vice et de l’erreur,
C’est parce que ces deux atomes en fureur
S’insultent, qu’on entend, ô triste foule humaine,
O peuples, sans savoir pourquoi, dans cette plaine
Votre stupidité formidable rugir!
Vous êtes des pantins que des fils font agir;
On vous met dans la main une lame pointue,
Vous ne connaissez pas celui pour qui l’on tue,
Vous ne connaissez pas celui que vous tuerez.
Est-ce vous qui tuerez? est-ce vous qui mourrez?
Vous l’ignorez. Demain, la mort ouvrant son aile,
Vous entrerez dans l’ombre en foule, pêle-mêle,
Sans que vous puissiez dire au sépulcre pourquoi.
Oui, du moment que c’est décrété par un roi,

Par un czar, un porteur quelconque de couronne,
Sans rien comprendre au bruit menteur qui l’environne,
A tâtons, sans Savoir si l’on est un bandit,
On n’écoute plus rien; battez, tambours, c’est dit;
Vite, il faut qu’on se heurte, il faut qu’on se rencontre,
Qu’un aveugle soit pour parce qu’un sourd est contre!
Vous mourez pour vos rois. Eux, ils ne sont pas là.
Et vous avez quitté vos femmes pour cela!
Vous jeunes, vous nombreux et forts, malgré leurs larmes,
Vous vous êtes laissés pousser par des gendarmes
Aux casernes ainsi qu’un troupeau par des chiens!
En guerre! allez, Prussiens! allez, Autrichiens!
Ici la schlague, et là le knout. Lauriers, victoire.
A grands coups de bâton on vous mène à la gloire.
Vous donnez votre force inepte à vos bourreaux
Les rois, comme en avant du chiffre les zéros.
Marchez, frappez, tuez et mourez, bêtes brutes!
Et vos maîtres, pendant vos exécrables luttes,
Boivent, mangent, sont gais et hautains; et, contents,
Repus, ont autour d’eux leurs crimes bien portants;
Vous allez être un tas de cadavres dans l’herbe,
Laissant derrière vous, sous le soleil superbe
Et sous l’étonnement des cieux, de vieux parents,
Et dans des berceaux, plaints par les nids murmurants,
O douleur, des petits aux regards de colombe! —
Eh bien non! je me mets entre vous et la tombe.
Je ne veux pas! Tremblez, c’est moi. Je vous défends
De vous assassiner, monstres! — ô mes enfants! —
Jetez-vous dans les bras les uns des autres, frères!
Quoi! l’on verrait en vous, dans ces champs funéraires,
Léviathan revivre et renaître Python!
Hommes, Humanité! se représente-t-on
Les arbres des forêts qui se feraient la guerre,
Qui, soudain furieux, eux si calmes naguère,
Deviendraient des dragons mêlant leurs bras hideux,
Faisant tourbillonner la tempête autour d’eux.
Et jetant et broyant les fleurs, les plumes blanches,

Les nids, dans la bataille effroyable des branches!
Eh bien, sous l’affreux vent soufflant on ne sait d’où,
Vous êtes ce chaos prodigieux et fou!
Ah! vous vous enivrez d’une vanité noire!
Vous êtes des vaincus, ô rêveurs de victoire,
Vous êtes les vaincus des rois, et sur le dos
Vous portez leur grandeur, leur néant, ces fardeaux;
L’ombre des rois vous suit, vous tient, vous accompagne;
Vous êtes des traîneurs de boulet comme au bagne;
L’orgueil, leur garde-chiourme, est à votre côté;
Vous avez cette honte au pied, leur majesté!
Débarrassez-vous-en, brisez-moi cette chaîne!
Sortez des quatre murs sanglants de la géhenne,
Ignorance, colère, orgueil, mensonge, à bas!
Hommes, entendez-vous. Vivez. Plus de combats.
Non, la terre d’horreur ne sera pas noyée.
Vous êtes l’innocence imbécile employée
Aux forfaits, et les bras utiles devenus
Scélérats, et je suis celui qui vient pieds nus
Vous supplier, lions, tigres, d’être des hommes.
Il est temps de laisser cette terre ou nous sommes
Tranquille, et de permettre aux fleurs, aux blés épais,
Aux vignes, aux vergers bénis, de croître en paix;
Il est temps que l’azur brille sur autre chose Que de la haine, et l’aube est souriante et rose
Pour que nous soyons doux comme elle. Obéissons
A la vie, à l’aurore, aux berceaux, aux moissons.
Ne sacrifions pas le monde à quelques hommes.
Soyez de votre sang vénérable économes.
Non, il ne se peut pas qu’un choc tumultueux
D’hommes ivres, pour plaire aux princes monstrueux,
Epouvante ces champs où Dieu met sa lumière.
Quoi! des mères seront en deuil dans leur chaumière,
Quoi! des bras se tordront sous les cieux étoiles!
Des morts, pâles, seront entrevus dans les blés
Et sous la transparence effrayante des fleuves;
Quoi! toutes les douleurs, les orphelins, les veuves,

‘Les vieillards, mêleront leurs lamentations... —
Ah! prenez garde àvous, rois! car vos actions
D’où sort on ne sait quelle ombre extraordinaire
Font écouter à Dieu les conseils du tonnerre!

*

LA GUERRE CIVILE

Autre champ de bataille. Rues et places publiques.

LE PAPE, apparaissant entre les combattants.

Commencez par moi. — Quoi! pauvres, déshérités,
Votre sort vous accable, et vous le complétez
Par de la haine, ayant trop peu de la souffrance!
Vous vous entr’égorgez, fils de la même France!
J’entends autour de vous cette mère crier.
Toi, paysan, tu veux tuer cet ouvrier!
Pourquoi? De quelque nom que ton travail se nomme,
Il le fait aussi, lui! vous êtes le même homme;
Vous semez, sur la terre où l’humanité croît,
Le grand germe sacré, toi l’épi, lui le droit;
Il travaille, et de plus il veut aimer son frère.
Nul rie doit à la tâche auguste se soustraire;
L’un est le moissonneur et l’autre l’émondeur.
Dieu, la clarté qui pense, est dans la profondeur;
Il est l’immense point lumineux de l’abîme;
Hommes, il resplendit, féconde, inspire, anime,
Et cette vénérable et sereine lueur
Veut faire sur vos fronts briller de la sueur;
Car le travail est saint, et c’est la loi sublime.
Quoi! ce n’est pas la bêche, ou l’équerre, ou la lime,
Que vous avez aux poings, c’est le glaive! Pourquoi?
Parce que l’ouvrier marche en avant de toi,
Paysan. Il se hâte et l’avenir l’invite.
L’un va trop lentement et l’autre va trop vite.
Peut-être. Dieu le sait. Mais est-ce une raison,
O peuple, pour emplir de spectres l’horizon,
Pour plonger dans l’horreur vos mains désormais viles,
Et faire sangloter le tocsin dans les villes?

Tout est la vie; et Dieu n’a pas construit de mur.
Ah! s’il est au-dessus de nous, dans cet azur
Où les réalités sont les axes des mondes,
S’il est des buts certains, s’il est des lois profondes,
Si l’aube en se levant dit vrai, si l’astre est pur,
Et si le ciel est pour la terre un ami sûr,
Si la vie est un fruit et non pas une proie,
L’homme a pour droit, devoir et fonction la joie,
Le travail et l’amour; et, quel que soit l’éclair
Qui pour un instant jette un orage dans l’air,
Il n’est pas de colère âpre, inhumaine, athée,
Terrible, qui ne doive être déconcertée
Par une mère ayant au sein son nourrisson.
Quoi! partout la fureur! Quoi! partout le frisson,
Le deuil, des bras sanglants et des fosses creusées!
Quoi! troubler le soleil glorieux, les rosées,
Les parfums, les clartés, le mois de mai si beau,
Les fleurs, par l’ouverture affreuse du tombeau!
Ah! fussiez-vous vainqueurs, qu’est-ce que la victoire?
Vous aurez le cœur froid, vous aurez l’âme noire.
A la fraternité rien ne peut suppléer.
Ah! réfléchissez. Dieu vous créa pour créer,
Pour aimer, pour avoir des enfants et des femmes,
Pour ajouter sans cesse à vos foyers des flammes,
Pour voir croître à vos pieds des fils nombreux et forts,
Pour faire des vivants; et vous faites des morts!
Vous qui passez, pourquoi haïr celui qui passe?
Accordez-vous les uns aux autres votre grâce, Arrêtez! Arrêtez! Fraternité!

*

Tout fuit.
Mais l’apôtre se sait écouté par la nuit;
Et n’est-ce pas qu’il doit parler aux solitudes,

O Dieu, les profondeurs étant des multitudes?

(Il continue.)

*

IL PARLE DEVANT LUI DANS L’OMBRE

Vivez, marchez, pensez, espérez, aimez-vous.
Nul n’est seul ici-bas. Tout a besoin de tous.
Riche, épargne le pauvre, et toi, pauvre, pardonne
Au riche, car le sort prête et jamais né donne,
Et l’équilibre obscur se refait tôt ou tard.
Tout bien qui naît du mal des autres, est bâtard;
Et les prospérités ne sont jamais qu’obliques
Et menteuses, sortant des misères publiques;
L’arbre est malsain ayant un cadavre à son pied.
Rois, ayez peur du trône où votre orgueil s’assied,
Votre âme y devient spectre, et, maîtres des royaumes,
Hélas! sans le savoir vous êtes des fantômes;
S’appeler Romanoff, Habsbourg, Brunswick, Bourbon,
Empereur, majesté, roi, césar, à quoi bon?
Les Pharaons ont fait bâtir les Pyramides;
Et quand sous le soleil, sous les grands vents numides,
Fouettant leur peuple aux fers, durs comme les destins,
Ils eurent achevé ces monuments hautains,
Qu’ont-ils mis dans ces blocs prodigieux? leur cendre.
O rois, cela ne sert à rien d’être Alexandre,
Sésostris, ou Cyrus à qui le sort sourit,
Il vaut mieux être un pauvre appelé Jésus-Christ.
Le mal que nous faisons trop souvent nous encense;
Hélas, qui que tu sois, puissant, crains ta puissance,
Qui, de l’autre côté du tombeau, fait pitié.
On est flatté par où l’on sera châtié.
Vous qui faites trembler, tremblez. — Que tout s’apaise!
Quant à toi, travailleur sur qui le fardeau pèse,
Toi qui te sens lion et qu’on traite en fourmi,
Ne perds pas patience et sache attendre, ami! —
En venir aux mains? Non. Certes, ton droit suprême, C’est de vivre, d’avoir du pain, d’exiger même
Plus de salaire et moins de peine, j’en conviens;

L’immensité te doit ta part des vastes biens,
Vie, harmonie, amour, joie, hyménée, aurore.
L’avenir n’est pas noir; c’est le matin qui dore
Et remplit de clarté rose les petits doigts
Du nouveau-né riant dans sa crèche, et tu dois
Vouloir cet avenir éblouissant et juste;
Tu dois, ferme, appuyé sur le travail robuste,
Réclamer le paiement de tes efforts, tu dois
Protéger ton foyer, et faire face aux lois
Si leur sagesse fausse à tes droits est contraire,
Et nourrir ton enfant, — mais sans tuer ton frère!
Sans blesser la patrie et meurtrir la cité!
L’idéal ne veut point mêler à sa clarté
Les Saint-Barthélemys et les Vendémiaires;
Les principes sereins sont de hautes lumières;
Dans la Terre Promise on ne met pas la mort;
L’espérance n’est pas faite pour le remord;
Peuple, sur le cloaque informe du carnage,
Quel que soit le tueur, sais-tu ce qui surnage?
C’est sa honte. — L’opprobre éternel du vainqueur,
La pâle liberté morte et l’épée au cœur,
Pour soi l’abjection, pour d’autres le martyre.
C’est là toute la gloire, ô peuples, qu’on retire
Des fauves actions faites aveuglément.
Hélas! sous le regard fixe du firmament,
Pas de tueurs; laissons les bourreaux dans leurs bouges.
Je hais une victoire ayant les ongles rouges;
Je n’aime pas qu’un droit ait des mains de boucher,
Et, quand il a vaincu, soit forcé de cacher
Les fentes des pavés des villes sous du sable.
Le paradis de Dieu deviendrait haïssable
S’il fallait qu’à travers un meurtre on l’espérât.
Quoi! le droit malfaiteur! le progrès scélérat!
Homme, crains la balance où tout destin s’achève.
Le mal qu’on fait est lourd plus que le bien qu’on rêve.
L’aurore est hors de l’ombre et les nuits vont finir;
Crains de mettre une tache au front de l’avenir;

La liberté n’a pas l’assassin pour ministre;
L’astre dont la sortie ouvre un gouffre est sinistre;
Le progrès n’a plus rien de providentiel
S’il ne peut, sans creuser l’enfer, monter au ciel;
Nul soleil n’a l’ampleur horrible de l’abîme;
Si grand que soit un droit, il est moins grand qu’un crime;
Jamais, non, même ayant la justice pour soi,
On ne peut la servir par le deuil et l’effroi;
La vérité qui tue, affreuse vengeresse,
A des yeux de démon sous un front de déesse;
Une étoile n’a pas droit de verser du sang;
L’aube est blanche; et le bien n’est le bien — qu’innocent.

*

MALÉDICTION ET BÉNÉDICTION

Les malédictions sont sur les multitudes,
Les tonnerres profonds hantent les solitudes,
Rien n’est laissé tranquille en ce sombre univers.
Les prêtres sont pareils à des gouffres ouverts;
Qui regarde dedans voit des choses affreuses.

Si tu planes, tout fuit; tout croule, si tu creuses.
O morne angoisse!

Hélas! l’anxiété partout.
Que de rêves tombés! Que de spectres debout!
L’homme, en proie à la nuit dont le prêtre est complice,
Peut-être a devant lui l’échelle d’un supplice
Quand, sentant des degrés dans l’ombre, il dit : Montons.
Le genre humain ignore, erre, marche à tâtons,
Souffre, et ne voit, s’il cherche une lueur propice,
Qu’un flamboiement farouche au fond d’un précipice.
Tout est-il donc fatal? Rien n’est-il donc clément?
La vie est une dette et la mort un paiement.
Satan règne; le mal fait loi; l’enfer, c’est l’ordre.

Et j’entendais gémir et je voyais se tordre,
Dans la brume que nul n’explore et ne connaît,
Les tristes nations sur qui tout s’acharnait,
Prêtres, juges, bourreaux, scribes, princes, ministres;
Les innombrables flots ne sont pas plus sinistres;
Le tragique Océan n’est pas plus torturé
Par les souffles confus du vent démesuré.
L’homme, en ces profonds cieux qu’il nomme noirs royaumes,
Regarde un effrayant penchement de fantômes,
Et tremblé. L’inconnu lui jette des clameurs.
Le matin lui dit : Pleure! et le soir lui dit : Meurs!
Dans l’Inde, tous les dieux taillés dans tous les marbres,

Les blêmes hommes nus vivants au creux des arbres,
En Grèce Bacchus ivre et traîné par des lynx,
Les molochs en Afrique, en Égypte les sphinx,
Le Baal monstrueux, le Jupiter inique,
Au Vatican le pâle et sanglant Dominique,
Tout menace. Partout les peuples sont maudits.
Les rois seuls, noirs élus, sont dans des paradis,
Joyeux, superposés aux supplices des hommes;
Les courtisans dorés sont les vils astronomes
Qui contemplent d'en bas les rois, ces faux soleils;
Et les rois sont contents de vivre; et leurs sommeils,
Leurs réveils, et leurs lits de pourpre, et leurs carrosses,
Leurs trônes, leurs palais, leurs festins, sont féroces.
La guerre en sort. Le prêtre est reptile au tyran.
Le Talmud n'est pas moins lâche que le Koran.
César vainqueur se fait du ciel une province.
Loyola, dur au peuple, est complaisant au prince.
Le fakir est atroce et le bonze est hideux;
Le crucifix est glaive au poing de Jules Deux;
Caïphe, âme où l'enfer profond se réverbère,
Interprète Moïse au profit de Tibère.
O deuil! Accablement du morne genre humain!
Pleurs et cris! Sang des pieds aux cailloux du chemin!
Noirceur du ciel empli par l'immense anathème!

La faute est dans Je hais! La faute est dans Je t'aime!
Tout est la chute. Hélas! que faire? Hommes damnés!
Responsables de vivre et punis d'être nés!
Je médite éperdu dans la nuit formidable.

Quel labeur que jeter la sonde à l'insondable!
Quel gouffre que l'azur qui devient de la nuit!
Terreur! tout apparaît et tout s'évanouit.
Le deuil reste.

Oh! disais-je, où donc est l'espérance?

Soudain il me sembla, comme, dans leur souffrance,
Pensif, je regardais les peuples douloureux,
Voir l’ombre d’une main bénissante sur eux;
Il me sembla sentir quelqu’un de secourable.
Et je vis un rayon sur l’homme misérable.
Et je levai mes yeux au ciel, et j’aperçus,
Là-haut, le grand passant mystérieux, Jésus.

*

EN VOYANT UN PETIT ENFANT

Il est le regard vierge, il est la bouche rose;
On ne sait avec quel ange invisible il cause.
N’avoir pas fait de mal, ô mystère profond!
Tout ce que les meilleurs font sur terre, ou défont,
Ne vaut pas le sourire ignorant et suprême
De l’enfant qui regarde et s’étonne et nous aime.

N’avoir pas une tache efface nos splendeurs.
Nous nous croyons le droit d’être altiers, durs, grondeurs,
Et lui qui ne se sait aucun droit sur la terre,
Les a tous. Sa fraîcheur pure nous désaltère;
Il calme notre fièvre, il desserre nos nœuds,
Il arrive des lieux obscurs et lumineux,
Des gouffres bleus, du fond des divins empyrées;
Ses beaux yeux sont noyés de lueurs azurées;
S’il parlait, des soleils il nous dirait les noms.
Dès qu’un enfant est là, nous nous examinons.
Pensifs, nous comparons nos âmes à la sienne;
Le plus juste est rêveur de quelque faute ancienne;
Il suffit, pour qu’on ait besoin d’être à genoux
Et pour que nous sentions de la noirceur en nous,
Que ce doux petit être inexprimable vive;
Et la création entière est attentive
Aux, reproches que fait, même à ce qui reluit,
Même au ciel, puisqu’il est par instants plein de nuit,
Même à la sainteté, triste quand on l’encense,
Cette blancheur sans ombre et sans fond, l’innocence.
De quel droit sommes-nous autour d’elle méchants?
Que nous a-t-elle fait? Nos cris couvrent ses chants.
Son aube à nos vents noirs mêle son pur zéphyre.
Est-ce que sa clarté ne devrait pas suffire
Pour nous rendre cléments et pour dompter nos cœurs?
Non, nous restons ingrats, amers, hautains, moqueurs,

Pleins d’orages, devant cette candeur sacrée.
L’âge d’or, l’heureux temps de Saturne et de Rhée,
Existe, c’est l’enfance; il est sur terre encor;
Et nos siècles de fer sur ce tendre âge d’or
N’en font pas moins leur bruit de glaives et de haines,
Et l’on entend partout le traînement des chaînes.

Vous êtes de la joie errante parmi nous,
Enfants! riez, jouez, croissez. Vos fronts sont doux,
Et la faiblesse y met sa tremblante couronne;
L’épanouissement d’avril vous environne;
Sans vous le jour est morne et le matin se tait;
Chantez. Quand le destin, comme s’il regrettait
De vous avoir dans l’ombre amenés, vous remmène,
Quand vous vous eh allez avant l’épreuve humaine,
Votre âme monte aux cieux dans le parfum des fleurs.
O chers petits enfants, quand, fuyant nos douleurs,
Vous faites dans l’azur serein votre rentrée,
Quand un nouveau-né meurt, on dirait que, navrée,
La terre prend le deuil des jours qui vous sont dus;
Et l’aurore est en pleurs quand vous êtes rendus
Par les roses vos sœurs à vos frères les anges.
Il est dans les linceuls une aile, et, dans les langes,
Il en est une aussi; c’est la même. Ouvrez-la,
Doux amis, sans pourtant nous quitter, pour cela.
Restez, notre prison par vous devient un temple.
Rayonnez, innocents, et donnez-nous l’exemple.
Croyez, priez, aimez, chantez. Soyez sans fiel.
Qu’est-ce que l’âme humaine, ô profond Dieu du ciel,
A fait de la candeur dont elle était vêtue?

*

UN ÉCHAFAUD

LE JUGE sur son siège. LE CONDAMNÉ lié de cordes.
LE BOURREAU, la hache à la main. Au fond la foule.

LE PAPE, regardant l'échafaud.
Je ne comprends pas.

LE JUGE

Prêtre, écoute : un homme tue
Un autre homme.

LE PAPE
Il commet un crime.

LE JUGE

C'est pourquoi
On le prend, on lui fait son procès, et la loi
Le tue. Est-ce clair?

LE PAPE

Oui. La loi commet un crime.

LE JUGE
Qui te donne le droit de nous juger?

LE PAPE

L’abîme.

LE JUGE

Prêtre, respect aux lois.

LE PAPE

Juge, respect à Dieu.
Cet univers visible est un immense aveu
D’ignorance devant l’univers invisible.

VOIX DANS LA FOULE

— Qu’il meure! — Il a tué! — Le talion! — La Bible!
— Le code! — Allons, bourreau, frappe. Va, compagnon!

LE PAPE, à l’assassin condamné.
Toi qui donnas la mort, sais-tu ce que c’est?

L’ASSASSIN

Non.

LE PAPE, au bourreau.

Toi qui va la donner, le sais-tu?

LE BOURREAU

Je l’ignore.

LE PAPE, au juge.

Et toi, sais-tu, devant ce ciel qu’emplit l’aurore,
Ce que c’est que la mort, juge?

LE JUGE

Je ne sais pas.

LE PAPE

O deuil!

LE JUGE
Qu’importe!

LE PAPE

Ainsi vous touchez au trépas,
Vous touchez à la hache, à la tombe, au peut-être!
Ainsi vous maniez la mort sans la connaître!
Vous êtes des méchants et des infortunés.
Dieu s’est réservé l’homme et vous le lui prenez.
Vous n’avez pas construit et vous osez détruire!
O vivants! vous n’avez d’autre droit que de dire
A cet homme qui seul sait ce qu’a fait son bras :
Es-tu coupable? vis, sachant que tu mourras.
O vivants, le ciel sent on ne sait quelle honte

Quand, vous regardant faire en votre ombre, il confronte
Le crime et l’échafaud, l’un de l’autre indignés.
Vous saignez du côté du crime, et vous saignez
Du côté de la loi, croyant faire équilibre
Au meurtrier fatal par le meurtrier libre,
Donnant pour contrepoids au bandit le bourreau.
Vous tirez, vous aussi, le trépas du fourreau!
Vous allez et venez dans l’obscur phénomène!
Dieu fait la mort divine et vous la mort humaine!
Sombre usurpation dont frémit le penseur.
Dieu vit; de l’infini vous percez l’épaisseur,
Peuple, et vous lui changez son coupable en victime.
Un homme monstre est là; vous l’imitez. Un crime
Est-il une raison d’un autre crime, hélas?
Faut-il, tristes vivants qui devez être las,
L’homme ayant fait le mal, que la loi continue?
De quel droit mettez-vous une âme toute nue,
Et faites-vous subir à cette nudité
L’effrayant face-à-face avec l’éternité?
Ce dépouillement brusque est interdit au juge.
De quel droit changez-vous en écueil le refuge?
L’homme est aveugle et Dieu par la main le conduit;
Dieu nous a mis à tous sur la face la nuit;
Il ne nous a point faits transparents; il nous couvre
D’un suaire de chair et d’ombre qui s’entr’ouvre
Quand il veut, au moment indiqué par lui seul;
Vivants, c’est à la mort que tombe le linceul;
Nous sommes jusque-là des inconnus; Dieu laisse
Aux âmes un instant pour rêver, la vieillesse,
Le droit à la fatigue et le droit au remords;
Malheur si nous faisons soudainement des morts!
Que l’obscur Dieu, toujours clément, toujours propice,
Étant le fond du gouffre, ouvre le précipice,
Il le peut, c’est en lui qu’on tombe, et, quel que soit
Le rejeté, c’est Dieu pensif qui le reçoit;
Mais, vivants, votre loi, qu’est-elle et que peut-elle?
Sur nous la forme humaine, en nous l’âme immortelle;

Nous sommes des noirceurs sous le ciel étoile.
Je m'ignore, je suis pour moi-même voilé,
Dieu seul sait qui je suis et comment je me nomme.
L'arrachement du masque est-il permis à l'homme?
De quel droit faites-vous cette surprise à Dieu?
Quoi! vous mettez la fin de la vie au milieu!
Vous ouvrez et fermez la fatale fenêtre!
A tâtons! Apprenez ceci : mourir c'est naître
Ailleurs. Quel noir travail, ô pâles travailleurs!
Comprenez-vous ce mot épouvantable, ailleurs?
Frémissez. Savez-vous le possible d'une âme?

(Montrant le condamné.)

Cet homme a fait le mal pour nourrir une femme
Et des enfants sans pain; mais vous, avez-vous faim?
Vous le tuez. Pourquoi? Trouvez-vous bon qu'enfin
Le crime et la justice aient la même figure?
O mort, sauvage oiseau, qui sait ton envergure?
Tes ailes couvriraient l'horizon de la mer.
La blanche touche au ciel et la noire à l'enfer.
Que savons-nous? Hélas! le prêtre craint la bible.
Notre âme glisse au bord sinistre du possible.
La conscience humaine habite un cabanon.
Ce que vous faites là, le comprenez-vous? Non.
Avez-vous jamais vu quelqu'un tomber dans l'ombre?
Vous représentez-vous l'immense chute sombre,
Le gouffre, l'infini plein d'un vague courroux,
Ce damné tombant là? Vous représentez-vous
L'ouverture des mains terribles dans l'abîme?
Horreur! l'homme interrompt le silence sublime,
Lui que Dieu mit sur terre afin qu'il attendît.
La justice d'en bas prend la parole et dit :
O justice d'en haut, c'est moi qui suis la vraie!
Fils, croyez un vieillard, nous sommes tous l'ivraie.
A peine aperçoit-on la faulx; quant à la main,
Cachée en ce lieu noir qu'on appelle Demain,

Nous ne la voyons pas. Elle frappe à son heure.
Tuer cet homme! ô ciel! il me fait peur. Je pleure.
Est-ce qu'il est à moi? Qu'est-il? Dieu seul le sait.
Tuer, sans pouvoir dire au juste ce que c'est,
L'homme au-dessus duquel le ciel profond diffère.
Avez-vous bien pesé ce que vous allez faire?
Vous figurez-vous, juge, et toi, peuple inclément,
L'aile étrange que peut déployer brusquement
L'être subit, sorti du viol de la tombe?
Vautour peut-être, hélas! mais peut-être colombe.
Vous dites-vous ceci : S'il était innocent?
Peut-être il monte alors qu'on pense qu'il descend.
Que devient votre arrêt devant Dieu? Les ténèbres
Peuvent faire à nos lois des réponses funèbres.
Soyons prudents devant ce que nous ignorons.
La terre est un point sombre avec des environs
Illimités de brume et d'espace farouche.
Tout l'infini frémit d'un atome qu'on touche.
N'est-il pas monstrueux de penser que la loi
Et l'homme, en cette lutte où l'on sent de l'effroi,
Mêlent des quantités inégales de crime?
Vous êtes regardés par dessus l'âpre cime;
Ne faites pas pleurer les invisibles yeux.
Vous avez des témoins attentifs dans les cieux;
Ne les indignez pas, ne leur faites pas dire :
L'homme tue au hasard. L'homme, en proie au délire,
A dans de l'inconnu jeté de l'ignoré.
Ah! c'est un attentat triste et démesuré
De jeter quelque chose à la noirceur muette,
Sans savoir où l'on jette et savoir ce' qu'on jette,
D'accroître la stupeur du gouffre avec ce bruit,
La hache, et d'envoyer de l'ombre à de la nuit!

*

PENSIF DEVANT LA NUIT

La prière contemple et la science observe.
Quand, dans le cloître noir de la sainte Minerve,
Galilée abjurait, vaincu, qu’abjurait-il?
Dieu. C’est Dieu qu’entrevoit de loin l’homme en exil.
Des épaisseurs de nuit profonde nous entourent.
Les mondes par des feux échangés se secourent;
Car, ciel sombre, on ne sait quels gouffres sont ouverts.
L’astre fait des envois de rayons, à travers
L’espace et l’étendue immense, à d’autres astres.
L’azur a ses combats; le ciel a ses désastres;
Parfois le mage, au fond des firmaments vermeils,
Distingue d’effrayants naufrages de soleils;
A voir l’effarement des pâles météores
On devine une étrange extinction d’aurores,
Quelque part, dans l’horreur du zénith ignoré.
Dieu seul sait l’étiage et connaît le degré
Jusqu’où doit croître ou fuir la marée inconnue.
L’univers n’est pas moins remué que la nue
Par un souffle; et ce souffle a lui-même sa loi.
Le savant dit : Comment? le penseur dit : Pourquoi?
La réponse d’en haut se perd dans les vertiges.
L’ombre est une descente obscure de prodiges.
Sans cesse l’inconnu passe devant nos yeux.

Mais, ombre, qu’est-il donc de stable sous les cieux?
La justice, dit l’ombre. Aucun vent ne l’emporte.
C’est pourquoi, nous pasteurs, nous devons faire en sorte
Que l’homme reste bon et sincère au milieu
De tous les changements d’équilibre de Dieu.

*

ENTRANT À JÉRUSALEM

Peuple, j’ai dit au Monde et j’ai dit à la Ville :
Plus de guerre étrangère et de guerre civile.
Plus d’échafaud. Devant le ciel bleu Liberté,
Égalité devant la mort, Fraternité
Devant le Père. Aimons. Force, aide la faiblesse.
Éclairez qui vous nuit; guérissez qui vous blesse.
Paix et pardon. Soyez cléments aux criminels.
Le droit des bons c’est d’être au méchant fraternels;
Le juste qui n’a pas d’amour sort du précepte;
Et le soleil n’est plus le soleil s’il excepte
Les tigres et les loups de son rayonnement.
J’ai montré dans le ciel le grand désarmement,
L’équilibre, la loi, l’azur, l’astre, l’aurore.
J’ai dit : Pitié! laissez le repentir éclore.
Juges, pensez; bourreaux, reculez; vis, Caïn.
A qui n’a plus hier ne prenez pas demain;
Laissez à tous le temps de racheter les fautes.
Soyez d’humbles songeurs, soyez des âmes hautes.
Riches, c’est en donnant qu’on s’enrichit; semez.
Pauvres, la pauvreté n’est point la haine; aimez.
Toute bonne pensée est une délivrance.
Si noir que soit le deuil, conservez l’espérance;
Car rien n’est plein, de nuit sans être plein de ciel.
La haine est un vent sombre et pestilentiel;
Aimez, aimez, aimez, aimez, — soyez des frères.
Et maintenant, ayant fait face aux téméraires,
Ayant lavé le fond du vase baptismal,
Ayant diminué sur la terre le mal,
Vieillard pensif qui n’ai d’autre force que d’être
Chez les peuples un pauvre et chez les rois un prêtre,
Compagnon des douleurs, des exils, des grabats,
Je viens près de celui qui fit voir ici-bas
Toute la quantité de Dieu qui tient dans l’homme;

Je prends Jérusalem et je vous laisse Rome,
Jérusalem étant le véritable lieu.
Hommes, je viens me mettre en prière chez Dieu.
Je ne me sens réel que sur ce mont sévère;
L’ombre est au Capitole et l’âme est au Calvaire;
Là-haut l’ange et le saint trouvent que j’ai raison,
Quittant César pour Christ, de changer de maison,
Et je monte, appuyé sur l’aigle et la colombe,
De ce bas-fond, le trône, à ce sommet, la tombe.
Je me fais serviteur du sépulcre, sentant
Près de moi le grand cœur de Jésus palpitant.
O rois, je hais la pourpre et j’aime le suaire;
Et j’habite la vie, ô rois! vous l’ossuaire.
Car la toute-puissance est un squelette noir.
L’homme tend une main au mal, l’autre à l’espoir;
Tantôt il court, tantôt il trébuche, et je mène
Et j’éclaire quiconque aide la marche humaine.
Allons en avant. L’ombre est morte; et déjà tous
Nous sentons la chaleur d’un avenir plus doux.
Nous nous sommes trouvés; longtemps nous nous cherchâmes.
J’ai marché dans la vaste obscurité des âmes;
Je vous ai dit : Je suis le jour. Pour vous je nais.
Et vous êtes venus, voyant que je venais.
O vivants, ouvriers de l’œuvre universelle,
Travaillez; que l’enclume éternelle étincelle;
Soyez purs, soyez doux, soyez frais, soyez bons.
Tous sur le grand travail sacré nous nous courbons.
Nous prêtres, nous prions. Puisse notre prière,
Sortie amour de nous, entrer en vous lumière!
Peuple, aimez. On devient lumineux en aimant.
Ce serait être injuste envers le firmament
Que de répondre aux feux d’en haut par nos ténèbres.
Que, l’azur étant pur, les âmes soient funèbres,
C’est mal; et l’Éternel a fait les vérités,
Les devoirs, les vertus, afin que leurs clartés
Illuminent le sombre intérieur des hommes;
Et pour que, dans le monde insondable où nous sommes,

Et devant l’infini plein d’invisibles yeux,
Les cœurs ne soient pas moins étoiles que les cieux.
Peuples, aimez-vous. Paix à tous.

LES HOMMES

Sois béni, père.

DIEU

Fils, sois béni.

Scène deuxième — Réveil

Le Vatican. — La chambre du pape. — Le matin.

LE PAPE, se réveillant.

Quel rêve affreux je viens de faire!

LA PITIE SUPREME

This long poem was published in February 1879, but in fact written in 1857-1858. It was part of the initial plan of the Legend of Centuries, intended to serve as the centre of the poem, but Hugo later changed his mind, removing it from the epic poem.

TABLE DES MATIERES

I.
II.
III.
IV.
V.
VI.
VII.
VIII.
IX.
X.
XI.
XII.
XIII.
XIV.
XV.

I.

Les profondeurs étaient nocturnes et funèbres;
Un bruit farouche, obscur, fait avec des ténèbres,
Roulait dans l’infini qui sait le noir secret;
Ce bruit était pareil au cri que jetterait
Quelque âme immense et sombre à travers l’étendue,
Luttant contre l’abîme et volant éperdue;
Puis cela devenait un tumulte de voix;
Toute la nuit grondait et pleurait à la fois
Comme si l’horizon fauve et crépusculaire
N’était formé que d’ombre et plein que de colère;
Clameur rauque! il semblait qu’ensemble on entendît
L’orageuse rumeur d’une mer qui bondit
Et les voix d’un forum qui parle et délibère.
— Honte, anathème, enfer, deuil! Tibère! Tibère!
Tibère! — et d’autres noms, mêlés à celui-là,
Passaient : — Procuste! Achab! Denys! Caligula!
Sanche! Alonze! Clovis! Sennachérib! Cambyse!
Louis onze! malheur! mort! opprobre! — et la bise
Était comme une foule, et de ces noms proscrits
Chaque syllabe était faite de mille cris;
Et j’entendais : — Saül! Omar! Ivan! Clotaire! —
Et de tout l’océan et de toute la terre,
Des chaumes, des palais, des masures, des vents,
Des croix, des millions de lèvres des vivants,
Des mâchoires des morts grinçant leur affreux rire,
Des fumiers où croupit ce qui ne peut s’écrire,
Ces noms sortaient ainsi que d’horribles oiseaux;
Les squelettes n’avaient qu’à remuer leurs os
Pour en faire jaillir un de ces noms sinistres;
Et des larves de rois, des ombres de ministres,
Richelieu, Louis treize, Arcadius, Rufin,
Fuyaient; on entendait des voix dire : — J’ai faim!
J’ai froid! quand donc viendra le jour? la terre est noire!

C’était le grand sanglot tragique de l’histoire;
C’était l’éternel peuple, indigné, solennel,
Terrible, maudissant le tyran éternel.

*

O malédiction, d’où viens-tu, misérable?
La bouche d’où tu sors, c’est la plaie incurable,
C’est l’égout où le sang filtre en rouges caillots,
C’est l’entaille que font les haches aux billots,
C’est le tombeau béant, c’est la fosse entr’ouverte
D’on ne sait quelle haleine agitant l’herbe verte.
O malédiction, d’où viens-tu? De la nuit.

La dernière clarté sous toi s’évanouit;
Tu viens après le Crime, et répands sur le monde
Une autre obscurité qui n’est pas moins profonde,
Et la façon dont toi, le Deuil, tu le combats
Fait tomber la pensée et l’âme encor plus bas;
Et rien ne vit, et rien n’éclôt, et rien ne crée,
Et rien ne se console en ton horreur sacrée;
Ce n’est qu’avec l’éclair que tu veux éclairer;
Tu ne veux que punir, damner, désespérer,
Spectre, et tu fais servir à ces fatals usages
Les esprits, les rayons, les poètes, les sages,
Tout ce qui vient d’en haut, tout ce qui vient de Dieu;
Ta caverne, fermée au ciel clément et bleu,
N’admet qu’un flamboiement lugubre sous son porche;
Un astre dans ta main deviendrait une torche;
Si tu pouvais, du fond de ton puits sépulcral,
Prendre à Saturne en feu son cercle sidéral,
Hélas, tù n’en ferais que l’anneau d’une chaîne;
O malédiction, tu te nommes la Haine;
Tu ne tends pas les bras, non, tu montres les poings.

Et je restai rêveur. — Es-tu juste du moins?

La malédiction a répondu :
 — Je souffre.
Je juge. Le volcan, hagard, crache le soufre,
L’âpre océan l’écume, et l’homme la douleur.
Je suis ce qui déborde et tombe du malheur.
Je suis l’affliction terrestre qui réclame,
Et s’irrite et grandit jusqu’à devenir flamme;
Je suis le râle amer de ce globe fatal;
Je suis le hurlement du sombre piédestal;
Pourquoi m’insultes-tu, moi qui pleure? L’ulcère
N’a-t-il donc plus le droit de dénoncer la serre,
La dent et la tenaille? et, quelle est ton erreur!
C’est moi le deuil; c’est moi l’effroi; c’est moi l’horreur;
L’étoile flamboyante allongée en épée,
C’est moi; je suis l’immense et funèbre épopée
Qu’écrit au mur du crime une lugubre main.
Et quant à ma justice, ô ver de terre humain,
Je m’appelle Isaïe et je m’appelle Dante. —

Quel esprit ne plierait sous cette voix grondante?
Elle est la conscience; elle a raison; pourtant
Après qu’elle a parlé le cœur n’est pas content,
Et l’on entend, au fond de l’infini qui pense,
Comme un profond soupir d’une autre conscience;
Et le songeur frissonne et reste soucieux
Entre ce cri terrestre et ce soupir des cieux.
Oh! ces Dantes géants, ces vastes Isaïes!
Ils frappent les fronts vils et les têtes haïes;
Ils ont pour loi punir, trancher, supplicier;
Ils sont la probité sinistre de l’acier;
Nul homme n’est plus grand sous le ciel solitaire
Que ces archanges froids et tristes de la terre;
Ils sont les punisseurs; quand, jadis tout-puissant,
Songeant qu’il reste encor dans ses ongles du sang,
Un coupable franchit, tremblant, presque en prière,
La porte de la tombe, il les trouve derrière;
De tous les jours du crime ils ont le lendemain;

Une balance énorme oscille dans leur main;
La nuit a pour sommet leur formidable gloire;
Ils sont les juges d’ombre, ils sont l’équité noire;
Mais, gouffres! laissez-moi, quel que soit le chemin,
M’évader d’un coup d’aile étrange et surhumain,
Et m’enfuir, et chercher la justice étoilée!

II.

Regardez cet enfant de cinq ans; la feuillée
N’a pas d’oiseau plus pur, plus frais, plus ébloui;
La bénédiction semble sortir de lui;
Tout en lui dit : — Vivez! aimez-moi! je vous aime. —
Il est fait de candeur et de grâce suprême;
Quoiqu’il ignore tout, il a l’air d’un flambeau;
Trait d’union de l’aube à l’ombre, il est si beau
Et si doux qu’on dirait que l’église et la fable
Ont dû, pour composer cette tête ineffable,
Mêler l’enfant Jésus et l’enfant Cupidon;
Son regard ingénu fait l’effet d’un pardon;
Et l’homme le plus dur lui-même est sans défense
Devant cette adorable et radieuse enfance;
Il est colombe, il est agneau; ses cheveux d’or
Rayonnent; il caresse et chante; il est encor
Tout plein de la bonté divine; il en arrive;
C’est le nouveau venu de la céleste rive;
On dirait un petit archange éblouissant;
Il monte sur un trône; oh non! il y descend;
Pourtant on sent en lui la pauvre âme asservie,
La faiblesse profonde et sombre de la vie;
Si beau qu’il soit, c’est l’homme avec son frêle esprit;
C’est de l’infirmité charmante qui sourit;
Notre fragilité redoutable et frivole
Se mêle, ombre terrestre, à sa blanche auréole;
Son pas tremble, et son front ploie ainsi qu’un roseau;
Mais il n’en est pas moins l’innocent du berceau,
Et dans ses beaux yeux clairs où l’amour semble éclore
Il a du paradis toute l’immense aurore.

À présent regardez cet homme, Villeroy ;

Il vient, l’ange le voit approcher sans effroi,

Et cet homme, du haut du balcon de Versaille,
Lui montre au loin la foule énorme qui tressaille
Et s’agite et se meut, bonne et calme d’ailleurs,
Le grand fourmillement des hommes travailleurs,
Les pas, les fronts, les yeux, l’ouvrier aux bras rudes,
Les ondulations des vastes multitudes,
La ville aux mille bruits vivants, graves et doux,
Et dit à cet enfant : Tout ce peuple est à vous!

Vous avez ces enfants, ces hommes et ces femmes;
Vous possédez les corps, vous possédez, les âmes;
A vous leur toit, à vous leur or, à vous leur sang;
Le champ et la maison sont à vous; ce passant
Vous appartient; soufflez si vous voulez qu’il meure;
Toute vie est à vous, en tous lieux, à toute heure;
Ce vieillard au front chauve est une chose à vous;
Tous les hommes sont faits pour plier les genoux,
Vous seul êtes créé pour vivre tête haute;
Tous se trompent, vous seul ne faites pas de faute;
Dieu ne compte que vous, vous seul, au milieu d’eux;
Votre droit est le droit de Dieu même; et tous deux
Vous régnez, devant vous le monde doit se taire;
Dieu n’a pas le ciel plus que vous n’avez la terre;
Il est votre pensée et vous êtes son bras;
Il est roi de là-haut et vous Dieu d’ici-bas.
Tout ce peuple est à vous.
          Le pauvre enfant écoute.
Qui donc vient de parler? C’est le démon sans doute;
Non, c’est l’homme; fatal parce qu’il est rampant;
Le courtisan est fait du ventre du serpent.
Affreux souffle embaumé de la bouche pourrie!
Crime! ô le plus hideux des meurtres, flatterie!
O de tous les poisons le plus lâche, le miel!
Crever les yeux d’une âme à peine hors du ciel!
Submerger dans l’orgueil une raison qui flotte!
Dessécher un enfant, hélas! faire un despote!
Faire un prodigieux égoïste! un tyran

Arrêtant le progrès sur le divin cadran!
Faire un être effréné qui dira : — Je suis l’arche!
Je suis l’autel! — pour qui le genre humain en marche,
Le bien, le mal, les yeux en pleurs, l’homme vivant,
Ne seront que de l’ombre et du bruit et du vent!
Déchaîner un sinistre avenir dans le Louvre!
Abuser du moment où toute lèvre s’ouvre
Pour lui verser ce philtre exécrable et nouveau!
Dénaturer un cœur! forcener un cerveau!
Enivrer l’ignorance, enivrer l’innocence
Du formidable vin de la toute-puissance!
Mettre, avec un sourire abject et triomphant,
Tout un peuple, hochet, dans la main d’un enfant,
Et les laisser rouler l’un et l’autre aux abîmes!
Penseur! qui que tu sois, ce sont là deux victimes.
Plains ce peuple, mais plains l’enfant qu’on abrutit.
Mères! ayez pitié de ce pauvre petit!
Pendant qu’un assassin sur son âme se dresse,
Tuant en lui l’amour, la vertu, la tendresse,
Prenant ses bons instincts, traître, et les étouffant,
Il est là, doux et seul, et rien ne le défend.
Oh! l’éducation! quel bienfait, ou quel crime!
Frêle tête d’enfant qu’un idiot déprime!
Sombre adulation qui mêle et qui pétrit
L’infini, l’absolu, dans un chétif esprit!
Qui fait que désormais, la prenant à la lettre,
Un homme faible et né d’une femme va mettre
Son triste crâne étroit, fait pour durer si peu,
En équilibre avec le front même de Dieu,
Avec le profond ciel plein d’ombre et plein de joie,
Avec ce grand cerveau de l’abîme où flamboie
Le lever effrayant des constellations!

*

Et Louis quinze est fait.

*

O transformations!
Oui, c’est fini; l’enfant a bu la coupe sombre;
Sa débile raison s’évanouit et sombre;
— Tout ce peuple est à vous! — mot d’où Tibère sort!
Breuvage qui rendrait insensé le plus fort!
Noir nectar! cette mort de son âme, il y goûte;
Quelque chose de lui s’éteint sous chaque goutte;
Et le voilà qui va chanceler à jamais!
Il sera le passant ivre des hauts sommets.
— Tout ce peuple est à vous! — mot terrible! à mesure
Qu’il y songe, il en sent plus avant la morsure;
Une stupide joie avec un vaste ennui;
Quelqu’un qui n’est pas lui se développe en lui;
L’ignorance en son cœur filtre, marais immonde;
Que sert de lire un livre étant maître du monde?
Apprendre, étudier, travailler, à quoi bon
Puisqu’on est roi de France, impeccable, Bourbon?
Oh! songer que ce trône et ce sceptre et ce glaive
Aboutissent au vide, à la furie, au rêve,
Que cette clarté perd celui qu’elle conduit,
Et que cette splendeur énorme est de la nuit!

Donc la terre est à lui, les hommes et les femmes!
Toutes les passions l’allument de leurs flammes;
Sa volonté devient plus fauve à tout moment;
Il grandit; et l’on sent poindre lugubrement
L’ongle du tigre au bout des ailes de l’archange;
Il ne sait même pas qu’il déchoit et qu’il change;
Il s’ignore imbécile, il s’ignore méchant,
Tant dans la voie obscure, hélas, il va penchant!
Il vivra maintenant hors du vrai, dans un songe,
Ayant en lui, dans l’ombre où son rêve le plonge,
La chimère de plus, l’humanité de moins;
Plein d’opprobres devant tous les peuples témoins,
II, est cynique, il est infâme, il est horrible;

Il foule de l’azur la frontière impossible;
Il se suppose au ciel et l’enfer en lui croît;
Il dit : Tout m’est permis, et seul j’existe. Il croit
Avoir sous ses talons de la poussière d’astres;
S’il en tire un plaisir, qu’importe cent désastres!
Chaque jour il descend la honte d’un degré;
Il délire; il peut bien tourmenter à son gré
Le peuple, puisque Dieu tourmente la nuée;
Il prend la vierge et fait une prostituée;
Quoi! n’est-il pas le roi, le maître, le seigneur?
L’homme lui doit son sang, la femme son honneur;
Quoi qu’il fasse, il contient le droit et le mystère;
S’il lui plaît de manger de la fange, la terre,
Qui l’adorerait loup, l’adorera pourceau;
Chaque vice à son tour met sur son front le sceau;
Il fait de la puissance un effort inutile;
Il a sous lui son siècle en travail qu’il mutile;
Il tient le sceptre ainsi qu’un aveugle un bâton;
De toutes les grandeurs redoutable avorton,
Être sans nom, qui, frêle et misérable en somme,
Fait de cendre et promis aux vers, n’est plus un homme,
Ayant un idéal immonde pour milieu,
Échoué dans le monstre à mi-chemin du dieu.

III.

Maintenant, que chacun sonde son propre abîme.
Voyons, quiconque vit, faible, fort, grand, infime,
Riche, pauvre, l’heureux, celui qui va pieds nus,
Les passants de la rue et les premiers venus,
Celui qui perd sa vie et celui qui la gagne,
Nous tous, supposons-nous portés sur la montagne,
Supposons-nous l’enfant, l’ignorant, l’innocent,
Avec le genre humain sous nos regards gisant,
Et la terre à nos pieds, vertigineuse et grande,
Qu’on nous donne! — A présent, qu’une voix nous demande
A nous qui sommes là, béants, sans point d’appui :
— Est-il un seul de vous qui réponde de lui?
Est-il un seul de vous qui dise : Je suis l’être
Que n’éblouira point cette vaste fenêtre
Du pouvoir radieux, gigantesque et charmant;
L’âme supérieure à l’empoisonnement;
Je suis l’enfant plus sage et plus fort que l’ivresse,
Et je ne croirai point la voix qui me caresse;
La terre apparaîtra comme un banquet joyeux,
Le monde s’offrira, je fermerai les yeux;
On me tendra l’orgueil, la volupté, la gloire,
Et je refuserai, moi l’ignorant, d’y boire;
Moi qui ne saurai rien, je devinerai tout!
Est-il un seul de vous qui verra tout à coup,
Grâce aux hommes de ruse et de scélératesse,
S’ouvrir, sous sa faiblesse et sous sa petitesse,
Ce gouffre de splendeur, sans en devenir fou?
Devant le monde entier fléchissant le genou
Et la toute-puissance étoilée et terrible,
Est-il un seul de vous qui s’affirme infaillible? —
Qui donc, hors Jésus-Christ, osera dire : Moi!

Reculez, reculez devant ce gouffre : roi!

Devant ce noir sommet des vertiges : le trône!

O vivants, soyez bons, priez, faites l'aumône.
A qui l'aumône? A tous. Souvenez-vous qu'ici
La compassion sainte est une aumône aussi,
Et que la charité qui nourrit et désarme,
Tombe des mains obole et tombe du cœur larme!

IV.

Tyrannie! escalier qui dans le mal descend!
Obscur, vertigineux, fatal, croulant, glissant!
Toutes les marches vont décroissant de lumière;
Et malheur à qui met le pied sur la première!
C’est la spirale infâme et traître aboutissant
A l’ombre, et vous teignant les semelles de sang.
La conscience aveugle y mène l’âme sourde.
A chaque pas qu’on fait, la chair devient plus lourde;
L’animal sur l’esprit pèse de plus en plus,
Et l’on se sent du souffle universel exclus;
Aujourd’hui c’est la faute et demain c’est le crime;
On tuera demain ceux qu’aujourd’hui l’on opprime.

Et l’on descend ainsi que dans un rêve; et l’air
Est plein de visions; et, dans un blême éclair,
Tous les masques qui sont l’épouvante du monde,
Le lâche, le félon, le féroce, l’immonde,
Des profils effarés et des visages fous Flottent...
— C’est toi, Caïn? Noirs Césars, est-ce vous?
L’odeur des encensoirs aux odeurs d’ossuaires
Se mêle, et, dans les plis des longs draps mortuaires,
Tous les spectres sont là, sous l’affreux firmament,
Montant et descendant ces degrés lentement;
Chaque âme de tyran, misérable, est leur antre;
Agrippine au flanc nu criant : Frappe le ventre!
Ninus, Sémiramis, Achab et Jézabel,
Molay jetant sa cendre à Philippe le Bel,
Agnès la réprouvée et l’excommuniée,
Berthe par la tenaille ardente maniée,
Stuart sans tête, Albrecht sans langue, et Médicis,
Avec la Messaline et l’Alexandre Six,
Rôdent lugubrement le long de cette rampe;

Lady Macbeth y cache avec ses doigts sa lampe;
Maude y tâte le corps de son père encor chaud;
Un effrayant cheval y traîne Brunehaut
Et lui fait rebondir la tête à chaque marche;
Et Cyrus, Josué, le sanglant patriarche,
Alaric, massacrant les peuples à genoux,
Passent en vous disant : Règne, et fais comme nous.
Chaque forfait vous parle et dit : Suis mon exemple.
On est dans un sépulcre, on se croit dans un temple.
Chaque marche, ô terreur! vivante sous vos pas,
Vous pousse affreusement vers la marche d'en bas :
— Descends, Charles! descends, Frédéric! descends, Pierre!
Deviens de plomb, deviens d'acier, deviens de pierre!
Le sang des bons après le sang des innocents!
Règne! plus bas! plus bas! descends! descends! descends! —

Se retenir? comment? Remonter? impossible!
Et l'on descend; le jour, de moins en moins visible,
S'éteint sur les degrés hideux; et pas d'amis,
Pas de remords, ou bien des remords endormis,
Pas d'astre, aucun appui, nul guide, les cieux vides,
Le gouffre; et l'on entend ronfler les Euménides.

V.

Hélas! je me suis pris la tête dans les mains;
J’ai contemplé la brume, éclairé les chemins,
J’ai songé; j’ai suivi de l’œil de la pensée
La grande caravane humaine dispersée
    Tantôt dans les bas-fonds, tantôt sur les sommets,
    Avec ses chameliers, avec ses Mahomets,
    Marchant sans but, sans ciel, sans soleil, sans patrie,
    Blême troupeau montrant son épaule meurtrie,
    Son dos sombre où l’on peut compter les nœuds du fouet;
    Tandis qu’au loin le vent ténébreux secouait
    Les barques sur la mer et sur les monts l’yeuse;
    Tandis que, du cadran parque mystérieuse,
    L’heure, coupant, dans l’air, sur la terre et les eaux,
    Toutes sortes de fils avec ces noirs ciseaux,
    Ouvrait et refermait l’angle des deux aiguilles;
    Tandis qu’ainsi qu’un homme est derrière des grilles,
    Le jour pâle attendait l’instant de remonter,
    Lugubre, j’ai passé des nuits à méditer,
    A regarder dans l’ombre informe ce qui rampe,
    Oubliant de moucher la mèche de ma lampe;
    Et, penché sur les fils orageux de Japhet,
    Grave et n’ayant qu’un but, la justice, j’ai fait
    Devant ma conscience austère comparaître
    L’homme qui fut le roi, l’homme qui fut le prêtre;
    J’ai passé la revue étrange des tyrans;
    Ces flamboyants voleurs appelés conquérants
    Ont répondu, pensifs, à l’interrogatoire.
    Les princes, les héros, les chefs, toute l’histoire,
    Ce Cambyse, le monstre idéal, qui mettait
    Un bâillon même au lâche immonde qui se tait,
    Les imans, les sultans, ces convulsionnaires
    Qui dans leur poing crispé tourmentent les tonnerres,
    Déchaînant au hasard là guerre et le chaos,

Noirs, ayant dans les yeux la stupeur des fléaux,
Este, Autriche, Valois, Plantagenet, Farnèse,
Et ces têtes de mort au regard de fournaise
Qui portent la couronne et qu'on nomme césars,
M'ont parlé; j'ai sondé les pâles Balthazars,
Les Amurats ayant les supplices pour fêtes,
Vlad qui faisait clouer les turbans sûr les têtes,
Les Alexandres fous s'égalant à l'Athos,
Les majestés de pourpre aux immenses manteaux,
Roderic, Ethelred, Timôur, Isaac l'Ange,
Ortogrul dans le meurtre et Claude dans la fange,
Christiern, Jean le Mauvais, Jean le Bon, Richard trois;
J'ai regardé de près cette foule de rois
Comme on verrait un choix d'instruments de torture;
Chaque monarque, avec sa tragique aventure,
Je l'ai considéré dans le creux de ma main;
Calme, j'ai fait de l'homme et du temps l'examen;
J'ai de chaque momie et de chaque squelette
Mesuré la hauteur, défait la bandelette;
Mon scalpel a mêlé dans sa dissection
Byzance avec Ducas, avec Joram Sion;
J'ai confessé les lois, lâches entremetteuses;
J'ai scruté les jours faux, les justices boiteuses,
L'impur flambeau des mœurs sur qui le vent soufflait,
Sur le front des tyrans j'en ai vu le reflet;
Je les ai confrontés et pris l'un après l'autre,
J'ai vu, j'ai comparé leur nature à la nôtre;
J'ai pesé les forfaits, j'ai dédoré les noms,
Et, frémissant, j'arrive à ceci-; Pardonnons!

*

Le philosophe amer, que lé fait implacable
Obsède, et que l'histoire inexorable accable,
Triste d'avoir toujours devant son œil pensif
Les mêmes flots brisés sur le même récif,
Indigné, devenu dur et farouche à force

De voir avec le droit la loi faire divorce,
Et triompher l'épée et la hache, et le mal
Retomber sur le front sacré de l'idéal,
Perd patience et dit :
« — La couronne est un crime;
« Toute la royauté n'est qu'un lugubre abîme;
« Le seul pouvoir d'un roi qui vient après un roi
« C'est de faire changer d'attitude à l'effroi;
« L'histoire est l'affreux puits du forfait solidaire;
« Au bois de l'échafaud le bois du trône adhère;
« Tout sceptre épouse un glaive, et la pourpre descend
« Sur les peuples en mare effroyable de sang.
« Le droit divin, miasme horrible! et l'on respire,
« En régnant, la fureur et l'ombre avec l'empire;
« C'est par un escalier de cadavres qu'on va
« A ces pavois sanglants que la force éleva;
« Leurs vrais degrés, ce sont les marches gémonies.
« Pour cinq ou six héros, pour deux ou trois génies,
« Que d'étranges bourreaux, que de fous, que de nains!
« Et combien de Nérons pour quelques Antonins!
« Un roi de tous les rois, quoi qu'il fasse, est la somme.
« L'antique despotisme est le tourment de l'homme;
« Depuis quatre mille ans, sous le grand ciel serein,
« L'humanité rugit dans ce taureau d'airain;
« Et l'imprécation ne choisit pas; et l'ombre
« Ne sent pas un rayon dans les douleurs sans nombre.
« Depuis quatre mille ans ce globe, aveugle enfer,
« Pleure et grince des dents sous les trônes de fer;
« Les rois sont des Plutons dont la terre est l'Érèbe.
« Sur ces durs chevalets, guerre, famine, glèbe,
« Le genre humain râlait dans le bagne fatal,
« Scié par deux bourreaux, l'ignorance et le mal;
« La mort, entre ses doigts qu'une flamme environne,
« Tournant l'horrible scie, en a fait la couronne.
« Est-il un roi sans deuil, sans trouble et sans remords?
« Hélas! en est-il un qui, s'il va chez les morts,
« Ne s'entende nommer tout bas dans l'ossuaire?

« Tout monarque est un pli de l’immense suaire.
« Les meilleurs font pleurer, saigner, souffrir, crier;
« Trajan est prescripteur, Titus est meurtrier;
« Ces despotes sont hors de la loi naturelle.
« Et qu’est-ce que pourrait bégayer Marc-Aurèle
« Entre Octave, l’ancêtre, et Commode, le fils?
« Tarquin tient Rome, Thèbe est sous Aménophis,
« Jean règne sur la neige et Rustem sur les sables,
« Tous se mêlent dans l’ombre, et tous sont responsables;
« On voit tous les mauvais sous les bons transparents.
« Nuit triste! le lion et le loup sont parents;
« On a le monde; on mange, on rit, on se tutoie
« Entre vautours, d’un bout à l’autre de la proie;
« Mahomet, appelant Hildebrand par son nom,
« Lui frappe sur l’épaule et lui dit : compagnon!
« Ah! du fauve océan toute goutte est amère.
« Le Kremlin voit, pendant qu’il tette encor sa mère
« Poindre un rictus d’hyène au petit Pierre enfant;
« Charles-Quint, qui dompta l’Europe en l’étouffant,
« Boa sombre, a pour fils le livide crotale;
« La vieillesse est funèbre et l’enfance est fatale;
« O mystère effrayant des rois infortunés!
« Démons quand ils sont morts, monstres dès qu’ils sont nés,
« Le genre humain les compte en comptant ses supplices,
« Et de tous leurs cercueils leurs berceaux sont complices.
« Quand le peuple au gibet s’agite agonisant,
« Pas un fil de la corde, hélas, n’est innocent;
« Quand le monde est aux fers dans l’affreuse géhenne,
« Tout chaînon a sa part du crime de la chaîne.
« Est-il de bons rois? Non, dit Épictète; non,
« Dit Platon; non, dit Jean à Pathmos; et Zénon
« Dit : Il est de bons rois comme de bonnes haches.
« Les abeilles, les lys, les soleils, sont des taches.
« Henri quatre, l’histoire un jour dira de toi :
« Il n’était pas méchant, non, mais il était roi.
« Ah! quand l’autodafé lamentable s’allume,
« Quand le noir patient prend feu, se tord et fume,

« Une flamme peut-elle, alors que le brasier
« Mord la victime et cherche à s’en rassasier,
« Quand le mourant frémit dans l’angoisse dernière,
« S’isolant du bûcher, crier : Je suis lumière!
« Non, pas un roi n’est bon, non, pas un roi n’est doux,
« Et tous sont dans chacun et chacun est dans tous.
« Peuple! au moins jette-leur la haine expiatoire!
« Tous ont au front la main sanglante de l’histoire.
« Anathème sur tous! »

Et c’est précisément
Cette fatalité qui fait mon tremblement.

Oh! je me sens parfois des pitiés insondables.
Je gémis sur les grands et sur les formidables,
Sur les démons grondants et sur les dieux tonnants;
Devant l’accablement des sombres continents,
Devant l’horreur, devant l’antre de nos annales
Difforme et pénétré de lueurs infernales,
C’est à vous que je songe et que je compatis,
Tristesse des tyrans sous la pourpre engloutis,
Souci mystérieux des.rois, mélancolie
Du tigre méditant sur sa morne folie.
Pesant la conscience, observant l’horizon,
Je me prends à douter que le juge ait raison
Et que l’historien tienne le vrai coupable.
Et du passé perdu dans la brume impalpable,
Du présent où moi-même autrefois j’étouffais,
De ce gibet, le droit, de ce charnier, les faits,
De cette vision : Louvre, Cirque, Hippodrome,
Empereurs dégradés de l’empire par Rome,
Pierre et César rompant leur monstrueux hymen,
Papes noirs étendant dans les ombres la main,
Rois excommuniés à chandelles éteintes,
Attentats, échafauds, viol des choses saintes,
Peuples trahis, vendus, livrés, prostitués,
Les Narcisses heureux, les Thraséas tués,

Le despote faisant toujours le personnage
Du crime, du poison, du poignard, du carnage,
De tout ce désespoir fauve et démesuré,
Hélas! j’entends sortir ce cri : miserere!

Oui, pardonnons. Dieu sait avec quel soin sévère,
Touchant ces fronts d’airain et ces crânes de verre,
Triste, j’examinais ce tas de tout-puissants;
J’étais là, respirant l’odeur du vieil encens,
Regardant sous le dieu, retournant la médaille;
Je dérangeais le ver qui dans les rois travaille,
Et mon esprit, perdu dans l’horreur, s’enivrait
Du noir musée avec Bossuet pour livret.

Eh bien, grâce!

VI.

Voyons, vous tous, que quelqu’un vienne
Avec moi, jusqu’à l’ombre antédiluvienne,
Jusqu’au loup primitif Nemrod; puis remontons
A nos siècles chrétiens et lettrés, à tâtons;
Évoquons tous les rois, citons à notre barre
Guy le Baveux, Mainfroy le Noir, Jean le Barbare, Mathias le Sanguinaire et Pierre le Cruel}
Suivons dans les tombeaux quelque âpre Ezéchiel
Qui pour nous ressuscite Aureng-Zeb, et ranime
L’atroce Rhinomète et l’impur Copronyme;
Allons des Grecs aux Turcs, des émirs aux sophis,
Du schah tuant son père au czar tuant son fils;
Faisons lever, hagards, tous ces hommes de l’ombre,
Macbeth, prince d’Angus, Oswy, roi de Northumbre,
Le Valentinien dormant avec ses ours,
Boris dans son Kremlin, Achmet dans les Sept Tours,
Les Pharaons couchés dans les hiéroglyphes,
Les satrapes, les deys, les lamas, les califes,
Les dresseurs de gibets, les traîneurs de canons;
Faisons l’appel des scheiks et des soudans; prenons
Tous les règnes en bloc, en masse tout l’empire;
Interrogeons Eschyle et réveillons Shakspeare;
Aux poètes sacrés faisons des questions;
Que nous répondraient-ils si nous les attestions?
— Ces hommes n’étaient pas pires que d’autres hommes.

Ce qui fait les Césars, c’est l’air fatal des Romes;
Tant qu’Isis voilera la raison, les Memphis
Et les Thèbes auront les Pharaons pour fils;
C’est l’atmosphère étrange et terrible du trône
Qui fait Tudor à Londre et Phul à Babylone.
Nul n’est d’avance Achab, Domitien, Abbas;
Non, non, il ne naît point de démon ici-bas;

Personne n’est créé moitié chair, moitié marbre;
L’humanité n’a point de fruit noir à son arbre;
Non, celui qui fait tout et qui répond de tout
N’a pas mis un dragon, une hydre, un tigre, un loup
Dans cet enfant qui tient sa mère par la robe;
Tout homme naît bon, pur, généreux, juste, probe,
Tendre, et toute âme éclôt étoile aux mains de Dieu.

Si ce cœur est glacé, c’est qu’on éteint son feu;
Si cette aile est cassée et si cet esprit boite,
C’est qu’on l’a comprimé dans une cage étroite;
Si cet homme est affreux, c’est qu’on nous l’a jeté
Dans un moule de crime et de difformité.

L’ignorance, d’où vient le deuil, d’où sort le vice,
A sept mamelles d’ombre, et chacune est nourrice
D’une des sept laideurs du mal, monstre sans yeux;
Tout despote a sucé ce lait mystérieux;
Dès qu’il naît, on lui prend sa pensée, on l’efface;
C’est un petit enfant, que voulez-vous qu’il fasse
Contre ce précepteur effroyable, le mal?
Au delà de la vie et du destin normal
On lui fait un berceau terrible, où les chimères
Vont le bercer pendant qu’il dort, hideuses mères;
Son œil, cherchant le jour, s’ouvre pour ne pas voir;
On l’emmaillotte avec ce linceul, le pouvoir;
Les intérêts abjects, groupés autour du maître,
Lui retirent l’idée et l’air, l’empêchent d’être,
Et, lui cachant le saint, le pur, le grand, le beau,
L’enferment dans lui-même ainsi qu’en un tombeau.
Le premier idiot venu saisit et mène
Ce pauvre enfant roi hors de la raison humaine,
Et d’infimes laquais, en louant les défauts,
Dans cet œil qui fut vrai mettent un regard faux.

S’il suffit d’un duc d’Albe ou d’un Wolsey pour faire
A toutes les horreurs qu’un lâche cœur préfère

Tomber les Henri huit et les Philippe deux,
Qu’est-ce donc quand ils ont, hélas, à côté d’eux,
Au lieu du triste eunuque ou du valet inepte,
Un vaste esprit, faisant de leur faute un précepte,
Flattant leur instinct fauve ou leur impur souhait,
Alexandre Aristote et Louis Bossuet?

*

L’ignorance et la nuit sont les deux sœurs lugubres.
L’une a les cœurs malsains, les esprits insalubres,
Les cerveaux bas; et l’autre a la stagnation
Des ténèbres pesant sur la création.
L’ignorance a les Tyrs, les Babels, les Sodomes,
La guerre et les combats, sombres tempêtes d’hommes,
D’où sortent les Césars, les Habsbourgs, les Capets;
La nuit a le chaos des nuages épais,
Ces tourmentes sous qui l’étoile se dérobe,
Qui grondent, remuant tous les gouffres du globe
De la mer Caspienne au noir lac Michigan;
Et l’une a le despote, et l’autre a l’ouragan.
Elles n’ont pas de cœur, pas de regard, pas d’ailes;
Elles font de la mort; dès qu’avec l’une d’elles,
En présence du sort et du doute, il est seul,
L’homme tremble; elles sont toutes deux le linceul;
Et, soufflant les flambeaux, le guet-apens infâme
Que l’une fait au ciel, l’autre le fait à l’âme.

VII.

J’ai vu l’Inde; je plains le morne tchandâla;
Un homme fraternel jamais ne lui parla;
Sa soif ternit le fleuve; et devant son martyre
La cabane se ferme et la main se retire;
Il est le réprouvé de l’eau, du pain, du seuil;
On dirait que le feu, l’air et la terre en deuil
Le chassent, que le champ le hait, que la matière
Le repousse et se tient hors de lui tout entière;
Il est celui que nul n’abrite et ne reçoit.
Mais du moins, tel qu’il est, hélas, et, quel qu’il soit,
Il voit le jour de tous et son âme lui reste;
Et, quoiqu’on ait jeté sur sa tête funeste
La lèpre et son dégoût, la peste et son charbon,
Non, il n’est pas maudit, puisqu’il peut être bon.

Et maintenant voyez celui-ci. La justice
Resplendit; non pour lui. Que l’erreur l’abrutisse!
Il est roi. Le progrès, lumineux et vivant,
Pour tout le genre humain éclôt, soleil levant;
Lui, ne le verra pas. Chacun peut dans sa course
Boire à la vérité, la grande et chaste source;
Lui seul, sombre altéré, n’en approchera point.
Le mot qu’on dit, le pas qu’on fait, le jour qui point,
N’existent pas pour lui; son oreille est de pierre;
Pas un rayon réel n’avertit sa paupière;
Il semble que le sort n’ait pas d’autre intérêt
Que de le perdre ainsi qu’une horrible forêt;
On lui crée, en dehors de tous les autres hommes,
L’impossibilité d’être ce que nous sommes;
Sans guide en son désert, et n’ayant à choisir
Que du crime en cette ombre où rampe son désir,
Ame aux vils appétits du ventre coutumière,
Hors de toute science et de toute lumière,

Banni de la raison et de la vérité,
Dans la prodigieuse et folle obscurité
Qu’il rend en y passant plus lamentable encore,
Il erre, paria sinistre de l’aurore.

Et de ces deux damnés, dis, lequel plaindras-tu?
L’un est hors du bonheur, l’autre, de la vertu.
Quel est le plus fatal et le plus solitaire,
Dis, l’homme qui n’a pas sa part de pain sur terre,
Ou l’homme qui n’a pas sa part de vérité?

Ah! pleurons sur le roi, ce grand déshérité!

VIII.

Les maudits ont besoin de têtes inclinées
Sur eux, sur leur mystère et sur leurs destinées;
Un regard sans courroux leur semble une faveur;
Et qui se penchera si ce n’est le rêveur?
Qui leur prodiguera la bonté vénérable?
Qui donc ramassera le morceau misérable
Du czar doré jadis, du roi fleurdelysé?
Qui donc aura souci du vieux césar brisé?
Dans ce monde où l’histoire affreuse n’illumine
Que des fourmillements de tombe et de vermine,
Qui donc consolera? qui donc, si ce n’est lui,
Sera l’auguste Job des opprobres d’autrui?
Attendri sur l’effet par l’énigme des causes,
Ayant devant l’esprit l’obscurité des choses,
Il se couchera, grave, indulgent, attristé,
Sur ce vaste fumier qu’on nomme humanité,
Et, des abjections compagnon volontaire,
Voyant la tyrannie et le tyran à terre,
Pour racler cet ulcère il prendra ce tesson.
Oh! plaindre, c’est déjà comprendre. L’horizon
Montre à l’œil moins sévère une aube moins confuse;
La grande vérité sort de la grande excuse.
Retirez l’anathème, une lueur paraît.
Veilleur fiévreux, chercheur du suprême secret,
En vigie au plus haut de la noire mâture,
Le penseur, attentif à toute la nature,
Comparant l’élément et le destin, confond
Dans le même regard surhumain et profond
Les souffles, les hasards, le colosse, la mouche,
Le monstre qui s’éveille et l’astre qui se couche,
Le trajet d’un brouillard aux cieux, et le chemin
Qu’un nuage d’erreurs fait dans l’esprit humain;
Et les linéaments de l’Inconnu surgissent;

Et les princes hagards que les meurtres rougissent,
Avec les Genséric la nuit coïncidant,
Et le glaive et le sceptre, et la griffe et la dent,
Et le tigre et le maître, et l'horreur babélique,
Dans ces compassions immenses, tout s'explique.
Sitôt qu'on a cessé de maudire, le sort
Semble un chaos calmé d'où l'ordre auguste sort;
Les mystères, devant le songeur sans colère,
Sont le gouffre, mais sont le gouffre qui s'éclaire;
Ils n'ont plus de démence, et blanchissent, pareils
A des cieux noirs où vont se lever des soleils;
Et voilà tout à coup que dans l'ombre sacrée,
Calmes, pleines de Dieu, des lois font leur entrée.
On ne Ut pas le livre, on en épèle un mot;
Et l'on frissonne, tant on sent le bras d'en haut,
Tant l'homme est faible, et tant l'énormité divine
Paraît dans ce qu'on voit et dans ce qu'on devine!

On reconnaît qu'ils sont bien peu de chose, hélas!
Tous ces tristes Nérons conduits par les Pallas,
Pour qui Dieu n'est qu'un spectre et les hommes dès nombres.
Cette espèce de mont formé de règnes sombres,
Cet édifice affreux que chaque âge construit
Avec des attentats, de la gloire et du bruit,
Et qui, sanglant, rayé de suintements fétides,
Fait bloc avec les rois, mornes cariatides,
Ce chaos de faits lourds, tristes, hideux, navrants,
Qui charge la mémoire informe des tyrans,
Toutes ces actions sauvages et terribles
Qui donnent dans l'histoire aux Tibères horribles
Des aspects monstrueux de démons écrasés,
Ce tas des vieux forfaits, bronzes vertdegrisés,
Cet amas du granit le plus dur des abîmes,
Ce grand rocher du mal, alluvion des crimes,
Colossal piédestal de Némésis debout,
Large, énorme, une larme, ô Dieu bon, le dissout!

Car les pleurs sont sacrés; ils sortent, pur dictame,
Les pleurs humains, du cœur, les pleurs divins, de l’âme;
Dès que, s’examinant soi-même, on se résout
A chercher le côté pardonnable de tout,
Dès qu’on a rejeté l’amertume chagrine,
Le réel se dévoile, on sent dans sa poitrine
Un cœur nouveau qui s’ouvre et qui s’épanouit.

Un ange vit un jour les hommes dans la nuit;
Il leur cria du haut de la sereine sphère :
Attendez; je vous vais chercher de la lumière.
Il revint apportant dans sa main la pitié.

IX.

Tout se montre à demi. Voyons l’autre moitié.
C’est toujours une chose incertaine, incomplète,
Trouble, que nous faisons asseoir sur la sellette.
Quoi! faire le procès à cet homme? Essayons.

C’est bien. C’est le tyran.

Sous son front sans rayons
L’égoïsme a produit la morne insouciance;
Les deux flambeaux humains, science et conscience,
N’ont jamais un moment flamboyé dans sa main.
Sa conscience est là, morte, sur le chemin,
Les rhéteurs ont soufflé cette flamme éphémère;
On n’est pas sûr qu’il ait ouvert une grammaire.
Il frappe; il ne sait rien; comment l’avertit-on?
En vénérant le sceptre, en baisant le bâton.
Jamais d’objection, quoi qu’il fasse ou qu’il veuille.
Il parle; un peuple entier tremble comme la feuille;
Il a crié : Je règne! et tous ont dit : Régnez!
Il a marché sur tous, tous se sont prosternés;
Conseillé par un prêtre à l’oreille, il s’écrie :
— Je suis dieu. Comme un dieu qu’on m’adore et me prie! —
Les magistrats ont dit : Peuple! c’est le devoir.
Un jour, fou furieux, il a souhaité voir
Des gavials manger des hommes; les édiles
Ont fait faire un palais de marbre aux crocodiles.
Qu’est-ce que l’univers? un immense valet.
Le bien, le juste, ô roi, c’est tout ce qui vous plaît.
S’il veut verser du sang, le sang est une gloire,
Le sang est une pourpre; et s’il désire en boire,
On rendra grâce aux Dieux de la soif de Néron.
La guerre l’étourdit de son vaste clairon.
Caïphe, ayant au cœur Satan, Dieu sur la langue,

Le déclare clément et bon, et le harangue;
Tous les bruits qu'il entend font de la surdité;
La terre entière semble en sa stupidité
Comploter lâchement l'égarement d'un homme;
Sous le roi bête fauve on est bête de somme;
Le monde tend l'échine au bât, la tête aux coups;
Les Romes, les Paris, les Londres, les Moscous,
Bacon et sa raison, Virgile avec sa lyre,
Vont se rapetissant sous ce nain en délire;
On lui fait un instinct d'hyène; on le bâtit
Étroit comme pensée et grand comme appétit;
Qu'il s'élève une voix pour accuser cet homme,
Vingt tribunaux abjects frémiront, ce qu'on nomme
Justice châtiera l'auguste vérité;
L'ombre fera jeter au cachot la clarté;
Tous les bandeaux qu'un front peut porter, il les porte;
Les courtisans sont là qui veillent à sa porte,
Et les tâtent pour voir s'ils sont assez épais;
Il est féroce, obscène, abominable, en paix;
Il avait l'ignorance, on y joint la folie;
Il vole, tue, écrasé, extermine, spolie,
Dresse des échafauds, fait des parjures, ment,
Pillé, égorge, détruit, brûle, naïvement;
Son pouvoir est la grêle aveugle des déluges,
La trombe; — et maintenant, allez aux voix, les juges!

Tacite, qu'en dis-tu? Qu'en dis-tu, Juvénal?
Dieu lui-même est pensif au fond du tribunal;
Et le châtiment craint d'être injuste, et la foudre
Ne peut plus condamner et n'ose pas absoudre.

X.

Vous insistez? Eh bien, insistons. J’y consens.
Oui, don Pèdre égorgeant les infants innocents
Est méchant; oui, Bardas, oui, Léon le faussaire, Valens, Justinien aveuglant Bélisaire,
Alexandre exposant Callisthène aux lions,
Sont affreux; les Phocas et les Pygmalions
Sont hideux jusqu’au rêve et jusqu’à la chimère;
Xercès sanglant battant de verges l’onde amère,
Constantin Caballin broyant sur les pavés
Aux pieds de son cheval des monceaux d’yeux crevés,
Sapor couvrant de sel une femme écorchée,
Épouvantent; Achab, tourmenteur de Michée,
Didier, Osman, Ratbert, Vitiza, Childebrand,
Les Comnènes, Michel Calafati montrant
Toute la cruauté que contient l’éphémère,
César tuant la loi, Néron tuant sa mère,
Font horreur; ils sont vils, ils sont abjects. Et nous?
Pourquoi ces sénateurs leur parlant à genoux?
Pourquoi ce prêtre athée et faux qui les encense?
Pourquoi les engloutir dans notre obéissance?
Pourquoi, pouvant souffler sur un joug vermoulu,
Le monde accepte-t-il le pouvoir absolu?
Pourquoi les plus nombreux sont-ils donc les plus lâches?
De quel droit, du devoir méconnaissant les tâches,
La terre maudit-elle, après l’avoir construit,
L’homme de cécité, de fureur et de nuit?
O peuple! consentir au tyran, c’est le faire.

*

Pénétrons plus avant dans cette morne sphère.
Questionnons le sphinx, l’énigme, l’inconnu.

Sait-on pourquoi l’on vient et d’où l’on est venu?
Le fœtus choisit-il son destin? Est-on maître
D’indiquer son endroit et son heure pour naître?
Ah! vous voulez qu’on soit responsable? De quoi?
D’être homme de tel siècle ou bien fils de tel roi?
D’être l’atome errant la nuit dans telle zone?
D’avoir été jeté tout petit sur un trône?
D’être sorti sultan du mystère infini?
Est-on donc accusable et sera-t-on puni
De la place où vous met l’obscure destinée,
Quand, semence de vie au vent abandonnée,
On éclôt sur la terre, humble esprit frémissant?
Qu’est-ce qu’il avait fait, ce pauvre être innocent,
Pour être le tyran, pour être une âme noire,
Pour être le damné sinistre de l’histoire,
Pour être un spectre en fuite au souffle des courroux,
Pour que tous les carcans et que tous les verrous,
Tous les gibets froissant leurs tragiques ferrailles,
Toutes les, visions d’ombre et de funérailles,
Tous les vols de corbeaux, tous les vols de vautours,
Passent autour de lui toujours, toujours, toujours!
Qu’est-ce qu’il avait fait pour être Périandre,
Busiris, Constantin, Charles neuf? pour entendre
Les gouffres à jamais aboyer après lui?

S’il eût vu ce destin funèbre, il aurait fui.
Est-ce qu’il n’avait pas aussi lui, dans ces limbes
Où l’être avant d’éclore erre parmi les nimbes
Et d’où l’âme en tremblant sur ce globe s’abat,
Droit à la mère blême et pauvre du grabat?
Avait-il mérité l’exception terrible?
O Dieu qui vannes l’homme aux trous noirs de ton crible
Et qui sèmes au vent ce grain prédestiné,
N’avait-il donc pas droit, ce triste nouveau-né,
Comme tous les enfants qui naissent pêle-mêle,
Au chaume, au galetas, aux souliers sans semelle,
Au haillon laissant voir la maigreur du genou,

Au liard du ruisseau qu’on fouille avec un clou?
N’avait-il donc pas droit à la sainte misère?
Le faire prince et monstre, était-ce nécessaire?
Louvres payés trop cher! ô Kremlins, Alhambras,
Couronne, orgueil du front, sceptre, splendeur du bras,
Marches du trône, éclat, pouvoir, lits de parade,
Fronts courbés, fauteuil d’or de la royale estrade,
Dais de pourpre à travers un nuage aperçu,
Comme il eût dit : jamais! jamais! s’il avait su
Tout ce que vous cachez d’ombre et de précipice.
L’enfant ramassé nu sur le seuil de l’hospice
Ignore ce velours, ignore ce sapin;
Il est béni! Râler sans toit, sans feu, sans pain,
Être le nourrisson à qui, pâle et flétrie,
L’âpre indigence tend sa gorge de furie,
Oh! plutôt qu’être infant, césaréwitch, dauphin,
Mendier, grelotter, avoir froid, avoir faim,
Être le chien humain d’un vil troupeau qui broute,
Garder les porcs, casser des pierres sur la route!
L’homme de l’arsenal qui traîne des fardeaux
Ayant comme un cheval des bricoles au dos,
Le chanteur de la rue à qui le souffle manque,
Le geindre gémissant la nuit, le saltimbanque
Attendant qu’on lui jette un sou dans son chapeau,
Le pêcheur qui toujours a de l’eau sur la peau,
Le nègre entortillant ses fers d’une guenille
Pour ne pas trop sentir le froid de la manille,
Les mineurs enfouis dans leur puits ténébreux,
Ceux-là sont les choisis, ceux-là sont les heureux!
Oh! je le crie, avant qu’il fût né, qu’on réponde,
Qu’est-ce qu’il avait fait, terre, astres, nuit profonde,
Ciel fatal, pour ne pas être un de ces élus!

Ou si décidément du jour il est exclus,
Si le destin lui tend quelque implacable embûche,
S’il faut que dans le crime et le mal il trébuche,
Eh bien! rôder aux bois, tuer dans la forêt,

Mais non pas dans l’histoire où le sang reparaît,
N’avoir pas d’Isaïe acharné sur son ombre,
Être du moins l’objet d’un peu de pitié sombre,
S’appeler le bandit et non pas le tyran!

Quoi! le cafre qui teint ses lèvres de safran,
Le huron manœuvrant sa pirogue d’écorce,
Vole, vous l’absolvez, penseurs! Le brigand corse,
Fauve et traitant le droit comme un pays conquis,
Silhouette sinistre, erre dans les makis,
Vous murmurez : pardon! Nul n’exige qu’un nègre
Ou qu’un malgache, étant stupide, soit intègre;
On les plaint; savent-ils ce que c’est que la loi?
Et vous ne plaignez pas ce sultan ou ce roi,
Cet autre nègre orné d’autres verroteries!
Le zingaro qui vit en dehors des patries
Vous émeut; le mougick à Cronstadt, le hammal
Au Fanar, vous plaidez pour eux s’ils font le mal;
Le loup suit son instinct en ravageant l’étable.
Quoi! vous allez chercher sur son banc lamentable
L’affreux galérien féroce et châtié,
Vous lui tâtez le crâne et vous criez : pitié!
Et vous ne sentez pas, dans ce vide où tout flotte,
Qu’un despote est un pauvre aussi bien qu’un ilote,
Que la pourpre n’est plus qu’un haillon dans la nuit,
Et qu’en cette ombre où l’homme est par l’instinct coriduit,
Où le mensonge s’offre, où le vrai se refuse,
A l’ignorance égale il faut l’égale excuse!

XI.

Croyez-vous donc, songeurs qui vous apitoyez
Sur l’affreux mendiant des ravins non frayés,
Sur le larron des bois, demi-nu, maigre et blême,
Que ce bandit n’est pas un despote lui-même?
Non, il est le tyran sauvage de minuit;
Il prend cette heure triste, avec elle il s’enfuit;
Il est le conquérant du sentier solitaire;
La forêt, qu’il viole en son sacré mystère,
Le regarde arriver comme Rome Attila.
Croyez-vous donc qu’il est sans flatteurs? Non, il a Sa faim qui lui dit : Prends! sa soif qui lui dit : Tue!
La solitude, fauve et de branches vêtue,
Qui dit : Te voilà seul! voleur! te voilà roi!
Son lourd bâton ferré qui dit : Compte sur moi!
Il a ses muscles durs qui lui disent : Personne
Ne te vaut; le passant en te voyant frissonne;
Tu peux tuer un homme avec un coup de poing.
Il a sa haine au cœur qui dit : N’épargne point!
Et, troués et béants, ses vieux haillons farouches
Baisent son crime avec leurs misérables bouches,
Et, caressant sa main sanglante, et la léchant,
Lui parlent à voix basse et lui chantent ce chant :
— L’or est bon à piller, le sang est bon à boire;
Cherche l’or, cherche l’or, ô conscience noire!
Vois comme ton esprit la nuit étinceler;
Le meurtre ténébreux est fait pour s’étoiler
De sequins rayonnants, de doublons et de piastres;
C’est aux abîmes noirs qu’appartiennent les astres.

XII.

Aux lueurs du flambeau par ma main soutenu,
Tout le fourmillement ténébreux est venu;
Devant mon esprit calme et que l’équité mène,
J’ai donné rendez-vous à, la misère humaine,
A toute l’ignorance, à tout front déprimé,
A quiconque a pour âme un soupirail fermé;
J’ai plaint, les rassemblant sous ma prunelle sombre,
Tous ces demi-vivants, les infirmes sans nombre,
Tous ceux sur qui le deuil tire son lourd rideau,
Le mendiant sans yeux au front ceint d’un bandeau,
Le pauvre homme pied-bot tremblant sur la béquille,
Et je me suis senti, tous étant ma famille,
Tous ayant droit aux pleurs, leur unique trésor,
Une compassion plus douloureuse encor
Pour le boiteux du sceptre et l’aveugle à couronne.

La cécité sur tous pèse et les environne;
Ils sont tous du néant qui souffre; et puis, hélas,
Ces diadèmes d’or sur tous ces crânes plats!
Hélas, ne rien savoir, ne rien voir, et l’empire!
Être tout, n’étant rien; quelle indigence pire!
Quel plus dur dénûment, quel plus morne abandon,
Et quel accouplement plus digne de pardon
Que la toute ignorance et la toute puissance!
Quoi de plus désolé que cette affreuse absence
De la réalité, du vrai, de la raison,
Et du jour, englouti derrière l’horizon?
Entre les malheureux gravissant les calvaires,
Pour ceux-ci qui sont rois serons-nous plus sévères
Parce qu’ils sont plus sourds et plus noirs, et qu’ils ont
Plus d’horreur dans la main et d’ombre sur le front?

XIII.

Oh! je dis aujourd’hui comme toi, mon vieux Dante;
Mais triste et d’une voix moins fauve et moins stridente :
« — Si l’on ne comprend pas, je vais recommencer;
« Ce peuple est comme l’eau qu’on fend sans la creuser,
« Et je lui redirai cent fois la même chose! — »
Quel plaidoyer farouche et quelle rude cause!
La pitié tremble, ayant contre elle tout le cri
Et toute la douleur du genre humain meurtri.

*

O vous, les inconnus, l’irresponsable foule,
Vous sur qui la minute inconsciente coule,
Heureux d’être petits, et sentant quel secours
L’oubli donne aux vivants si confus et si courts,
Ne faisant point un pas qui ne soit effaçable,
N’ayant d’autre souci que d’être grains de sable,
Représentez-vous donc ce que c’est qu’un passant
Qui se croit Absolu, Très-Haut et Tout-Puissant!
Imaginez-vous donc ce que c’est qu’un despote!
Il rit stupidement au peuple qui sanglote;
Sa grandeur, lui venant du néant, l’amoindrit;
L’énormité du trône écrase son esprit;
Sous cet homme l’honneur périt, le droit s’absente.
La paix est un marais de honte croupissante;
Lois, justice, clergé, tout est corruption.
Pour gagner tes procès, es-tu Trimalcion?
Bien, paie. Es-tu Phryné? montre ta gorge aux juges.
On aspire aux tombeaux ainsi qu’à des refuges;
La guerre est un tumulte informe, un cliquetis
De passions, d’instincts sauvages, d’appétits;
Il va sans savoir où de bataille en bataille;
Il allume une ville ainsi qu’un tas de paille;

Et la campagne en feu que brûle ce tueur
Empourpre au loin les monts où rêve, à la lueur
De tous ces tourbillons de flamme et d'étincelles,
Le vautour se fouillant du bec sous les aisselles.
Puis la victoire un jour fuit et le brise, après
Qu'il a fait grandir l'ombre affreuse des cyprès.

*

Quoi! parce qu'un malheur sera fait de puissance,
D'autorité, d'orgueil sans borne, de licence,
De luxe, de bonheur, vous rie le plaindrez pas!
Quoi! parce qu'il verra d'en haut, et nous d'en bas;
Quoi! parce qu'il aura le haut bout de la table,
A gauche un chancelier, à droite un connétable,
Parce que ce malheur, ivre, se croira Dieu,
Parce que, formidable, il sera le milieu
De tout un monde étrange, encens, festins, armées,
Et, comme le bûcher, d'un gouffre de fumées,
Parce qu'il aura, triste, une tiare au front,
Tout ce respect fût-il plus fatal que l'affront,
Ce palais fût-il plus lamentable qu'un bouge,
Cet or rouge fût-il plus brûlant qu'un fer rouge,
Comme cela s'appelle un roi, comme c'est né
Fleurdelysé, béni, harangué, couronné,
Dans un berceau semé d'abeilles, à Versailles,
C'est bien, c'est le damné; vous serez sans entrailles!

*

Regardez-les, sont-ils assez épouvantés!
Les Transtamares sont l'un par l'autre guettés,
Et chacun d'eux, tremblant sans pouvoir s'en distraire,
Met la main au poignard sitôt qu'il voit son frère;
Alonze va changeant de,chambre chaque nuit;
Louis onze grelotte et maigrit; Henri huit
Fait fouiller tous les soirs son lit à coups d'épée;

Rustem est une brute à tuer occupée,
Lisant dans tous les yeux d’implacables desseins
Et dans tous les passants rêvant des assassins.

*

Ah! ces porte-fléaux fléchissent sous leur charge.
Plus le front est étroit, plus la couronne est large.
Hélas, que devenir avec ce genre humain
Dont on ne sait que faire et qu’on a dans la main?
Ah! le roi! des splendeurs ténébreux cénobite!
Vous vous éblouissez du palais qu’il habite,
De la fanfare auguste et fière qui le suit
Et lui fait sur la tête un triomphe de bruit,
Du cortège inouï qui devant ses pas s’ouvre;
Hélas, vous l’enviez pour son spectre de Louvre!
Vous le voyez d’en bas, superbe, impérial,
Puissant, dans un Rœmer, dans un Escurial,
Parmi des hommes d’or et des femmes de soie,
Dans un grand flamboiement qui semble de la joie,
Peuple, et vous l’admirez, sans vous apercevoir
Qu’éclatant au dehors, au dedans il est noir.
A de certains moments savez-vous ce qu’il souffre
Quant un vague réveil lui laisse voir son gouffre?
Vous l’enviez de loin, mais la surface ment.
La douleur est au fond de son rayonnement;
Vous sentez la chaleur, mais il sent la brûlure.

L’heure en frappant lui fait au crâne une fêlure.
Il porte le pouvoir comme un bœuf le licou.

*

Ayez-vous médité sur le tzar de Moscou?
Avez-vous médité sur l’empereur de Rome?
Chiffre obscur! zéro noir qui du monde est la somme!
Avez-vous médité sur l’horreur du sultan?

Une lueur de perle argenté son caftan;
Il voit un paradis de vagues avenues,
De bains lascifs, d’oiseaux, de fleurs, de femmes nues,
Par le vitrail qui s’ouvre au fond du corridor;
Il a sur son turban la lune aux cornes d’or,
L’astre qui fait l’éclipse et qui fait la démence;
Son pouvoir est un champ que la mort ensemence;
Il est comme au milieu d’une mer sous les cieux;
Dans les hideux pensers il est silencieux
Comme ces rocs que vont souiller les stercoraires;
En saisissant le sceptre il a tué ses frères;
Afin qu’il fût despote, afin qu’il fût vainqueur,
A cet homme lugubre on a coupé le cœur;
Son trône est un charnier, sa ville est un décombre;
Cent monstres blancs et noirs, gardant son palais sombre,
D’un maître épouvantable esclaves effrayants,
Le couvent jour et nuit de leurs yeux flamboyants,
Et se penchent, haïs de l’homme et de la femme,
Eunuques de la chair, sur l’eunuque de l’âme.

*

Je vous le dis, les cœurs tendres sont les cœurs grands;
Il est temps qu’on se mette à plaindre les tyrans.
La justice trop juste est sœur de la vengeance.
Pardonnons. Jetons, même aux démons, l’indulgence;
Oui, l’aumône, elle aussi, doit avoir sa grandeur.
N’imprimons le fer chaud sur aucune laideur;
De nos compassions n’exceptons aucun homme;
L’homme juste n’est pas de clémence économe,;
Un monstre est un infirme, et l’infirme a des droits.
L’ignorant, quel qu’il soit, qu’il marche au coin d’un bois,
L’envie au cœur, pieds nus, en haillons, triste rustre,
Ou qu’il ait là couronne en tête, brute illustre,
N’est rien qu’un pauvre aveugle, abject, perdu, tenté;
Oui, l’homme se défait où manque la clarté;
O sinistre unité du mal! analogie

Du fou que fait la faim au fou que fait l’orgie!
Ils ont ce noir lien, c’est qu’ils ne savent pas.
Dans leurs deux sphères d’ombre ils font les mêmes pas »
Ils sont le crépuscule et ne savent que nuire;
Ignorer, c’est haïr; ignorer, c’est détruire;
La brutalité vient, la férocité suit;
L’homme de proie, hélas, sort de l’homme de nuit;
Une prunelle horrible en ces ombres s’allume;
Le brigand, le tyran, c’est, dans la même brume,
Le même oiseau de nuit qui vole, atroce et fou;
Gengiskhan et Mandrin sont le même hibou;
La même obscurité dépravée et farouche
Fait en haut Louis quinze et fait en bas Cartouche.

Oui, je vous le répète, allez, interrogez,
Philosophes, les lois, les mœurs, les préjugés,
Les vieux siècles saignants, ces témoins unanimes;
Creusez, fouillez l’histoire, embaumement des crimes;
Ouvrez ce panthéon des-dynastes défunts
Que dom Calmet conserve avec ses vils parfums;
Scrutez les attentats, sondez les tragédies
Jetant aux grands palais des rougeurs d’incendies,
Que trouvez-vous? ceci. : tous ces grands malheureux,
Bandits broyant la terre ou s’égorgeant entr’eux,
De Constantin l’athée à Joas le lévite,
Du Darius de Perse au Dmitri moscovite,
De l’anglais Edouard au mède Barazas,
Qui, nés princes » sont rois, peuple, seraient forçats.
Qu’est-ce que Charles neuf? c’est Ravaillac. Alonze, Sanche et Ramire sont des idiots de bronze.
Qu’est-ce que Henri trois? un imbécile. Ivan?
Un insensé. Mourad, le tigre du divan?
Un frénétique. Hélas! l’ignorance les couvre.
Pourquoi la plaindre au bagne et la maudire au Louvre?

XIV.

Et vous ne voulez pas que nous disions : assez!
Que nous tendions les mains pour tous ces insensés,
Que nous avions pitié de ces impitoyables!
Que nous demandions grâce aux destins immuables,
A Dieu, pour ceux qui n’ont point fait grâce, et qui sont Tombés faibles et nus dans le pouvoir sans fond!
Et vous ne voulez pas que, pesant ces deux chaînes,
L’une qui tient le corps captif dans les géhennes,
L’autre qui fait de l’âme elle-même un caveau,
L’une étreignant le bras, et l’autre le cerveau,
Sentant nos yeux mouillés, notre cœur qui se serre,
Nous disions, inclinés sur l’énigme misère,
Et de tous les cachots comparant la noirceur :
L’opprimé le plus sombre, hélas, c’est l’oppresseur!

Si vous ne plaignez pas ces êtres sur qui pèse
Une fatalité morne et que rien n’apaise,
Ces haïs, ces maudits, qu’est-ce que vous plaindrez?
Refusez-vous le baume aux plus désespérés?
Avez-vous des pitiés décroissant à mesure
Qu’on voit la douleur croître et grandir la blessure?
Reculez-vous devant l’étrange extrémité
Où le malheur devient de la calamité?

*

Oh! soyons bons surtout pour les cruels. C’est triste
Que la bonté, si belle alors qu’elle persiste,
Vis-à-vis des méchants soit si prompte à l’oubli!
Le méchant, c’est le cœur d’amertume rempli.
Vous cherchez les souffrants; il est le véritable.
Oh! le cri de cette âme est le plus, lamentable.
Être le guérisseur, le bon samaritain

Des monstres, ces martyrs ténébreux du destin,
Leur panser leur puissance et leur laver leur crime,
Entre les devoirs saints c’est le devoir sublime.
Est-il donc impossible, ô Dieu, de secourir,
D’assoupir, de calmer, d’aider, de faire ouvrir
A la sainte pitié ses ailes toutes grandes?
Homme, on t’a fait le mal; ce qu’il faut que tu rendes,
C’est le bien; vis, réponds à la haine en aimant,
Et c’est là tout le dogme et tout le firmament.

Quoi! l’amour est fragile et la haine est durable!
Quelle est donc cette loi du deuil inexorable?
O ciel sombre! on a beau se révolter, vouloir
Briser cet anankè, rompre ce désespoir,
L’âpre loi reparaît toujours, sourde et glacée.
Va, philosophe, essaie, insurge la pensée,
La raison, la sagesse humaine, la clarté,
Contre la nuit, l’horreur et la fatalité,
Appelle en aide et mêle à ces saintes émeutes
Job, les Esséniens, Philon, les Thérapeutes, Voltaire, Diderot, Vicô, Beccaria;
Toujours Satan revient avec le paria,
Toujours l’enfer vomit, comme une doublé lave,
Le démon dans le ciel, sur la terre l’esclave,
Le mal dans l’infini, le malheur ici-bas.
Plaindre Jésus, c’est bien; mais plaindre Barabbas,
C’est aussi la justice; et la grandeur éclate
A relever Caïphe, à consoler Pilate,
Et c’est là le sommet le plus haut des vertus
Que Socrate expirant soit bon pour Anitus.

Oui! les désolateurs, ceux-là sont les plus tristes.

Vous pleurez quand Sylla dresse ses mornes listes;
Vous plaignez les proscrits; mais vous ne savez pas
Tout ce qu’ils ont d’air pur, d’orgueil, de larges pas,
De respiration fière et de paix sublime,

Tout ce qu’ils ont d’azur au fond de leur abîme,
Et, jetés par les vents sur les écueils amers,
De ressemblance avec le libre flot des mers!
Vous ne vous doutez pas de ces immenses joies,
Subir les durs revers, suivre les âpres voies,
Être chassé, traqué, meurtri, persécuté,
Souffrir pour la justice et pour la vérité!
Vous plaignez les proscrits; occupez mieux vos larmes,
Plaignez le prescripteur. Soupçon, angoisse, alarmes,
Remords, voilà sa vie; il se redit les noms
Des bannis, des captifs plongés aux cabanons,
De ceux qu’il a jetés là-bas à l’agonie;
Le vent râle la nuit pendant son insomnie;
Pâle, il prête l’oreille; il écoute le cri
De Pathmos, de Syène ou de Sinnamari;
S’il dort, quel songe! il voit Tibère lui sourire,
Brutus rôder, Caton saigner, Tacite écrire;
Il a beau vivre, idole, au fond d’un tourbillon,
Mettre dans toute bouche ou l’hymne ou le bâillon;
Que dira l’avenir? Il se sent responsable
Des fièvres de l’exil, de la plage de sable,
Du marais, du soleil, et du zèle d’en bas,
Du geôlier harcelant ces fers et ces grabats,
Du valet tourmenteur qui crée, invente, innove,
Et le flatte en frappant la victime; Hudson Lowe
Pèse plus sur les rois que sur Napoléon.

*

Un jour le sacré temple humain, le Panthéon,
Jettera son éclipse auguste sur vos dômes,
Mornes villes du mal, Kremlins, Stambouls, Sodomes,
Et l’oubli couvrira de son brouillard glacé
La fourmilière étrange et noire du passé,
Pendant que l’avenir luira, fronton splendide.
Hélas, en attendant, l’homme, sans jour, sans guide,
Prend des précautions contre l’entraînement

De la fraternité, vertigineux aimant;
Il sent dans sa poitrine une chose suspecte,
Son cœur; l'homme, humble ou grand, large esprit, âme abjecte,
Tâtant le sort ainsi qu'on suit dans l'ombre un mur,
A peur de la pitié comme d'un puits obscur,
Et préfère la haine, et s'attache à la corde
Du mal pour ne pas choir dans la miséricorde.
Le pardon crie : Amour! Quel est cet inconnu?
Faire grâce épouvante, et ce mot ingénu,
Doux, clair, simple : — Aimez-vous, frères, les uns les autres! —
Est si profond qu'il n'est compris que des apôtres.

*

Jean Huss était lié sur la pile de bois;
Le feu partout sous lui pétillait à la fois;
Jean Huss vit s'approcher le bourreau de la ville,
La face monstrueuse, épouvantable et vile,
L'exécuteur, l'esclave infâme, atroce, fort,
Sanglant, maître de l'œuvre obscure de la mort,
L'affreux passant vers qui les vers lèvent la tête,
Le tueur qui jamais ne compte et ne s'arrête,
Le cheval aveuglé du cabestan des lois;
Toute la ville était sur les seuils, sur les toits,
Parlait et fourmillait et contemplait la fête;
Huss vit venir à-lui cet homme, cette bête,
Cet être misérable et bas que l'effroi suit,
Espèce de vivant terrible de la nuit;
Difforme sous le faix de l'horreur éternelle,
Ayant le flamboiement des bûchers pour prunelle,
Il était là, tordant sa bouche sous l'affront;
On voyait des reflets de spectres sur son front
Où se réverbéraient les supplices sans nombre;
Toute sa vie était sur son visage sombre,
L'isolement, le deuil, l'anathème, ce don
Du meurtre qu'on lui fait au-dessous du pardon,
La mort qui le nourrit du sang de sa mamelle,

Son Ut fait d’un morceau du gibet, sa femelle,
Ses enfants, plus maudits que les petits des loups,
Sa maison triste où vient regarder par les trous
L’essaim des écoliers qui s’enfuit dès qu’il bouge;
Ses poings, cicatrisés à toucher le fer rouge,
Se crispaient; les soldats le nommaient en crachant;
Il approchait, courbé, plié, souillé, méchant,
Honteux, de l’échafaud cariatide affreuse;
Il surveillait l’endroit où Pâtre ardent se creuse,
Il venait ajouter de l’huile et de la poix,
Il apportait, suant et geignant sous le poids,
Une charge de bois à l’horrible fournaise;
Sous l’œil haineux du peuple il remuait la braise,
Abject, las, réprouvé, blasphémé, blasphémant;
Et Jean Huss, par le feu léché lugubrement,
Leva les yeux au ciel et murmura : Pauvre homme!

XV.

J’ai tout pesé, j’ai vu le fond, j’ai fait la somme,
Et je n’ai pas distrait un chiffre du total;
J’ai mis le nécessaire en regard du fatal;
Je n’ai pas reculé devant le syllogisme;
La vérité dût-elle être mère du schisme,
J’ai voulu que le vrai jaillît et triomphât;
J’ai remué dix fois les os de Josaphat;
J’ai tâché, les heurtant, d’en tirer l’étincelle;
J’ai compulsé l’antique archive universelle;
Et l’énigme semblait toujours s’approfondir;
Et c’était le zénith et c’était le nadir;
Et les aspects changeaient de l’étoile au cloaque;
Du juge Samuel j’allais au juge Éaque;
J’ai comparé les deuils, confronté, discuté,
J’ai du dilemme humain touché l’extrémité;
La tâche était ardue, et mon âpre logique
Marchait, et de tout boire avait la soif tragique;
Quel accablement d’être à ceci parvenu
Qu’entre l’enfant vêtu de pourpre et l’enfant nu,
Entre les fiers palais dont tonne l’embrasure,
Dont le seuil triomphal rayonne, et la masure,
Entre l’ilote grec et le césar romain,
Entre le mendiant, fantôme du chemin,
Larve obscure, et le roi que la foule célèbre,
On ne sait qui choisir pour pleurer! — Nuit funèbre!

Quand donc tous les enfers s’évanouiront-ils?
Quand, ayant un rayon sous chacun de ses cils,
L’aube apparaîtra-t-elle, après tant d’affreux rêves?
Quand se lèvera-t-il, ce jour saint où les Grèves,
Les Tyburns monstrueux, les hideux Montfaucons
S’écrieront sous les cieux pleins d’astres : Abdiquons!
Dieu! quand luira l’aurore et le siècle, la vie,

La paix, la joie ouvrant le ciel qui nous convie,
La liberté splendide aux regards enivrés?
Oh! brisez tous les fers, Dieu vivant! délivrez
Le bourreau du supplice et le tyran du trône!

*

Partout, du Gange au Rhin, du Tibre à l’Amazone, L’homme souffre, et l’esclave et le maître sont las;
Le joug lui-même crie, et tout le mal, hélas!
Vient de ce qu’au vrai jour on n’ouvre pas les âmes.
Frères, au désert noir trop longtemps nous errâmes,
Et, guidés au hasard, marchant sans voir, rampants,
Nous en avons subi les hideux guet-apens.
Tout le crime ici-bas est fait par l’ombre lâche.
Haïssons, poursuivons sans trêve, sans relâche,
Les ténèbres, mais non, frères, les ténébreux.
Frappés par eux, broyés par eux, pleurons sur eux.
Ah! si l’on eût tourné vers la clarté leur crâne,
S’ils eussent eu leur part de la céleste manne,
S’ils eussent vu le vrai, tous ces infortunés,
Seraient-ils les bourreaux, les monstres, les damnés?
Non, tout homme qui voit la lumière, l’adore.
Non, non! je plains Sélim, je plains Héliodore,
Je plains Caligula, Rhamsès, Achmet; je plains
Tous les Domitiens et tous les Ezzelins;
Je plains Vitellius et Mézence; j’excuse
Le fou de Trianon, le fou de Syracuse,
Les Gengis, les Thamas, dans l’éclair apparus,
Néron brisant Sénèque, Henri brisant Morus,
Cosme, Héliogabale, Omar, Philippe, Osée;
Et je dis à la Nuit : Répondez, accusée.

L'ÂNE

TABLE DES MATIERES

Colère de la bête
Coup d'oeil général
L'Âne patience entre dans le détail
La nuit autour de l'homme
Conduite de l'homme vis-à-vis des enfants
Conduite de l'homme vis-à-vis des génies
Conduite de l'homme vis-à-vis de la création
Conduite de l'homme vis-à-vis de la société
Conduite de l'homme vis-à-vis de lui-même
Réaction de la création sur l'homme
Tristesse finale
Tristesse du philosophe
Sécurité du penseur

— Mais tu brûles! Prends garde, esprit! Parmi les hommes, Pour nous guider, ingrats ténébreux que nous sommes,
Ta flamme te dévore, et l’on peut mesurer
Combien de temps tu vas sur la terre durer.
La vie en notre nuit n’est pas inépuisable.
Quand nos mains plusieurs fois ont retourné le sable
Et remonté l’horloge, et que devant nos yeux
L’ombre et l’aurore ont pris possession des cieux
Tour à tour, et pendant un certain nombre d’heures,
Il faut finir. Prends garde, il faudra que tu meures.
Tu vas t’user trop vite et brûler nuit et jour!
Tu nous verses la paix, la clémence, l’amour,
La justice, le droit, la vérité sacrée,
Mais ta substance meurt pendant que ton feu crée.
Ne te consume pas! Ami, songe au tombeau! - Calme, il répond: — Je fais mon devoir de flambeau.

Colère de la bête

Un âne descendait au galop la science.
— Quel est ton nom? dit Kant. — Mon nom est Patience,
Dit l'âne. Oui, c'est mon nom, et je l'ai mérité,
Car je viens de ce faîte où l'homme est seul monté
Et qu'il nomme savoir calcul, raison, doctrine.
Kant, porter le licou sanglé sur la poitrine;
Avoir dès son bas âge, âpre et morne combat,
L'os de l'échine usé par la boucle du bât;
Subir, de l'aube au soir, la secousse électrique
Du nerf de boeuf parfois relayé par la trique;
Être, tremblant de froid ou de chaud étouffant,
Happé par la mâtin, lapidé par l'enfant,
Tomber de l'un à l'autre, et traverser l'églogue
De la pierre alternant avec le bouledogue;
Vivre, d'un chargement effroyable bossu,
Les os trouant la peau, maigre, ayant tant reçu,
Le long de chaque côte et de chaque vertèbre,
De coups de fouet que d'âne on est devenu zèbre,
Tout cela, qui te semble assez rude, n'est rien,
Et le fouet est à peine un souffle éolien,
Et les cailloux sont doux, et la raclée est bonne
À côté de ceci : suivre un cours en Sorbonne;
Vivre courbé six mois, peut-être un temps plus long,
Sous une chaire en bois qu'habite un cuistre en plomb;
Dresser son appareil d'oreilles au passage
Des clartés du savant et des vertus du sage;
Épeler Vossius, Scaliger, Salian;
Écouter la façon dont l'homme fait hi-han!

À quoi sert Cracovie? à qui sert Salamanque?
Et Sorèze, lanterne où l'étincelle manque,
Et Cambridge, et Cologne, et Pavie? À quoi sert
De changer l'ignorance en bégaiement disert?
Pourquoi dans des taudis perpétuer des races

De bélîtres rongeant d’informes paperasses?
Que sert de dédier des classes, des cachots,
Et quatre grands murs nus qu’on blanchit à la chaux,
Et des rangs de gradins, de bancs et de pupitres,
À d’affreux charlatans flanqués d’horribles pitres?
Frivoles, quoique lourds, pesants, quoique subtils,
Quel sol labourent-ils? quel blé moissonnent-ils?
À quoi rêvait Sorbon quand il fonda ce cloître
Où l’on voit mourir l’aube et les ténèbres croître?
À quoi songeait Gerson en voulant qu’on dorât
D’un galon le bonnet carré du doctorat?
À quoi bon, jeunes gens qu’à ce bagne on condamne,
Devenir bachelier puisqu’on peut rester âne?

Moi l’ignorant pensif, vaguement traversé
De lueurs en tondant les herbes du fossé,
Qui serais Dieu, si j’eusse été connu d’Ovide,
Moi qui sais au besoin prendre en pitié le vide
Du philosophe altier pleurant ce qu’il détruit,
À travers le fatras, le tourbillon, le bruit,
J’ai sondé du savoir la vacuité morne;
J’ai vu le bout, j’ai vu le fond, j’ai vu la borne;
J’ai vu du genre humain l’effort vain et béant;
Je n’ai pas, dans cette ombre et le cas échéant,
Refusé les conseils de l’ineptie honnête
Au docte, moi le simple, à l’homme, moi la bête;
Kant, j’ai vu, mendiant des clartés à la nuit,
Devant l’énormité de l’énigme où tout luit,
Devant l’oeil invisible et la main impalpable,
La science marcher en zigzag, incapable
De porter l’infini, ce vin mystérieux,
Soûle et comme abrutie en présence des cieux;
L’âne survient, s’émeut, plaint cet état d’ivresse,
Jette un liard et dit : tiens! à cette pauvresse.

Kant, ne t’étonne point de ces échanges-là.
L’âne un jour rencontrant Ésope, lui parla;

La conversation fut au profit d’Ésope.
Quant à moi qu’à présent tant de brume enveloppe,
Je déclare que j’ai beaucoup baissé depuis
Qu’imprudent j’ai risqué ma tête en votre puits,
Et que je me suis fait condisciple de l’homme.
Tout en suivant ces cours dont la lourdeur assomme,
J’ai fait souvent à l’homme en son obscurité
L’aumône d’un éclair de ma stupidité;
Tandis que l’homme, ayant pour dogme et pour pratique
Qu’il faut qu’un âne libre, incorrect et rustique,
Monte à la dignité de classique baudet,
De son rayonnement ténébreux m’inondait.
Je sors exténué de cette rude école;
J’ai vu de près Boileau, j’aime mieux la bricole.

Mon nom est Patience, oui, Kant! ils ont voulu
Me faire à moi bétail innocent et goulu,
Tantôt avec Philon dans le grand songe antique,
Tantôt avec Bezout dans la mathématique,
Tantôt chez Caliban, tantôt chez Ariel,
Manger de l’idéal et brouter du réel;
Je n’ai pas résisté; j’ai, pauvre âne à la gêne,
Mangé de l’Euctémon, brouté du Diogène,
Après Flaccus, Pibrac, Vertot après Niebuhr,
Et j’ai revu Gonesse en sortant de Tibur.
Hier dans la phtisie et demain dans l’oedème,
J’ai tout accepté, Lulle, Érasme, Oenésidème,
Les pesants, les légers, les simples, les abstrus,
Les Pelletiers pas plus bêtes que les Patrus,
Fleury dans le sacré, Chompré dans le profane,
L’affreux père Goar juché sur Théophane,
Tout poète embelli de son commentateur,
Sanchez dans son égout, et toi sur ta hauteur.
Dur labeur! Veut-on pas que je me passionne
Pour les textes d’Élée ou ceux de Sicyone,
Que j’attache un grand prix à savoir s’il est bon
D’avoir lu Xenarchus pour comprendre Strabon,

Que je me mette en feu le cerveau pour les notes
Des Suards sur les Grimms, des Grimms sur les Nonottes,
Et qu'un âne de sens se laisse incendier
Par ce qu'à Lycosthène ajoute Duverdier?

Voilà longtemps que j'erre et que je me promène
Dans la chose appelée intelligence humaine;
J'allais je ne sais où suivant je ne sais qui;
J'ai pratiqué Glycas, Suidas, Tiraboschi,
Sosiclès, Torniel, Hodierna, Zonare;
J'ai fréquenté le docte en coudoyant l'ignare;
En présence du sort, du futur, du passé,
De l'énigme, du ciel, du gouffre, j'ai causé
Avec l'esprit humain flânant à sa fenêtre;
J'ai fouillé pas à pas ce dédale : connaître;
J'ai dans cette cité, plus noire que les fours
Hanté les culs-de-sac comme les carrefours;
Lu tous les écriteaux, flairé toutes les cibles;
J'ai pris tous les sentiers possibles, impossibles,
Le plat, le raboteux, le connu, l'inconnu;
Je suis allé cent fois et cent fois revenu
De la science exacte, entrepôt sombre où l'homme
Compte le monde ainsi qu'un avare une somme,
À la philosophie, église dont Platon
Est le clocher avec Maugras pour clocheton;
J'ai vu l'antre où l'on prie et l'antre où l'on dissèque;
Et vos collèges froids dont la bibliothèque,
Ainsi qu'une vapeur qui prend forme le soir,
À l'étage d'en haut se condense en dortoir.
J'ai tout appris : Coger, Psellus, les Théophiles,
Pouranas composant la terre de neuf îles,
Socion et Photin; que Sénèque était là
Quand saint Paul vint trouver Néron et lui parla;
Qu'Alirune enseigna Marcomir; que Marcobe
Sous Théodose était maître de garde-robe;
Que les Populicains à Sens furent vaincus;
Comment Manès d'abord s'appela Curbicus;

Que sur la langue Apis avait un scarabée;
Que Paschasin était évêque à Lilybée,
Et que Paschase, abbé de Corvey, fut traduit
Par le père Sirmond en seize cent dix-huit;
Qu’Ambroise est un coursier dont le dogme est la bride;
Que la clef de Cordus ouvre Dioscoride;
Que l’esprit saint planait sur les fameux combats
De saint Jérôme avec le rabbin Akibas;
Que l’absurde se croit; que l’horrible s’adore;
Qu’Ésoptius n’est pas moindre que Nimphidore;
Et comment Mahomet dans tous ses embarras
Consultait Sergius aidé de Batiras;
Qu’il n’existe qu’un siècle et qu’il n’est qu’une école;
Que Bzovius fut docte, et que le grand Nicole
Est si grand qu’il pourrait loger sous son manteau
Godeau, Chiffletius, Possevin et Petau.
J’ai tout ruminé, glose, analyse, critique.
J’ai vu Laïs au pnyx, Aspasie au portique,
Et jusques à Scarron dans son trou de Saint-Cyr;
J’ai fait ce stage affreux, n’ayant d’autre plaisir,
Au pied du mur humain pauvre bête acculée,
Que de manger parfois dans la main d’Apulée
Ou de parler avec Balaam dans un coin.
Pas un texte, ici, là, haut ou bas, près ou loin,
Pas de volume jaune et mangé par les mites,
Pas de lourd catalogue informe et sans limites,
Que mon esprit, voulant tout voir, ne feuilletât.
J’ai donc étudié beaucoup; le résultat?
Un peu d’allongement à mes oreilles tristes.

Et je me suis dit : — Âne, il faut que tu persistes.
J’ai pris, pour faire enfin le tour des cécités,
D’autres inscriptions à d’autres facultés,
Hébreu, sanscrit, pâkrit, grammaire générale,
Jurisprudence, droit, esthétique, morale,
Chimie... — Oh! comprends-tu, Kant, ce qu’il m’a fallu
De longanimité pour dire : — J’ai tout lu,

Tout appris, et je suis plus que jamais pécore;
Eh bien! je vais apprendre et je vais lire encore!

L’âne poursuivit : — Kant, j’ai donc recommencé,
Doublé ma rhétorique, élargi mon fossé;
J’ai remis mon oreille énorme en discipline;
J’ai recreusé Straton, Sosibe, Éraste, Pline,
Et Gérard de Crémone, et Trublet, ab ovo,
Et le grammairien Sostrate, et de nouveau,
La science m’a fait manger de la poussière.
Du noir chaudron qui bout devant cette sorcière
Je me suis fait le morne et lugubre écumeur.

Oh! cliquetis de mots, tohubohu, rumeur,
Champ de foire, Babel, chaos! auquel entendre?
Bossuet est féroce et Fénelon est tendre;
La concordantia du cardinal d’Ailly
Montre un dogme dans l’astre au fond des cieux cueilli;
Photius m’expliquait son fatras somnifère,
Catanes ses trois dés, Sacrobosco sa sphère;
Solon m’offrait ses lois, Bollandus ses romans;
Irénée insultait les quartodecimans;
Je voyais se poursuivre à coups de syllogismes,
Paz, armé pour la foi, Krantz, souteneur des schismes,
Et Melchior Adam et Barleycourt Hugo,
Vieux coqs de l’argument debout sur leur ergo.
Fouillons les chartriers, refouillons les glossaires;
Caracoran, cherchez Issedon; dans ses serres
Jove a cet écriteau : Vel hodie vel cras;
Et Tertullien sombre étrangle Carpocras.
Carpocras d’Irénée enviait la boutique;
Ce Carpocras était un si fier hérétique
Que toi-même, bon Kant, qui jamais n’exécras
Personne, tu devrais exécrer Carpocras.
Comment mettre d’accord Jousse, Antoine Studite,
L’homme de cour Sénèque et Jean le troglodyte,
Young, le pleureur des nuits, Wordsworth, l’esprit des lacs,

Thalès, Hevelius, Levera, Granallachs;
Les gais soupeurs, d’Holbach, Parny, Dorat-Cubière,
D’argens, avec Rancé qui prend pour lit sa bière;
Le dessus de velours, le dessous de sapin;
Ancelin et Cluvier, Polyte et Plancarpin;
Larcher contre Arouet et Cicchi contre Dante;
Et l’engeance grimaude et la race pédante;
Juste Lipse et Luther, Naigeon et Davila?
Knox me tirait par ci, Scot me tirait par là;
Luc prenait une oreille, Euler empoignait l’autre;
Hu! braillait le chiffreur. Dia! beuglait l’apôtre.
Oh! ma jeunesse en fleur qui courait dans les prés
Et les bois par l’aurore et la joie empourprés!
L’herbe verte! l’étable où l’on fait un doux somme!
Oh! les coups de bâton de mon ânier bonhomme!
Je ne pourrai jamais dire, ô splendeur des cieux,
Avec des mots assez crachés et furieux,
Comment ils ont changé la pensée en lanière
Et l’idée en férule, et de quelle manière
Ces malheureux m’ont fait, sous un monstrueux tas
D’Eusèbes, de Sophrons, de Blastus, d’Architas,
D’Ossa plus Pélion, d’Anthume plus Orose,
De petit ânon leste immense âne morose!
Livres! qui, compulsés, adorés, vermoulus,
Sans cesse envahissant l’homme de plus en plus,
De la table des temps épuisez les rallonges,
D’où sortent des lueurs, des visions, des songes,
Et des mains que les morts mettent sur les vivants,
Codes des sanhédrins, oracles des divans,
Textes graves, ardus, austères, difficiles,
Appendices fameux des siècles, codicilles
Du testament de l’homme à chaque âge récrit,
Dont le vélin fait peur quand le temps le flétrit,
Comme si l’on voyait vieillissante et ridée
La face vénérable et chaste de l’idée;
Vous qui faites, sous l’oeil du chercheur feuilletant,
Un bruit si solennel qu’il semble qu’on entend

Le grand chuchotement de l’Inconnu dans l’ombre,
Volumes sacro-saints que l’institut dénombre,
Qui jusqu’en Chine allez emplir de vos rayons
Ce collège appelé Forêt-de-Crayons,
Résidus de l’effort terrestre, où s’accumule
Le chiffre dont le sphinx compose la formule,
Des hommes lumineux prodigieux produit,
Oh! comme vous m’avez obscurci, moi la nuit!
Oh! comme vous m’avez embêté, moi la bête!

Quel délire m’a pris d’aller sur votre faîte
Brouter l’ortie humaine, hélas, et de tenter
Votre viol funèbre, et de vous convoiter,
Livres qui pour consigne avez cette sentence :
— Garder Isis; tenir les brutes à distance, —
Qui défendez, afin que tout reste normal,
Le passage sacré de l’homme à l’animal,
Ô phédons, ô talmuds, ô korans, dont les piles
Du sombre esprit humain gardent les Thermopyles!

Ô volumes, j’ai fait le grand noviciat;
Je suis plus lourd qu’Accurse et plus sain qu’Alciat;
Triste, j’ai digéré la docte baliverne;
J’ai, du matin au soir, en classe, dans l’Averne,
Fait des auteurs latins le patient blocus;
J’ai remué, suivant le conseil de Flaccus,
Les exemplaires grecs d’une patte nocturne;
Livres, vous semblez tous des fleuves penchant l’urne,
Mais ce qui sort de vous, c’est le dégorgement
De l’éternel brouillard sur les glaciers fumant;
L’esprit se perd en vous comme aux gouffres la sonde;
Vous êtes imposants! vous divisez le monde
En deux opinions principales : savoir
Si vos graves feuillets, votre blanc, votre noir,
Vos textes plus profonds que les flots sur les plages,
Vos luxes de science, et vos fiers étalages
De travail et d’étude, et vos grands apparats,

Sont créés pour les vers ou sont faits pour les rats.

Coup d’oeil général

L’orateur, fût-il âne, essoufflé se repose;
Patience reprit, ayant fait une pause :
Rhéteurs, quel mot divin faites-vous épeler?
Dites, qu’enseignez-vous? que venez-vous parler
D’idéal, de réel, et nous rompre la tête?
Votre réel à vous, c’est la chimère bête,
Ou c’est la loi féroce et dure; ici Baal,
Là Dracon; et l’erreur partout. Votre idéal
C’est quelque faux chef-d’oeuvre ou quelque vertu fausse,
C’est un roi qu’en rampant la flatterie exhausse,
Ou c’est un livre pâle ayant pour qualité
De s’ouvrir sans blesser les yeux de sa clarté;
Honneur au grand Louis! Gloire au tendre Racine!
Ah! l’idéal m’endort, le réel m’assassine,
Grâce! au diable! assez bu! Je prends congé. Bonsoir.
Quelle solution donne votre savoir
Sur ce qui nous étonne ou ce qui nous effraie?
Avez-vous seulement un peu de lueur vraie?
Non. Rien. Sur l’inconnu, l’absolu, le divin,
Sur l’incompréhensible et l’insondable, en vain
L’illuminé contemple et le myope scrute,
Qu’est-ce que vous savez de plus que moi la brute?
Hélas! je sens moi-même, étant votre écolier,
Hommes, ma tête au poids des questions plier;
J’ai sur mon cristallin naïf la taie humaine.
Le prêtre en sait-il plus que le catéchumène?
Le cardinal voit-il mieux que l’enfant de choeur?
L’ombre a la face grave et le profil moqueur;
Et l’ombre, tu le sais, ô Kant, c’est la science.
Sur le premier venu fais-en l’expérience.
Vois, cet homme a blêmi sur sa bible; voici
Qu’il est vieux; l’homme est chauve et le livre est moisi;
Les cheveux ont passé de l’homme sur le livre;
L’homme a voulu tout voir, tout savoir, tout poursuivre,

Tout avoir; secouer le linceul pli par pli;
Il s’est rassasié, repu, gavé, rempli;
Il sait toute la langue et toute la pensée,
Et la géométrie et la théodicée,
La légende crédule et le chiffre sournois;
Il sait l’assyrien, le persan, le chinois,
L’arabe, le gallois, le copte, le gépide,
Le tartare, le basque; eh bien, il est stupide.
Au fond de cette tête où s’accouple et se fond Tout l’idéal avec tout le réel, au fond
De ce polytechnique et de ce polyglotte,
L’immensité du vide et du tombeau sanglote.
Oh! ces sophistes lourds, ces casuistes froids,
De la tourbe ahurie exploitant les effrois,
Tous ces fakirs, latins, grecs, sanscrits, hébraïques,
Tous ces gérontes noirs, tonsurés ou laïques,
Tous ces pharisiens de l’explication,
Ceux-ci venant de Rome et ceux-là de Sion;
Tous ayant leur koran, leur joug, leur évangile,
Leur bible de papier ou leur autel d’argile,
Jurant par Aristote ou par Thomas d’Aquin,
Pour trouver l’éternel furetant un bouquin;
Bègues, sourds; demandant à leur dictionnaire
Le mot, que l’aigle entend murmurer au tonnerre;
Pas un ne comprenant ce splendide credo
Qui s’étoile le soir aux plis du noir rideau,
Pas un ne se laissant aller, l’âme penchante,
À l’attendrissement du point du jour qui chante,
Comme je les ai vus disputer, s’acharner,
Affirmer, contester, et bruire, et vanner,
Les grecs chassant les juifs, les juifs damnant les guèbres,
De la semence d’ombre en un van de ténèbres!
Comme je les ai vus, dressés sur leur séant,
Hagards, les uns, docteurs de leur propre néant,
Ayant l’aveuglement funèbre pour disciple,
Rêvant dans l’empyrée un monstre double ou triple,
Regardant fuir, tandis qu’effarés nous songions,

L’ouragan des erreurs et des religions ,
Épier s’ils verraient passer dans la rafale
Ou le Janus bi-front ou l’Hermès tricéphale!
D’autres, logiciens, métaphysiciens,
Pédagogues, groupés sous les porches anciens,
Discuter l’évidence, et fouiller, rêveurs blêmes,
L’énigme à la lueur livide des systèmes,
Et, combinant les faits, les doutes, les raisons,
Rapprocher, pour souffler dessus, ces noirs tisons!
D’autres, théologaux, notaires de consultes,
Évêques secouant leur foudre au seuil des cultes,
Clercs, chanoines, bedeaux, prédicateurs, abbés,
Dans l’ornière d’un texte ou d’un rite embourbés,
De quelque oiseau mystique adorant l’envergure.
Étouffant par moment le rire de l’augure,
Agiter leurs longs bras et leur surplis jauni
Dans des chaires faisant ventre sur l’infini;
Et, clignant leurs yeux morts sous leurs crânes fossiles,
Assembler le nuage informe des conciles,
Dans Éphèse, dans Reims, dans Arles, dans Embrun,
Sur Dieu, l’être éclatant, l’être effrayant, l’être un!
Et courber leur front chauve, et se pencher encore,
Et chercher à tâtons l’éblouissante aurore,
Et crier : — Voyez-vous quelque chose? Est-ce là?
Qu’en pense Onufrius? qu’en dit Zabarella?
Où donc est l’être? Où donc est la cause première?
Cherchons bien! — Et pendant que l’énorme lumière,
Formidable emplissait le firmament vermeil,
Leur chandelle tâchait d’éclairer le soleil!
Homme, à d’autres instant, enivré de toi-même,
L’aveuglement croissant dans ta prunelle blême,
Tu dis : — C’est moi qui suis. Dieu n’est pas; l’homme est seul.
Est-ce au Gange, à la Mecque, à Thèbe, à Saint-Acheul,
Dans les cornes d’Ammon ou dans la Vénus d’Arle,
Qu’il faut aller chercher ce Dieu dont on nous parle?
Est-ce lui que l’enfant a dans son petit doigt?
Personne ne l’a vu, personne ne le voit,

Cet être où la ferveur des idiots s’attache.
Il est donc bien difforme et bien noir qu’il se cache?
L’homme est visible, lui! c’est lui le conquérant;
C’est lui le créateur! l’homme est beau, l’homme est grand;
L’argile vit sitôt que sa main l’a pétrie;
L’homme est puissant; qui donc créa l’imprimerie,
Et l’aiguille aimantée, et la poudre à canon,
Et la locomotive? Est-ce Jéhovah? non;
C’est l’homme. Qui dressa les splendides culées
Du pont du Gard, au vol des nuages mêlées?
Qui fit le Colisée, et qui le Parthénon?
Qui construisit Paris et Rome? Est-ce Dieu? non;
C’est l’homme. Pas de cime où l’homme roi ne monte.
Il sculpte le rocher, sucre le fruit, et dompte,
Malgré ses désespoirs, sa haine et ses abois,
La bête aux bonds hideux, larve horrible des bois;
Tout ce que l’homme touche, il l’anime ou le pare. —
Bien, crache sur le mur, et maintenant compare.
Le grand ciel étoilé, c’est le crachat de Dieu.
Nier est votre roue et croire est votre essieu.
Hommes, et vous tournez effroyablement vite.
Après l’enfant de choeur, le diacre et le lévite
Chantant alleluia, passe une légion
D’hérétiques criant l’hymne trisagion;
L’homme blanc devient noir de nuance en nuance;
Entre une conscience et une autre conscience
Le fil est court; Rancé coudoie Arnauld; Arnauld
Janséniste confine à Luther huguenot;
Et Luther huguenot touche à Rousseau déiste;
Et Rousseau n’est pas loin de Spinosa; c’est triste,
Ou c’est réjouissant, à ton choix; mais c’est vrai;
L’Horeb, ou Sans-Souci; le Thabor, ou Cirey,
Entre Orphée et Pyrrhon l’humanité trébuche;
Ô Kant, nous tomberions dans quelque obscure embûche,
Nous bêtes, s’il fallait que nous vous suivissions.
L’homme va du blasphème aux superstitions;
Il brave le réel, puis il adore l’ombre;

Il passe son poing vil à travers l’azur sombre,
Jette sa pierre infâme aux saintes régions,
Et croit réparer tout par ses religions,
Par un faux idéal taillé dans la matière,
Par on ne sait quel spectre imitant la lumière,
Par quelque idole vaine et folle qu’il met là,
Et qu’il nomme Zeus ou qu’il appelle Allah.
Il insulte le Dieu, le créateur, l’arbitre;
Puis, inepte et tremblant, raccommode la vitre
Des infinis avec une étoile en papier.
J’ai lu, cherché, creusé, jusqu’à m’estropier.
Ma pauvre intelligence est à peu près dissoute.
Ô qui que vous soyez qui passez sur la route,
Fouaillez-moi, rossez-moi; mais ne m’enseignez pas.
Gardez votre savoir sans but, dont je suis las,
Et ne m’en faites point tourner la manivelle.
Montez-moi sur le dos, mais non sur la cervelle.
Mon frère l’homme, il faut se faire une raison,
Nous sommes vous et nous dans la même prison;
La porte en est massive et la voûte en est dure;
Tu regardes parfois au trou de la serrure,
Et tu nommes cela Science; mais tu n’as
Pas de clef pour ouvrir le fatal cadenas.
J’ai fort compassion de toi, te l’avouerai-je?
Toi qu’une heure vieillit, et qu’une fièvre abrège,
Comment t’y prendrais-tu, dans ton abjection,
Pour feuilleter la vie et la création?
La pagination de l’infini t’échappe.
À chaque instant, lacune, embûche, chausse-trape,
Ratures, sens perdu, doute, feuillet manquant;
Partout la question triple : Comment? Où? Quand?
Qu’est-ce que le serpent? Que veut dire la pomme?
Deux natures parfois se compliquent, et font
Comme un chiffre où la brute avec Adam se fond;
Le singe reparaît sous l’homme palimpseste;
Viens-tu du fratricide et sors-tu de l’inceste,
Comme le dit Moïse? Ou n’es-tu que le fait

Résultant d’un chaos qu’un soleil échauffait,
Être double, être mixte en qui s’est condensée
La matière en instinct, la lumière en pensée,
Le seul marcheur debout, créature sommet
Que l’arbre accepte, auquel la pierre se soumet,
Et que la bête obscure, ayant pour verbe un râle,
Subit en protestant dans sa nuit sépulcrale?
Es-tu le patient dont nous sommes les clous?
As-tu derrière toi le Mal, le grand jaloux?
Contiens-tu quelque flamme auguste qui doit vivre?
Ou n’es-tu qu’une chair qu’un souffle épars enivre,
Qui fera quelques pas et sera de la nuit?
Es-tu le vain brouillard, d’un peu d’aurore enduit,
Qui, prêt à s’effacer, se déforme et chancelle?
As-tu dans toi l’étoile à l’état d’étincelle,
Et seras-tu demain aux séraphins pareil?
Réponds à tout cela, si tu peux. Ton sommeil,
En sais-tu le secret? Connais-tu la frontière
Où l’esprit ailé vient relayer la matière?
Comment le ver s’envole? et par quelle loi, dis,
Les enfers lentement sont promus paradis?
Que sais-tu du parfum? que sais-tu du tonnerre?
Peux-tu guérir l’abcès du volcan poitrinaire?
Qu’est-ce que tes savants t’apprennent? Turrien,
Qui te dira le nom du vent en syrien,
Sait-il son envergure et son itinéraire?
La mamelle de l’ombre est là; peux-tu la traire?
Abundius qui fut diacre d’Anicetus
Sait-il quel ouvrier peint en bleu le lotus?
Baloeus, Surius, Pitsoeus et Cédrène
Savent-ils pourquoi l’aube en larmes est sereine?
L’abbé Poulle ose-t-il en face regarder
L’énigme qu’on entend gémir, chanter, gronder?
As-tu lu dans Lactance ou bien dans Éleuthère
Quelle est la fonction du diamant sous terre?
Sais-tu par dom Poirier ou par monsieur Lejay
De quelle flamme l’oeil des condors est forgé,

Et maître Calepin dit-il dans son glossaire
Où se trempe l’acier dont est faite leur serre?
Saint Thomas connaît-il tous ces noirs Ixions
Qu’on nomme affinités, forces, attractions?
Nicole, qui sait tout, sait-il par quel organe
L’été tire à jamais à lui la salangane,
Et, vainqueur, fait passer la mer au passereau?
Homme, sais-tu comment l’eau nourrit le sureau?
Connais-tu l’hydre orage et le monstre tempête
Qui naît dans le jardin des cieux, dresse la tête,
Glisse et rampe à travers les nuages mouvants,
Et qui flaire la rose effrayante des vents?
Qu’as-tu trouvé? Devant l’évolution sainte
De la vie, admirable et divin labyrinthe,
Ta vue est myopie et ton âme est stupeur.
Vois, ce monde est d’abord un noyau de vapeur
Qui tourne comme un globe énorme de fumée;
Vaste, il bout au soleil qui luit, braise enflammée;
Il bout, puis s’attiédit et se condense, et l’eau
Tombe au centre du large et ténébreux halo;
Puis la terre, encor fange, au fond de l’eau s’amasse;
Sur cette vase on voit ramper une limace,
C’est l’hydre, c’est la vie; et la mer s’arrondit
Autour d’un point qui sort des eaux et qui verdit;
C’est l’île surgissant des profondeurs béantes;
Des vers titans parmi des fougères géantes
Fourmillent; et du bord des boueux archipels
Des colosses se font de monstrueux appels;
L’hippopotame sort de l’immense onde obscure,
Le serpent cherche un flanc où plonger sa piqûre,
De vaste millepieds se traînent, le kraken
Semble un rocher vivant sous l’algue et le lichen,
Et le poulpe, agitant sa touffe contractile,
Tâche d’étreindre au vol l’affreux ptérodactyle;
Puis des millions d’ans se passent; du roseau
Sort l’arbre, et l’air devient respirable à l’oiseau,
Et la chauve-souris décroît, et voici l’aigle,

Le vent fraîchit, le flot baisse, la mer se règle,
L'île soudée à l'île ébauche un continent,
Et l'homme apparaît nu, pensif et rayonnant;
C'est fini; l'aube émerge, et le recul immense
Des monstres, du chaos, des ténèbres, commence;
La tempête de l'être a cessé de souffle;
Et l'on entend des voix sur la terre parler;
Le typhon s'amoindrit et devient l'infusoire;
Et l'antique bataille, inextinguible et noire,
Du dragon et de l'hydre, avec son fauve bruit,
Fuit dans le microscope et se perd dans la nuit;
L'effrayant désormais plonge dans l'invisible;
L'infiniment petit s'ouvre, gouffre terrible;
L'épouvante s'éclipse après avoir régné;
L'horreur, devant Adam qui doit être épargné,
Pas à pas rétrograde et rentre inassouvie
Dans cet enfoncement sinistre de la vie;
L'azur prodigieux s'épanouit au ciel.
Et maintenant, savant, penseur officiel,
Rat du budget, souris d'une bibliothèque,
Académicien bon voisin de l'évêque,
Quel compte te rends-tu de tout cela, réponds?
Comment rattaches-tu les arches de ces ponts
Au grand centre de l'ombre? avec quelles besicles,
Docteur, regardes-tu les formidables cycles?
Tu t'enfermes, craintif, dans le roman sacré;
Mieux vaut mutiler Dieu que fâcher son curé;
Et Cuvier, traître au vrai, pour être pair de France,
Trouble des temps profonds la sombre transparence.
Pour augmenter la brume, hélas! les professeurs
Ajoutent doctement de l'encre aux épaisseurs,
Et l'institut nous montre avec un air de gloire
L'énigme plus opaque et la source plus noire.
Ô le bon vieux palais gardé par deux lions!
La science met là tous ses tabellions,
Et l'on se complimente et l'on se félicite;
Et moi l'âne, qui suis parmi vous en visite,

Je n’aurais jamais cru que l’homme triomphât
À ce point de son vide, et, si nul, fût si fat!
Avec Diafoirus Bridoison fraternise;
Le dindon introduit l’oie et la divinise;
Vrai! quand la comète entre au sanhédrin des cieux
Et des astres fixant sur sa splendeur leurs yeux,
Le grand soleil, auquel tout l’empyrée adhère,
Ne fait pas plus de fête à ce récipiendaire.
Pleure, homme! — Et que sais-tu de ton propre destin?
Dis? quoi de ton cerveau? quoi de ton intestin?
Quoi d’en haut? quoi d’en bas? depuis ton vieux déluge,
Dis, ce que c’est qu’un prêtre et ce que c’est qu’un juge,
Le sais-tu? te vois-tu serpenter, dévier,
Crouler? as-tu sondé la mort, trou de l’évier?
Même en considérant Dieu comme hors de cause,
Comme clair dans l’esprit et prouvé dans la chose,
Même en nous laissant, nous les brutes, de côté,
Comprendre ces mots, Sort, Sépulcre, Humanité;
Savoir la profondeur de ce puits où tu tombes,
Quelle espèce de jour passe aux fentes des tombes,
À quel commencement cette fin aboutit;
Savoir si l’homme, en qui l’éternel retentit,
Est ou n’est pas trompé par ses sombres envies
D’autres ascensions, d’autres sorts, d’autres vies;
Savoir s’il est épi dans le céleste blé;
Savoir si l’alchimiste inconnu, le Voilé,
Soude en ce creuset morne appelé sépulture
Le monde antérieur à sa sphère future;
Si vous fûtes jadis, si vous fûtes ailleurs
Plus beaux ou plus hideux, plus méchants ou meilleurs;
Si l’épreuve refait à l’âme une innocence;
Si l’homme sur la terre est en convalescence;
Si vous redeviendrez divins au jour marqué;
Si cette chair, limon sur votre être appliqué,
Argile à qui le temps avare se mesure,
N’est que le pansement d’une ancienne blessure;
Si quelqu’un finira par lever l’appareil;

Savoir si chaque étoile et si chaque soleil
Est une roue en flamme aux lumières changeantes
Dont les créations diverses sont les jantes
Et dont la vie immense et sainte est le moyeu;
Voir le fond du ciel noir et le fond du ciel bleu,
Homme, cela n’est pas possible, et j’en défie,
Christ, ta religion! Kant, ta philosophie!
Le gouffre répond-il à qui vient l’appeler?
Non. L’effort est perdu. Déchiffrer, épeler,
Apprendre, étudier, n’est qu’un pas en arrière.
L’esprit revient meurtri du choc de la barrière;
L’homme est après la marche un peu moins avancé;
Hélas! X Y Z en sait moins qu’A B C;
L’espérance a les yeux plus ouverts que l’algèbre;
J’ai toujours entendu, devant le seuil funèbre
Des problèmes obscurs qui mettent sur les dents
Les chercheurs, et qui font griffonner aux pédants
Tant d’affreux in-quarto, ruine du libraire,
L’ignorance hennir et la science braire.
Je viens de voir le blême édifice construit
Par l’homme et la chimère, avec l’ombre et le bruit,
La rumeur, la clameur, la surdité, la haine.
De quoi je sors? Je sors de la besogne vaine;
Je viens de travailler, Kant, à la vision.
J’ai vu faire à Zéro son évolution.
Sur la montagne informe où la brume séjourne,
Dans l’obscur aquilon la Tour des langues tourne
Sur quatre ailes : calcul, dogme, histoire, raison;
Les savants, gerbe à gerbe, y portent leur moisson;
Et, tombant, surgissant, passantes éternelles,
S’évitant, se cherchant, les quatre sombres ailes
Se poursuivent toujours sans s’atteindre jamais;
Elles portent en bas la lueur des sommets,
Et rapportent en haut le gouffre, et la folie
Des souffles les tourmente et les hâte et les plie.
L’intérieur est plein d’on ne sait quel brouillard;
Le râle du savoir s’y mêle au cri de l’art;

Ô machine farouche! on dirait que les meules
Sont vivantes, et vont et roulent toutes seules;
Et l'on entend gémir l'esprit humain broyé;
Tout l'édifice a l'air d'un monstre foudroyé;
On voit là s'agiter, geindre, monter, descendre,
Ces pâles nourrisseurs qui font du pain de cendre,
Arius, Condillac, Locke, Érasme, Augustin;
L'un verse là son Dieu, l'autre offre son destin;
On s'appelle, on s'entr'aide, on s'insulte, on se hèle;
On gravit, charge aux reins, la frémissante échelle;
Sous les pas des douteurs on voit trembler des ponts
Où le prêtre jadis cloua ses vains crampons;
L'erreur rôde, la foi chante, l'orgueil s'exalte,
Et l'on se presse, et point de trêve, et pas de halte;
Le crépuscule filtre aux poutres du plafond
Par les toiles qu'Ignace et Machiavel font;
Tous vont; celui-ci grimpe et celui-là se vautre;
Tous se parlent; pas un n'entend ce que dit l'autre;
L'aile adresse en fuyant à l'aile qu'elle suit
Un discours qui se perd dans un chaos de bruit;
Les meules, ébranlant la tour de leur tangage,
Échangent sous la roue on ne sait quel langage;
Les portes pleines d'ombre en tournant sur leurs gonds
Ont l'air de grommeler de monstrueux jargons;
L'oeuvre est étrange; on voit les engrenages moudre
Le bien, le mal, le faux, le vrai, l'aube, la foudre,
Le jour, la nuit, les Tyrs, les Thèbes, les Sions,
Et les réalités, et les illusions;
On vide sur l'amas des rouages horribles
D'effrayants sacs de mots qu'on appelle les bibles,
Les livres, les écrits, les textes, les védas;
Le diable est au grenier qui voit par un judas;
À mesure qu'aux trous des cribles, noire ou blanche,
La mouture en poussière aveuglante s'épanche,
La mort la jette aux vents, ironique meunier;
On entend cette poudre affirmer et nier,
Disputer, applaudir, et pousser des huées,

Et rire, en s’envolant dans les fauves nuées;
Et des bouches au loin s’ouvrant avidement
À ces atomes fous que la nuit va semant;
Et cette nourriture a l’odeur de la tombe;
Le faîte de la tour se lézarde et surplombe;
Et d’autres travailleurs montent d’autres fardeaux,
Chacun ayant son sac de songes sur le dos;
Et les quatre ailes vont dans l’ouragan qui passe,
Si vaste qu’en faisant un cercle dans l’espace,
La basse est dans l’enfer et la haute est au ciel.
Je viens de ce moulin formidable, Babel.

L’Âne patience entre dans le détail

L’âne à ce qu’il disait rêva dans le silence,
Comme on suit du regard une pierre qu’on lance,
Puis ajouta :
 — Serrons de près les questions.
Veux-tu que nous causions et que nous discutions?
Soit.
        Quoique le lecteur, à Sainte-Geneviève,
Trouve peu d’os à moelle et peu d’auteurs à sève;
Quoique, à l’Escurial, où Philippe pria,
Le plafond sépulcral de la Libraria,
Couvrant dossiers, cahiers, brochures, fascicules,
Ressemble à de la nuit noyant des crépuscules;
Quoique Oxford la savante ait, sous ses hauts châssis,
Moins de textes vivants que de centons moisis;
Quoique le maréchal vicomte de Turenne,
Caboche de soldat brutalement sereine,
Ait jugé, pataugeant dans les in-octavos,
La Rupertine bonne à loger ses chevaux;
Quoique l’Arsenal fasse, alors qu’on le secoue,
Tourner tant de néant sur son pupitre à roue;
Quoique, poussant des cris de triomphe, un essaim
De corbeaux, contemplant l’institut, son voisin,
Perche à la Mazarine, et que la Vaticane
Ait des angles si noirs que le diable y ricane,
Hommes, vous êtes fiers quand vous considérez
Vos bouquins reliés, catalogués, vitrés,
Avec vos rhéteurs dieux et vos pédants principes
Taillés en marbre jaune et juchés sur des cippes,
Et, j’en conviens, on a le vertige en voyant
Ce sombre alignement de livres, effrayant,
Inouï, se perdant sous les bahuts qui tremblent,
Ces vastes rendez-vous de volumes, qui semblent
Les légions du faux et du vrai s’avançant
En bon ordre, sous l’oeil trouble du temps présent,

Pour se livrer combat au fond des hypogées,
Et de l’esprit humain les batailles rangées;
Certes, j’admets que vous, les hommes, soyez vains
De cet entassement épique d’écrivains,
De tous ces papyrus et de toutes ces bibles;
C’est beau de voir Saumaise, agitant ses vieux cribles,
Tamiser ces monceaux d’esprit sur les pavés;
C’est beau d’avoir l’Exode avec des bois gravés
Par Alde de Venise ou Windelin de Spire;
Je conviens qu’on retient son souffle et qu’on respire
À peine quand on voit, dans vos doctes hangars,
Les tombes frissonner sous les piocheurs hagards;
C’est beau de pouvoir dire : Admirez les estampes;
Ici Virgile avec un laurier sur les tempes,
Là Chapelain avec plus de laurier encor;
Voici des manuscrits étalant sur fond d’or
Mainte arabesque pure, inextricable et nette
À rendre Goujon pâle et jaloux Biscornette;
Çà, c’est Newton; voyez quel beau Félibien!
Voici le grand, voici le vrai, voici le bien;
Barmne est là pour ses Lois, saint Thomas pour sa Somme,
Platon pour son Timée; et l’on comprend que l’homme
Fasse la roue avec tous ses livres au dos;
Mais, ô dignes humains pris sous tant de bandeaux,
Ce profond répertoire où la doctrine abonde,
Ce sombre cabinet de lecture du monde,
Tous ces textes, qui font le silence autour d’eux,
Depuis l’infortiat jusqu’à l’in-trente-deux,
Et d’où l’odeur des ans et des peuples s’exhale,
Cette bibliopole auguste et colossale
Qu’on voit, jetant au loin sa lueur aux cerveaux,
Flamboyer au-dessus de tous vos noirs travaux,
Comme la cheminée énorme de l’usine;
Toute cette raison que l’homme emmagasine,
Étageant grecs sur juifs, juifs sur égyptiens;
Que le temps sur le tas vient vider par hottées,
Ces Pascals, ces Longins, ces Jobs, ces Timothées,

Doux, sévères, touchants, mystérieux, railleurs,
Qu’est-ce si tout cela ne vous rend pas meilleurs?
Par mon échine illustre et semblable aux coulées
De laves du Gibel âpres et dentelées,
Par les traductions du vieux père Brumoy,
Par l’honneur que m’a fait Christ en montant sur moi
Comme si l’âne était un degré de Calvaire,
Je le jure devant l’aube et la primevère,
Devant la fleur, devant la source et le ravin,
Digne Kant, je suis prêt à proclamer divin,
Vénérable, excellent, et j’admire et j’accepte
L’enseignement duquel on sortirait inepte,
Ignare, aveugle, sourd, buse, idiot; mais bon.
Mais apprends par coeur Jove, Ughel et Casaubon,
Baronius, Ibas d’Edesse, Théétète;
Médie Boctoner à fond; romps-toi la tête
Au sens qu’Eunapius donne à tel ou tel mot;
Va de l’abbé Tudesche au cardinal Cramaud;
Nourris-toi de Bohier, vieille prose bourrue;
Dévore Ammirato, Walinge, Pellagrue;
Vide résolument jusqu’à la lie et bois
André Schott, Sylvius autrement dit Dubois,
Massillon qui pérore et Fléchier qui harangue,
Docte Kant, je consens à fourbir de ma langue
Tous ces volumes, ceux qui sont noirs d’encre, et ceux
Qui sont tachés de sang, et ceux qui sont crasseux,
Y compris les fermoirs, la basane et les cuivres,
Si tu te sens, après avoir lu tous ces livres,
D’humeur à me donner un coup de pied de moins.
Si l’on veut faire grâce, en leurs lugubres coins,
À tous ces vieux vélins jargonnant tous les styles,
Ce qu’on peut dire, ô Kant, c’est qu’ils sont inutiles.
Et, philosophe! au fait, comment tous ces monceaux
De tomes, gravement contemplés par les sots,
Pourraient-ils enfanter un résultat quelconque?
Un rien les dépareille ou les brouille ou les tronque.
Puis ils se font la guerre entre eux, je te l’ai dit.

Le volume savant hait le tome érudit;
Le littéraire gourme avec le politique;
On joute à qui sera le plus paralytique,
Le plus obscur, le plus diffus, le plus pesant,
Et du juste, du vrai, du beau, le plus absent;
C’est à qui se fera lourd, majestueux, vaste,
À qui sera poudreux avec le plus de faste;
Car tous ces livres sont des vivants ténébreux;
L’oeil qui les voit croit voir des grands-prêtres hébreux,
Et quand de leurs casiers le jour perce les fentes,
Ils ont sur leurs rayons des airs d’hiérophantes;
Ils sont l’autorité régnant dans son caveau,
L’esprit de l’homme avec reliure de veau;
Avoir force feuillets, notes, renvois, chapitres,
Faire pousser des cris terribles aux pupitres,
Être un livre de poids par-dessus tout, voilà
L’ambition, le but, la gloire; et pour cela
Le bénédictin creuse, édifie et laboure;
Le volume veut être imposant, il se bourre
De blanc, de noir, de faits, de vent, de vieux, de neuf,
Et la grenouille idée enfle le livre boeuf.
Dans l’olympe farouche et sinistre des livres,
Lieu polaire où l’on prend les vitres pour des givres;
Dans l’immense grenier du bouquiniste humain
Où l’étude et la nuit scellent leur triste hymen,
Depuis que l’homme écrit, que l’esprit se fourvoie,
Que la première plume a fui la première oie;
Dans ce dock du grimoire universel, tunnel
Et puits du griffonnage antique et solennel,
Où l’erreur sur l’erreur s’amoncelle, où s’entasse
La savantasserie avec le savantasse,
Gouffre où sans voir l’ennui, ce miasme, on le sent,
Où s’est faite, de siècle en siècle grossissant,
Comme un ulcère croît, comme grandit un chancre,
L’horrible alluvion du déluge de l’encre,
Dans ce dépôt qu’emplit le froid morne des ifs,
Il faut les voir rangés, ces testaments massifs,

Ces volumes titans dont un fort de la halle
Aurait peine à porter la lourdeur idéale,
Ces tomes à stature écrasante, ulémas
Des lutrins monstrueux et des puissants formats;
Ceux-ci bardés de cuir, ceux-là vêtus de moire,
Ils encombrent des temps la ténébreuse armoire;
D’autres ouvrages sont éphémères, charnels,
Réels, mortels, humains; eux sont les éternels;
La cendre, qui du livre est l’austère rosée,
Leur arrive à travers les astres tamisée;
Chacun d’eux est un fort, chacun d’eux est un mont,
Chacun d’eux est un culte; eux des livres, fi donc!
Ils sont des avestas, ils sont des lévitiques,
Chacun d’eux est le Livre; ils sont les hauts portiques
Et les larges piliers de la maison d’Isis;
Ils sont les chênes noirs, vénérables, moisis,
De la Dodone obscure et lugubre des âmes;
On en entend sortir des voix de vieilles femmes;
Et l’ombre qui descend de leurs rameaux touffus
Va du Philothéos jusqu’au Polymorphus;
Ils sont les dolmens lourds et branlants; les registres
Pétrifiés du monde aveugle et fou des cuistres;
Des espèces de blocs funèbres et bavards;
Eux des livres, fi donc! ils sont des boulevards;
Ils sont les élégants sacrés de la doctrine,
Les sphinx géants ayant l’oracle en leur narine,
Les colosses pensifs de la religion,
Ils sont des dieux. — Mais gare au diable Légion!
Gare à ce gamin sombre appelé petit livre!
Le format portatif est un monstre; il délivre,
Il proteste, il combat; c’est hideux, c’est criant;
Comme avec son épingle il crochète en riant
La serrure de fer d’une bible bastille!
Il a la clef des champs, ce brigand; il pétille,
Il éclate; il est clair, rapide, âpre, éloquent;
Il court, et met le feu partout. Oui, mon vieux Kant,
Poussière fulminante éparse sur les tables,

Les livres légers sont aux pesants redoutables;
Un frêle Capulet tue un gros Montaigu;
Un Diderot de poche, imprenable, exigu,
Invisible, détruit la montagne de tomes
Que font les Augustins mêlés aux Chrysostomes;
Que Laplace ait un jour sur sa calme hauteur
(Mais il ne l'aura point, car on est sénateur)
Le caprice de faire un almanach sauvage
Et sincère, à deux sous, et voyez le ravage!
L'almanach grimpe droit à l'azur, court, descend,
Monte, ôte à saint Michel son nimbe, va chassant
Saint Médard de son ciel, saint Pierre de sa loge, Extermine Turnèbe, Arnobius, Euloge,
Moïse, Bossuet et l'abbé de Corbeil,
Et casse Josué, gendarme du soleil;
Et c'est fini, voilà la Légende dorée
Croulant sous l'ironique et splendide empyrée;
0Un tout petit Montaigne, adroit, glissant, rongeur,
Malgré leur profondeur et malgré leur largeur,
Va démolir Gennade et Thégan par la base;
Un leste Beaumarchais en quelques instants rase,
Avec leur clientèle honorable d'abus,
0Les de Maistre les plus caducs, les plus barbus;
Saint-Évremond accourt, moqueur, alerte, ingambe,
Et maintenant cherchez Symmachus, Alegambe,
Et le père Gretser et le père Poussin!
Paul-Louis colletant saint Luc, quel assassin!
Un essaim de pamphlets qui s'échappe dégrade,
Sur leur lit de justice ou leur lit de parade,
Sigonius, Prudence, Alde et le sieur Pithou;
D'où viennent-ils? j'ignore; — où vont-ils? Dieu sait où!
Mais ils mangent les saints jusqu'aux dernières plumes;
Sur les tomes debout ainsi que les enclumes
De la forge du deuil, de l'erreur et du vent,
Ils se répandent gais, cassant, rageant, bravant,
Des révolutions anarchique avant-garde;
Et l'on entend courir dans la brume hagarde

Le pas tumultueux de ces trotte-menu;
Et ce désordre est fait par ce peuple inconnu
Au nez du marguillier et sous l’oeil de l’édile;
Ainsi que l’ichneumon détruit le crocodile
Le doute in-dix-huit bat le dogme in-folio;
Malheur à l’alcoran qu’attaque un fabliau!
Un missel sur qui plane un couplet est malade;
Je plains l’infortiat qu’une puce escalade,
L’infortiat fût-il plein de rois et de dieux,
Si la puce, agitant son stylet radieux,
Saute, atome effrayant, la largeur de la terre Et la hauteur d’un siècle, et se nomme Voltaire.
— Mais, dis-tu, ce baudet n’a pas le sens commun.
Il veut un résultat; n’en est-ce dont pas un?
Ce combat des penseurs est sublime. — À merveille.
Qu’en sort-il? Baal meurt, l’ours fuit devant l’abeille, Soit. On lutte, on s’acharne, assaut, mêlée à mort!
Et la science pique et la sagesse mord;
Que reste-t-il au coeur, la bataille finie?
Hélas! la nudité d’une immense ironie;
Tous les profonds instincts glacés et grelottants;
Kant, ce n’est pas cela que de l’homme j’attends.
L’esprit triomphe. À bas le vieux dogme! on l’écrase,
Il tombe; le passé s’effondre; table rase;
Bien. Plus je suis vainqueur, plus je suis assombri .
Une négation est un sinistre abri;
Où mettrai-je mon âme? est-ce dans un décombre?
Je conviens que je dois à cette troupe sombre,
À ces démolisseurs de l’antique fatras,
Tout le logis qu’on peut avoir dans un plâtras.
La pioche, et pas de toit; la faux, et pas de gerbe.
Est-ce donc là le but de ton effort superbe,
Homme, architecte auguste, être prédestiné?
Satan fait avorter Adam, son puîné;
J’en gémis; l’homme manque à sa tâche divine.
Je cherche un édifice et je trouve une ruine.

La nuit autour de l’homme

J’ai des objections à l’homme, tu le vois.
Qu’il existe une loi, mêlée aux vagues lois
Que nous entrevoyons par nos pâles fenêtres,
Qui, dans l’échelle obscure et tremblante des êtres,
Place au-dessus de nous ce pleureur, ce rieur,
Qui fasse l’âne aux fils d’Adam inférieur,
Qui mette moins de verbe en plus de bouche, et rende
L’endettement plus court dans l’oreille plus grande,
C’est possible; après tout, ça regarde l’auteur;
Que l’homme ait ou n’ait pas le droit sur sa hauteur
D’être traité par nous d’une façon civile,
Et d’être salué roi par la longue file
D’animaux que Noé dans son arche classait,
Par le lion ayant dans sa griffe un placet,
Par le corbeau tenant dans son bec un hommage;
Qu’il dise : — Dieu n’a fait qu’Adam à son image; —
Peu m’importe; je parle à cette majesté
Crûment, je ne suis pas de bassesse frotté,
Je suis franc; ma parole est âpre, mais certaine,
Car je préfère, étant frère de La Fontaine,
Et quelque peu cousin d’Agrippa d’Aubigné,
Le réel, même rude, au faux, même peigné,
Les toisons de la brute aux perruques de l’homme;
Je ne fais pas ma cour, Kant, je suis économe
D’admirer sottement et lâchement le roi,
Et je trouve en Dangeau plus d’âne que dans moi.
Si l’homme est majesté, cette majesté boite.
Quand la mort a serré ce pantin dans sa boîte,
En sort-il un esprit qui s’envole? Psyché
Jaillit-elle à travers l’arlequin démanché?
Je n’en sais rien. Cherchez. Il fait nuit.
            Ce qui reste
Évident dans la brume adorable ou funeste,
C’est que c’est un vivant médiocre et mauvais.

Je deviendrais méchant, si je ne me sauvais,
Rien que pour avoir vu de près ce pauvre hère.
Je n’estime pas plus son grelot que sa haire,
Et son austérité que son relâchement;
Quand sa bouche dit vrai par hasard, son oeil ment;
Fumée, il s’évapore en toutes les emphases;
Son ventre et son cerveau n’ont point les mêmes phases.
La terre a son instinct, la lune a sa raison;
Entre l’air et son souffle il met une cloison;
Au lieu d’être le vaste esprit cosmopolite,
Il est toujours d’un lieu quelconque satellite,
Juif, grec, anglais dans l’Inde, au Brésil portugais;
Il rêve des édens et fait des paraguays ,
Il se tient hors du code ou hors de la nature;
Las, refroidi, blasé, s’il veut par aventure
Devenir vertueux, quels lugubres essais!
Il ne sait que passer de l’excès à l’excès,
De l’abus au défaut, de l’alcôve à la haine,
D’Ève au cloître, et que fuir don Juan dans Origène.
Voletant vaguement de la Trappe à Paphos,
Mouche heurtant de l’aile au soupirail du faux,
Bourdon de tous les dieux et de toutes les vitres,
Donnant pour moule aux fronts les casques et les mitres,
Forgeron d’imposture, ouvrier de fureurs,
Fabriquant au mensonge une armure d’erreurs,
Il n’est pas d’épithète outrageuse, honnie,
Vile, dont on ne puisse orner sa litanie.
Certe, on se tromperait de croire que l’azur,
Les sphères, les levers d’étoiles, l’éther pur,
Et le nimbe solaire et l’auréole astrale
Filtrent dans l’âme humaine en lumière morale.
Kant, c’est un malheur d’être une voûte à cachot,
Une cave fermée au ciel splendide et chaud,
Une maison de nuit. Hélas! l’homme en est une.
Il a cette mauvaise et fatale fortune
Que son obscurité résiste obstinément
Au lys, à la colombe, à l’aube, au firmament.

Rien, ni l'Etna qui semble en braise se dissoudre,
Ni le passage vaste et fuyant de la foudre,
Ni la lune, ébauchant quelque sacré contour,
Pas même l'évidence éclatante du jour,
Pas même le feu noir qui dévore Sodome,
Rien ne peut éclairer l'intérieur de l'homme.
Ô Kant, l'homme est drapé de rêves mal tissus.
Vêtu d'un haillon sombre, il porte par-dessus
Une pourpre d'orgueil prise aux fausses sagesses.
Il est fils des géants mariés aux singesses;
Il a plus de grimace encor que de grandeur;
Son profil de beauté d'un profil de laideur
Se double, et son sublime adhère au ridicule
De si près qu'on le croit fait pour le crépuscule.
Aussi quelle ombre en lui! quelle ombre autour de lui!
Il sent sous tous ses pas trembler le point d'appui,
Ce qu'il espère étant presque ce qu'il redoute;
Un flot de trouble passe après un flot de doute;
Tout se résout en gouffre, en chute, en tremblement
Sur on ne sait quel vague et blême escarpement,
En ouverture sombre, en cécité muette,
Tâtonnement au docte et vertige au poète;
Et toujours, au-dessus du lugubre horizon,
Et de votre savoir et de votre raison,
L'idole, le cromlech, l'autel, dressent leur cime
Que blanchit un rayon monstrueux de l'abîme.
Mais du moins faites-vous ce qu'il faudrait pour voir
Un peu plus de clarté dans votre cerveau noir?
Point. La routine au fond du néant vous isole.
Vous avez tout, parole, écriture, boussole,
Vapeur, imprimerie, et scalpel et compas;
Faites-vous donc du jour avec cela? Non pas.
Avez-vous des esprits, des plongeurs, des génies,
De grands cerveaux ouvrant des portes infinies,
Des puisatiers géants creusant au ciel des trous,
Des penseurs, des trouveurs? — Pardieu! — Qu'en faites-vous?

Conduite de l’homme vis-à-vis des enfants

Et l’âne s’écria : — Pauvres fous! Dieu vous livre
L’enfant, du paradis des anges encore ivre;
Vite, vous m’empoignez ce marmot radieux,
Ayant trop de clarté, trop d’oreilles, trop d’yeux,
Et vous me le fourrez dans un ténébreux cloître;
On lui colle un gros livre au menton comme un goître;
Et vingt noirs grimauds font dégringoler des cieux,
Ô douleur! ce charmant petit esprit joyeux;
On le tire, on le tord, on l’allonge, on le tanne,
Tantôt en uniforme, et tantôt en soutane;
Un beau jour Trissotin l’examine, un préfet
Le couronne; et c’est dit : un imbécile est fait.
Glycère et Jeanneton, ces deux filles célestes,
Qui courent dans Virgile et Ronsard, sont moins lestes,
Quand Sylvain les poursuit, le fauve jouvenceau,
À trousser leur jupon pour passer un ruisseau,
Un singe est moins agile à gober une pêche,
Les baleiniers, armant leurs pirogues de pêche,
Sont moins prompts à lancer leur barque au flot mouvant
Dès que d’un squale en marche ils entendent l’évent,
En frappant dans ses mains Bonaparte a moins vite
Chassé l’aigle tudesque et l’aigle moscovite
Qu’un pédant n’est rapide à défaire un esprit.
Oh! que de fois, depuis qu’hélas! on m’entreprit,
J’ai vu l’abrutisseur en chef, le grand pontife
Qui, lugubre, a le plus de crasse dans sa griffe,
Dans l’antre où se tenaient nos régents, nos dragons
Les plus chauves, les plus goutteux, les plus bougons,
Entrer, tenant par l’aile ou la patte sanglante
Une pauvre petite âme toute tremblante,
Et dire, en la jetant aux vieux : Plumez-moi ça!
Je me souviens des cris que plus d’une poussa
Pendant que son plumage auroral, son enfance,
Sa blancheur, sa candeur, sa gaîté sans défense,

Sous les vils ongles noirs d’un rustre aux yeux éteints,
Tombaient, duvet charmant, et que les sacristains
Heureux de voir l’oiseau tout nu dans leurs mains dures
Balayaient ces splendeurs des cieux au tas d’ordures!
L’aile pourtant n’est point arrachée au moignon;
Elle repousse grise et faite au cabanon;
L’enfant vit; nul ne peut dire : Cette âme est morte;
L’âme prend la couleur du verrou de la porte,
Voilà tout, et son œil clignote; et maintenant,
Avec un encrier au croupion, traînant
Bréviaires, gradus, glossaires, cent volumes,
Toute la cuistrerie engluée à tes plumes,
Vole donc, alouette, au fond du libre azur!
La sacristie, hélas! fait un deleatur
Du mystérieux D qui sert de majuscule
Au mot DIEU flamboyant dans notre crépuscule;
Elle éteint dans les fronts les rayons libéraux.
Vous mutilez des coeurs, ah, niais! ah, bourreaux!
Et vous raccourcissez des âmes! et vous êtes
Dans l’auguste forêt d’horribles ciseaux bêtes!
Vous tondez les instincts, vous rognez les cerveaux;
Sur le patron des vieux vous taillez les nouveaux;
De la création vous troublez l’équilibre;
Ignorant que tout être est fait pour croître libre,
Pour donner telle fleur et vivre en tel milieu,
Que toute âme a sa forme intime devant Dieu,
Et que toute nature a droit à sa broussaille,
Vous tronquez des talents, de même qu’à Versaille,
Ô brutes, vous changez en pains de sucre verts
Le cèdre et le cyprès, géants d’ombre couverts,
Sans même voir, parmi vos bronzes et vos marbres,
L’humiliation de tous ces pauvres arbres,
L’ennui de l’oranger fait pomme, et le chagrin
Des ifs taillés en cône autour du boulingrin.
Pédagogues! toujours c’est ainsi que vous faites.
Tout l’esprit humain doit se mouler sur vos têtes;
Pégase doit brouter dans votre basse-cour,

L’aile morte, et manger de votre foin. Le jour
Où, de votre perruque arrangeant les volutes,
Fiers, perchés sur Zoïle et Batteux, vous voulûtes
Définir le génie, expliquer la beauté,
Les mauvais estomacs ont dit : Sobriété;
Les myopes ont dit : Soyons ternes; la clique
Des précepteurs, geignant d’un air mélancolique,
A décrété : Le beau, c’est un mur droit et nu.
Donc Rubens est trop rouge et Puget trop charnu;
L’art est maigre; Vénus serait plus belle, étique.
Shakspeare, ce satan de votre art poétique,
Prodigue image, idée et vie à chaque pas;
La nature, imitant Shakspeare, ne voit pas
Sur une vieille pierre une place vacante
Sans la donner à l’herbe ou l’offrir à l’acanthe;
Le lierre énorme où l’art mystérieux se plaît
Emplit Heidelberg comme il emplit Hamlet;
Vous coupez cette ronce auguste qui soupire;
Vous tombez à grands coups de serpe sur Shakspeare,
Marauds, et vous frappez, jusqu’à n’en laisser rien,
Sur le grand chêne où flotte un hymne aérien.
À qui donc croyez-vous persuader, ô cuistres,
Que le beau, que le vrai vous ont pris pour ministres,
Et qu’Horace va dire : Hic lucidus ordo,
Parce que vous tirez des crétins au cordeau!
N’est-il pas odieux, ô Jean-Jacque, ô Molière,
Ô d’Aubigné, du droit puissant auxiliaire,
Qui disais en voyant un roi : Qu’est-ce que c’est?
Montaigne, mon bon Michel que son père faisait
Éveiller le matin au son de la musique,
Diderot qui raillais tout le vieil art phtisique,
Ô libre Hoffmann, planant dans les rêves fougueux,
N’est-il pas désolant, dites, de voir ces gueux,
Tatoués de latin, de grec, d’hébreu, ces cancres
Dont l’âme prend un bain dans la noirceur des encres,
Exécuter l’enfance en leurs blêmes couvents!
Ne sont-ils pas hideux, ces faux docteurs, savants

À donner au progrès une incurable entorse,
Commençant par l’ennui pour finir par la force,
Du bâillement allant volontiers au bâillon,
Logiques, de Boileau concluant Trestaillon,
Vantant Bonald, couvrant de béates exergues
Piet, Cornet d’Incourt et Clausel de Coussergues,
Tâchant d’éteindre au fond des bleus éthers!
N’est-il pas monstrueux de voir ces magisters,
Casernés dans l’horreur de leur Isis occulte,
Poser sur l’avenir qui s’envole en tumulte
Avec l’emportement d’Achille et de Roland,
Ayant dans l’oeil l’éclair de Vasco s’en allant
Ou de Jason partant pour la plage colchique,
Leur bâton de sergent instructeur monarchique,
Et crier aux esprits : À droite! alignement!
Écolâtres, au fond de votre enseignement
Est Rome, enfermant l’âme en sa funèbre enceinte;
Vous êtes les prévôts de la science sainte
D’où jaillissant Newton et Watt, les caporaux
De l’art divin qui vit vibrer Sienne et Paros;
Le vil marais vous charme et votre oeil le préfère;
Vous feriez un étang, si l’on vous laissait faire,
De l’océan tordant ses flots sur les galets;
En forgeant des pédants, vous créez des valets;
En faisant le front bas vous faites l’âme basse;
Qu’un de vos patients chuchote dans la classe,
Qu’il ose relever son museau d’écolier,
Et se gratter un peu le cou sous son collier,
Ô révolution! anarchie! il vous semble
Que l’alphabet lui-même entre vos pattes tremble,
Que l’F et que le B vont se prendre le bec,
Que l’O tourne sa roue aux cornes de l’Y,
Horreur! et qu’on va voir le point, bille fatale,
Tomber enfin sur l’I, ce bilboquet tantale!
Votre système est vain, votre empirisme est faux.
Ayez donc la charrue avant d’avoir la faux.
Çà, vous figurez-vous, parlons net, camarades,

Qu’on est un vrai docteur pour avoir pris ses grades,
Et qu’on sait quelque chose en sortant de chez vous?
Que la grande nature, aux bruits vastes et doux,
Belle, n’enseigne rien à l’esprit qu’elle élève;
Et qu’Adam, ébloui de l’éden, épris d’Ève,
Attendait, pour que Dieu tout à fait le créât,
Qu’Iblis lui fît passer le baccalauréat?
Non, la nature au fond pourrait suffire seule;
Elle sait tout, elle est nourrice, étant aïeule!

Conduite de l’homme vis-à-vis des génies

C’est en dehors des lois que vous faites, pédants,
Que plane l’harmonie aux grands hymnes grondants,
Et le papier réglé par une main classique
Est du papier réglé, mais n’est pas la musique.
Qu’on doit fourrer, vivants, les aigles, les griffons,
En cage dans les trous de vos dogmes profonds,
Que l’essor du penseur se mesure à vos mètres,
Qu’il doit vous consulter, vous les bedeaux des lettres,
Vous les abbés du goût, hurlant à l’unisson :
Nous sommes le savoir, nous sommes la raison!
Que vous avez, vous seuls, ces dons sacrés sur terre,
Et que chacun de vous en est propriétaire;
Que l’académie est, que la sorbonne vit;
Que l’antique sentier qu’à la file on suivit
Est la route sacrée, et qu’il faut faire en sorte
Qu’on n’y coure jamais, que jamais on n’en sorte;
Qu’on forge et qu’on bat le fer d’autant mieux qu’il est froid;
Que votre cloître est saint; que vous avez le droit
De mettre le génie et l’âme en retenue,
Que le cygne, nageant candide sous la nue,
Doit se faire montrer le blanc par un corbeau;
Que j’en saurai plus long, que je serai plus beau,
Moi l’âne, quand un gueux, flanqué d’une ou deux vieilles,
M’aura coupé la queue et rogné les oreilles,
Ah! pardieu, vous allez me faire accroire ça!
L’âne a du sens, ayant porté Sancho Pança.
Il reprit : — Parmi vous qu’un novateur s’obstine,
Qu’il baise mal le bas du dos de la routine,
Qu’il ne veuille pas boire où de tout temps ont bu
La coutume ridée et l’usage barbu,
Que son âme ose, horreur! n’être pas prisonnière,
Que, se sentant une aile, il méprise l’ornière,
Vous le damnez.
                    Jadis, un songeur l’entendait,

Les bêtes ont crié : Haro sur le baudet!
J’entends l’homme crier : Haro sur le génie!
Malheur à qui s’en va dans la sombre Uranie!
Dans la matière, encor, passe; on peut innover;
Il est permis d’aller, de chercher, de trouver
Quelque crapaud géant, quelque gros perce-oreille,
Quelque étrange fourmi, pas tout à fait pareille
À celles dont Linné a contemplé les oeufs,
Ou des squelettes frais et des fossiles neufs,
Des mammouths troublant l’ordre, et dans les grès, les schistes
Et les gneiss, des fémurs d’éléphants anarchistes;
La routine consent à ce qu’un cachalot,
Inédit, lève un peu trop son grouin hors du flot;
On peut faire, sans trop indigner les bélîtres,
Des révolutions dans les écailles d’huîtres;
L’immortelle ânerie, et j’en suis à regret,
Admet qu’on peut trouver un gui dans la forêt
Ou pêcher un mollusque avec un coup de sonde;
Quand on voit revenir après leur tour du monde
Le capitaine Cook, Magellan ou lord Ross
Rapportant des tapirs ou des rhinocéros,
Si bien que la science à leur aide complète
La confrontation de l’homme avec la bête,
Quelque raie éclairant l’énigme du dauphin,
Des os de mastodonte illuminant enfin
La grande question de l’ours, ou des carcasses
D’épiornis faisant progresser les bécasses,
Longs bravos; les savants formant leurs bataillons
Contemplent les herbiers et les échantillons,
Le mandarin admire, et le bourgeois dit : Qu’est-ce?
On fait queue au musée à voir ouvrir la caisse,
Les deux chambres, que chauffe un rapport érudit,
Accordent au jardin des plantes un crédit
Pour élargir l’endroit où l’on met la genèse;
Et l’institut — pendant que, tout frémissant d’aise,
Paris en foule court voir le tapir manger, —
Harangue au pont des Arts le fossile étranger.

Mais quand le penseur, vaste et noir missionnaire,
Arrive du pays du rêve et du tonnerre,
Et revient du mystère où planent les esprit,
Rapportant, aussi lui, ce qu’à l’ombre il a pris,
Farouche, et dans sa main, de rayons inondée,
Tenant le fait chimère ou bien le monstre idée,
Déployant la splendeur d’un progrès factieux,
Quelque nouveauté sainte ayant l’odeur des cieux
Qui va faire, profonde et pure découverte,
L’homme heureux, et l’envie, hélas, encor plus verte;
Offrant la douleur morte ou l’espace annulé;
Montrant des visions la formidable clé;
Malheur à ce trouveur et malheur à ce mage!
Que Gall ait du cerveau vu sur le front l’image,
Que dans quelque insondable abîme le même air
Qui soulevait Élie ait emporté Mesmer,
Malheur! Papin en France ou Galilée à Rome,
Quel que soit le prodige, hélas, quel que soit l’homme,
Quel que soit le bienfait, quel que soit l’ouvrier,
Qu’il se nomme Jackson, qu’il se nomme Fourier,
Malheur! huée, affronts, et clameurs triomphantes;
Tous se jettent sur lui; les uns, les sycophantes,
Au nom des livres saints, védas ou rituels;
Les autres, les douteurs, bourreaux spirituels,
Parfois railleurs profonds, comme Swift et Voltaire,
Au nom du vieux bon sens, bouche pleine de terre.
On vous l’assomme avec maint argument plombé,
Là, par Christ plus Moïse, ici, par A plus B.
Que veut ce songe creux? et de quelles cavernes
Sort-il pour nous conter de telles balivernes?
Avoir du temps passé jeté le vieux bâton,
Quel crime! S’appeler Gutenberg ou Fulton,
Quel cynisme! Aller seul! l’audace est fabuleuse!
Si c’est Flamel, Cardan, Saint-Simon ou Deleuze,
Pour en avoir raison l’éclat de rire est là;
Si c’est Jordan Bruno, si c’est Campanella
Qui le premier a dit : — Les soleils sont sans nombre, —

Qu’il se sauve; sinon, demain, le bûcher sombre
Lui mettra la fumée et la nuit dans les yeux,
Et l’affreux tourbillon des braises, envieux,
Châtiera ce rêveur du tourbillon des astres;
Harvey mourra moqué de tous les médicastres;
Kind raillera Képler, et tous les culs-de-plomb
Ferreront cet oiseau de l’océan, Colomb.
Vois, Socrate, par qui le genre humain se hausse,
Blêmit sinistrement dans une basse fosse;
Deux siècles avant l’heure où Vasco les verra,
Dante, oeil mystérieux que Dieu même éclaira,
Voit à travers la terre, énorme et sombre geôle,
Les quatre étoiles d’or qui sont à l’autre pôle;
Il le dit; on le chasse; et c’est ainsi toujours.
Dès qu’un flambeau paraît, l’homme crie : Au secours!
Qui l’éclaire ou le sert l’irrite; le génie
Est une infraction sévèrement punie;
Toujours vous proscrivez le grand homme fatal,
Sauf à lui dédier plus tard un piédestal;
Vos bienfaiteurs, penseurs et sages, ont beau dire :
— Cherchons et triomphons! l’infini nous attire;
Dans l’océan Progrès il n’est point de cap Non! —
L’homme réplique : exil, ciguë et cabanon;
Et l’histoire en est pleine, et tous ces Hérodotes
Content sous divers noms ces douces anecdotes.
J’ajoute : quelquefois le front des hauts songeurs
Se fend, l’idée ayant de trop grandes largeurs,
Et comme il est certain que la nature mêle
Toujours un peu d’ivresse au lait de sa mamelle,
Comme ils sont à la fois brumeux et radieux,
Ces hommes-là sont fous, dit la tourbe. Ils sont dieux!
L’excès de vérité n’éblouit-il pas l’âme,
Et n’a-t-on pas de grands aveuglements de flamme?
Hélas : en peut-il être autrement? Le réel,
L’idéal, le progrès, même venu du ciel,
Même apporté par Christ, même quand Dieu l’amène,
Passant par l’homme aura toujours la marque humaine.

Toujours l’idée aura pour nombril le défaut;
Toute innovation, même prise là-haut,
Par mille côtés vraie, est par un côté fausse;
Quel bonheur! la routine à ce détail s’adosse.
Après avoir plongé dans la sublimité,
Après avoir volé le gouffre illimité,
Dans l’humaine cohue obstinée à ses voiles
Malheur à qui revient! L’infini plein d’étoiles,
Sur la terre où le cuistre admire l’avorton,
N’a qu’un débarcadère appelé Charenton.
Oui, le crachat jaillit de cent bouches ouvertes
Sur tous les pâles Christs des saintes découvertes!
Oui, malheur au héros qui, la lunette en main,
Se dresse au lointain bord de l’horizon humain,
Guetteur mystérieux et vedette avancée!
Il est toujours tué; par qui? par la pensée.
Car dès que les docteurs ont vu, troupeau jaloux,
Poindre une idée, ils ont la tristesse des loups,
La foule n’aime point qu’un astre la dérange
Avec un flamboiement de clarté trop étrange,
Et la pensée humaine a peur des vastes cris
Du génie, et du vol des immenses esprits.
L’âne reprit : — Hélas, hommes! race chétive
Ayant plus de torpeur que d’initiative!
Hélas, génie humain! hélas, esprit humain!
Qui, s’il fonde aujourd’hui, démolira demain,
Double, ayant Oui pour aile et Non pour carapace;
Qui, sans savoir pourquoi, d’un pôle à l’autre passe,
Du plus noir du cloaque au plus bleu de l’éther,
De Dante à Loriquet, de la bouche au sphincter;
Qui semble jeune et fort, et tout à coup se ride;
Qui vole, plane, et boite, et, pour s’en faire un guide,
Va du condor à l’oie, et sur le faîte met
Tantôt Herder ou Dante, et tantôt dom Calmet;
Qui ferme l’oeil sitôt qu’un peu d’aube y pénètre;
Qui, dans le même temps, trouve le moyen d’être
Virgile et Moevius, ou Voltaire et Restif;

Qui, pour être céleste en restant positif,
Se bâcle on ne sait quel accoutrement lyrique
Fait de plume d’archange et de poil de bourrique!
Plein d’hésitation, d’anxiété, d’effroi,
Bégayant juste assez pour dire : Je suis roi,
Kant, pour se déjuger il est toujours en verve;
La contradiction est son fonds de réserve;
Ne sondez pas, devant ce frivole parleur,
Ces questions : tombeau, sort, mystère, douleur;
Il fuit de l’Inconnu la sinistre falaise,
Sur ces pentes à pic il se sent mal à l’aise,
Il hait ces mots profonds qui semblent infinis,
Il ferme sa croisée au brouillard où Leibniz,
Dante, Eschyle, Reuchlin, Pythagore, Épicure, Voyaient du noir destin pendre la corde obscure;
Il tâche de sortir de dessous les grands cieux;
Mais il n’est hors de là qu’un badaud vicieux,
Mais il ne sait pas même être un Chrysale honnête.
Il rit du fil de l’ombre, étant marionnette.
Le lendemain, voilà la peur qui le reprend.
Fou, tour à tour d’orgie ou d’aube s’empourprant,
L’homme mériterait, soit dit en style honnête,
D’avoir, ainsi que moi, sur le haut de la tête
Deux conduits auditifs taillés en falbala!
L’homme consent au beau, — s’il est utile. Il a
Le goût du médiocre et s’arrête à mi-côte;
Il laisse en route ceux dont l’idée est trop haute;
Il ferait plus de cas de l’Hékla que revêt
La neige et d’où le feu jaillit, s’il y pouvait
Poser quelque marmite énorme d’invalides;
Au ver sacré qui file au fond des chrysalides
Il demande un bonnet bien tiède, bien soyeux
Bien épais, qu’il se puisse abattre sur les yeux;
Il préfère Montmartre au mont Blanc, Athalie
À Macbeth, et son fiacre au char tonnant d’Élie;
Entre Horace et Vadé, Vadé serait son choix.
Il se croit roi du globe, il en est le bourgeois.

Conduite de l’homme vis-à-vis de la création

L’homme, orgueil titanique et raison puérile!
Montre-moi ce que fait ce travailleur stérile,
Et montre-moi surtout ce qui reste de lui.
Depuis Ève, il s’est moins aidé qu’il ne s’est nui.
Dis, que vois-tu de beau, de grand, de bon, de tendre,
De sublime, aussi loin que ton oeil peut s’étendre
Dans la direction où marche ce boiteux?
N’est-il pas lamentable et n’est-il pas honteux
Que cet être, niant ce que font ses génies,
Accablant les Fulton et les Watt d’ironies,
Ayant un globe à lui, n’en sache pas l’emploi,
Qu’il en ignore encor le but, le fond, la loi,
Et qu’après six mille ans, infirme héréditaire,
L’homme ne sache pas se servir de la terre?
Explique-moi le chant que chante ce ténor.
Le temps qu’il perd, ainsi qu’un prodigue son or,
Échappe heure par heure à sa main engourdie;
Dans la création il met la parodie;
Il n’entend pas les cieux dire : Éclairons! aimons!
Lorsqu’il tente, il échoue; en présence des monts
Il fait la pyramide, il dresse l’obélisque;
Il est le blême époux de la vie, odalisque
Au sein gonflé de lait, aux lèvres de corail;
Sultan triste, il ne sait que faire du sérail;
Il voit auprès de lui passer, aidant ses vices,
Offrant à son néant d’inutiles services,
Le jour, eunuque blanc, la nuit, eunuque noir.
Il met Dieu dans un temple en forme d’éteignoir,
Ou croit lui faire honneur en brûlant une cire.
Il dit à Dieu : Seigneur; mais dit au diable : Sire.
Je te répète, ô Kant, que j’ai honte et mépris
Des superstitions où le pauvre homme est pris;
Car, même quand il croit, quand il accepte un culte,
Son culte calomnie et sa croyance insulte;

Il rêve un éternel méchant, pareil à lui.
Quand au monde créé, son incurable ennui,
Comprenant peu l’auteur, comprend encor moins l’oeuvre.
Dieu brille, l’homme siffle, écho de la couleuvre;
La nature n’est pas à son gré, tant s’en faut;
Le spectateur n’est point enchanté du spectacle;
Et tandis qu’au-dessus de son frêle habitacle,
L’épanouissement du gouffre resplendit,
Tandis que l’humble oiseau gazouille, ou que bondit
L’âpre ouragan ouvrant ses gueules de gorgone,
Tandis que le jour chante et rit, l’homme bougonne;
Dédaignant le réel d’après ses visions,
Cracheur de l’océan des constellations,
Faisant des ronds dans l’ombre accoudé sur la berge,
Voyageur murmurant de sa chambre d’auberge,
Il déclare ceci mauvais, cela manqué;
Bâille; à la loterie, il emploie anankè;
Se taille dans l’azur son ciel bête; chicane,
En présence des nuits sans fond, le grand arcane;
Proteste, et par moments s’irrite, et lestement
Blâme l’abîme et son fait au firmament.
Que vous soyez croyant, soumis à l’amulette,
Mouton que mène un prêtre avec une houlette,
Ou douteur, et de ceux sur qui d’Holbach prévaut,
Qu’importe! toi l’impie et ton voisin dévot,
Vous êtes faits au fond de la même faiblesse;
Le fait vous déconcerte et le réel vous blesse;
Ce qui vous excédait dans l’art vous choque aussi
Dans la nature, gouffre étrange, âpre, obscurci;
L’art était profond, noir, touffu; le monde est pire;
Vous ne traitez pas mieux Sabaoth que Shakspeare;
Et votre pauvre esprit, essayant Jéhovah,
Gronde et ne trouve point que cet être lui va.
Pan vous déborde; il est trop tendre, il est trop rude.
Votre philosophie est une vieille prude,
Votre bigoterie a ses pâles couleurs.
Vos encensoirs poussifs sont envieux des fleurs;

À votre sens, ce monde, auguste apothéose,
Ce faste du prodige épars sur toute chose,
Ces dépenses d'un Dieu créant, semant, aimant,
Qui fait un moucheron avec un diamant,
Et qui n'attache une aile au ver qu'avec des boucles
De perles, de saphirs, d'onyx et d'escarboucles,
Ces fulgores ayant de la splendeur en eux,
Ces prodigalités de regards lumineux
Qui font du ciel lui-même une effrayante queue
De paon ouvrant ses yeux dans l'énormité bleue,
Au fond c'est de l'emphase, et rien n'est importun
Comme l'immensité de l'aube et du parfum
Et le couchant de pourpre et l'étoile et la rose
Pour vos religions atteintes de chlorose;
Le grand hymen panique est fort dévergondé;
Des sueurs du plaisir mai ruisselle inondé;
Toute fleur en avril devient une cellule
Où la vie épousée et féconde pullule,
Et que protège à tort le ciel mystérieux;
À vous en croire, vous les jugeurs sérieux,
Quand ils vont secouant de leurs crinières folles
Tant de rosée à tant d'amoureuses corolles,
Les chevaux du matin ont pris le mors aux dents;
Et quand midi, le plus effréné des Jordaens,
Sur les mers, sur les monts, jusque dans votre oeil triste,
Jette son flamboiement d'astre et de coloriste,
Rit, ouvre la lumière énorme à deux battants,
Et met l'olympe en feu, vous n'êtes pas contents;
Cela n'est pas correct et cela n'est pas sobre;
Vous regardez juillet avec des yeux d'octobre;
Toute cette dorure, auréoles partout,
Clartés, braises, rayons, rubis, blesse le goût,
Et cette foudroyante et splendide largesse
Est la divinité, mais n'est pas la sagesse.
Bonshommes, vous jetez de l'encre à l'idéal;
Vous blâmez germinal, prairial, floréal;
Ces mois joyeux vous font l'effet de jeunes drôles;

Quand sur l’herbe, à travers le tremblement des saules,
Sur les eaux, les pistils, les fleurs et les sillons,
Volent tous ces baisers qu’on nomme papillons,
L’éternel vous paraît un peu vif pour son âge;
Le printemps n’est pas loin d’être un libertinage;
Le serpent sort lascif de l’étui de vieux cuir,
La violette s’offre en ayant l’air de fuir,
L’aube éclaire le monde avec trop d’énergie;
Chastes, vous détournez la tête de l’orgie;
Vous damnez la matière, indignés, affirmant
Que toute cette sève et que tout cet aimant,
Finiront par s’user à force de débauche;
Et Calvin crie : Ordure! et Pyrrhon crie : Ébauche!
Et Loyola tendant aux roses son mouchoir
Leur dit : Cachez ce sein que je ne saurais voir.
Ô Memphis! Delphe! Ombos! Mecque! Genève! Rome!
Hypothèses, erreurs, religions de l’homme, Ignorance, folie et superstition
Dressant procès-verbal à la création!
Ô théologiens toisant Dieu! théosophes
De l’hymne sidéral châtrant les sombres strophes,
Reprochant ses excès au gouffre, gourmandant
Le trop obscur, le trop profond, le trop ardent,
Sondant, Orphée, Amos, la nue où vous plongeâtes!
Tribunal de boiteux, sénat de culs-de-jattes
Critiquant l’aigle altier dans l’étendue épars!
Tas d’aveugles criant à l’éclair : Rentre ou pars!
Conseil de jardiniers jugeant la forêt vierge!
Ô stupeur! Sirius contrôlé par le cierge!
Naigeon qui dit : Raca! Calmet qui crie : Amen!
Faisant à l’infini passer son examen!
Oui, te voilà, toi l’homme, et c’est là ta manière;
Le char d’Adonaï doit suivre ton ornière;
Et tu ne consens pas à l’univers, s’il est
Comme l’a fait la Cause et non comme il te plaît;
Il te froisse, il te gêne; et, prêtre ou philosophe,
Tu réprouves la forme et tu blâmes l’étoffe;

Tu ne l’acceptes pas s’il n’est contresigné
Par quelque apôtre d’ombre et de brume baigné;
Le firmament sera tel que tu le préfères,
Ou tu ratureras les globes et les sphères;
Tu les coupes selon ton patron de néant.
Citant à ton parquet l’inconnu, maugréant
Ici de ses laideurs, là de ses élégances,
Malmenant l’absolu pour ses extravagances,
Tu lui lis son arrêt d’un ton bref et succinct.
Si le pôle n’est point d’accord avec un saint,
Si quelque astre tient tête à la bible et se mêle
De démentir un texte où la lettre est formelle,
Le pôle est démagogue et l’astre est jacobin.
Quand un pape — je crois que ce fut un Urbain
Quelconque — condamnait, au nom de son messie,
Le soleil à tourner sous forme d’hérésie,
Qui dont eût contredit le prêtre épouvantail?
La cathédrale d’ombre ouvrait son grand portail,
Les deux battants grinçaient des gonds avec colère,
Rome mettait la main sur le spectre solaire,
L’église requérait le secours de l’état,
Afin que le soleil confus se retractât;
Devant la nuit stupide, infirme et misérable,
Le jour, pâle, venait faire amende honorable;
La vérité criait : Je mens! et Patouillet
Semonçait Galilée, et Dieu s’agenouillait.
L’immensité, sur toi sinistrement penchée,
Luit; la suprématie en fait une bouchée.
Ah! tu n’es vraiment pas embarrassé de Dieu.
Que tu jures par Locke ou bien par saint Matthieu,
Homme, athée en ta foi comme en ton ironie,
Tu crois qu’un ciel s’éteint dès qu’un prêtre le nie,
Imbécile! ou qu’après ton choc voltairien
Le monde est en poussière et qu’il n’en reste rien.
Quoi! tu veux dépecer le monde, toi l’atome!
Cette création vaste, étrange, ignivome,
Monstre du beau, torpille au contact foudroyant,

Dressant dans l’inconnu ses cent têtes, ayant
Pour écailles des mers, des soleils pour prunelles,
Ce polype inouï des vagues éternelles,
Cet immense dragon constellé, l’univers,
Tu le critiques, toi, le petit, le pervers,
Qui vis rongé de lèpre et meurs couvert de cendre,
Toi que le vice mord, toi dont la race engendre
Ce César qui broyait vingt peuples douloureux
Pour être appelé grand, et ce Poulmann affreux
Qui tuait un vieillard pour un verre de cidre!
Mangé par l’acarus, tu veux dévorer l’hydre!

Conduite de l’homme vis-à-vis de la société

L’âne un moment se tut, puis, sévère, dressa
Ses deux oreilles l’une après l’autre :
— Homme! — or çà
Reprit-il, si, penché sur l’obscure ouverture,
Tu n’as pas compris Dieu ni compris la nature,
Si tu n’as pas compris ce poème des jours,
Des nuits, des cieux, des voix profondes, des bruits sourds,
Drame dont tu te crois pourtant le personnage,
Te tires-tu du moins de ton propre ménage
Avec les faits posés directement sur toi,
Qui sont les uns ton joug et les autres ta loi;
Joug qu’il faut rejeter, loi qu’il faut reconnaître?
Ces problèmes : avoir ou n’avoir pas un maître,
Être de brume abjecte ou de clarté vêtu,
Vivre libre ou forçat, comment les résous-tu?
Quel est le droit du fils? quel est le droit du père?
De quelle quantité de passé doit-on faire
Le lest du temps présent? dans le vote des lois
Convient-il de donner à la tombe une voix?
L’homme doit-il avoir deux existences, l’une
Offerte à la famille et l’autre à la commune?
Qu’est-ce qu’une cité? qu’est-ce qu’un citoyen?
L’État est-il but, ou n’est-il qu’un moyen?
Grâce à ton effort gauche et bête pour extraire
Et tirer la clarté de l’erreur, son contraire,
Toutes ces questions fument sans éclairer;
Une épaisse vapeur en sort qui fait pleurer;
D’un brouillard qui grandit toujours environnées,
Obscures, elles sont comme des cheminées
De ténèbres d’où monte et se répand la nuit.
Pas un système vrai ne s’est encor produit;
C’est en vain qu’on s’ébat, c’est en vain qu’on arguë;
Et vingt siècles après le verre de ciguë,
Dix-huit cents ans après le cri du Golgotha,

L’homme est encore au point où Platon s’arrêta.
Ce que nous appelons : dérober son échine
Aux bons coups que l’ânier prémédite et machine,
Éviter le fossé, prendre le droit chemin,
Lisser son poil, garder du chardon pour demain,
Vous hommes, vous nommez cela la politique.
Mais là quelle ombre! erreur moderne, erreur antique!
Quel épaississement et quel redoublement
De tout ce qui se trompe et de tout ce qui ment!
Querelle sur l’idée et sur le fait; querelle
Sur la loi convenue et la loi naturelle;
Querelle sur le blanc, querelle sur le noir,
Et sur l’envers du droit qu’on nomme le devoir;
Systèmes sociaux qui se gourment, s’escriment,
Et ferraillent, les yeux bandés.
Les uns suppriment
Les siècles, jetés bas de leur trône lointain;
Ils construisent, mettant en ordre le destin
Comme un vaisseau réglé de la hune à la cale,
Une fraternité blafarde et monacale
Entre les froids vivants que rien ne lie entre eux;
Ce rêve fut déjà rêvé par les chartreux;
L’homme est ronce et végète; il est ver et fourmille;
Plus de nom paternel, plus de nom de famille;
Pas de tradition, pas de transmission;
L’être est isolement et disparition;
Ils réduisent, voyant l’idéal dans la chute,
L’homme à l’individu, le temps à la minute;
L’homme est un numéro dans l’infini, flottant
Hors de ce qui l’engendre et de ce qui l’attend,
Vain, fuyant, coudoyé par d’autres chiffres vagues;
L’humanité n’est plus qu’un tremblement de vagues;
Ayant vu les abus, ils disent : — Supprimons;
Puisque l’air est malsain, retranchons les poumons;
L’opprobre du passé doit emporter sa gloire; —
Ils rêvent une perte infâme de mémoire,
Un monde social sans pères, établi

Sur l’immensité morne et blême de l’oubli;
Ils combinent Lycurgue et le pacha du Caire;
L’homme enregistré naît et meurt sous une équerre;
Le pied doit s’emboîter dans le niveau, le pas
Doit avant de s’ouvrir consulter le compas;
De cette égalité dure et qui vit à peine,
La liberté s’en va, vieille républicaine,
Car elle est la rebelle et ne sait pas plier;
Chacun doit à son heure entrer à l’atelier,
Chacun a son cadran, chacun a sa banquette;
L’homme dans un casier avec son étiquette,
Délié de son père, ignorant son aïeul,
C’est là le dernier mot du progrès, — l’homme seul.
Ces fous mettraient un chiffre au blanc poitrail du cygne;
Géomètres, ils font un songe rectiligne;
Esprits qui n’ont jamais contre terre écouté
Le silence du gouffre et de l’éternité,
Jamais collé l’oreille au mur des catacombes,
Cœurs sourds au battement mystérieux des tombes,
Chassant les disparus, parquant les arrivants,
Ils abolissent, plaie effroyable aux vivants,
La solidarité sépulcrale des hommes.
— Mais l’homme est un total, les êtres sont des sommes;
Tout homme est composé de tout le genre humain;
Aujourd’hui meurt, tronqué d’hier et de demain; —
Ces vérités sont là; qu’importe! ils font le vide;
Ils coupent, dans l’espace insondable et livide;
Le fil sacré qui lie aux cercueils les berceaux;
Ils écrasent l’obscur tressaillement des os;
Ils ne comprennent point que dans la sépulture
La terre garde encore une pâle ouverture,
Que le trépassé voit, et que l’enseveli
Parfois à son linceul fait faire un vague pli
Afin d’apercevoir les hommes, et s’adosse
Pour écouter au mur ténébreux de la fosse;
Du fond d’on ne sait quelle existence on entend;
À ce que fait la vie on reste palpitant;

Ils ne comprennent pas que la sainte série
Des aïeux, à travers le sépulcre attendrie,
Suit tout des yeux, s'émeut à voir hors du tombeau
Courir de main en main le frissonnant flambeau,
Et que dans les enfants le père continue.
Chose sombre! fermer la paupière inconnue,
Éteindre ce regard d'en haut, et, sans remords,
Étouffer ce grand souffle obscur; tuer les morts!
Tournant le dos au coin du ciel que l'aube dore,
Ayant pour lampe un crâne où tremble le phosphore,
Objectant à tout fait nouveau leur surdité,
Engloutis dans la caste et dans l'hérédité,
Ceux-ci, pires encor, sont l'extrême contraire.
À force d'être fils on cesse d'être frère;
Le père par l'aïeul est lui-même éclipsé;
L'ancêtre seul existe; il se nomme Passé;
Il est l'immense chef vénérable et stupide;
Sa barbe est la sagesse et le beau c'est sa ride;
Il est mort; c'est pourquoi lui seul est proclamé
Vivant, et d'autant plus patent qu'il est fermé;
Il s'est pétrifié dans sa morne attitude,
Et son autorité c'est sa décrépitude;
Partout où l'on se hait il a son point d'appui;
Tout rentre en lui; tout est hiérarchie, ennui,
Fauteuil patriarcal, ordre antique, loi, gêne;
La famille alourdie a le poids d'une chaîne;
Le vieillard Autrefois gouverne, et Maintenant
Pourrit dans le marais du genre humain stagnant;
Les prêtres ténébreux de ce fatal système
Murmurent sur l'oiseau qui s'éveille : Anathème!
Malheur sur le matin! scandale sur l'amour!
Babel a vu nicher ces hiboux dans sa tour;
Ils sortent du talmud apportant dans leur griffe
Le dogme, le bandeau, le joug, l'hiéroglyphe;
Ils sont le fanatisme, ils sont le préjugé;
Durs, ils tiennent l'enfant dans les aïeux plongé;
Hélas, ils font lever la nuit sur tous les faîtes;

Jamais de novateurs, d’inventeurs, de prophètes;
Jamais de conquérants, toujours des héritiers;
Toujours les mêmes pas dans les mêmes sentiers;
Le squelette lui-même entre leurs mains s’encroûte;
Ils n’ont qu’un cri de marche : En arrière! une route,
La routine; un regard l’aveuglement; un Dieu,
Le grand fantôme d’ombre au fond du cachot bleu;
C’est peu de la statue, il leur faut la momie;
Ils reboivent l’horrible antiquité vomie;
Ces froids songeurs, penchés sur les âges défunts,
Ont les miasmes lourds des fosses pour parfums;
Ce qui fut les enivre et qui vit les navre;
Leur idéal a l’oeil sinistre du cadavre;
La nuit les aime; ils sont ses blêmes envoyés.
Tous les rayonnements de l’avenir noyés
Dans le grandissement de l’ombre des ancêtres;
Les fils des serfs rivés aux pieds des fils des maîtres;
L’éternel échafaud sur l’enfer éternel;
Autour d’Adam, chargé du crime originel,
Les vieux siècles hagards poussant des cris sauvages;
La perpétuité de tous les esclavages;
Pierre et César joignant leurs glaives effrayants;
L’autodafé chauffant la tiédeur des croyants;
Le moins d’enfants possible au seuil de la chaumière;
Torquemada pour flamme et Malthus pour lumière;
Il n’existe qu’un droit pour être, avoir été;
Le cimetière luit, c’est la seule clarté,
Et la tradition est l’unique atmosphère;
Ce que l’aïeul a fait, l’enfant doit le refaire;
Voilà leur songe : hiver, glace, plomb, marbre, orgueil,
Exagération lugubre du cercueil.
Derrière ces docteurs funèbres rien ne reste
Que le passé jetant sa figure funeste
Sur le réel, le jour, le travail, la moisson;
Tombe démesurée emplissant l’horizon.
Rien de sain, rien de fort; des larves dans la brume;
L’enfant pâle en naissant; pour verbe un testament;

Les cœurs morts; le nocturne et morne étouffement
Des jeunes nations par les anciens empires;
Les fils spectres râlant sous les pères vampires.
Ces deux systèmes vains sont hors de la raison
Et de la vérité, chacun à sa façon;
L’un a le froc, et l’autre a la manche mahoître;
L’un refait le donjon, l’autre refait le cloître;
Étranges en ceci que d’un point opposé
Ils viennent l’un et l’autre aboutir au Passé;
Et leur choc apparent est au fond la rencontre
Du rêve avec le dogme et Pour avec Contre.
L’homme flotte de l’un à l’autre, de cela
À ceci, de Babeuf il tombe en Loyola,
De Penn en Hildebrand et de Knox en de Maistre;
Sous ses deux poings fermés le Passé le séquestre,
Et la Théocratie, au regard de bûcher,
L’ayant pris une fois, ne veut plus le lâcher;
L’ombre empêche le jour et l’oeil de se rejoindre
Et jette la nuée au rayon qui veut poindre;
Quand viendra l’aube? Hélas! la mauvaise saison
Est longue pour le vrai, le droit et la raison;
Le soleil est si lent qu’on peut douter qu’il vienne;
L’horrible idolâtrie antédiluvienne,
Sombre, est le seul abri que l’homme ait sur le front;
L’esprit humain, captif sous ce hideux plafond,
Agonise depuis tout le temps qu’il hiverne
Dans cette épouvantable et béate caverne.
Pauvres hommes, par l’homme, hélas, suppliciés,
Vous vous y prenez mal, mais, quoi que vous fassiez,
Vous êtes à l’attache, et la courroie est forte;
Votre maigre science économique avorte;
Elle se nomme Faim, Désespoir, Buzançais;
L’effort est vain; après toutes sortes d’essais,
Le joug tient, la douleur persiste, le mal dure,
Vous ne détruisez pas la fatalité dure,
La loi de nuit, la loi de mort, la loi de sang.
Ah! le malheur appelle et l’homme dit : Présent.

Conduite de l’homme vis-à-vis de lui-même

Dieu, nature, cité; la loi, l’esprit, la lettre;
Mais à quel point de vue enfin faut-il se mettre
Pour trouver le bon sens de votre enseignement?
Je feuillette et relis tout l’homme vainement,
Je ne vois point par où son coeur s’améliore,
Je vois la nuit grandir si je vois l’astre éclore.
Voyons, regarde un peu, bonhomme impartial.
Nous avons contre nous notre angle facial,
Nous autres animaux; on est, de par son crâne,
Contraint d’être un chacal ou forcé d’être un âne;
L’instinct bas nous conduit par le bout du museau;
À quatre pattes, monstre! et nous portons le sceau
Du malheur, et l’infâme artère carotide
Est mère de l’ours fauve et du pourceau fétide;
La matière est fatale, au moins l’homme le dit;
La roche est antre afin que le loup soit bandit,
Le renard, c’est le vol; l’autour, c’est la rapine;
L’hyène a l’ongle ainsi que la ronce à l’épine;
Mais l’homme conscient et libre en son penchant,
L’homme, qui peut choisir, d’où vient qu’il est méchant?
De quel droit êtes-vous des tigres, vous les hommes?
Que nous nous comportions en brutes que nous sommes,
Soit; mais vous, les esprits créés pour la clarté?
Comment l’homme peut-il par une extrémité
Être Homère, et par l’autre être Héliogabale?
Et je ne parle pas ici du cannibale,
Du cafre, du huron sinistre et paresseux,
Je parle des penseurs, des artistes, de ceux
Qui savent ce que c’est qu’une bibliothèque,
De l’ami de Ronsard, de l’ami de Sénèque,
De Rome, de Paris, faîte auguste, sommet,
Trône, où Néron chantait, où Charles neuf rimait!
Vous êtes donc mauvais pour le plaisir de l’être!
C’est votre vanité qui partout vous pénètre,

Et qui vous fait, tirant l’homme vers l’animal,
Entrer facilement dans les pores du mal.
Vanité! tout chez vous est faux. L’or est du cuivre.
Chacun marche à côté du chemin qu’il croit suivre;
Le soldat se croit maître, il est esclave, hélas,
Et ce qu’il nomme épée est souvent coutelas,
Et ce qu’il nomme gloire est toujours servitude;
Le savant, qui d’Atlas imite l’attitude,
Ne sait pas; l’ignorant n’ignore pas; mettez
Deux autels côte à côte en vos noires cités,
Puis demandez à l’un des deux prêtres qui passe
Son avis sur le prêtre et le temple d’en face!
Le philosophe est grave, austère, froid, prudent,
Sublime, et de raison sévère débordant;
Il ne veut pas qu’on aille et qu’on vive à sa guise,
Mais dans la sainteté du devoir il aiguise
Et fourbit les mortels à toutes les vertus;
Ferme, il va redressant tous les instincts tortus;
Ce qu’il dit est superbe, il excelle au dressage
De l’homme sans défaut; mais lui-même est-il sage?
Non; et, législateur, il vit hors de la loi.
— Ô caillou, dit le fer, je coupe, grâce à toi,
Mais coupe donc toi-même un peu, je t’en défie. —
Qui vous met à nu trouve une maigreur bouffie,
Une difformité qui se masque et qui ment;
La vertu, si jamais vous l’épousiez vraiment,
Vous quitterait bientôt pour cause de sévices;
La fausse gloire germe et s’enfle sur vos vices,
Et cette fluxion n’est rien qu’un mal de plus.
L’homme dans son miroir se fait de grands saluts;
Le miroir les lui rend, mais dans son âme obscure
Il rit, et sait le fond de l’homme, étant mercure;
Pas d’orgueilleux qui n’ait honte secrètement;
Pas de prude qui n’ait en rêve quelque amant;
Ah! si l’on s’en allait, pour voir plus que son buste,
Par quelque soupirail regarder dans un juste,
Comme il vous fermerait son volet brusquement!

Votre âme aime la nuit comme son élément;
En public vous cherchez la louange et l’estime,
Mais vous n’hésitez pas dans votre for intime
À bâillonner et même à tuer le témoin,
Le scrupule caché qui tremble dans un coin;
Votre probité plie et promptement expire;
Le meilleur parmi vous est si proche du pire
Qu’entre eux, l’un étant saint et l’autre étant damné,
Ils n’ont pas l’épaisseur d’un cheveu de Phryné;
Évêque, on veut sa dîme, et, bailli, ses épices;
L’argent, le lit, la table, autant de précipices;
Le vin est un écueil, la femme est un récif;
La conscience, bas, à Salomon pensif
Disait plus de dix fois par jour : Vieille canaille!
L’expérience austère, ô Kant, est la trouvaille
Qu’on ramasse en sortant du vice; on se flétrit,
On se forme; chacun des sept péchés écrit
Une lettre du mot composite : Sagesse.
Votre philosophie admirable, au fond, qu’est-ce?
Rébellion, alors qu’il faudrait méditer;
Ou résignation, quand il faudrait lutter.
Et sur tous les sommets, trône, pavois, quadrige,
Oh! comme vous avez aisément le vertige!
Quoique dauphin ou roi, ce jeune homme est charmant.
Il est né généreux, secourable, clément;
Qu’un valet l’endoctrine, et c’est un mauvais prince.
Contre les courtisans votre rempart est mince!
Hélas, les hommes sont à ce point insensés
Que pour changer un d’eux en tyran, c’est assez
D’une bouche bavant une bave imbécile!
Ce chef-d’oeuvre hideux, un despote, est facile;
Quand Narcisse voulut un Néron, il le fit;
Pour faire un Louis treize un Luynes suffit;
Il ne faut pour cela qu’un peu de flatterie
Même par un crétin grossièrement pétrie;
Pour tenter l’âme humaine et la précipiter,
Dom Escobar n’a pas besoin d’argumenter,

Ni Satan d’allonger sa caressante serre;
Un corrupteur d’esprit n’est jamais nécessaire,
Et Jocrisse flatteur perdrait Socrate roi.
Et l’on me dit : Tu vas vénérer l’homme! — En quoi?
Mon vieux hi-han vaut bien ses quatre ou cinq diphtongues,
Et plus que ses vertus mes oreilles sont longues.
L’homme fait reculer l’heure sur le cadran,
Quitte la liberté pour reprendre un tyran,
Flatte un dieu, tue un loup, rampe et se met à rire.
Ô triste genre humain! Veut-on pas que j’admire
Tout ce que dans toi-même, homme, tu dénigrais,
Ton faux goût, ton faux jour, tes faux pas, ton progrès
Pourvu d’un appareil à reculer, tes songes,
Tes sens ayant leur borne ainsi que des éponges,
Et tes opinions, tombant, se relevant,
Murmurant, parodie imbécile du vent!
Je vois l’homme à peu près tel qu’il est, presque bête,
Presque génie, ayant son gouffre dans sa tête.
Tu te peuples d’erreurs et tu reste désert.
Ta science te fait tes jougs. À quoi te sert
Ce don libérateur et divin, la pensée?
Spartacus t’apparaît dans un thème au lycée,
Mais tu n’en conclus rien; je l’ai dit, et c’est vrai,
Fouillez Mariana, Tacite, Mézeray,
L’homme est servile au point que l’histoire en est lasse;
Depuis quatre mille ans et plus qu’il est en classe,
Et qu’on lui montre à lire avec un air profond,
Et que ses magisters, rentrés, repus, se font
Servir des bouillons chauds le soir par leurs phlipotes,
Il ne s’est pas encor délivré des despotes.
Ses docteurs vont disant pendant qu’il se débat;
Peuple! aime ton césar. Âne! adore ton bât.
Ces docteurs! quels marchands! leur morale sévère,
Cela va se fêler, prends garde, c’est du verre.
La rencontre d’un roi coudoyant leur destin
Fait à leur probité rendre un son argentin.
Ah! ces savants sans fond, ces hommes de logique,

Roidissant en plis secs leur simarre énergique,
Ces forts calculateurs, ces raisonneurs abstraits
De quelque idéal trouble adorant les attraits,
Chastes, prudes, glacés, rigides, implacables,
Ayant la majesté des cuistres impeccables,
Bonzes de la basoche ou du pays latin,
Qui marchent rengorgés dans leur menton hautain,
Et chez qui l’attitude escarpée est de mode,
Sois un tyran quelconque, un Phocas, un Commode,
Un Christiern, le premier Domitien venu,
Sois le diable d’enfer, fourchu, barbu, cornu,
C’est à vendre; et tu peux acheter, si tu verses
Rondement un total suffisant de sesterces,
Piastres, louis, dollars, rixdallers, species,
La raison de Cuvier et l’âme de Sieyès!
Et quelle flatterie effroyable que celle
Qui sort de ce monceau de honte universelle!
Traverse-moi d’un bout à l’autre ce récit
Du passé que le deuil du présent obscurcit,
Va de l’A jusqu’au Z, va dans l’affreuse crypte
Du czar de Moscovie au pharaon d’Égypte;
Pierre tue Alexis et Philippe Carlos;
Sésostris fait du monde un funèbre champ clos;
Timour court sur l’Asie ainsi qu’une avalanche;
Soliman, vieux et chauve, aïeul à la barbe blanche,
Appelle ses enfants et joue au milieu d’eux,
Et le soir il les fait étrangler; Sélim deux
Fait tirer le canon chaque fois qu’il est ivre;
Osman, s’il voit un tigre en cage, le délivre;
Irène, l’Isabeau du chaos byzantin,
Fait arracher les yeux à son fils Constantin
Dans la chambre où ce fils sortit de ses entrailles;
Charles sept dort pendant que La Hire et Saintrailles
Tiennent Talbot, Chandos et Bedfort en arrêt,
Et que Jeanne à travers la fournaise apparaît,
Toute nue, au poteau tordant ses bras sublimes;
Justinien, faiseur de codes et de crimes,

Amoncelle encor plus de forfaits que de lois;
Tudor fait un pendant monstrueux à Valois;
Louis quatorze, au nom du Christ qu’il dénature,
Couche la France aux fers sur le lit de torture;
Léon dix se parjure, Albrecht fait un serment
Faux, et François premier triche, et Charles Quint ment;
Eh bien! tous sont cléments, grands, glorieux, illustres!
Le moindre a son autel entouré de balustres;
Il n’est pas un d’entre eux qui ne soit le meilleur;
Quand ils meurent la terre est folle de douleur;
Celui-ci fut un dieu sur la machine ronde,
Cet autre fit pâlir la lumière du monde
Le jour où du milieu des vivants il sortit;
Ô honte! on trouvera toujours, grand ou petit,
Un homme pour verser ces pleurs de crocodile;
Ce sera Cantemir, si ce n’est Chalcondyle,
Si ce n’est Karamsin, ce sera Bossuet.
Je voudrais l’âne sourd ou bien l’homme muet.
Ô mon vieux Kant, la phrase est une grande fourbe,
On croit qu’elle se dresse alors qu’elle se courbe
Tant la coquine met de pompe à s’aplatir.
Certes, le menu peuple est un saignant martyr;
Certe, un champ de carnage est affreux; Tyr en cendre
Pour le plaisir d’un fou qui s’appelle Alexandre,
C’est dur; Rosbach, Fornoue et Pultawa fumants,
Et ces égorgements et ces éventrements,
C’est hideux; ces canons dont les fauves gueulées
Font accourir le soir les vautours par volées,
C’est noir; triste est la lutte et triste est le butin;
La bataille, ce jeu de bagues du destin,
Dont la roue oscillante a des hasards sans nombre,
Où le vainqueur, tournant sur son destrier sombre,
Rit et remporte au bout de sa lance un zéro,
C’est atroce et niais; Mars est un vieux bourreau;
Si devant tous les morts qui, sur toute la terre,
Dans la plaine difforme et pâle de la guerre
Sont tombés, glaive au poing, depuis quatre mille ans,

Si devant ces monceaux de squelettes sanglants
Le sépulcre fait défiler un cortège,
Où le brigand serait à côté du stratège,
Ô Kant, les os blanchis dans ces champs de malheur Trouveraient le héros ressemblant au voleur,
Et les fémurs brisés, les tibias, les crânes,
Ne distingueraient point César de Schinderhannes;
Certes, les bons humains, quoique chargés de fers,
S’ils consultaient leurs coeurs ou simplement leurs nerfs,
Jetteraient les sabreurs bien vite à bas du trône,
Bellone recevrait une cartouche jaune,
Et l’on vivrait en paix dans les pauvres hameaux;
Mais les laquais lettrés, les rhéteurs, les grands mots,
Se mettent à genoux devant ces saturnales;
Suprême opprobre! avec ces maximes banales :
— Que la guerre est un fait divin; — qu’elle a ses lois;
— Qu’il faut juger à part les actions des rois; —
La phrase, cette altière et vile courtisane,
Dore le meurtre en grand, fourbit la pertuisane,
Protège les soudards contre le sens commun,
Persuade aux niais que tous sont faits pour un,
Prouve que la tuerie est glorieuse et bonne,
Déroute la logique et l’évidence, et donne
Un sauf-conduit au crime à travers la raison.
Toi l’homme, tu te mets vite au diapason;
C’est toi qu’on trahit, toi qu’on fraude, toi qu’on livre;
C’est ta chair qu’à César Shylock vend à la livre,
C’est ton sang dont Judas trafique, et c’est ta peau
Que Ganelon brocante, ô genre humain, troupeau!
Homme, la corde au cou le matin tu t’éveilles;
Mais quoi! par tes deux yeux et par mes deux oreilles,
C’est bien fait! et, j’en prends à témoin le ciel bleu,
Les traîtres ont raison, car tu leur fais beau jeu.
Tes vices, tout d’abord, voilà les premiers traîtres;
Ils te remettent pieds et poings liés aux maîtres;
Au devant du joug vil, brutal, dur, inhumain,
Ta corruption fait les trois quarts du chemin;

Doux au sergent de ville, aimable au garnisaire,
Lâche, entendant malice à ta propre misère,
Plat, tu clignes de l’oeil même avec tes bourreaux.
Tu vas léchant la patte énorme des héros;
Charles douze et Cortez t’enivrent; tu te pâmes
Devant Cambyse errant dans les villes en flammes;
Tu compares Cyrus et Clovis, mesurant
Ton admiration au sabre le plus grand;
C’était aux bords du Var, ils étaient cinq cent mille, Marius les tua; que c’est beau! Paul-Émile,
Pompée, Othon, Sylla, quels fiers centurions!
Quels soldats! quels géants! et sur tes horions
Ta main inepte écrit : Victoires et Conquêtes.
Nous n’en sommes pas là, nous autres; pas si bêtes!
Et quant à moi, morbleu! j’aurais bien du chagrin,
Étant Aliboron, d’admirer Isengrin.
Les hommes, — c’est ainsi, Dieu, que vous les créâtes, —
Sont les seules souris devant le chat béates,
Heureuses de servir au matou de hochet;
L’homme est le seul mulot content de l’émouchet,
Le seul mouton bêlant des hymnes aux colères
Du tigre, et du lion contemplant les molaires,
Le seul poisson qui danse et sonne du grelot
Devant les triples rangs de dents du cachalot,
Le seul moineau, la seule alouette espiègle
Qui chante Te Deum dans la griffe de l’aigle.
Oui, c’est toujours, hélas, du côté des tueurs
Que ton enthousiasme a le plus de lueurs,
Et, stupide, tu dis : La bataille est gagnée!
Quand un boucher t’a fait une large saignée.
Mais voulusses-tu même, homme, te révolter,
Quelle conviction as-tu pour résister?
Une religion, voilà le grand remède;
L’âme est le point d’appui solide d’Archimède;
La barricade est haute et fière, et le beffroi
Est fort, quand les pavés et les cloches ont foi;
Pour vaincre, il fait avoir aux reins une croyance;

Le glaive flamboyant sort de la conscience;
Toi, jamais ton regard convaincu ne brilla;
C’est vrai, quand ta servante et tes enfants sont là,
Ou ta femme en un coin raccommodant tes nippes,
Tu parles d’or, on voit tes vertus, tes principes,
Et tes perfections que rien ne fait broncher,
Dans tes graves discours à la file marcher
Comme aux processions on voit passer des châsses;
Mais, dès que tu le peux, tu jettes tes échasses,
Tu descends plus gaîment que tu n’étais monté,
Et tu dis en soupant entre garçons : — Bonté,
C’est duperie; amour, combien dure l’ivresse?
Chasteté, j’aime mieux Margoton que Lucrèce;
Dévouement, c’est niais, synonyme de grand;
Vérité, c’est le pied trop court de Talleyrand;
Justice, instinct sacré vers qui l’âme s’élance,
C’est une grande femme avec une balance
Sculptée en marbre blanc par monsieur Cartellier;
Guerre, c’est la charrue avec un timbalier;
Rien n’est bon pour le blé comme un grand capitaine;
Un Wagram, un Rocroy, tombant sur une plaine,
Vaut le meilleur fumier; la gloire est un engrais. —
Tu railles ce vaincu qu’on nomme le Progrès
Quand tu le vois lié par les hommes de proie;
Et ce serait ta fête, et ce serait ta joie
Si tu pouvais, du fond de tes bouges obscurs,
Noircissant le ciel même et tous les rayons purs,
Toutes les vérités, toutes les certitudes,
Barbouiller la lumière avec tes turpitudes,
Et charbonner la face auguste du soleil.
Le flot tumultueux et souple est ton pareil;
Il te prend par moments, comme un vent court sur l’herbe,
Des frissons, des élans de colère superbe,
De liberté, d’essor vers le jour, vers le bleu,
Vers le vrai, vers le beau, vers l’avenir, vers Dieu;
Et tu passes ta vie ensuite à t’en dédire.
Rien est ton point d’appui, nihil ton point de mire;

Ta science est un bloc informe de gravats;
Conclusion : tu n’es qu’un drôle; et je m’en vas.
Hommes, vous rendriez sceptique même un âne!
Vous descendez sur nous en neige, et non en manne;
Vous refroidissez l’âme en ses tristes exils.
Dieu nous fit humbles, soit; vous, vous nous faites vils;
Poussière qu’on était, hélas : on devient boue.
L’homme par calcul chante ou pleure, blâme, loue,
Divinise, diffame, exagère, amoindrit.
Oui, la chauve-souris du doute en mon esprit
Ouvre hideusement sa livide membrane;
Je sens en flots de nuit bouillonner sous mon crâne
L’encre qui dans les yeux goutte à goutte tomba.
Ce monde est un brelan. Le droit, le devoir, bah!
Laissez-moi donc tranquille avec tous ces mots vides!
Les hommes ont leur carte à jouer. Fous, avides,
Plutôt mauvais que bons, orageux, ténébreux,
Ils ont la haine au coeur et se mangent entre eux,
Tout en braillant : Honneur, fraternité, patrie!
Les principes sont là pour faire galerie;
Et l’équité, le droit, la vertu, le devoir,
— S’ils existent pourtant, ce qu’il faudrait savoir, —
La probité, l’honneur, — ou ce qu’ainsi l’on nomme, —
Disent là-haut, raillant le pauvre effort de l’homme :
— Bien joué. Mal joué. Bravo, Machiavel!
Ah! crétin de Bayard! Malpole, very well! —
Ô genre humain, un rien t’enfle, et te rapetisse.
Ah! oui, pardieu! vertu, morale, honneur, justice!
Qu’un grand forfait triomphe, on lui baise l’orteil.
Ta conscience bâille et tombe de sommeil,
La lueur du vrai tremble en sa terne prunelle,
Je te plains si tu n’as que cette sentinelle.
L’homme est guidé du faux au vrai, du blanc au noir,
Par le mot intérêt qu’il prononce devoir.
Toute action humaine est signée : Égoïste.
Je me résume, ô Kant, l’homme est triste. Il n’existe
Qu’un mérite ici-bas, c’est d’être riche; il n’est

Qu’un esprit, et qui rend charmant le plus benêt,
C’est d’être riche; il n’est, et ce siècle l’affiche,
Qu’une beauté, toujours, partout, c’est d’être riche;
L’or ne connaît que l’or, et devant les lingots
Le vice et la vertu sont deux sombres égaux.
Voilà tout ce que sait la science.
        La vie
Fait quelques pas tremblants vers le bien, puis dévie.
L’homme est un psaume, soit; il est blasphème aussi;
Son âme est une lyre au son peu réussi
Où l’honnête a sa corde, où l’injuste a sa fibre;
Dans son pauvre esprit louche il tient en équilibre
Cauchon et Jeanne d’Arc, Socrate et Mélitus;
Il complète le bien d’où sortent ses vertus,
Hélas, avec le mal d’où sortent ses fétiches;
Ce vers faux a Satan et Dieu pour hémistiches.
Homme, entre nous et toi bien mince est la cloison,
Et l’aigle par devant et par derrière est oison.
Ta cervelle est de boue et ton coeur est de pierre.
Tes docteurs chats-huants détournent leur paupière
Au resplendissement du divin Hélios;
Ils éclipsent avec un mur d’in-folios
Le ciel mystérieux d’où viennent les grands souffles;
Qu’est-ce qu’ils font de toi, ces bonzes, ces maroufles,
Ces talapoins lettrés aux discours pluvieux?
Un vieux toujours enfant, un enfant toujours vieux.
Ton groupe sépulcral d’écolâtres ineptes
Prêche, érige les morts en dogmes, en préceptes,
T’assourdit d’un éloge infâme de la nuit,
Allume un suif et dit : C’est un astre qui luit!
Applaudit l’écrevisse et le crabe, et célèbre
Les reflux du présent dans le passé funèbre,
Si bien que tu ne sais, dans ton hébétement,
Si tu vois Demain poindre au bas du firmament
Ou d’Hier qui revient la noire silhouette,
Si c’est l’affreux hibou qui chante, ou l’alouette,
Et si le mouvement que tu fais en rêvant

Te ramène en arrière ou te pousse en avant.
Ta science te rend stupide, non sans peine.
Ô leurre! la clef fausse ouvre la porte vaine;
Ta pensée est une ombre où tu restes béant.
Oui, chez toi tout, hélas, arrive à du néant,
La chimère au calcul, le fait à l’hypothèse,
Ce qu’il faut qu’on proclame à ce qu’il faut qu’on taise,
Le silence à l’ennui, la parole au bâillon,
La pourpre d’Aspasie ou d’Auguste au haillon,
La vie au noir cercueil, la plume à l’écritoire,
Les chiffres au zéro, les lettres à la gloire,
Et le savant au prêtre et le prêtre au savant.
Qu’est-ce donc que tu mouds, réponds, moulin à vent?
Ta sagesse te fait castrat et te mutile.
L’homme, c’est l’impuissant fécondant l’inutile.

Réaction de la création sur l’homme

L’âne fit un silence, et, murmurant : — Voilà!
C’est ainsi. Je n’y puis que faire! — il grommela :
Se contredire un peu, Kant, c’est le droit des gloses;
Quand on veut tout peser, on rencontre des choses
Qui semblent l’opposé de ce qu’on avait dit;
Non aux basques de Oui toujours se suspendit,
Riant de la logique et narguant les méthodes;
Qui tourne autour d’un monde arrive aux antipodes;
Kant, je n’userai point de ce droit; seulement
Après t’avoir montré les hommes blasphémant,
Niant, méconnaissant et méprisant la Chose,
Cet océan où l’Être insondable repose,
Il faut bien te montrer la Chose enveloppant
Les hommes submergés dans Dieu qui se répand
Et qui sur eux se verse et qui se verse encore,
Tantôt en flots de nuit, tantôt en flots d’aurore;
Après t’avoir montré l’atome outrageant Tout,
Il faut bien te montrer la grande ombre debout.
Homme, ce monde est vaste, obscur, crépusculaire;
L’immuable l’habite et l’imprévu l’éclaire;
Ce monde est éclatant, clair, ténébreux, mêlé
De miracle orageux, de miracle étoilé;
Il est souffle, âme, esprit, lit, chaos, cimetière;
Dès qu’on veut essayer d’en trouver la frontière
Et de voir par-dessus la terrestre cloison,
À chaque pas que fait le marcheur, l’horizon
Se prolonge, toujours plus noir, toujours plus large;
Or, et je dis ceci, passant, à ta décharge,
Qu’es-tu dans cet ensemble avec ton code, avec
Ton koran turc, ton tsin chinois, ton phédron grec,
Avec tes lumignons que tu nommes lumières,
Avec tes passions basses et coutumières
De tous les faits malsains, équivoques, pervers?
Les blés sont d’or, les flots sont bleus, les bois sont verts,

L’être fourmille et luit dans les métempsycoses,
Juin sourit, couronné du prodige des roses,
L’univers resplendit, ivre et comme écumant
D’un vertige de vie et de rayonnement,
L’aurore chaque jour bâtit la galerie
Des heures dont le luxe à chaque pas varie,
Et le couchant construit au bout du corridor
Des montagnes de pourpre et des portiques d’or;
Tout déborde; une sève ardente et décuplante
Du rocher au rocher, de la plante à la plante,
Court, traverse la brute, et, sous le firmament,
Le grand amour s’accouple avec le grand aimant;
Toi l’homme, en tout cela tu sens ton indigence;
Tes besoins sont posés sur ton intelligence,
Et comme tu ne vois Dieu, soleil de l’esprit,
Qu’à travers cette chair qui sur toi se flétrit,
L’ombre de tes haillons se découpe en ton âme;
Ta difformité raille, attaque, hait, diffame;
L’homme au besoin, funèbre et lamentable jeu,
Fait de son ineptie une ironie à Dieu;
Il rit : — Hein, créateur, dit-il, sommes-nous bêtes! —
Tu te tiens à l’écart des cieux et de leurs fêtes;
Ton exiguïté te rend hargneux, boudeur,
Mauvais; car, la bonté n’étant rien que grandeur,
Toute méchanceté s’explique en petitesse.
Donc je te plains, sentant ta profonde tristesse.
Les faits autour de toi, graves et recueillis,
Vivent, et le mystère épaissit son taillis,
Et laisse à ton regard juste assez d’ouverture
Pour entrevoir leur vague et sévère stature.
Averti dans ton flegme et dans ta passion,
Sans cesse tu subis l’austère obsession
Des êtres te montrant Dieu sous leur transparence
Et l’espèce d’auguste et calme remontrance
Que te fait, selon l’heure et selon la saison,
Rien qu’en se déployant sur le vaste horizon,
La majesté profonde éparse en la nature;

Tu dis : La loi passée et présente et future,
C’est moi; je viens punir, damner, supplicier!
Tu te déclares juste et juge et justicier;
Tu mets ta toge et prends la plus fière attitude,
Tu fais de l’évidence et de la certitude,
Résolvant tout, flétrissant; au bagne celui-ci,
Au gibet celui-là; c’est bien, voici les astres!
Autour de tes bonheurs, autour de tes désastres,
Autour de tes serments à bras tendus prêtés,
Et de tes jugements et de tes vérités,
Les constellations colossales se lèvent;
Les dragons sidéraux s’accroupissent et rêvent
Sur toi, muets, fatals, sourds, et tu te sens nu
Sous la prunelle d’ombre et sous l’oeil inconnu;
Toutes ces hydres ont des soleils sur leurs croupes,
Et chacune est un monde, et chacun de ces groupes
S’offre à toi, triste Oedipe, et ces sphinx du cosmos
Ont leurs énigmes tous dont ils savent les mots;
La création vit, stable, auguste, sacrée,
Et fait en même temps dans le vague empyrée
Un bruit d’inquiétude et de fragilité;
Un long tressaillement glisse dans la clarté,
Un frisson dans la nuit court sous la voûte ignée;
Homme, au-dessus de toi, quoique la destinée
Semble avoir l’épaisseur du bronze par instant,
Ton oreille, écoutant les ténèbres, entend
Tous les frémissements d’une maison de verre.
Homme, pour t’empêcher d’oublier Dieu, pour faire
0Par moments se dresser en sursaut ton sommeil,
L’univers met sur toi, dans l’espace vermeil,
La nuit, ce va-et-vient mystérieux et sombre
De flambeaux descendant, montant, marchant dans l’ombre;
Ce voyage des feux dans l’océan d’en haut
0S’accomplit sur ton front, et, toi, dans ton cachot, L’araignée homme, ayant ton égoïsme au centre
De ton oeuvre, et caché dans l’intérêt ton antre,
Inquiet malgré toi de la splendeur des cieux,

Tu regardes, pendant ton guet silencieux,
À travers les fils noirs de tes hideuses toiles,
Ces navigations sublimes des étoiles.
Tout en te disant chef de la création,
Tu la vois, elle est là, la grande vision,
Elle monte, elle passe, elle emplit l'étendue;
La chose incontestable, inexplicable, ardue,
T'environne, entr'ouvrant ses flamboyants secrets,
Pendant que des arrêts, des dogmes, des décrets
Sortent d'entre tes dents qui claquent d'épouvante;
Tu coupes, souverain, dans de la chair vivante,
Tu vas criant : Je suis très haut, je suis le roi!
Tu proclames qu'au gré de ton caprice à toi
Telle action sera mérite ou forfaiture,
Tu prends la plume et fais au droit une rature;
Voilà qu'une blancheur pénètre la forêt
Et que la lune pâle et sinistre apparaît;
Le spectre du réel traverse ta pensée;
La loi vraie, immuable et jamais effacée,
Passe appuyant sur toi son oeil fixe et pensif.
Sur tes deuils, sur ton rire obscur et convulsif,
Sur ta raison souvent folle, toujours hautaine,
Sur ton temple, qu'il soit de Solime ou d'Athène,
Sur tes religions, dieux, enfers, paradis,
Sur ce que tu bénis, sur ce que tu maudis,
Tu sens la pression du monde formidable;
Ton âme, atome d'ombre, et ta chair, grain de sable,
Ont sur elles les blocs, les abîmes, les noeuds,
Les énigmes du Tout lugubre et lumineux,
Et sentent, feuilletant vainement quelque bible,
Rouler sur leur néant l'immensité terrible.
Le zodiaque énorme, effrayant de clarté,
Éternel, tourne autour de ta brièveté.
Tu le vois, et tu dis, l'épiant de la terre :
— Qu'est-ce donc qu'il me veut, ce fauve sagittaire?
Qu'ai-je fait au loin qu'il me regarde ainsi? —
Et tu frémis. —

Hélas! rien n’est par toi saisi;
Tu ne tiens pas le temps, tu ne tiens pas l’espace;
Tous les faux biens, rêvés par ton instinct rapace,
S’en vont; derrière tous la tombe, âpre fossé,
Se creuse; et chacun d’eux, après t’avoir blessé,
Passe à travers les doigts de ton poignet tenace;
La minute elle-même en fuyant te menace
Et, mouche au dard vibrant, se débat dans ta main.
L’aile d’un scarabée et l’odeur d’un jasmin,
Si tu veux en sonder le fond, sont des abîmes.
Derrière toute cime on trouve d’autres cimes.
La présence invisible et sensible de Dieu,
L’influence de l’ombre, à toute heure, en tout lieu,
Certaine, incorruptible, inexprimable, occulte,
Dérange ton calcul, ton optique, ton culte,
Ta morale, tes lois, ton doute, et par instant
Te pousse dans le rêve autour de toi flottant,
Et te fait osciller et perdre l’équilibre;
Tu te sens garrotté tout aussi bien que libre;
Comment dire : La vie est cela; la vertu
Est cela; le malheur est ceci; — qu’en sais-tu?
Où sont tes poids? Comment peser des phénomènes
Dont les deux bouts s’en vont bien loin des mains humaines,
Perdus, l’un dans la nuit et l’autre dans le jour?
Avec quel diagraphe en prendre le contour
Et la dimension, n’ayant, dans ta masure,
Ni le mètre réel, ni l’exacte mesure?
Qu’est le bien? qu’est le mal? Tel fait est constaté;
Soit; il faut maintenant voir l’autre extrémité;
Où donc est-elle? Allez la chercher dans les sphères.
Toutes les questions sont d’obscures affaires
Que tu te fais avec les cieux illuminés;
Le grand Tout intervient, toujours, partout; prenez
L’existence la plus misérable, n’importe!
L’énigme de moi l’âne ou de toi le cloporte;
Qu’on la presse, on la voit subitement grandir
Et pendre du zénith ou monter du nadir.

Rien n’est indifférent au gouffre; le blasphème
Qu’on jette au firmament tombe dans le problème;
Qui sait si l’on n’a pas blessé quelque rayon?
Mettre un pied sur un ver est une question;
Ce ver ne tient-il pas à Dieu? La sauterelle
Qu’il écrase en marchant fait songer Marc-Aurèle;
Sur un moucheron mort Pascal est accoudé.
Quel est le point connu, clair, épuisé, vidé?
Que sais-tu? Que veux-tu décidément conclure?
L’ombre fouette ta face avec sa chevelure,
Et, t’effarant avec le ciel prodigieux,
T’aveugle en te jetant les soleils dans les yeux;
Il te suffit un soir, fusses-tu Prométhée,
Ou Timon l’androphobe ou Constantin l’athée,
De voir les globes d’or au fond des noirs azurs
Flamboyer, affirmant le fait dont ils sont sûrs,
Pour que, devant l’horreur constellée et sereine,
0Un éblouissement pontifical te prenne;
Alors tu sens en toi l’homme en prêtre finir;
Tu ne peux plus lever les mains que pour bénir;
Sous tes pieds chancelants tu sens vibrer la base,
Et tu t’évanouis dans la sinistre extase;
0Tu t’engloutis dans l’être ineffable, insondé;
Tu regardes rouler le monde comme un dé,
Et ta propre figure, ombre et nuit, t’importune,
Mêlée à cette vaste et fatale fortune;
Tu perds le sentiment et la proportion
De ton idée ainsi que de ton action,
Voyant de toutes parts, dans l’azur, dans les nues,
Monter autour de toi des lueurs inconnues;
Tu te penches, ému d’un frisson sépulcral,
Sur l’étrange et tragique horizon sidéral;
Tu tombes éperdu dans les mélancolies
Des éclipses, des nuits sans fond, des parhélies,
Des astres, des éthers et des espaces bleus;
Qu’es-tu, toi le terrestre, en ce tout merveilleux
Où gravitent les Mars, les Vénus, les Mercures?

Tu tressailles d’un flot d’impulsions obscures;
Tout se creuse sitôt que tu tâches de voir;
Le ciel est le puits clair, la tombe est le puits noir,
Mais la clarté de l’un, même aux yeux de l’apôtre,
N’a pas moins de terreur que la noirceur de l’autre;
Tu dis à ton évêque : Homme, où donc est Sion?
Tu fais sa crosse en point d’interrogation;
Tu charges la science infirme qui laboure,
D’instruire ton procès avec ce qui t’entoure;
Mais qui donc osera balbutier l’arrêt?
Informer, à quoi bon? juger, qui l’essaierait?
Tu ne connais de rien le dernier mot; tu poses
Des arguments aux faits, des dilemmes aux choses;
Mais comment décider? Tout est mêlé de tout;
La neige froide touche à la lave qui bout;
La composition du destin, quelle est-elle?
L’être est-il un hasard? l’homme est-il en tutelle?
Quel est le bon? quel est le mauvais? que doit-on Ajouter à Dracon pour en faire Caton?
D’où vient qu’on se dévore et d’où vient qu’on se tue?
Est-ce qu’au papillon la fleur se prostitue?
Le fumier est-il saint et frère du parfum?
Tout vit-il? quelque chose, ô nuit, est-ce quelqu’un?
D’où vient qu’on naît? d’où vient qu’on meurt? d’où vient qu’on souffre?
Par l’haleine qui sort de la bouche du gouffre
Ton miroir de l’injuste et du juste est terni,
Et ta balance tremble au vent de l’infini.
Pour te tirer d’affaire étant si misérable,
Devant l’inaccessible et dans l’impénétrable,
Devant l’éblouissant et splendide secret,
Pour être quelque chose et compter, il faudrait
Être saint, être pur, intègre avec l’abîme,
Offrir à l’absolu l’attention sublime,
Et savoir distinguer la véritable voix;
Il faudrait s’écrier : J’aime, je veux, je crois!
Sur l’énigme en travers de ton destin posée
Ce ne serait pas trop de faire une pesée

Avec toute ta force et toute ta vertu;
Il ne faudrait pas être inepte, ingrat, têtu;
Recevoir du bedeau qui sur vos berceaux veille
Une éducation annulante et pareille
À celle qu’aux matous font les tondeurs du quai,
Être un esprit métis, être un lion manqué
Qu’un cuistre abâtardit, qu’un marguillier mâtine;
Hélas! il ne faudrait pas être la routine,
Sourde, engrenant, toujours avec le même ennui,
Aujourd’hui dans hier, demain dans aujourd’hui;
Il ne faudrait pas croire aux empiriques, vivre
Comme le chien, ayant pour grand talent de suivre;
Te repaître d’exploits, de combats, d’échafauds,
D’esclavages, de verbe obscur, de savoir faux;
T’en aller digérer bêtement dans ton gîte
Tout ce qu’un sacristain de force t’ingurgite;
Te plaire dans l’absurde et t’y dénaturer;
Opprimer l’homme utile, — éclatant, l’abhorrer;
Et le servir méchant, et l’admirer vulgaire;
Il ne faudrait pas faire à tes flambeaux la guerre,
Adorer tes bandeaux, tes jougs; haïr tes yeux;
Être l’adulateur en étant l’envieux;
Et, lâche, appartenir aux deux puissances viles,
Par un point aux Nérons et par l’autre aux Zoïles.
Ce monde est un brouillard, presque un rêve; et comment
Trouver la certitude en ce gouffre où tout ment?
Oui, Kant, après un long acharnement d’étude,
Quand vous avez enfin un peu de plénitude,
Un résultat quelconque à grands frais obtenu,
Vous vous sentez vider par quelqu’un d’inconnu.
Le mystère, l’énigme, aucune chose sûre,
Voilà ce qui vous boit la pensée, à mesure
Que la science y verse un élément nouveau;
Et vous vous retrouvez avec votre cerveau
Toujours à sec au fond des problèmes funèbres,
Comme si quelque ivrogne effrayant des ténèbres
Vidait ce verre sombre aussitôt qu’il s’emplit.

Ô vain travail! science, ignorance, conflit!
Noir spectacle! un chaos auquel l’aurore assiste!
L’effort toujours sans but, et l’homme toujours triste
De ce qu’est le sommet auquel il est monté,
Comparant sa chimère à la réalité,
Fou de ce qu’il rêvait, pâle de ce qu’il trouvait!

Tristesse finale

L’âne continua, car la nature approuve
Ce couple, âne parlant, philosophe écoutant :
Tu vois un être grave, imposant, important,
Un âne sérieux, complet, bon pour tout lire,
Un docteur, Kant, c’est vrai, je sais tout, c’est-à-dire
Je suis à la fois juif, parsi, turc, arien.
J’entends dans mon cerveau bourdonner en tumulte
Le blanc, le noir, amen, raca, la foi, l’insulte, Genève, Rome, Alcuin d’où sort Calvin, oui, non,
Cujas en droit civil, Flandrin en droit canon,
L’histoire aux pieds des rois, cette prostituée,
L’abac et l’alphabet, et toute la nuée
Des érudits poussifs et des rhéteurs fourbus
Depuis Sabbathius jusqu’à Molaribus!
Le fait d’hier s’y heurte à la chronique ancienne,
Henri de Gand s’y croise avec Sixte de Sienne;
Et je ne comprends rien à tout ce morne bruit
Sinon qu’ayant cherché le jour, je vois la nuit.
Du reste il est certain que, dans cette ombre noire
Qui sort de l’encre horrible et qu’on nomme grimoire,
À travers ces bouquins où l’homme est si petit,
C’est à moi qu’au total la science aboutit,
Car, à ce blême jour dont la lueur avare
Joint le docteur d’Oxford au docteur de Navarre,
J’ai vu de toutes parts, sur les vieux parchemins,
L’ombre de mon profil tomber des fronts humains.
Adieu, sorbonnes, bancs, temples, autels, boutiques!
Adieu le grand dortoir des préjugés antiques
Côte à côte assoupis sur leurs brumeux chevets!
Scholastiques du vide, adieu! — Kant, si j’avais
Le loisir d’aspirer à quelque académie,
Je ferais, de toute ombre et de toute momie,
De tous les vils sentiers suivis par les moutons,
De tous les oeufs cassés, de tous les vieux bâtons

D’aveugles, grands, petits, inconnus et célèbres,
De tous les brouillards pris à toutes les ténèbres,
Et de tous les fumiers pris à tous les marais,
Une collection que j’intitulerais :
Exposé général de la science humaine.
L’âne, ayant un peu brait, termina :
       — Je m’emmène!
Ô Kant! je redescends, avide d’ignorer!
J’étouffe! oh! respirer! respirer! respirer!
Mon oeil est devenu trouble, nocturne et triste
Dans ces caves qu’emplit le jour séminariste.
J’ai des tiraillements d’estomac. Mais ce n’est
Ni des textes que prend Trigaud sous son bonnet,
Ni de tout ce chaos qu’un cuistre en sa mémoire
Fourre comme on emplit de loques une armoire,
Ce n’est point du fouillis, ce n’est point du fatras
Qui fit Siffret jadis si grand pour Carpentras,
Ce n’est point d’antiquaille et de pédagogie,
Ce n’est pas du savoir que dans sa docte orgie
Mange le jésuite ou le génovéfain,
C’est de vie et d’azur et d’aube que j’ai faim!
Je me sens sur la peau, de là ma pauvre mine,
Une démangeaison de savante vermine,
Grassi, de Galilée odieux puceron,
Garasse, ce moustique immonde de Charron,
Et Dasipodius, cet acarus d’Euclide.
Es-tu pour le fluide? es-tu pour le solide?
Tiens-tu pour l’idéal? tiens-tu pour le réel?
Acceptes-tu Moïse, Hermès ou Gabriel?
À quel Dieu remets-tu ton âme ou ta machine?
Est-ce au Brahma de l’Inde? est-ce au Tien de la Chine?
Es-tu pour Jupiter, pour Odin, pour Vichnou,
Pour Allah? Laissez-moi tranquille. Je suis fou.
Je m’évade à jamais de la science ingrate.
Il est temps que, rentrant dans le vrai, je me gratte
L’échine aux bons cailloux du vieux globe éternel.
Je vois le bout vivant du funèbre tunnel,

Et j’y cours. J’aperçois, à travers les fumées,
Là-bas, ô Kant, un pré plein d’herbes embaumées,
Tout brillant de l’écrin de l’aube répandu,
De la sauge, du thym par l’abeille mordu,
Des pois, tous les parfums que le printemps préfère,
Où ce que la sagesse aurait de mieux à faire
Serait de se vautrer les quatre fers en l’air.
Or, étant libre enfin, et ne voyant, mon cher,
Ici, pas d’autre ânier que toi le philosophe,
Pouvant finir mon chant de bête brute en strophe,
Je m’en vais, comme Jean au désert s’en alla,
Et je retourne heureux, rapide, et plantant là
L’hypothèse béate et le calcul morose,
Et les bibles en vers et les traités en prose,
Locke et Job, les missels ainsi que les phédons,
De l’idéal aux fleurs, du réel aux chardons.

Tristesse du philosophe

Et l’âne disparut, et Kant resta lugubre.
— Oui! dit-il, la science est encore insalubre;
L’esprit marche, baissant la tête et parlant bas;
Et cette surdité de la bête n’est pas
Si stupide en effet que d’abord elle semble.
Puisqu’aux mains du savoir le flambeau sacré tremble,
La protestation est juste.
Jusqu’au jour
Où la science aura pour but l’immense amour,
Où partout l’homme, aidant la nature asservie,
Fera de la lumière et fera de la vie,
Où les peuples verront les puissants écrivains,
Les songeurs, les penseurs, les poètes divins,
Tous les saints instructeurs, toutes les fières âmes,
Passer devant leurs yeux comme des vols de flammes;
Où l’on verra, devant le grand, le pur, le beau,
Fuir le dernier despote et le dernier fléau;
Jusqu’au jour de vertu, de candeur, d’espérance,
Où l’étude pourra s’appeler délivrance,
Où les livres plus clairs refléteront les cieux,
Où tout convergera vers ce point radieux :
— L’esprit humain meilleur, l’âme humaine plus haute,
La terre, éden sacré, digne d’Adam son hôte,
L’homme marchant vers Dieu sans trouble et sans effroi,
La douce liberté cherchant la douce loi,
La fin des attentats, la fin des catastrophes. —
Oui, jusqu’à ce jour-là, tant que les philosophes,
Prêtres du beau, d’autant plus vils qu’ils sont plus grands,
Seront les courtisans possibles des tyrans;
Tant qu’ils conseilleront César qui délibère;
Tant qu’Uranie ira s’attabler chez Tibère;
Tant que l’astronomie au vol sublime et prompt,
Et la métaphysique, et l’algèbre seront
Des servantes du crime et des filles publiques;

Tant que Dieu louchera dans leurs regards obliques;
Tant que la vérité, mère des droits humains,
Ô douleur! sortira difforme de leurs mains;
Tant qu’insultant le juste, abjects, creusant sa fosse,
Les scribes salueront la religion fausse,
Le faux pouvoir, Caïphe à qui Néron se joint;
Tant que l’intelligence, hélas, ne sera point
La grande propagande et la grande bravoure;
Tant qu’épris des faux biens que le méchant savoure,
Les froids penseurs prendront l’erreur pour minerai;
Tant qu’ils ne seront pas les Hercules du vrai,
Acceptant du progrès les gigantesques tâches;
Tant que les lumineux pourront être les lâches;
Tant que la science, ange à qui l’Être a parlé,
Infâme, baissera sur son front constellé
Ce capuchon sinistre et noir, l’hypocrisie;
Tant que de l’air des cours elle sera noircie;
Tant qu’on admirera ce Bacon effrayant,
Ce monstre fait d’azur et d’infamie, ayant
Le cloaque dans l’âme et dans les yeux l’étoile;
Tant qu’arrêtant l’esprit qui veut mettre à la voile,
D’abjects vendeurs pourront, sans être foudroyés,
Dire au seuil rayonnant des écoles : Payez!
Tant que le fisc tendra devant l’aube sa toile;
Tant qu’Isis lèvera pour de l’argent son voile,
Et pour qui n’a pas d’or, pour le pauvre fatal,
Le fermera, Phryné sombre de l’idéal,
Oui, quand même, ô ciel noir, seraient là réunies
Les pléiades des fronts radieux, des génies,
Des Homères aïeux et des Dantes leurs fils,
Oui, contre Athènes, Rome, et Genève, et Memphis,
Et Londre, et toi, Paris, et l’Inde et la Chaldée,
Contre tout le rayon, contre toute l’idée,
Contre les livres pleins de vérités dormant,
Contre l’enseignement, contre le firmament,
Et les esprit sans fin, et les astres sans nombre,
Les oreilles de l’âne auront raison dans l’ombre!

Sécurité du penseur

Ô Kant, l’âne est un âne et Kant n’est qu’un esprit.

Nul n’a jusqu’à présent, hors Socrate et le Christ,
Dans l’abîme où le fait infini se consomme,
Compris l’ascension ténébreuse de l’homme.
À force de songer son oeil s’est éclairci;
Plane plus haut encore, et tu sauras ceci :
Tout marche au but; tout sert; il ne faut pas maudire.
Le bleu sort de la brume et le mieux sort du pire;
Pas un nuage n’est au hasard répandu;
Pas un pli du rideau du temple n’est perdu;
L’éternelle splendeur lentement se dévoile.
Laisse passer l’éclipse et tu verras l’étoile!
Le tas des cécités, morne, informe, fatal,
A l’éblouissement pour faîte et pour total;
Le Verbe a pour racine obscure les algèbres;
Les pas mystérieux qu’on fait les ténèbres
Sont les frères des pas qu’on fera dans le jour;
L’essor peut commencer par l’aile du vautour
Et se continuer avec l’aile du cygne;
Du fond de l’idéal Dieu serein nous fait signe;
Et, même par le mal, par les fausses leçons,
Par l’horreur, par le deuil, ô Kant, nous avançons.
Querelle, petitesse, ignorance savante,
Tous ces degrés abjects dont ton oeil s’épouvante,
Sont les passages vils par où l’on va plus haut;
La lettre sombre, ô Kant, forme un splendide mot;
Sans l’étage d’en bas que serait l’édifice?
L’homme fait son progrès de ce qui fut son vice;
Le mal transfiguré par degrés fait le bien.
Ne désespère pas et ne condamne rien.
Pour gravir le sublime et l’incommensurable,
Il faut mettre ton pied dans ce trou misérable;
Un chaos est l’oeuf noir d’un ciel; toute beauté

Pour première enveloppe a la difformité;
L’ange a pour chrysalide une hydre; sache attendre;
Penche sur ces laideurs ton côté le plus tendre;
C’est par ces noirceurs-là que toi-même es monté.
Dieu ne veut pas que rien, même l’obscurité,
Même l’erreur qui semble ou funeste ou futile,
Que rien puisse, en criant : Quoi, j’étais inutile!
Dans le gouffre à jamais retomber éperdu;
Et le lien sacré du service rendu,
À travers l’ombre affreuse et la céleste sphère,
Joint l’échelon de nuit aux marches de lumière.

RELIGIONS ET RELIGION

TABLE DES MATIERES

I. Querelles
II. Philosophie
III. Rien
IV. Des voix
V. Conclusion

I. Querelles

I. LE DIMANCHE

- Je n’ai pas entendu le facteur frapper. - Certe!
Votre porte aujourd’hui, monsieur, n’est pas ouverte.
- Ah bah! - Vous n’aurez pas aujourd’hui de journaux.
- Pourquoi?
Mary, qui vient d’éteindre ses fourneaux,
Est superbe; elle a mis sa grande coiffe blanche.

- Ni de lettres. - Pourquoi? - Parce que c’est dimanche.
- Eh bien? - On ne lit pas de lettres ce jour-là.
- Pourquoi? - Parce que Dieu fit le monde. Il parla Et travailla pendant six jours. - Soit. Que m’importe?
- Le dimanche on ne peut frapper à votre porte.
- Mais pourquoi? - C’est le jour où Dieu s’est reposé.

Apprendre au maître, impie et français, l’A B C,
C’est beau; Mary triomphe, et ne se sent pas d’aise,
Étant bonne chrétienne et servante irlandaise.
On entend bourdonner la cloche dans la tour.

•

Ainsi l’infini va jusqu’au septième jour!
Arrivé là, c’est dit; l’infini devient morne,
Reste court, et s’arrête épuisé; c’est sa borne.
Nous appelons cela le dimanche. Il est sûr
Qu’il faut pour faire un ciel bien des rouleaux d’azur,
Qu’un chêne à fabriquer n’est pas un mince arbuste,
Et qu’il faut une échelle étrangement robuste
Et que l’échafaudage ait été bien construit
Pour peindre l’aube à fresque au mur noir de la nuit.
Ainsi ce grand travail qu’on nomme la nature

Ne s’est point terminé sans quelque courbature!
Ainsi le Tout-Puissant a dit : Je n’en puis plus!
Et las, suant, soufflant, ankylosé, perclus,
Pris d’un vieux rhumatisme incurable à l’échiné,
Après avoir créé le monde, et la machine
Des astres pêle-mêle au fond des horizons,
La vie, et l’engrenage énorme des saisons,
La fleur, l’oiseau, la femme, et l’abîme, et la terre,
Dieu s’est laissé tomber dans son fauteuil Voltaire!

II. PREMIÈRE REFLEXION

Pas de religion qui ne blasphème un peu.
L’une en croquemitaine habille le bon Dieu;
Il fait son paradis du hurlement des âmes;
Sa cave à son plafond jette un reflet de flammes,
Il grince, et son bonheur est d’avoir un enfer
A remuer avec une fourche de fer.
L’autre à la main lui plante un grand sabre, et l’affuble
D’un uniforme, mal caché par sa chasuble;
Il a l’obus en bas et la foudre là-haut;
Il était Jehovah, le voilà Sabaoth;
On le fait tambour-maître et général d’armée;
Il va-t-en guerre. Étant riche en noir de fumée,
Belzébuth jusqu’à Dieu se glisse, et cet escroc
Lui charbonne en riant deux moustaches en croc;
Le Père-Éternel sent vaguement qu’on le berne,
Se laisse faire, met l’éclair dans sa giberne,
Se voit destitué par le pape, permet
Que la bataille accroche à sa mitre un plumet,
Ferme les yeux sur l’homme, être irrémédiable,
Et, n’étant plus bon Dieu, tâche d’être bon diable.

III. LE THÉOLOGIEN

O théologien, tu dis :
        - Rêveurs, penseurs,

En fouillant on ne sait sous quelles épaisseurs,
Vous avez découvert un Dieu sans fin, sans forme;
Vous niez qu’il se lasse et vous niez qu’il dorme;
Ce Dieu n’a pas d’histoire. Est-il juif, arien, Grec, indou, parsi? Non. Il ne ressemble à rien,
Il n’a pas de légende arrangeable en cantique.
Raisonnons. Croyez-vous ce Dieu-là bien pratique?
Tu dis : - Un Dieu n’est pas ce que vous supposez.
Un Dieu, c’est une tour dont on fait les fossés.
C’est une silhouette au delà d’un abîme.
Ne point le voir est mal et trop le voir est crime.
L’autel, c’est lui. Jamais la foule n’admettrait L’être pur, l’infini compliqué par l’abstrait.
Dieu, cela n’est pas, tant que ce n’est pas en pierre.
Il faut une maison pour mettre la prière.
Dieu doit aller, venir, entrer, passer, marcher.
Il a l’ange à sa porte, ainsi qu’un roi l’archer.
Homme, il me faut son pied imprimé sur mon sable.
Et ce pied, c’est le dogme. Un Dieu point saisissable,
Un Dieu sans catéchisme, un Dieu sans bible, un Dieu
Que saint Luc et saint Marc, saint Jean et saint Mathieu
Ne tiennent pas tout vif, et par les quatre membres,
Dont les vieilles n’ont pas le portrait dans leurs chambres,
Dont personne ne peut dire : - Il est ainsi fait,
Il venait voir Moïse, il parlait à Japhet,
Il a tué beaucoup de gens dans l’Idumée,
Il est un, il est trois, il aime la fumée,
Il ne veut pas qu’on touche à ses arbres fruitiers; -
Un Dieu qu’on chercherait pendant des mois entiers
Sans le voir flamboyer soudain dans les broussailles;
Un Dieu qui ne connaît ni Rome, ni Versailles,
Et qui ne comprendrait pas grandchose aux sermons,
Aux schémas, aux missels, où nous le renfermons;
Un Dieu qu’on n’apprend point par demande et réponse,
Dont on ne fourbit pas avec la pierre ponce
L’auréole, dorée au fond d’un cul-de-four
Dans une niche en plâtre au coin du carrefour;

Un Dieu comme cela ne vaut rien. Qu’il nous montre
Son Pentateuque avec le pour auprès du contre,
Ou son Toldos Jeschut, ou son Zend-Avesta,
Son Verbe que lut Job et qu’Esdras attesta,
Ses psaumes que chantaient les chevaliers de Malte,
Son Talmud! Mais quoi, rien! pas d’évangile! Halte!
Qu’est-ce que ce Dieu-là? C’est un Dieu sans papiers.
Un Dieu pour paysans, un Jésus pour troupiers,
Voilà ce qu’il nous faut. L’Homme-Dieu. Dogme ou fable,
Il nous le faut visible, il nous le faut mangeable.
Il faut qu’il ait un peu toutes nos passions.
Bons croyants, faisons-nous quelques concessions.
Prenez notre séné, je prends votre rhubarbe.

-

Tu dis : - On n’est pas Dieu sans une grande barbe.
Dieu doit être très vieux. Ça met l’homme à genoux.
Un gibet d’autrefois transfiguré par nous
Charme le peuple, et l’âme en aime le mystère;
La croix de saint André commande à l’Angleterre,
Le gril de saint Laurent produit l’Escuriàl. -

Tu dis : - L’homme n’a foi qu’à l’immémorial.
Une religion qui veut qu’on croie en elle
Doit être séculaire, antique, solennelle,
Appuyée au monceau des âges révolus. -

Tu dis : — Nous vénérons un culte d’autant plus Que dans la profondeur de l’histoire il s’éloigne;
Toute l’autorité du temps passé témoigne :;
Croyons. Voilà mille ans, deux mille ans, trois mille ans
Que ce temple est sacré pour les hommes tremblants;
C’est ici que le temps vient effeuiller les races,
Et des peuples éteints mêle les sombres traces;
Il donne pour garants à ces croyances-là
Les générations dont l’âme s’envola.

Vieille religion, donc religion sainte.
De la tradition l’homme approche avec crainte.
C’est vrai, car c’est ancien; et nos pères l’ont cru.
Un autel par l’amas des siècles est accru.
Donc, c’est en vieillissant que les dogmes se prouvent;
Au fond du puits des jours les vérités se trouvent;
Il est bon pour un temple ou bien pour un koran
Que, sur les. bords du Tibre ou sous le ciel d’Iran,
Une procession d’ancêtres et de sages
Ait gravi ses degrés ou feuilleté ses pages;
Un dogme a le cadran des heures pour souci;
Tant qu’il n’a point de ride, il n’a pas réussi;
Il lui faut, et c’est là sa seule inquiétude,
Le rajeunissement de la décrépitude;
C’est par la vétusté qu’il plaît; Christ envieux
Regarde Teutatès caduc et Brahma vieux;
Le vrai n’est vrai, dans l’ombre où le temps nous dépouille,
Qu’à la condition d’être couvert de rouille.
Un dogme vermoulu fait bien dans le ciel bleu.
La patine du bronze est nécessaire à Dieu.
L’évidence a besoin, dans l’azur de l’idée,
D’être depuis longtemps des hommes regardée,
De beaucoup de croyants brûlant du même feu,
Et de beaucoup de terre au-dessous d’elle. Un dieu
N’est dieu qu’autant qu’il prend racine comme un arbre;
L’argile de la foi durcit et devient marbre;
Soyez un verbe, un rite, une religion,
Apportez-nous des saints groupés en légion
Et des anges coiffés d’étoiles à facettes,
Réglez l’esprit, le cœur, l’âme, ayez des recettes
Pour faire janvier chaud ou juillet pluvieux,
C’est bien; mais commencez d’abord par être vieux.
Si les autels ont droit d’être environnés d’âmes,
Si c’est le ciel qui parle en chaire aux bonnes femmes,
Si les cultes sont purs, solides, sûrs, certains,
Vrais, cela se mesure au nombre des matins
Qu’a vus le coq juché sur la tour du village;

Une religion qui sent lui venir l’âge
Triomphe à chaque siècle, et dit : Encor cent ans!
J’existe! - Et l’Eternel cherche à gagner du temps!

IV. AU THÉOLOGIEN

Soit que vous vous coiffiez de turbans en batiste,
Ou de mitres mêlant la perle à l’améthyste,
O prêtres, ô porteurs d’éphods et de rabats,
Étant donné le droit de sottise ici-bas,
Vous en usez avec une ardeur sans pareille.
Parce que le Très-Haut, faisant la sourde oreille,
A l’air de ne rien voir et de tout accepter,
Parce que Dieu se laisse à peu près insulter,
Et que ce patient des Tedeums ne raille,
Dans sa bonté, pas même un évêque qui braille,
Vous avez profité de son air bon enfant
Pour lui faire endosser l’absurde triomphant,
Là dans les sanhédrins et là dans les conciles,
Et pour bâcler beaucoup de livres imbéciles.
Prêtres, vous remuez aussi facilement
La malédiction, le mensonge inclément,
L’imposture et l’erreur dans vos pesants volumes
Que le petit oiseau fouille du bec ses plumes.

-

Où prends-tu, moine, abbé de visions imbu,
Ce Tout-Puissant myope et ce Très-Haut fourbu?
Prêtre, qu’est-ce que c’est que cet Orgon céleste,
Dieu podagre que dupe un démon jeune et leste?
Ah! docteur! quel beau jeu tu donnes, imprudent,
Aux rieurs, point fâchés d’,avoir Dieu sous la dent!
Écoute-les :
  - Fakir, talapoin, muphti, mage,
Brave homme, Dieu, dis-tu, t’a fait à son image.
Alors il est fort laid. J’y consens. Prêtre blanc,

Prêtre noir, qu’il vous soit à tous deux ressemblant,
C’est son affaire. Et moi je siffle. Que de choses
Mal faites dans le tas de ses métempsycoses!
Les diacres aux gros yeux m’ordonnent d’admirer;
Je ris. La cathédrale en vain pour m’attirer
Ouvre les deux battants de sa porte cochère;
Je laisse bougonner ces bonshommes en chaire.
Paix aux dévots béats! quant à moi, je me tiens
Le plus loin que je peux des orateurs chrétiens;
J’écris sur mon carnet : Fuir Nonotte; et je cloue
A mon chevet : Ne point aller à Bourdaloue.
Les raisonneurs bigots sont un de mes effrois.
J’abhorre ces forêts de piliers lourds et froids
D’où; tombent les frissons, les toux, les pleurésies;
Je ne m’expose point aux églises moisies;
Je n’irai point gagner quelques bonnes fraîcheurs
Pour le plaisir d’entendre aboyer vos prêcheurs,
Bavards à barbe ou clercs ras tondus, dont le geste
S’empêtre dans les plis d’une prose indigeste.
Prêtres de plomb, Laynez, Frayssinous, Bellarmin!
L’ennui pleut de leur phrase; et, son croc à la main,
Le chiffonnier qui met les âmes dans sa hotte,
Satan, s’il passe là d’aventure, chuchote :
— Quand plus tard, dans l’enfer vengeur, nous assommons
Tous ces lourds sermonneurs, c’est avec leurs sermons. -
Dieu. Le monde. Anier triste et mauvaise bourrique.
Ah! prêtres! s’il faut croire à votre rhétorique,
Dieu mène tout. Tant pis. L’univers disloqué,
Mal sorti du chaos, penche et se cogne au quai.
On distingue ses mâts sur le ciel d’un noir d’encre.
Il n’a plus sa boussole, il a perdu son ancre,
Et semble par moments faire eau de toutes parts..
Tout ce que l’homme croit, dans l’abîme est épars.
La foi nage, le droit flotte, le vrai tournoie;
On voit les bras levés de l’espoir qui se noie;
Qu’est-ce que votre Dieu fait pendant ce temps-là?
Rien. Je me trompe. Il fait Nemrod, Cham, Attila,

Gengiskhan, Tamerlan, Charles-Quint, Bonaparte;
Il brise Rome, il tue Athène, il détruit Sparte;
C’est grâce à lui qu’un roi dit : NOMINOR LEO;
S’il donne au monde un saint, vite, il lâche un fléau;
Il guide les Colombs, mais conduit les Pizarres;
Il est fantasque; il fait des actions bizarres
Dont Bossuet prendra note derrière lui.
Son éclipse survient dès que son aube a lui.
Cet astre est un aveugle. Il est contradictoire.
Ce monde est sa défaite autant que sa victoire.
Ce Très-Haut tourne et change. Il est hydre, il est Dieu.
D’une roue insensée il est le noir moyeu.
Il est tantôt Hasard et tantôt Providence.
Toute l’horreur humaine en ce Dieu se condense,
Et vous le façonnez si ressemblant à vous
Que, père, il est vengeur, et, maître, il est jaloux.
Il nous défend le lard tel jour de la semaine;
Et, si nous en mangeons, l’ange des morts nous mène
Au gouffre où tout est feu, braise, flamme et charbon,
Si bien qu’il a caché l’enfer dans un jambon.
Ce qu’il crée, il le fêle; et s’il met trop de sable,
Trop d’ombre ou trop de neige, il en est responsable.
Une peste nous vient de lui; quand un essieu
Casse, c’est Jehovah qui se détraque, et Dieu
Est sale quand la boue à mon talon s’attache;
Le mendiant, - pourquoi des mendiants? - le tache;
Tous les haillons du pauvre, à toute heure, en tout lieu,
L’accusent, et, souillés, infects, pendent à Dieu.
Dieu fait tout. Par-dessus le marché, cette droite
Terrible, formidable, immense, est maladroite.
Pour punir un village, il noie un continent.
Moi, je lui dis son fait, je suis impertinent,
Je le lorgne, je flâne et ris, je baguenaude,
Son nez majestueux reçoit ma chiquenaude;
Certe, il se fâche; il dit, furieux et rêvant :
- Où diable ai-je fourré ma foudre? - Mais avant
Que ce Géronte ait mis la main sur son tonnerre,

Moi, tranquille et marchant de mon pas ordinaire,
Je suis déjà bien loin. Il foudroie à côté.
De là votre éloquence et de là ma gaîté,
Bons prédicateurs. -

-

Certe, à cela que répondre?
La foi vient couver l’œuf qu’on a vu l’erreur pondre;
L’église sur l’enfant fait peser les aïeux,
Et met à l’ignorance un dogme sur les yeux.
Le prêtre apporte à l’homme une carte routière
Du ciel profond, avec péage à la frontière.
Fouille-toi, mort. On paie au pont du paradis.
Si tu n’as pas le sou, reste avec les maudits.
Un Dieu méchant qu’on loue, un Dieu bon qui menace,
Un Dieu signé Sanchez, Trublet, de Maistre, Ignace,
Luit dans l’ombre, entouré de vieillards clignotants,
Et c’est fini; voilà de la nuit pour longtemps.
O prêtres! ce Dieu-là, sous son dais à panache,
Est du monde idiot la suprême ganache;
Il a l’utilité des vieux épouvantails;
On le sculpte, aïeul sombre, au cintre des portails;
Il écoute, un peu sourd, la cloche sa voisine
Il fait joindre les mains aux passants, il fascine
Les bons moutons humains que mènent les bedeaux,
Et charme les rapins qui, le sac sur le dos
Et les guêtres aux pieds vont barbouillant des croûtes
Dans les pays, en juin, quand les arbres des routes
S’agitent et se font mille signes de loin,
Joyeux d’avoir peigné les charrettes de foin.

V. INVENTION

Vous avez inventé le diable. Il est très bête.
Il empoigne les gens par les pieds, par la tête,
Part, et croit avoir fait quelque chose de beau

En portant Jésus-Christ au mont Tibidabo
Il dit : Je t’offre ça, la terre. Sois docile. -
Il ne s’est même pas aperçu, l’imbécile,
Que celui qu’il a pris par les cheveux, c’est Dieu;
Et que Jésus, qui cache étrangement son jeu,
Pourrait lui dire : Affreux Jocrisse, pitre immonde,
Tu me donnes la terre à moi qui tiens le monde!
Peu de religions, rêvant sur Anankè,’ Savent faire un titan, et le diable est manqué.
Il est, à n’en parler ici que comme artiste,
Plat et vulgaire; il fait enrager Jean-Baptiste
Et tente saint Antoine avec fort peu d’esprit.
C’est le démon; tremblez. Non, c’est le diable; on rit.
Trop massif, il se traîne, ou, trop maigre, il s’efflanque.
Belphégor ne ferait pas vivre un saltimbanque;
Belzébuth promené de foire en foire, aurait
Moins de succès qu’un loup pris dans une forêt.
Quant à moi, si j’étais montreur de phénomènes,
Pour faire écarquiller les prunelles humaines,
J’aimerais mieux, plutôt que Sadoch, nain bougon,
Ou Moloch, vieux pantin en forme de dragon,
Ou Bélial soufflant le feu de sa narine,
Avoir un bon lapin savant qui tambourine.
Le gouffre étant donné, toute l’ombre et l’horreur
Amoncelée autour d’un géant éclaireur,
On est surpris du peu que votre fable en tire;
Vous n’avez rien trouvé de mieux que le satyre.
Le paganisme en lui chez vous est revenu.
Toujours le pied fourchu, toujours le front cornu.
Toujours la même ampoule au dos du même gnome.
Aveugle, plus, boiteux, c’est là tout le binôme.
Lucifer, Asmodée; un infirme, un serpent;
L’un ne voit pas Dieu; l’autre erre clopin-clopant.
La maison d’or, à Rome, a sur ses vieilles briques
Des fantômes qui font des gambades lubriques,
Des nains à grosse tête et d’affreux chèvrepieds;
L’enfer chrétien les a simplement copiés.

Vous avez baptisé le faune; et c’est le diable.
Le vaste mécontent qui tire sur le câble
De l’univers, et veut casser l’amarre, afin
Que tout rentre au chaos, et que le séraphin,
L’étoile, le ciel, l’homme, et Dieu lui-même, roulent
L’un sur l’autre à vau-l’eau pêle-mêle, et s’écroulent;
Le fourbe qui, pensif, sous Jehovah créant,
Construit la trahison immense du néant;
L’être noir, l’effrayante âme démesurée
Qui fait refluer l’ombre ainsi qu’une marée,
Le parodiste amer et terrible qui prend
L’homme, et qui fait petit tout ce que Dieu fit grand,
Ce monstre, ce méchant d’une si fière taille,
Qu’il attend le tonnerre et lui livre bataille,
Qu’il a pour plaie au front le mal universel,
Et que tout l’océan n’aurait pas trop de sel
Pour sa raillerie acre et son rire insondable,
Ce colosse enchaîné sous l’Etna formidable,
Se retrouve en vos mains pygmée, avec l’ennui
D’avoir la petitesse et la laideur sur lui;
Il était dans l’Érèbe énorme; il est au bagne;
Et se voit une bosse au lieu d’une montagne.
En somme, vous avez fort peu d’invention.
Vous refaites le cercle où tournait Ixion.
La nature a le singe et l’église a le diable;
Vive le singe! il est plus gai. Dans votre fable,
Le Capricorne, étoile, astre, tombe si bas
Qu’il n’est plus que le bouc immonde des sabbats;
L’enfer triste est doublé d’un paradis féroce;
Démons, damnés, maudits, sont dans la cuve atroce,
Leur tourment fait le ciel plus céleste, et le bain
Qui les cuit, rafraîchit là-haut le chérubin;
Mais le démon a beau rôtir, il est fort terne;
Et l’on ne comprend pas que dans cette citerne
Du flamboiement sans fond, avec un tel grief
Et tant de haine, Iblis ait si peu de relief.
La femelle d’Othryx, la pieuvre dont les pattes

Sans quitter l’Ararat s’accrochaient aux Carpathes,
Et qui, plongeant sous l’eau, faisait hausser les mers,
N’est plus qu’une nabote aux petits ongles verts,
Et le peuple, qu’au fond votre impuissance blesse,
Rit devant la titane avortée en diablesse;
Linus venant du ciel sur Pégase, au relai,
Trouve votre sorcière enfourchant son balai; :
La diablerie au moine apparaît, et pullule,
Espèce de vermine, au mur de la cellule;
Mais ces monstres sont vils, ces nains sont plus blafards
Que le lourd sphinx sortant la nuit des nénuphars
Et que l’impur crapaud caché sous les broussailles;
Et l’on dirait que ceux qui firent ces grisailles
Et tous ces à-peu-près et tous ces camaïeux,
N’ont ébauche Satan que pour créer Mayeux.

VI. LES MAINS LEVÉES AU CIEL

Ciel, laisse-moi tout dire! O ciel, source des êtres,
Tu vois mon âme; il faut que je parle à ces prêtres.

VII. CHEF-D’ŒUVRE

Vous prêtez au bon Dieu ce raisonnement-ci :
— J’ai, jadis, dans un lieu charmant et bien choisi
Mis la première femme avec le premier homme;
Ils ont mangé, malgré ma défense, une pomme;
C’est pourquoi je punis les hommes à jamais.
Je les fais malheureux sur terre, et leur promets
En enfer, où Satan dans la braise se vautre,
Un châtiment sans fin pour la faute d’un autre.
Leur âme tombe en flamme et leur corps en charbon.
Rien de plus juste. Mais, comme je suis très bon,
Cela m’afflige. Hélas! comment faire? Une idée!
Je vais leur envoyer mon fils dans la Judée;
Ils le tueront. Alors, - c’est pourquoi j’y consens, -
Ayant commis un crime, ils seront innocents.

Leur voyant ainsi faire une faute complète,
Je leur pardonnerai celle qu'ils n'ont pas faite;
Ils étaient vertueux, je les rends criminels;
Donc je puis leur rouvrir mes vieux bras paternels,
Et de cette façon cette race est sauvée,
Leur innocence étant par un forfait lavée. -

VIII. SUITES

L'homme étant la souris dont le diable est le chat,
On appelle ceci Rédemption, Rachat,
Salut du monde; et, Christ est mort, donc l'homme est libre;
Et tout est désormais fondé sur l'équilibre
D'un vol de pomme avec l'assassinat de Dieu;
Soit. Mais ne rions plus quand Thor, à coups d'épieu, Cherche à tuer Matchi, le grand tigre invisible;
Ni quand l'archer Zuvoch prend l'astre Aleph pour cible;
Ne raillons plus Horus qui trompe Hermès l'expert;
Ni Sog qui joue aux dés la lune et qui la perd;
Ni la tortue ayant sur son écaille ronde
Huit grands éléphants blancs qui soutiennent le monde;
Ne raillons plus ces dieux étranges de Délos,
Ailés, palmés, sachant les noms de tous les flots,
Dont la nuit on voyait confusément les trônes
Luire aux pâles sommets des monts Acrocéraunes;
Et cessons de hausser les épaules devant
Les Hottentots prenant dans leurs poings noirs le vent,
Devant les Grecs faisant, dans un luncheon nocturne,
Manger ses petits-fils au grand-père Saturne;
Et ne bafouons plus le nègre et son tabou,
Ni ce temple meublé d'idoles en bambou
Où les sauvages vont avec les sauvagesses.

O religions, dieux, certitudes, sagesses!

IX. QUESTIONS

Qui que tu sois, qui vas devant toi, méditant
Des perquisitions dans ce ciel éclatant
Que l’homme de ses dieux au hasard ensemence,
Toi qui rêves, tu n’as de sûr que ta démence,
Toi qui montes, tu n’as de grand que ton orgueil.

D’abord, chercheur, qu’es-tu? Sur ce flamboyant seuil,
C’est là ce qu’il faut voir avant toute autre chose.

T’appelles-tu Pamphile, Euthyme, Eusèbe, Orose,
N’es-tu qu’un scoliaste, un clerc, un professeur,
D’un palimpseste obscur feuilletant l’épaisseur,
Citant Pierre, Thomas ou Paul, sois blême et triste,
Et ne demande rien au ciel, ô casuiste;
Fais en dehors de lui ton Dieu. Sois le rhéteur,
Et n’escalade pas l’inutile hauteur.
Si tu n’es que Lactance, homme, il doit te suffire
D’abattre Hiéroclès et d’écraser Porphyre;
Si tu n’es qu’un docteur d’un culte officiel,
Tu n’as rien à tirer du mystère et du ciel
Qui ne tourne au profit d’une thèse arbitraire,
Et tu ne pourras point, frêle esprit, en extraire
De meilleures raisons que celles que donna
Irénée à Blastus ou Justin à Zena.
C’est bien. Adore un texte, apprends, répète, imite,
Et fais-toi d’une lettre écrite ta limite.
Le ciel, ce précipice où tu plongerais mal,
N’enseigne rien à ceux que lie un joug fatal
Et qui ne veulent pas que le vrai les délivre.
Reste dans une ornière et rampe dans un livre.

Mais es-tu d’aventure un penseur libre, errant
Du côté de la nuit qui semble transparent,
N’ayant pas pris d’avance un parti sur l’abîme,
N’imposant aucun dogme à la brume sublime,
Ne poursuivant dans l’air, dans l’onde et dans le feu
Aucune forme humaine ou terrestre de Dieu;

Es-tu l’homme qui cherche et l’esprit qui s’envole?
Alors il te faut mieux qu’un maître, qu’une école,
Et qu’un missel, fardeau du lutrin vermoulu.
Il te faut le concret et l’abstrait, l’absolu,
L’infini sans cadrans, sans horloges, sans montres,
Sans compas, sans boussole, et les grandes rencontres
De la nuit où l’on sent passer les inconnus;
Il te faut les vents noirs, des profondeurs venus,
Qui dispersent dans l’ombre on ne sait quels messages.

Mais n’attends pas du gouffre où s’effacent les âges,
N’attends pas du grand tout, farouche, illimité,
Où flotte l’invisible, où, dans l’obscurité,
L’aile des tourbillons heurte l’aile des aigles,
Une explication de Dieu selon les règles,
Ni que, pour contenter ton pauvre esprit courbé,
L’être va te prouver l’être par A plus B.
Si tu veux que l’ensemble étoile te démontre
Un dogme, en débattant les raisons pour et contre,
Comme ferait Sanchez commentant Loyola,
La Nuit ne monte point dans cette chaire-là.
Ne confonds pas l’abîme avec un clerc; distingue
Entre Oxford et la nuit, entre l’aube et Gœttingue.
Les théologiens, les universités,
Les lourds in-folio doctement feuilletés,
Sont une chose, et l’ombre immense en est une autre.
De quelle vérité le gouffre est-il l’apôtre?
Tâche de le savoir; mais n’en espère point
Un cours de faculté suivi de point en point.
La lumière dévore et le collège broute;
L’enseignement d’en haut ne suit pas l’humble route
Par où passe en boitant l’enseignement d’en bas;
Le mystère a ses lois, la Sorbonne a ses bâts;
La science de l’Être, âpre, escarpée, ardue,
Aire idéale où fuit la pensée éperdue,
L’algèbre du grand Tout, le problème absolu,
Noir livre de la nuit où le rêve a seul lu,

Je ne te cache pas qu’il se peut qu’on l’apprenne
Dans la profondeur bleue, ineffable et sereine,
Ou dans la pâle horreur des brouillards infernaux,
Autrement qu’à Bologne au collège Albornoz.
Vois! c’est l’empyrée; aube, éther, sans bords, sans voiles,
Avec sa plénitude effroyable d’étoiles,
Étalant ses azurs au bleu jamais terni,
Espèces de cristaux vagues de l’infini.
Qu’est-ce que tu vas faire en ce cosmos sans terme,
Plus terrible s’il s’ouvre encor que s’il se ferme?
Comment ton frêle esprit se comportera-t-il
Dans ce sombre océan du grand et du subtil?
A qui parleras-tu dans ce milieu tragique?
Tout ton savoir humain, ta raison, ta logique,
Ne vont-ils pas se rompre en angles plus confus
Que les coudes du chêne au fond des bois touffus?
Dis, que vont devenir, homme, tes syllogismes
Quand ils rencontreront l’énormité des prismes?
Pourras-tu supporter l’immense brisement
De l’idéal, du vrai, du jour, du firmament?

Savoir fut de tout temps la démence des sages.
Osiris consultait l’abîme; des visages
Y viennent effarer les prophètes vaincus;
Mars inspirait Solon et Pallas Zaleucus;
Numa cherchait la nymphe en sa grotte enchantée;
Minos questionnait Zeus sur le Dictée;
Lycurgue allait à Delphe écouter Apollon.
Tout cela, c’est le gouffre; et l’obscur aquilon
Mêle au même brouillard tous ces pâles fantômes.
Tout cela, c’est la fuite immense des atomes;
C’est le doute.

Le doute, hélas! Sur cette mer,
Où tous les vents, le chaud, le froid, l’impur, l’amer,
Épuisent les fureurs de leurs rauques poitrines,
Apparaît l’archipel ténébreux des doctrines;

Sommets qui sont des ports s'ils ne sont des écueils.
Là se dressent Vesale entr'ouvrant des cercueils,
Socrate lumineux, Zenon dans un jour triste,
Pyrrhon vague, et si noir qu'on ne sait' s'il existe,
Les sept sages, pareils aux Cyclades, couverts
De nuages, de flots, de brumes et d'hivers,
Swift, Rabelais, Montaigne, Herder, Kant en détresse,
Hegel sombre, et, là-bas, cette cime, Lucrèce.

Les plus mornes, ce sont les rieurs. Avoir ri, Ce n'est pas contre l'ombre étoilée un abri;
Cela ne construit pas un toit sur notre tête
Contre l'Être, sinistre et splendide tempête;
Cela n'empêche pas les monts d'être debout;
Cela ne fait pas taire un Vésuve qui bout,
Ni les clairons de l'ombre aux bouches des borées;
Cela n'empêche pas les mers démesurées
D'offrir on ne sait quels hommages écumants
A la pâle planète au fond des firmaments;
Rire, cela ne peut déconcerter la rose
Qui s'ouvre en juin, ayant pour devoir d'être éclose;
Fermer l'œil et crier : Je lie veux pas les voir!
Cela n'empêche pas les rayons de pleuvoir.
Riez. Soit. L'Inconnu derrière sa muraille
Ne s'inquiète pas de Lucien qui raille;
Ni les eaux, ni les champs, ni les fleurs, ni les blés,
Ni les forêts ne sont d'un sarcasme troublés;
L'invisible cocher des sept astres du pôle
Ne baisse pas le front, ne tourne pas l'épaule,
En poussant au zénith l'effrayant chariot,
Pour voir ce que Voltaire écrit à Thiriot.
Les rieurs sont-ils sûrs de leur rire? Leur style
Élide volontiers Dieu, syllabe inutile;
Du vieux surplis du prêtre ils chiffonnent l'empois;
Mais que veulent-ils? Faire aux croyants contrepoids.
Est-ce tout? A quoi bon? Quel choix dans la nuit noire!
Le hasard de nier ou le hasard de croire!

Que sert, dans cette énigme où l’homme est enfoui,
De balbutier Non parce qu’on bégaie Oui?

Donc, esprit, prends ton vol, si tu te sens des ailes.
Mais, homme, quel que soit l’éclair de tes prunelles,
N’espère pas, si haut que ton âme ait monté,
T’envoler au delà de ton humanité.
Va! mais, songes-y bien, nul ne sort de sa sphère.
L’Être en qui tout se fond, mais de qui tout diffère,
A fait les régions pour qu’on s’y renfermât;
Et l’oiseau le plus libre a pour cage un climat.

II. Philosophie

Homme, qu’est-ce que c’est que tes cérémonies
Misérables, devant les choses infinies?
A quoi bon tes poeans, tes chants, tes hosannas?
Pourquoi, n’ayant pas plus de jours que tu n’en as,
Prier au pied d’un tas d’autels contradictoires?
Quelle manie, atome en proie aux purgatoires,
As-tu d’interpeller les cieux? et quel besoin
De prendre l’invisible et l’obscur à témoin?
Crois-tu féconder l’Ombre en y semant des rites,
Des formules de nuit sur du brouillard transcrites?
T’imagines-tu donc, être aux songes bornés,
Que, lorsqu’avec tes yeux, tes oreilles, ton nez,
Tu bâtis un fétiche ayant ta ressemblance,
En t’adressant au vide insondable, au silence,
Au mystère, à l’horreur, tu les amèneras
A lui faire des pieds quand tu lui fais des bras?
Te figures-tu pas que le gouffre, où Socrate,
Les druides d’Armor, les mages de l’Euphrate,
Jean de Patmos, et Dante, et Thalès ont frémi,
Entrera pour sa part, et de compte à demi,
Dans la formation de quelque être inutile
Que la réalité de toutes parts mutile?
Quiconque, apôtre, augure, ou barde au large front,
Forge un Dieu de son mieux et l’offre au ciel profond,
N’aperçoit que la brume et la noirceur confuse
Du firmament sinistre et calme, qui refuse;
L’homme a beau présenter un Dieu, prémédité
Dans son aveuglement et dans sa surdité,
Que ce Dieu soit indou, païen, grec ou biblique,
L’ombre ne donne pas à l’homme la réplique;
Sans écho, sans qu’un signe ait paru dans l’éther,
L’Être a vu par Orphée enfanter Jupiter,
Allah par Mahomet, Jehovah par Moïse;
La négation triste est dans le vide assise;

Le prêtre par l'abîme est toujours éconduit;
L'immobilité grave et morne de la nuit
Suffit au Tout lugubre, et le gouffre n'invente
Aucune idole, ayant l'éternelle épouvante.

Ah! tu montes vers l'ombre avec un Dieu tout fait.
Que Dieu soit. Ton néant de grandeur le revêt;
Ta nuit lui pose au front l'aurore éblouissante;
Puis au-dessous de lui tu mets une descente
D'anges, d'êtres ayant l'azur pour point d'appui,
Décroissant jusqu'à toi, puis croissant jusqu'à lui.
Il te faut ta série allant du ciel à terre;
Tu veux d'un seul regard embrasser le mystère;
Voir le point d'arrivée et le point de départ;
Tu veux dire : voici la moitié, puis le quart;
Compter les échelons; tu rêves ce quadrille :
Dieu, puis l'archange, et l'homme en regard du mandrille;
Eh bien, non. Tout n'est qu'Un. Sache, ô sombre écolier,
Qu'on ne monte pas Dieu comme ton escalier;
Il est dans une ruche aussi bien que dans Rome;
Le ver n'est pas plus loin de l'infini que l'homme.

Nous autres les songeurs que dévorent la faim
Et la soif de connaître, et qui, sans peur, sans fin,
Creusons l'éternité formidable et candide,
Du côté noir, ainsi que du côté splendide
Où l'on voit tant de vie et de flamme abonder,
Nous avons beau guetter, contempler, regarder,
Observer, épier, jamais nous n'aperçûmes
Pas plus ce que tu crois que ce que tu présumes.
Connaître à fond Celui qui Vit, ses attributs,
Son essence, sa loi, son pouvoir, — de tels buts
Sont plus hauts que l'effort de l'homme qui trépasse.
Les invisibles sont. Ils emplissent l'espace,
Ils -peuplent la lumière, ils parlent dans les bruits;
Mais ne ressemblent point à ce que tu construis.

Renonce à fatiguer le réel de tes songes;
L’Ombre, en bas comme en haut, repousse tes mensonges;
Le tonnerre n’est pas l’ami ni l’ennemi
De ton Dieu que ne hait ni n’aime la fourmi;
Quand ta dévotion dresse un temple et s’y mute,
L’ouragan en ricane et l’abeille en murmure’;
Tu n’es pas moins raillé du nain que du géant;
Tes dragons sont d’airain, tes dieux sont de néant;
Tu peux les ciseler, mais non. les faire vivre;
L’oiseau craint le serpent et perche sur ta guivre;
Sculpte tes déités! dans leurs yeux de granit
Le vautour fait sa fiente et le crapaud son nid!

Toi-même tu rirais, si tu pouvais connaître
A quel point tu ne peux, homme, rien faire naître,
Rien construire en dehors des formes que tu vois;
A quel point tous tes arts, travaillant à la fois,
Tes peintres, tes sculpteurs, sont nuls pour rien produire
Hors du cercle où tu vois un jour pâle te luire;
Jusqu’où sont puérils tes rêves délirants;
Quelle est, pour inventer, l’enfance des plus grands;
Combien est infécond Rembrandt, et dans quel lange Sont encor Phidias, Rubens et Michel-Ange!
La nature, l’aïeule aux mille sombres voix
Rugissantes parmi les antres et les bois,
La nourrice des loups, des ours et des panthères,
A des dessous profonds peuplés de noirs mystères
Qui te feraient pâlir si tu les pénétrais,
Et, dans l’énormité des eaux et des forêts,
Riche en monstres, n’a pas besoin de tes chimères.
Crois-tu pas qu’épousant tes songes éphémères,
Elle accepte ton hydre ou ta licorne, ayant
Son tigre, son lion au regard flamboyant,
Et son hippopotame horrible, et qu’elle abdique
Son grand aigle des monts pour ton aigle héraldique?
Ah! pauvre homme inutile et fou sous le ciel bleu,
Tu ne peux faire un monstre et tu veux faire un Dieu!

•

Et puis quand tu l’auras, fort bien, que tu lui fasses
Deux sexes comme à Fô, comme à Janus deux faces,
Que tu l’ornes d’un tas de titres et de noms,
Le voilà sur ses pieds, c’est Dieu, nous le tenons,
Où le mettre? En quel gouffre, homme? ou dans quelle sphère?
Perceras-tu, toi l’homme, un trou dans la lumière
Pour y loger ce Dieu que ton esprit forma
D’un peu de Jupiter et d’un peu de Brahma?
Ce Zeus, cet Allah, ce Pan, que tu fabriques
Avec tes passions féroces et lubriques,
Comment le mettras-tu dans les astres? Quel clou
Prendras-tu pour clouer au fond des cieux Vishnou?
Fusses-tu secondé d’Alcée et de Terpandre,
Dis, comment feras-tu pour fixer, pour suspendre,
Et pour faire tenir Erigone aux seins nus,
Érynnis, Astarté, Bellone, la Vénus,
Ces buveuses de sang et ces prostituées,
Dans la façade énorme et pâle des nuées?

•

Ah! noir vivant, tu veux un Dieu! Qu’en feras-tu?
Auras-tu moins d’orgueil, homme, et plus de vertu?
Embrasseras-tu l’homme? aimeras-tu ton frère?
Deviendras-tu flambeau? briseras-tu la guerre,
Ce vieux glaive éternel d’où dégoutte le sang?
Dis, jetteras-tu moins de pierres en passant
Aux penseurs, aux héros, aux martyrs, aux apôtres?
Laisseras-tu, devant l’affliction des autres,
Entrer la pitié blanche et douce dans ton cœur?
Seras-tu plus pensif, plus grave et moins moqueur,
Surtout pour les déchus et pour les incurables?
Seras-tu moins hautain devant les misérables,
Plus doux pour l’insensé qu’entraînent ses penchants,

Moins grand pour les petits et meilleur aux méchants?
Réponds, mêleras-tu, dis, un peu de tendresse,
O juste, à ta justice, ô sage, à ta sagesse?
Feras-tu grâce au monstre en pleurs, et seras-tu
Un Abel moins altier pour Caïn abattu?
Et, si tu n’es qu’un monstre et qu’un Caïn toi-même,
Viendras-tu t’effarer à la lueur suprême,
Et te prosterner, pâle, heureux, épouvanté,
Sous la prodigieuse et clémente clarté?
Un Dieu tient de la place, homme, dans une sphère.
Avant d’en vouloir un, il faut savoir qu’en faire.
Un Dieu, quand ce n’est pas un port, c’est un péril.
Ah! la plupart du temps, sénile et puéril,
Importunant les cieux, livide solitude,
Tu veux un Dieu, de peur d’en perdre l’habitude,.
Parce que du passé tu subis l’ascendant,
Tu veux un Dieu, pour rien, pour faire, en attendant
Que ton cadavre tombe au sépulcre et pourrisse,
Ce que ton père a fait, ce qu’a fait ta nourrice,
Par ennui, pour sentir sur ta tête un patron,
Pour avoir quelque chose à mettre en ton juron.

•

Enfin te rends-tu compte un peu du vaste rêve
Où ton destin commence, où ton destin s’achève,
Qu’on nomme l’univers, et qui flotte infini?
En vois-tu le côté fatal, blessé, puni?
Le lait coule, et le sang aussi; l’esprit s’effraie.
Sous la grande mamelle on voit la grande plaie.
Lucine pleure ayant devant elle Atropos.
Hélas! hélas! s’il est quelqu’un qui, sans repos,
Crée, engendre et produit, homme, il est quelque chose
Qui sans trêve détruit, dévore et décompose.
Ce fileur ne fait rien que pour ce déchireur.

Les êtres sont épars dans l’indicible horreur.

L’ombre en étouffe plus que le jour n’en anime.
La lumière s’épuise à traverser l’abîme;
Les rayons dans l’éther s’enfoncent éperdus;
L’obscurité, vers qui tous les bras sont tendus,
Livide, est toujours là qui fait la nuit, et creuse
Ce trou pour engloutir la clarté généreuse;
Quoi que fasse l’étoile et l’aube à l’horizon,
Tout n’est qu’une malsaine et nocturne prison;
Malgré le vaste effort de l’aurore, tout souffre;
Quelle épaisseur de nuit ne faut-il pas au gouffre
Pour amortir la flèche énorme du soleil?
Eh bien, vois! Mars est noir; Saturne est-il vermeil?
Les azurs sont brumeux, les planètes sont pâles.
Quant à ton globe à toi, des pleurs, des cris, des râles.
Ta sphère a-t-elle un Dieu? S’il existe, il dément
Sans cesse la beauté, l’astre, le firmament;
Que ce Dieu donne un chant aux oiseaux, qu’il revête
Le rossignol de joie et d’amour la fauvette,
Qu’importe s’il les fait guetter par l’épervier!
Soi-même s’abhorrer, soi-même s’envier,
Telle est l’obscure loi de l’être lamentable.
Ton affreux ciel mugit comme un bœuf dans l’étable;
Quant au genre humain, vois!
    Esclaves et bourreaux,
Vil tas de cendre ayant pour tisons les héros,
Paille éteinte d’un souffle et d’un souffle allumée,
Foule qu’on voit passer et dans de la fumée
Fuir après qu’on l’a vue un instant se mouvoir!
A peine en reste-t-il quelque chose de noir.
Ses chefs n’ont pas de but, ses dieux n’ont pas de norme;
Rien que pour les nommer, son histoire est difforme;
Les canons remplaçant les chars armés de faulx,
Des trônes, des bûchers, d’affreux arcs triomphaux,
Des profils de césars équestres sous des porches,
De toutes ces lueurs l’homme faisant des torches,
Un reflux d’ombre après un flux de liberté,
De la haine et du bruit, voilà l’humanité.

La vie est de la nuit, la mort seule est lucide;
La science aboutit à l’âme suicide;
Tout ment; et les esprits se blessent aux scalpels.
Les sens à la raison font d’obscènes appels;
Sur la chair croît le vice, infâme parasite;
Le mal tente l’esprit, l’esprit tremblant hésite.
La conscience est là pour régler ces débats?
Soit. Mais a-t-elle peur? pourquoi parler si bas?
Vois ton indignité, dont tu fais ta victoire.
Est-il, bien que le ciel ait aussi sa nuit noire,
Un coin du firmament, d’ombre ou d’azur baigné,
Qui ne jette sur l’homme un regard indigné?
Est-il une vertu que l’homme dans ses doutes
N’ait flétrie ou niée? Interroge-les toutes.
Demande au dévouement, au courage, à l’amour,
Ce qu’ils pensent de l’homme, âpre et vil tour à tour.
La justice en a peur quand elle voit sa toge.
Questionne sur lui la sagesse; interroge
La faiseuse d’ingrats, la mère au sein mordu,
La bonté. Le devoir est un flambeau perdu.
Qui grandit soudain penche, et qui naît périclite.
O vivants, Démocrite aussi bien qu’Héraclite,
Rabelais comme Job, Timon comme Pangloss,
Tout s’écroule en chimère ou se fond en sanglots.

Là, des pôles tombeaux, ici, des déserts mornes
Où rôdent le bubale et la vipère à cornes,
Où le soleil emplit de venin les buissons,
Où la lumière sert à faire des poisons.
Le soir, comme un mourant les horizons blêmissent;
Ce globe, couvert d’eaux et d’arbres qui frémissent,
Entrecoupe on ne sait quels cris et quels abois
Dans un balancement de vagues et de bois.
Tout menace et tout tremble; et la mer accoutume
La terre misérable à l’immense amertume.
Homme, ton univers a l’air d’être inquiet.
Devant qui? Tout s’enfuit. Le jour craint, la nuit hait.

L’être est un bloc confus de masques et de bouches
Mêlés lugubrement dans des effrois farouches;
Comme deux oiseaux noirs sans fin se poursuivant
L’éclair étreint la nuit dans la fuite du vent,
Et la nature entr’ouvre au fond de ces alarmes
Son œil mystérieux, noyé de sombres larmes.
L’être est morne, odieux à sonder, triste à voir.
De là les battements d’ailes du désespoir.

•

Tu dis : - Je vois le mal, et je veux le remède.
Je cherche le levier, et je suis Archimède. -

Le remède est ceci : Fais le bien. Le levier,
Le voici : Tout aimer et ne rien envier.
Homme, veux-tu trouver le vrai? cherche le juste.

•

Mais quant au dogme, neuf et jeune, ou vieux et fruste,
Quant aux saints fabliaux, quant aux religions
Inoculant l’erreur dans leurs contagions,
Semant les fictions, les terreurs, les présages,
Quant à tous ces docteurs, à ces essaims de sages
Qui vont l’un maudissant ce que l’autre a béni,
Qui, volant, bourdonnant, harcelant l’infini,
Feraient abriter Dieu sous une moustiquaire,
Quant au daïri roi, quant au pape vicaire,
Quant à tous ces korans que chaque âge inventa,
Edda, Veda, Talmud, King ou Zend-Avesta,
Ce n’est qu’une confuse et perverse mêlée;
En les étudiant, ô pauvre âme aveuglée,
Tu n’apprendras pas plus le réel qu’en cherchant
A composer, avec des insultes, un chant!

Et qu’importe, après tout, que l’homme prie ou croie;
Qu’avec son propre songe, inepte, il se foudroie;
Qu’il adore le Tout informe, ou l’esprit pur,
Une statue en bronze ou bien un pan d’azur;
Que l’homme au ciel s’égare ou qu’il se fanatise
Avec la fauve odeur des bûchers qu’il attise;
Que sa religion ait des pieds et des mains
Et des sens, et se livre aux appétits humains,
Ou soit vapeur, fumée, ombre; que dans l’église
Son Dieu se pétrifie ou se volatilise;
Que l’homme, impur, s’aveugle à suivre n’importe où
Tantôt l’abstraction, tantôt le manitou;
Que ce soit la chandelle ou l’astre qu’il contemple;
Qu’il adore une idée ou qu’il adore un temple;
Que, croyant voir des dieux, au fond des bois épais,
Il nomme Argès l’éclair, la foudre Stéropès;
Que, l’un couché dans l’or, l’autre nu sur des nattes,
Le nègre ait ses tabous et César ses pénates;
Que le flamme encense en chlamyde de lin
Le morne Olympien, le noir Capitolin;
Qu’on ait un Dieu hantant l’alcôve impériale,
Un pour le sénateur, un pour le curiale;
Que les dieux soient divers et mesurés aux rangs,
Pour l’esclave petits et pour le maître grands;
Qu’en l’honneur d’un Indra quelconque, le brahmine
Se laisse dévorer vivant par la vermine;
Qu’on se damne en carême â manger du jambon;
Que pour faire un saint Pierre un Jupiter soit bon,
Et que la foule, au fond des hautes basiliques,
Use un orteil païen de baisers catholiques,
Si bien qu’un vieux Très-Haut ressert et se revend,
Et qu’avec un dieu mort on bâcle un saint vivant;
Qu’ainsi qu’un terre-neuve attaque un boule-dogue,
La mosquée en fureur morde la synagogue;
Que Rome ait en dédain Moscou; que Borgia
Soit pour la Vierge et non pour la Panagia;
Que les frontons sacrés changent d’hiéroglyphe;

Que le blanc d’Hildebrand soit le noir de Caïphe;
Que l’homme à Mahomet donne un dôme écrasé,
A Notre-Dame un chœur fait en bois menuisé,
Au grand éléphant blanc un éventail de plumes;
Qu’il ait ses dieux brochés en plusieurs gros volumes;
Qu’il discute si c’est le Pinde, âpre coteau,
Qui vit l’hydre déesse, Amphitrite Céto,
Sortir de la mer bleue et triste, ou si l’Élide
La première aperçut l’effroyable annélide;
Qu’il donne Thèbe aux sphinx et Tyr aux belzébuths;
Qu’il appelle le jour Adonis ou Phébus;
Qu’il écoute de Pan les invisibles flûtes;
Qu’il bâtisse un cromlech avec des pierres brutes,
Ou fasse à Phidias sculpter le Parthénon;
Qu’il juche Dieu sur l’aigle ou bien sur un ânon;
Qu’il serve le Baal avec la Baaltide;
Qu’il soit évêque, et propre, ou derviche, et fétide,
Vil caloyer barbu, beau diacre tonsuré,
Très révérend ministre,,ou monsieur le curé;
Que la sottise autour du mensonge se groupe;
Que le meilleur orfèvre, avec sa bonne loupe,
Ne puisse distinguer les dieux vrais des dieux faux;
Que le rêve ait Endor, que la chair ait Paphos;
Qu’avant de croire en Dieu, le genre humain le crée;
Que sous la pression de la crainte sacrée,
Que, sous la pesanteur des vagues régions,
Les superstitions et les religions
Sortent de son esprit comme l’eau des éponges;
Que, sans savoir pourquoi, dans un noir tas de songes,
Il choisisse tel dogme ou tel autre; qu’en bloc,
Acceptant Irmensul, il rejette Moloch;
Qu’il adopte une idole infâme et s’en entiche,
Faisant le délicat pour quelque autre fétiche;
Que, sur Dieu, pour savoir s’il est de bonne humeur,
Il consulte le vent ou le flot en rumeur,
Ou la flamme, ou l’oiseau planant dans des tempêtes;
Qu’il nourrisse ce Dieu de la viande des bêtes,

De gâteaux sans levain ou de pain trois fois cuit,
Qu’est-ce que cela fait, homme, au puits de la nuit?
Qu’est-ce que cela fait au précipice énorme,
Où la vie en de l’ombre et du vent se transforme,
Où le songeur hagard n’aperçoit vaguement
Qu’un incommensurable et sombre écroulement,
Où le jour, blêmissant dans les vides sans bornes,
Meurt dans l’aveuglement des immensités mornes!

Invente, si tu veux, toi, ta doctrine aussi,
Et quand tu l’auras faite et construite, crois-y;
Combine, tu le peux, d’autres idolâtries.

Après ces tourbillons de croyances flétries,
Après ces larves, Bel, Ammon, Janus, Rhéa,
Osiris, Odin, Thor, que la guerre créa,
Ces enfers, ces édens, ces cieux, ces rêveries,
Et les houris donnant la main aux walkyries,
Homme, après le dieu bœuf, après le dieu dragon,
Après Chronos, après Magog, après Dagon,
Apportés, remportés par les nuits grandissantes,
Qu’importe à l’infini livide que tu sentes
Une religion de plus, flottant au bord
De tout ce que tu fais dans la brume du sort,
Promener sur ton front son souffle de fantôme,
Et, dans l’ombre sans forme, où tu rêves un dôme,
Dans le ciel, plus menteur et plus noir que la mer,
Un Dieu de plus passer sur le poil de ta chair!

•

Toute religion, homme, est un exemplaire
De l’impuissance ayant pour appui la colère.

Toute religion est un avortement
Du rêve humain devant l’être et le firmament;
Le dogme, quel qu’il soit, juif ou grec, rapetisse

A sa taille le vrai, l’idéal, la justice,
La lumière, l’azur, l’abîme, l’unité;
Il coupe l’absolu sur sa brièveté;
Tous les cultes ne sont, à Memphis comme à Rome,
Que des réductions de l’éternel sur l’homme,
Fragments d’indivisible, ombres de la clarté,
Masques de l’infini pris sur l’humanité.
Leur tonnerre est un bras qui lance un dard de soufre;
Leur cercle n’admet pas l’immensité; leur gouffre
Est comblé d’un Odin ou d’un Adonaï.

Eh bien, penseurs, niez Olympe et Sinaï;
Au lieu de ce vain ciel qui sur un mont s’appuie,
Et d’Éole trouant les outres’ de la pluie,
Et des quatre chevaux d’Apollon hennissant
De joie et de fureur vers la nuit qui descend;
Au lieu de ces palais de nuage et de flammes
Où flottent, transparents, des dieux hommes et femmes,
Où, les foudres au poing, rôdent tous ces fléaux
Que l’homme appelle Allah, Sabaoth, Fô, Théos;
Au lieu de l’éléphant pontifical qui groupe sur sa tête les cieux et l’enfer sur sa croupe;
Au lieu de cette mer du désert ténébreux
Qui laisse fuir Moïse et passer les Hébreux
Entre ses flots ainsi qu’entre deux murs de verre;
Au lieu de cette lune étrange du Calvaire,
Toute rouge du sang que Jésus a sué;
Au lieu du faux soleil qu’arrête Josué,
Et de l’eau sur laquelle un Christ étoile marche,
Montrez aux bonzes noirs, gardant le temple et l’arche,
Quoi? la Réalité, ce prodige inouï,
La lumière, ce vaste aspect épanoui,
La mort créant la vie, et transformant la tombe
En crèche où fait son nid l’âme, cette colombe,
Le miracle des gaz, des forces, des aimants,
L’infini ténébreux, plein d’éblouissements,
L’ombre ayant des soleils plus que la mer n’a d’ondes,

La confrontation formidable des mondes,
L’étoile, astre central, et la terre tournant,
L’homme, atome perdu dans ce tout rayonnant,
Les comètes, les feux, les souffles, les bolides,
Les sphères tourbillons et les globes solides,
Les univers sans fin, splendides visions,
Et les créations et les créations;
Montrez les profondeurs saintes; montrez aux prêtres
Les abîmes de vie et les océans d’êtres,
Vous les verrez crier : Cela n’est pas! horreur!
Vous verrez se ruer les cultes eh fureur,
Païens, sur Hicétas, chrétiens, sur Galilée,
Et l’autel tressaillir sur la terre ébranlée,
Et les pâles docteurs frémir dans le saint lieu,
Et les religions reculer devant Dieu.

•

Fanatismes! terreurs! la fable est sur les hommes!
Sur tous ces yeux fermés faisant de sombres sommes!
Quel rêve! quel monceau d’olympes insensés!
Que d’effroi! que d’enfer!
   Assez, prêtres! assez!

La bacchante au flanc nu rit dans le bois infâme;
L’Indou qui saigne et pend aux crocs de fer, se pâme;
La mère, avec la chair de son enfant, nourrit
Le dieu-fournaise aux dents de feu, Baal-Bérith;
Ici, temple à la Nuit; là, temple à la Famine;
Le cheval de Piman de la Mecque chemine
Sur des hommes couchés à terre, qui lui font
Un fumier de leur âme, un pavé de leur front;
La Chine donne aux mœurs, aux arts, aux lois, aux codes
La forme monstrueuse et folle des pagodes.
Que d’hommes ont vécu sans jamais être nés!

Et ceux-ci, ces croyants épris et forcenés

Sur qui le sphinx romain pose ses larges griffes,
Que d’affreux hommes dieux, qu’ils appellent pontifes,
Courbent sous leur vil sceptre, infaillible, accepté,
Insolent pour l’azur et pour l’éternité,
Oh! les infortunés! est-il rien de plus triste
Que leur sinistre foi dans la Rome papiste!
Rome, charnier sous l’aigle, est, sous la croix, bazar.
Quel est le plus hideux de Pierre ou de César?
Rome a l’un après l’autre. Épouvantable liste!
Ce vampire c’est Jean, ce spectre c’est Caliste;
Boniface a des fils de ses nièces; Urbain
Fait saigner et mourir cinq prêtres dans leur bain;
Borgia dans Gomorrhe y serait une tache;
Grégoire tient la torche et Sixte tient la hache;
Félix est un désastre et Simplicius ment;
Cet Innocent brûlait les hommes, ce Clément
Les massacrait, ce Pie est un vendeur du temple;
Jule est l’épouvantail comme Christ est l’exemple;
Toutes les passions se tenant par la main,
Toute la turpitude et tout l’orgueil humain
Se donnent rendez-vous dans la ville éternelle;
Tout vient là, dol, parjure, impureté charnelle,
Tous les forfaits connus et tous les inconnus,
Tous les crimes masqués et tous les vices nus;
Rome appelle à son lit tous ces passants infâmes;
Rome, l’entremetteuse et la marchande d’âmes,
Rit, et se prostitue, une tiare au front;
Et, tandis que Brutus tressaille de l’affront
Et que Trajan frémit sur sa haute colonne,
Eux, ces fous, se livrant à cette Babylone,
Chantent, et, croyant voir la céleste Sion,
D’elle ils adorent tout, fraude, inquisition,
La luxure, l’horreur, le bûcher, le massacre,
Et les saints qu’elle fait et les rois qu’elle sacre,
Et, l’extase au cœur, fiers du joug, captifs, amants,
Ils respirent l’odeur de ses vomissements!

Et dire que la terre est tout entière en proie
Aux affirmations de ces prêtres sans joie,
Sans pitié, sans bonté, sans flambeau, sans raison,
Dont l’ombre, l’ombre, l’ombre et l’ombre est l’horizon!

III. Rien

Mais quelqu’un me vient-il en aide, ô nuit farouche?
J’écoutais, j’entendis. Ombre obscure! Une bouche
Parlait, et dégageait de la brume en parlant.

- « La croyance est une hydre et vous ronge le flanc.
Niez tout. O vivants, l’atome sort, puis rentre.
Pas de ciel, pas d’enfer. L’ombre éparse. Aucun centre.
Rien n’existe en deçà, rien n’existe au delà.
Tout meurt. Dormez. »

   Ainsi l’étrange voix parla.
O nuit! qu’est-ce que c’est que cet auxiliaire?
Mais écoutons. La voix poursuit.
     « O fourmilière,
O foule, ô genre humain! L’homme flotte, et c’est tout.
Cette apparence d’être est un moment debout;
Il palpite le temps d’être inique, funeste,
Méchant, obscène, aveugle; et qu’est-ce qu’il en reste?
La terre le reprend et dit : A-t-il été?
Et la terre elle-même est-elle? O cécité!
Ténèbres! Vous nommez ces feux follets des âmes?
C’est du néant. Passant, qu’est-ce que tu réclames?

« Homme, tu n’as à toi que l’heure où tu te meus,
Triste ou gai, sage ou fou, dans l’affreux tout brumeux!
Goutte d’eau, quand la mer s’ouvre, à quoi bon la lutte?
Prends ce que ton destin a de clair, la minute,
Avril quand il sourit, la fleur quand elle éclôt.
Laisse au gouffre éternel rouler l’éternel flot.
Vis, meurs.
   « Tu veux un Dieu, toi l’homme, afin d’en être
Si tu veux l’infini, c’est pour y reparaître.
Quoi! vivre avant la vie et vivre après la mort!

Traverser toute l’ombre immense avec ton sort!
Que ce cosmos, couvert du voile babélique,
De ton moi misérable à jamais se complique!
Que tout ce que régit l’inconcevable loi
Soit nécessairement un composé de toi!
Que tu n’en puisses point être absent! que tu fasses,
Toujours vivant, le fond de toutes ces surfaces!
Que jamais l’être humain, rayé, clos, aboli,
Ne s’appelle trépas et ne se nomme oubli!
Quoi! ce qu’a reçu l’homme, il ne doit pas le rendre!
Il est; donc il sera! Quoi, l’homme, cette cendre
Sur qui le vent de vie obscurément souffla,
Être quelqu’un! Quel rêve absurde fais-tu là!
Ce monde est-il? Qui sait? N’est-il pas? C’est possible.
Tout flotte. Le certain n’est pas dans le visible.
Mais toi, fourmi, ciron, grain de poussière, avoir
Une place quelconque en ce grand chaos noir!
Vain songe du néant dont ton orgueil est dupe!
Vas-tu croire qu’un Dieu ‘- s’il existe - s’occupe
De toi, larve! et qu’il veille et médite, agité
Par l’éphémère au fond dé son éternité!

« Matière ou pur esprit, bloc sourd ou dieu sublime,
Le monde, quel qu’il soit, c’est ce qui dans l’abîme
N’a pas dû commencer et ne doit pas finir.
Quelle prétention as-tu d’appartenir
A l’unité suprême et d’en faire partie,
Toi, fuite! toi monade en naissant engloutie,
Qui jettes sur le gouffre un regard insensé,
Et qui meurs quand le cri de ta vie est poussé!
« Ah! triste Adam, flocon qui fonds presque avant d’être, Lugubre humanité, n’est-ce pas trop de naître?
N’est-ce pas trop d’avoir à vivre, en vérité,
O morne genre humain, bref, rapide, emporté!
Il ne te suffit pas, quoique ta fange souffre,
D’apparaître une fois dans la lueur du gouffre!
L’homme éternel, voilà ce que l’homme comprend.

Tu demandes au ciel, au grand ciel ignorant
Qui t’assourdit de foudre et t’aveugle d’étoiles,
Quel fil te noue, ô mouche, à ses énormes toiles,
Comment il tient à l’homme, et quel est ce lien?
Tu devrais te sentir pourtant tellement rien
Qu’avec ce vil néant que tu nommes ta sphère
Le ciel - en supposant qu’il soit - n’a rien à faire!
Tout ce qu’il peut cacher, couver ou contenir,
Est hors de toi, qui n’as qu’un soir pour avenir.
O le risible effort de rattacher ce dôme
De prodige, d’horreur et d’ombre à ton atome!
Quel besoin as-tu donc d’être de l’univers?
Chair promise au tombeau, contente-toi des vers!

« Et d’ailleurs, à quoi bon avoir un personnage
Dans ce mystérieux et fatal engrenage?
A quoi bon être un pli dans ces flux et reflux
Qui font effort pour être et déjà ne sont plus?
A quoi bon être un chiffre et compter dans la foule
Qui n’est que de l’écume ajoutée à la houle?
Regarde : tout est vain, fuyant, triste, inouï.
Avant d’être apparu, tout est évanoui.
Ces groupes de soleils, de globes, de planètes,
Moins funèbres peut-être ou plus noirs que vous n’êtes;
Ce zodiaque obscur qui jamais ne finit
De descendre au nadir, de monter au zénith;
Ces Jupiters, ces Mars, ces Vénus, ces Saturnes,
Qui semblent des édens ou des bagnes nocturnes,
Et qu’on rêve peuplés d’anges ou de démons
D’après l’ombre que font sur leur face les monts;
Ces visions de cieux que rougit ou que dore
Tantôt le soir sanglant, tantôt la fauve aurore;
Ces lunes dont on voit l’épouvantable flanc;
Ces blêmes tourbillons, ces abîmes roulant
Des apparitions de mondes dans leurs vagues;
Cette succession de créations vagues
Qu’on aperçoit au fond des gouffres entr’ouverts;

Cet enchevêtrement d’astres et d’univers
Dont la série immense et pâle se dévide
Dans le ciel, dit Platon; Pyrrhon dit : dans le vide;
Spectres qui n’ont entre eux rien de commun, sinon
Qu’un chaînon traîne et tire à lui l’autre chaînon;
Ces constellations confusément tournées
Par la roue invisible et sombre des années,
Et qui te feraient peur si nous pénétrions
Jusqu’aux profonds azurs de leurs septentrions;
Ces masques effrayants d’une vie inconnue
Qu’entrevoit le songeur au-delà de la nue;
Ces firmaments qu’on sonde et dont on n’est pas sûr;
L’aérolithe, errant en foule dans l’azur,
Plus nombreux que l’abeille au sommet de l’Hymète,
Le météore au vol furieux, la comète
Qui s’évade d’un ciel comme d’un cabanon,
Tous ces mondes ne sont que les formes, sans nom
De l’obscurité vaste et morne des espaces;
Et que gagneras-tu, toi, pauvre esprit qui passes,
Quand tu mêleras l’homme,’ et son trouble, et son bruit,
A ces nœuds de fumée ondoyant dans la nuit?
« Dieu n’est pas. Nie et dors. Tu n’es pas responsable.
Ris de l’inaccessible, étant l’insaisissable.
Sois humble, pas de ciel. Pas d’enfer, sois content.
Fais ce que tu voudras. Personne ne t’attend.
J’ai dit. - »

Soit. Plus d’enfer. -

Mais rien après la vie,
Rien avant; la lueur des ténèbres suivie;
Tout ramené pour l’homme à l’instinct animal;
Le bien n’ayant pas plus raison contre le mal
Que le tropique n’a raison contre le pôle;

De Sade, triomphant, raillant Vincent de Paule;
Tout réduit à l’atome inerte, inconscient,
Sourd, tantôt tourmenteur et tantôt patient;
Tout dans les appétits et dans les épigastres;
Par l’aube, par le jour, par la nuit, par les astres,
Par l’univers, sur l’homme ouvert et refermé,
Socrate démenti, Lacenaire affirmé;
Pour tout dogme : - « Il n’est point de vertus ni de vices;
« Sois tigre, si tu peux. Pourvu que tu jouisses,, « Vis n’importe comment pour finir n’importe où; » -
Caligulà le sage, Aristide le fou; ‘;
Jésus-Christ et Judas désagrégés ensemble,
Puis remêlés à l’ombre éternelle qui tremble,
Sans que l’atome, au fond de l’être ou tout périt,
Sache s’il fut Judas ou s’il fut Jésus-Christ! -

Oui, c’est vrai, plus d’enfer, rêve hideux de Rome,
Plus d’affreux punisseur rôdant derrière l’homme.

Mais tout nivelant tout; je croyais, tu niais,
Qu’importe! l’honneur sot, le martyre niais;
Pas d’âme; pas de moi qui survive et qui dure;
L’infâme égalité de l’astre et de l’ordure;
La pourriture, ô deuil î reprenant tout Brutus;
C’est-à-dire pas plus d’astres que de vertus;
L’azur roulant, aux plis de ses ténébreux voiles,
Dans un spectre de ciel des fantômes d’étoiles! -

Oui, c’est vrai, plus de fourche au poing de Lucifer,
Plus d’éternel bûcher flamboyant, plus d’enfer.

Mais l’atome Attila, fatal, irresponsable,
Comme l’atome feu, comme l’atome sable,
Innocent, ne pouvant pas plus être accusé
Pour un peuple aboli, pour un monde écrasé
Que l’un d’éboulement et l’autre d’incendie;
Que Job racle sa plaie et qu’Homère mendie,

Trimalcion les vaut, faisant un bon repas;
Marc-Aurèle? A quoi bon? Tibère? Pourquoi pas?
Néron, Trajan, ce n'est qu'une forme qui flotte;
Ce que vous nommez czar, tyran, bourreau, despote,
Mange de l'homme ainsi que vous mangez du pain;
Après? Pour le grand tout, qui vous permet la faim,
Un grain de blé mûr pèse autant que Caton libre;
Tout rentre dans l'immense et tranquille équilibre
Dès que le pain est mort et l'homme digéré.
Demain le dévorant sera le dévoré;
L'atome qui fut aigle, éperdu, fuira l'aile
De l'atome qui fut colombe ou tourterelle;
Les transformations du gouffre écraseront,
Roi, ce qui fut ton pied sous ce qui fut mon front;
L'agneau devenu loup teindra de sang sa griffe,
Et ce sera le tour de Christ d'être Caïphe,
Sans même que ce soit revanche et châtiment,
Nul n'ayant conscience en dehors du moment,
Le fil étant rompu d'un avatar à l'autre.
Qu'appelez-vous faux, vrai, droit ou devoir? L'apôtre,
Le bourreau, le héros, le traître, tout est vain.

Oh! que rien ne soit plus bon, grand, sacré, divin;
Que tout soit le hasard, l'ébauche, le décombre,
L'éclosion du pou dans les cheveux de l'ombre;
Que la création, ivre d'obscurité,
Soit idiote, et n'ait à son extrémité
Rien qu'on puisse nommer amour, raison, justice;
Qu'après avoir vomi, lugubre, elle engloutisse;
Et n'ait pour résultat, en souffrant, en créant,
Que de donner un peu de vermine au néant;
Qu'il ne soit pas prouvé que cette terre, en somme,
Sent la démangeaison de la vie et de l'homme;
Qu'il ne soit nulle part d'idéal, ni de loi;
Que tout soit sans réponse et demande pourquoi;
Que l'être, en supposant que l'abîme livide
Ne nous recrache pas ce mot sinistre et vide,

Se résolve, au milieu d’un vain frisson qui fuit,
En un fourmillement aveugle dans la nuit;
Que le fond noir de tout rampe, et soit quelque chose
Qui ne sait pas, qui luit sans jour, qui va sans cause,
Un hideux bloc abstrait, pas même une prison,
Une espèce de mort énorme, sans raison
Pour entrer dans la nuit, pour sortir de la tombe,
Un vague tournoiement de poussière qui tombe... —
Quoi! lorsqu’on s’est aimé, pleurs et cris superflus36!
Ne jamais se revoir, jamais, jamais! ne plus
Se donner rendez-vous au delà de la vie!
Quoi! la petite tête éblouie et ravie, .
L’enfant qui souriait et qui s’en est allé,
Mères, c’est de la nuit! cela s’est envolé!
Quoi! toi que j’aime, toi qui me fais de l’aurore,
Femme par qui je sens en moi l’archange éclore,
Quoi! le néant rira quand, pâle, je dirai :
- Attends-moi, je te suis, je viens, être adoré!
Prépare-moi ma place en ton lit solitaire! -
Quoi! le seul lieu qu’on ait besoin d’aimer sur terre Et de sentir vivant, le tombeau, serait mort!
En présence des cieux, quoi! l’espérance a tort!
Le deuil qui tord mon cœur en exprime un mensonge!
Pas d’avenir! un vide où l’œil égaré plonge!
Fosse en la profondeur, linceul sur la hauteur!
Pour mouvement la vie et la mort pour moteur!
La cécité, tournant sans but sur elle-même,
Engendre la lumière, imposture suprême;
L’être inutilement s’élève et se détruit;
Le monde croule au gré d’une haleine de nuit;
Le vent est l’enveloppe obscure de la brume;
Pour s’éteindre à jamais un instant on s’allume;
Tout est l’horrible roue, et Rien le cabestan!...
Rien!

Oh! reprends ce Rien, gouffre, et rends-nous Satan!

IV. Des voix

Et j’entendais des voix au milieu des nuées;
Un divin chant d’extase, un noir bruit de huées Passait.

UNE VOIX

Le cheval doit être manichéen.
Arimane lui fait du mal, Ormus du bien;
Tout le jour, sous le fouet il est comme une cible,
Il sent derrière lui l’affreux maître invisible,
Le démon inconnu qui l’accable de coups;
Le soir, il voit un être empressé, bon et doux,
Qui lui donne à manger et qui lui donne à boire,
Met de la paille fraîche en sa litière noire,
Et tâche d’effacer le mal par le calmant,
Et le rude travail par le repos clément;
Quelqu’un le persécute, hélas! mais quelqu’un l’aime.
Et le cheval se dit : « Ils sont deux. » C’est le même.

AUTRE VOIX

L’instant de dénouer la chimère est venu;
La vie, inexprimable effort dans l’inconnu,
Est terminée, erreur, ou folie, ou bravade;
Et voici le moment fatal. L’âme s’évade,
L’homme expire. On a vu sur son logis tremblant
Planer l’ange Trépas, l’oiseau noir, l’oiseau blanc,
Corbeau pour les méchants et pour les bons colombe;
C’est fini. Maintenant, que devient dans la tombe
Le corps, ce compagnon auquel l’âme avait cru?
Attends un peu de temps. Cherche. Il a disparu.

Cherche. Il s’est dissipé. Cherche encor, fouille, creuse,
Et tâte avec la main sous cette voûte affreuse.
Que trouves-tu? Regarde. Est-ce cela? Oui. Non.
Qu’est-ce? Cela n’a plus de forme ni de nom;
C’est noir comme la nuit et vain comme la cendre;
C’est l’homme. Et si tu veux demain y redescendre,
Tu ne trouveras plus, dans ce hideux réduit,
Même ce peu de cendre et ce reste de nuit.

A peine est-il couché, débris dans les décombres,
Que les mille éléments, tous ces créanciers sombres,
Qui l’avaient pour un -temps à l’âme concédé,
Redemandent ce corps par les vers seuls gardé;
Et chacun - car la vie a la mort pour domaine -
Prend ce qui lui revient dans cette argile humaine.
Tout atome, dans l’eau, dans la terre ou dans l’air,
Est un Shylock qui veut sa part de cette chair.
O nature sans fond! gouffre avare et rapace!
Partout, en haut, en bas, dans la nuit, dans l’espace,
Tout réclame à la fois, tout s’ouvre en même temps,
La pierre, le buisson, le miasme des étangs,
La poussière, la fleur, le vent, la flamme ardente;
Et, dans la profondeur des ténèbres pendante,
La matière dont l’homme était formé s’épand,
Et se cache; et, glissant, coulant, tombant, rampant,
Se hâte de crouler dans tous ces précipices.
Et, soit qu’elle ait là-haut trouvé les cieux propices,
Grâce au bien qu’elle a fait, au beau qu’elle a pensé,
Soit qu’ayant mal vécu, traînant un vil passé,
Elle ait vu se fermer devant elle l’aurore,
L’âme, envolée au fond de la mort sombre, ignore
Cette fuite rapide et sinistre du corps.

AUTRE VOIX

J’entends les vivants rire; ils deviendront les morts.

AUTRE VOIX

Alors que feront-ils?

AUTRE VOIX

Rien.

AUTRE VOIX

Tout.

AUTRE VOIX

Passez, nuages.

AUTRE VOIX

Tous vos azurs sont faux.

AUTRE VOIX

Moins faux que vos orages.

AUTRE VOIX

Oui, je te le redis, homme, malheur à toi
Si dans quelque docteur ton ignorance a foi!
Malheur à ton esprit s’il dit comme tant d’autres :

- Je questionnerai les savants, ces apôtres,
Et j’interrogerai les penseurs, ces devins;
J’irai, j’approcherai les instructeurs divins,
Les poëtes dont l’aube éclaire les visages,
Les hommes lumineux du mystère, les sages,
Ces colonnes d’azur du temple de la nuit! -

Sache que nul n’enseigne et que nul ne conduit;
Nul n’est colonne et rien n’est temple; sache encore
Qu’Antisthène, Amphion, Pindare, Stésichore,
Terpandre et Callimaque ont des ailes de plomb;
Qu’Arouet, Kant, Hegel n’en savent pas plus long;
Et que le sphinx qui dit la parole certaine
N’est pas plus dans Ferney qu’il n’était dans Athène.

De tout temps les rêveurs ont fait dans le ciel bleu
Des fouilles du côté de ce qu’ils nomment Dieu;
Ils ont le doute au cœur ou la prière aux lèvres;
Ils ont construit, détruit, et, pour calmer leurs fièvres,
Tristes, ont appuyé leur tête au marbre froid.

Homme, tout ce que l’homme enseigne, pense, croit,
Tout ce qu’il grave, écrit, constate, affirme, sculpte,
De science publique ou de doctrine occulte,
Sur le papier, le bois, l’airain, sur les frontons
Des grands temples obscurs pleins d’âmes à tâtons;
Balaam sur l’Euphrate, Apulée à Madaure,
Tout ce qu’on imagine et tout ce qu’on adore,
Figulus enseignant Cicéron, Érechto
Dont Pompée à genoux lève le noir manteau,
Les prêtres, les rhéteurs drapés dans leurs chlamydes,
Les bibles, les talmuds sacrés, les pyramides,
Le difforme alphabet de pierre du galgal,
Les cylindres de Tyr, les runes de Fingal,
Les papyrus de Thèbe et d’Endor, qu’on adopte
Le texte égyptien ou la version copte,
Vos sages admirés, Épicure, Thalès,

Diogène, Apulée, Érasme, Rabelais,
Platon, que l'idéal laisse boire à son urne,
Kant, Leibnitz, tout cela n'est qu'un souffle nocturne.

Si tu le veux, fais-toi de l'audace un devoir;
Propose-toi ce but redoutable : savoir,
Cette façon splendide et suprême de naître.
Entre dans le nuage insondable; pénètre
Dans l'horreur des Horebs, des Brockens, des Thabors;
Va! mais commence, avant d'en tenter les abords,
Par laisser de côté la sagesse des hommes.

Le peu que nous savons tient au peu que nous sommes;
Écoute. L'homme à peine, avec ou sans appuis,
A creusé l'inconnu qu'il a comblé son puits;
Alors il cherche, alors il rencontre, il dévie,
Se croit mage, ou se fait prêtre.

Passe ta vie
A labourer l'écume et l'onde, n'arrivant
Que pour partir, parmi le tumulte et le vent;
Habite Terre-Neuve, ou Zante, ou Tombelaine;
Sois pêcheur de hareng, sois pêcheur de baleine;
Emplis ton brick solide ou ta barque sans ponts
De traînes, de filets, de dragues, de harpons;
Affronte des écueils les sinistres statures;
Sois forban; sois coureur de flots et d'aventures;
Quand même tu vivrais dix ans, vingt ans, cent ans,
Ayant sous toi le gouffre et sur toi les autans,
Lutteur du risque, et roi d'une planche qui flotte,
Fusses-tu le plus vieux et le plus noir pilote,
Jason sur le dromon, Fulton sur le steamer,
Tu ne connaîtras pas la formidable mer.

Ces choses sans limite où flottent des fumées
Résistant, et toujours béantes, sont fermées;
Le chercheur, tâtonnant dans ce fatal milieu,

Quand il serait Platon, ne connaîtra pas Dieu.

AUTRE VOIX

Prenez garde. Observez l’obscure parallèle.
Le pas s’appuie au pas, l’aile s’appuie à l’aile.
Quoiqu’on retrouve au fond de tout culte la nuit
De l’homme, par qui Dieu trop souvent est construit,
Quoiqu’un dogme, ô penseur, ne soit qu’une masure
En attendant la vie et la vérité pure,
Quoique l’humanité doive porter en soi
La sagesse sereine et non l’aveugle foi,
Quoiqu’une bible, livre à deux sens, atrophie
Et blesse trop souvent l’âme qu’on lui confie,
Quoique, presque toujours, effarant les esprits,
La religion soit une chauve-souris
Faite de vie et d’ombre, et dont l’aile a pour griffes
Les prêtres, les docteurs, les bonzes, les pontifes,
Il faut que l’homme croie à quelque chose; il faut
Qu’à côté de la chair qui le gouverne trop,
Le mystère lui parle et l’exhorte, et l’élève
Du sommeil où l’on dort au sommeil où l’on rêve.
Ah! l’être infortuné qui ne croit pas est nu
Sous le ciel redoutable et lourd, sous l’inconnu!
O vivants! il vous faut des prêtres, quels qu’il soient.
A travers les plus noirs les vérités flamboient;
Il tombe encore un peu de jour sur vos chevets,
Même des plus abjects, même des plus mauvais;
Mais pour verser plus tard sur l’humanité mûre
La parole d’amour que l’avenir murmure,
Le ciel, au-dessus d’eux, sur d’éclatants degrés
Met les voyants directs, les sages inspirés.
Car l’homme fait le prêtre et Dieu seul fait le mage.

Je préfère, ô songeur, le wigwam du sauvage
Où l’homme attend la femme, où du moins on est deux,

Au manitou qui fait, au fond des bois hideux,
Joindre les mains au nègre et les pattes au singe;
Au wigwam le cromlech, au cromlech la syringe;
Aux syringes du Nil le sombre temple hébreu;
Au temple, la mosquée avec son dôme bleu
Et son minaret blanc dans la tiède atmosphère;
Et comme il faut monter sans cesse, je préfère
L'église à la mosquée, à l'église l'azur.
L'homme, être mixte au front sublime, au pied impur,
Va toujours refaisant et transformant ses arches;
Chaque âge avance; on voit, sur chacune des marches
Du sombre esprit humain montant dans l'ombre à Dieu,
Un temple où de l'amour grandit le chaste feu;
Passant d'un ciel plus noir dans un air plus salubre,
De moins en moins cruel, de moins en moins lugubre;
Chaque temple nouveau, grec, juif, égyptien,
A sa base au niveau du faîte de l'ancien;
Sur celui qui s'élève un autre monte encore;
Et le plus haut fronton se dissout dans l'aurore.

AUTRE VOIX

O rêves! vision des vagues paradis!
Crois-tu que l'inconnu soit quelque chose, dis,
Dont ton cerveau chétif puisse se faire idée?
Créature par l'être absolu débordée,
Homme étonné d'un grain germant dans le sillon,
Ébloui d'une pourpre au dos d'un papillon,
Tremblant d'un choc d'écume ou d'un râle d'orfraie,
Déjà ce que tu vois te dépasse et t'effraie,
Pourrais-tu supporter ce que tu ne vois point?
Le gouffre où le réel aux chimères se joint,
L'aspect de l'insondable et de l'inaccessible,
Le côté ténébreux de l'univers terrible,
Flottant dans l'infini, dans la brume perdu,
Et dans on ne sait quoi d'horrible et d'éperdu?

Serais-tu comme Jean, l’homme hagard, capable
De regarder l’obscur, de tâter l’impalpable?
Pourrais-tu contempler avec tes yeux de chair
Les apparitions du rêve et de l’éclair,
Les éclipses, les blocs, les profondeurs, les rides,
Les agitations des surfaces livides,
La stagnation morte et malsaine des eaux,
Les glissements des vers monstrueux du chaos,
Les larves se montrant à demi, les sorties .
De têtes par la vase affreuse appesanties.
Les fléaux s’accouplant parmi les éléments,
L’horreur des suintements et des fourmillements,
Et les êtres sans nom, et les formes immondes,
Et les vagues tumeurs du cloaque des mondes?
Te représentes-tu l’indicible stupeur
De ce qui s’entrevoit dans l’ombre, et se fait peur;
Ici la marche lourde, ailleurs la fuite prompte;
Le double effroi d’en haut, d’en bas, qui se confronte;
Le vent fauve traînant le nuage en haillon;
Le météore ayant horreur du tourbillon?
Connais-tu les deux nuits : la morte et la vivante;
La vivante, engendrant le monstre, l’épouvante,
L’hydre, les dévorant sans fin et les créant;
La morte, c’est-à-dire un vide, le néant,
Une ouverture aveugle et par l’effroi formée,
De l’ombre qui n’est plus même de la fumée,
Le silence hideux et funèbre de Rien?

AUTRE VOIX

Quand on sent se mouvoir l’universel lien
Qui joint le plus petit des atomes à l’être
Le plus démesuré que le gouffre ait vu naître,
Et qui fait, dans l’abîme où rien n’est endormi,
Tressaillir Sirius au poids d’une fourmi,
Quand les germes confus dans les ombres profondes

S’agitent, détruisant et produisant des mondes,
Mêlés aux voix, aux sons, aux chants, aux cris, aux pas,
Faisant et défaisant, et ne le sachant pas,
Quand l’azur semble ému, bien au delà des nues,
Par une éclosion d’étoiles inconnues,
Lorsqu’en soi, stupéfait, on sent et l’on comprend
Quelque chose de fort fait par quelqu’un de grand,
Quand l’eau fuit, quand le sol tremble, quand l’air murmure,
Quand de la forêt sombre il sort un bruit d’armure,
Quand l’oiseau sur son nid, dans les bois frémissants,
Chante un chant dont lui-même il ignore le sens,
L’immensité du fait prodigieux dépasse
L’ombre, le jour, les yeux, les chocs, le temps, l’espace,
Elle est telle, et le point de départ est si loin
Que, tous étant agents, personne n’est témoin.

AUTRE VOIX

Querelles! bruits! rumeurs! cris! morsures! piqûres!
O passages du vent dans les branches obscures!

AUTRE VOIX

Dante écrit deux vers, puis il sort; et les deux vers
Se parlent. Le premier dit : - Les cieux sont ouverts!
Cieux! Je suis immortel. - Moi, je suis périssable,
Dit l’autre. - Je suis l’astre. - Et moi le grain de sable.
- Quoi! tu doutes étant fils d’un enfant du ciel!
- Je me sens mort. - Et moi, je me sens éternel. - Quelqu’un rentre et relit ces vers, Dante lui-même;
Il garde le premier et barre le deuxième.
La rature est la haute et fatale cloison.
L’un meurt, et l’autre vit. Tous deux avaient raison.

V. Conclusion

As-tu vu méditer les ascètes terribles?
Ils ont tout rejeté, talmuds, korans et bibles.
Ils n’acceptent aucun des védas, comprenant
Que le vrai livre s’ouvre au fond du ciel tonnant,
Et que c’est dans l’azur plein d’astres que flamboie
Le texte éblouissant d’épouvante ou de joie.
Contemplant ce qui n’a ni bord, ni temps, ni lieu,
Absorbés dans la vue effrayante de Dieu,
Farouches, ils sont là, chacun seul dans l’espèce
D’horreur qu’il a choisie au bord de l’ombre épaisse,
Faisant vers l’inconnu toujours le même effort,
L’un dans un vieux tombeau dont il semble le mort,
L’autre, sinistre, assis dans un trou du tonnerre
Au tronc prodigieux d’un cèdre centenaire,
L’autre livide et nu dans un creux de rocher,
Muets, affreux, laissant les bêtes s’approcher,
Pas plus importunés sous leur fauve auréole
D’un tigre qui rugit que d’un oiseau qui vole,
Le désert les a vus à jamais s’accroupir.
Jamais un mouvement et jamais un soupir.
Ont-ils faim? ont-ils soif? Quand luit l’aube embrasée,
Ils ouvrent vaguement leur bouche à la rosée,
Et la rouvrent parfois quand vient le soir hagard.
Si la pensée était saisissable au regard,
On verrait le néant, l’éternité, le monde,
L’énigme plus lugubre encor quand on la sonde,
Tomber de leurs fronts noirs comme l’ombre des ifs;
Ils songent, ni vivants, ni morts, spectres pensifs,
Entre la mort trompée et la vie impossible;
L’été passe; l’hiver vide sur eux son crible;
Ils ne regardent rien que l’obscur firmament,
Et dans des profondeurs d’anéantissement
Ces êtres, abrutis par l’idéal, s’abîment.

Nul ne sait quels courants d’infini les raniment
A mesure que l’homme en eux s’évanouit.
L’ouragan monstrueux leur parlé dans la nuit
Comme le célébrant parle au catéchumène,
Et ces hideux esprits perdent la forme humaine.
L’aigle leur dit un mot à l’oreille en passant;
Ils font signe parfois à l’éclair qui descend;
Ils rêvent, fixes, noirs, guettant l’inaccessible,
L’œil plein de la lueur de l’étoile invisible.

•

Invisible! Ai-je dit invisible? Pourquoi?

•

Il est! Mais nul cri d’homme ou d’ange, nul effroi,
Nul amour, nulle bouche, humble, tendre ou superbe,
Ne peut balbutier distinctement ce verbe!
Il est! il est! il est! il est éperdument!
Tout, les feux, les clartés, les cieux, l’immense aimant,
Les jours, les nuits, tout est le chiffre; il est la somme.
Plénitude pour lui, c’est l’infini pour l’homme.
Faire un dogme, et l’y mettre! ô rêve! inventer Dieu!
Il est! Contentez-vous du monde, cet aveu!
Quoi! des religions, c’est ce que tu veux faire,
Toi, l’homme! ouvrir les yeux suffit; je le préfère.
Contente-toi de croire en Lui; contente-toi
De l’espérance avec sa grande aile, la foi;
Contente-toi de boire, altéré, ce dictame;
Contente-toi de dire : — Il est, puisque la femme
Berce l’enfant avec un chant mystérieux;
Il est, puisque l’esprit frissonne curieux;
Il est, puisque je vais le front haut; puisqu’un maître
Qui n’est pas lui, m’indigne, et n’a pas le droit d’être;
IÎ est, puisque César tremble devant Patmos;

Il est, puisque c’est lui que je sens sous ces mots :
Idéal, Absolu, Devoir, Raison, Science;
Il est, puisqu’à ma faute il faut sa patience,
Puisque l’âme me sert quand l’appétit me nuit,
Puisqu’il faut un grand jour sur ma profonde nuit! -
La pensée en montant vers lui devient géante.
Homme, contente-toi de cette soif béante;
Mais ne dirige pas vers Dieu ta faculté
D’inventer de la peur et de l’iniquité,
Tes catéchismes fous, tes korans, tes grammaires,
Et ton outil sinistre à forger des chimères.
Vis, et fais ta journée; aime et fais ton sommeil.
Vois au-dessus de toi le firmament vermeil;
Regarde en toi ce ciel profond qu’on nomme l’âme;
Dans ce gouffre, au zénith, resplendit une flamme.
Un centre de lumière inaccessible est là.
Hors de toi comme en toi cela brille et brilla;
C’est là-bas, tout au fond, en haut du précipice.
Cette clarté toujours jeune, toujours propice,
Jamais ne s’interrompt et ne pâlit jamais;
Elle sort des noirceurs, elle éclate aux sommets;
La haine est de la nuit, l’ombre est de la colère!
Elle fait cette chose inouïe, elle éclaire.
Tu ne l’éteindrais pas si tu la blasphémais;
Elle inspirait Orphée, elle échauffait Hermès;
Elle est le formidable et tranquille prodige;
L’oiseau l’a dans son nid, l’arbre l’a dans sa tige;
Tout la possède, et rien ne pourrait la saisir;
Elle s’offre immobile à l’éternel désir,
Et toujours se refuse et sans cesse se donne;
C’est l’évidence énorme et simple qui pardonne;
C’est l’inondation des rayons, s’épanchant
En astres dans un ciel, en roses dans un champ;
C’est, ici, là, partout, en haut, en bas, sans trêve,
Hier, aujourd’hui, demain, sur le fait, sur le rêve,
Sur le fourmillement des lueurs et des voix,
Sur tous les horizons de l’abîme à la fois,

Sur le firmament bleu, sur l’ombre inassouvie,
Sur l’être, le déluge immense de la vie!
C’est l’éblouissement auquel le regard croit.
De ce flamboiement naît le vrai, le bien, le droit;
Il luit mystérieux dans un tourbillon d’astres;
Les brumes, les noirceurs, les fléaux, les désastres
Fondent à sa chaleur démesurée, en tout
En sève, en joie, en gloire, en amour, se dissout;
S’il est des cœurs puissants, s’il est des âmes fermes,
Cela vient du torrent des souffles et des germes
Qui tombe à flots, jaillit, coule, et, de toutes parts,
Sort de ce feu vivant sur nos têtes épars.
Il est! il est! Regarde, âme. Il a son solstice,
La Conscience; il a son axe, la Justice;
Il a son équinoxe, et c’est l’Egalité;
Il a sa vaste aurore, et c’est la Liberté.
Son rayon dore en nous ce que l’âme imagine.
Il est! il est! il est! sans fin, sans origine,
Sans éclipse, sans nuit, sans repos, sans sommeil.

Renonce, ver de terre, à créer le soleil.

LES QUATRE VENTS DE L’ESPRIT

TABLE DES MATIERES

LE LIVRE SATIRIQUE
LE SIECLE , IINDE IRAE .
LE SIECLE , II
LE SIECLE , III
LE SIECLE , IV ECLIPSE .
LE SIECLE , V
LE SIECLE , VIVOIX DANS LE GRENIER .
LE SIECLE , VII LE SOUTIEN DES EMPIRES .
LE SIECLE , VIII ECRIT SUR LA PREMIERE PAGE D’ UN LIVRE DE JOSEPH DE MAISTRE .
LE SIECLE , IX SE LAISSER CALOMNIER
LE SIECLE , X A UN HOMME FINI .
LE SIECLE , XI A ...
LE SIECLE , XIIANIMA VILIS .
LE SIECLE , XIII LITTERATURE .
LE SIECLE , XIVA UN ECRIVAIN .
LE SIECLE , XVLE MONT - AUX - PENDUS . (JERSEY .)
LE SIECLE , XVI LE BOUT DE L’ OREILLE .
LE SIECLE , XVII L’ ECHAFAUD .
LE SIECLE , XVIIIJOLIES FEMMES . SONNET POUR ALBUM .
LE SIECLE , XIX
LE SIECLE , XX
LE SIECLE , XXI
LE SIECLE , XXII
LE SIECLE , XXIII SUR UN PORTRAIT DE SAINTE .
LE SIECLE , XXIV ECRIT APRES LA VISITE D’ UN BAGNE , I
LE SIECLE , XXIVECRIT APRES LA VISITE D’ UN BAGNE , II
LE SIECLE , XXV
LE SIECLE , XXVI LES BONZES .
LE SIECLE , XXVII
LE SIECLE , XXVIIIAUX PRETRES .

LE SIECLE , XXIX
LE SIECLE , XXX IDOLATRIES ET PHILOSOPHIES .
LE SIECLE , XXXI
LE SIECLE , XXXII
LE SIECLE , XXXIII
LE SIECLE , XXXIV
LE SIECLE , XXXV
LE SIECLE , XXXVI
LE SIECLE , XXXVII
LE SIECLE , XXXVIII
LE SIECLE , XXXIX
LE SIECLE , XL
LE SIECLE , XLI
LE SIECLE , XLII DIEU ECLABOUSSE PAR ZOÏLE .
LE SIECLE , XLIII ILS SONT TOUJOURS LA .
LE SIECLE , XLIV FULGUR .
DEUX VOIX DANS LE CIEL , ZENITH - NADIR .

LE LIVRE DRAMATIQUE — La Femme

MARGARITA, COMÉDIE
SCENE PREMIERE
SCENE II
SCENE III
SCENE IV
ESCA, DRAME
ACTE PREMIER : LISON
ACTE PREMIER : LISON, SCENE PREMIERE
ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH, SCENE PREMIERE
ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH, SCENE III

LE LIVRE LYRIQUE — La Destinée

LA DESTINEE , I
LA DESTINEE , II AUX OISEAUX ET AUX NUAGES .
LA DESTINEE , III
LA DESTINEE , IV
LA DESTINEE , V , I CHANSON D’ AUTREFOIS .
LA DESTINEE , V , II CHANSON D’ AUJOURD’ HUI .

LA DESTINEE , VI PRES D’ AVRANCHES .
LA DESTINEE , VII CHANSON .
LA DESTINEE , VIII
LA DESTINEE , IX EN ECOUTANT CHANTER LA PRINCESSE .
LA DESTINEE , X
LA DESTINEE , XI
LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , I
LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , II
LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , III
LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , IV
LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , V
LA DESTINEE , XIII , I CHANSON D’ AUTREFOIS .
LA DESTINEE , XIII , II CHANSON D’ AUJOURD’ HUI .
LA DESTINEE , XIV JERSEY .
LA DESTINEE , XV ANDROCLES .
LA DESTINEE , XVI A MA FILLE ADELE .
LA DESTINEE , XVII EN MARCHANT LE MATIN .
LA DESTINEE , XVIII
LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , I
LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , II
LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , III
LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , IV
LA DESTINEE , XX
LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , I
LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , II
LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , III
LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , IV
LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , V
LA DESTINEE , XXII LUEUR A L’ HORIZON .
LA DESTINEE , XXIII SOUS TERRE .
LA DESTINEE , XXIV BESTIARIUM .
LA DESTINEE , XXV CHANSON .
LA DESTINEE , XXVI REMONTRANCES .
LA DESTINEE , XXVII PATI .
LA DESTINEE , XXVIII
LA DESTINEE , XXIX
LA DESTINEE , XXX CHANSON .

LA DESTINEE , XXXI A MEURICE - A VACQUERIE .
LA DESTINEE , XXXII TOURMENTE .
LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , I
LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , II
LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , III
LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , IV
LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , V
LA DESTINEE , XXXIV ENTREE DANS L’ EXIL .
LA DESTINEE , XXXV
LA DESTINEE , XXXVI
LA DESTINEE , XXXVII EXIL .
LA DESTINEE , XXXVIII
LA DESTINEE , XXXIX
LA DESTINEE , XL LA NUIT PENDANT QUE LES PECHEURS SONT EN MER .
LA DESTINEE , XLI DUO .
LA DESTINEE , XLII PENSEES DE NUIT .
LA DESTINEE , XLIII
LA DESTINEE , XLIV
LA DESTINEE , XLV
LA DESTINEE , XLVI
LA DESTINEE , XLVII LETTRE .
LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS , PREMIERE PROMENADE .
LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS , DEUXIEME PROMENADE .
LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS , TROISIEME PROMENADE .
LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS , QUATRIEME PROMENADE .
LA DESTINEE , XLIX RENCONTRE D’ UNE PETITE FAGOTIERE .
LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT MI - CAREME DE 1 8 I
LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT
LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT
LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8, IV
LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT
MI - CAREME DE 1 8, V
LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT
MI - CAREME DE 1 8, VI
LA DESTINEE , LI LE PARISIEN DU FAUBOURG .
LA DESTINEE , LII
LA DESTINEE , LIII
LA DESTINEE , LIV UNE ROUGEUR AU ZENITH .
LA DESTINEE , LV HORREUR SACREE .
LA DESTINEE , LVI , I
LA DESTINEE , LVI , II
LA DESTINEE , LVI , III
LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , I
LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , II
LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , III
LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , IV
LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , V

LE LIVRE ÉPIQUE

LES STATUES
LES CARIATIDES
L'Arrivée
SOIT. MAIS QUOI QUE CE SOIT QUI RESSEMBLE A LA HAINE

LE LIVRE SATIRIQUE

JE VIS LES QUATRE VENTS PASSER .

Je vis les quatre vents passer — ô vents, leur dis-je, vents des cieux! Croyez-vous avoir seuls un quadrige?
Autans! Masques hagards, tumultueux démons, croyez-vous pouvoir seuls aller des mers aux monts?
Croyez-vous seuls pouvoir quitter pour la montagne les vagues que l’ écume éternelle accompagne, fuir, puis, d’ un coup de tête effrayant, revenir à l’ ombre où l’ on entend ces cavales hennir, et vous en retourner soudain, brusques méduses, aux cimes dans l’ aurore éclatante diffuses,
et de là crier Gloire! Aux quatre coins du ciel?
Ces allures d’ éclair, ce vol torrentiel,
l’ esprit humain les a comme vous, vents tragiques;
comme vous le printemps, il a ses géorgiques;
il est l’ âcre Archiloque et le Hamlet amer;
il gonfle l’ Iliade ainsi que vous la mer.
L’ homme peut de l’ abîme effarer la prunelle.
L’ âme a comme le ciel quatre souffles en elle;
l’ âme a ses pôles; l’ âme a ses points cardinaux.
Vents! Dragons qui sur nous tordez vos bleus anneaux, et qui vous dispersez avec tant de furie depuis le hurlement jusqu’ à la rêverie,
l’ esprit humain n’ est pas moins aquilon que vous.
Comme vous il est vie, amour, joie et courroux.
Ses srtophes ne sont pas plus vite exténuées dans leur vol à travers l’ azur que vos nuées;
un vers court par-dessus les tours et les remparts mieux que l’ errante bise aux longs cheveux épars;
et le poëte, ouvrant ses intègres registres,
ne met pas plus de temps que vous, ô vents sinistres,

pour essuyer sa bouche et changer de clairon.
Comme vous sur la peste, il souffle sur Néron;
il parle bas aux saints pensifs au fond des grottes;
il donne une attitude inquiète aux despotes;
la pensée est un aigle à quatre ailes, qui va
du gouffre où Noé flotte à l’ île où Jean rêva;
et chacun de ses grands ailerons, épopée,
Drame, Ode, Iambe ardent, coupe comme l’ épée.
Le génie a sur lui, dans sa guerre aux fléaux, toute l’ éclaboussure affreuse du chaos,
écume, fange, sang, bave, et pas une tache.
Il est un et divers. L’ idéal se rattache comme une croix immense aux quatre angles des cieux.
Le grand char de l’ Esprit roule sur quatre essieux.
Notre âme comme vous, ô vents, groupe sonore,
a son nord, son midi, son couchant, son aurore;
car c’ est par la clarté qu’ en ce monde âpre et beau
l’ homme finit, son aube étant dans le tombeau.
Le poëte est pasteur, juge, prophète, apôtre;
en quatre pas, il peut aller d’ un bout à l’ autre de l’ art sublime, ainsi que vous de l’ horizon;
et comme vous, s’ il est terrible, il a raison;
sa sagesse et la vôtre ont un air de délire.
L’ ombre a tout l’ ouragan, l’ âme a toute la lyre.
H.. -H.. — 3 juin 1870.
1870, 06, 05
je vis Aldebaran dans les cieux. Je lui dis :
— ô toi qui luis! ô toi qui des clairs paradis ou des hideux enfers portes la torche énorme, toi seul connais ta loi, je ne vois que ta forme;
car d’ une énigme à l’ autre on ne peut traverser.
Tout est sphinx; quand on voit la comète passer farouche, et sans qu’ aucun firmament l’ ose exclure, sait-on ce qu’ elle essuie avec sa chevelure?
Dans cette mer de l’ être où tout sert, où tout nuit, qu’ es-tu? Fanal peut-être au cap noir de la nuit, peut-être feu de proue à l’ avant d’ un navire.

La vie autour de toi naît, meurt, flotte, chavire.
Astre! Quand l’ univers naquit, fauve et sacré, tu ne fus pas le jet le moins démesuré de ces convulsions terribles et de l’ onde du chaos frémissant de devenir le monde.
Tu fais partie, ainsi que l’ hydre et l’ alcyon,
du rhythme monstrueux de la création;
tu complètes l’ horreur sidérale, et tu scelles,
comme une strophe ardente et faite d’ étincelles,
l’ immense hymne étoilé qu’ on appelle le ciel.
Pan, le grand Tout fatal ou providentiel,
t’ accepte stupéfait comme on accepte un rêve.
Aldebaran! Clarté de l’ insondable grève, tu n’ es pas seulement, dans les gouffres vermeils,
un de ces inconnus que nous nommons soleils,
tu n’ as pas seulement, comme le kéroubime,
une face splendide et sombre sur l’ abîme,
ô spectre, ô vision, tu n’ es pas seulement au fond du ciel sinistre un éblouissement;
ta merveille, c’ est d’ être une roue inouïe de lumière, à jamais dans l’ ombre épanouie une apparition d’ éternel tournoiement, tour à tour perle, onyx, saphir et diamant.
Un effrayant éclair sur toi sans cesse rôde et te fait de rubis devenir émeraude, et jadis tu troublais le mage libyen, monde sur qui se tord un arc-en-ciel! Eh bien, tu n’ es pas seul à luire sans fin, sans voile!
L’ âme est comme toi, sphère, une quadruple étoile.
Ton prodige est en nous. Astre, nous te l’ offrons.
L’ antique poésie avec ses quatre fronts,
Orphée, Homère, Eschyle et Juvénal, t’ égale.
Quand le soir tombe, à l’ heure où chante la cigale,
ou quand l’ aube sourit aux oiseaux éperdus, en tous lieux, sur l’ Arno, sur l’ Avon, sur l’ Indus, la muse, qui connaît nos maux, en fait la somme, et qui tient cette lampe en main, l’ esprit de l’ homme,

la muse est là, toujours, partout, et n’ est jamais,
même dans l’ hiver triste, absente des sommets.
Tour à tour Calliope, érato, Polymnie et Némésis, elle est l’ éternelle harmonie qui, sauvage et joyeuse, allant de l’ antre au nid, commencée en idylle, en tonnerre finit.
Astre! Elle a son amour, son rire, sa colère, et son deuil, comme toi ton tourbillon stellaire;
rayon, verbe, elle est douce aux hommes asservis,
donne aux passants, tyrans ou peuples, des avis, chante pour les bons coeurs, luit pour les coeurs funèbres, parle, et sur la clarté renseigne les ténèbres;
elle est l’ humanité debout, changée en voix.
Elle ôte les césars de dessus les pavois,
les découronne, et met à leur place l’ idée.
Elle est France, Italie, Hellénie et Chaldée.
Satire, elle flétrit; drame, elle aime; chanson ou psaume, elle a du sort le lugubre frisson;
épopée, elle peut montrer aux rois tragiques la tyrannie aveugle et toutes ses logiques, l’ effrayante moisson des noirs semeurs du mal, et le carrosse d’ or du sacre triomphal dans l’ ombre accompagné par l’ invisible roue
d’ un tombereau hideux que le pavé secoue;
elle fait, sur ce globe où pleure Adam banni,
la même fonction que toi dans l’ infini;
et quoique, fixe et calme au fond du ciel immense, tu ramènes au but la comète en démence et remettes l’ étoile errante en son chemin, tu n’ es pas lumineux plus que l’ esprit humain qui montre Dieu, l’ enfer, les bonheurs, les désastres, ô phare à feux tournants de l’ océan des astres!
H.. -H.. — 5 juin.

1855, 03, 12

LE SIECLE , IINDE IRAE .

tout frissonnant d’ amour, d’ extases, de splendeurs,
l’ hymne universel chante au fond des profondeurs avec toutes les fleurs et toutes les étoiles;
il chante Dieu rêvant sous les flamboyants voiles;
il chante; il est superbe, éclatant, triomphant, doux comme un nid d’ oiseau dans la main d’ un enfant;
il enivre l’ azur, il éblouit l’ espace;
il adore et bénit. Tout à coup Satan passe, l’ être immonde qui cherche à tout prostituer,
et l’ hymne en le voyant se met à le huer.
Il le lapide avec sa joie interrompue;
ce qui bénissait mord; ce qui louait conspue;
le tonnerre indigné gronde dans l’ hosanna;
le pilori se dresse au sommet du Sina;
chaque strophe du chant de gloire et d’ harmonie prend forme, se fait homme, est prophète, est génie, et devient le bourreau splendide du méchant.
De là naît Isaïe, âme à double tranchant, de là naissent les grands vengeurs, les rêveurs fauves, les pâles Juvénals, terreur des Césars chauves, et ce Dante effrayant devant qui tout s’ enfuit, fait d’ une ombre qu’ on sent de marbre dans la nuit.
12 mars 1855.

1856, 06, 17

LE SIECLE , II

lorsque j’ étais encore un tout jeune homme pâle, et que j’ allais entrer dans la lice fatale, sombre arène où plus d’ un avant moi se perdit, l’ âpre Muse aux regards mystérieux m’ a dit :
— tu pars; mais quand le Cid se mettait en campagne pour son Dieu, pour son droit et pour sa chère Espagne, il était bien armé; ce vaillant Cid avait deux casques, deux estocs, sa lance de chevet, deux boucliers; il faut des armes de rechange;
puis il tirait l’ épée et devenait archange.
As-tu ta dague au flanc? Voyons, soldat martyr, quelle armure vas-tu choisir et revêtir?
Quels glaives va-t-on voir luire à ton bras robuste?
— j’ ai la haine du mal et j’ ai l’ amour du juste,
Muse; et je suis armé mieux que le paladin.
— et tes deux boucliers? — j’ ai mépris et dédain.
17 juin 1856.

1854, 02, 17

LE SIECLE , III

ô sainte horreur du mal! Devoir funèbre! ô haine!
Quand Virgile suspend la chèvre au blanc troëne;
quand Lucrèce revêt de feuilles l’ homme nu;
quand Ennius compare au satyre cornu le bouc passant sa tête à travers la broussaille qui fait qu’ Europe au bain se détourne et tressaille;
quand Moschus chante Enna; quand Horace gaîment suit Canidie, et fait, sur le chaudron fumant où l’ horreur de la lune et des tombeaux s’ infiltre, éternuer Priape à l’ âcre odeur du philtre;
quand Plaute bat Davus ou raille Amphitryon, le ciel bleu dans un coin brille et jette un rayon sur la baigneuse émue ou la chèvre qui grimpe, et l’ on entend au fond rire l’ immense Olympe.
Mais tout azur s’ éclipse où passent les vengeurs.
Les soupiraux d’ en bas teignent de leurs rougeurs
le mur sinistre auquel s’ adosse Jérémie.
Les punisseurs sont noirs. Leur pâle et grave amie, la Mort, leur met la main sur l’ épaule, et leur dit :
— Esprit, ne laisse pas échapper ton bandit.
Car ce sont eux qui, seuls, justiciers des abîmes, terrassent à jamais les monstres et les crimes;
car ils sont les géants des châtiments de Dieu;
car, sur des écriteaux d’ acier en mots de feu, du tonnerre escortés, ces hommes formidables
transcrivent de là-haut les arrêts insondables;
car ils mettent Achab et Tibère au poteau;
car l’ un porte l’ éclair, l’ autre tient le marteau;
ils marchent, affichant des sentences que l’ homme lit effaré, sur Tyr, sur Ninive, sur Rome, et, sombres, à travers les siècles effrayés, vont, et ces foudroyants traînent leurs foudroyés.

Isaïe, accoudé sur Babylone athée, songe; Eschyle, vengeur et fils de Prométhée, cloue au drame d’ airain le tyran Jupiter; Shakspeare mène en laisse Henri huit; et Luther fouette les Borgia mêlés aux Louis onze;

Tacite dans la nuit pose son pied de bronze sur les douze dragons qu’ on appelle césars;
Daniel va, suivi des blêmes Balthazars;
Machiavel pensif garde la bête prince;
Milton veille au guichet du cachot, gouffre où grince
le pandaemonium de tous les satans rois;
Juvénal tire et traîne à travers les effrois la stryge au double front que son vers a tuée, qui gronde impératrice et rit prostituée;
et Dante tient le bout de la chaîne de fer que Judas rêveur mord dans l’ ombre de l’ enfer.
17 février 1854.

1870, 04, 6

LE SIECLE , IV ECLIPSE .

la terre par moments doute; on ne comprend plus.
L’ homme a devant les yeux de la brume, un reflux,
on ne sait quoi de pâle et de crépusculaire;
on n’ a plus d’ allégresse, on n’ a plus de colère;
la disparition produit l’ effarement.
L’ oeil fauve du hibou regarde affreusement.
Toutes sortes d’ éclairs inexplicables brillent.
L’ autel penche, et les vers du sépulcre y fourmillent.
Tout se mêle; Irmensul ressemble à Jéhovah;
le sage stupéfait balbutie et s’ en va;
le mal semble identique au bien dans la pénombre;
on ne voit que le pied de l’ échelle du Nombre et l’ on n’ ose monter vers l’ obscur infini.
Dodone vaguement parle à Gethsémani,
l’ Oeta fume non loin du Sinaï qui tonne;
on fouille, on rêve, on nie, on querelle, on s’ étonne;
des aveugles entr’ eux se montrent le chemin;
le divin ciel a tort devant l’ esprit humain;
le penseur est croyant, le savant est athée;
la conscience écoute, essaye, et, déroutée,
prend le faux pour le vrai dans ces tâtonnements.
Où l’ un voit des védas, l’ autre voit des romans.
Les choses qu’ on nommait vertus perdent leurs formes.
Les monstruosités font des ombres énormes
jusque sur l’ âme humaine et sur le firmament.
Plus d’ honneur, plus de foi, plus rien, plus de serment.
On voit encor la cime, on ne voit plus le phare.
Une lueur de torche empourpre la tiare.
On cherche à voir, on rôde, on va, le cou tendu.
L’ amour au fond des coeurs bat de l’ aile éperdu comme s’ il n’ était plus en sûreté dans l’ homme.
La route est noire; on crie, on s’ appelle, on se nomme.

Qui donc est là? Parlez. On tâte son voisin.
La foule éparse flotte avec un bruit d’ essaim;
on se touche, on se voit, mais on n’ est plus ensemble.
Le mal est empereur, la nuit est reine. On tremble.
Un trône d’ ombre est là. Les misérables font des groupes effrayants dans l’ abîme profond;
on croit voir des glaçons que les gouffres charrient;
tout est confus et blême; et les ténèbres rient.
Le fond du ciel est trouble, horrible et pluvieux;
et le petit enfant qui passe paraît vieux.
Il semble que la vie éternelle décroisse.
L’ âme alors est sinistre, et voit avec angoisse ces occultations redoutables de Dieu.
Naît-on? Meurt-on? Quel est le temps? Quel est le lieu?
Les peuples sont hagards; ces brins d’ herbe frissonnent;
on entend des tocsins et des clairons qui sonnent;
le vent est lourd, l’ espace est froid, le globe est nu;
le démon souriant dit : je suis méconnu.
6 mai 1870.

1870, 04, 26

LE SIECLE , V

la satire à présent, chant où se mêle un cri,
bouche de fer d’ où sort un sanglot attendri,
n’ est plus ce qu’ elle était jadis dans notre enfance,
quand on nous conduisait, écoliers sans défense, à la Sorbonne, endroit revêche et mauvais lieu,
et que, devant nous tous qui l’ écoutions fort peu, dévidant sa leçon et filant sa quenouille,
le petit Andrieux, à face de grenouille,
mordait Shakspeare, Hamlet, Macbeth, Lear, Othello, avec ses fausses dents prises au vieux Boileau.
La vie est, en ce siècle inquiet, devenue pas à pas grave et morne, et la vérité nue appelle la pensée à son secours depuis qu’ on l’ a murée avec le mensonge en son puits.
Après Jean-Jacque, après Danton, le sort ramène le lourd pas de la nuit sur la triste âme humaine;
Droit et Devoir sont là gisants, la plaie au flanc;
le lâche soleil rit au noir dragon sifflant;
l’ homme jette à la mer l’ honneur, vieille boussole;
en léchant le vainqueur le vaincu se console;
toute l’ histoire tient dans ce mot : réussir;
le succès est sultan et le meurtre est visir;
hélas, la vieille ivresse affreuse de la honte reparaît dans les yeux et sur les fronts remonte, trinque avec les tyrans, et le peuple fourbu reboit ce sombre vin dont il a déjà bu.
C’ est pourquoi la satire est sévère. Elle ignore cette grandeur des rois qui fit Boileau sonore, et ne se souvient d’ eux que pour les souffleter.
L’ échafaud qu’ il faut pièce à pièce démonter,
l’ infâme loi de sang qui résiste aux ratures,
qui garde les billots en lâchant les tortures, et dont il faut couper tous les ongles; l’ enfant que l’ ignorance tient dans son poing étouffant et qui doit, libre oiseau, dans l’ aube ouvrir ses ailes;

relever tour à tour ces sombres sentinelles,
le mal, le préjugé, l’ erreur, monstre romain,
qui gardent le cachot où dort l’ esprit humain;
la guerre et ses vautours, la peste avec ses mouches,
à chasser; les bâillons qu’ il faut ôter des bouches;
la parole à donner à toutes les douleurs;
l’ éclosion d’ un jour nouveau sur l’ homme en fleurs;
tel est le but, tel est le devoir, qui complique sa colère, et la fait d’ utilité publique.
Pour enseigner à tous la vertu, l’ équité,
la raison, il suffit que la Réalité, pure et sereine, monte à l’ horizon et fasse évanouir l’ horreur des nuits devant sa face.
Honte, gloire, grandeurs, vices, beautés, défauts, plaine et monts, sont mêlés tant qu’ il fait nuit; le faux fait semblant d’ être honnête en l’ obscurité louche.
Qu’ est-ce que le rayon? Une pierre de touche.
La lumière de tout ici-bas fait l’ essai.
Le juste est sur la terre éclairé par le vrai;
le juste c’ est la cime et le vrai c’ est l’ aurore.
Donc Lumière, Raison, Vérité, plus encore,
Bonté dans le courroux et suprême Pitié,
le méchant pardonné, mais le mal châtié, voilà ce qu’ aujourd’ hui, comme aux vieux temps de Rome,
la satire implacable et tendre doit à l’ homme.
Marquis ou médecins, une caste, un métier, ce n’ est plus là son champ; il lui faut l’ homme entier.
Elle poursuit l’ infâme et non le ridicule.
Un petit Augias veut un petit Hercule, et le bon Despréaux malin fit ce qu’ il put.
Elle n’ a plus affaire à l’ ancien Lilliput.
Elle vole, à travers l’ ombre et les catastrophes, grande et pâle, au milieu d’ un ouragan de strophes;
elle crie à sa meute effrayante : — courons!

Quand un vil parvenu, marchant sur tous les fronts,
écrase un peuple avec des pieds jadis sans bottes.
Elle donne à ses chiens ailés tous les depotes, tous les monstres, géants et nains, à dévorer.
Elle apparaît aux czars pour les désespérer.
On entend dans son vers craquer les os du tigre.
De même que l’ oiseau vers le printemps émigre,
elle s’ en va toujours du côté de l’ honneur.
L’ ange de Josaphat, le spectre d’ Elseneur sont ses amis, et, sage, elle semble en démence, tant sa clameur profonde emplit le ciel immense.
Il lui faut, pour gronder et planer largement, tout le peuple sous elle, âpre, vaste, écumant;
ce n’ est que sur la mer que le vent est à l’ aise.
Quand Colomb part, elle est debout sur la falaise;
elle t’ aime, ô Barbès! Et suit d’ un long vivat Fulton, Garibaldi, Byron, John Brown et Watt, et toi Socrate, et toi Jésus, et toi Voltaire!
Elle fait, quand un mort glorieux est sous terre,
sortir un vert laurier de son tombeau dormant;
elle ne permet pas qu’ il pourrisse autrement.
Elle panse à genoux les vaincus vénérables, bénit les maudits, baise au front les misérables,
lutte, et, sans daigner même un instant y songer,
se sent par des valets derrière elle juger;
car, sous les règnes vils et traîtres, c’ est un crime de ne pas rire à l’ heure où râle la victime et d’ aimer les captifs à travers leurs barreaux;
et qui pleure les morts offense les bourreaux.
Est-elle triste? Non, car elle est formidable.
Puisqu’ auprès des tombeaux les vainqueurs sont à table, puisqu’ on est satisfait dans l’ opprobre, et qu’ on a l’ impudeur d’ être lâche avec un hosanna, puisqu’ on chante et qu’ on danse en dévorant les proies, elle vient à la fête elle aussi. Dans ces joies, dans ces contentements énormes, dans ces jeux à force de triomphe et d’ ivresse orageux, dans ces banquets mêlant Paphos, Clamart et Gnide, elle apporte, sinistre, un rire d’ euménide.

Mais son immense effort, c’ est la vie. Elle veut chasser la mort, bannir la nuit, rompre le noeud, dût-elle rudoyer le titan populaire.
Comme elle a plus d’ amour, elle a plus de colère.
Quoi! L’ abdication serait un oreiller!
La conscience humaine est lente à s’ éveiller;
l’ honneur laisse son feu pâlir, tomber, descendre sous l’ épaississement lugubre de la cendre.
Aussi la Némésis chantante qui bondit et frappe, et devant qui Tibère est interdit, la déesse du grand Juvénal, l’ âpre muse,
Hébé par la beauté, par la terreur Méduse, qui sema dans la nuit ce que Dante y trouva, et que Job croyait voir parler à Jéhovah, se sent-elle encor plus de fureur magnanime pour réveiller l’ oubli que pour punir le crime.
Elle approche du peuple et, guettant la rumeur, penche l’ ïambe amer sur l’ immense dormeur;
la strophe alors frissonne en son tragique zèle, et s’ empourpre en tâchant de tirer l’ étincelle de toute cette morne et fatale langueur, et le vers irrité devient une lueur.
Ainsi rougit dans l’ ombre une face farouche qui vient sur un tison souffler à pleine bouche.
26 avril 1870.

1853, 11, 17

l’ habit râpé.
Vivent les bas de soie et les souliers vernis!
La chaise dépaillée.
Dieu dit aux bons fauteuils : fauteuils, je vous bénis!
Le poêle froid.
Comme un grand feu qui flambe et pétille en décembre vous illumine l’ âme en empourprant la chambre!
Le verre plein d’ eau.
Ma foi, j’ aime le vin.
La soucoupe pleine de poussière.
Moi, j’ aime le café.
L’ écuelle de bois.
C’ est charmant de crier : garçon! Perdreau truffé,
Bordeaux retour de l’ Inde, et saumon sauce aux huîtres!
Le carreau cassé.
Une fenêtre est belle alors qu’ elle a des vitres.
Le gousset vide.
Que l’ usurier hideux, poussif, auquel tu dois,
agite un vieux billet de banque en ses vieux doigts,
fût-il gris comme un chantre et crasseux comme un diacre,
Vénus vient toute nue en sa conque de nacre.
Le lit de sangle.
Un édredon, c’ est doux.
L’ écritoire.
Arétin, plein d’ esprit,
vit content; sous ses pieds il a quand il écrit un charmant tapis turc qui réchauffe sa prose.
Le trou de la serrure.
J’ estime une portière épaisse, et, verte ou rose,
laissant voir, dans les plis du satin ouaté,
un mandarin qui prend une tasse de thé.
Un papier timbré.

Verrès est riche et grand; devant lui nul ne bouge.
Le miroir fêlé.
Sur un frac brodé d’ or j’ aime un beau cordon rouge.
L’ escabeau boiteux.
Quel bonheur de courir à la croix de Berny sur quelque ardent cheval plein d’ un souffle infini, démon aux crins épars né des vents de l’ Ukraine!
La semelle percée.
Quelle joie! En hiver, rouler au Cours-la-Reine, quand le soleil dissout les brouillards pluvieux,
dans un landau qui fait blêmir les envieux!
Le plafond troué.
Et, tandis qu’ au dehors siffle le vent féroce, contempler, à travers les glaces du carrosse,
le ciel bleu, rayonnant d’ une douce clarté!
Le ciel bleu.
Paix! Comptez vous pour rien cette sérénité de marcher le front haut, et de se dire : en somme, je mange du pain noir, mais je suis honnête homme!
17 novembre 1853.

LE SIECLE , VII LE SOUTIEN DES EMPIRES .

Puisque ce monde existe, il sied qu’ on le tolère.
Sachons considérer les êtres sans colère.
Cet homme est le bourgeois du siècle où nous vivons.
Autrefois il vendait des suifs et des savons,
maintenant il est riche; il a prés, bois, vignobles.
Il déteste le peuple, il n’ aime pas les nobles;
étant fils d’ un portier, il trouve en ce temps-ci inutile qu’ on soit fils des Montmorency.
Il est sévère. Il est vertueux. Il est membre, ayant de bons tapis sous les pieds en décembre,
du grand parti de l’ ordre et des honnêtes gens.
Il hait les amoureux et les intelligents;
il fait un peu l’ aumône, il fait un peu l’ usure;
il dit du progrès saint, de la liberté pure,
du droit des nations : je ne veux pas de ça!
Il a ce gros bon sens du cher Sancho Pança qui laisserait mourir à l’ hôpital Cervantes;
il admire Boileau, caresse les servantes, et crie, après avoir chiffonné Jeanneton,
à l’ immoralité du roman feuilleton.
à la messe où sans faute il va chaque dimanche, il porte sous son bras Jésus doré sur tranche, la crèche, le calvaire et le Dies illa.
— non qu’ entre nous je croie à ces bêtises-là, nous dit-il. — s’ il y va, cela tient à sa gloire,
c’ est que le peuple vil croira, le voyant croire,
c’ est qu’ il faut abrutir ces gens, car ils ont faim,
c’ est qu’ un bon Dieu quelconque est nécessaire enfin.
Là-dessus, rangez-vous, le suisse frappe, il entre,
il étale au banc d’ oeuvre un majestueux ventre,
fier de sentir qu’ il prend, dans sa dévotion,
le peuple en laisse et Dieu sous sa protection.

LE SIECLE , VIII ECRIT SUR LA PREMIERE PAGE D’ UN LIVRE DE JOSEPH DE MAISTRE .

Cathédrale monstre! Bâtie contre le droit et le devoir!
Plan incliné. La sacristie, glissante, devient l’ abattoir.
Ici les cierges, là les torches.
Dans ce temple, à deux fins construit, on juxtapose les deux porches
de la lumière et de la nuit.
Fausse lumière et nuit réelle.
L’ ombre de Rome sur Paris.
Une aigle ayant au bout de l’ aile des ongles de chauve-souris.
Une logique épouvantable invente, ô peuple sans vengeurs, un Reims étrange à double table
où sont assis tes deux mangeurs.
Les deux noirs êtres qui te rongent,
le magnifique et le hideux,
boivent ton sang ensemble, et songent, avec leur prêtre à côté d’ eux.
Double chapelle, et double apôtre.
Bonald en l’ une, altier zéro, couronne le prince, et, dans l’ autre,
de Maistre sacre le bourreau.
L’ horreur à l’ empire est mêlée.
On a sur le trône étalé une pourpre coagulée qui de l’ échafaud a coulé.
Un homme règne, un homme fauche;

soit. J’ ai toujours cru qu’ on verrait se marier de la main gauche
l’ épée avec le couperet.

1851, 07

LE SIECLE , IX SE LAISSER CALOMNIER

quoi, frère, tu frémis parce qu’ on te déchire!
Tu ne connais donc pas la force du sourire!
Quand tu te vois honni, hué, sifflé, raillé,
par des faquins à l’ âme obscure, au nom souillé,
qui firent cent métiers et jouèrent cent rôles, tu prends trop de souci des choses que ces drôles disent de toi. Ton front s’ assombrit; tu t’ émeus des sottises d’ un tas de cuistres venimeux.
Regarde-moi. — je suis seul, debout, sur la scène, on m’ insulte, je ris de leur rage malsaine et je vais! Car mon coeur dans cet âpre chemin sent aujourd’ hui l’ honneur et la gloire demain.
Paris, juillet 1851.

1849, 08, 07

LE SIECLE , X A UN HOMME FINI .

tu savais bien qu’ un jour il faudroit choir enfin, mais tu n’ imaginais ni Séjan, ni Rufin.
Tu te croyais de ceux que la haine publique frappe furtivement d’ un coup de foudre oblique;
tu t’ étais figuré qu’ on te renverserait sans te faire de mal, doucement, en secret, avec précaution, sans bruit, à la nuit close,
et priant un ami de te dire la chose,
ainsi qu’ on pose à terre un vase précieux;
tu t’ étais fait d’ avance, au loin, sous de beaux cieux, dans ton palais, plus fier que la villa Farnèse,
un lit voluptueux pour tomber à ton aise.
Point. C’ est en plein midi que le peuple a tonné.
L’ horizon était bleu, l’ éclair l’ a sillonné.
Le tonnerre, au grand jour, au milieu de la foule,
est tombé sur ton front comme un plafond qui croule, et ceux qui t’ ont vu mettre en poudre en un moment se sont épouvantés de cet écrasement.
Et les sages ont dit, te regardant par terre, que les temps sont mauvais, que le pouvoir s’ altère quand un gueux, un gredin, un faquin, un maraud, fait pour ramper si bas, peut tomber de si haut.
6-7 août 1849.

LE SIECLE , XI A ...

Je me disais : — cet homme est-il un saltimbanque?
Ne faut-il pas le plaindre? Est-ce un sens qui lui manque?
Il ne comprend donc pas? Est-ce un aveugle-né?
Un bègue? Un sourd? D’ où vient que ce triste obstiné méconnaît tout génie et toute gloire, et rampe, tâchant d’ éteindre l’ astre et de souffler la lampe, et déchire, dénigre, insulte, blesse, nuit, et sur toute clarté va bavant de la nuit? — maintenant je t’ ai vu de près, ô misérable;
j’ ai vu ton oeil, ton dos, ton échine, ton râble,
ton crâne plat, ton ventre odieux; et du doigt Asmodée a levé le plafond de ton toit;
je t’ ai vu te traîner, ivre et triste; et, farouche,
arracher en jouant les ailes d’ une mouche.
J’ ai vu ton rire, hélas! Je n’ ai pas vu tes pleurs.
Je t’ ai vu haïr l’ aube, et marcher sur les fleurs, et sans cesse écraser la vie à ton passage;
et battre les enfants, et cracher au visage de cette fille à qui tu donnes quinze sous;
j’ ai vu tes vêtements dans l’ ordure dissous;
j’ ai vu ton coeur sans Dieu, ta chambre sans cuvette;
je t’ ai vu t’ irriter au chant d’ une fauvette, toujours plisser le front, toujours crisper le poing;
et j’ ai compris pourquoi tu ne comprenais point.
20 mai.

LE SIECLE , XIIANIMA VILIS .

à force d’ insulter les vaillants et les justes,
à force de flatter les trahisons augustes, à force d’ être abject et d’ ajuster des tas de sophismes hideux aux plus noirs attentats, cet homme espère atteindre aux grandeurs; il s’ essouffle à passer scélérat, lui qui n’ est que maroufle.
Ce pédagogue aspire au grade de coquin.
Ce rhéteur, ver de terre et de lettres, pasquin qui s’ acharne sur nous et dont toujours nous rîmes, tâche d’ être promu complice des grands crimes.
Il raillait l’ art, et c’ est tout simple en vérité,
la laideur est aveugle et sourde à la beauté.
Mais être un idiot ne peut plus lui suffire,
il est jaloux du tigre à qui la peur dit : Sire!
Il veut être aussi lui sénateur des forêts;
il veut avoir, ainsi que Montluc ou Verrès, sa caverne ou sa cage avec grilles et trappes dans la ménagerie énorme des satrapes.
Ah çà, tu perds ton temps et ta peine, grimaud!
Aliboron n’ est pas aisément Béhémoth;
le burlesque n’ est pas facilement sinistre;
fusses-tu meurtrier, tu demeurerais cuistre.
Quand ces êtres sanglants qu’ il te plaît d’ envier,
Mammons que hait Tacite et qu’ admire Cuvier, sont là, brigands et dieux, on n’ entre pas d’ emblée dans leur épouvantable et royale assemblée.
Devenir historique! Impossible pour toi.
Sortir du mépris simple et compter dans l’ effroi, toi, jamais! Ton front bas exclut ce noir panache.
Ton sort est d’ être, jeune, inepte; et, vieux, ganache.
Vers l’ avancement vrai tu n’ as point fait un pas;
tu te gonfles, crapaud, mais tu n’ augmentes pas;

si Myrmidon croissait, ce serait du désordre;
tu parviens à ramper sans parvenir à mordre.
La nature n’ a pas de force à dépenser pour te faire grandir et te faire pousser.
Quoi donc! N’ est-elle point l’ impassible nature?
Parce que des têtards, nourris de pourriture, souhaitent devenir dragons et caïmans,
elle consentirait à ces grossissements!
Le ver serait boa! L’ huître deviendrait l’ hydre!
Locuste empoisonnait le vin, et non le cidre;
l’ enfer fit Arétin terrible, et non Brusquet.
Un avorton ne peut qu’ avorter. Le roquet
s’ efforce d’ être loup, mais il s’ arrête en route.
Le ciel mystérieux fait des guépards sans doute,
de fiers lions bandits, pires que les démons,
des éléphants, des ours; mais il livre les monts,
les antres et les bois à leur majesté morne!
Mais il lui faut l’ espace et les sables sans borne et l’ immense désert pour les démuseler!
Le chat qui veut rugir ne peut que miauler;
en vain il copierait le grand jaguar lyrique errant sur la falaise au bord des mers d’ Afrique, et la panthère horrible, et le lynx moucheté;
Dieu ne fait pas monter jusqu’ à la dignité de crime, de furie et de scélératesse, cette méchanceté faite de petitesse.
Les montagnes, pignons et murs de granit noir
d’ où tombent les torrents affreux, riraient de voir ce preneur de souris rôder sur leur gouttière.
Un nain ne devient pas géant au vestiaire.
Pour être un dangereux et puissant animal, il faut qu’ un grand rayon tombe sur vous; le mal
n’ arrive pas toujours à sa hideuse gloire.
Dieu tolère, c’ est vrai, la création noire,
mais d’ aussi plats que toi ne sont pas exaucés.
Tu ne parviendras pas, drôle, à t’ enfler assez pour être un python vaste et sombre au fond des fanges;

tu n’ égaleras point ces reptiles étranges dont l’ oeil aux soupiraux de l’ enfer est pareil.
Tu demeureras laid, faible et mou. Le soleil dédaigne le lézard, candidat crocodile.
Sois un coeur monstrueux, mais reste une âme vile.

1854, 11, 22

donc, vieux passé plaintif, toujours tu reviendras nous criant : — pourquoi donc est-on si loin? Ingrats!
Qu’ êtes-vous devenus? Dites, avec l’ abîme quel pacte avez-vous fait? Quel attentat? Quel crime? — nous questionnant, sombre et de rage écumant, furieux. Nous avons marché, tout bonnement.
Qui marche t’ assassine, ô bon vieux passé blême.
Mais que veux-tu? Je suis de mon siècle, et je l’ aime!
Je te l’ ai déjà dit. Non, ce n’ est plus du tout
l’ époque où la nature était de mauvais goût, où Bouhours, vieux jésuite, et Le Batteux, vieux cancre, lunette au nez et plume au poing, barbouillaient d’ encre le cygne au bec doré, le bois vert, le ciel bleu;
où l’ homme corrigeait le manuscrit de Dieu.
Non, ce n’ est plus le temps où Lenôtre à Versaille raturait le buisson, la ronce, la broussaille;
siècle où l’ on ne voyait dans les champs éperdus que des hommes poudrés sous des arbres tondus.
Tout est en liberté maintenant. Sur sa nuque l’ arbre a plus de cheveux, l’ homme a moins de perruque.
La vieile idée est morte avec le vieux cerveau.
La révolution est un monde nouveau.
Notre oreille en changeant a changé la musique.
Lorsque Fernand Cortez arriva du Mexique,
il revint la main pleine, et, du jeune univers,
il rapporta de l’ or; nous rapportons des vers.
Nous rapportons des chants mystérieux. Nous sommes d’ autres yeux, d’ autres fronts, d’ autres coeurs, d’ autres hommes.
Braves pédants, calmez votre bon vieux courroux.
Nous arrachons de l’ âme humaine les verrous.
Tous frères, et mêlés dans les monts, dans les plaines, nous laissons librement s’ en aller nos haleines

à travers les grands bois et les bleus firmaments.
Nous avons démoli les vieux compartiments.
Non, nous ne sommes plus ni paysan, ni noble, ni lourdaud dans son pré, ni rustre en son vignoble,
ni baron dans sa tour, ni reître à ses canons;
nous brisons cette écorce, et nous redevenons
l’ homme; l’ homme enfin hors des temps crépusculaires;
l’ homme égal à lui-même en tous ses exemplaires;
ni tyran, ni forçat, ni maître, ni valet;
l’ humanité se montre enfin telle qu’ elle est, chaque matin plus libre et chaque soir plus sage;
et le vieux masque usé laisse voir le visage.
Avec ézéchiel nous mêlons Spinosa.
La nature nous prend, la nature nous a;
dans son antre profond, douce, elle nous attire;
elle en chasse pour nous son antique satyre,
et nous y montre un sphinx nouveau qui dit : pensez.
Pour nous les petits cris au fond des nids poussés, sont augustes; pour nous toutes les monarchies que vous saluez, vous, de vos têtes blanchies, tous les fauteuils royaux aux dossiers empourprés,
sont peu de chose auprès d’ un liseron des prés.
Régner! Cela vaut-il rêver sous un vieux aulne?
Nous regardons passer Charles-Quint sur son trône, Jules deux sous son dais, César dans les clairons, et nous avons pitié lorsque nous comparons à l’ aurore des cieux cette fausse dorure.
Lorsque nous contemplons, par une déchirure des nuages, l’ oiseau volant dans sa fierté, nous sentons frissonner notre aile, ô liberté!
En fait d’ or, à la cour nous préférons la gerbe.
La nature est pour nous l’ unique et sacré verbe, et notre art poétique ignore Despréaux.
Nos rois très excellents, très puissants et très hauts,
c’ est le roc dans les flots, c’ est dans les bois le chêne.
Mai, qui brise l’ hiver, c’ est-à-dire la chaîne, nous plaît. Le vrai nous tient. Je suis parfois tenté de dire au mont Blanc : — Sire! Et : — votre majesté à la vierge qui passe et porte, agreste et belle, sa cruche sur son front et Dieu dans sa prunelle.

Pour nous, songeurs, bandits, romantiques, démons, bonnets rouges, les flots grondants, l’ aigle, les monts, la bise, quand le soir ouvre son noir portique,
la tempête effarant l’ onde apocalyptique,
dépassent en musique, en mystère, en effroi,
les quatre violons de la chambre du roi.
Chaque siècle, il s’ y faut résigner, suit sa route.
Les hommes d’ autrefois ont été grands sans doute;
nous ne nous tournons plus vers les mêmes clartés.
Jadis, frisure au front, ayant à ses côtés un tas d’ abbés sans bure et de femmes sans guimpes, parmi des princes dieux, sous des plafonds olympes,
prêt dans son justaucorps à poser pour Audran, la dentelle au cou, grave, et l’ oeil sur un cadran, dans le salon de Mars ou dans la galerie
d’ Apollon, submergé dans la grand’ seigneurie, dans le flot des Rohan, des Sourdis, des Elbeuf, et des fiers habits d’ or roulant vers l’ Oeil-de-boeuf, le poëte, fût-il Corneille, ou toi, Molière,
— tandis qu’ en la chapelle ou bien dans la volière,
les chanteurs accordaient le théorbe et le luth, et que Lulli tremblant s’ écriait : gare à l’ ut! — attendait qu’ au milieu de la claire fanfare et des fronts inclinés apparût, comme un phare, le page, aux tonnelets de brocart d’ argent fin,
qui portait le bougeoir de monsieur le dauphin.
Aujourd’ hui, pour Versaille et pour salon d’ Hercule, ayant l’ ombre et l’ airain du rouge crépuscule, fauve, et peu coudoyé de Guiche ou de Brissac, la face au vent, les poings dans un paletot sac,
seul, dans l’ immensité que l’ ouragan secoue, il écoute le bruit que fait la sombre proue
de la terre, et pensif, sur le blême horizon, à l’ heure où, dans l’ orchestre inquiet du buisson,

de l’ arbre et de la source, un frémissement passe, où le chêne chuchote et prend sa contrebasse,
l’ eau sa flûte et le vent son stradivarius,
il regarde monter l’ effrayant Sirius.
Pour la muse en paniers, par Dorat réchauffée,
c’ est un orang-outang; pour les bois, c’ est Orphée.
La nature lui dit : mon fils. Ce malotru, ô grand siècle! écrit mieux qu’ Ablancourt et Patru.
Est-il féroce? Non. Ce troglodyte affable à l’ ormeau du chemin fait réciter sa fable;
il dit au doux chevreau : bien bêlé, mon enfant!
Quand la fleur, le matin, de perles se coiffant, se mire aux flots, coquette et mijaurée exquise,
il passe et dit : bonjour, madame la marquise.
Et puis il souffre, il pleure, il est homme; le sort en rayons douloureux de son front triste sort.
Car, ici-bas, si fort qu’ on soit, si peu qu’ on vaille, tous, qui que nous soyons, le destin nous travaille
pour orner dans l’ azur la tiare de Dieu.
Le même bras nous fait passer au même feu;
et, sur l’ humanité, qu’ il use de sa lime,
essayant tous les coeurs à sa meule sublime,
scrutant tous les défauts de l’ homme transparent, sombre ouvrier du ciel, noir orfèvre, tirant du sage une étincelle et du juste une flamme, se penche le malheur, lapidaire de l’ âme.
Oui, tel est le poëte aujourd’ hui. Grands, petits, tous dans Pan effaré nous sommes engloutis.
Et ces secrets surpris, ces splendeurs contemplées, ces pages de la nuit et du jour épelées,
ce qu’ affirme Newton, ce qu’ aperçoit Mesmer, la grande liberté des souffles sur la mer,
la forêt qui craint Dieu dans l’ ombre et qui le nomme, les eaux, les fleurs, les champs, font naître en nous un homme mystérieux, semblable aux profondeurs qu’ il voit.
La nature aux songeurs montre les cieux du doigt.
Le cèdre au torse énorme, athlète des tempêtes, sur le fauve Liban conseillait les prophètes, et ce fut son exemple austère qui poussa

Nahum contre Ninive, Amos contre Gaza.
Les sphères en roulant nous jettent la justice.
Oui, l’ âme monte au bien comme l’ astre au solstice;
et le monde équilibre a fait l’ homme devoir.
Quand l’ âme voit mal Dieu, l’ aube le fait mieux voir.
La nuit, quand Aquilon sonne de la trompette, ce qu’ il dit, notre coeur frémissant le répète.
Nous vivons libres, fiers, tressaillants, prosternés, éblouis du grand Dieu formidable; et, tournés vers tous les idéals et vers tous les possibles, nous cueillons dans l’ azur les roses invisibles.
L’ ombre est notre palais. Nous sommes commensaux de l’ abeille, du jonc nourri par les ruisseaux, du papillon qui boit dans la fleur arrosée.
Nos âmes aux oiseaux disputent la rosée.
Laissant le passé mort dans les siècles défunts,
nous vivons de rayons, de soupirs, de parfums, et nous nous abreuvons de l’ immense ambroisie qu’ Homère appelle amour et Platon poésie.
Sous les branchages noirs du destin, nous errons,
purs et graves, avec les souffles sur nos fronts.
Notre adoration, notre autel, notre Louvre,
c’ est la vertu qui saigne ou le matin qui s’ ouvre;
les grands levers auxquels nous ne manquons jamais,
c’ est Vénus des monts noirs blanchissant les sommets;
c’ est le lys fleurissant, chaste, charmant, sévère;
c’ est Jésus se dressant, pâle, sur le Calvaire.
22 novembre 1854.

1859, 07, 24

LE SIECLE , XIVA UN ECRIVAIN .

prends garde à Marchangy. La prose poétique est une ornière où geint le vieux Pégase étique.
Tout autant que le vers, certes, la prose a droit à la juste cadence, au rhythme divin; soit;
pourvu que, sans singer le mètre, la cadence
s’ y cache et que le rhythme austère s’ y condense.
La prose en vain essaie un essor assommant.
Le vers s’ envole au ciel tout naturellement;
il monte; il est le vers; je ne sais quoi de frêle et d’ éternel, qui chante et plane et bat de l’ aile;
il se mêle, farouche et l’ éclair dans les yeux,
à toutes ces lueurs du ciel mystérieux que l’ aube frissonnante emporte dans ses voiles.
Quand même on la ferait danser jusqu’ aux étoiles,
la prose, c’ est toujours le sermo pedestris.
Tu crois être Ariel et tu n’ es que Vestris.
24 juillet 1859.

LE SIECLE , XVLE MONT - AUX - PENDUS . (JERSEY .)

Ils me disent : hier deux bricks se sont perdus la nuit sur des bas-fonds près du Mont-aux-Pendus.
Et moi, levant le doigt vers la funèbre cime,
je leur dis : vous venez tuer devant l’ abîme.
Pourquoi voulez-vous donc qu’ il soit meilleur que vous?
Les flots sont insensés, mais les hommes sont fous.
Vous donnez le mauvais exemple aux mers sauvages;
vous leur montrez la mort debout sur vos rivages;
vous mettez un gibet sur la falaise; alors ne vous étonnez point d’ avoir, près de vos ports, épiant vos départs comme vos arrivées,
des roches sans pitié que l’ homme a dépravées.
4 décembre.

LE SIECLE , XVI LE BOUT DE L’ OREILLE .

J’ ai ri d’ abord. J’ étais dans mon champ plein de roses.
J’ errais. âme attentive au clair-obscur des choses,
je vois au fond de tout luire un vague flambeau.
C’ était le matin, l’ heure où le bois se fait beau, où la nature semble une immense prunelle éblouie, ayant Dieu presque visible en elle.
Pour faire fête à l’ aube, au bord des flots dormants, les ronces se couvraient d’ un tas de diamants;
les brins d’ herbe coquets mettaient toutes leurs perles;
la mer chantait; les geais causaient avec les merles;
les papillons volaient du cytise au myrtil.
Entre un ami. — bonjour. Savez-vous? Me dit-il, on vient de vous brûler sur la place publique.
— où ça? — dans un pays honnête et catholique.
— je le suppose. — peste! Ils vous ont pris vivant dans un livre où l’ on voit le bagne et le couvent, vous ont brûlé, vous diable et juif, avec esclandre,
ensuite ils ont au vent fait jeter votre cendre.
— il serait peu décent qu’ il en fût autrement.
Mais quand ça? — l’ autre jour. En Espagne. — vraiment.
— ils ont fait cuire au bout de leur grande pincette
Myriel, Jean Valjean, Marius et Cosette, vos Misérables, vous, toute votre âme enfin.
Vos êtes un de ceux dont Escobar a faim.
Vous voilà quelque peu grillé comme Voltaire.
— donc j’ ai chaud en Espagne et froid en Angleterre.
Tel est mon sort. — la chose est dans tous les journaux.
Ah! Si vous n’ étiez pas chez ces bons huguenots!
L’ ennui, c’ est qu’ on ne peut jusqu’ ici vous poursuivre.
Ne pouvant rôtir l’ homme, on a flambé le livre.
— c’ est le moins. — vous voyez d’ ici tous les détails.
De gros bonshommes noirs devant de grands portails, un feu, de quoi brûler une bibliothèque.
— un évêque m’ a fait cet honneur! — un évêque?

Morbleu! Pour vous damner ils se sont assemblés, et ce n’ est pas un seul, c’ est tous. — vous me comblez. — et nous rions. Et puis je rentre, et je médite.
Ils en sont là. Du temps de Vénus Aphrodite, parfois, seule, écoutant on ne sait quelles voix,
la déesse errait nue et blanche au fond des bois;
elle marchait tranquille, et sa beauté sans voiles, ses cheveux faits d’ écume et ses yeux faits d’ étoiles,
étaient dans la forêt comme une vision;
cependant, retenant leur respiration, voyant au loin passer cette clarté, les faunes
s’ approchaient; l’ oegipan, le satyre aux yeux jaunes, se glissaient en arrière ivres d’ un vil désir, et brusquement tendaient le bras pour la saisir,
et le bois frissonnait, et la surnaturelle, pâle, se retournait sentant leur main sur elle.
Ainsi, dans notre siècle aux mirages trompeurs, la conscience humaine a d’ étranges stupeurs;
lumineuse, elle marche en notre crépuscule,
et tout à coup, devant le faune, elle recule.
Tartuffe est là, nouveau satan d’ un autre éden.
Nous constatons dans l’ ombre, à chaque instant, soudain, le vague allongement de quelque griffe infâme et l’ essai ténébreux de nous prendre notre âme.
L’ esprit humain se sent tâté par un bourreau.
Mais doucement. On jette au noir quemadero ce qu’ on peut, mais plus tard on fera mieux peut-être, et votre meurtrier est timide; il est prêtre.
Il vous demanderait presque permission.
Il allume un brasier, fait sa procession, met des bûches au feu, du bitume au cilice, soit; mais si gentiment qu’ après votre supplice vous riez. Grillandus n’ est plus que Loyola.
Vous lui dites : ma foi, c’ est drôle. Touchez là.
Eh bien, riez. C’ est bon. Attendez, imbéciles!
Lui qui porte en ses yeux l’ âme des noirs Basiles, il rit de vous voir rire. Il est Vichnou, Mithra,

Teutatès, et ce feu pour rire grandira.
Ah! Vous criez : bravo! Ta rage est ma servante.
Brûle mes livres. Bien, très bien! Pousse à la vente!
Et lui songe. Il se dit : — la chose a réussi.
Quand le livre est brûlé, l’ écrivain est roussi.
La suite à demain. — vous, vous raillez. Il partage votre joie, avec l’ air d’ un prêtre de Carthage.
Il dit : leur cécité toujours me protégea.
Sa mâchoire, qui rit encor, vous mord déjà.
N’ est-ce pas? Ce brûleur avec bonté nous traite, et son autodafé n’ est qu’ une chaufferette!
Ah! Les vrais tourbillons de flamme auront leur tour.
En elle, comme un oeuf contient le grand vautour,
la petite étincelle a l’ incendie énorme.
Attendez seulement que la France s’ endorme, et vous verrez. Peut-on calculer le chemin que ferait pas à pas, hier, aujourd’ hui, demain, l’ effroyable tortue avec ses pieds fossiles?
Qui sait? Bientôt peut-être on aura des conciles!
On entendra, qui sait? Un homme dire à Dieu :
— l’ infaillible, c’ est moi. Place! Recule un peu. — quoi! Recommence-t-on? Ciel! Serait-il possible que l’ homme redevînt pâture, proie et cible!
Et qu’ on revît les temps difformes! Qu’ on revît le double joug qui tue autant qu’ il asservit!
Qu’ on revît se dresser sur le globe, vil bouge,
près du sceptre d’ airain la houlette en fer rouge!
Nos pères l’ ont subi, ce double pouvoir-là!
Nuit! Mort! Melchisédech compliqué d’ Attila!
Ils ont vu sur leurs fronts, eux parias sans nombre, le côte à côte affreux des deux sceptres dans l’ ombre;
ils entendaient leur foudre au fond du firmament, moins effrayante encor que leur chuchotement.
— prends les peuples, César. — toi, Pierre, prends les âmes.
— prends la pourpre, César. — mais toi, qu’ as-tu? — les flammes.
— et puis? — cela suffit. — régnons. âges hideux!
L’ homme blanc, l’ homme sombre. Ils sont un. Ils sont deux.

Là le guerrier, ici le pontife; et leurs suites, confesseurs, massacreurs, tueurs, bourreaux, jésuites!
ô deuil! Sur les bûchers et les sanbenitos Rome a, quatre cents ans, braillé son vil pathos, jetant sur l’ univers terrifié qui souffre
d’ une main l’ eau bénite et de l’ autre le soufre.
Tous ces prêtres portaient l’ affreux masque aux trous noirs; leurs mitres ressemblaient dans l’ ombre aux éteignoirs;
ils ont été la Nuit dans l’ obscur moyen-âge;
ils sont tout prêts à faire encor ce personnage, et jusqu’ en notre siècle, à cette heure engourdi,
on les verrait, avec leur torche en plein midi, avec leur crosse, avec leurs bedeaux, populace, reparaître et rentrer, s’ ils trouvaient de la place
pour passer, ô Voltaire, entre Jean-Jacque et toi!
Non, non, non! Reculez, faux pouvoir, fausse foi!
Oh! La Rome des frocs! Oh! L’ Espagne des moines!
Disparaissez! Prêcheurs captant les patrimoines!
Bonnets carrés! Camails! Capuchons! Clercs! Abbés!
Tas d’ horribles fronts bas, tonsurés ou nimbés!
ô mornes visions du tison et du glaive!
Exécrable passé qui toujours se relève et sur l’ humanité se dresse menaçant!
Saulx-Tavanne, écumant une écume de sang, criant : égorgez tout! Dieu fera le triage!
La juive de seize ans brûlée au mariage de Charles deux avec Louise d’ Orléans, et dans l’ autodafé plein de brasiers béants offerte aux fiancés comme un cierge de noce;
Campanella brisé par l’ église féroce;
Jordan Bruno lié sous un ruisseau de poix qui ronge par sa flamme et creuse par son poids;
d’ Albe qui dans l’ horreur des bûchers se promène
séchant sa main sanglante à cette braise humaine;
Galilée abaissant ses genoux repentants;
la place d’ Abbeville où Labarre à vingt ans,
pour avoir chansonné toute cette canaille,

eut la langue arrachée avec une tenaille, et hurla dans le feu, tordant ses noirs moignons;
le marché de Rouen dont les sombres pignons ont le rouge reflet de ton supplice, ô Jeanne!
Huss brûlé par Martin, l’ aigle tué par l’ âne;
Farnèse et Charles-Quint, Grégoire et Sigismond, toujours ensemble assis comme au sommet d’ un mont,
à leurs pieds toute l’ âme humaine épouvantée sous cet effrayant Dieu qui fait le monde athée;
ce passé m’ apparaît! Vous me faites horreur, croulez, toi monstre pape, et toi monstre empereur!
25 mai.

LE SIECLE , XVII L’ ECHAFAUD .

— oeil pour oeil! Dent pour dent! Tête pour tête! à mort!
Justice! L’ échafaud vaut mieux que le remord.
Talion! Talion! — silence aux cris sauvages!
Non! Assez de malheur, de meurtre et de ravages!
Assez d’ égorgement! Assez de deuil! Assez de fantômes sans tête et d’ affreux trépassés!
Assez de visions funèbres dans la brume!
Assez de doigts hideux, montrant le sang qui fume,
noirs, et comptant les trous des linceuls dans la nuit!
Pas de suppliciés dont le cri nous poursuit!
Pas de spectres jetant leur ombre sur nos têtes!
Nous sommes ruisselants de toutes les tempêtes;
il n’ est plus qu’ un devoir et qu’ une vérité,
c’ est, après tant d’ angoisse et de calamité, homme, d’ ouvrir son coeur, oiseau, d’ ouvrir son aile vers ce ciel que remplit la grande âme éternelle!
Le peuple, que les rois broyaient sous leurs talons, est la pierre promise au temple, et nous voulons que la pierre bâtisse et non qu’ elle lapide!
Pas de sang! Pas de mort! C’ est un reflux stupide que la férocité sur la férocité.
Un pilier d’ échafaud soutient mal la cité.
Tu veux faire mourir! Moi je veux faire naître!
Je mure le sépulcre et j’ ouvre la fenêtre.
Dieu n’ a pas fait le sang, à l’ amour réservé, pour qu’ on le donne à boire aux fentes du pavé.
S’ agit-il d’ égorger? Peuples, il s’ agit d’ être.
Quoi! Tu veux te venger, passant? De qui? Du maître?
Si tu ne vaux pas mieux, que viens-tu faire ici?
Tout mystère où l’ on jette un meurtre est obscurci;
l’ énigme ensanglantée est plus âpre à résoudre;
l’ ombre s’ ouvre terrible après le coup de foudre;
tuer n’ est pas créer, et l’ on se tromperait si l’ on croyait que tout finit au couperet;

c’ est là qu’ inattendue, impénétrable, immense,
pleine d’ éclairs subits, la question commence;
c’ est du bien et du mal; mais le mal est plus grand.
Satan rit à travers l’ échafaud transparent.
Le bourreau, quel qu’ il soit, a le pied dans l’ abîme;
quoi qu’ elle fasse, hélas! La hache fait un crime;
une lugubre nuit fume sur ce tranchant;
quand il vient de tuer, comme, en s’ en approchant, on frémit de le voir tout ruisselant, et comme on sent qu’ il a frappé dans l’ ombre plus qu’ un homme!
Sitôt qu’ a disparu le coupable immolé, hors du panier tragique où la tête a roulé,
le principe innocent, divin, inviolable, avec son regard d’ astre à l’ aurore semblable,
se dresse, spectre auguste, un cercle rouge au cou.
L’ homme est impitoyable, hélas, sans savoir où.
Comment ne voit-il pas qu’ il vit dans un problème, que l’ homme est solidaire avec ses monstres même,
et qu’ il ne peut tuer autre chose qu’ Abel!
Lorsqu’ une tête tombe, on sent trembler le ciel.
Décapitez Néron, cette hyène insensée, la vie universelle est dans Néron blessée;
faites monter Tibère à l’ échafaud demain,
Tibère saignera le sang du genre humain.
Nous sommes tous mêlés à ce que fait la Grève;
quand un homme, en public, nous voyant comme un rêve,
meurt, implorant en vain nos lâches abandons,
ce meurtre est notre meurtre et nous en répondons;
c’ est avec un morceau de notre insouciance,
c’ est avec un haillon de notre conscience, avec notre âme à tous, que l’ exécuteur las essuie en s’ en allant son hideux coutelas.
L’ homme peut oublier; les choses importunes
s’ effacent dans l’ éclat ondoyant des fortunes;
le passé, l’ avenir, se voilent par moments;
les festins, les flambeaux, les feux, les diamants,
l’ illumination triomphale des fêtes,

peuvent éclipser l’ ombre énorme des prophètes;
autour des grands bassins, au bord des claires eaux, les enfants radieux peuvent aux cris d’ oiseaux mêler le bruit confus de leurs lèvres fleuries, et, dans le Luxembourg ou dans les Tuileries, devant les vieux héros de marbre aux poings crispés,
danser, rire et chanter : les lauriers sont coupés!
La Courtille au front bas peut noyer dans les verres
le souvenir des jours illustres et sévères;
la valse peut ravir, éblouir, enivrer des femmes de satin, heureuses de livrer le plus de nudité possible aux yeux de flamme;
l’ hymen peut murmurer son chaste épithalame;
le bal masqué, lascif, paré, bruyant, charmant,
peut allumer sa torche et bondir follement, goule au linceul joyeux, larve en fleurs, spectre rose;
mais, quel que soit le temps, quelle que soit la cause,
c’ est toujours une nuit funeste au peuple entier que celle où, conduisant un prêtre, un guichetier fouille au trousseau de clefs qui pend à sa ceinture pour aller, sur le lit de fièvre et de torture, réveiller avant l’ heure un pauvre homme endormi, tandis que, sur la Grève, entrevus à demi,
sous les coups de marteau qui font fuir la chouette,
d’ effrayants madriers dressent leur silhouette, rougis par la lanterne horrible du bourreau.
Le vieux glaive du juge a la nuit pour fourreau.
Le tribunal ne peut de ce fourreau livide tirer que la douleur, l’ anxiété, le vide, le néant, le remords, l’ ignorance et l’ effroi,
qu’ il frappe au nom du peuple ou venge au nom du roi.
Justice! Dites-vous. — qu’ appelez-vous justice?
Qu’ on s’ entr’ aide, qu’ on soit des frères, qu’ on vêtisse ceux qui sont nus, qu’ on donne à tous le pain sacré, qu’ on brise l’ affreux bagne où le pauvre est muré,
mais qu’ on ne touche point à la balance sombre!
Le sépulcre où, pensif, l’ homme naufrage et sombre,

au delà d’ aujourd’ hui, de demain, des saisons,
des jours, du flamboiement de nos vains horizons,
et des chimères, proie et fruit de notre étude,
a son ciel plein d’ aurore et fait de certitude;
la justice en est l’ astre immuable et lointain.
Notre justice à nous, comme notre destin,
est tâtonnement, trouble, erreur, nuage, doute;
martyr, je m’ applaudis; juge, je me redoute;
l’ infaillible, est-ce moi, dis? Est-ce toi? Réponds.
Vous criez : — nos douleurs sont notre droit. Frappons.
Nous sommes trop en butte au sort qui nous accable, nous sommes trop frappés d’ un mal inexplicable, nous avons trop de deuils, trop de jougs, trop d’ hivers, nous sommes trop souffrants, dans nos destins divers,
tous, les grands, les petits, les obscurs, les célèbres, pour ne pas condamner quelqu’ un dans nos ténèbres. — puisque vous ne voyez rien de clair dans le sort, ne vous hâtez pas trop d’ en conclure la mort,
fût-ce la mort d’ un roi, d’ un maître et d’ un despote;
dans la brume insondable où tout saigne et sanglote,
ne vous hâtez pas trop de prendre vos malheurs, vos jours sans feu, vos jours sans pain, vos cris, vos pleurs, et ce deuil qui sur vous et votre race tombe,
pour les faire servir à construire une tombe.
Quel pas aurez-vous fait pour avoir ajouté
à votre obscur destin, ombre et fatalité, cette autre obscurité que vous nommez justice?
Faire de l’ échafaud, menaçante bâtisse, un autel à bénir le progrès nouveau-né,
ô vivants, c’ est démence; et qu’ aurez-vous gagné quand, d’ un culte de mort lamentables ministres, vous aurez marié ces infirmes sinistres,
la justice boiteuse et l’ aveugle anankè?
Le glaive toujours cherche un but toujours manqué;
la palme, cette flamme aux fleurs étincelantes,
faite d’ azur, frémit devant des mains sanglantes,
et recule et s’ enfuit, sensitive des cieux!

La colère assouvie a le front soucieux.
Quant à moi, tu le sais, nuit calme où je respire,
j’ aurais là, sous mes pieds, mon ennemi, le pire, Caïn juge, Judas pontife, Satan roi, que j’ ouvrirais ma porte et dirais : sauve-toi!
Non, l’ élargissement des mornes cimetières n’ est pas le but. Marchons, reculons les frontières de la vie! ô mon siècle, allons toujours plus haut!
Grandissons! Qu’ est-ce donc qu’ il nous veut, l’ échafaud, cette charpente spectre accoutumée aux foules, cet îlot noir qu’ assiège et que bat de ses houles la multitude aux flots inquiets et mouvants, ce sépulcre qui vient attaquer les vivants,
et qui, sur les palais ainsi que sur les bouges, surgit, levant un glaive au bout de ses bras rouges?
Mystère qui se livre aux carrefours, morceau de la tombe qui vient tremper dans le ruisseau, bravant le jour, le bruit, les cris; bière effrontée qui, féroce, cynique et lâche, semble athée!
ô spectacle exécré dans les plus repoussants,
une mort qui se fait coudoyer aux passants, qui permet qu’ un crieur hors de l’ ombre la tire!
Une mort qui n’ a pas l’ épouvante du rire, dévoilant l’ escalier qui dans la nuit descend, disant : voyez! Marchant dans la rue, et laissant la boue éclabousser son linceul semé d’ astres;
qui, sur un tréteau, montre entre deux vils pilastres son horreur, son front noir, son oeil de basilic;
qui consent à venir travailler en public,
et qui, prostituée, accepte, sur les places,
la familiarité des fauves populaces!
ô vivant du tombeau, vivant de l’ infini, Jéhovah! Dieu, clarté, rayon jamais terni, pour faire de la mort, de la nuit, des ténèbres,
ils ont mis ton triangle entre deux pieux funèbres;
et leur foule, qui voit resplendir ta lueur,
ne sent pas à son front poindre une âpre sueur,

et l’ horreur n’ étreint pas ce noir peuple unanime, quand ils font, pour punir ce qu’ ils ont nommé crime,
au nom de ce qu’ ils ont appelé vérité,
sur la vie, ô terreur, tomber l’ éternité!

1870, 07

LE SIECLE , XVIIIJOLIES FEMMES . SONNET POUR ALBUM .

on leur fait des sonnets, passables quelquefois;
on baise cette main qu’ elles daignent vous tendre;
on les suit à l’ église, on les admire au bois;
on redevient Damis, on redevient Clitandre;
le bal est leur triomphe, et l’ on brigue leur choix;
on danse, on rit, on cause, et vous pouvez entendre,
tout en valsant, parmi les luths et les hautbois, ces belles gazouiller de leur voix la plus tendre :
— la force est tout; la guerre est sainte; l’ échafaud est bon; il ne faut pas trop de lumière; il faut bâtir plus de prisons et bâtir moins d’ écoles;
si Paris bouge, il faut des canons plein les forts. — et ces colombes-là vous disent des paroles à faire remuer d’ horreur les os des morts.
Juillet 1870.

1870, 03, 24

LE SIECLE , XIX

cent mille hommes, criblés d’ obus et de mitraille, cent mille hommes, couchés sur un champ de bataille, tombés pour leur pays par leur mort agrandi,
comme on tombe à Fleurus, comme on tombe à Lodi, cent mille ardents soldats, héros et non victimes, morts dans un tourbillon d’ évènements sublimes,
d’ où prend son vol la fière et blanche Liberté,
sont un malheur moins grand pour la société,
sont pour l’ humanité, qui sur le vrai se fonde,
une calamité moins haute et moins profonde, un coup moins lamentable et moins infortuné qu’ un innocent, — un seul innocent condamné, — dont le sang, ruisselant sous un infâme glaive, fume entre les pavés de la place de Grève,
qu’ un juste assassiné dans la forêt des lois,
et dont l’ âme a le droit d’ aller dire à Dieu : vois!
H.. -H.. — 24 mars 1870.

1870, 05, 22

la hache? Non. Jamais. Je n’ en veux pour personne.
Pas même pour ce czar devant qui je frissonne,
pas même pour ce monstre à lui-même fatal.
Qui supprime Tyburn abolit White-Hall;
et quand la mort, ouvrant son désastreux registre,
me dit : — que jettes-tu dans ce panier sinistre?
Ou la tête du peuple, ou la tête du roi? — je dis : — ni celle-ci, ni celle-là. — ma loi,
c’ est la vie; et ma joie, ô Dieu, c’ est l’ aube pure.
Je ne suis pas de ceux qui font la pourriture;
je ne suis pas de ceux qui donnent à manger au sépulcre, où l’ on voit ramper et s’ allonger
l’ affreux sarcopte éclos du miasme délétère;
je ne suis pas de ceux vers qui les vers de terre,
béants, tournent leur tête aveugle dans la nuit.
Tout supplice est un fait contre la loi, traduit, pour l’ éducation des foules indécises,
devant l’ esprit humain, suprême cour d’ assises, saint prétoire, infaillible et grave tribunal
où Beccaria juge aidé de Juvénal.
Le penseur n’ absout point les grands forfaits lyriques que l’ histoire engloutit sous ses panégyriques;
il excuse parfois, il n’ approuve jamais.
Il veut de l’ aube, et non du sang, sur les sommets.
Peuple ou roi, quel que soit le tueur, il le blâme.
Pour lui l’ assassinat, même illustre, est infâme;
tout temple est sombre avec une morgue au milieu.
Quand le sang coule, il dit : malheur! Admirant peu le resplendissement magnifique du glaive;
il n’ a pas, quand le cri des victimes s’ élève,
pour éblouissement la grandeur du bourreau;
pour lui, Saint-Just poussant Danton au tombereau,

Louis quatorze affreux, penché sur les Cévennes, implacable, saignant la France aux quatre veines,
Titus livrant Sion massacrée aux vautours, quoi qu’ on puisse alléguer et dire, c’ est toujours le même crime errant dans la même nuit noire;
si grand que soit l’ éclat, quelle que soit la gloire,
c’ est toujours à ses yeux le meurtre, et, plein d’ ennui, partout, il le condamne; et tout ce qu’ il sait, lui,
c’ est qu’ on ne lui fait pas accepter des décombres,
des désastres, des morts, des écrasements sombres, même en posant dessus la patte d’ un lion.
Non, jamais de vengeance et pas de talion.
Quoi! Le cipaye irait jetant au feu des femmes et tordant des enfants tout vivants dans les flammes; quoi! L’ irlandais bigot, à travers le brouillard, surgirait, la massue au poing; quoi! Le lollard joindrait le fer qui frappe à la main qui mendie;
quoi! Le hubin boirait du sang; quoi! L’ incendie éclairerait le rire horrible du truand;
le camisard aurait dans sa poche en tuant sa bible toute grasse à force d’ être lue; — et l’ âme incorruptible, et la bouche absolue, la bouche du poëte et l’ âme du penseur se tairaient! Et le jour accepterait pour soeur, sous prétexte qu’ ensemble autrefois nous souffrîmes,
l’ aveugle obscurité, toute pleine de crimes!
Non, parle, et parle haut, vérité! Vérité!
La misère n’ a pas le droit de cruauté;
les échafauds s’ en vont et leur ombre s’ efface;
l’ impassible équité ne veut pas qu’ on en fasse,
pas même avec le bois douloureux des grabats;
non! Nous n’ admettons point, dans le deuil d’ ici-bas, qu’ on puisse être bourreau parce qu’ on fut victime.
Le meurtre fils des pleurs n’ est pas plus légitime;
quand le faible devient à son tour le plus fort, la conscience donne à la rancune tort et force les instincts de vengeance à se taire, et l’ on n’ est point absous par ce juge pour faire du mal avec le mal que d’ autres vous ont fait.

Cette livre de chair dont Shylock triomphait, malheur à qui la veut dans sa sauvage envie!
L’ homme est le travailleur du printemps, de la vie,
de la graine semée et du sillon creusé,
et non le créancier livide du passé.
Peuple, le philosophe est le témoin sévère.
Si Jésus s’ envolait féroce du calvaire, et venait à son tour crucifier Satan, je dirais à Jésus : tu n’ es pas Dieu. Va-t’ en!
22 mai 1870.

LE SIECLE , XXI

C’ est à coups de canon qu’ on rend le peuple heureux.
Nous sommes revenus de tous ces grands mots creux :
— progrès, fraternité, mission de la France, droits de l’ homme, raison, liberté, tolérance. —
Socrate est fou; lisez Lélut qui le confond;
Christ, fort socialiste et démagogue au fond,
est une renommée en somme très surfaite.
Terre! L’ obus est Dieu, Paixhans est son prophète.
Vrai but du genre humain : tuer correctement.
Les hommes, dont le sabre est l’ unique calmant, ont le boulet rayé pour chef-d’ oeuvre; leur astre,
c’ est la clarté qui sort d’ une bombe Lancastre, et l’ admiration de tout peuple poli
va du mortier Armstrong au canon Cavalli.
Dieu s’ est trompé; César plus haut que lui s’ élance;
Jéhovah fit le verbe et César le silence.
Parler, c’ est abuser; penser, c’ est usurper.
La voix sert à se taire et l’ esprit à ramper.
Le monde est à plat ventre, et l’ homme, altier naguère, doux et souple aujourd’ hui, tremble. — paix! Dit la guerre.

1846

LE SIECLE , XXII

elle passa, je crois qu’ elle m’ avait souri.
C’ était une grisette ou bien une houri.
Je ne sais si l’ effet fut moral ou physique,
mais son pas en marchant faisait une musique.
Quoi! Ton pavé bruyant et fangeux, ô Paris, a de ces visions ineffables! Je pris ses yeux fixés sur moi pour deux étoiles bleues.
Fraîche et joyeuse enfant! Moineaux et hochequeues ont moins de gaîté folle et de vivacité.
Elle avait une robe en taffetas d’ été,
de petits brodequins couleur de scarabée,
l’ air d’ une ombre qui passe avant la nuit tombée,
je ne sais quoi de fier qui permettait l’ espoir.
Pendant que je songeais, croyant encor la voir même après qu’ elle était enfuie et disparue, et que debout, pensif au milieu de la rue,
contemplant, ébloui, cet être gracieux,
j’ avais l’ oeil dans l’ espace et l’ âme dans les cieux, une vieille, moitié chatte et moitié harpie,
au menton hérissé d’ une barbe en charpie, vêtue affreusement d’ un sinistre haillon,
effroyable, et parlant comme avec un bâillon,
me dit tout bas : — monsieur veut-il de cette fille?
ô pauvre colibri que vend une chenille!
1846.

1855, 03, 09

LE SIECLE , XXIII SUR UN PORTRAIT DE SAINTE .

c’ est toi, dénaturée! Oui, te voilà, c’ est toi qui fis taire ton coeur pour écouter ta foi, qui, pour gagner ton ciel de larve et de chouette,
foulas ton âme aux pieds, mère sourde-muette, et qui, lorsque ton fils se couchait en travers de ta porte, pleurant et les deux bras ouverts, marchas sur ton enfant pour entrer dans le cloître.
Quand l’ amour décroissait, tu crus sentir Dieu croître;
ah! Folle! Et te voilà, face d’ austérité!
Va, la sainteté froide est fausse sainteté.
Croire qu’ on plaît au Dieu de lumière et de gloire parce que d’ âme blanche on se fait âme noire, parce qu’ on a d’ abord soufflé sur son flambeau, parce qu’ on vient à lui, n’ étant plus qu’ un tombeau où ceux qui vous aimaient d’ avance ont dû descendre, et qu’ on en est le marbre et qu’ ils en sont la cendre!
ô morne vision! Mauvais songe que font ceux qui désertent Dieu dans le couvent profond!
Dieu, c’ est la raison; Dieu, c’ est l’ amour; Dieu, c’ est l’ être;
c’ est le devoir de vivre après le droit de naître;
c’ est l’ immense clarté sur l’ immense combat.
Il a voulu que l’ homme aimât, conquît, tombât, et ne fût pas fantôme et deuil. Le froc de bure ne donne point à l’ homme une bonne courbure; devenir ombre, c’ est obscurcir le saint lieu;
en s’ approchant du spectre, on s’ éloigne de Dieu.
Pas de cloître; la vie. Un voile couvre un rêve.
Le mérite n’ est pas, quand vers Dieu l’ on s’ élève, de rejeter, ainsi qu’ un vêtement quitté,
ses parents, sa patrie et son humanité;

de s’ enfuir de son coeur ainsi que d’ une fange;
de dire : — arrachez-moi, Christ, pour que je sois ange, mon père, ce lambeau, ma mère, ce haillon! — de mettre à la nature effarée un bâillon;
de crier : — mes enfants où tout mon sang se mêle,
mon fils dans son berceau, ma fille à la mamelle, tout cela, c’ est la nuit, car Dieu seul est le jour. — de raturer en soi la famille et l’ amour comme des contre-sens qui vous cachent le texte;
et de perdre la forme humaine, sous prétexte qu’ on monte et qu’ on s’ en va dans le firmament bleu.
Faisons, tout en fixant notre regard sur Dieu, tous nos devoirs de fils ou de frère ou de père.
Soyons l’ être penchant, même quand il espère.
Par l’ esprit vers le bien, par la chair vers le mal;
sans quitter le réel, conquérons l’ idéal;
restons homme, en montant vers le sépulcre austère.
Il faut aller au ciel en marchant sur la terre.
9 mars 1855.

LE SIECLE , XXIV ECRIT APRES LA VISITE D’ UN BAGNE , I

Chaque enfant qu’ on enseigne est un homme qu’ on gagne.
Quatre vingt-dix voleurs sur cent qui sont au bagne ne sont jamais allés à l’ école une fois, et ne savent pas lire, et signent d’ une croix.
C’ est dans cette ombre-là qu’ ils ont trouvé le crime.
L’ ignorance est la nuit qui commence l’ abîme.
Où rampe la raison, l’ honnêteté périt.
Dieu, le premier auteur de tout ce qu’ on écrit,
a mis, sur cette terre où les hommes sont ivres,
les ailes des esprits dans les pages des livres.
Tout homme ouvrant un livre y trouve une aile, et peut planer là-haut où l’ âme en liberté se meut.
L’ école est sanctuaire autant que la chapelle.
L’ alphabet que l’ enfant avec son doigt épelle contient sous chaque lettre une vertu; le coeur s’ éclaire doucement à cette humble lueur.
Donc au petit enfant donnez le petit livre.
Marchez, la lampe en main, pour qu’ il puisse vous suivre.
La nuit produit l’ erreur et l’ erreur l’ attentat.
Faute d’ enseignement, on jette dans l’ état des hommes animaux, têtes inachevées, tristes instincts qui vont les prunelles crevées,
aveugles effrayants, au regard sépulcral,
qui marchent à tâtons dans le monde moral.
Allumons les esprits, c’ est notre loi première, et du suif le plus vil faisons une lumière.
L’ intelligence veut être ouverte ici-bas;
le germe a droit d’ éclore; et qui ne pense pas
ne vit pas. Ces voleurs avaient le droit de vivre.
Songeons-y bien, l’ école en or change le cuivre, tandis que l’ ignorance en plomb transforme l’ or.

Je dis que ces voleurs possédaient un trésor, leur pensée immortelle, auguste et nécessaire;
je dis qu’ ils ont le droit, du fond de leur misère,
de se tourner vers vous, à qui le jour sourit, et de vous demander compte de leur esprit;
je dis qu’ ils étaient l’ homme et qu’ on en fit la brute;
je dis que je nous blâme et que je plains leur chute;
je dis que ce sont eux qui sont les dépouillés;
je dis que les forfaits dont ils se sont souillés ont pour point de départ ce qui n’ est pas leur faute;
pouvaient-ils s’ éclairer du flambeau qu’ on leur ôte?
Ils sont les malheureux et non les ennemis.
Le premier crime fut sur eux-mêmes commis;
on a de la pensée éteint en eux la famme;
et la société leur a volé leur âme.
27 février. — Jersey.
1853, 03, 06

LE SIECLE , XXIVECRIT APRES LA VISITE D’ UN BAGNE , II

ô vieux bagne éternel! énigme! Abîme obscur!
Que d’ ombres ont passé sur ce funèbre mur!
Ici le mal, la nuit, l’ ignorance servile;
à l’ autre extrémité de cette corde vile le génie et la foi, l’ amour, la vérité, l’ inventeur, le penseur de Dieu même agité,
le prophète écartant l’ erreur impie et fausse,
Saint Jean dans son caveau, Daniel dans la fosse, Galilée au cachot, Colomb au cabanon;
et, remontant au jour de chaînon en chaînon,
cette chaîne de deuil, sur la terre jetée,
qui commence à Poulmann, finit à Prométhée.
à travers six mille ans, et traînant en chemin ses monstrueux anneaux sur tout le genre humain, elle part de Toulon et s’ attache au Caucase.
L’ homme met la lumière et l’ ombre au même vase;
le bagne, enfer stupide, admet dans son tombeau depuis l’ homme poignard jusqu’ à l’ homme flambeau.
Malheur à qui dit : marche! Au progrès qui recule, à qui jette un rayon dans notre crépuscule!
Que deviendrait l’ erreur si le jour triomphait?
C’ est le même attentat et le même forfait, le même crime avec la même peine immonde que de tuer un homme ou de trouver un monde.
Lucifer est Satan; l’ aigle est le basilic.
Quiconque allume un phare est l’ ennemi public.
Quoi, l’ archange enchaîné coudoyant les vampires!
L’ âme au carcan! Les bons traités comme les pires!
ô morne aveuglement de l’ homme et de ses lois!
L’ esprit tremble et frémit devant toutes ces croix que portent les voyants, les inspirés, les sages;

pour s’ enfuir de la vie on cherche des passages,
ciel juste, quand on songe à ces révélateurs qu’ on a saisis, pensifs et venant des hauteurs, qu’ on a punis du bien ainsi que d’ une faute, liés avec le crime au poteau côte à côte,
qu’ on a fouettés, martyrs saignants et radieux,
et qui furent forçats parce qu’ ils étaient dieux!
6 mars. — Jersey, 1853.

1870, 03

LE SIECLE , XXV

le spectre que parfois je rencontre riait.
 — pourquoi ris-tu? Lui dis-je. — il dit : — homme inquiet, regarde. Il me montrait dans l’ ombre un cimetière.
J’ y vis une humble croix près d’ une croix altière;
l’ une en bois, l’ autre en marbre; et le spectre reprit, tandis qu’ au loin le vent passait comme un esprit et des arbres profonds courbait les sombres têtes :
 — jusque dans le cercueil vous êtes vains et bêtes.
Oui, gisants, vous laissez debout la vanité.
Vous la sculptez au seuil du tombeau redouté, et vous lui bâtissez des tours et des coupoles.
Et, morts, vous êtes fiers. Oui, dans vos nécropoles, dans ces villes du deuil que vos brumeux Paris construisent à côté du tumulte et des cris, on trouve tout, des bois où jasent les fauvettes,
des jets d’ eau jaillissant du jaspe des cuvettes,
un paysage vert, voluptueux, profond,
où le nuage avec la plaine se confond,
la calèche où souvent l’ oeil cherche la civière,
des prêtres sous le frais lisant leur bréviaire,
du soleil en hiver, de l’ ombrage en été,
des roses, des chansons, tout, hors l’ égalité.
Vous avez des charniers et des Pères-Lachaises où Samuel Bernard seul peut prendre ses aises, dormir en paix, jouir d’ un caveau bien muré,
et se donner les airs d’ être à jamais pleuré,
et s’ adjuger, derrière une grille solide,
des fleurs que le Temps garde en habit d’ invalide.
Quant aux morts indigents, on leur donne congé;
on chasse d’ auprès d’ eux le sanglot prolongé;
et le pauvre n’ a pas le droit de pourriture.
Un jour, on le déblaie. On prend sa sépulture pour grandir d’ une toise un monument pompeux.

 — misérable, va-t’ en. Deviens ce que tu peux.
Quoi! Tu prétends moisir ici parmi ces marbres, faire boucher le nez aux passants sous ces arbres, te carrer sous cette herbe, être au fond de ton trou charogne comme un autre, et tu n’ as pas le sou!
Qu’ est-ce que ce mort-là qui n’ a rien dans sa poche!
Décampe. — et la brouette et la pelle et la pioche arrachent le dormeur à son dur traversin.
Sus! Place à monseigneur le sépulcre voisin!
Ce n’ est rien d’ être mort, il faut avoir des rentes.
Les carcasses des gueux sont fort mal odorantes;
les morts bien nés font bande à part dans le trépas;
le sépulcre titré ne fraternise pas avec la populace anonyme des bières;
la cendre tient son rang vis-à-vis des poussières;
et tel mort dit : pouah! Devant tel autre mort.
Le gentleman, à l’ heure où l’ acarus le mord,
se maintient délicat et dégoûté. C’ est triste.
Et j’ en ris. Le linceul peut être de batiste!
Chez vous, oui, sous la croix de l’ humble dieu Jésus, les trépassés à court d’ argent sont mal reçus;
l’ abîme a son dépôt de mendicité; l’ ombre
met d’ un côté l’ élite et de l’ autre le nombre;
on n’ est jamais moins près qu’ alors qu’ on se rejoint;
dans la mort vague et blême on ne se mêle point;
on reste différent même à ce clair de lune;
le peuple dans la tombe a nom fosse commune.
La tombe impartiale! Allons donc! Le ci-gît tantôt se rétrécit et tantôt s’ élargit;
le péage, réglé par arrêté du maire,
fait Beaujon immortel et Chodruc éphémère.
Pourrir gratis! Jamais! Le terrain est trop cher.
Tandis que, tripotant ce qui fut de la chair,
la chimie, en son antre où vole la phalène, fait de l’ adipocire et du blanc de baleine avec le résidu des pâles meurt-de-faim,

tel cadavre, vêtu d’ un suaire en drap fin, regarde en souriant la mort aux yeux de tigre,
jette au spectre sa bourse, et dit : Marquis d’ Aligre.
Vos catacombes ont des perpétuités pour ceux-ci pour ceux-là des répits limités.
Votre tombe est un gouffre où le riche surnage.
Ce mort n’ a pas payé son terme; il déménage.
Le fantôme, branlant sur ses blancs tibias, portant tout avec lui, s’ en va, comme Bias;
vivant, il fut sans pain, et, mort, il est sans terre.
L’ ossuaire répugne aux os du prolétaire.
Seul Rothschild, dans l’ oubli du caveau sans échos, est mangé par des rats et par des asticots
qu’ il paye et dont il est maître et propritétaire.
Oui, c’ est l’ étonnement de la pariétaire, du brin d’ herbe, de l’ if aussi noir que le jais, du froid cyprès, du saule en pleurs, de voir sujets à des expulsions sommaires et subites des crânes qui n’ ont plus leurs yeux dans leurs orbites.
Vos cimetières sont des lieux changeants, flottants, précaires, où les morts vont passer quelque temps,
à peine admis au seuil des ténébreux mystères,
et l’ éternité sombre y prend des locataires.
Quoi! C’ est là votre mort! C’ est avec de l’ orgueil que vous doublez le bois lugubre du cercueil!
Vous gardez préséance, honneurs, grade, avantages!
Vous conservez au fond du néant des étages!
La chimère est bouffonne. Ah! La prétention est rare, dans le lieu de disparition!
Quoi! Privilégier ce qui n’ est plus! Quoi! Faire des grands et des petits dans l’ insondable sphère!
Traiter Jean comme peste et Paul comme parfum!
être mort, et vouloir encore être quelqu’ un!
Quoi! Dans le pourrissoir emporter l’ opulence!
Faire sonner son or dans l’ éternel silence!
Avoir, de par cet or dont sur terre on brilla, droit de tomber en poudre ici plutôt que là!

Arriver dans la nuit ainsi que des lumières!
Prendre dans le tombeau des places de premières!
Ne pas entendre Dieu qui dit au riche : assez!
Je cesserai d’ en rire, ô vivants insensés, le jour où j’ apprendrai que c’ est vrai, que, dans l’ ombre de l’ incommensurable et ténébreux décombre, l’ archange à l’ aile noire, assis à son bureau,
toise les morts, leur donne à tous un numéro, discute leur obole, or ou plomb, vraie ou fausse,
et la pèse, et marchande au squelette sa fosse!
Le jour où j’ apprendrai que la chose est ainsi, que Lucullus sous terre est du fumier choisi, que le bouton d’ or perd ou double sa richesse
s’ il sort d’ une grisette ou bien d’ une duchesse, qu’ un lys qui naît d’ un pauvre est noir comme charbon, que, mort, Lazare infecte et qu’ Aguado sent bon!
Le jour où j’ apprendrai que dans l’ azur terrible
l’ éternel a des trous inégaux à son crible;
et que, dans le ciel sombre effroi de vos remords,
s’ il voit passer, porté par quatre croque-morts,
un cadavre fétide et hideux, le tonnerre demande à l’ ouragan : est-ce un millionnaire?
Le jour où j’ apprendrai que la tombe, en effet, que l’ abîme, selon le tarif du préfet,
trafique de sa nuit et de son épouvante, et que la mort a mis les vers de terre en vente!
Mars 1870.

1874, 07, 26

que je prenne un moment de repos? Impossible.
Koran, Zend-Avesta, Livres sibyllins, Bible,
Talmud, Toldos Jeschut, Védas, lois de Manou, brahmes sanglants, santons fléchissant le genou,
les contes, les romans, les terreurs, les croyances,
les superstitions fouillant les consciences,
puis-je ne pas sentir ces creusements profonds?
J’ en ai ma part. Veaux d’ or, sphinx, chimères, griffons, les princes des démons et les princes des prêtres, synodes, sanhédrins, vils muphtis, scribes traîtres,
ceux qui des empereurs bénissaient les soldats, ceux que payait Tibère et qui payaient Judas, ceux qui tendraient encore à Socrate le verre,
ceux qui redonneraient à Jésus le calvaire, tous ces sadducéens, tous ces pharisiens,
ces anges, que Satan reconnaît pour les siens, tout cela, c’ est partout. C’ est la puissance obscure.
Plaie énorme que fait une abjecte piqûre!
Ce contre-sens : Dieu vrai, les dogmes faux; cuisson du mensonge qui s’ est glissé dans la raison!
Démangeaison saignante, incurable, éternelle, que sent l’ homme en son âme et l’ oiseau sous son aile!
Oh! L’ infâme travail! Ici Mahomet; là cette tête, Wesley, sur ce corps, Loyola; Cisneros et Calvin, dont on sent les brûlures.
ô faux révélateurs! ô jongleurs! Vos allures sont louches, et vos pas sont tortueux; l’ effroi, et non l’ amour, tel est le fond de votre loi;
vous faites grimacer l’ éternelle figure;
vous naissez du sépulcre, et l’ on sent que l’ augure et le devin son pleins de l’ ombre du tombeau, et que tous ces rêveurs, compagnons du corbeau, tous ces fakirs d’ Ombos, de Stamboul et de Rome, n’ ont pu faire tomber tant de fables sur l’ homme

qu’ en secouant les plis sinistres des linceuls.
Dieu n’ étant aperçu que par les astres seuls, les penseurs, sachant bien qu’ il est là sous ses voiles, ont toujours conseillé d’ en croire les étoiles;
Dieu, c’ est un lieu fermé dont l’ aurore a la clé,
et la religion, c’ est le ciel contemplé.
Mais vous ne voulez pas, prêtres, de cette église.
Vous voulez que la terre en votre livre lise tous vos songes, Moloch, Vénus, ève, Astarté, au lieu de lire au front des cieux la vérité.
De là la foi changée en crédulité; l’ âme éclipsant la raison dans une sombre flamme;
de là tant d’ êtres noirs serpentant dans la nuit.
L’ imposture, par qui le vrai temple est détruit,
est un colosse fait d’ un amas de pygmées;
les sauterelles sont d’ effrayantes armées;
ô mages grecs, romains, payens, indous, hébreux,
le genre humain, couvert de rongeurs ténébreux, sent s’ élargir sur lui vos hordes invisibles;
vous lui faites rêver tous les enfers possibles;
le peuple infortuné voit dans son cauchemar
surgir Torquemada quand disparaît Omar.
Nul répit. Vous aimez les ténèbres utiles, et vous y rôdez, vils et vainqueurs, ô reptiles!
Sur toute cette terre, en tous lieux, dans les bois, dans le lit nuptial, dans l’ alcôve des rois,
dans les champs, sous l’ autel sacré, dans la cellule,
ce qui se traîne, couve, éclôt, va, vient, pullule,
c’ est vous. Vous voulez tout, vous savez tout; damner, bénir, prendre, jurer, tromper, servir, régner,
briller même; ramper n’ empêche pas de luire.
Chuchotement hideux! Je vous entends bruire.
Vous mangez votre proie énorme avec bonheur, et vous vous appelez entre vous monseigneur.
L’ acarus au ciron doit donner de l’ altesse.

Quelles que soient votre ombre et votre petitesse, je devine, malgré vos soins pour vous cacher, que vous êtes sur nous, et je vous sens marcher comme on sent remuer les mineurs dans la mine, et je ne puis dormir, tant je hais la vermine!
Vous êtes ce qui hait, ce qui mord, ce qui ment.
Vous êtes l’ implacable et noir fourmillement.
Vous êtes ce prodige affreux, l’ insaisissable.
Qu’ on suppose vivants tous les vils grains de sable, ce sera vous. Rien, tout. Zéro, des millions.
L’ horreur. Moins que des vers et plus que des lions.
L’ insecte formidable. ô monstrueux contraste!
Pas de nains plus chétifs, pas de pouvoir plus vaste.
L’ univers est à vous, puisque vous l’ emplissez.
Vous possédez les jours futurs, les jours passés,
le temps, l’ éternité, le sommeil, l’ insomnie.
Vous êtes l’ innombrable, et, dans l’ ombre infinie, fétides, sur nos peaux mêlant vos petits pas, vous vous multipliez; et je ne comprends pas
dans quel but Dieu livra les empires, le monde, les âmes, les enfants dressant leur tête blonde,
les temples, les foyers, les vierges, les époux,
l’ homme, à l’ épouvantable immensité des poux.
26 juillet 1874.

LE SIECLE , XXVII

Et les voilà mentant, inventant, misérables!
Les voilà, fronts sans honte et bouches incurables, calomniant l’ honneur du pays, flétrissant tous les lutteurs, ceux-ci qui versèrent leur sang, ceux-ci, plus grands encor, qui, voyant que la flamme et l’ espoir s’ éteignaient, répandirent leur âme.
Ces maroufles hideux outragent les héros!
Ils lancent au captif, à travers ses barreaux,
au proscrit, à travers son deuil, leur pierre infâme.
Ils offensent la mère, ils insultent la femme;
ils raillent l’ exilé que l’ ombre accable et suit;
ils tâchent d’ ajouter leur noirceur à sa nuit;
ils entassent sur lui d’ affreux réquisitoires;
et si, voyant passer et flotter ces histoires,
vous demandez au cuistre, au conteur, au grimaud :
— croyez-vous tout cela? — moi, dit-il, pas un mot.
— bien. Mais alors pourquoi le dites-vous? — pour rire.
Ah! Les bêtes des bois ne savent pas écrire, le tigre ne pourrait griffonner un journal,
le renard ne sort pas du confessionnal et ne saurait narrer la Salette en bon style;
mais au moins l’ aspic siffle en honnête reptile;
si, dans son hurlement candide, affreux, complet,
l’ ours se montre affamé de meurtre, c’ est qu’ il l’ est;
le jaguar ne ment pas et pense ce qu’ il gronde;
il n’ est pas un lion dans la forêt profonde qui ne soit, dans l’ horreur de son antre fumant, sincère, et qui ne croie à son rugissement.
Mais, honte et deuil! Ciel noir! Comment faut-il qu’ on nomme ces scribes qui demain diront d’ un honnête homme :
— je suis son assassin, mais non son ennemi! —
ah! Ces gueux devant qui ma jeunesse eût frémi, pires que Mérimée et Planche, nains horribles, ces drôles, que je n’ eusse enfin pas crus possibles jadis, quand d’ espérance, hélas! Je m’ enivrais, n’ ont pas la probité d’ être des monstres vrais.

1874, 08, 04

LE SIECLE , XXVIIIAUX PRETRES .

il sied de ressembler aux dieux. Ton dieu, flamine, dévore ses enfants; ton dieu, mage, extermine;
augure, ton dieu ment; uléma, ton dieu met la terre sous le sabre impur de Mahomet;
ton dieu, Rome, est l’ agneau, mais il tette la louve;
ô noir dominicain qui rêves, ton dieu trouve agréable l’ odeur infâme des bûchers;
d’ affreux temples, ayant pour prêtres des bouchers,
sont l’ habitation de ton dieu, corybante;
brahmine, ton dieu sombre aime la nuit tombante;
rabbin, ton dieu maudit la race de Japhet,
et cloue au fond du ciel le soleil stupéfait;
Sabaoth est cruel, Jupiter est immonde, et pas un dieu ne sait comment est fait le monde;
les peuples ont le choix pour fléchir le genou entre le monstre Asgar et le monstre Vishnou;
ce dieu brait, celui-là rugit, celui-ci beugle;
c’ est pourquoi l’ idéal de l’ homme est d’ être aveugle, ténébreux, vil, féroce, ignorant, odieux,
afin d’ être aussi près que possible des dieux.
4 août 1874.

LE SIECLE , XXIX

Muse, un nommé Ségur, évêque, m’ est hostile;
cet homme violet me damne en mauvais style;
sa prose réjouit les hiboux dans leurs trous.
ô Muse, n’ ayons point contre lui de courroux.
Laissons-lui ce joujou qu’ il prend pour un tonnerre, sa haine. Il est d’ ailleurs à plaindre. Au séminaire, un jour que ce petit bonhomme plein d’ ennui bêlait un oremus au hasard devant lui, comme glousse l’ oison, comme la vache meugle, il s’ écria : — mon Dieu! Je voudrais être aveugle! — ne trouvant pas qu’ il fît assez nuit comme ça.
Le bon Dieu, le faisant idiot, l’ exauça.
L’ insulte est aujourd’ hui très perfectionnée.
On prend un peu de suie en une cheminée, un peu d’ ordure au coin d’ une borne, à l’ égoût
de la fange, et cela tient lieu d’ esprit, de goût, de bon sens, de syntaxe et d’ honneur; c’ est la mode.
Bons ulémas, tel est le procédé commode que votre zèle met au service du ciel, et c’ est avec la bouche écumante de fiel, avec la diatribe en guise de sourire, que vous venez, damnant ceux qu’ on n’ ose proscrire, nous faire vos gros yeux, nous montrer vos gros poings,
nous dire vos gros mots, ô nos chers talapoins!
On vous pardonne. Eh bien, quoi, Ségur m’ exorcise.
Après? Il me maudit d’ une façon concise;
il me peint de son mieux, et voici le pastel à peu près :—” monstre horrible. On n’ a rien vu de tel.
Informe, épouvantable et ténébreux. Un homme qui brûlerait Paris et démolirait Rome.
Voluptueux. Un peu le chef des assassins.
Bref, capable de tout. Foulant aux pieds les saints, les lois, l’ église et Dieu. Ruinant son libraire.”

faisons chorus. Hurler avec le loup, et braire avec l’ évêque, eh bien, c’ est un droit. Usons-en.
J’ aime en ce noble abbé ce style paysan.
C’ est poissard, c’ est exquis. Bravo. Cela vous plonge dans une vague extase où l’ on sent le mensonge.
Doux prêtre! On entend rire aux éclats Diderot, Molière, Rabelais, et l’ on ne sait pas trop, dans cette vision où le démon chuchote, si l’ on voit un évêque ayant au dos la hotte ou bien un chiffonnier ayant la mitre au front.
L’ antienne, quand un peu de bave l’ interrompt,
a du charme; on est prêtre et l’ on a de la bile.
D’ ailleurs, Muse, chacun sur terre a son Zoïle, et Voltaire a Fréron comme Dante a Cecchi.
Et puis cela se vend. Combien? Six sous. à qui?
Aux sots. C’ est un public. Les mâchoires fossiles veulent rire; le clan moqueur des imbéciles veut qu’ on l’ amuse; il est fort nombreux aujourd’ hui;
n’ a-t-il donc pas le droit qu’ on travaille pour lui?
Depuis quand n’ est-il plus permis d’ emplir les cruches?
Tout a son instinct. Comme un frelon vole aux ruches, comme à Lucrèce au lit court Alexandre six,
comme Corydon suit le charmant Alexis, comme un loup suit les boucs, et le bouc les cytises, comme avril fait des fleurs, Ségur fait des sottises.
Il le faut. Muse, il sied que le sage indulgent rêve, écoute, et devienne un bon homme en songeant, qu’ il regarde passer les vivants, qu’ il les pèse, et qu’ au lieu de l’ aigrir, ce spectacle l’ apaise.
Ainsi soit-il. Et puis, allons au fait. Voyons, suis-je correct? L’ hostie avec tous ses rayons
m’ éblouit-elle autant que le soleil? Ce prêtre me voit-il le dimanche à sa messe apparaître?
Ai-je même jamais fait semblant de vouloir lui conter mes péchés tous bas dans son parloir?
Quand suis-je allé chez lui, reniant ma doctrine, me donner de grands coups de poing dans la poitrine?

Je suis un endurci. Ségur s’ en aperçoit.
Je suis athée au point de douter que Dieu soit charmé de se chauffer les mains au feu du diable, qu’ il ait mis l’ incurable et l’ irrémédiable dans l’ homme, être ignorant, faible, chétif, charnel, afin d’ en faire hommage au supplice éternel,
qu’ il ait exprès fourré Satan dans la nature,
et qu’ il ait, lui, l’ auteur de toute créature,
pouvant vider l’ enfer et le fermer à clé,
fait un brûleur, afin de créer un brûlé;
que les mille soleils dont là-haut le feu tremble se mettent un beau jour à tomber tous ensemble, j’ en doute; et quand je vois, au fond du zénith bleu, les sept astres de l’ Ourse allumés, je crois peu que jamais le plafond céleste se délabre jusqu’ à ne pouvoir plus porter ce candélabre.
Je sais que dans la bible on trouve ce cliché,
la Fin du Monde; mais la science a marché.
Moïse est vieux; est-il sur terre un quadrumane qui lève au ciel les yeux pour voir pleuvoir la manne?
Je trouve par moments plus d’ esprit, je le dis,
aux singes d’ à présent qu’ aux hommes de jadis.
Pape, Dieu, ce n’ est pas le même personnage.
J’ aime la cathédrale et non le moyen-âge.
Qu’ est-ce qu’ un dogme, un culte, un rite? Un objet d’ art.
Je puis l’ admirer; mais s’ il égare un soudard,
s’ il grise un fou, s’ il tue un homme, je l’ abhorre.
Plus d’ idole! Et j’ oppose à l’ encens l’ ellébore.
Quand une abbesse, à qui quelque nonne déplaît, lui fait brouter de l’ herbe à côté d’ un mulet,
j’ ose dire que c’ est mal nourrir une femme;
j’ admire un arbre en fleurs plus qu’ un bûcher en flamme;
je suis peu furieux; j’ aime Voltaire enfin mieux que saint Cupertin et que saint Cucufin, et je préfère à tout ce que dit saint Pancrace, saint Loup, saint Labre ou saint Pacôme, un vers d’ Horace.

Tels sont mes goûts. Je suis incorrigible. Et quand Floréal, comme un chef qui réveille le camp, met les nids en rumeur, et quand mon vers patauge, éperdu, dans le thym, la verveine et la sauge, quand la plaine est en joie, et quand l’ aube est en feu, je crois tout bonnement, tout bêtement en Dieu.
En même temps j’ ai l’ âme âprement enivrée du sombre ennui de voir tant d’ hommes en livrée, tant de deuils, tant de fronts courbés, tant de coeurs bas, là, tant de lits de pourpre, et là, tant de grabats.
Mon Dieu n’ est ni payen, ni chrétien, ni biblique;
ce Dieu-là, je l’ implore en la douleur publique;
c’ est vers lui que je suis tourné, vieux lutteur las,
quand je crie au milieu des ténèbres : — hélas!
Sur la grève que bat toute la mer humaine, grève où le flux apporte, où le reflux remmène les flots hideux jetant l’ écume aux alcyons, qui donc apportera dans l’ ombre aux nations
ou l’ éclair de Paris ou le rayon de France?
Qui donc rallumera ce phare, l’ espérance? — donc j’ ai ce grave tort de n’ être point dévot;
je ne le suis pas même au parti qui prévaut;
je n’ aime pas qu’ après la victoire on sévisse;
c’ est affreux, je pardonne; et je suis au service des vaincus; et, songeant que ma mère aux abois fut jadis vendéenne, en fuite dans les bois, j’ ose de la pitié faire la propagande;
je suis le fils brigand d’ une mère brigande.
être clément, c’ est être atroce; ou pour le moins, stupide. Je le suis, toujours, devant témoins, partout. Les autres sont les vautours; je suis l’ oie.
Oui, quand la lâcheté publique se déploie, il me plaît d’ être seul et d’ être le dernier.
Quand le voe victis règne, et va jusqu’ à nier la quantité de droit qui reste à ceux qui tombent, quand, nul ne protestant, les principes succombent, cette fuite de tous m’ attire. Me voilà.

Comment veut-on qu’ un prêtre accepte tout cela!
Novembre.

LE SIECLE , XXX IDOLATRIES ET PHILOSOPHIES .

La philosophie ose escalader le ciel.
Triste, elle est là. Qui donc t’ a bâtie, ô Babel?
Oh! Quel monceau d’ efforts sans but! Quelles spirales de songes, de leçons, de dogmes, de morales!
Ruche qu’ emplit de bruit et de trouble un amas de mages, de docteurs, de papes, de lamas!
Masure où l’ hypothèse aux fictions s’ adosse, ayant pour toit la nuit et pour cave la fosse;
bleus portiques béants sur les immensités,
de tous les tourbillons des rêves visités;
vain fronton que le poids de l’ infini déprime, espèce de clocher sinistre de l’ abîme où bourdonnent l’ effroi, la révolte, et l’ essaim de toutes les erreurs sonnant leur noir tocsin!
Et, comme, de lueurs confusément semées,
par les brèches d’ un toit s’ exhalent des fumées,
les doctrines, les lois et les religions, ce qu’ aujourd’ hui l’ on croit, ce qu’ hier nous songions, tout ce qu’ inventa l’ homme, autel, culte ou système, par tous les soupiraux de l’ édifice blême,
à travers la noirceur du ciel morne et profond, toutes les visions du genre humain s’ en vont,
éparses, en lambeaux, par les vents dénouées,
dans un dégorgement livide de nuées.
Temple, atelier, tombeau, l’ édifice fait peur.
On veut prendre une pierre, on touche une vapeur.
Nul n’ a pu l’ achever. Pas de cycle ni d’ âge qui n’ ait mis son échelle au sombre échafaudage.
Qui donc habite là? C’ est tombé, c’ est debout;
c’ est de l’ énormité qui tremble et se dissout;
une maison de nuit que le vide dilate.
Pyrrhon y verse l’ eau sur les mains de Pilate;

le doute y rôde et fait le tour du cabanon où Descartes dit oui pendant qu’ Hobbes dit non;
les générations sous le gouffre des portes roulent, comme, l’ hiver, des tas de feuilles mortes;
les escaliers, sans fin montés et descendus, sont pleins de cris, d’ appels, de pas sourds et perdus et d’ un fourmillement de chimères rampantes;
des oiseaux effrayants volent dans les charpentes;
c’ est Bouddha, Mahomet, Luther disant : allez!
Lucrèce, Spinosa, tous les noirs sphinx ailés!
Tout l’ homme est sculpté là. Socrate, Pythagore, Malebranche, Thalès, Platon aux yeux d’ aurore, combinent l’ idéal pendant que Swift, Timon, ésope et Rabelais pétrissent le limon.
Est-il jour? Est-il nuit? Dans l’ affreux crépuscule le rhéteur grimaçant ricane et gesticule;
on ne sait quel reflet d’ un funèbre orient blanchit les torses nus des cyniques riant, et des sages, jetant des ombres de satyres;
le devin rêve et tord dans les cordes des lyres le laurier vert mêlé de smilax éternel.
Chaque porche entr’ ouvert découvre un noir tunnel dont l’ extrémité montre une idéale étoile; comme si, — tu le sais, isis au triple voile, — ces antres de science et ces puits de raison, souterrains de l’ esprit humain, sans horizon,
sans air, sans flamme, ayant le doute pour pilastre, employaient de la nuit à faire éclore un astre,
et le mensonge impur, difforme, illimité,
vaste, aveugle, à bâtir la blanche vérité!
Partout au vrai le faux, lierre hideux, s’ enlace;
pas de dogme qui n’ ait son point faible, et ne lasse une cariatide, un support, un étai;
Thèbe a pour appui l’ Inde, et l’ Inde le Cathay;
Memphis pèse sur Delphe, et Genève sur Rome;
et, végétation du sombre esprit de l’ homme,
on voit, courbés d’ un souffle à de certains moments, croître entre les créneaux des hauts entablements des arbres monstrueux et vagues dont les tiges frissonnent dans l’ azur lugubre des vertiges.

Et de ces arbres noirs par instants tombe un fruit à la foule des mains ouvertes dans la nuit;
quel fruit? Demande au vent qui hurle et se déchaîne!
Quel fruit? Le fruit d’ erreur. Quel fruit? Le fruit de haine;
la pomme d’ ève avec la pomme de Vénus.
ô tour! Construction des maçons inconnus!
Elle monte, elle monte, et monte, et monte encore, encore, et l’ on dirait que le ciel la dévore;
et tandis que tout sage ou fou qui passe met une pierre de plus à son brumeux sommet, sans cesse par la base elle croule et s’ effondre dans l’ ombre où Satan vient avec Dieu se confondre;
gouffre où l’ on n’ entend rien que le vent qui poursuit ces deux larves au fond d’ un tremblement de nuit!

LE SIECLE , XXXI

Le viel esprit de nuit, d’ ignorance et de haine des clous de Jésus-Christ forge à l’ homme une chaîne, change l’ enfant candide et pur en nain vieillot, lie au bûcher Jean Huss et Morus au billot, frappe de sa férule Horace, et, si Voltaire et Rousseau font du bruit en classe, il les fait taire.
Il donne sur les doigts au bon Dieu stupéfait.
Il refroidit les fronts que l’ aube réchauffait, il insulte le ciel dans la femme, et le nie dans l’ astre, dans la fleur, dans l’ art, dans le génie.
L’ éteignoir sur les yeux, la torche au poing, boudeur, sournois, pédant, féroce, il aspire l’ odeur
de la pensée éteinte et de la chair brûlée.
Il fait mettre à genoux le vieillard Galilée sur la terre qui tourne et devant le soleil.
Sur l’ oeil qui veut s’ ouvrir il verse le sommeil.
Il tient dans ses dents l’ âme humaine, et la grignote.
Il inspire Nisard, Veuillot, Planche, Nonotte, laisse derrière lui tout coeur mort et glacé, et l’ herbe ne croît plus où son âne a passé.

LE SIECLE , XXXII

Parfois c’ est un devoir de féconder l’ horreur.
Il convient qu’ un feu sombre éclaire un empereur.
J’ ai fait Les Châtiments. J’ ai dû faire ce livre.
Moi que toute blancheur et toute grâce enivre,
je me suis approché de la haine à regret.
J’ ai senti qu’ il fallait, quand l’ honneur émigrait, mettre au-dessus du crime, en une ombre sereine,
le resplendissement farouche de la peine,
et j’ ai fait flamboyer ce livre dans les cieux.
Haïr m’ est dur. Mais quoi! Lorsqu’ un séditieux interrompt du progrès les glorieuses tâches, tue un peuple, et devient l’ infâme dieu des lâches, il faut qu’ une lueur s’ allume au firmament.
J’ ai donc mis des rayons dans un livre inclément;
j’ ai soulevé du mal l’ immense et triste voile;
j’ ai violé la nuit pour lui faire une étoile.
26 mars.

1875, 05, 30

LE SIECLE , XXXIII

c’ est bien; puisqu’ au sénat, puisqu’ à la pourriture, tu poses, calme, altier, fier, ta candidature, puisque tu tends la main à l’ argent de César, puisque ta conscience est cotée au bazar, puisque tu prends ton rang dans la honte infinie,
ne te gêne pas, jette au peuple l’ ironie.
être le serviteur de l’ ennemi public,
avoir les torsions souples du basilic, vendre aux dévots hautains des bassesses athées, disperser dans les vents des choses effrontées,
offrir ta rhétorique abjecte à tout venant, collaborer dans l’ ombre au crime rayonnant,
baver, salir, avoir l’ affront pour camarade, être un sauteur de plus dans cette mascarade,
c’ est ce que maintenant tu peux faire de mieux.
Ainsi, quand la passante aux bras blancs, aux doux yeux, qui fut femme d’ honneur, se fait fille de joie,
quand elle est devenue un fumier, une proie, un sein qui la nuit s’ offre à qui veut l’ acheter, elle n’ a plus qu’ à rire, à danser, à chanter, et qu’ à se divertir jusqu’ à ce qu’ elle tombe charogne à l’ hôpital et spectre dans la tombe.
30 mai 1875.

LE SIECLE , XXXIV

Il faut agir, il faut marcher, il faut vouloir.
Mais songer comme un turc et dormir comme un loir, aller aux champs, au bois, au bal, puis chez les filles, ce n’ est point la façon de sauver nos familles,
de relever nos droits, de redresser nos fronts,
et de porter remède au mal que nous souffrons.
On a la chaîne au cou, mais des fleurs sur la tête;
on rêve l’ âge d’ or antique de la bête où tout était charmant pourvu qu’ on s’ accouplât;
on est spirituel, on est jeune, on est plat.
Oh! Que de lâchetés! Oh! L’ abjecte débauche où la chute du peuple et de l’ homme s’ ébauche!
Cela ne sert à rien de faire les vainqueurs.
Ah! La mort du pays suit le sommeil des coeurs.
Le devoir est un dieu qui ne veut point d’ athée.
Je dis que la patrie auguste est souffletée, que ce n’ est point l’ instant des jeux, mais des combats, et que, lorsqu’ on aura mis le tyran à bas et la loi sur le trône, il sera temps de rire.
Réveillez-vous! Je dis que la patrie expire, que cette mère, hélas, dont j’ écoute les cris,
a besoin de Brutus et non de Sybaris,
qu’ il lui faut plus de fronts sévères et moroses,
plus de bras étreignant des glaives, moins de roses,
et que voilà pourquoi, moi, ployé par les ans,
sur la place publique, au milieu des passants,
en face du soleil sacré qui nous éclaire,
j’ apporte ma vieille âme et ma vieille colère!

1871, 06, 17

LE SIECLE , XXXV

Paris, le grand Paris agonise. Je pense qu’ à l’ heure où tant de sang à grands flots se dépense, avant de dire : un homme a fui, c’ est un gueusard!
Avant de mettre au banc des peuples au hasard tous ces vaincus, traqués comme des loups dans l’ ombre, on doit attendre; on doit peser le lieu, le nombre,
le temps, l’ évènement, la fièvre, l’ attentat.
Je le dis à messieurs les bonshommes d’ état, car, fût-on grand au point de s’ appeler Cornesse, pour qu’ on voie et qu’ on juge, il faut que le jour naisse, et, même eût-on l’ honneur d’ être Anethan, il sied
d’ épargner au lion mourant le coup de pied.
Je dis cela. J’ ai tort. C’ est évident. Bruxelle est une grande ville et dans son sein recèle des talents variés sur tous les instruments, des virtuoses fins, spirituels, charmants,
d’ oû coule l’ harmonie ainsi qu’ un flot de l’ urne,
et ces musiciens m’ ont offert un nocturne.
L’ exploit fera la place illustre désormais.
Ce fut exquis. On prit l’ heure où je m’ endormais;
et chaque faune avait amené sa bacchante.
J’ étais sans armes, seul; ils n’ étaient que cinquante;
et même on n’ est pas sûr qu’ ils fussent tous armés.
Ils ont livré bataille à mes volets fermés,
m’ ont jeté des hoquets et m’ ont lancé des pierres.
De mes petits-enfants je baisais les paupières, pour qu’ ils eussent moins peur de ce fracas joyeux;
c’ était un ouragan de cailloux furieux.
Les coups au mur après les cris : à la lanterne!
Grondaient, comme la flûte avec le fifre alterne
Mort! à mort! Ainsi hurle un essaim de dragons.
D’ affreux chocs ébranlaient la porte sur ses gonds.
— qu’ il meure! — dans les bois, solitude commode,
ce genre de gaîté fut jadis à la mode.

Schinderhanne a donné de ces charivaris.
Aimable fête! Aussi, vous le voyez, j’ en ris.
Certe, il faudrait que j’ eusse une humeur bien sinistre pour vouloir qu’ un nommé Kerwyn, fils d’ un ministre, soit dérangé, s’ il plaît à ce jeune héros de me casser la tête en brisant mes carreaux, et pour ne pas comprendre, en cet antre où j’ habite, que le gendarme est pris de surdité subite et que le doux sommeil engourdit les sergents quand un crime est commis par les honnêtes gens.
17 juin 1871, Vianden.

1871, 09, 20

LE SIECLE , XXXVI

soit, c’ est dit. Tout n’ est plus qu’ une cendre qui vole.
La révolution française est une folle,
une drôlesse, à qui Bruxelles dit : va-t’ en!
Danton est empoigné par monsieur d’ Anethan et Robespierre est pris au collet par Cornesse;
on met Paris au poste ainsi qu’ une ivrognesse;
nous sommes un troupeau de moutons qui n’ est bon qu’ à suivre son berger et son boucher Bourbon;
depuis quatre cents ans l’ esprit humain radote.
Qu’ est-ce que le progrès? Une vieille anecdote.
Nous nous sommes repus de chimères; le vrai,
c’ est Sanchez en morale, en finances Terray;
la guillotine est bien, la potence est meilleure;
ce que nous appelons conscience est un leurre;
Dieu parle dans le dogme et non dans la raison;
le confessionnal nous offre sa cloison,
collons-y notre oreille et soyons imbéciles,
c’ est le salut. Faisons vers les hommes fossiles le plus que nous pourrons de pas à reculons.
Le vrai but resplendit derrière nos talons;
c’ est le passé, le trône et l’ autel, l’ ignorance.
Déshabituons-nous de ce grand mot : la France.
Le pape a décrété qu’ il est Dieu; donc il l’ est.
L’ esprit, qui de Paris sur le monde soufflait, semait de la folie aux quatre vents éparse;
les droits de l’ homme sont une assez triste farce;
le monarque est le char, le peuple est le pavé;
nous n’ avons rien créé, nous n’ avons rien trouvé;
à nos inventions mettons le bonnet d’ âne;
Molière n’ est qu’ un drôle, et Tartuffe le damne;
Jean-Jacque est un croquant, Voltaire est un grimaud, et Trublet, Patouillet, Pluche, ont le dernier mot.
Altwies, 20 septembre 1871.

1874, 12, 13

LE SIECLE , XXXVII

je suis haï. Pourquoi? Parce que je défends les faibles, les vaincus, les petits, les enfants.
Je suis calomnié. Pourquoi? Parce que j’ aime les bouches sans venin, les coeurs sans stratagème.
Le bonze aux yeux baissés m’ abhorre avec ferveur, mais qu’ est-ce que cela me fait, à moi rêveur?
Je sens au fond des cieux quelqu’ un qui voit mon âme;
cela suffit. Le flot ne brise point la rame, le vent ne brise pas l’ aile, l’ adversité ne brise pas l’ esprit qui va vers la clarté.
Je vois en moi l’ erreur tomber et le jour croître;
je sens grandir le temple et s’ écrouler le cloître.
Rien de fermé. Le ciel ouvert. L’ étoile à nu.
L’ idole disparaît, Dieu vient. C’ est l’ inconnu, mais le certain. Je sens dans mon âme ravie la dilatation superbe de la vie, et la sécurité du fond vrai sous mes pas.
L’ abri pour le sommeil, le pain pour le repas, je les trouve. D’ ailleurs les heures passent vite.
Quelquefois on me suit, quelquefois on m’ évite;
je vais. Souvent mes pieds sont las, mon coeur jamais.
Le juste, — hélas, je saigne, où sont ceux que j’ aimais? — sent qu’ il va droit au but quand au hasard il marche.
Je suis, comme jadis l’ antique patriarche,
penché sur une énigme où j’ aperçois du jour.
Je crie à l’ ombre immense : Amour! Amour! Amour!
Je dis : espère et crois, qui que tu sois qui souffres!
Je sens trembler sous moi l’ arche du pont des gouffres;
pourtant je passerai, j’ en suis sûr. Avançons.
Par moments la forêt penche tous ses frissons sur ma tête, et la nuit m’ attend dans les bois traîtres;
je suis proscrit des rois, je suis maudit des prêtres;
je ne sais pas un mois d’ avance où je serai le mois suivant, l’ orage étant démesuré;

puis l’ azur reparaît, l’ azur que rien n’ altère;
ma route, blanche au ciel, est noire sur la terre;
je subis tour à tour tous les vents de l’ exil;
j’ ai contre moi quiconque est fort, quiconque est vil;
ceux d’ en bas, ceux d’ en haut pour m’ abattre s’ unissent;
mais qu’ importe! Parfois des berceaux me bénissent,
l’ homme en pleurs me sourit, le firmament est bleu, et faire son devoir est un droit. Gloire à Dieu!
13 décembre 1874.

1871, 06

LE SIECLE , XXXVIII

oui, vous avez raison, je suis un imbécile.
Le ciel qui cache au fond des antres de Sicile la flûte de Moschus, chère aux échos profonds, livre Arioste au vol fantasque des griffons, et fait dialoguer le prophète avec l' aigle, ce grand ciel d' où sur nous descend l' ombre et la règle,
m' avait créé pensif, de sorte que j' avais
l' oeil fixé sur la route incertaine où je vais, et que je n' étais guère autre chose qu' un homme attendri, de colère et de haine économe, vieux par les souvenirs, jeune par les penchants,
fait pour la vénérable allégresse des champs.
Mais en même temps j' ai, comme Eschyle, deux âmes,
l' une où croissent les fleurs, l' autre où couvent les flammes;
Théocrite en mon coeur rencontre d' Aubigné;
ce qui fait que parfois j' ai, d' un oeil indigné,
regardé, dans ce siècle ainsi que dans l' histoire,
cette méchanceté qu' on nomme la victoire.
Ma pente est de bénir dans l' enfer les maudits.
Et vous me raillez. Soit. Eh bien, je vous le dis, je ne me repens point. Je trouve bon, limpide, consolant, honorable et doux, d' être stupide.
être inepte me plaît, me charme et me sourit,
puisque je vois comment sont faits les gens d' esprit.
Je suis de mon plein gré rentré dans la tempête.
Oui, rarement on eut l' audace d' être bête à ce point, et mon deuil comprend votre gaîté;
j' étais en terre ferme, au port, en sûreté;
j' ai vu des naufragés qui s' enfonçaient dans l' ombre,
sans aide, et j' ai sauté sur le vaisseau qui sombre, aimant mieux leur malheur que votre joie à tous,
et périr avec eux que régner avec vous.

Juin 1871.

LE SIECLE , XXXIX

Puisque je suis étrange au milieu de la ville, puisque je veux la vie amère et jamais vile,
puisque je me dévoue avec stupidité;
puisqu’ improvisant tout, j’ ai tout prémédité,
n’ ayant d’ autres éclairs que ceux de mon cratère, et ne parlant qu’ après avoir voulu me taire;
puisque je déraisonne à ce point de penser que l’ ouragan ne doit rugir que pour bercer, que la victoire aimante est la seule victoire, qu’ un lever d’ astre plaît à la nuit la plus noire, et qu’ un peu de clémence est nécessaire après la sanglante arquebuse et les noirs couperets;
puisque j’ ose affirmer je ne sais quelles règles
d’ apaisement des vents, que connaissent les aigles, mais que jamais Néron ni Séjan ne comprit;
puisqu’ assez de folie entre dans mon esprit pour que j’ en vienne à dire aux hommes qu’ ils sont frères, qu’ ils ont le même but, malgré les flots contraires, que tout, sur terre, au ciel, là-haut comme ici-bas,
les tempêtes, les chocs furieux, les combats,
tout doit, les profondeurs étant des harmonies,
s’ évanouir dans l’ ombre en douceurs infinies;
puisque je crois que l’ homme est meilleur, pardonné;
puisque je m’ attendris au cri d’ un nouveau-né à qui l’ exil, voleur féroce, a pris son père;
puisque je dis qu’ il faut, pour que l’ état prospère,
civiliser le riche autant que l’ indigent, qu’ il faut panser l’ ulcère, et qu’ il est moins urgent de punir les effets que de guérir les causes;
puisque je perds mon temps à répéter ces choses,
et puisqu’ on ne veut pas même en faire l’ essai, laissez-moi retourner à mon noir Guernesey.
Là point de lâcheté, là point de bâtardise;
là je pense, et ne vois rien qui me contredise,

et librement je marche et respire, et je vis,
le grand océan sombre étant de mon avis.
27 juillet.

1875, 06, 02

LE SIECLE , XL

ainsi nous n’ avons plus Strasbourg, nous n’ avons plus Metz, la chaste maison des vieux Francs chevelus!
Ces villes, ces cités, déesses crénelées,
ce teuton nous les a tranquillement volées!
Ainsi le Chasseur Noir a ces captives-là!
Ainsi ce cavalier monstrueux, Attila, horrible, les attache aux arçons de sa selle;
à l’ un pend l’ héroïne, à l’ autre la pucelle!
Et les voilà, râlant dans le carcan de fer,
Metz où régna Clovis, Strasbourg d’ où vint Kléber!
Le vautour a ces monts et ces prés sous son aile!
Et tout cela pourtant, c’ est la France éternelle!
C’ est à nous, ce Haut-Rhin où la Gaule apparaît!
J’ en atteste l’ été, le printemps, la forêt, les astres toujours purs, les roses toujours neuves et le ruissellement d’ émeraudes des fleuves!
J’ en atteste l’ épi doré, le nid d’ oiseau, et le petit enfant qui, nu dans son berceau,
joue avec son pied rose en attendant la France!
J’ en atteste l’ oeil bleu de la sainte espérance,
l’ honneur, le droit, l’ autel où l’ on prie à genoux, cette Lorraine et cette Alsace, c’ est à nous!
Là rêva Gutenberg, là se dressa Lothaire;
ce ciel est notre azur, ce champ est notre terre;
nous nous sommes laissé prendre ces grands pays!
Nous, France! En même temps nous sommes envahis par le prêtre, et flairés par la louve romaine!
Ainsi nous subissons la schlague qui nous mène!
Ainsi nous acceptons sur nous le traînement du syllabus gothique et du sabre allemand!
Ainsi nous permettons au reître, au bonze, au cuistre, de reclouer sur nous le grand linceul sinistre,
l’ ignorance, l’ erreur, le mensonge et la nuit!
Ainsi l’ immense aurore aux cieux s’ évanouit!

Ainsi, pourvu qu’ il ait au poing de l’ eau bénite, pourvu qu’ après avoir fui devant le samnite,
il dresse un sombre glaive à la gloire inconnu, le premier misérable imbécile venu peut nous crier : paix là, vous tous! Gare à qui bouge!
Mais nos pères auraient mordu dans du fer rouge!
2 juin 1875.

1870, 06, 06

LE SIECLE , XLI

qui que tu sois qui tiens un peuple dans ta main, sultan, czar pseudo-grec, césar pseudo-romain,
roi pour rire, empereur pour pleurer, Claude ou Jacques, bonjour. Prospère, mange et règne, et fais tes pâques.
Je ne conteste pas ton prestige, et l’ émoi que cause aux bonnes gens Ta Majesté. Pour moi, quand dans la rue un roi, que sa garde enveloppe,
doré, superbe, orné de sabres nus, galope, ma foi, je tourne moins la tête que si c’ est
Lise qui passe avec une rose au corset;
mais c’ est un goût bizarre, et tous les autres hommes
admirent qui leur fait payer de grosses sommes.
Donc sois heureux. Jouis du droit qu’ on a d’ abord d’ avaler son voisin si l’ on est le plus fort;
va! Dans la probité des princes rien n’ accroche;
leur conscience auguste et sainte est une poche si grande qu’ il y tient un royaume, et qu’ on peut y fourrer tout un peuple et dessus faire un noeud, et saisir Oldenbourg, Nassau, Hambourg, Hanovre, d’ un tour de main, avec le riche, avec le pauvre, avec châteaux, budgets et millions, avec prêtres et sénateurs, le Te Deum au bec.
Par-dessus le marché, vous êtes un grand homme.
C’ est fait. Bandit, fi donc! C’ est héros qu’ on vous nomme.
Prenez Francfort, ou bien Venise avec Saint-Marc.
Ce qui fut Metternich est aujourd’ hui Bismarck;
Tibère est un lion dont Séjan est la griffe.
Puisque le maître est grand, qu’ importe l’ escogriffe.
Tout est bien. Hurrah! Prince! Aie un casque pointu.
Flanque au bagne l’ honneur, la gloire, la vertu;
ôte à ceux-ci leur droit, à ceux-là leur patrie;
complète ta grandeur par de la Sibérie;
soit. Mais aie à l’ esprit ceci présent, mon cher.
En même temps qu’ on est de marbre, on est de chair.

Parfois on est un monstre en croyant être un ange, mais, quoi qu’ on fasse, on est un homme. Chose étrange, un roi, cela vieillit, même un roi fort puissant.
Les rois ont des poumons, de la bile, du sang,
un coeur, qui le croirait? Et même des entrailles;
la fièvre avant l’ émeute a fréquenté Versailles;
le ventre peut manquer de respect; les boyaux osent mal digérer les aliments royaux;
bons rois! Dieu joue avec leur majesté contrite;
dans la toute-puissance il a mis la gastrite;
il faut bien l’ avouer, dût en frémir d’ Hozier,
ainsi que les dindons, les rois ont un gésier;
Louis le Grand avait un anus; on constate quelquefois, chez César lui-même, une prostate;
Charles neuf, faible et mou comme un jonc sous le vent,
fut par les vers de terre habité tout vivant.
Or les sages pensifs font remarquer aux princes qu’ il est toujours aisé d’ empoigner des provinces, mais qu’ un roi ne peut prendre, en eût-il grand besoin, un muscle de son râble au crocheteur du coin.
Un césar souvent porte, à son dos qui cahote, son empire moins bien qu’ un chiffonnier sa hotte, mais il ferait tuer ses preux jusqu’ au dernier avant de conquérir les reins du chiffonnier.
Majesté, vous aurez plutôt Rome, la Chine,
l’ Inde, qu’ une vertèbre ou deux de son échine.
La migraine se plaît sous les couronnes d’ or;
malgré l’ huissier de garde au fond du corridor, elle entre. Trop d’ azote et pas assez d’ ozone,
c’ est assez pour qu’ allant du Gange à l’ Amazone,
le choléra-morbus s’ abatte à plomb sur vous;
l’ effrayant typhus passe, il rend les hommes fous,
vous êtes empereur, mais gare tout de même.
Vous dites : je suis presque un Alexandre. On m’ aime!
Eh bien, même Campaspe et même éphestion
n’ ont pas à votre place une indigestion.
C’ est doux d’ avoir, avec des vins à pleine amphore, des femmes plus que n’ a de vagues le Bosphore;

sérails et festins sont charmants, et malfaisants.
Les gens de Géorgie apportent tous les ans une vierge au sultan, c’ est une politesse;
mais ne peuvent, hélas, quand même sa hautesse daignerait les rouer de coups de nerf de boeuf, avec la viande fraîche offrir l’ estomac neuf.
On crache, on tousse, même en la plus haute sphère.
La nature est parfois insolente. Qu’ y faire?
On est le grand passant d’ Arcole et d’ Iéna;
on est le cavalier de la victoire; on a pour soleil Austerlitz et pour ombre Brumaire, si bien que Juvénal vous prend aux mains d’ Homère;
cela n’ empêche pas le sternum d’ exister.
Qui frappe? C’ est la mort qui vient vous débotter, sire. On a beau régner, se faire un entourage de trompettes, d’ encens, de fumée et d’ orage;
on a beau se coiffer de lauriers sur les sous,
avoir sous soi le peuple en paysans dissous,
être le criméen, l’ africain, le dacique,
s’ asseoir sur l’ aigle ainsi que le Jupin classique, se loger au Kremlin, vivre à l’ Escurial, au moment où l’ on est le plus impérial,
à l’ heure où l’ on remplit de son nom les deux pôles, voilà qu’ on est poussé dehors par les épaules.
à rien ne sert d’ aller se cacher dans des trous.
Dieu vient. On perd sa peine à fermer les verrous.
Ce fâcheux-là n’ est point un de ceux qu’ on évite.
Hélas, mon prince, on meurt brutalement et vite.
Il suffit d’ un cheval emporté, d’ un gravier dans le flanc, d’ une porte entr’ ouverte en janvier, d’ un rétrécissement du canal de l’ urètre,
pour qu’ au lieu d’ une fille on voie entrer un prêtre.
H.. -H.. — 6 juin 1870.

LE SIECLE , XLII DIEU ECLABOUSSE PAR ZOÏLE .

Ah çà, si nous disions un peu son fait à Dieu?
Son oeuvre n’ a ni fin, ni tête, ni milieu.
L’ imagination de ce faiseur s’ épuise.
Sa meule tourne usant ce qu’ on dit qu’ elle aiguise.
Il se répète; il est au bout de son rouleau.
Quoi de plus vain que l’ air! Quoi de plus plat que l’ eau!
L’ hiver est blanc et vieux; l’ aurore est vieille et rose;
on croit qu’ il renouvelle, il fait la même chose;
toujours la même forme en ses oeuvres s’ épand;
l’ arbre est un hérisson, le fleuve est un serpent;
la lune jaune accuse, en copiant l’ orange,
une stérilité d’ invention étrange;
c’ est morne. Essayez donc de le tirer un peu de son flot toujours vert, de son ciel toujours bleu!
La face du liard au revers est pareille;
le narcisse est un oeil, l’ épilobe, une oreille.
Ce monde est un immense opéra rococo,
doré par le reflet et rhythmé par l’ écho;
un ange endiablerait dans sa philosophie
d’ écouter le plain-chant que la forêt solfie;
le Léman n’ en dit pas plus long que l’ érié;
depuis des milliers d’ ans, Dieu n’ a point varié la gamme du bouvreuil, du geai, de la linotte;
son vieux fou d’ ouragan n’ a qu’ une seule note;
sa musique est toujours comme au temps d’ Agénor;
en vain le rossignol, infortuné ténor,
dans l’ espoir de changer sa vieille cavatine, interroge et poursuit d’ un regard qui s’ obstine
ce triste Dieu caché dans le trou du souffleur.
Mai porte à son chapeau toujours la même fleur.
Le destin, chausse-trape usée à la charnière,
s’ ouvre et se clôt toujours de la même manière.

Et la vie, où l’ espoir avorte et se morfond, n’ est qu’ une boîte avec la mort pour double fond.
L’ histoire est un vieux thème usé dès Hérodote;
Dieu ne la refait pas, mon cher, il la radote;
il recrépit Tibère, il replâtre Néron;
il ressouffle la guerre avec son vieux clairon;
il livre, avec un tas de détails parasites,
aux russes Bonaparte ou Darius aux scythes;
pas un crime qui n’ ait été cent fois commis;
il pétrit Catherine avec Sémiramis;
il fait resservir Claude et Pilate; il retape Caïn dans Borgia quand il lui faut un pape;
ce Louis quinze était à Londres Charles deux;
sous le nom de Cambyse Attila fut hideux;
Hicétas reparaît dans Galilée. En somme,
Dieu n’ a qu’ un seul patron sur lequel il fait l’ hommme;
il laisse de ses mains le monde informe choir;
il n’ a pas le moyen de changer d’ ébauchoir, et c’ est toujours avec la même terre glaise
qu’ il fabrique une juive ou qu’ il crée une anglaise.
J’ ai vu le premier homme et j’ attends le second.
Dieu se trompe s’ il croit prouver qu’ il est fécond
parce qu’ il tire Adam à beaucoup d’ exemplaires.
Sur un profil, les pleurs, sur l’ autre, les colères.
C’ est toujours la victime et toujours le tyran.
Son Arcturus ressemble à son Aldebaran;
un juif du moins vous rogne ou vous dore une piastre;
lui n’ a pas encor pu remettre à neuf un astre!
Il faut pour admirer que l’ homme soit têtu.
Voilà ce que fait Dieu. Quand donc finiras-tu, entre l’ endroit terrible et l’ envers ridicule,
de regarder toujours le même crépuscule,
ô création pauvre, ayant à tes deux bouts
les soleils ronds des cieux, les yeux ronds des hiboux!
Je déclare ton Dieu fini. Vois! Monotone quand, zéphyr, il roucoule, et quand, bourrasque, il tonne, rajustant l’ ancien cadre aux anciens horizons,

il n’ a que quatre vents et que quatre saisons.
Vieux grand-père en enfance, il ne sait qu’ une fable.
Et dans tous les recoins de son oeuvre ineffable, dans son éclair qui n’ est que du rayon cassé,
dans la mare stagnante au fond de tout fossé, dans le perroquet vide et bavard comme l’ homme, dans ève et dans Vénus cueillant la même pomme, dans la fumée aussi vague que le brouillard,
dans le dindon pleureur et dans l’ âne braillard, dans les orangs-outangs autrefois troglodytes,
dans le cygne pareil au lys, que de redites!
L’ Auvergne et ses volcans s’ éteignent; au verso expirent Ténériffe et le Chimborazo;
à force de cracher toujours le même soufre,
l’ Hékla meurt; le Gibel est au fond de son gouffre;
Vésuve époumoné n’ est qu’ un essoufflement.
Dans la bête hurlant toujours son hurlement, dans le flux et reflux rongeant toujours sa digue, dans le temps, dans l’ espace, on sent de la fatigue.
La mer poussive jette un sanglot décrépit;
son antique courroux n’ est plus qu’ un vieux dépit,
et sa tempête a pris la forme d’ un catarrhe.
Comme on voit pendre au mur un spectre de guitare, la vieille poésie, où l’ amour a vingt ans,
frissonne dans le vide avec le vieux printemps.
Dieu regarde tourner la nature, machine
qu’ il domine, accroupi comme un magot de Chine;
et cela va si mal et c’ est si mal bâclé
qu’ on dirait par moments qu’ il a perdu la clé.
Quelque jour l’ araignée emplira de ses toiles
l’ horloge du matin, du soir et des étoiles, et le bien, et le mal, et le sort, noirs bahuts mal emboîtés, mal peints, mal cloués, mal fichus.
Vois! L’ azur est ridé, l’ aube tousse et grelotte;
la jeunesse éternelle est à la fin vieillotte;
le chant du point du jour chevrote quelque peu.
Juillet caduc voudrait s’ asseoir au coin du feu;

le bonhomme janvier geint, et sans verve épanche la neige qui jaunit de l’ ennui d’ être blanche;
floréal est fané, passé, mangé des vers.
Ce sont des lieux communs que ces bocages verts où vient nicher la grive, où vient glapir la caille;
la rose au frais bouton n’ est plus qu’ une antiquaille.
Les grands nuages sont d’ informes arrosoirs;
et le haut firmament, sombre pourpre des soirs, rideau des arcs-en-ciel, déployant sur l’ abîme ses constellations, épouvante du crime, et ses nuits dont les yeux semblent tout épier,
est une loque à pendre au clou chez le fripier.
Ce monde, chaque jour plus gothique et plus trouble, s’ embourbe plus avant dans l’ ombre qui redouble;
l’ homme en entend crier les joints, craquer les ais;
et les religions attellent sans succès
l’ éléphant de Brahma, le boeuf Apis, la bête que saint Jean vit ayant sept cornes sur la tête, et le cheval Pégase et la jument Borak à ce noir chariot chargé de bric-à-brac!
Dieu ne fait de l’ effet qu’ en forçant les contrastes.
Son univers, malgré des détails assez vastes,
n’ est qu’ un long cliquetis au fond très puéril;
le blanc, le noir; le jour, la nuit; décembre, avril;
Salomon et Piron déclamant la même ode;
le cygne et le corbeau; Marc-Aurèle et Commode;
vice, vertu; la course effarée et le mors;
la rumeur des vivants, le silence des morts;
que tout crie et pérore! Assez, que tout se taise!
Je voudrais bien le voir sortir de l’ antithèse.
On sourit dès qu’ on met à nu le procédé.
Heureusement pour Dieu que Planche est décédé;
comme il vous donnerait, car c’ était là sa tâche,
sur les doigts de ce bon Jéhovah qui rabâche!
Quoi! Toujours ce poëme insipide des champs, des halliers, des ruisseaux, et des vallons penchants,
plus usé qu’ un trumeau du bonhomme Natoire!

Quoi! L’ été, puis l’ hiver! Toujours ce répertoire!
Toujours le même loup montrant les mêmes dents!
Toujours ce vieux joujou des vents, des flots grondants!
Ce casse-tête horrible et niais tout ensemble de la chose qui n’ est jamais ce qu’ elle semble, où Dieu bande les yeux à l’ homme, où ce vieillard avec Adam perdu joue à colin-maillard!
Toujours l’ illusion d’ optique qui vous frappe!
Le ciel qui sans bouger remue, et cette attrape du soleil qui se lève et ne se lève pas!
Quoi! Toujours le cloaque au sortir du repas, l’ humanité tirée en bas par la nature,
et le vomissement après la nourriture!
Mais le moindre grimaud qui porte la primeur de ce que sa caboche enfante, à l’ imprimeur, après s’ être gratté sa stupide perruque,
après s’ être empoigné de ses deux mains la nuque,
un rimeur de deux sous, un bêlître, un poussah,
un goîtreux, trouverait autre chose que ça!
Il est temps que ce Dieu repeigne et revernisse le pré que six mille ans a brouté la génisse;
qu’ il blanchisse le lys, et qu’ il mette des freins aux anciens vents hurlant leurs antiques refrains;
qu’ il change de l’ oiseau la chanson coutumière, et qu’ il redore au fond du ciel noir la lumière.
Sa machine est connue et c’ est un grand défaut.
Oui, s’ il veut qu’ on le prenne au sérieux, il faut qu’ il renouvelle, arrange, et radoube, et refasse son univers, moyens et but, fond et surface, son froid printemps qui fait sans cesse un faux serment, ses édens, ses enfers, mieux inventés vraiment ceux-ci par les Miltons et ceux-là par les Dantes, son jeu dépareillé de forces discordantes, son mystère, cassette à secret où déjà le bras des fureteurs jusqu’ au coude plongea, sa terre, son soleil, assez maigre étincelle,
et son attraction dont on voit la ficelle.

Il a pour vous distraire inventé les fléaux.
Voulant, selon la loi de maître Despréaux, passer du grave au doux, du plaisant au sévère,
il brise un peuple ainsi qu’ un ivrogne son verre,
livre une pauvre ville à d’ affreux assiégeants, grossit l’ eau de la Loire et noie un tas de gens.
Quelquefois, comme Horace aiguise un anapeste, il termine une guerre au moyen d’ une peste,
ou fait un roi d’ un tigre, et se trouve charmant;
et le monde agonise... — ah! L’ on est par moment tenté de lui fourrer le nez dans son ordure, ou de lui crier, — car il a l’ oreille dure :
— tu deviens fatigant, tu deviens pluvieux,
mon pauvre éternel! Prends ta retraite, mon vieux!
Oui, rentre dans ton trou biblique ou druidique.
Cède la place au diable, au singe, à l’ homme. Abdique.
Tout autre fera mieux que toi ta fonction.
N’ attends pas qu’ un titan quelconque, un Ixion, un Satan, un Typhée aux cent bras, un Voltaire, fasse rafle un beau jour de tout ton vieux mystère;
mette au rancart l’ azur, les ténèbres, le mal,
le bien, l’ exception avec le fait normal, le destin, le hasard, l’ impossible équilibre du Très-Haut prescient posé sur l’ homme libre, la crèche et le sépulcre, et la prairie en fleurs que, sans savoir pourquoi, l’ aube inonde de pleurs;
plume l’ oison et l’ ange, envoie au linge sale
l’ affreux linceul troué de la nuit colossale;
et prenne brusquement, pour y jeter le ciel,
la terre, le chaos total et partiel, et le septentrion, nocturne sentinelle,
et l’ océan roulant sa tempête éternelle, et le cèdre et l’ hysope, et l’ herbe et le ruisseau, leur hotte aux chiffonniers du faubourg Saint-Marceau!

1875, 04, 28

LE SIECLE , XLIII ILS SONT TOUJOURS LA .

Baal n’ est pas tombé; son temple,
antre du vieux crime immortel, rayonne; et Baal se contemple et s’ adore assis sur l’ autel;
il triomphe; il a dans sa crypte
la vieille Inde et la vieille égypte;
Baal resplendit au milieu entre l’ idole et la momie;
et la sombre terre endormie
rêve que ce monstre est son dieu.
Les deux frères de la géhenne,
Phalaris et Torquemada,
attisent avec de la haine
l’ âtre où le boeuf d’ airain gronda;
tous deux, l’ un est roi, l’ autre est prêtre, chantent; comme le chien son maître la fournaise vient les lécher;
et pour ce front, et pour cette âme, un panache sort de la flamme,
une mitre sort du bûcher.
Nemrod vit, et près d’ eux flamboie;
il éclabousse leur brasier;
il étale l’ horrible joie
de la trompette et de l’ acier;
il va, splendide, affreux, sonore;
il frappe, il tue; et l’ on ignore,
quand sur eux le regard descend,
si la flamme, hydre aux sombres ailes, crache sur Dieu plus d’ étincelles que le fer de gouttes de sang.
Midas, docteur, est dans sa chaire;
sur le champ, sur l’ être hébété,
il souffle la nuit, la jachère,
le sommeil, l’ imbécillité;

près de lui, pendant qu’ il enseigne, un géant aveugle qui saigne suit à tâtons un noir chemin;
car l’ ombre étouffe l’ espérance, car dans ses deux mains l’ ignorance
tient les deux yeux du genre humain.
Cham est vivant, le fils infâme;
il brille, il est jeune, il est beau;
il noie aux débauches son âme;
il rit de son père au tombeau;
il n’ a même plus de mémoire;
un flot sourd croît dans la nuit noire,
il n’ en sait rien; et sans ennui, sans peur, sans chercher de refuge, il entend le bruit du déluge
qui remonte derrière lui.
Judas n’ est pas mort; il trafique;
il travaille aux pièges tendus;
il est le marchand magnifique
des Christs livrés, des dieux vendus;
sa drachme est un astre; il partage son âme avec Londre et Carthage;
Judas domine les vivants;
debout sur la terre, heureux, blême, fier, les mains pleines d’ or, il sème
de la trahison dans les vents.
Dracon, juge, emploie au supplice du divin esprit Légion quatre forces saintes, Justice,
Famille, Ordre, Religion;
sous son fouet la Vérité râle;
il torture cet ange pâle
sur l’ horrible échafaud vermeil, et, front d’ airain et coeur de pierre, fait écarteler la Lumière aux quatre chevaux du soleil!
Messaline n’ est pas levée;

elle est toujours là dans son lit;
c’ est à peine, la réprouvée,
si, quand vient l’ aube, elle pâlit;
toujours belle, calme, effrontée, elle éclate d’ un rire athée sans pudeur, sans peur, sans ennui;
la prostituée éternelle
a changé de nom et s’ appelle Conscience Humaine aujourd’ hui.
Le vieux Caïn, aïeul prospère,
s’ est fait un trône de l’ affront;
les crimes lui disent : mon père!
Il baise les vices au front.
Il rit de voir partout le glaive et, sur toutes les croix qu’ élève à tous ses étages Babel, aux gibets qu’ on hait ou révère,
à Montfaucon comme au Calvaire,
l’ immense cadavre d’ Abel.
Ils sont libres, joyeux, superbes;
les vils chantent les meurtriers;
tous ont les mains pleines de gerbes,
de fleurs, de rayons, de lauriers;
qui ne voit qu’ eux cesse de croire;
toute la honte est de la gloire;
et c’ est Dieu qui semble puni;
sous le firmament qui s’ effare, ils passent, comme la fanfare du néant devant l’ infini.
à l’ autre extrémité du monde,
Satan, le sinistre oublié,
Satan, le responsable immonde, seul, farouche et triste, est lié;
au-dessus de ses fils sans nombre,
Satan rêve, adossé dans l’ ombre
au poteau de l’ immensité;
et, debout sous les cieux funèbres, il a ce masque, les Ténèbres, et ce carcan, l’ éternité.

28 avril 1875.

LE SIECLE , XLIV FULGUR .

L’ océan me disait : ô poëte, homme juste,
j’ ai parfois comme toi cette surprise auguste qu’ il me descend des cieux une immense rougeur;
et je suis traversé tout à coup, ô songeur,
par la foudre sublime, irritée et haïe,
comme toi par l’ esprit sinistre d’ Isaïe;
les éclairs sont mes cris, les foudres sont ma voix;
je gronde sur l’ écueil comme toi sur les rois;
je suis l’ avertisseur brusque, horrible et céleste.
L’ énorme bras de feu m’ associe à son geste
quand il menace l’ ombre et le bagne infernal.
On est beau par Virgile et grand par Juvénal, et mon gouffre le sait aussi bien que ton âme;
j’ ai, comme toi, l’ azur, une douceur de femme,
une gaîté d’ enfant, des vagues pleines d’ yeux,
des aurores où rit le ciel prodigieux,
des écumes parfois blanches comme les cygnes;
les astres par-dessus mes flots se font des signes,
et se disent : viens donc te mirer dans la mer.
Je suis le niveau pur, le précipice clair;
j’ offre mes gouttes d’ eau nuit et jour aux brins d’ herbe.
Mais je fais peu de cas de tout ce bleu superbe, de ce vaste sourire épanoui sur tout,
de cette grâce où l’ ombre en clarté se dissout,
de ces flots de cristal, de ces ondes de moire;
et le passage affreux du tonnerre est ma gloire.
13 juin.

1853, 11, 23

DEUX VOIX DANS LE CIEL , ZENITH - NADIR .

zénith.
Je suis le haut.
Nadir.
Je suis le bas.
Zénith.
J’ aime.
Nadir.
Je ris.
Zénith.
Par l’ éblouissement les coeurs sont attendris.
Adorer, c’ est aimer en admirant. ô cimes!
Que le soleil est beau sur les sommets sublimes!
Nadir.
Le dessous est charmant.
Zénith.
ô Paris!
Nadir.
ô Paris!
Zénith.
J’ aperçois les cerveaux, les têtes, les esprits,
les vastes fronts, foyers où rayonnent les âmes.
Nadir.
Je m’ amuse. Je vois le vrai côté des femmes.
Zénith.
Joie immense! Savoir! Sonder! Voir jusqu’ au fond ce que rêvent les forts, ce que les sages font!
ô grands coeurs des héros!
Nadir.
Petits pieds de Suzette!
Zénith.
Je lis le livre écrit par Dieu.
Nadir.

Moi, la gazette
que le diable griffonne au verso.
Zénith.
Croire est doux.
Marchez les yeux au ciel!
Nadir.
Pour tomber dans les trous.
Zénith.
Cherchez les grands travaux et les grandes études, vivez pensifs! Plongez votre âme aux solitudes!
Allez! Vous reviendrez meilleurs.
Nadir.
Et fort maigris.
Zénith.
Vivants! Enivrez-vous d’ extases!
Nadir.
Soyez gris.
Zénith.
Pensez!
Nadir.
Buvez, mangez, faites-vous de gros ventres.
Zénith.
Chantez, oiseaux; lions, rugissez dans vos antres;
vents, soufflez; gonflez-vous, ô mers; frémis, forêt;
prie, Adam! — le soleil se lève. Dieu paraît!
Nadir.
Crois-tu?
Zénith.
Création, salut!
Nadir.
Triste machine!
Zénith.
Gloire à Dieu!
Nadir.
Peuh!
Zénith.
Salut, ô France!

Nadir.
Bonjour, Chine.
Zénith.
Venez, lutteurs saignants! Venez, grands hommes las!
Dante avec Béatrix, Voltaire avec Calas!
Nadir.
Tiens! Il laisse tomber par terre la Pucelle!
Zénith.
Shakspeare, resplendis; Rabelais, étincelle;
Byron, montre ton front!
Nadir.
Et cache ton pied-bot.
Zénith.
Christ naît. J' entends un bruit de harpe.
Nadir.
Et de rabot.
Zénith.
Son père est roi.
Nadir.
Son père est charpentier.
Zénith.
ô psaumes!
ô David!
Nadir.
ô Joseph! ô scie!
Zénith.
Où sont les chaumes
est la paix. Le hameau m' attire.
Nadir.
Allons-nous-en.
Zénith.
Aime le villageois.
Nadir.
Mais crains le paysan.
Zénith.
J' ai l' oeil sur les hauts lieux où s' allume une gloire, où César a gagné sa plus grande victoire,

où Juvénal farouche a fait son plus beau vers.
Je le sais, moi. Je vois l’ endroit.
Nadir.
Je vois l’ envers.
Zénith.
Athène! ô murs sacrés! Beauté! Chefs-d’ oeuvre! Exemples!
Strophes du statuaire écrites sur les temples!
Michel-Ange, à genoux tu les étudias.
Raphaël effaré contemple Phidias;
les profonds bas-reliefs, pleins d’ une vie étrange,
devant le demi-dieu font frissonner l’ archange.
ô sourire éternel des frontons dans l’ azur!
Sous ce mur immortel qu’ a ciselé l’ art pur,
les générations comme des fleuves roulent;
turcs et vénitiens et bavarois s’ écoulent;
les siècles, bûcherons qui s’ acharnent en vain,
comparent, convoqués par le sculpteur divin devant le Parthénon mutilé comme un arbre, l’ humanité d’ argile à l’ olympe de marbre.
Salut à Phidias!
Nadir.
Bonsoir à lord Elgin!
Zénith.
Justes, buvez l’ absinthe.
Nadir.
Absinthe, vin et gin.
Riches, l’ orchestre chante et les gorges sont nues;
le parc bleuâtre et frais livre ses avenues;
les lustres d’ or, mêlés d’ amours et de griffons,
pendent, buissons de flamme, à l’ anneau des plafonds;
dansez dans le salon et soupez dans la serre;
vous, les pauvres, les gueux, brutes de la misère,
soûlez-vous dans un bouge à la lueur des suifs!
Zénith.
Je regarde voler les aigles.
Nadir.
Moi, les juifs.

Zénith.
Morus meurt pour la loi; Caton, pour la patrie.
Nadir.
La lâche multitude obéit, tremble et crie.
Le cri monte de ceux sur qui l’ on marche à ceux sur qui l’ on frappe : serfs, moujiks, fellahs crasseux, esclaves. Les pavés se plaignent aux enclumes.
Zénith.
Que de couronnes d’ or, que de chapeaux à plumes
sur des fronts criminels!
Nadir.
Quels gros clous aux souliers
de l’ honnête homme!
Zénith.
ô bons, vous êtes les piliers
du ciel mystérieux où gravitent les mondes!
La raison de tout sort de vos âmes profondes.
Sans vous tout serait sombre et tout serait obscur.
La justice sacrée, et qui remplit l’ azur,
commence à l’ honnête homme et finit aux étoiles.
Les justes méconnus rayonnent sous leurs voiles;
comme le ciel, ils ont en eux l’ immensité,
et, s’ il est la lumière, ils sont la vérité.
Nadir.
Buvons!
Zénith.
Gloire au soleil!
Nadir.
Il rit de la nature.
Tous les échantillons d’ esprit et de stature sont égaux et pareils devant ce bec de gaz, depuis Petit Poucet jusqu’ à Micromégas!
Zénith.
Pudeur! Le lys t’ adore et le ramier candide
t’ aime, et l’ aube te rit, virginité splendide, neige où se posera le pied blanc de l’ amour.
Nadir.

à bas la vierge! à bas le lys! à bas le jour!
Toute blancheur est fade et bête.
Zénith.
Tais-toi, nègre!
Nadir.
Est-ce ma faute, à moi? L’ ange! Tu deviens aigre.
Le nez en l’ air, au fond de toute chose assis,
où tu vois des géants, je vois des raccourcis.
Ce que tu vois monter, moi, je le vois descendre.
Tu vois la flamme aux fronts, je vois aux pieds la cendre.
Tout tient à la façon dont nous sommes placés.
Zénith.
Le bleu matin dorait l’ herbe dans les fossés;
les froids tombeaux, devant le porche de l’ église, dormaient. Au coin du bois Pierre rencontra Lise, et lui dit : — viens. — où donc? — au bois. — je ne veux pas.
Les moissonneurs prenaient à l’ ombre leur repas;
les gais pinsons jouaient sur les pierres des tombes.
— oh! Là-bas, sur ce toit, vois toutes ces colombes!
Dit-elle; et Pierre dit : — c’ est chez moi qu’ on les voit.
Viens les voir. J’ ai ma chambre au bord de ce vieux toit.
J’ ai chez moi la colombe et sa soeur l’ hirondelle.
Tu pourras dans tes mains les prendre. — vrai? Dit-elle, dans mes mains? — dans tes mains! Viens-tu? — je n’ ose pas.
Le sentier, complaisant ou traître, pas à pas,
les mena tous les deux, pensifs, vers la chaumière.
Tout le long du chemin Lise avait peur de Pierre.
Pierre dit : — c’ est ici. — dans l’ escalier étroit leurs souffles se mêlaient. Les colombes du toit, les entendant venir, fuirent à tire-d’ aile.
— où donc est la colombe? Où donc est l’ hirondelle?
Dit Lise; et Pierre dit tout bas : — ô ma beauté, les oiseaux sont partis, mais l’ amour est resté.
Des roses emplissaient ce nid d’ une odeur d’ ambre;
elle entra rougissante... —
nadir.
à l’ angle de la chambre,

le vieux Satan riait dans sa barbe de bouc.
Lise en ôtant ses bas chantait l’ air de Malbrouck.
Zénith.
Jacque, après son travail, las, brûlé par le hâle, rentrait chez lui, son pain sous son bras. Maigre et pâle, une femme passait, son enfant à la main.
— du pain! Cria l’ enfant. — la mère dit : — demain.
L’ enfant ploya son front comme l’ oiseau son aile.
— je ne crois pas en Dieu; mon fils a faim! Dit-elle.
Le pauvre doux enfant dit : — mère, ce n’ est rien. —
Jacques donna son pain. ô Jacques, tu fis bien.
Pour que la mère croie, il faut que l’ enfant mange.
Nadir.
Le mioche était horrible et monstrueux. Cet ange louchait; il ressemblait vaguement à Dupin;
et, pendant qu’ il mangeait, son nez noyait son pain.
Zénith.
L’ oeil de chair ment. L’ esprit, c’ est l’ unique prunelle.
Les prophètes muraient leur grotte solennelle, et, dans l’ ombre engloutis, vivaient dans la clarté.
L’ âme ignore la nuit comme la cécité.
L’ âme voit à travers les paupières fermées.
ô pures visions des choses innommées!
Majesté du voyant que l’ esprit seul conduit,
qui n’ a plus que son âme ouverte dans la nuit!
Milton était aveugle.
Nadir.
Et Camoëns fut borgne.
Zénith.
ô Dieu. Je suis heureux! Je contemple.
Nadir.
Je lorgne.
Platon contemple, et Juan lorgne; il a l’ oeil battu, et Vénus dit tout bas à don Juan : montes-tu?
Zénith.
Silence!
Nadir.

Mon don Juan, mon beau faquin robuste, dit Vénus, ce Platon n’ est bon qu’ à faire un buste.
Zénith.
Tout est bien, tout est beau.
Nadir.
Hein? Plaît-il? S’ il vous plaît?
J’ ai tant cherché le beau que j’ ai trouvé le laid.
Tout est mal.
Zénith.
L’ idéal rayonne, astre immobile.
Nadir.
Satan m’ a fait cadeau de l’ âme de Zoïle;
je me la mets dans l’ oeil en guise de lorgnon.
Zénith.
Tout glorifie...
Nadir.
à bas!
Zénith.
Et tout affirme.
Nadir.
Non!
Zénith.
Le sage, inaccessible à vos vices funèbres, hommes, est votre phare au milieu des ténèbres.
Nadir.
Socrate était ivrogne et Thalès libertin.
Zénith.
Croyez.
Nadir.
Le vrai pas plus que le beau n’ est certain.
Qui semble un singe aux grecs semble un homme aux osages.
Zénith.
Démocrite, Héraclite étaient les deux visages du genre humain.
Nadir.
C’ est Jean qui pleure et Jean qui rit.
C’ est toi, Zénith, et moi, Nadir.

Zénith.
Sinistre esprit,
n’ approche pas ton nom du mien.
Nadir.
Bah!
Zénith.
Tais-toi, fange!
Nadir.
Monsieur, je suis un diable et vous êtes un ange;
mais quand vous vous fâchez de la gaîté que j’ ai,
je rêve que quelqu’ un vous a pris votre g.
Zénith.
Qu’ ève, par toi perdue et dont tu fis la honte,
t’ écrase sous son pied!
Nadir.
Que Balaam vous monte!
Zénith.
ô Dieu vivant, pardonne au rire immonde et noir, pardonne au rire misérable,
toi qu’ adore, incliné comme l’ arbre du soir,
le juste sombre et vénérable!
Le rire hurle, et mord le bas du firmament;
il déchire, il souille, il écume, trouble la tombe, et crache, avec un grincement, sur le monde, encensoir qui fume!
Regarde sans courroux le rire furieux,
le rire que rien ne désarme,
Dieu, vie, abîme, espoir! Grand oeil mystérieux d’ où tombe l’ homme, cette larme!
23 novembre 1853.

LE LIVRE DRAMATIQUE — La Femme

un burg dans une forêt. Intérieur de la grande salle du rez-de- chaussée. Aspect de ruine. Le dénûment rustique mêlé au délabrement seigneurial. De vieilles statues dans des niches, de l’herbe dans le pavé. Dans les coins, des débris. Une table de chêne. Des chaises de bois. Vaisselle d’étain et grosse poterie sur une planche. Coffres le long des murs. Près de la table, sur un bahut de paysan, des in-folio reliés en parchemin. Un ou deux sont ouverts. Dans l’angle à gauche, sous une voussure en ogive, un enfoncement fermé d’une porte à deux volets. à droite, sur le devant, la tourelle de l’escalier en spirale qui mène aux étages d’en haut. Cette tourelle est contiguë à la muraille. La porte de la tourelle s’ouvre sur le devant du théâtre. On en voit les premières marches. Le mur de la tourelle est percé de petites fenêtres longues et étroites. Au fond une grande porte, tout ouverte, donnant sur la forêt. Fenêtres démantelées. Volets descellés. çà et là des vitres cassées.

SCENE PREMIERE

Ils entrent par la porte du fond. Le duc, élégant, beau, grisonnant, environ cinquante ans, avec la prétention de n’en paraître que quarante. Il a un pardessus de voyage. Gunich est vieux.
Le duc Gallus.

Que sais-tu d’elle?
Gunich.

Rien. — son nom, c’est tout. Nella.
Le duc Gallus.

Tes talents d’espion ont été jusque-là!
Il regarde autour de lui le délabrement.
Donc, c’est dans ce taudis qu’habite cette fille!
Gunich.

Avec son père.
Le duc Gallus.

Seule en ce burg!
Gunich.

Sans famille.
Le duc Gallus.

Elle a tous les attraits, me dis-tu.
Gunich, saluant.
Réunis.
Le duc Gallus.

Le plus beau des oiseaux dans le plus laid des nids!
Regardant dans la salle.
Personne.
Il frappe du pied sur le pavé et heurte le marteau sur la porte.

On ne vient pas. — entrons.
Ils avancent de quelques pas. Il hausse la voix et appelle.
à la boutique!
Silence et solitude dans le burg.
Le duc Gallus regarde de toutes parts si personne ne paraît.
Gunich le suit jusque sur le devant du théâtre.
Gunich.

Souffrez que je vous parle un moment politique.
Altesse, en attendant, votre neveu grandit.
Le duc Gallus.

Il ne me gêne point, puisqu'il reste inédit.
Gunich.

Ces complications sont fâcheuses en somme.
Moi, j'eusse, monseigneur, supprimé le jeune homme.
Tout ou rien. Pourquoi faire une chose à demi?
Le duc Gallus.

Et l'adoucissement des mœurs, mon cher ami!
On prend une couronne, et l'on n'est pas hostile.
Mon frère laisse un fils. Tuer l'enfant! Vieux style.
Fi! C'est de mauvais goût. On usurpe aujourd'hui avec indulgence.
Gunich.

Humpf!
Le duc Gallus.

Mon frère mort, l'ennui me prit. être sujet d'un marmot, c'était rude;
je fis je ne sais plus trop quelle platitude
à Kaunitz, et je fus reconnu duc régnant.
Je me débarrassai du mioche en l'éloignant.
Dans ces bois, comme fils d'un vieux maître de forge, je l'ai fait élever. C'est l'étudiant George.

Point de dégât. J’ai mis dans ces monts, purs sommets, mon prince légitime en sevrage à jamais.
Incognito, tout seul avec toi, sans escorte, je viens de temps en temps voir comment il se porte.
Il ne se doute pas qu’il est duc.
Gunich.

C’est profond,
mais doux.
Le duc Gallus.

Les rois se font, mon cher, et se défont.
Gunich.

Humpf!
Le duc Gallus.

Ce que nous nommons nos droits, nous autres princes, sont-ce des droits? Oui. Non. Puisque j’ai les provinces, je les garde. Elles sont à mon neveu, mais quoi!
étant un peu larron, je suis d’autant plus roi!
Le premier qui fut roi fut un voleur sans juges.
Bah! Tout est bien, les bois sont d’augustes refuges, ce garçon est vivant, les nids chantent, les cieux sont sur nous. Quant à moi, je règne de mon mieux;
j’ai brisé les vieux jougs et les vieilles bricoles,
supprimé la potence, ouvert beaucoup d’écoles, diminué l’impôt, semé le vrai, dissous l’erreur, et je n’ai pas de remords pour deux sous.
Je tolère dans l’ombre un neveu qui s’ignore.
Claudius de Hamlet guette la pâle aurore,
mais il est Claudius et l’enfant est Hamlet.
Moi, nul spectre ne vient me saisir au collet.
Ce que j’ai, c’est l’ennui. Le trône, triste proie!
Sais-tu ce que je suis? Un pauvre homme de joie.
Plutôt bon que mauvais; très canaille; occupé,
mais oisif; fort penaud. Comme on est attrapé!

L’ambitieux pensif, usurpateur en herbe,
dit en préméditant le trône : — c’est superbe!
On est le maître; on a le budget plein les mains;
le prince resplendit, regardé des humains,
au-dessus de la terre; il est dans la comète!
Vite, ôte-toi de là, petit, que je m’y mette! —
c’est bon, j’ai pris la place, et je règne. à quel prix!
Quel néant! Un respect qui ressemble au mépris;
voir le fiel dans les cœurs et le miel sur les langues;
une dorure, pas solide; des harangues;
des valets; point d’amis; de faux éphestions;
des malédictions, des indigestions;
des Te Deum chantés par des prêtres athées;
du fracas, des grandeurs vaguement insultées par cette conscience énorme des vivants, sombre sous les rois, comme une mer sous le vents;
en chasse, en guerre, un tas de flatteurs déshonnêtes vous aidant à viser les peuples et les bêtes;
les vastes bâillements du cérémonial;
beaucoup d’enterrement mêlé d’un peu de bal;
le rang suprême, un mot; le pouvoir, un problème;
ne jamais être sûr qu’une femme vous aime;
voilà ce qu’on usurpe, ami. — si j’avais su!
Gunich.

Vous êtes triomphant, grand, couronné…
Le duc Gallus.

Déçu.
Ah! De la chose sceptre et de la chose trône, j’en suis revenu, va. J’y tiens peu. Pas de prône plus sot que l’étiquette, et pas d’orgueil plus creux.
C’est un art des puissants de n’être pas heureux.
Ils appellent cela la majesté. C’est bête.
Trop de couronne, hélas, fait qu’on n’a plus de tête.
Sais-tu ce qui serait mon goût? Vivre à Paris.
Rome a son carnaval, Stamboul a ses houris, mais Paris! Oui, c’est là qu’il faudrait que je vinsse pour être un chenapan sans cesser d’être un prince.

Un chenapan, vois-tu, c’est un sage gouailleur que Paris seul produit, qui rit, cueille la fleur et la fille, est féroce au plaisir, vit, s’attable, chante, danse, extermine, affreux gueux, et bon diable.
Le scrupule en un coin de son cœur se tient coi.
être ça, c’est vraiment exister. C’est pourquoi, quand je pense à Paris, je me dis : c’est la ville!
Là le mal n’est pas laid, la fange n’est pas vile!
Jamais comme à Paris les gens d’esprit n’ont pu savourer le parfum d’un éden corrompu;
Paris gâte la femme et l’homme, et les attaque par tout le paradis que peut faire un cloaque.
J’aime Paris, de vice et de grandeur pavé.
N’y songeons pas. Je suis à mon sceptre rivé.
Je suis le patient du trône. Roi, je bâille.
Ah! N’être qu’un bourgeois, quel bonheur! On ripaille, on s’amuse, on se vautre, amis, du vin, du rhum, du gin! Et pas d’altesse, et pas de décorum, on boit, la joie accourt et se livre en personne, et vous la possédez! Sais-tu que je grisonne?
Gunich.

Mais…
Le duc Gallus.

Je grisonne! — or, j’ai, par-dessus le marché,
le désir bienveillant de commettre un péché.
Quel péché? Le meilleur, le grand, le vrai, l’unique.
L’amour. Attention. Mon cœur se communique.
Tout ce que le destin offre, j’en ai voulu;
ce sac, je l’ai vidé; ce livre, je l’ai lu.
Eh bien, Gunich, le fond du sort, le but de l’homme, c’est Elle!
Gunich.

Elle? Qui donc?
Le duc Gallus.

Elle! Celle qu'on nomme
Plaisir, Tourment, Enfer et Ciel, Bien, Mal, Oui, Non.
Elle! En Grèce Aspasie. Elle! En France Ninon.
écoute, ô confident du prince! Combler d'aise quelque fille sans cœur, sans préjugés, mauvaise, charmante, aux grands yeux bleus, ou noirs, se portant bien;
avoir ma Pompadour comme un roi très chrétien, je prémédite ça! Mille défauts, pas veuve, et je la cherche aux bois pour l'avoir toute neuve.
Tel est mon idéal. L'ennui, j'en fais l'aveu, me ronge, je confie au bon Dieu mon neveu,
et moi, de mon côté, je vais à l'aventure;
je suis un cœur errant quêtant sa nourriture.
Vois, je bâille. J'ai faim. Je n'ai rien sous la dent.
Je voudrais rencontrer quelque être indépendant dont je sois le despote et qui me mène en laisse;
je cherche cette chose exquise : une drôlesse.
Gunich.

Monseigneur, ce n'est point impossible à trouver.
Le duc Gallus.

Mais je la veux sauvage.
Gunich.

Il la faudra rêver,
en ce cas, — c'est un peu de complaisance à mettre, — et ne pas prendre trop votre rêve à la lettre.
Sauvage presque.
Le duc Gallus.

ô lacs, ô montagnes, qu'emplit
le grand songe orageux du torrent dans son lit, du hallier, de la source, et de la bête fauve,

où l’antre vaguement s’arrondit en alcôve, où Pan se remarie et change de maisons avec les douze mois et les quatre saisons, espaces que la nuit ensemence d’étoiles,
ronces où l’araignée ourdit ses sombres toiles, j’accours, je viens sonder vos abîmes profonds;
dégoûté des bourreaux, et même des bouffons,
accablé de respect, obsédé de richesse,
las de cet à peu près qu’on nomme une duchesse,
blasé, mais confiant, ivre du grand concert,
je viens chercher Vénus toute nue au désert, je tends les bras vers vous, bois, monts, épithalame!
ô nature, un sourire! ô forêts, une femme!
Gunich.

ô forêts, une vierge!
Le duc Gallus.

Oui, vierge. J’y consens.
Un démon vierge! Un être aux penchants malfaisants ayant l’aspect du lys que la nature encense!
Laïs Agnès! Le monstre à l’état d’innocence!
C’est curiosité, rien de plus; mais j’aurais cet appétit. La touffe épaisse des forêts contient tout; fleurs, venins. Ami, gagner le quine d’un ange contenant en germe une coquine!
Comprends-tu? L’observer! Voir aboutir au mal l’innocence à tâtons dans l’instinct animal, peser dans la vertu ce que la chair en ôte,
assister dans une âme à l’aube de la faute,
je ne suis pas méchant, mais j’aimerais ce jeu.
Moi, des crimes, fi donc! Mais des vices, parbleu!
Quel plaisir, se gratter du doigt la boîte osseuse, et se dire tout bas : bon! Elle est paresseuse, elle hait le travail, elle aime les bijoux,
elle me trompera pour d’affreux sapajous,
elle est chaque jour pire, elle est chaque jour moindre, elle sent avec joie en elle Phryné poindre,

elle ignore l’honneur, le devoir, la raison;
elle a l’éclosion sinistre du poison!
Se dire : de farouche elle devient servile,
la faunesse des champs est catin à la ville, Néère tourne mal et se change en Lola,
assez déesse ici pour être diable là!
Elle a des yeux profonds de plus en plus funèbres, c’est une gueuse, ô joie! Et voir, dans les ténèbres, lentement, dépouillant tout voile, tout remord,
toute pudeur, avec le regard de la mort, sombre comme Astarté, blanche comme Suzanne,
de la vierge au front pur sortir la courtisane!
Et se dire : c’est bien! Je vais la dévorer!
Le tout pour rire.
Gunich.

Au fait, c’est gai.
Le duc Gallus.

Flâner, errer,
se refaire le cœur!
Gunich.

Bravo.
Le duc Gallus.

J’ai des nausées
des femmes qui chez nous naissent apprivoisées.
Cet immense plaisir, corrompre, on ne l’a pas.
Leur fuite est l’art savant de faire tous les pas.
Ces prudes! La Macette est dans la Cidalise.
Elles baissent les yeux en sortant de l’église;
elles prennent pour rien des airs majestueux;
leur croupe se recourbe en replis vertueux.
Moi qui sais le tarif, voir ces saintes-nitouches
s’offrir dans l’ombre en vente et faire les farouches, ça m’assomme. Et je viens chercher en d’autres lieux quelque chose de pis, c’est-à-dire de mieux.

Je viens ici, parmi les ignorances franches, parmi l’échange obscur des baisers sous les branches,
parmi les impudeurs naïves, faire un choix.
L’acclimatation d’une femme des bois à la cour, c’est mon rêve, ami!
Gunich.

Si, par prodige,
vous la trouvez…
Le duc Gallus.

Je veux la dévorer, te dis-je.
Gunich.

Je vois ce qu’il vous faut, une femme à croquer.
Le duc Gallus.

Je m’ennuie!
Gunich.

Il serait étrange de manquer de femmes quand on est prince.
Le duc Gallus.

Si, d’aventure,
nous allions déterrer ici la créature!
Je l’espère!
Gunich.

Et le crois. Grattons du bec le sol.
Une allemande avec un regard espagnol habite en ce burg.
Regardant au dehors par une des fenêtres ruinées.
Tiens, à point nommé, c’est elle!
Le duc Gallus.

Regardant par la même fenêtre, avec un geste de stupeur.
Et c’est lui!
Gunich.

Duo.
Le duc Gallus.

C’est mon neveu!
Gunich.

C’est la belle!
Le duc Gallus.

çà, que fait-il céans?
Gunich.

Dame! Il est prétendant.
Je ne suis pas du tout surpris de l’incident.
Vous l’avez dans ces bois mis avec soin vous-même.
Il flâne. Il est vivant, il en profite. Il aime.
Rapportez-vous-en donc aux jocrisses locaux!
Je m’étais renseigné près de tous les échos, j’ignorais ce détail. Chimène a son Rodrigue.
Je comprends. La nature est une immense intrigue;
il aura rencontré la belle, par hasard.
Le hasard, monseigneur, quel dieu! Mais quel gueusard!
Dans les bois on a droit à l’églogue; l’eau coule,
l’air souffle, on est garçon et fille, et l’on roucoule.
Il regarde par la fenêtre.
Ce vieux burg est ainsi construit qu’ils sont forcés de suivre les remparts tout le long des fossés.
Montrant la porte qui ouvre sur l’escalier.
Vous allez les revoir sortir par la tourelle.
Le duc Gallus.

Ah çà, mais me voilà jaloux!
Gunich.

Et de qui?
Le duc Gallus.

D’elle!
De lui!
Gunich.

Vous allez vite en besogne. Comment, vous avez vu, de loin, cette belle, un moment,
prince, et voilà le feu qui prend à votre altesse!
Le duc Gallus.

être vite amoureux, c’est de la politesse.
Et puis, chacun son genre, ami. C’est ma façon, à moi, de me hâter de perdre la raison.
Gunich.

Faites.
Il rit.
Le duc Gallus.

Quoi! L’on m’indique en ce donjon sinistre une belle! J’accours, et tu ne veux pas, cuistre, dadais, triple crétin, qu’en ce pays de loups j’enrage, et que je sois furieux et jaloux!
Je trouve mon neveu qui courtise la dame!
Gunich.

Vous usurpez le trône, il usurpe la femme.
Carambolage.
Le duc Gallus.

Il a la bride sur le cou.
N’étant pas roi, qu’a-t-il besoin d’un garde-fou?

En fait de liberté jamais je ne lésine.
Il est étudiant ici près; il voisine.
Il était sur la piste avant moi. C’est flagrant.
Mais, bah! Je lutterai. Sais-tu qu’il est fort grand, ce petit?
Gunich.

C’est un homme.
Le duc Gallus.

En outre il a l’astuce
d’être beau.
Gunich.

Prétendant à deux tranchants.
Avec un sourire.
Je l’eusse
supprimé.
Le duc Gallus.

Ce garçon est deux fois mon rival.
Gunich.

Droit, mince, il doit avoir bonne mine à cheval.
Le duc Gallus.

En politique il a son droit, et près des femmes sa figure.
Gunich.

Il fallait, lorsque nous triomphâmes, en finir de l’enfant. Certe, ainsi nous eussions dans leur source extirpé les révolutions.
L’obscure pression des successeurs possibles trouble un règne; un amas d’incidents invisibles se forme, et le pouvoir ne peut se maintenir.
Qui veut régner doit faire eunuque l’avenir.

Monseigneur, on verrait du fait qui vous tracasse rire Machiavel.
Le duc Gallus.

Et plus encor Boccace.
Oh! Ce George! Abuser de ce qu’il n’est pas roi pour aimer, profiter de son retrait d’emploi pour me prendre ma place ici. Quelle canaille!
Dois-je persévérer? Faut-il que je m’en aille?
Conclusion : je suis dans un bois, et volé.
Cupidon à Jupin escroque Sémélé.
George est dans le réel, moi je suis dans le rêve.
Satan, jadis, prit-il Adam? Non. Il prit ève.
Adam, c’est la puissance, ève est l’amour. Satan, entre les deux façons qu’on a d’être sultan,
choisissait la meilleure en s’adjugeant la femme.
Moi, j’ai fait le contraire. à présent je réclame.
Trop tard. Empanaché, bardé d’un grand cordon, je suis Mamamouchi battu par Céladon.
Mon neveu rit, je règne; il vit, je me lamente, et j’enrage. Et je vois dans ses mains mon amante au pillage. J’ai l’ombre, il a la proie. Et moi, morbleu, je me sens dupe à force d’être roi!
Gunich.

Prince, vous êtes l’aigle, et vous planez.
Le duc Gallus.

Sans joie.
Le prince est un niais puissant; l’aigle est une oie.
Les palais, la fanfare, et les arcs triomphaux, l’amour des sujets, l’or, le faste, c’est du faux;
le trône nous enferme en son cercle héraldique;
celui qu’on aime est roi; celui qui règne abdique.
Donc, voyant le garçon, beau, jeune, épris, pas vieux…
Gunich.

Vous en êtes jaloux…
Le duc Gallus.

Non. J’en suis envieux!
Vois-tu, l’heureux c’est lui, moi je suis l’imbécile.
Je changerais fort bien avec lui.
Gunich.

C’est facile.
Le duc Gallus.

Non, s’il est aimé.
Gunich.

Quoi! Vous tremblez, vous!
Le duc Gallus.

Moqueur!
Gunich.

Vous, prince!
Le duc Gallus.

On prend un trône, on ne prend pas un cœur.
Pourtant je lutterai.
Gunich.

Mais il est d’autres femmes.
Le duc Gallus.

Non.
Surprenant un ricanement de Gunich.
Sous ta flatterie on sent tes épigrammes.
Tu penses que je suis inepte. Je te dis que mes aïeux livraient bataille un contre dix, qu’étant grison, je dois affronter ce jeune homme,
que j’ignore comment cette fille se nomme, que j’ai marché dans l’herbe et bu dans les ruisseaux, que depuis ce matin j’entends un tas d’oiseaux qui font l’amour dans l’ombre au-dessus de ma tête, que George est bien plus fort que moi, puisqu’il est bête, du moins je le suppose en voyant son succès, que je devrais m’enfuir si je réfléchissais, que puisque cette fille habite une masure elle rêve un palais, qu’elle est vaine, peu sûre, coquette, pauvre, avec des fleurs dans ses cheveux, et que c’est pour cela, butor, que je la veux!

Je te dis qu’il n’est pas d’autre femme sur terre.
Gunich.

Le couple se croit seul en ce burg solitaire, observons-les. J’entends dans l’escalier des pas.
Ce sont eux. Les voilà de retour ici-bas.
Le duc Gallus.

Que de choses seront à la mort révélées!
On saura le secret du vent, des giboulées, des roses, de l’instinct féminin et viril,
des madrigaux dont est formé le mois d’avril!
L’œil tourné vers l’escalier.
Ils descendent du ciel en effet. Quelle ivresse, être deux amoureux! Que Chloé soit traîtresse, qu’importe! Daphnis bête est un heureux berger.
Paraissent George et Nella. Ils descendent l’escalier de la tourelle, George le premier, donnant la main à Nella. Le duc Gallus et Gunich se retirent en arrière de la tourelle, de façon à n’être pas aperçus. De ce recoin, le duc ne voit que George. Nella reste sous la porte de la tourelle debout sur la dernière marche de l’escalier. Le duc contemple la bonne mine de George.
Décidément, vingt ans, c’est charmant. C’est léger.
George est beau.

SCENE II

George.

Nella!
Nella.

George! — ami, je vous renvoie.
George.

à bientôt.
Nella.

Oui. Prenez garde qu'on ne vous voie.
Quel malheur que je sois fille noble!
George.

Et que moi
je sois roturier!
Nella.

George!
George.

Oh! Je ne sais pourquoi, mais je fais en moi-même un roman. J'imagine que je ne connais point au vrai mon origine.
J'ai le pressentiment d'un destin inconnu.
Mais non, je ne suis rien que le premier venu.
J'ose vous adorer. Nella.
Le duc gallus, à part.
Quelle bravoure!
Nella.

Profitez du moment où mon père laboure
au fond de son enclos, et fuyez par le bois.

Le duc gallus, à gunich.
Son père? Est-ce un soldat, ou bien un villageois?
Par la fenêtre il montre à Gunich quelqu’un au dehors.
C’est ce bon vieux là-bas courbé sur sa charrue.
George.

Vous êtes sur ma cendre une flamme apparue;
sans vous je ne vis pas. Quand pourrai-je, à genoux, vous épouser?
Nella.

Hélas! Je ne sais. Cachez-vous.
Mon père est encor plein d’orgueil nobiliaire.
George.

Le donjon vieillissant n’a pas honte du lierre.
Pourquoi ce vétéran me repousserait-il?
Mon chaste amour ressemble à son farouche exil.
Nous serions là, devant son front que l’âge ploie, nous aimant, et quel mal lui ferait notre joie?
Nella.

Il est bon. Attendons. Dieu nous aidera.
George.

Non.
J’accuse Dieu. Pourquoi suis-je un homme sans nom?
Nella.

Ami!
George.

Mon âme est franche et mon destin est louche.
Nella.

George!
Le duc Gallus fait des efforts pour voir Nella sans y parvenir.

Le duc gallus, à part.
Entendre la voix, c’est presque voir la bouche.
C’est égal. Maudit mur!
George.

Ah! Sort infortuné!
Pourquoi suis-je puni? Parce que je suis né.
Il fallait naître noble. Hélas, le grain de sable est-il de son néant coupable et responsable?
Ah! Quel accablement! J’aime au-dessus de moi.
Nella.

Mon George!
George.

J’ai le cœur trop haut!
Nella.

Tu serais roi,
t’aimerais-je mieux?
George.

Non. Mais tu serais ma femme.
Nella.

George, dites-moi vous. Ne troublez pas mon âme.
Vous serez le mari, ne soyez pas l’amant!
Respectez-moi.
George.

Nella, laissez-moi seulement déposer un baiser sur votre main.
Nella.

J’exige
que vous soyez sage.
George.

Oui.
Elle est restée sur l’escalier. George est hors de la tourelle.
Nella tend son bras nu par la lucarne. Il lui prend la main.
Nella.

Soyez sage, vous dis-je!
George.

Un seul baiser.
Il lui baise la main avec emportement.
Le duc gallus, à part.
Trois, quatre! — ah! Tu me le paieras.
Je suis éperdument amoureux de ce bras.
George.

Adieu, mon âme!
Nella.

Adieu, mon cœur!
George.

Quand reviendrai-je?
Nella.

Demain.
George.

Non. Aujourd’hui.
George furtivement et sans regarder s’esquive par une des fenêtres qui font brèche.
Le duc Gallus et Gunich s’effacent dans l’ombre de la tourelle. Il ne les voit pas. Nella reste seule. On la voit dans l’escalier de la tourelle, pensive, cherchant par la lucarne à voir encore de loin George, qui a disparu.
Le duc gallus, à part.

Le paradis, quel piège!
Comme ils sont pris! L’amour est le profond jardin au fond duquel est Dieu caché. Bravo l’éden!
Toute cette ombre aimable est d’aube pénétrée.
Il s’agit maintenant d’y faire mon entrée.
Quaerens quem devoret. C’est moi. — George, mon cher, on vous aime, mais bah! La beauté c’est la chair, la femme c’est la faute; et vous avez le charme,
jeune homme, vous avez l’amour; mais j’ai mon arme, l’expérience. Ami, vous allez en avant, beau, tendre, frais, naïf. Moi, je suis le savant, l’artiste. Il est ardent, moi calme. Il a l’ivresse, j’ai l’appétit.
Cependant Nella est sortie de la tourelle; elle fait quelques pas, et s’arrête, sans voir Gallus et Gunich. Le duc la montre à Gunich.
Comment trouves-tu ma maîtresse?
Gunich salue profondément le dos de Nella, immobile sur le devant du théâtre.
Le duc Gallus regarde par la fenêtre d’où il a aperçu le père travaillant dans les champs.
Le pauvre père est dupe, et George tient Nella!
Gunich.

Nous venons au secours du père. Enlevons-la.
Vous êtes roi; je suis un baron pour tout faire.
Donc…
Le duc Gallus fait un signe de tête négatif.
Le duc Gallus.

J’ai l’attraction. Je suis la haute sphère.
Passer près d’elle doit suffire.
Nella, allant à une armoire.
Et mon couvert
qui n’est pas mis!
Elle tire de l’armoire une nappe de grosse toile très blanche qu’elle étale sur la table, puis des vaisselles et des gobelets d’étain, un pot de lait et un pain bis, qu’elle dispose avec symétrie, puis deux assiettes et deux cuillers de fer, et elle place deux chaises devant les deux assiettes.

Le duc Gallus la contemple. Gunich et lui sont restés au fond de la salle.
Elle ne se doute pas de leur présence.
Le duc gallus, à gunich.
Va-t’en rêver dans le bois vert.
Nella, se dépêchant.
Mon père va rentrer.
Le duc gallus, à gunich.
Laisse-nous. Herborise.
Gunich fait une nouvelle révérence au dos de Nella, et sort.

SCENE III

Le duc gallus, s’avançant et saluant.
Madame… — Nella se retourne et le regarde.
à part.
Elle a grand air. Elle n’est pas surprise.
Haut à Nella.
Je suis un voyageur qui passe. S’il vous plaît, pourrait-on ici boire une tasse de lait?
En payant?
Nella.

Sans payer. Oui, monsieur.
Elle verse du lait dans un gobelet.
Le duc s’assied sur une des deux chaises, et boit une gorgée de lait. Nella va et vient dans la salle, rangeant les meubles et serrant du linge dans les bahuts sans s’occuper de lui.
Le duc gallus, lorgnant la masure.
Pierre et briques.
édifice à classer parmi les historiques.
Lorgnant la fille.
— vingt ans. De trop grands yeux, et de trop petits pieds.
Revenant à l’inspection du logis.
— des ancêtres cassés. Des preux estropiés.
Force héros sans nez, perdus dans les décombres.
Ce mélange imposant de Charlemagnes sombres, de Barberousses morts, de Christs, de Jéhovahs, de saints, que le vulgaire appelle des gravats.
L’auguste bric-à-brac, épars sous la fougère, que l’histoire plus tard met sur son étagère.
Une commission de savants trouverait regardant le chiendent qui pousse entre les pavés.
à camper dans cette herbe énormément d’attrait.
L’humidité triomphe, et fait sous ce portique

prospérer la grenouille, animal aquatique.
Tous les siècles moisis ensemble. Que c'est beau!
La ruine vraiment vaut presque le tombeau.
C'est superbe. Les goths, les romains, les sicambres.
Des pierres dans le blé, du gazon dans les chambres, un burg, quoi! C'est là, certe, un rare monument, où l'on doit s'ennuyer épouvantablement.
Lorgnant Nella.
 — divine! Un brin de fleur, et la voilà coiffée!
Haut à Nella.
 — mademoiselle, on voit dans les contes de fée des belles, comme vous, que garde en une tour un dragon, et pour qui des rois meurent d'amour, et que viennent sauver des paladins bravaches.
 — ah çà! Que faites-vous ici?
Nella.

Je trais les vaches.
Le duc Gallus.

Traire les vaches. Soit. Il est d'autres bonheurs.
Que faites-vous après?
Nella.

Je porte aux moissonneurs leur dîner dans les champs.
Le duc Gallus.

Après, belle pensive?
Nella.

Je lave à la fontaine et je fais la lessive.
Le duc Gallus.

Ah! Grâce pour ces mains charmantes! — puis après?
Nella.

Je balaie, et je range au cellier nos oeufs frais.
Le duc Gallus.

Après?
Nella.

J’ai ma quenouille, ou bien je raccommode ma robe.
Le duc Gallus.

Qui n’est pas tout à fait à la mode.
Nella.

Je ne sais pas.
Le duc Gallus.

Après?
Nella.

Quand mon père, à pas lents…
Elle montre la fenêtre d’où le duc a déjà aperçu le père.
— regardez, — on le voit d’ici. — ces cheveux blancs! — quand il rentre le soir, je tiens la table prête, je mets la nappe.
Le duc Gallus.

Et puis?
Nella.

Nous soupons tête à tête.
Le duc Gallus.

De pain bis?
Nella.

Et de lait.
Le duc Gallus.

C’est là tout le gala?
Nella.

Puis je lui lis un peu de ces gros livres-là.
Elle montre les livres sur le bahut qui touche à la table. Le duc tourne la tête et, sans se lever, regarde les titres des livres sur les dossiers des volumes.
Le duc gallus, déchiffrant.
Homère. Grotius. Polybe, la Genèse.
Nella.

Ou bien, tout en causant, je couds près de sa chaise, et, le travail faisant des trous à ses habits,
je les lui double avec de la peau de brebis.
Puis mon père me tend ses bottes, je les ôte.
Le duc Gallus.

Ensuite?
Nella.

Ensuite on fait la prière à voix haute.
Il m’embrasse, et l’on va dormir.
Le duc gallus, se levant.
C’est tout?
Nella.

C’est tout.
Le duc s’approche d’un air insinuant avec un sourire d’intelligence.
Le duc Gallus.

Qu’avez-vous dans l’esprit?
Nella.

Croire en Dieu.

Le duc Gallus.

C’est beaucoup.
Nella se remet à faire le ménage de la salle.
Après un silence.
Vous devez par instants vous sentir sérieuse?
Vous êtes…
Nella.

Je ne suis pas même curieuse.
J’ignore votre nom.
Avec une révérence fière.
Soyez le bien venu.
Le duc gallus, souriant.
Le bonheur est parfois caché dans l’inconnu.
Se rapprochant.
Rêvez-vous? Pensez-vous?
Nella.

Penser, c’est trop. J’espère.
Le duc gallus, accentuant son sourire.
Mais, belle, il faut aimer quelqu’un.
Nella.

J’aime mon père.
Le duc Gallus.

Mais par des cheveux blancs tout le cœur n’est pas pris.
Nella, le regardant.
J’aime les cheveux blancs, et non les cheveux gris.
Maintenant, s’il vous plaît, je vais serrer mon linge.
Le duc gallus, à part.
Une gazelle ayant de l’esprit comme un singe!
Nella retourne à ses occupations d’intérieur. Elle remet la ruine en ordre le plus qu’elle peut. Elle va et vient, sans faire attention au duc.

Le duc gallus, se rasseyant.
Ah çà, je n’aime point voir des enterrements.
Ces yeux profonds et bleus comme des firmaments, cette fraîcheur timide, et cette rougeur fière,
ce front rose qui semble un lever de lumière,
tout cela n’est pas fait pour garder la maison.
Je crois en vous voyant voir l’aurore en prison.
Oui, vous êtes l’aurore, et vous êtes esclave dans la nuit! Au cachot, seule au fond d’une cave, chez ce bonhomme affreux qu’on appelle l’hiver.
La beauté c’est le fruit, l’indigence est le ver.
Regardant la masure.
Burg sinistre! Où donc est ton échelle. ô Latude!
à Nella.
— tel que vous me voyez, j’aime la solitude,
à la condition de ne pas être seul. — croupir! Devenir laide! Autant vaut le linceul.
Viviane se change en Toinon dans ces bouges.
La taille s’épaissit, les bras deviennent rouges.
Guerre à cet oppresseur infâme, le corset!
Je viens vous annoncer une nouvelle, c’est
qu’il existe des lieux charmants; c’est que Versailles, Potsdam, Schoenbrunn, ont mis l’Olympe en leurs broussailles c’est qu’il est des palais; c’est qu’il est des bosquets;

c’est qu’au seuil d’une idylle il faut de grands laquais;
c’est que le buisson, l’herbe, et la bruyère, et l’arbre, ne sont beaux que mêlés à des nymphes de marbre;
c’est qu’un torrent est laid, et qu’au fond du vallon l’eau doit se comporter comme dans un salon;
c’est qu’Homère et Milton ne sont que des maroufles faits pour passer le temps à chanter vos pantoufles;
c’est qu’il est un devoir, l’oisiveté, pour ceux qu’enivre la langueur des appas paresseux;
c’est que les beaux habits sont beaux; c’est que les femmes doivent être de poupre et d’or, comme les flammes, car toutes ont pour loi de brûler à leur tour

dans l’immense incendie universel, l’amour!
Je viens vous annoncer que vous êtes déesse;
que la beauté, cet astre, a pour ciel la richesse, et que sur cette terre, ancien fief de Vénus, où, pour voir deux beaux yeux et baiser deux pieds nus,
le pape donnerait Rome, et moi, Babylone, vous avez une jupe en serge à dix sous l’aune!
Montrant tour à tour Nella et le burg.
Je ne suis pas Dieu. Non. Mais pour lui je rougis que faisant de tels yeux, il fasse un tel logis!
Morbleu! Faut-il qu’on rie, ou bien faut-il qu’on pleure?
Vous êtes la beauté suprême, pour demeure vous avez la tristesse horrible! C’est complet.
Ma parole d’honneur, si j’avais un valet maladroit comme Dieu, laissant de sa fenêtre
tomber le pot de fleurs où le lys vient de naître et cassant un destin charmant sur le pavé, cachant dans un taudis l’être qu’on a rêvé, brouillant tout, faussant tout, faisant traire les vaches à Psyché, j’userais sur son dos vingt cravaches!
Dieu se moque de nous, tristes fils de Japhet!
Il s’est levé et, comme par mégarde, laisse s’écarter son habit de voyage sous lequel on entrevoit sa plaque et son grand cordon.
Nella.

Monsieur, si vous croyez me faire de l’effet parce que vous ouvrez votre habit de manière à montrer un crachat sous votre boutonnière et dans votre gilet le coin d’un cordon bleu, vous vous trompez.
Elle va au coin où est la voussure, et écarte les deux volets fermés. En tournant sur leurs gonds, ils découvrent un tableau qui est le portrait en pied d’un homme de guerre en grand uniforme, couvert de décorations et de broderies, avec un grand cordon, le même que porte le duc.

 — voici mon grand-père.
Le duc Gallus.

Vrai Dieu!
C’est un feld-maréchal.
Nella.

Parfaitement.
Le duc Gallus.

Vous êtes?…
Nella.

Sa petite-fille.
Elle salue le portrait avec gravité, puis se redresse.
Oui. Les tambours, les trompettes l’annonçaient. Maintenant, il dort dans son linceul.
Les autres généraux l’admiraient. Mon aïeul étant le plus prudent était le plus terrible.
Il était infaillible, il était invincible.
Et l’empereur, présent, voulait qu’il commandât.
Le duc Gallus.

Et son fils, votre père?…
Nella.

Est un simple soldat.
Elle salue de nouveau le portrait, puis se retourne vers le duc.
Mon père est le baron d’Holburg. La destinée l’avait brisé déjà que je n’étais pas née.
On n’apprend point l’histoire aux femmes, c’est pourquoi je ne vous dirai pas si ce fut pour le roi ou l’empereur, si c’est pour la Prusse ou l’Autriche, qu’étant noble, il donna son sang, et qu’étant riche, il donna son argent jusqu’au dernier écu;
je sais qu’il eut le tort d’être pour le vaincu.

Le vainqueur le frappa. L’on mit sous le séquestre ses fiefs seigneuriaux rayés de l’ordre équestre, puis on le fit soldat. Ce burg fut son exil.
Tout paysan pour lui devint un alguazil;
les murs tombent, hélas, et les cœurs dégénèrent.
Ceux qu’il avait jadis nourris, l’espionnèrent.
Mon père n’eut plus droit de porter l’éperon.
Défense de lui dire excellence ou baron.
Il laboure son champ. Lui, cousin des margraves, quoiqu’il fût le plus brave au milieu des vieux braves,
les jeunes officiers n’ont pas l’air de le voir.
Il fait le blé, je fais le pain. Calme, le soir, il s’en revient, traînant le soc parmi les plaines,
tandis que le soleil descend dans les grands chênes.
Nous buvons l’eau du ciel qui remplit le fossé.
Il ne parle jamais de ce qui s’est passé;
si quelqu’un par hasard lui fait une demande,
il répond : j’ai servi la patrie allemande,
et se retire, un peu plus fier qu’auparavant.
Il songe volontiers dans les bois pleins de vent.
Il a le front pensif de l’homme qui persiste.
Il est vieux, seul, vaincu, proscrit. Il n’est pas triste.
On sent qu’il porte en lui la cause juste. Il croit.
à mesure que l’ombre autour de lui s’accroît je vois dans sa prunelle augmenter la lumière.
Son donjon lentement devient une chaumière.
Il regarde souvent ce portrait, son trésor;
l’épaulette de laine à l’épaulette d’or raconte son histoire et parle de la guerre, et je vois mon aïeul qui sourit à mon père.
N’ayant pas de quoi mettre une tuile à son toit, mon père dans sa chambre en ruine reçoit l’averse quand il pleut et le froid quand il vente, et moi je suis sa fille et je suis sa servante, et c’est ce qu’on appelle être un homme déchu.
Le duc gallus, à part.
En entrant je voulais chiffonner ce fichu;

maintenant, — est-ce donc le sol qui se dérobe? —
je suis prêt à baiser le bas de cette robe.
Haut à Nella.
Je ne suis pas très fort en histoire non plus.
Votre père appartient aux âges révolus.
Mais, voyons, qu'a-t-il fait?
Nella.

De ce qu'a fait mon père,
je ne sais rien du tout, sinon que j'en suis fière.
Le duc Gallus.

L'empereur pourrait, tout étant calme aujourd'hui, lui faire grâce.
Nella.

Hein? Lui faire grâce! à lui!
Lui seul aurait le droit de faire grâce aux autres.
De qui donc croyez-vous parler?
Le duc Gallus.

De l'un des nôtres.
D'un seigneur.
Nella.

Les seigneurs sont aussi courtisans.
Point. Nous sommes, mon père et moi, des paysans.
Mon père est un soldat, je suis une vachère.
Notre chute profonde et haute nous est chère.
Ah! Lui peut s'appuyer aussi sur mon honneur!
Mon père est en dépôt dans mes mains. Son bonheur est mon devoir. Je sais que je dois être forte.
Je suis le seul débris de sa famille morte;
il n'a que moi. Vivez, vous les hommes dorés!
Oui, mes vaches, je vais les traire dans les prés.
J'aime leurs grands yeux bleus qu'on dirait pleins d'un rêve;
elles donnent leur lait à vous tous; je me lève de grand matin, je cours, je saute les fossés, je me mouille les pieds dans l’herbe; je ne sais

si le roi Frédéric combat l’empereur Charle;
mais elles, dans les champs, m’attendent; je leur parle;
chacune semble heureuse et gaie en m’écoutant;
elles lèchent mes mains, et j’ai le cœur content dans la grande nature, et loin de vos chimères, moi bonne fille, avec toutes ces bonnes mères.
Le duc gallus, à part.
Je ne sais pas pourquoi je tremble comme un sot.
Serais-je un honnête homme à mon insu? L’assaut!
Vite! Donnons l’assaut.
Haut à Nella.
Que diriez-vous, madame,
d’un prince qui voudrait vous apporter son âme,
son rang, ses millions, son nom grand et vainqueur?
Nella.

Le nom est quelquefois le contraire du cœur;
nom auguste, esprit vil; nom obscur, âme illustre.
Parfois le pâtre est prince et le monarque est rustre.
Ici c’est l’ombre. On n’a pas vu, dans ce manoir, de princes, et l’on trouve inutile d’en voir,
et j’ai toujours pensé, quant à moi, qu’une altesse, c’était de la grandeur, mais de la petitesse.
Le duc gallus, à part.
Brusquons.
Haut.
Vous devez, car il faut bien être heureux,
avoir un amant.
Nella, le regardant fixement.
Moi!
Le duc Gallus.

Pardon. Un amoureux.
Nella.

De quoi vous mêlez-vous? Venez-vous des étoiles pour oser regarder l’âme à travers ses voiles!
Si j’aime, mon amour s’ajoute à mon orgueil.
Il est pur, grave et fier, et ma mère au cercueil le sait, en attendant que mon père le sache.
L’innocence se voile et la faute se cache.
Je ne me cache pas. Aimer est ma grandeur.
Mon secret est sans honte et n’est pas sans pudeur.
Mon cœur cherche la nuit, mais ne craint pas le blâme.
L’œil de Dieu reste ouvert dans l’ombre de mon âme.
Le duc veut parler. Elle lui impose silence du geste.
Je comprends. Une fille est chez un paysan.
On se dit : allons-y.
Elle lui montre la porte.
C’est bien. Allez-vous-en.
Le duc se lève.
On n’entre pas ici par une ligne courbe.
Ah! Je sais distinguer le cœur vrai du cœur fourbe.
L’ange et le tentateur n’ont pas la même voix;
le loup n’est pas le chien fidèle; et dans les bois le chant du rossignol n’est pas le cri du merle.
Le duc Gallus.

Je cherche un grain de mil, et je trouve une perle.
Attrapé.
Nella.

Sortez.
Le duc Gallus.

Mais…
à part.
Je suis chassé.
Entre George par la brèche, essoufflé, sans voir le duc.

SCENE IV

George.

J’accours.
C’est moi. Pour peu d’instants, et des instants bien courts!
J’en profite. Je viens. Ah! Loin de vous, que faire?
Puis-je entrer?
Nella, à part.
Grand Dieu! George! Et cet homme!
Le baron d’Holburg paraît à la porte du fond; vieux, en habit de soldat, avec une souquenille de laboureur.
Et mon père!
Je tremble.
Le baron d’Holburg.
, apercevant le duc.
Un étranger!
Nella, au baron d’holburg.
Montrant le duc.
Je lui dis de sortir.
Le duc gallus, au baron d’holburg.
C’est vous le père? Eh bien, je dois vous avertir que ces deux jeunes gens s’aiment.
Il montre George.
George.

Quel est cet homme?
Nella.

Ciel!
George, au duc.
Qu’êtes-vous, monsieur? Sachez que je me nomme
George.

Le duc Gallus.

C’est bon. On sait mieux que vous votre nom.
S’adressant au baron d’Holburg stupéfait.
Quand vous tournez le dos, ce jeune compagnon
— le scrupule aux amants ne pèse pas une once, — vient voir mademoiselle, et je vous les dénonce.
Je viens d’être témoin d’un de leurs rendez-vous.
George.

Quel est cet espion?
Le duc gallus, continuant. Au baron d’holburg.
Monsieur fait les yeux doux.
Mademoiselle, avec réserve, les accepte.
Le baron d’Holburg.
.
Ma fille! Est-il possible!
Le duc Gallus.

Il faudrait être inepte
pour ignorer qu’avril est le mois des amours, que la douceur des nuits suit la beauté des jours, qu’un souffle est dans les bois, qu’il faut que tout renaisse, que c’est la volonté de Dieu que la jeunesse sente la pression amoureuse du ciel, qu’avoir vingt ans oblige, et qu’il est naturel qu’un baiser, envié par les nids du burg sombre, tombe sur le bras blanc qu’on entrevoit dans l’ombre.
Nella, rougissante et suppliante.
Monsieur…
Le duc gallus, poursuivant. Au baron.
Moi je suis là, je passe, j’aperçois, je viens vous informer du fait.
George, au duc.
Qui que tu sois,
ce que tu viens de dire, entends-tu, c’est l’épée,
la dague et le poignard, l’herbe de sang trempée,
sans quartier, tout de suite, et j’en fais le serment, et regarde-moi bien en face fixement, tu te rétracteras syllabe par syllabe!

Ton nom?
Le duc Gallus.

Je suis Gallus, landgrave de Souabe, le frère du feu duc régnant George premier.
L’aigle à deux têtes prend son vol sur mon cimier.
L’Allemagne n’a pas de famille plus grande.
Il salue profondément le baron.
Et, monsieur le baron d’Holburg, je vous demande en mariage ici votre fille Nella pour mon neveu le duc George deux montrant George.
Que voilà.
4 janvier 1869.

ESCA, DRAME

ACTE PREMIER : LISON

une route sur le versant d’une colline boisée. La colline monte et occupe le fond du théâtre. La route passe au premier plan, tourne, puis reparaît au second plan à mi-côte parmi les arbres où elle se perd. En bas, à droite, une maisonnette couverte de chaume, très propre et très pauvre. Un court sentier de traverse, qui n’a que quelques enjambées, sur le talus de la colline, met en communication le tronçon de route du premier plan avec le tronçon du deuxième plan. Gros arbres çà et là autour de la maison. Devant la maison, sous un arbre et dans un massif de roses, une source encadrée d’une margelle de grosses pierres frustes. La cabane, très basse, n’a qu’un rez-de-chaussée. Au lever du rideau, deux voitures cheminent sur la route; l’une , sur le tronçon supérieur, est une charrette chargée de fumier, attelée d’un âne et menée par un paysan en blouse juché sur le fumier; l’autre, sur le tronçon inférieur, au premier plan, est un coche de voyage et de gala, tout doré, blasonné d’armoiries, surmonté d’une couronne princière, avec glaces, et intérieur de satin, traîné par quatre chevaux empanachés, harnachés de bossages d’or, avec postillons et laquais. Dans la voiture est Gallus. On aperçoit Gunich dans le compartiment du devant. La porte de la chaumière est fermée; la fenêtre est ouverte. Une jeune fille, dans le demi-désordre d’une toilette commencée, se peigne devant la fenêtre. C’est Lison. On voit l’intérieur d’une chambre indigente. Beau soleil. Printemps.

ACTE PREMIER : LISON, SCENE PREMIERE

Gallus, se penchant à la portière du carrosse.
Oh! La charmante fille!
Lison, se penchant à la fenêtre de la chaumière.
Oh! La belle voiture!
Le carrosse passe et disparaît à droite. La charrette s'arrête. Harou en descend, son fouet à la main. Il dégringole par le sentier qui abrège, court à la chaumière et frappe à la porte d'un coup de sabot. Il a son fouet à la main.
Harou.

Il est neuf heures.
Lison, par la fenêtre.
Ah! C'est vous.
Harou.

Oui, ma future.
Lison.

C'est bon.
Elle jette un fichu sur ses épaules nues, et elle ouvre la porte.
Harou entre.
Harou.

Vous n'êtes pas encor prête?
Lison.

Pardi!
Harou.

Mais monsieur le curé nous attend à midi.
Lison.

Bien.
Harou.

L’autel est paré. C’est comme aux grandes fêtes.
Lison.

Bon.
Harou.

De cette cabane isolée où vous êtes, jusqu’à l’église…
Lison.

Eh bien?
Harou.

C’est encor loin. Allons, vite. Habillez-vous.
Lison.

Oui.
Harou.

J’aurai deux violons.
Lison.

Bien.
Harou.

Je vais décharger mon fumier, puis je rentre vous prendre en ma charrette avec Thibaut, le chantre.
Lison.

Soit.
Harou.

Mamz’elle Lison…
Lison.

Dites Lisa.
Harou.

Lisa.
Vous êtes vertueuse, et c'est pour ça.
Lison.

Pour ça,
que quoi?
Harou.

Que je vous aime et que je vous épouse.
Vous avez du bonheur, hein? Plus d'une est jalouse.
Vous sentez bien que moi qui suis un gros fermier, ayant acquêts et baux francs de droit coutumier, c'est à qui m'aura. Vous, vous êtes sans famille.
être madame Harou, quel sort pour une fille!
Avoir six cents arpents de blé, trois cents de foin!
Et dire, en regardant tout le pays très loin :
c'est à moi! Voyez-vous, vous êtes orpheline, pas un brin d'herbe n'est à vous sur la colline,
et vous êtes sans dot comme la fleur des champs.
Cela n'amuse pas les gens qui sont méchants de voir que je vous prends pour femme. ça les fâche.
Vous n'étiez qu'une pauvre ouvrière à la tâche, seule, et dont les parents sont morts sur des grabats,
gagnant six sous par jour à ravauder des bas.
Vous allez devenir bourgeoise, et cette chambre où vous gelez, pas vrai, dès le mois de novembre, vous l'allez changer contre un bon logis, ma foi,
où vous serez chez vous bien qu'en étant chez moi,
et d'où vous pourrez voir la mare avec les vignes, et des canards si gros qu'on les prend pour des cygnes!
Ah! Les commères font du train! Moi, bon luron, tout ce tas d'oiseaux noirs qui bat de l'aileron,
parce qu'elles voudraient être ce que vous êtes, me fait rire. Piaillez, mesdames les chouettes!

Quand demain, bras dessus dessous, nous passerons, cela fera sortir du trou leurs gros yeux ronds.
ça sera farce. Et vous, vous prendrez un air crâne, vous direz : ma maison, mon champ, mon pré, mon âne.
Et puis du cidre! Et puis du pain, plein le buffet!
Moi, j’ai de l’amitié pour vous. C’est ce qui fait que j’épouse. Sur vous, du reste, rien à dire.
Vous n’avez qu’un défaut, c’est que vous savez lire.
Moi pas. Ah! Par exemple, il faudra travailler.
étant maîtresse, on est servante. S’éveiller au chant du coq, couper le seigle ou la fougère, être bonne faucheuse et bonne ménagère,
manier gentiment la fourche à tour de bras,
laver les murs, laver les lits, laver les draps, donner à boire aux gars ayant au dos leurs pioches,
blanchir l’âtre, écumer le pot, moucher les mioches, porter, si le chemin est long et raboteux,
ses souliers à la main, les pieds s’usant moins qu’eux, et vivre ainsi pieds nus et riche, heureuse en somme d’être une brave femme et d’avoir un brave homme.
Nos bans sont publiés. Je vous ai fait cadeau d’un parapluie, afin que, s’il tombe trop d’eau, on ne s’en serve point, parce qu’il est en soie.
Et nous nous marions tantôt. Vive la joie!
Donc, mamz’elle, à midi, l’église. à minuit…
Il fait claquer ses doigts.
— bien!
Vous êtes un peu maigre. Ah! Cela ne fait rien.
En mangeant du gigot, de la soupe bien chaude,
du lard, avec le temps vous deviendrez rougeaude.
La viande, voyez-vous, c’est ça qui fait la chair.
Vous étiez mal nourrie. Au fait, tout est si cher!
Le moyen qu’une fille, en mangeant peu, soit belle!
Sans chardon, l’âne geint. Sans pré, le mouton bêle.
Nous serons très heureux. Moi, j’aurai soin des boeufs, vous des cochons. Des fois, l’étable, c’est bourbeux, dame, on pataugera dans la paille mouillée.

Bah!
Lison, à part.
On nous a souvent, le soir, à la veillée, dit des contes de fée où l’on voit qu’au printemps il arrive parfois aux filles de vingt ans de trouver au milieu de leur chambre un jeune homme portant un astre au front, qui leur dit : je me nomme le prince Azur, je t’offre un palais où tout rit, chante et danse, je t’aime, et je suis un esprit.
Considérant maître Harou.
Ce n’est pas ça.
Harou.

Je veux vous donner douze, oui, douze!
Chemises en bon fil.
Montrant sa manche.
Pareilles à ma blouse.
Lison, à part.
En toile à torchon!
Harou.

Moi…
Gallus et Gunich, enveloppés de manteaux, passent au fond du théâtre et s’arrêtent derrière les arbres, en observation.
Lison, regardant Harou et reculant.
Quelle odeur!
Harou.

Moi, fermier, je…
Lison.

Que sentez-vous donc? Pouah!
Harou.

Rien. C’est le fumier.

ça ne sent pas mauvais.
Il s’approche d’elle galamment.
Vous n’êtes pas commode.
J’aime ça. L’autre jour, j’ai, puisque c’est la mode, voulu vous embrasser, moi mauvais chenapan,
mais vous m’avez donné juste en plein museau, pan!
Une pichenette! Ah! Comme vous m’attrapâtes!
Il rit et cherche à l’embrasser; elle recule.
Lison, le repoussant.
Ah! Pardon. Vous avez des mains!
Harou, riant plus fort.
De bonnes pattes,
hein?
Il rit et étale ses mains.
ça travaille.
Il les retourne toutes hâlées des deux côtés.
C’est de la bonne noirceur.
Lison se remet à se peigner.
Lison.

Dire que je n’ai pas une mère, une sœur, pour m’habiller le jour de ma noce!
Harou.

L’usage
est qu’une du pays lace votre corsage.
Lison.

Je ne veux de personne.
Harou.

Oui. Vous êtes ainsi.
Quelle sauvage humeur de vous loger ici!
Seule, en cette cabane au bout de la vallée!
Lison.

J’ai ce choix : ici seule; au village isolée.

étant pauvre, on n’a pas d’amis, et j’aime mieux
voir le désert au fond des bois qu’au fond des yeux.
Harou.

Vous avez un parler trop haut. ça vient, je gage, des livres. Quand on lit, ça gâte le langage.
Mais j’y mettrai bon ordre. Ah! Dans le temps ancien…
Lison, pensive et regardant un livre qui est sur sa table.
En fait de livre ici, je n’ai qu’un paroissien.
à part.
Savoir lire, à quoi bon? Pour lire de la messe!
Fi!
Harou, faisant claquer son fouet.
Je serai le maître, et j’en fais la promesse.
Il rit.
çà, pour vous épouser il faut que je sois fou, moi qui suis riche, et vous qui n’avez pas le sou;
mais l’homme est un nigaud que la femme ensorcelle, hein, mam’zelle Lison?
Lison.

Dites mademoiselle
Lisa.
à part.
Grossier pain bis, va!
Harou.

Convenablement,
je suis moins que mari, mais je suis plus qu’amant.
Un baiser.
Il s’approche. Elle le repousse vivement.
Lison.

Jamais!
Harou, éclatant de rire.
Oh! Jamais!
Il regarde à une grosse montre d’argent qu’il a sous sa blouse.

çà, je babille.
Il faut vous habiller. Il faut que je m'habille.
Lison, le regardant de côté.
Je crois que pour cravate il a sa corde à puits.
Harou.

Faire un brin de toilette est nécessaire, et puis, vous, pendant ce temps-là, ma-de-moi-selle-Lise, avec un clin d'œil.
— est-ce ça? — parez-vous. Puis, en route, à l'église, gens de la noce! — et puis, ce soir,
avec un geste galant qui l'effarouche.
Plus de fichu!
Il fait claquer son fouet. Il escalade le sentier, rejoint la route d'en haut, remonte dans la charrette et s'assoit sur le fumier. Il crie.
Je vais venir vous prendre en ma voiture. — hu!
Lison, seule.
Elle ôte son fichu, et n'a plus que sa chemise et un jupon.
Elle divise et natte ses cheveux.
C'est là le malaisé. Je suis une rêveuse.
Elle ouvre un tiroir de commode.
Habillons-nous.
Elle prend dans la commode quelques hardes, et s'arrête.
Ma tête est obscure, et se creuse.
Dire que je n'ai pas encor pris mon parti!
Elle tire de la commode une coiffure de mariée en fleurs d'oranger.
Souvent d'un oui, d'un non, on s'est bien repenti.
Dans une heure il sera trop tard.
Elle déplie une robe de grosse laine neuve, propre et laide.
L'ennui me ronge!
Elle met sur un escabeau une paire de gros souliers de femme, neufs.
Pas de destin auquel on ne préfère un songe!
Elle regarde la robe, les souliers et les fleurs d'oranger.
Que faire?
Elle se remet à natter ses cheveux.

Ce bouvier est honnête. — et hideux.
Elle les roule en tresse.
Lui, soit.
Elle les rattache en couronne sur sa tête.
J’avais pourtant rêvé le ciel à deux!
Elle interrompt sa toilette et médite.
Aimer, comme c’est bon! S’idôlâtrer sans cesse!
Et n’être pas trop pauvre! Ah! C’est beau, la richesse!
La vraie! En plein. Oui, tout! Pas l’épaisse façon d’être riche à peu près qu’a ce pauvre garçon.
Sa femme ira pieds nus. Les souliers s’usent, dame!
Moi, je consens très bien aux pieds nus de la femme,
à la condition du tapis de velours.
Et ces poignets! Ces gens de campagne sont lourds!
Il faut, pour cet hymen de l’âme avec l’étoile
qu’on nomme Amour, un lit, pas en trop grosse toile, un nuage où l’on flotte, on ne sait quel vivant char d’aurore emporté par le rêve et le vent, et pas plus de travail que l’oiseau sur la branche!
Pensive.
L’œil est d’autant plus doux que la main est plus blanche.
L’amour, dit l’Amadis de monsieur de Tressan, c’est la vie. Et je hais le parler paysan.
Ouvrière. Orpheline. Oh! Je songe, et Dieu laisse entrer dans mon œil trouble un regard de duchesse, et j’ai des visions folles, plaire, charmer, être libre, être belle, être adorée! Aimer!
Elle se remet à sa toilette.
Elle prend la coiffure de mariée et regarde les quatre murs de sa chambre.
Je n’ai pas de miroir, tant je suis misérable!
Elle sort de la chaumière, et va au puits de la source.
Si Dieu n’avait pas mis cette eau sous cet érable, je n’aurais pas moyen de me coiffer, vraiment.
Elle se mire dans l’eau, tout en ajustant sa coiffure.
La fleur d’oranger. Peuh! — la rose, c’est charmant.
Elle ôte le bouquet d’oranger, cueille une rose dans le rosier, et la met dans ses cheveux. Elle se mire.

Pauvre, ou ce mariage. Ah! La ressource est dure.
Elle ôte la rose et la regarde pensive.
Une fleur, ça se fane.
Gallus, derrière elle et sans qu'elle le voie, sort à moitié du massif qui entoure la source, avance le bras, et lui pose un épi de diamants dans les cheveux.
Gallus, à demi-voix.
Un diamant, ça dure!
Il rentre vivement dans le massif.
Lison, se retournant.
Hein? On a parlé.
Elle regarde.
Non. Personne.
Elle se mire dans la source.
Ah! Dieu, mon Dieu!
Qu'ai-je au front?
Elle se redresse effarée.
Qui m'a mis cela?
Elle se mire de nouveau.
Qu'est-ce? Du feu?
ça doit brûler! — je n'ose y toucher.
Relevant la tête.
Je suis bête.
C'est cette eau qui me trompe et qui met sur ma tête un reflet de soleil. Ce que c'est que d'avoir une source au milieu d'un bois pour tout miroir!
Elle se retourne. Un grand miroir de Venise ovale, encadré de vermeil ciselé, apparaît devant elle dans le massif.
Ciel!
Stupéfaite, elle regarde le miroir. Elle porte la main au bouquet de diamants qu'elle a sur le front.
Ah! Les reines sont de la sorte coiffées!
Elle regarde le miroir.

Est-ce que par hasard il passe un vol de fées qui s’est venu poser sur les branches du bois?
Elle regarde sa coiffure de diamants.
Ai-je peur? Non. J’ai fait ce rêve bien des fois.
Autour de moi tout tremble et devient ineffable.
Elle approche du miroir. Elle aperçoit un petit être, espèce de nain ou d’enfant, vêtu de satin blanc glacé vert, qui porte le miroir et le lui présente, et qui disparaît presque derrière, tant il est petit et tant le miroir est grand.
Lison, admirant l’enfant.
Qu’il est joli!
Elle le considère sans crainte et comme apprivoisée à l’aventure.
C’est ça! Le nain! C’est une fable qui m’arrive.
Elle l’admire.
Il est fée. Es-tu fée? Oui, pour sûr!
Quelle est ta reine?
Le nain.
Vous, madame.
Lison, reculant.
C’est obscur,
mais charmant. Suis-je en vie? Oh! L’extase m’accable.
Suis-je morte?
Pendant qu’elle regarde le nain, le miroir et l’épi de diamants sur sa tête, un collier vient se poser sur sa gorge et sur ses épaules nues.
Elle s’écrie.
Un collier tout en perles!
Elle se retourne et voit un nègre. Ce nègre vient de sortir du massif, et c’est lui qui lui a agrafé le collier au cou, sans être aperçu d’elle. Il est vêtu de velours feu. Lison le regarde, pas effarouchée.
Le diable!

Je comprends.
On entend une musique sous les arbres et une vague chanson murmurée
qui semble chantée au loin par des passants invisibles.
Chanson.
— les lutins — dans les thyms — les hautbois — dans les bois — les roseaux — dans les eaux — ont des voix. — donc faisons — des chansons — et dansons. — l'aube achève — notre rêve — et l'amour — c'est le jour. — lison, pâmée et fascinée.
Je suis ève!
Une fumée se disperse dans les branches.
Qu'est-ce que cet encens dans l'ombre répandu?
Je sens comme une odeur de paradis.
Gallus, paraissant.
Perdu.
Enfin! Je tiens mon rêve!
Gallus, sorti du massif, laisse tomber son manteau. Il apparaît vêtu de brocart
d'or de la tête aux pieds, avec son cordon bleu et sa plaque d'ordres. Il a sur la tête un panache couleur feu. Il se dresse devant Lison.
Lison.

Un homme fait de flamme!
On aperçoit dans les arbres Gunich au guet, caché par l'ombre du bois.
Gallus, immobile, l'œil fixé sur
Lison.
à part.
D'abord disons-lui tu. Le bonheur de la femme est d'être tutoyée, et son autre bonheur est, quand on lui dit tu, de dire monseigneur.
Il hésite et hoche la tête.
Mais diantre! Tutoyer, c'est brusquer. C'est du style bien familier. La nuit est l'intervalle utile.
L'amour dit vous le soir et dit tu le matin.
Il se décide.

Nuances qu’elle doit ignorer.
La regardant et l’admirant.
Quel butin!
Haut à Lison.
Que désires-tu? Parle, et ne sois pas modeste.
Je viens combler tes voeux.
Lison, maintenant effrayée. Avec une révérence tremblante.
Monseigneur Satan…
Gallus, à part.
Peste!
C’est plus que je n’osais espérer.
Lison, éperdue.
Oui. Non. Si!
Mais je suis toute nue, et c’est plein d’yeux ici.
Un manteau de velours pourpre lui tombe sur les épaules.
C’est le nègre qui lui met ce manteau.
Lison.

Monseigneur le démon…
Le duc gallus, souriant, à part.
Elle accepte l’abîme.
Haut.
Et d’abord, descendons de ce sommet sublime.
Je ne suis pas Satan. Je suis un simple roi.
Du moins j’étais cela l’an passé; mais l’emploi m’ennuyait; j’ai lâché le sceptre qui m’assomme;
mais je suis encor prince, et même gentilhomme.
Sultan, j’ai planté là le sabre et le turban.
Lison.

Oh!
Gallus, souriant.
Tu vois un monarque en rupture de ban.
Je me refais aux champs une âme printanière, et j’y viens à l’école. — école buissonnière.
Sois ma maîtresse.
Lison, effarouchée.

Moi!
Gallus, souriant.
D’école. Belle, il sied d’expliquer tout. Ce nègre est mon valet de pied.
J’ai toujours avec moi ma musique de chambre,
et, même dans les bois, je fais brûler de l’ambre.
Il montre la fumée d’encens dans les arbres.
De là vient cette odeur de sainteté. Ce nain, diabolique à peu près, tant il est féminin, est un de mes laquais. J’ai de plus dans ma suite un rimeur qui me dit la messe, étant jésuite;
ce maroufle est chargé de me faire mes vers.
J’en fais moi-même aussi parfois. J’ai pour travers de rire, et de vouloir qu’autour de moi l’on rie.
Je me fabrique un peu d’aurore et de féerie.
Je voyage en nabab de l’Inde, et mes fourgons, que Médée aurait fait traîner à ses dragons, contiennent en décors de quoi jouer Armide;
je ne suis pas méchant, mais ne suis pas timide.
Qu’on nous donne un hallier, de l’ombre, et caetera, et nous improvisons d’emblée un opéra.
Je suis riche, et j’ai pu, grâce à mes viles piastres, te mettre sur la tête une coiffure d’astres,
ô belle, et te rouler une rivière au cou.
C’est là le réel. Point de rêve. Rien de fou, tout est simple, et la fable en vérité s’achève.
Lison, comme somnambule et l’œil égaré.
Ce réel est déjà très joli comme rêve.
Gallus.

Fantastique grenier d’un palais incertain,
le rêve est le cinquième étage du destin, et la réalité, c’est le rez-de-chaussée.
Restons en bas. Je suis un prince; ma pensée, c’est de jouir; je vais, tâchant de peu vieillir.
Suis-je un songe-creux? Non. Mais je voudrais cueillir le divin rameau d’or où l’oiseau bleu se perche.

L’homme ayant égaré le bonheur, je le cherche.
Comment t’appelles-tu?
Lison.

Monseigneur…
Gallus, la contemplant. — à part.
C’est vraiment
mon idéal. Le diable a fait évidemment tant de perfections pour y loger des vices.
Une telle rencontre est un des grands services que peut rendre l’enfer à quelqu’un d’ennuyé.
Elle a tout. Front pensif, air sauvage, œil noyé, bouche à dents de souris qui doit haïr le jeûne,
mains qui doivent haïr le vil travail.
Lison, revenant peu à peu à la réalité. — à part.
Pas jeune.
Ce n’est pas encor ça.
Le regardant en dessous.
Tout doré. De beaux yeux.
Plus de jeunesse avec moins de dorure est mieux.
Mais il a l’air d’avoir bien de l’esprit.
Gallus.

Jolie
comme la trahison et comme la folie!
Ce petit pied, ce bras exquis, convenons-en,
cela n’était pas fait pour rester paysan.
Lison se rapproche du miroir et considère son manteau de velours et d’hermine.
Il la regarde se mirer.
Elle sera perverse en étant bien conduite.
Rien qu’à la voir songer, j’ai compris tout de suite qu’en cette fille pauvre et coquette j’avais un bon assortiment de tous les goûts mauvais.
Volupté, vanité, toilette, argent, paresse.
De son ongle déjà le diable la caresse.
Croquons-la. Cette fois, je me crois bien tombé.

Une faunesse exquise et digne d’un abbé!
Il s’approche d’elle avec une admiration passionnée.
Lison, regardant le duc fixement.
Souvent le cœur est froid quand les yeux semblent ivres.
Gallus.

Comment sais-tu cela?
Lison.

Je l’ai lu dans les livres.
Gallus, à part.
Elle sait lire! C’est une difformité.
Ma sauvagesse sort de l’université!
Une savante! ça trouble mes conjectures.
Il réfléchit.
Tout se répare avec un bon choix de lectures.
Faublas. Crébillon fils.
Avec un haussement d’épaules.
Aussi je lui trouvais
un certain air lettré…
Lison.

Lire! Est-ce donc mauvais?
Gallus.

Non. Ne pas lire est mieux. Une fille n’est faite que pour être jolie et tout changer en fête.
Le temps qu’on donne au livre on le prend à l’amour.
Aucun livre ne vaut un baiser.
à part.
Quel sot tour
on m’a fait là, d’apprendre à lire à cette fille!
L’ignorance est sur l’âme une charmante grille,
qu’il est fort amusant d’entr’ouvrir lentement.
Nouveau haussement d’épaules, comme quelqu’un qui prend son parti.
Il se tourne vers elle.

Crois-moi d’abord en tout. C’est le commencement.
Lison.

Je crois tout ce qu’on dit, à moins qu’on ne le jure.
Gunich, en observation au fond du théâtre. à part.
Bon détail. Je mettrai ce mot dans ma brochure sur les femmes.
Gallus, à lison.
Tu n’as toujours pas dit ton nom.
Lison.

élisabeth, qui fait Lise, ou bien Lisa.
Gallus.

Non.
Moi je te nommerai Zabeth. Te voilà née.
Je coupe en deux ton nom comme ta destinée, et tu t’appelleras la marquise Zabeth.
Lison.

Marquise!
Gallus.

Je suis prince. Une étoile tombait, l’amour la ramassa. Cette étoile est la joie.
Je serai ton esclave.
à part.
Et tu seras ma proie.
Soyons joyeux. Vivons. La vie est un gala.
Lison, se regardant dans le miroir. à part.
Oh! Comme je suis belle avec ces choses-là!
à Gallus.
Monsieur! Reprenez tout!
Gallus.

Pourquoi?
Lison.

C’était pour rire,
n’est-ce pas?
Gallus.

Je l’entends bien ainsi.
Lison.

Je me mire
avec des diamants, et j’oublie, ah mon Dieu!
Que je dois aujourd’hui me marier.
Gallus.

Parbleu,
tu peux…
Lison.

Dites-moi vous.
Gallus.

Madame la marquise,
vous pouvez…
Lison.

Laissez-moi! Je suis la pauvre Lise.
On entend un bruit de violons et le claquement d’un fouet dans la route d’en haut.
Gallus.

Votre voiture vient.
Lison.

Cette charrette!
Gallus.

à moins
que vous ne préfériez celle-ci.

Paraît la voiture dorée à quatre chevaux revenant dans la route basse par le côté d'où elle est sortie.
Gunich, au duc. Du fond du théâtre.
Sans témoins
fuir serait aisé.
Lison, à gallus.
Mais… — à qui donc ce carrosse?
Gallus.

à vous!
Lison.

à moi!
Le carrosse s'arrête. Gunich ouvre la portière.
Gallus abat le marche-pied et y fait monter Lison éperdue.
Gallus.

Viens, c'est… — ta voiture de noce!
Tous sont dans le carrosse. La portière est refermée. Le carrosse part. Au moment où il sort, entre dans la route haute, du côté opposé, la charrette traînée par l'âne. On aperçoit dedans un groupe en tête duquel on voit Harou en habits de marié avec un gros bouquet, et deux violoneux qui jouent du violon.
11 mars.

ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH==

à Paris. Un boudoir avec tous les raffinements du luxe. C'est l'hiver. Feu dans la cheminée. Au fond une haute et large fenêtre par où l'on voit les arbres d'un parc, noirs et couverts de givre. Le boudoir est octogone. Aux deux pans coupés du fond, des deux côtés de la fenêtre, deux grandes portes dorées à deux battants. La porte de droite donne sur les appartements intérieurs, la porte de gauche donne sur les vestibules et les antichambres. Sur une crédence, un bouquet de fleurs exotiques rares; à côté un écrin ouvert, montrant un fouillis de pierreries, posé sur un plat de vermeil. Sur une assiette de vermeil, un pli cacheté. La cheminée est à droite. En face, à gauche, une porte bâtarde, basse, dorée.

ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH, SCENE PREMIERE

Sillette range. Elle met l’écrin près du bouquet et l’expose très en vue. Nantais entr’ouvre un battant de la porte de gauche et passe la tête par l’entre-bâillement. On entend une chanson dans la coulisse et un bruit de guitare.
Chanson au dehors.
Zon, zon, Suzon.
On croit n’être que douze à table.
Gibier fin, turbot délectable,
vins à foison.
On n’est que douze, on est bien aise.
Mais on est treize,
pas vrai, Suzon?
Sillette, apercevant nantais.
Laquais de monseigneur, bonjour.
Fredon dans la coulisse.
Zon zon, Suzon.
Nantais.

Qui chante là?
Sillette.

L’abbé, meuble de la maison.
Ton maître va venir?
Nantais.

Moi d’abord. En personne.
Puis lui. — madame est là?
Sillette.

J’attends qu’elle me sonne.
Voici divers objets pour elle.
Elle montre la crédence.

Des bouquets.
Des cadeaux. Apportés par différents laquais.
Nantais.

Qui fait tous ces présents?
Sillette.

On ne sait.
Nantais.

Tu l’ignores?
Sillette.

Sont-ce des financiers? Sont-ce des monsignores?
Mystère. Tous les jours quelque présent nouveau.
Une main s’ouvre, donne, et se cache.
Nantais.

Bravo!
C’est élégant. Sont-ils plusieurs?
Sillette.

Je le suppose.
L’essaim des papillons flâne autour de la rose.
Nantais.

Donner sans se montrer, c’est de bon goût.
Sillette.

Ainsi
tous les jours on nous fait de la musique ici.
C’est un assez beau luxe à Paris. à ces arbres, déjà pas mal ornés de grottes et de marbres,
tous les matins, à l’heure où le parc est désert,
on ajoute la grâce aimable d’un concert.
Qui paie? On ne sait pas. Mais l’aubade est exquise.
Nantais.

Et pendant ce temps-là madame la marquise…
Sillette.

Dort. Madame est rentrée assez tard, des Bouffons, d’un bal, qui coûte au duc mille écus de chiffons,
ou de la comédie, ou du brelan, que sais-je?
Elle s’est attablée avec tout son cortège,
ayant sur son sofa son chat et son abbé,
puis on a voulu boire, et le punch a flambé,
elle a soupé, dansé, que c’est une folie,
elle a tout ce temps-là, mon cher, été jolie.
Fatigue. Toujours rire, et vivre au paradis, cela vous courbature. Et le matin, tandis qu’elle sommeille, après ces peines infinies, les hommes à madame offrent des symphonies qu’elle n’entend pas même; ils sont faits pour cela.
Nantais.

Ces filles-là!
La porte à gauche vient de s’ouvrir. Zabeth paraît; elle est enveloppée d’un surtout de satin et de fourrure, et elle a sa faille et son manchon. Elle écoute.
Sillette, à nantais.
Silence. On vient.
Zabeth, à part.
Ces filles-là!
Haut, à Sillette.
Ma chaise est-elle en bas?
Sillette, avec un signe affirmatif.
Sous la porte cochère,
à toute heure elle attend madame.
Zabeth.

Bien, ma chère.
Surtout n’oubliez pas mes ordres pour ce soir.

Sillette.

Tout sera prêt, madame.
Zabeth.

Ici, dans ce boudoir.
Nouveau signe d’obéissance de Sillette. Elle présente à Zabeth la lettre
sur l’assiette de vermeil.
Zabeth.

Qu’est-ce?
Elle ouvre la lettre.
Ah! Des vers!
Elle met la letre dans son manchon.
Sillette.

Voici des cadeaux qu’on apporte.
Zabeth regarde les fleurs et l’écrin avec distraction.
Zabeth.

J’ai la migraine. Il faut qu’une heure ou deux je sorte.
Si le duc vient, je vais rentrer.
à part.
Ces filles-là!
Elle sort par la porte opposée.
Nantais, écoutant à la porte bâtarde.
Elle part. L’autre arrive.
La porte bâtarde s’ouvre. Entrent Gallus et Gunich.
Gallus en habit de soie mordorée. Cordon bleu et plaque.
Sur un signe de Gunich, Sillette et Nantais se retirent par la porte du fond à droite.
==ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH, SCENE II==

Gallus.

Et tu dis donc qu’elle a…

Moi qui ne quitte point Zabeth…
Gunich, à part.
Ce qui m’agace.
Gallus, continuant.
Je n’en sais pas si long que toi, baron sagace.
Combien d’amants dis-tu?
Gunich.

Sans vous compter, déjà
j’en ai vu sept ou huit passer. Cela changea comme un décor.
Gallus.

Combien de dettes?
Gunich.

Elle achève
son second million, je pense.
Gallus.

Bonne élève.
Gunich.

Et vous allez garder cette femme?
Gallus.

Morbleu!
C’est mon chef-d’œuvre.
Gunich.

Mais…
Gallus.

C’est quand je gagne au jeu que tu me dis : jetez les cartes. Je contemple mon ouvrage, et j’élève aux sept péchés ce temple,
Zabeth.

C’est peu vraiment qu’un million ou deux pour une telle église offerte à de tels dieux.
Zabeth me satisfait en tout. Je l’ai voulue fausse.
Gunich.

Elle triche au jeu.
Gallus.

Gourmande.
Gunich.

Elle est goulue.
Gallus.

Vaine.
Gunich.

Elle est folle.
Gallus.

Aimant l’amour.
Gunich.

C’est Astarté.
Gallus.

Prodigue.
Gunich.

Elle est avare.
Gallus le regarde. Il insiste.
Et met l’or de côté.
Ah! Vous réussissez!
Gallus.

Toi, tu la calomnies.

Elle vaut mieux que toi.
Gunich.

Pour vous les gémonies
sont le vrai panthéon, ô grand prince railleur!
Pour vous le mal est bien, et le pire est meilleur;
pourtant, valet, je vois l’intérieur du maître;
vous n’êtes pas mauvais, vous voulez le paraître.
Jeu dangereux. Feu noir, dont on sent la cuisson tôt ou tard.
Gallus.

Je m’amuse, ô cuistre, à ma façon.
Il fredonne.
Qu’est-ce en somme que la femme?
Beaucoup de chair, un peu d’âme,
un éden entre-bâillé,
un masque, un rêve, une fable, un vaudeville du diable
auquel l’homme a travaillé.
Je travaille à
Zabeth.
L’outil, c’est la débauche.
Je fais le monstre, moi, dont Satan fit l’ébauche.
Et plein d’extase, ainsi que jadis Salomon, je regarde sortir d’une perle un démon.
Gunich.

Vous m’avez l’air d’un homme amoureux.
Gallus.

Par exemple!
Gunich.

Dame! C’est une idole.
Gallus.

Et l’athée à ce temple
construit par moi, c’est moi.
Gunich.

Vous vous vantez.
Gallus.

Jamais.
Amoureux, moi! Jamais. Je rirais, si j’aimais!
Gunich.

Non, mais vous feriez rire et seriez une altesse fort compromise aux yeux des badauds de Lutèce.
Comme avec un éclat de rire ils vous défont!
Paris la bonne ville est très méchante au fond.
Une altesse, elle mord dedans, elle en déjeune.
Quelle chute pour vous si l’on vous trouvait — jeune!
Vous voilez votre cœur, vous sentant en danger,
ah! Peste! Vous le loup, de passer pour berger.
Gallus.

Un Bartholo! Moi!
Gunich.

Non. Céladon. Grand modèle.
Gallus.

Quoi! Zabeth!
Gunich.

Monseigneur ne peut se passer d’elle.
Vous la traînez partout, cette madame-là.
Cette Lison changée en marquise brilla tout de suite, en jetant aux moulins sa cornette, près de vous, comme auprès du soleil la planète.
Bel astre. Et monseigneur a je ne sais quel air de peu s’en soucier et d’en être très fier.

Ces nuances-là, dont se compose l’églogue,
sont l’énigme du cœur humain.
Gallus, haussant les épaules.
Idéologue!
Gunich.

Il vous la faut toujours, partout, car elle m’a supplante, cette dame, oui!
Gallus.

L’enfer te forma
de la laideur de l’homme et de la jalousie de la femme.
Gunich.

Avouez, c’est une fantaisie, c’est un caprice, on peut aimer par accident, convenez avec moi votre vieux confident qu’elle égratigne un peu votre âme.
à part, ricanant.
Une âme mûre!
Gallus.

Je n’ai point d’âme, oison, donc point d’égratignure.
Gunich.

Au fond, vous la prenez au sérieux.
Gallus.

Qui? Moi!
J’en ris.
Gunich.

Vous affectez d’en rire. On voit pourquoi.
Vous êtes un dévot honteux de son église.
Vous vous cachez.
Gallus.

Nella m’échappant, j’ai pris Lise.
Je chassais, je cherchais des appas indulgents, une charmeuse ayant pitié des pauvres gens,
un peu libre, un peu folle, ayant de la clémence.
Tombé sur des vertus par un hasard immense, m’étant cassé le nez juste à l’escarpement d’une vierge d’acier, d’ombre et de diamant,
ayant vu tout à coup, quand je rêvais la butte Montmartre où dix moulins font gaîment la culbute, surgir avec sa neige auguste la Yungfrau, ayant tiré du sac ce mauvais numéro,
j’ai dit : je me crois aigle et lion, je suis âne.
Je me suis rejeté sur une paysanne quelconque, fort jolie et pas bête, ma foi, et je l’ai faite reine en me défaisant roi.
Roman simple; et j’en suis au deuxième chapitre.
Gallus fouille dans le gousset de son gilet, en tire sa tabatière, ne s’aperçoit pas qu’il vient d’en tirer en même temps un papier, et prend une prise de tabac.
Le papier est tombé à terre. Gunich, en arrière de Gallus, le ramasse, y jette
un coup d’œil, et le met dans sa poche pendant que Gallus éternue et secoue
d’une chiquenaude les dentelles de son jabot.
Gunich.

çà, vous êtes un roi duquel je suis le pitre.
Gallus.

Faquin!
Gunich.

Le conseiller d’état, si vous voulez.
Je plains les papillons aux chandelles brûlés.
Je vous vois approcher d’une flamme hagarde,

charmante et formidable, et je dis : prenez garde.
Quelque chose se passe au fond de votre cœur.
Vous êtes un captif qui se drape en vainqueur.
C’est une maladie étrange propre aux hommes très corrompus, blasés, exquis, comme nous sommes, d’idolâtrer avec dédain, et d’être pris parfois profondément, tout en disant : je ris.
L’eau qu’on jette à ce feu le rallume et l’attise.
Est-on jaloux? Fi donc! Tendre? Quelle bêtise!
Si quelqu’un vous pénètre et dans votre âme lit,
on se fâche; on se sent comme en flagrant délit.
Surtout il ne faut pas que la belle s’en doute.
Qu’aime-t-on d’elle? Rien. Et tout. Sotte, on l’écoute.
Grasse, c’est un Rubens; maigre, c’est un Watteau.
Don Juan extérieur, Pyrame incognito, on se croit libertin. Point. On est platonique.
On couve en souriant un vague amour chronique.
On aime l’âme, et non la chair fragile, on croit n’être que gris, hélas! On est ivre. L’œil froid masque le cœur brûlant.
Gallus.

Dadais métaphysique!
Hors la bonne cuisine et la bonne musique,
qui sont la même chose au fond, je n’aime rien.
Gunich.

Hum! Parfois le lion a dans sa cage un chien.
Il croit d’abord qu’il va le manger; puis il l’aime.
Gallus.

Rien ne m’enivre.
Gunich.

Hum!
Gallus.

Je suis froid par système.
Gunich.

Hum!
Gallus.

Tu dis?…
Gunich.

Est-ce un cri factieux? Je dis : hum!
Gallus.

Mon cœur est le sommeil.
Gunich.

L’amour est l’opium.
Pardon, le cœur d’un prince, on ne sait trop qu’en dire.
Livre doré sur tranche où l’on n’ose pas lire.
Pourtant permettez-vous que…
Gallus.

Buse, je permets.
Gunich.

L’amour se pique au jeu quand on lui dit : jamais!
Vous cachez l’aventure et moi je la devine.
La rêver infernale et la trouver divine, voilà votre accident devant cette
Zabeth.

Gallus.

Et d’abord, tu ne sais pas même l’alphabet du respect. Nomme-la madame. Elle est au prince.
à moi, qui suis ton maître. Et maintenant, si mince que soit ton intellect, comprends que, sans déchoir, je ne puis aimer, moi qui jette le mouchoir.

être un Tityre inepte au fond d’un site agreste, à d’autres! N’aimant pas, je reste moi. Je reste le maître. Devenir amoureux, moi rieur!
Tu crois que je prendrais ce rôle inférieur!
Gunich, ricanant.
Le rôle vous prend.
Gallus.

Non. Si bon te semble, certe, vieux fou, sois amoureux, passe aux femmes, déserte.
Moi, point. J’ai pu, le jour où le dégoût me prit, abdiquer comme roi, mais comme homme d’esprit,
non pas. Moi, grimacer l’amour! Qu’on me lapide.
Je vois mes rides, va. Me crois-tu donc stupide jusqu’à m’imaginer que de jeunes yeux bleus planteront là messieurs les blancs-becs merveilleux pour contempler rêveurs mon gilet de flanelle!
Ah! Rien ne change, ami, la nature éternelle!
Avril sera toujours par Aurore ébloui.
Matin et renouveau sont des lieux communs; oui, c’est vieux, le lys, c’est vieux, la rose; mais qu’importe, c’est toujours jeune, et l’aube est toujours la plus forte.
Oui, pour comprendre l’ombre et les cieux infinis, l’astre et la fleur, Chloé se penche sur Daphnis, oui, Nella cherche George, oui, les Agnès épellent les Chérubins; jeunesse et jeunesse s’appellent.
Est-ce toi, printemps? Dit la fauvette tout bas.
Il faut les bleus sommets pour les tendres ébats.
Résignons-nous. Rions.
Gunich.

Monseigneur se résigne.
Il est grand, puissant, riche, illustre, auguste, insigne, et son manteau royal d’aigles est parsemé.
Gallus.

à quoi cela sert-il si l’on n’est pas aimé!

Gunich.

Vous êtes toujours sûr, vous, prince, d’être au faîte.
Gallus.

Devant les femmes, non. L’orgueil du rang est bête.
Pour la femme, un roi passe après son page. Un duc ne vaut point ses laquais, mon cher, s’il est caduc.
Aucun soleil couchant n’a droit à l’espérance.
Le sage ne fait pas aux jeunes concurrence;
il ne va pas livrer un sot amour risqué aux quolibets des gens qui flânent sur le quai;
il voit son œil s’éteindre auprès d’un œil qui brille;
il s’observe. Devant n’importe quelle fille, devant une catau de trente sous, on est
allié des Habsbourg et des Plantagenet, Landgrave palatin, duc d’Autriche, infant d’Este, prince!… — on voit ses cheveux blanchir, on est modeste.
Gunich.

On se poudre!
Gallus.

Ah! Tu crois, baron de peu de sens, que cette neige-là cache celle des ans!
Mais j’ai dix lustres!
Gunich.

Soit. Bel âge!
Gallus.

Tout s’envole.
Mais je ne serai pas un Géronte frivole.
C’est assez d’avoir cru trop longtemps au matin.
Hélas! C’est triste. Avoir arrangé son destin, son cœur, ses goûts, sa vie éclatante et sonore,
pour être à tout jamais la jeunesse, l’aurore,

l’aube, et voir sur son front monter la sombre nuit!
Gunich.

Ah! Je conviens que l’âge à la jeunesse nuit.
être jeune est le ciel. Rester jeune…
Gallus.

Est l’abîme.
Un ridicule à moi! J’aimerais mieux un crime.
Oh! Qui que vous soyez, devant Lise ou Ninon, tenez-vous bien, soyez moqueur et fort, sinon vous verrez bientôt poindre une belle hargneuse.
Le méprisant peut seul braver la dédaigneuse.
Surtout, méfions-nous des scènes que nous font ces belles, et des cris, et de leur art profond de s’irriter, de fondre en pleurs, d’être hardies, et ne nous laissons pas prendre à leurs comédies.
Plutôt livrer ma vie au tigre libyen
qu’à la femme! — à propos, mon anneau, tu sais bien?
Ma bague empoisonnée?
Gunich.

Ah! Cet anneau terrible qui contient un poison.
Gallus.

Un remède infaillible.
Gunich.

Eh bien?
Gallus.

Je ne l’ai plus.
Gunich.

Comment?
Gallus.

On me l’a pris
pendant que je dormais ou bien que j’étais gris.
Je le regrette.
Gunich.

Au fait, c’était un joyau rare.
Gallus.

Un ami. Cet anneau me venait de Ferrare dont une Borgia fut duchesse. On vieillit, tu comprends; le destin devient un mauvais lit;
un vieux beau, c’est un être absurde et difficile,
d’un côté sensitive et de l’autre fossile.
On sort de l’opéra, du bal, de chez Mesmer, de chez le roi de France, avec le mal de mer.
C’est pour cela, dût-on n’en jamais faire usage, qu’on tient à ces bijoux sinistres, et qu’un sage,
à tous les biens qu’il a, qu’il attend, qu’on lui doit,
qu’il espère ou qu’il veut, joint la mort, bague au doigt.
Gunich.

Un suicide en l’air, facultatif, possible, départ à volonté pour le monde invisible, avoir toujours la clef du tombeau sous sa main,
faire, comme un valet, venir ce noir Demain, avoir derrière soi l’éternité qu’on sonne et qui paraît : que veut monseigneur? — j’en frissonne, mais c’est bien agréable, au fait.
Gallus, pensif.
L’empoisonneur
des bijoux, c’est le sort.
Gunich.

C’est vous. — donc, monseigneur, c’est dit. Vous n’aimez point votre bonne fortune.
Gallus.

Zabeth! Il hausse les épaules.
Bah!
Gunich.

Soit. Eh bien! Moi, je vais vous faire une…
Révélation.
Gallus.

Quoi?
Gunich, s’approchant de la crédence et montrant le bouquet.
Voyez-vous ce bouquet?
Gallus.

Oui.
Gunich.

De qui ça vient-il?
Gallus.

De quelque freluquet
qui, ne pouvant payer des diamants infâmes, s’imagine qu’avec des fleurs on a des femmes.
Gunich.

Tous les jours il en vient pour madame un pareil.
Il montre l’écrin.
Voyez-vous cet écrin?
Gallus.

Sur ce plat de vermeil?
Oui. C’est quelque galant, moins innocent que l’autre, qui veut plaire.
Gunich, s’approchant de la fenêtre et montrant le jardin.
En ce parc, dessiné par Lenôtre, tous les matins on joue une aubade.
Gallus

oui. Très haut.
C’est encore un galant quelconque. Un peu bien sot.
Car c’est à la Vénus qu’il offre la diane.
Gunich, continuant.
Quelqu’un tous les jours donne un bouquet.
Gallus.

Qui se fane.
Gunich, continuant.
Un écrin, un concert, et monseigneur le sait.
Gallus.

Je sais encor ceci qu’on ne sait pas qui c’est.
Ces trois bergers masqués et muets me font rire.
Personne ne connaît leurs noms.
Gunich.

Personne, sire,
excepté moi.
Gallus.

Tu dis?…
Gunich.

Excepté moi.
Gallus.

Tu crois
les connaître?
Gunich.

Je peux les nommer.
Gallus.

Tous les trois?
Gunich.

Tous les trois. Le premier, le jeune, offrant des roses, c’est vous. L’autre, plus vieux, donnant ces belles choses, ces diamants, c’est vous. Le troisième, à genoux aussi lui, le seigneur des aubades, c’est vous.
Gallus.

Eh bien, après?
Gunich.

C’est vous.
Gallus.

Voilà ta découverte!
Gunich.

Niez-vous?
Gallus.

Non. C’est vrai. Qu’en conclut monsieur?
Gunich.

Certe,
que vous êtes, mon prince, énormément épris.
Gallus, se tenant les côtes.
Ah! Vraiment, mon baron est trop bête. Ah! J’en ris!
Ah! Je suis amoureux parce que je m’ennuie, et qu’il me plaît de mettre un rayon dans la pluie, du soleil dans la brume, un sourire en des yeux qui, tristes, seraient laids, et qui sont beaux, joyeux.
C’est mon goût. La beauté, plus la gaîté; fleur double.
Ah! Mon pauvre espion myope, tu vois trouble.
Ah! Je suis amoureux parce que je distrais mes cinquante ans à mettre en relief des attraits qui, charmants sous des fleurs, sont exquis sous des perles!
Parce que le sommeil des moineaux et des merles ne m’est pas à ce point sacré que dans ce bois je ne me glisse avec des joueurs de hautbois, et parce que j’ordonne à cinq ou six maroufles de faire avec leurs chants, leurs gammes et leurs souffles, flotter un songe d’or sur de beaux yeux fermés!

Parce que j’ai le goût des bouquets embaumés,
des bijoux envoyés aux belles, par Hercule,
je suis un vieux crétin d’amoureux ridicule!
Je m’amuse, morbleu! J’ai cette fille-là, et j’en fais le motif d’un éternel gala!
Mais à qui donc veux-tu que je donne des roses?
à toi? Quand tes gros yeux collent leurs cils moroses, quand tu dors, dois-je aller, pendant une heure ou deux, faire de la musique à tes rêves hideux?
Faut-il qu’au point du jour sous tes volets je rôde?
Dois-je faire couler la perle et l’émeraude en rivières autour de ton vieux cou ridé?
Dois-je te déclarer sultane validé?
Aegipans, nymphes, dieux, ô faunes de Sicile, accourez, venez voir cet immense imbécile!
Mais pense un peu, voyons, peux-tu? Lise a vingt ans, j’en ai cinquante. Eh bien, je me masque, et j’entends, à défaut du bonheur, fleur que nul ne transplante,
lui faire une nuée amoureuse et galante.
Personnages du conte : Angélique et Médor.
Elle est Danaë. Soit. Moi, pluie et grêle d’or.
Elle est Héro, pensive, et moi je me ranime à lui faire rêver un Léandre anonyme.
Trouves-tu qu’être aimable est au-dessous de moi?
Trop de distance! Elle est goton et je suis roi.
Non, belître. Elle est femme, et je suis gentilhomme.
être amoureux! Jamais. Non. Mais être économe, non plus. Garder son cœur, dépenser son argent, c’est ma mode. être aux goûts d’une femme indulgent;
lui faire tous les jours d’agréables surprises;
lui racheter l’ennui de voir vos mèches grises par des bals, des bijoux, des fleurs; être courtois;
et se taire; et n’aller pas crier sur les toits :
mesdames et messieurs, je suis celui qui paie!

Faire en somme à la belle une existence gaie, libre, opulente, vive et jeune, de façon à se dire : après tout je suis un bon garçon!
Voilà l'élégance. Hein?
Gunich.

Vous êtes à l'escrime
très fort.
Gallus.

Je te dis, moi, de m'accuser d'un crime,
et non d'une bêtise. étant déjà l'amant, si j'étais l'amoureux, je serais fou vraiment.
Gunich.

Vous me jetez ce mot : buse!
Gallus.

Oui, je le décoche.
Gunich.

Mais il ne faudrait pas alors de votre poche laisser tomber ces vers écrits de votre main.
Il présente à Gallus le papier que Gallus a laissé tomber, le déploie, et se met à lire.
Sonnet. à
Zabeth.

Déclamant.
… Belle au regard inhumain…
Gallus, lui arrachant le papier.
ô stupide espion! Voleur plus bête encore!
Que ne suis-je encor roi pour que je te décore de l'ordre d'ânerie inventé tout exprès!
Gunich.

Mais lisez, monseigneur.
Lui montrant le sonnet.
— … Vos appas… Vos attraits… — donc vous voulez charmer! Donc vous désirez plaire!
Gallus jette le papier au feu.
Gallus.

Tu me feras crever de joie et de colère.
Tudieu! Quel animal réjouissant! Comment!
Parce qu'étant poëte, un peu, suffisamment pour égaler, si bon me semble, qui? Virgile, je bâcle un vers ou deux, je meurs d'amour! Mais, Gille!
Un poëte est un être indifférent, divers,
qui s'exerce à viser un cœur avec un vers,
qui prend pour but d'une ode une femme quelconque,
et qui, tout en criant : c'est Vénus dans sa conque!
C'est Léda sur son cygne! Hébé! Turlututu, ne veut pas plus charmer cette femme, vois-tu,
qu'un archer dans un tir ne veut tuer la cible.
La cible est en carton. La femme aussi. L'horrible, c'est d'avoir pour laquais un baron saugrenu tel que toi, marié jadis, jadis cornu, croyant aux vers! Le vrai poëte est impassible.
Si les sonnets comptaient, tout serait impossible.
être forcé d'aimer, parce que ça rime!
Gunich.

Oui.
Au fond, c'est vrai. La rime est piège.
Gallus.

Homme inouï,
apprends tout. Ce sonnet, pour comble d'aventure,
Zabeth l'a dans les mains!
Gunich.

Mais d'une autre écriture.

Gageons.
Gallus.

Certes. Je puis fabriquer, s’il me plaît, des vers, mais je les fais écrire à mon valet.
Par instants, une envie, honnête et sage en somme, me prend d’écorcher vif ce hideux gentilhomme!
Apollon, c’est ainsi que tu remercias, pour avoir chanté faux, le nommé Marsyas.
Gunich.

Je chante juste.
Gallus.

Va, je suis impénétrable.
Inaccessible, inex…
Gunich.

Pugnable.
Souriant et saluant.
Et vulnérable.
Gallus.

Comme Achille alors. Soit. Au talon. Non au cœur.
Gunich.

Le cœur, souvent les grands l’ont au talon.
Gallus.

Moqueur,
tu seras avec moi le moqué. Je t’enseigne, et ma gaîté te crible, et ta bêtise saigne.
Gunich.

Vous perdez vos anneaux, vous perdez vos sonnets.
Prenez garde.
Gallus, lui tournant le dos.

Il me prend pour un de ces benêts qui, vu qu'un grand cordon leur coupe en deux le ventre, rêvent de plaire au sphinx accroupi dans son antre,
à la femme.
S'affermissant sur ses talons et regardant Gunich en face.
L'amour pour les niais est bon.
Je puis être un vieillard, mais jamais un barbon.
De Louis quinze vieux bien souvent nous sourîmes, personne ne rira de moi. Quant à mes rimes, c'est un jeu, mes bouquets, de même. Et, fût-on roi, il faut avec la femme enfin qu'on a chez soi,
belle ou non, paysanne, ou marquise, ou comtesse, savoir vivre. De là mes cadeaux. Politesse.
Gunich.

Vous êtes, monseigneur, éperdument poli.
Gallus.

à présent, sois muet. Je t'ordonne l'oubli.
Si de ceci tu dis un mot, ma politesse t'étranglera.
Gunich, écoutant à la grande porte de gauche.
J'annonce un groupe à votre altesse.
Entre Zabeth, et avec elle une foule de petits jeunes gens, parmi lesquels le duc de Montbazon, avec le cordon bleu, le duc de Créqui avec la croix de Saint-Louis, lord Effingham avec la jarretière, le vicomte de Thouars. Au milieu des jeunes gentilshommes, un docteur, noir, en perruque ronde. En avant du groupe, un abbé. L'abbé entre le premier, en dansant et en raclant une guitare.

ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH, SCENE III

Tous, en arrivant, saluent Gallus, qui donne la main à quelques-uns.
L’abbé, chantant et dansant.
Les bœufs aux champs,
commère!
Les Anglais sont méchants,
la Prusse est en colère, l’Autriche n’est pas claire,
qu’ils s’en aillent lanlaire.
Commère,
les bœufs aux champs!
ô belle bocagère,
va couper la fougère,
ôte tes bas, bergère,
les sentiers sont bourbeux.
Commère,
aux champs les bœufs!
Zabeth en entrant jette sur un fauteuil sa faille et son manchon
. Elle tire du manchon son éventail et le pli que lui a remis Sillette à sa sortie. Gallus la salue d’un signe de tête, et Gunich d’une profonde révérence.
Gallus se met à causer avec le docteur. Les jeunes gens entourent Zabeth.
Lord Effingham.

Vous avez là, marquise, une mouche assassine.
Le duc de Montbazon.

Mes enfants, mon talent à moi, c’est la cuisine.
Zabeth.

De là ce cordon bleu.

Le vicomte de thouars.
J’arrive du sermon.
L’abbé, posant la guitare sur un pliant.
Je n’y vais plus. On dit trop de mal du démon.
On exagère.
Le vicomte.
Oh oui! L’abbé Maury, du reste, tonne agréablement. Voltaire, Oedipe, Oreste, la vierge d’Orléans, les juifs, les mécréants…
Zabeth.

Qu’est-ce que c’est que ça, la vierge d’Orléans?
Le vicomte, continuant.
Il prêche à lui tout seul comme les douze apôtres.
à
Zabeth.

Vous autres n’êtes pas admises là.
Zabeth, à part.
Vous autres!
Le duc de Créqui.

La vierge, autrement dit la pucelle. Cela n’a jamais existé. Des vierges, oh la la!
Il rit.
Grande, la femme est fille; enfant, elle est poupée.
Une vierge! On n’en voit jamais!
Zabeth.

Bah! Votre épée.
Le duc de Créqui pirouette dédaigneusement et lui tourne le dos.
Le duc de créqui, au vicomte de thouars.
La Duthé dans un bal t’a, dit-on, maltraité.
Le vicomte.
Et j’ai fait mettre au For-l’évêque la Duthé, vu que je suis Rohan.
Zabeth, à part, regardant le baronnet.

Breton du premier ordre.
L’abbé, à zabeth, lui montrant les seigneurs.
Dieu fit vos dents pour rire et fit les leurs pour mordre.
Zabeth, à l’abbé, montrant le duc de créqui.
D’où vient que ce petit est duc?
L’abbé.
Le droit du sang.
Il était digne d’être opulent et puissant, n’ayant rien dans le cœur ni dans l’âme. Il hérite d’un oncle. On a toujours les oncles qu’on mérite.
Zabeth, à lord effingham.
à propos, je reçois des sonnets.
Lord Effingham.

Des sonnets!
Zabeth, à gallus.
Laclos prête sa femme au duc de Nivernais.
Que dites-vous d’un homme acceptant cet opprobre?
Gallus, continuant sa conversation comme s’il n’entendait pas zabeth.
Les pléiades, docteur, qu’on voyait en octobre à l’est, sont maintenant à l’ouest. Sans Képler cela serait obscur; grâce à lui, c’est très clair.
Zabeth, insistant, à gallus.
Le duc lui prend sa femme.
Gallus, s’asseyant.
Eh bien! Il l’a conquise.
On est très bien assis dans vos fauteuils, marquise.
Dites-moi donc le nom de votre tapissier.
Il se tourne vers les petits seigneurs épars et causant autour de lui.
Allons-nous voir ce soir Brizard officier en grand prêtre tragique? On donne Montezume.
Il se remet à causer avec le docteur.
Le vicomte de thouars, au duc de montbazon.
Montrant
Zabeth.

Nous sommes tous ici ses amants, je présume.
Le duc ne s'aperçoit de rien. Vois comme il rit.
Le duc de Montbazon.

Il s'aperçoit de tout, mais il a de l'esprit.
Le duc de créqui, au vicomte.
Le crois-tu bête au point d'aimer cette donzelle?
Zabeth prête l'oreille.
Zabeth, à part.
Donzelle!
Le duc de créqui, au vicomte.
Vois-tu bien, celle qu'on paie et celle qu'on aime, c'est deux.
Le vicomte de thouars.
Mais d'autres sont fort épris.
Le duc de créqui.
Pas lui.
Le vicomte de thouars, montrant la crédence.
Vois ces cadeaux.
Le duc de créqui, regardant les diamants.
L'écrin est d'un grand prix,
certe!
L'abbé, flairant le bouquet.
En hiver, des fleurs de serre!
Zabeth, à gallus.
Votre altesse
est poëte.
Gallus.

Jamais.
Zabeth, lui tendant le pli qu'elle a à la main.
Lisez donc ceci.
Gallus.

Qu'est-ce?
Il prend le papier et y jette un coup d'œil.

Des vers. Fi donc!
Zabeth.

Comment les trouvez-vous?
Gallus, les parcourant négligemment.
Mauvais.
Zabeth.

Vous les trouveriez bons si vous les aviez faits.
Gallus.

Dieu m’en garde.
Zabeth.

Ces vers sont jolis.
Gallus.

Plats.
Zabeth.

Vous êtes
contrariant.
Gallus.

Des vers d’amour sont toujours bêtes.
L’abbé se remet à flairer les roses de Chine.
L’abbé, se retournant vers zabeth.
Beau bouquet?
Le docteur, à zabeth.
Qui vous l’a donné?
Zabeth, montrant le bouquet à gallus.
Qu’en dites-vous?
Gallus.

C’est un de ces bouquets qu’on a pour trente sous chez la fleuriste au coin du pavillon d’Hanovre.
L’abbé, admirant les diamants.

Bel écrin!
Zabeth.

Je ne sais qui me l’envoie.
Gallus.

Un pauvre
évidemment. écrin médiocre, et fané.
Zabeth.

Vous le trouveriez beau si vous l’aviez donné.
Le marquis de cochefilet, à zabeth.
à propos, des hautbois dans un parc, c’est classique, les jardins d’aujourd’hui sont faits pour la musique, j’aime les violons dans les bois, et l’écho des cors de chasse au fond des grottes rococo.
Vous offre-t-on toujours une aubade?
Zabeth.

Oui.
Gallus.

C’est fade.
Je ne sais de qui peut vous venir cette aubade.
C’était joli jadis, mais la mode en passa.
Zabeth.

Si c’était de vous, duc, vous ne diriez pas ça.
Gunich, à part, observant gallus.
Il a bien dépisté
Zabeth.

Zabeth.

Moi, je déclare
ces fleurs belles, ces vers charmants, cet écrin rare.
L’aubade, comme un chant des anges affaibli, me berce, et le matin m’apporte un peu d’oubli.

C’est anonyme. Soit. Moi, pour ne rien vous taire, si je savais qui m’offre, avec tant de mystère,
tant de galanterie, oui, je pourrais…
Gallus.

Eh bien?
Zabeth.

L’aimer.
Lord Effingham.

Ils sont plusieurs.
Le duc de Créqui.

Oh! Cela ne fait rien.
à
Gallus.

Hein? Si nous savions qui, les bonnes gorges chaudes!
Gallus.

à part.
Comme ils riraient! —
haut.
Les vers, les fleurs, les émeraudes,
et les aubades, peuh!
Il hausse les épaules et pirouette sur ses talons.
Zabeth.

Toujours vous me froissez, monseigneur. On dirait que vous me haïssez.
Gallus, froid.
Non.
Zabeth.

Mais ça m’est égal.

Le duc de montbazon, à zabeth.
La haine, c’est province.
L’abbé, à zabeth.
Ne point aimer, ne point haïr, c’est être prince.
Le marquis, au duc de créqui.
Duc, en raillant l’estoc dont tu nous éblouis, elle éclabousse un peu ta croix de Saint-Louis.
Le duc de Créqui.

De sa boue.
Il rit et regarde
Zabeth.

Le marquis.
Elle entend. Prends garde. Tu la blesses.
Le duc de Créqui.

Qu’est-ce que ça me fait, ces drôlesses?
Zabeth, aux écoutes, à part.
Drôlesses!
Ricanements autour de
Zabeth.
Gallus fait un signe. Tous s’approchent de lui.
Zabeth reste seule à l’autre coin du boudoir.
Gallus, à demi-voix, au groupe des gentilshommes.
Je n’ai pas le travers, qu’ont les gens fatigués, d’empêcher, étant vieux, les jeunes d’être gais.
Riez. —
au duc de Créqui.
Pourvu, monsieur le duc et pair de France,
que cela n’aille pas jusqu’à la transparence.
Les femmes! Y compris la reine, j’ai souci de toutes ces margots autant que de ceci;
il fait claquer ses doigts.
Mais une étant chez moi, l’on ne doit pas en rire.
Nous sommes bons amis. Je ne trouve à redire qu’à de certains clins d’yeux railleurs. Messieurs, milords, c’est compris, n’est-ce pas? Car, autrement, alors il faudrait voir un peu la pointe des épées.

Il s’approche de Zabeth et lui montre le paysage nocturne au dehors.
Ah! Madame, admirez ces belles échappées de clair de lune au fond de ces arbres! La nuit est un profond concert que gâte notre bruit.
Ce monde, l’homme ôté, serait beau.
Il revient vers le groupe des gentilshommes.
Mais, j’y pense,
messieurs, la comédie à huit heures commence.
Le docteur, tirant sa montre.
Neuf heures.
Gallus.

Hâtons-nous, si nous voulons la voir.
N’y venons-nous pas tous?
Zabeth, à gallus.
Pas vous. Pas moi. Ce soir vous soupez tête à tête avec moi.
Gallus.

Tête à tête!
La surprise est charmante, et c’est toute une fête.
Messieurs, vous entendez. Je vous laisse partir. à Zabeth.
Je reste.
Le duc de Montbazon.

Comme il va s’ennuyer!
Le duc de Créqui.

ô martyr!
Tous saluent Gallus et sortent.
Zabeth va à la cheminée et sonne. La porte de droite s’ouvre à deux battants.
Entre Sillette, suivie de quatre laquais portant une table à deux couverts sur laquelle est servi un en-cas. Gibier. Vins. Cristaux. Au centre, un surtout de

table en vermeil avec deux girandoles allumées.
Les valets posent la table au centre du boudoir, et placent un fauteuil devant
chacun des couverts qui se font vis-à-vis.
Zabeth fait signe à Sillette et aux valets de sortir. Elle ôte et jette sur un sofa sa pelisse de soie et de martre, sous laquelle elle est décolletée, avec un collier et des bracelets de pierreries.
Elle montre à Gallus un des deux fauteuils et s'assied sur l'autre.
==ACTE DEUXIEME : LA MARQUISE ZABETH, SCENE IV==

Gallus.

Vous renvoyez vos gens. Solitude complète.
C'est tout à fait aimable.
Il s'assied.
Montrant un grand trumeau à glace derrière
Zabeth.

Ah! Ce trumeau reflète des appas, qui feraient tourner la tête…
Zabeth.

à qui?
Pas à vous.
Gallus.

Je suis vieux. Mais ce petit Créqui…
Zabeth.

à lui pas plus qu'à vous, prince. D'ailleurs, qu'importe!
Je crois qu'il vient un peu de vent par cette porte.
Elle va à la porte du fond, comme pour s'assurer que personne n'écoute, l’entr’ouvre, puis la referme.

Gallus prend une bouteille, emplit le verre de Zabeth, puis le sien.
Zabeth revient s’asseoir.
Gallus, regardant le couvert.
Joli dessus de table!
Il boit tout en examinant l’orfévrerie.
Oui, j’aime ce sommeil
des nymphes sous des rocs sauvages, en vermeil.
Il prend une pièce de gibier et la découpe.
Le râle de genêt. Fin gibier. ça patauge tout l’été dans le thym, la lavande, la sauge, la mauve, et ça devient exquis, surtout avec la choucroute tudesque et le bon vieux vin grec.
Il offre une aile à Zabeth, met de la choucroute dans son assiette et se verse à boire.
Dites-moi, trouvez-vous ici quelque lacune dans l’hôtel, dans la table ou le service?
Zabeth.

Aucune.
Gallus, désignant du doigt le jardin.
Vous pourriez pour ce parc, c’est un conseil, pardon, commander deux ou trois déesses à Houdon.
Zabeth.

Tout me vient de vous, duc, je dois le reconnaître.
Gallus, tout en mangeant et tout en servant zabeth.
Ce tout n’est rien, madame. Une femme est un être charmant parce qu’il est tremblant, fort éperdu, très frêle, et qui doit être en tout temps défendu contre tout ce qui peut d’une ride être cause, contre un frisson d’aurore et contre un pli de rose.
Il faut sur son alcôve un chant de séraphin,
le nectar à sa soif, l’ambroisie à sa faim;
de nos jours, ce progrès est goûté de Tartuffe,

le nectar est sauterne et l’ambroisie est truffe, et quant au séraphin, il s’appelle Grétry.
Des millions! Sans quoi, la femme, ange meurtri, languit, souffre. Exister, madame, est nécessaire.
Il faut tuer le temps qui nous tient dans sa serre;
donc des plaisirs; toujours, sans trêve, hier, aujourd’hui;
on ne saurait percer de trop de coups l’ennui.
Avoir froid est ignoble; avoir faim est étrange;
pourtant, dans un plat d’or, sans ridicule on mange;
et si la cheminée est un bijou charmant du plus beau marbre, on peut s’y chauffer décemment.
La vie enfin doit presque être un conte de fée.
Je la veux de chansons et de joie étoffée;
Phébus, si cet orchestre à ma guise marchait,
ne serait pas de trop pour en tenir l’archet.
Morbleu! Je n’entends pas que l’ennui vous assomme.
Je vous protège, moi. Marquise, un galant homme prend une femme en gré, sans être un songe-creux, sans être pour cela forcé d’être amoureux,
et, gaîment, au-dessus des misères, l’enlève.
Les besoins de la vie et les besoins du rêve se tiennent; c’est la robe avec le falbala.
J’ai tâché de comprendre à peu près tout cela, et je prétends, c’est là ma façon d’être tendre,
vous préserver de tout et de tout vous défendre.
Zabeth, regardant gallus fixement.
Désirez-vous savoir la vérité?
Gallus.

Fort peu.
Zabeth.

Je vous ruine.
Gallus.

Après?
Zabeth.

Je vous trompe.
Gallus.

Parbleu!
Il découpe une aile de perdrix et l’offre à
Zabeth.

Des amants, c’est de droit. Moi, par-dessus la tête j’en aurais, si j’étais femme, et, comme c’est bête!
ça n’empêcherait pas que je n’aime quelqu’un.
Trompez-moi. Je n’ai pas le goût d’être importun et jaloux, ni le temps d’être amoureux et fade.
Et ruinez-moi. J’aime avoir une naïade, une femme, chez moi, qui, d’un air négligent, penche l’urne d’où coule à grands flots mon argent.
Zabeth.

Monseigneur, vous m’avez de vos bienfaits comblée.
Une pauvre âme fauve aux bois obscurs mêlée, c’était moi. Je vivais dans des lieux inconnus, misérable, et j’étais une fille pieds nus;
on m’avait par pitié fait lire une grammaire;
comme je n’avais plus mon père ni ma mère, et que je travaillais beaucoup pour gagner peu, j’étais parfois sans pain, j’étais souvent sans feu, et je n’avais pas même un miroir. Un jour, sire, vous vîntes. Vous m’avez, duc, avec un sourire, prise en une cabane et mise en un palais.
Tout à coup j’eus des gens, des femmes, des valets, je vis vers moi monter, avec un bruit de joie, moi, fille de la bure, un flot d’or et de soie,
un océan d’azur, de perles, de saphirs;
et j’eus à mon service avril et les zéphirs et l’aurore, et l’éden, avec tout ce qui tente et charme, et je devins une femme éclatante.
Aujourd’hui, vous m’avez dorée en me touchant.

Loge à la comédie et carrosse à Longchamp, j’ai tout, et, comme au fond du ciel noir, dans les boucles de mes cheveux on voit luire des escarboucles;
je suis superbe, grâce à vous; je resplendis, je brille, je suis riche. —
elle se lève.
Eh bien, je vous maudis!
Gallus.

Tiens, ça vous va très bien d’avoir l’air en colère.
à part.
Que veut dire ceci?
Zabeth.

L’âme en tombant s’éclaire.
Ah oui, contre la faim, le froid, vous l’avez dit, contre tout ce qui presse, étreint, froisse, engourdit les indigents sur qui tourbillonne la neige, une barrière d’or me couvre et me protège;
vous m’entourez de soins, duc, n’importe à quel prix,
et vous me préservez de tout. — hors du mépris!
Gallus.

Je vous défends.
Zabeth.

C’est vrai, mais je vous en dispense.
Oui, de ce que l’on dit. Non de ce que l’on pense.
Gallus.

Ce qu’on pense, ah! Vraiment, ce qu’on pense, en effet, je ne puis l’empêcher.
Zabeth.

C’est vous qui l’avez fait.
Gallus.

C’est pour rire, pas vrai? Vous avez des épaules charmantes.
Zabeth.

La drôlesse insultera les drôles.
Se tournant vers la porte par où tous sont sortis.
Où sont-ils, ces faquins? Ah! Vil groupe rieur!
à Gallus.
Savez-vous ce qu’il faut à la femme, monsieur?
C’est l’amour. Je n’ai pas ce pain sacré de l’âme, et je me sens haïe et je me vois infâme.
Soyez maudit.
Gallus s’accoude sur la table et la considère avec attention.
Elle poursuit.
Ces ducs, ces princes, ces marquis!
Tous! Ils sont monstrueux, à force d’être exquis!
Ils me glacent. Ils sont joyeux de quoi? De haine.
Ils ont la liberté féroce; j’ai la chaîne.
Ils ont une patrie, eux, c’est l’immense azur, c’est le ciel. Dans la nue ils marchent d’un pied sûr.
Ils sont comme des dieux. On me mêle à la fête.
J’y vais. J’ai l’air d’en être. Et tout luit sur ce faîte, tout chante. C’est à qui rira, boira, vivra.
Marquis, que donne-t-on ce soir à l’Opéra?
Veux-tu souper? Dansons. Mille louis. Je joue.
Belle, la rose est pâle auprès de votre joue.
Festins. Chasses. On a des lilas en janvier.
On va droit au plaisir sans jamais dévier.
De l’assouvissement on fait sa destinée, et je suis la proscrite, et je suis la damnée!
Vous savez bien, les loups et les tigres des bois, je les préfère à vous les hommes.
Gallus, à part.
C’est, je crois,
sérieux.
Zabeth.

Pas d’amour et pas d’espoir! Je souffre.
J’ai dans le cœur le vide et dans l’âme le gouffre.
Monseigneur! Monseigneur! Que vous avais-je fait?
Ah! L’auguste et profond soleil me réchauffait, ah! J’avais l’innocente aurore pour ivresse!
Ah oui, c’est vrai, d’accord, j’étais une pauvresse, et parmi les vivants, et sous le grand ciel bleu, et dans tout l’univers, je n’avais rien, — que Dieu!
Je ne l’ai plus. Abîme! Oui, j’avais pour ressource de cueillir une mûre et de boire à la source, j’étais libre, et j’avais pour ami le rocher.
Quelle idée eûtes-vous de venir me chercher?
Ce Gunich vous aida, votre digne ministre.
Vous fîtes ce jour-là, prince, un complot sinistre contre l’inconnu. Mettre un piège dans les cieux!
Saisir une âme au vol pour lui crever les yeux!
Ah! Ce qu’on tue au ciel, pour l’enfer on le crée.
ô monseigneur, j’étais l’ignorance sacrée.
Qu’avez-vous fait de moi? L’aveugle, mal conduit, maudit son guide traître. Hélas! J’étais la nuit, et vous avez été la mauvaise lumière.
Vous fûtes l’incendie, et j’étais la chaumière.
Sans doute je penchais vers la faute, mettons que j’étais coquette, oui, mais j’étais à tâtons, j’hésitais, un conseil honnête m’eût sauvée.
Ah! Duc! Vous m’avez fait une affreuse arrivée dans la chute par l’âcre et fausse ascension, et par l’enivrement dans la perdition!
Oui, j’étais l’alouette. Est-ce un crime? Hélas, être, moi la pauvre aile folle, et vous le miroir traître, ce fut notre destin. Moi, vaine et sans effroi;
vous, sans frein, et frivole! à quoi bon être roi
si l’on n’a dans le cœur quelque haute chimère?
Duc, laissant, au-dessus du vil peuple éphémère, votre esprit souverain flotter dans l’absolu, vous rêviez un grand rêve, altesse; il vous a plu d’essayer de jeter une âme dans ce moule;

devant les yeux d’un roi l’infini se déroule;
créer, rien n’est plus beau; vous avez, duc féal,
voulu réaliser enfin cet idéal,
ce but noble où le cœur d’un grand prince s’applique, et c’est pourquoi je suis une fille publique.
Un, c’est le paradis, et l’enfer c’est plusieurs.
Qu’est-ce que j’avais fait, ciel juste, à ces messieurs!
J’ignorais; ils savaient. Un jour, tremblante, nue, je me suis vue au fond de l’opprobre, ingénue!
Ah! C’est un crime, c’est un sombre outrage à Dieu, ah! C’est l’assassinat d’une âme, et c’est un jeu!
Jusqu’à quel point c’est noir, vous l’ignorez vous-même!
On ne sait pas toujours quel est le grain qu’on sème.
On s’imagine avoir le droit de s’amuser, et que, puisqu’on nous dore, on peut bien nous briser!
Vous n’êtes pas méchant pourtant, mais vous vous faites de nos chutes à nous, tristes femmes, des fêtes!
Ah! La fille du peuple est prise, et le seigneur l’emporte, éblouissant et louche suborneur, et les voilà tous deux dans la même nuée.
Folle, et sa chevelure éparse et dénouée, la malheureuse rit, et lui l’entraîne au fond d’une ombre où le démon avec Dieu se confond, et l’on s’enivre, ensemble on s’égare, et l’on erre,
et de ce noir baiser sort un coup de tonnerre!
L’atome, on peut marcher dessus. Non. Je crierai.
Duc, vous êtes le char du triomphe doré,
mais savez-vous de quoi vous êtes responsable?
C’est de l’écrasement du pauvre grain de sable.
Il cassera ce char dont l’orgueil est l’essieu.
La prostitution, c’est l’hymen malgré Dieu.
Vous n’avez vu dans moi qu’une esclave qui ploie, une chair misérable, un vil spectre de joie,
acceptant ce veuvage éternel, l’impudeur.
Vous vous êtes trompé, monsieur. J’étais un cœur.
Ah! Vous le croyez donc, vous avez fait ce songe d’être ma providence, et moi je dis : mensonge!

Vous m’avez tout donné? Vous m’avez tout volé!
Vous m’avez pris l’honneur, le nom immaculé,
le droit aux yeux baissés, la paix dans la prière, et la gaie innocence, et cette extase fière de pouvoir confronter, quel que soit le destin, sa conscience avec l’étoile du matin!
Vous m’avez pris la joie et donné l’ironie.
Duc, j’avais le sommeil, je vous dois l’insomnie.
Mon père, ma mère! Oh! J’y songe avec remords, et je sens la rougeur venir au front des morts.
Vos bienfaits, vos bontés, prince, sont des sévices;
vos dons sont des soufflets. Qu’est-ce que j’ai? Des vices.
Par ces hideux passants mon cœur sombre est troublé.
Gallus.

Mais…
Zabeth.

Oh! Sarcler dans l’herbe! Oh! Glaner dans le blé!
M’éveiller, m’en aller, sereine et reposée, l’âme dans la candeur, les pieds dans la rosée, j’avais cela! J’avais la sainte pauvreté!
Maintenant je vois croître autour de moi, l’été, l’hiver, sans fin, sans cesse, un luxe énorme, étrange,
fait de plaisir, de pourpre et d’orgueil, — et de fange!
Je n’ai plus rien, je râle, et tout me manque enfin!
Le mépris, c’est le froid; l’estime, c’est la faim.
Je dois cette indigence à vos tristes manœuvres,
monseigneur.
Elle arrache ses parures.
ô colliers et bracelets, couleuvres!
ô diamants hideux et vils! Joyaux méchants!
Bijoux traîtres!
Elle les foule aux pieds.
Où donc êtes-vous, fleurs des champs?
Se retournant vers Gallus.
Mais, direz-vous, avoir ce lourd fermier pour maître m’eût froissée, et j’aurais eu quelque amant? Peut-être!

J’eusse pu rencontrer, oui, pourquoi le nier?
Quelque âpre aventurier des bois, un braconnier, que sais-je? Un voleur! Oui, dans l’antre et dans l’ortie, un homme commençant, prince, une dynastie, un bandit, le fusil sur l’épaule, un rôdeur demandant aux monts noirs, pleins d’ombre et de grandeur, aux bois, où le soleil dans l’or sanglant se couche,
une épouse, et j’aurais pris cette âme farouche,
et j’aurais laissé prendre à cette âme mon cœur!
Il eût été mon chêne et j’eusse été sa fleur.
Et je vivrais ainsi, pauvre avec l’homme sombre, habitant le hallier, la fuite, le décombre,
aussi hors de la loi que l’aigle et le vautour,
nue, en haillons, sans gîte… — eh bien! J’aurais l’amour!
Et j’entendrais peut-être en cette vie amère une petite voix qui me dirait : ma mère!
Et mon voleur aurait de l’estime pour moi.
Il serait tendre et bon, n’étant pas encor roi, et nous serions tous deux honnêtes l’un pour l’autre.
Tenez, duc, et voyez quelle soif est la nôtre!
Vous êtes prince et vieux, deux choses que je hais, eh bien, pourtant peut-être, hélas! Nos vains souhaits gardent au fond de l’ombre une porte fermée, je vous aurais aimé si vous m’aviez aimée!
Gallus.

Mais…
Zabeth.

C’est fini. Silence! Avoir rêvé le ciel, et s’éveiller avec l’arrière-goût du fiel,
et de tous les affronts sentir qu’on est la cible!
Hélas! Vous m’avez fait le cœur noir et terrible.
Soyez maudit.
Gallus veut parler. Elle l’arrête du geste.
Silence! Il me reste, et c’est beau, contre vous, votre ennui, ma haine — et le tombeau.

Gallus.

Mais que voulez-vous donc? Dites-le!
Zabeth.

Ne plus vivre.
Elle tire de son sein quelque chose qu’elle approche de ses lèvres.
Gallus.

Qu’a-t-elle dans la main? Grand Dieu!
Zabeth.

Ce qui délivre.
Une nuit, vous étiez ivre, usage des grands.
Je vous ai pris ceci.
Elle montre à Gallus une bague.
Gallus.

L’anneau!
Zabeth mord vivement le chaton, et, pâle, tend l’anneau à Gallus.
Zabeth.

Je vous le rends.
Gallus.

Ciel! Mais c’est un poison! La mort terrible et prompte!
Zabeth.

Boire la mort n’est rien quand on a bu la honte.
Elle s’affaisse sur un fauteuil.
Adieu. Je prends mon vol, triste oiseau des forêts.
Personne ne m’aima. Je meurs.
Elle expire.
Gallus, se jetant à ses pieds.
Je t’adorais!

4 mars. — 3 avril 1869.

LE LIVRE LYRIQUE — La Destinée

LA DESTINEE , I

je suis fait d’ ombre et de marbre.
Comme les pieds noirs de l’ arbre, je m’ enfonce dans la nuit.
J’ écoute; je suis sous terre;
d’ en bas je dis au tonnerre :
attends! Ne fais pas de bruit.
Moi qu’ on nomme le poëte, je suis dans la nuit muette
l’ escalier mystérieux;
je suis l’ escalier Ténèbres;
dans mes spirales funèbres
l’ ombre ouvre ses vagues yeux.
Les flambeaux deviendront cierges.
Respectez mes degrés vierges, passez, les joyeux du jour!
Mes marches ne sont pas faites pour les pieds ailés des fêtes, pour les pieds nus de l’ amour.
Devant ma profondeur blême tout tremble, les spectres même ont des gouttes de sueur.
Je viens de la tombe morte;
j’ aboutis à cette porte
par où passe une lueur.
Le banquet rit et flamboie.
Les maîtres sont dans la joie sur leur trône ensanglanté;

tout les sert, tout les encense;
et la femme à leur puissance
mesure sa nudité.
Laissez la clef et le pène.
Je suis l’ escalier; la peine

médite; l’ heure viendra;
quelqu’ un qu’ entourent les ombres montera mes marches sombres, et quelqu’ un les descendra.
3 avril 1854.

1854, 08, 08

LA DESTINEE , II AUX OISEAUX ET AUX NUAGES .

ô vierges du zénith, nuées,
ô doux enfants de l’ air, oiseaux, blancheurs par l’ aube saluées,
que contemple l’ oeil bleu des eaux;
vous qu’ ève nomma la première;
vous pour qui le Dieu redouté fit cet abîme, la Lumière, et cette aile, la Liberté;
vous qu’ on voit, du gouffre où nous sommes, dans le grand ciel mystérieux;
vous qui n’ admirez pas les Romes, les fourmilières valant mieux;
vous que la rosée en ses ombres abreuve ou crée avec ses pleurs, oiseaux qui sortez des nids sombres,
nuages qui sortez des fleurs, parlez; vous que le jour fait naître
pour un essor illimité, vous que le libre éther pénètre
de gloire et de sérénité, vous qui voyez le mont austère,
le frais matin, le soir obscur,
toute la mer, toute la terre,
éternels passants de l’ azur;

que dit-on, dans la nuit sereine, que pense-t-on, dans la clarté, de toute cette honte humaine qui rampe sous l’ immensité?
8 août 1854.

1855, 01, 22

LA DESTINEE , III

quand le bien et le mal, couple qui nous obsède, fixant leurs yeux sur nous, nous demandant notre aide,
montrant deux chemins à nos pas,
l’ un, celui qui descend, l’ autre, celui qui monte,
sont là, nous appelant, prêts à combattre : — honte à l’ homme qui ne choisit pas!
Honte au vivant timide, au passant inutile, eunuque qui lui-même abdique et se mutile,
qui voit le devoir et le fuit,
et ne s’ y jette pas la tête la première, et n’ ose pas ouvrir la porte de lumière et fermer la porte de nuit!
Qui recule peut faire une ruine immense.
Grands, petits, Dieu sait seul où la force commence,
seul où la faiblesse finit;
quand un mont chancelant croule, le grain de sable, s’ il pouvait empêcher sa chute, est responsable des crimes du bloc de granit.
L’ homme faible est l’ appui du méchant qui se lève;
les peureux font l’ audace; ils ont avec le glaive la complicité du fourreau.
Ne dites pas : — c’ est mal, mais je n’ y puis que faire. — ne dites pas : — j’ ai peur; et je rentre en ma sphère;
meurs, victime; frappe, bourreau.
Je laisse le remords et le crime à ma porte;
je m’ en vais du forfait des autres; que m’ importe leur scélératesse ou leur deuil!
Ce mort, s’ il m’ accusait, serait une âme fausse;

car, n’ étant pas de ceux qui creusèrent la fosse, je suis quitte avec le cercueil. — non, non! Il faut briser le poteau du supplice; qui, pouvant empêcher, laisse faire, est complice.

Abstention, complicité.
Ce qui semble un atome est tout un crime immonde;
c’ est souvent dans le moindre espace qu’ en ce monde
tient la plus grande énormité.
Tel qui renie un meurtre en est le vrai ministre.
Le fond de la cuvette où, dans l’ ombre sinistre, un lâche se lave les mains,
peut offrir au regard, — vision surhumaine, et que tout l’ océan ne contiendrait qu’ à peine! — un mont noir aux âpres chemins, trois gibets, deux voleurs se tordant sous les cordes, les cieux mystérieux pleins de miséricordes
s’ ouvrant pour recevoir l’ affront, et sur la croix du centre, en une nuit sans lune, un juste couronné d’ épines dont chacune perce une étoile sur son front!
22 janvier 1855.

LA DESTINEE , IV

La calomnie immonde et qu’ on jette en courant et dont on nous lapide, traverse, sans troubler son calme transparent,
le flot d’ un coeur limpide.
Vile, engloutie au fond de l’ âme, loin du jour,
stagnante, elle s’ efface, et la candeur, la paix, l’ espérance et l’ amour restent à la surface.
Et les rêves sereins, la foi qui nous sourit,
la bonté, douce et franche,
n’ en reviennent pas moins dans ce tranquille esprit baigner leur aile blanche.
L’ injure du passant dans le lac le plus pur,
dans les coeurs les plus dignes, tombe; mais ce fond noir sur la vague d’ azur laisse nager les cygnes.

LA DESTINEE , V , I CHANSON D’ AUTREFOIS .

Quelqu’ un connaît-il ma cachette?
C’ est un lieu calme, où le ciel clair en un jour de printemps rachète le mal qu’ ont fait six mois d’ hiver.
Il y coule des eaux charmantes;
l’ iris y naît dans les roseaux;
et le murmure des amantes
s’ y mêle au babil des oiseaux.
Là vivent, dans les fleurs, des groupes
épars, et parfois réunis, avec des chants au fond des coupes et le silence au fond des nids.
La grâce de cette ombre heureuse et de ce verdoyant coteau semble faite des pleurs de Greuze et du sourire de Watteau.
Paris dans les brumes se plonge;
et le cabaret de Régnier
ne vaut pas une heure de songe sous les branches d’ un châtaignier.
Les plus belles choses du rêve sont celles qu’ admet l’ antre frais, et que confusément achève
le balancement des forêts.

Je comprends peu qu’ on soit superbe et qu’ il existe des méchants, puisqu’ on peut se coucher dans l’ herbe et qu’ il fait clair de lune aux champs.
Toutes les fleurs sont un langage qui nous recommande l’ amour, qui nous berce, et qui nous engage à mettre dans nos coeurs le jour.

Les vagues robes brillantées, les seins blancs et les jeunes voix des Phyllis et les Galatées conseillent le rire et les bois.
28 octobre.
1857, 05, 31

LA DESTINEE , V , II CHANSON D’ AUJOURD’ HUI .

la vision de la vie,
larve des vents poursuivie,
passe et ne m’ occupe pas.
La terre est une masure;
qu’ importe ce que mesure
l’ heure en tournant son compas!
Que me fait la moisson blonde,
l’ étoile sortant de l’ onde,
l’ aube dorant l’ horizon,
et le bouquet sur la branche, et la nue obscure ou blanche!
Ce n’ est point là ma maison.

Je regarde d’ autres choses,
d’ autres astres, d’ autres roses,
l’ autre figure du sort,
et ce champ noir que recouvre
l’ ombre, où vaguement s’ entr’ ouvre la fleur blême de la mort.
Oh! Pour qui donc fleurit-elle,
la pâle fleur immortelle?
Triste, elle s’ épanouit;
elle exhale, morne et sombre,
on ne sait quel parfum d’ ombre
dans l’ inexprimable nuit.
Au fond des brumes fatales, sur ses sinistres pétales tremble une étrange lueur;
la lugubre fleur regarde,
vertigineuse et hagarde,
comme une face en sueur.

à sa lumière où s’ éclipse la terrestre apocalypse,
j’ entrevois la vérité;
car la vie est le mensonge,
la chair trompe, et l’ oeil qui songe voit mieux l’ âme, l’ homme ôté.
Guernesey, 31 mai 1857.

1843, 05

LA DESTINEE , VI PRES D’ AVRANCHES .

la nuit morne tombait sur la morne étendue.
Le vent du soir soufflait, et, d’ une aile éperdue,
faisait fuir, à travers les écueils de granit,
quelques voiles au port, quelques oiseaux au nid.
Triste jusqu’ à la mort, je contemplais le monde.
Oh! Que la mer est vaste et que l’ âme est profonde!
Saint-Michel surgissait, seul sur les flots amers,
Chéops de l’ occident, pyramide des mers.
Je songeais à l’ égypte aux plis infranchissables,
à la grande isolée éternelle des sables, noire tente des rois, ce tas d’ ombres qui dort dans le camp immobile et sombre de la mort.
Hélas! Dans ces déserts, qu’ emplit d’ un souffle immense Dieu, seul dans sa colère et seul dans sa clémence, ce que l’ homme a dressé debout sur l’ horizon,
là-bas, c’ est le sépulcre, ici, c’ est la prison.
Mai 1843.

1852, 04, 23

LA DESTINEE , VII CHANSON .

j’ aime à me figurer, de longs voiles couvertes, des vierges qui s’ en vont chantant dans les chemins et qui sortent d’ un temple avec des palmes vertes aux mains;
un rêve qui me plaît dans mes heures moroses,
c’ est un groupe d’ enfants dansant dans l’ ombre en rond,
joyeux, avec le rire à la bouche et des roses
au front!
Un rêve qui m’ enchante encore et qui me charme,
c’ est une douce fille à l’ âge radieux qui, sans savoir pourquoi, songe avec une larme aux yeux;
une autre vision, belle entre les plus belles,
c’ est Jeanne et Marguerite, astres, vous les voyez!
Qui, le soir, dans les prés courent avec des ailes aux pieds!
Mais des rêves dont j’ ai la pensée occupée,
celui qui pour mon âme a le plus de douceur,
c’ est un tyran qui râle avec un coup d’ épée au coeur!
Bruxelles, 23 avril 1852.

LA DESTINEE , VIII

Coup d’ épée; oui, mais non de poignard. Il te faut, poëte, un tournoi franc et libre, où le front haut,
on lutte, glaive au poing, sans fureur vipérine, pied à pied, face à face et poitrine à poitrine,
toi, soldat du droit, lui, champion de l’ enfer;
tu veux combattre au jour, loyal comme le fer,
fauve et terrible avec la candeur des colombes, afin que si c’ est toi, poëte, qui succombes,
tu puisses, en entrant au sépulcre demain, trouver Cid et Bayard qui te tendent la main.
29 mai.

LA DESTINEE , IX EN ECOUTANT CHANTER LA PRINCESSE .

Dans ta haute demeure
dont l’ air est étouffant, de l’ accent dont on pleure tu chantes, douce enfant.
Tu chantes, jeune fille.
Ton père, c’ est le roi.
Autour de toi tout brille, mais tout soupire en toi.
Pense, mais sans rien dire;
aimer t’ est défendu;
doux être, ton sourire
en naissant s’ est perdu.
Tu te sens épousée par une main qui sort inconnue et glacée
de cette ombre, le sort.
Ton coeur, triste et sans ailes, est dans ce gouffre noir à des profondeurs telles que tu ne peux l’ avoir.
Tu n’ es qu’ altesse encore, tu seras majesté.
Bien qu’ un reflet d’ aurore sur ton front soit resté, enfant chère aux armées,
déjà nous te voyons

dans toutes les fumées et dans tous les rayons.
Ton parrain est le pape;
vierge, il t’ a dit : Ave!

Quand tu passes, on frappe des piques le pavé.
Comme Dieu l’ on t’ encense;
toi-même as le frisson
de la toute-puissance
mêlée à ta chanson.
De vieux légionnaires
te gardent, fiers, soumis;
et l’ on voit des tonnerres à ta porte endormis.
Autour de toi se creuse
l’ éclatant sort des rois.
Tu serais plus heureuse fauvette dans les bois.
3 avril.

1843, 01, 18

LA DESTINEE , X

un hymne harmonieux sort des feuilles du tremble;
les voyageurs craintifs, qui vont la nuit ensemble,
haussent la voix dans l’ ombre où l’ on doit se hâter.
Laissez tout ce qui tremble chanter.
Les marins fatigués sommeillent sur le gouffre.
La mer bleue où Vésuve épand ses flots de soufre se tait dès qu’ il s’ éteint, et cesse de gémir.
Laissez tout ce qui souffre dormir.
Quand la vie est mauvaise on la rêve meilleure.
Les yeux en pleurs au ciel se lèvent à toute heure;
l’ espoir vers Dieu se tourne et Dieu l’ entend crier.
Laissez tout ce qui pleure
prier.
C’ est pour renaître ailleurs qu’ ici-bas on succombe.
Tout ce qui tourbillonne appartient à la tombe.
Il faut dans le grand tout tôt ou tard s’ absorber.
Laissez tout ce qui tombe tomber!
18 janvier 1843.

1855, 03, 17

LA DESTINEE , XI

Dieu ne frappe qu’ en haut. Infimes que nous sommes!
Oh! Disais-je, qu’ ils sont heureux, tous ces grands hommes!
Eschyle a son exil et Job a son fumier.
Caton est le lion, le sort est le limier.
C’ est le fier ornement de la guerre civile, que tous ces grands bannis qui vont de ville en ville.
Verser son âme au monde et son sang aux pavés,
c’ est grand; et les élus, ce sont les éprouvés.
Ils marchent, couronnés d’ un mystérieux lustre.
Oh! Parmi tous heureux et parmi tous illustre celui que la tempête a choisi pour amant!
Dans l’ immense beauté du supplice infamant des auréoles d’ or tremblent sur les génies.
Quel que soit dans l’ histoire, amas de gémonies,
le siècle qui les ait tenus sous ses barreaux,
les hommes glorieux, les sages, les héros,
sont tous contemporains de l’ adversité sombre.
Démosthène chassé parle à Milton dans l’ ombre;
Phidias expulsé rencontre Dante errant.
Phidias dit : le vrai! Dante répond : le grand!
Destins pareils! ô gloire! ô pléiade splendide!
Hérodote en exil suivi par Thucydide!
Thémistocle épervier, Aristide alcyon!
ô les quatrevingts ans du grave Phocion!
C’ est marque de grandeur dans ce monde où l’ on erre que d’ être, ô cieux profonds, balafré du tonnerre!
Caucase est lumineux sous l’ éternel mourant.
Trombe, le vent est beau; l’ onde est belle, torrent.
Je t’ admire, ô ciguë, échafaud, je t’ envie.
Quelle sublime porte à sortir de la vie que celle où se courba Danton, âpre titan!
Le chasseur d’ aigles dit au passereau : va-t’ en!
Et les évènements, comme d’ altiers molosses, ne veulent, dédaigneux, mordre que les colosses! — jaloux, je regardais sous les cieux constellés à tous les grands poteaux ces grands dos flagellés, et tous ces fiers saignants, traînés dans nos discordes, les yeux pleins de rayons, les bras liés de cordes, montant ou descendant les marches de la nuit.

ô crachats au visage! Affronts! Brume où l’ on fuit!
Grand devoir accompli dont le vertige attire!
Proscription! Misère! Ostracisme! Martyre!
Atome, j’ enviais ces pourpres des géants.
Mais nous, pensais-je, hélas! Perdus dans nos néants, nous passons, dévorant quelque inutile joie;
nous sommes trop petits pour que l’ éclair nous voie;
nous, les vivants obscurs, nous ne méritons pas que de notre côté Némésis fasse un pas;
Syène ne reçoit que Juvénal; Minturnes
n’ ouvre qu’ aux Marius ses ombres taciturnes;
Dieu nous créa, chétifs, pour le bonheur d’ en bas;
nous ne sommes pas faits pour les vastes combats,
et, comme ces proscrits aux têtes étoilées,
pour les rêves profonds près des mers désolées.
L’ atome n’ a pas droit aux grands écrasements;
il n’ a pas droit aux cris de la haine, aux tourments de la claie âpre et sainte, aux faces hérissées
de serpents poursuivant sans trêve ses pensées,
non. — je baissais la tête et j’ étais triste ainsi. — maintenant, ô destin, ô Méduse, merci.
17 mars 1855.

LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , I

Comme la nuit tombe vite!
Le jour, en cette saison, comme un voleur prend la fuite,
s’ évade sous l’ horizon.
Il semble, ô soleil de Rome,
de l’ Inde et du Parthénon, que, quand la nuit vient de l’ homme visiter le cabanon,
tu ne veux pas qu’ on te voie, et que tu crains d’ être pris en flagrant délit de joie par la geôlière au front gris.
Pour les heureux en démence
l’ âpre hiver n’ a point d’ effroi, mais il jette un crêpe immense sur celui qui, comme moi, rêveur, saignant, inflexible,
souffrant d’ un stoïque ennui, sentant la bouche invisible et sombre souffler sur lui, montant des effets aux causes,
seul, étranger en tout lieu,
réfugié dans les choses
où l’ on sent palpiter Dieu, de tous les biens qu’ un jour fane et dont rit le sage amer, n’ ayant plus qu’ une cabane

au bord de la grande mer, songe, assis dans l’ embrasure,
se console en s’ abîmant, et, pensif, à sa masure
ajoute le firmament!

Pour cet homme en sa chaumière,
c’ est une amère douleur que l’ adieu de la lumière et le départ de la fleur.
C’ est un chagrin quand, moroses, les rayons dans les vallons
s’ éclipsent, et quand les roses disent : nous nous en allons!

LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , II

Le soir qui verse, ô mystère!
Le ciel noir sur le ciel bleu, entre l’ espace et la terre pose une barre de feu.
Le couchant, dorant mon bouge, ferme, sur l’ ombre où je suis,
comme un verrou de fer rouge,
la porte énorme des nuits.
Cherchant au ciel des étoiles,
vous écoutez, matelots,
ce que le frisson des voiles dit au tremblement des flots.

La bise, bouche vivante,
les vents, les bruits, les typhons, toute la grande épouvante
erre sous les cieux profonds.
Je baisse mes yeux funèbres;
je me sens dans ma terreur compagnon de ces ténèbres et frère de cette horreur.
L’ homme, en proie aux maux sans nombre, porte en son coeur, morne enfer, toute la honte de l’ ombre,
de l’ abîme et de la chair.
Je sens que ce crépuscule me pénètre soucieux, et qu’ en moi l’ âme recule comme le jour dans les cieux.
Il semble que tout s’ altère,
se traîne, expire ou s’ abat, et qu’ il reste de la terre ce qui reste d’ un combat.

L’ arbre, près du flot qui râle, tord ses bras comme un banni;
on ne sait quel reflet pâle des lueurs de l’ infini perce les bois sans feuillée, et teint d’ un livide éclair cette cuirasse écaillée que nous appelons la mer.
Tandis que l’ occident sombre lutte contre le néant, le levant s’ emplit de l’ ombre

de tout le gouffre béant.
Une main — est-ce la vôtre,
Dieu? — tire, en l’ azur désert, les astres l’ un après l’ autre du puits de l’ abîme ouvert.

LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , III

Nuit partout. Rien ne résiste, au couchant comme au midi.
On sent la nature triste,
Dieu froid, le mal enhardi.
Dans l’ univers où s’ efface le nombre et le mouvement, les visions de l’ espace vont et viennent vaguement;
et, tremblante dans ta gloire, tu regardes, ô Vénus, cette grande maison noire
pleine de pas inconnus.

LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , IV

Les caps aux lugubres formes se dressent de tous côtés comme des talons énormes
d’ archanges précipités.
L’ eau bat le roc qu’ elle insulte,
le vent bat l’ eau qu’ il poursuit;

toute l’ onde est un tumulte de montagnes dans la nuit.
L’ écume; ni bords, ni centres;
de blancs flocons; l’ ouragan.
Chaque vague est un des antres où bâille l’ hydre océan.
On ne voit rien que la trombe où la brume s’ élargit;
c’ est du hurlement qui tombe,
de la neige qui rugit.
L’ onde sans fond court sans terme;
l’ eau roule en plis tortueux;
chaque flot s’ ouvre, se ferme,
se rouvre... — ô flots monstrueux!
à jamais l’ infini sombre refait, défait, reconstruit les écroulements sans nombre de ces cavernes de bruit.
à jamais la vague essuie
le roc vert, l’ écueil félon, et, sous ses haillons de pluie,
sous ses cheveux d’ aquilon,
chargé de siècles et d’ âges,
soufflant dans de noirs clairons, faisant un bruit de cordages,
de tempête et d’ avirons,

au fond de l’ ombre insondable où l’ astre meurt prisonnier, le pâle hiver formidable passe, effrayant nautonier.

1855, 01, 15

LA DESTINEE , XII NUITS D’ HIVER , V

oh! Reviens! Printemps! Fanfare des parfums et des couleurs!
Toute la plaine s’ effare
dans une émeute de fleurs.
La prairie est une fête;
l’ âme aspire l’ air, le jour,
l’ aube, et sent qu’ elle en est faite;
l’ azur se mêle à l’ amour.
On croit voir, tant avril dore tout de son reflet riant, éclore au rosier l’ aurore et la rose à l’ orient.
Comme ces aubes de flamme chassent les soucis boudeurs!
On sent s’ ouvrir dans son âme de charmantes profondeurs.
On se retrouve heureux, jeune, et, plein d’ ombre et de matin,
on rit de l’ hiver, ce jeûne,
avec l’ été, ce festin.
Oh! Mon coeur loin de ces grèves fuit et se plonge, insensé, dans tout ce gouffre de rêves que nous nommons le passé!
Je revois mil huit cent douze, mes frères petits, le bois,
le puisard et la pelouse,
et tout le bleu d’ autrefois.

Enfance! Madrid! Campagne
où mon père nous quitta!
Et dans le soleil, l’ Espagne!
Toi dans l’ ombre, Pepita!

Moi, huit ans, elle le double;
en m’ appelant son mari, elle m’ emplissait de trouble... —
ô rameaux de mai fleuri!
Elle aimait un capitaine;
j’ ai compris plus tard pourquoi, tout en l’ aimant, la hautaine
n’ était douce que pour moi.
Elle attisait son martyre avec moi, pour l’ embraser, lui refusait un sourire et me donnait un baiser.
L’ innocente, en sa paresse,
se livrant sans se faner,
me donnait cette caresse
afin de ne rien donner.
Et ce baiser économe,
qui me semblait généreux,
rendait jaloux le jeune homme,
et me rendait amoureux.
Il partait, la main crispée;
et, me sentant un rival, je méditais une épée
et je rêvais un cheval.
Ainsi, du bout de son aile touchant mon coeur nouveau-né, gaie, ayant dans sa prunelle

un doux regard étonné, sans savoir qu’ elle était femme,
et riant de m’ épouser,
cet ange allumait mon âme
dans l’ ombre avec un baiser.
Mal ou bien, épine ou rose,
à tout âge, sages, fous, nous apprenons quelque chose

d’ un enfant plus vieux que nous.
Un jour la pauvre petite
s’ endormit sous le gazon... —
comme la nuit tombe vite
sur notre sombre horizon!
15 janvier 1855.

1855, 01, 09

LA DESTINEE , XIII , I CHANSON D’ AUTREFOIS .

jamais elle ne raille,
étant un calme esprit;
mais toujours elle rit. —
voici des brins de mousse avec des brins de paille;
fauvette des roseaux,
fais ton nid sur les eaux.
Quand sous la clarté douce qui sort de tes beaux yeux, on passe, on est joyeux. —
voici des brins de paille avec des brins de mousse;
martinet de l’ azur,
fais ton nid dans mon mur.
Dans l’ aube avril se mire, et les rameaux fleuris sont pleins de petits cris. — voici de son regard, voici de son sourire, amour, ô doux vainqueur,
fais ton nid dans mon coeur.
9 janvier 1855.

1854, 04, 03

LA DESTINEE , XIII , II CHANSON D' AUJOURD' HUI .

je disais : — Dieu qu' aucun suppliant n' importune, quand vous m' éprouverez dans votre volonté, laissez mon libre esprit choisir dans la fortune
l' un ou l' autre côté;
entre un riche esclavage et la pauvreté franche, laissez-moi choisir, Dieu du cèdre et du roseau;
entre l' or de la cage et le vert de la branche faites juge l' oiseau. — maintenant je suis libre, et la nuit me réclame;
j' ai choisi l' âpre exil; j' habite au bois obscur;
mais je vois s' allumer les étoiles de l' âme dans mon sinistre azur.
3 avril 1854.

1854, 10, 08

LA DESTINEE , XIV JERSEY .

Jersey dort dans les flots, ces éternels grondeurs;
et dans sa petitesse elle a les deux grandeurs;
île, elle a l’ océan; roche, elle est la montagne.
Par le sud Normandie et par le nord Bretagne, elle est pour nous la France, et, dans son lit de fleurs, elle en a le sourire et quelquefois les pleurs.
Pour la troisième fois j’ y vois les pommes mûres.
Terre d’ exil, que mord la vague aux sourds murmures,
sois bénie, île verte, amour du flot profond!
Ce coin de terre, où l’ âme à l’ infini se fond,
s’ il était mon pays, serait ce que j’ envie.
Là, le lutteur serein, naufragé de la vie,
pense, et, sous l’ oeil de Dieu, sur cet écueil vermeil, laisse blanchir son âme ainsi que le soleil
blanchit sur le gazon les linges des laveuses.
Les rocs semblent frappés d’ attitudes rêveuses;
dans leurs antres, ainsi qu’ aux fentes d’ un pressoir,
l’ écume à flots bouillonne et luit; quand vient le soir, la forêt jette au vent des notes sibyllines;
le dolmen monstrueux songe sur les collines;
l’ obscure nuit l’ ébauche en spectre; et dans le bloc la lune blême fait apparaître Moloch.
à cause du vent d’ ouest, tout le long de la plage, dans tous les coins de roche où se groupe un village,
sur les vieux toits tremblants des pêcheurs riverains, le chaume est retenu par des câbles marins pendant le long des murs avec de grosses pierres;
la nourrice au sein nu qui baisse les paupières chante à l’ enfant qui tette un chant de matelot;

le bateau dès qu’ il rentre est tiré hors du flot;
et les prés sont charmants. Salut, terre sacrée!
Le seuil des maisons rit comme une aube dorée.

Phares, salut! Amis que le péril connaît!
Salut, clochers où vient nicher le martinet;
pauvres autels sculptés par des sculpteurs de proues;
chemins que dans les bois emplit le bruit des roues;
jardins de laurier rose et d’ hortensia bleu;
étangs près de la mer, sagesses près de Dieu!
Salut! à l’ horizon s’ envole la frégate;
le flux mêle aux galets, polis comme l’ agate,
les goëmons, toison du troupeau des récifs;
et Vénus éblouit les vieux rochers pensifs, dans l’ ombre, au point du jour, quand, au chant de la grive, tenant l’ enfant matin par la main, elle arrive.
ô bruyères! Plémont qu’ évite le steamer!
Vieux palais de Cybèle écroulé dans la mer!
Mont qu’ étreint l’ océan de ses liquides marbres!
Mugissement des boeufs! Doux sommeils sous les arbres!
L’ île semble prier comme un religieux;
tout à l’ entour, chantant leur chant prodigieux,
l’ abîme et l’ océan font leur immense fête;
la nue en passant pleure; et l’ écueil, sur son faîte,
pendant que la mer brise à ses pieds le vaisseau,
garde un peu d’ eau du ciel pour le petit oiseau.
Creux de la Touraille (l’ Homme sans Tête).
8 octobre 1854.

1854, 02, 18

LA DESTINEE , XV ANDROCLES .

quand tout me souriait encore,
jadis, quand j’ étais radieux, aux jours de la jeunesse, aurore dont on prolonge les adieux, du milieu de l’ immense fête des heureux d’ alors qui, joyeux, sceptre en main et couronne en tête, riaient, chantaient, mêlés aux cieux,
j’ ai vu, tandis que sur la terre tout était faste, hymne et concert, l’ exil qui saignait, solitaire et terrible, dans son désert.
Je suis allé vers l’ âpre grève où rampait le grand abattu;
j’ ai dit : je suis celui qui rêve.
Toi qui souffres, qui donc es-tu?
Et, levant sa prunelle pleine du reflet lointain de Saint-Cloud, il m’ a dit : je suis Sainte-Hélène.
Il m’ a dit : je suis Holyrood.
Alors, moi, fils de nos désastres, attestant, devant ces douleurs,
et la nuit qui sème les astres, et le jour qui sème les fleurs,
j’ ai salué dans sa ruine le sombre maître estropié, et j’ ai retiré son épine,

et baisé sa plaie à son pié.
Puis dans le vent qui tourbillonne
j’ ai continué mon chemin; car j’ étais à l’ âge où rayonne
le mystérieux lendemain.

J’ ai vécu; j’ ai penché ma tête sur les souffrants, sur les petits.
L’ azur fit place à la tempête;
j’ avais rêvé, je combattis.
Ainsi que le frère d’ électre, comme Jacob, — Dieu, tu le veux, —
j’ ai saisi corps à corps le spectre, et l’ ange m’ a pris aux cheveux.
Je combattis pour la pensée,
pour le devoir, pour Dieu nié, pour la grande France éclipsée,
pour le soleil calomnié.
Je combattis l’ ombre et l’ envie, sans peur, sans tache à mon écu;
puis il se trouva, c’ est la vie,
qu’ ayant lutté, je fus vaincu.
Je fus un de ceux que la foule donne à dévorer à l’ exil.
Sur tout vaincu le dédain roule;
Brutus est fou, Caton est vil.
La Victoire éclatant de rire montre Aristide à ses amants;
que de martyrs l’ exil déchire!
Sa cage est pleine d’ ossements!

Autour de moi des voix funèbres criaient : Cayenne! Lambessa!
L’ exil songeait dans les ténèbres;
quand il me vit, il se dressa.
Il vint à moi, ce noir ministre du sombre destin inclément.
Pendant qu’ il s’ avançait sinistre, je le regardai fixement.
Il venait; sur la terre sombre son pas sonnait comme un marteau.
Maintenant il me tient dans l’ ombre

et son ongle est sur mon manteau.
Mais, au lieu d’ angoisse et de peine,
j’ ai le calme et la joie au coeur.
Le lion s’ est mis, dans l’ arène,
à lécher le gladiateur.
Jersey, 18 février 1854.

1857, 10, 04

LA DESTINEE , XVI A MA FILLE ADELE .

tout enfant, tu dormais près de moi, rose et fraîche, comme un petit Jésus assoupi dans sa crèche;
ton pur sommeil était si calme et si charmant que tu n' entendais pas l' oiseau chanter dans l' ombre;
moi, pensif, j' aspirais toute la douceur sombre du mystérieux firmament.
Et j' écoutais voler sur ta tête les anges;
et je te regardais dormir; et sur tes langes
j' effeuillais des jasmins et des oeillets sans bruit;
et je priais, veillant sur tes paupières closes;
et mes yeux se mouillaient de pleurs, songeant aux choses
qui nous attendent dans la nuit.
Un jour mon tour viendra de dormir; et ma couche,
faite d' ombre, sera si morne et si farouche que je n' entendrai pas non plus chanter l' oiseau;
et la nuit sera noire; alors, ô ma colombe, larmes, prière et fleurs, tu rendras à ma tombe ce que j' ai fait pour ton berceau.
4 octobre 1857.

1854, 03, 17

LA DESTINEE , XVII EN MARCHANT LE MATIN .

puisque là-bas s’ entr’ ouvre une porte vermeille, puisque l’ aube blanchit le bord de l’ horizon, pareille au serviteur qui le premier s’ éveille et, sa lampe à la main, marche dans la maison, puisqu’ un blême rayon argente la fontaine, puisqu’ à travers les bois l’ immense firmament jette une lueur pâle et calme que la plaine regarde vaguement, puisque le point du jour sur les monts vient d’ éclore, je m’ en vais dans les champs tristes, vivants et doux;
je voudrais bien savoir où l’ on trouve une aurore pour cette sombre nuit que nous avons en nous!
Que fait l’ homme? La vie est-elle une aventure?
Que verra-t-on après et de l’ autre côté?
Tout frissonne. Est-ce à moi que tu parles, nature, dans cette obscurité?
17 mars 1854.

1855, 07, 12

LA DESTINEE , XVIII

un groupe tout à l’ heure était là sur la grève, regardant quelque chose à terre. — un chien qui crève!
M’ ont crié des enfants; voilà tout ce que c’ est. — et j’ ai vu sous leurs pieds un vieux chien qui gisait.
L’ océan lui jetait l’ écume de ses lames.
 — voilà trois jours qu’ il est ainsi, disaient des femmes, on a beau lui parler, il n’ ouvre pas les yeux.
 — son maître est un marin absent, disait un vieux.
Un pilote, passant la tête à sa fenêtre,
a repris : — ce chien meurt de ne plus voir son maître.
Justement le bateau vient d’ entrer dans le port;
le maître va venir, mais le chien sera mort. —
je me suis arrêté près de la triste bête, qui, sourde, ne bougeant ni le corps ni la tête,
les yeux fermés, semblait morte sur le pavé.
Comme le soir tombait, le maître est arrivé, vieux lui-même; et, hâtant son pas que l’ âge casse,
a murmuré le nom de son chien à voix basse.
Alors, rouvrant ses yeux pleins d’ ombre, exténué, le chien a regardé son maître, a remué une dernière fois sa pauvre vieille queue, puis est mort. C’ était l’ heure où, sous la voûte bleue, comme un flambeau qui sort d’ un gouffre, Vénus luit;
et j’ ai dit : d’ où vient l’ astre? Où va le chien? ô nuit!
12 juillet 1855.

1854, 02, 28

LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , I

tu souris dans l’ invisible.
ô douce âme inaccessible,
seul, morne, amer,
je sens ta robe qui flotte tandis qu’ à mes pieds sanglote la sombre mer.
La nuit à mes chants assiste.
Je chante mon refrain triste
à l’ horizon.
Ange frissonnant, tu mêles le battement de tes ailes à ma chanson.
Je songe à ces pauvres êtres, nés sous tous ces toits champêtres,
dont le feu luit,
barbe grise, tête blonde,
qu’ emporta cette eau profonde
dans l’ âpre nuit.
Je pleure les morts des autres.
Hélas! Leurs deuils et les nôtres ne sont qu’ un deuil.

Nous sommes, dans l’ étendue, la même barque perdue
au même écueil.

LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , II

Tous ces patrons, tous ces mousses, qu’ appelaient tant de voix douces et tant de voeux,
ils sont mêlés à l’ espace, et le poisson d’ argent passe dans leurs cheveux.
Au fond des vagues sans nombre, on voit, sous l’ épaisseur sombre du flot bruni, leur bouche ouverte et terrible qui boit la stupeur horrible
de l’ infini.
Ils errent, blêmes fantômes.
Ils ne verront plus les chaumes
au pignon noir,
les bois aux fraîches ramées, les prés, les fleurs, les fumées
dans l’ or du soir.
Dans leurs yeux l’ onde insensée, qui fuit sans cesse, poussée
du vent hagard,
remplace, sombre passante,
la terre, à jamais absente de leur regard.

Ils sont l’ ombre et le cadavre;
ceux qui vont de havre en havre
dans les reflux,
qui ne verront plus l’ aurore, et que l’ aube au chant sonore ne verra plus.

LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , III

Et cependant sur les côtes on songe encore à ces hôtes
de l’ inconnu,
partis, dans l’ eau qui frissonne, pour cette ombre dont personne
n’ est revenu.
C’ était l’ enfant! C’ était l’ homme!
On les appelle, on les nomme dans les maisons,
le soir, quand brille le phare, et quand la flamme s’ effare sur les tisons.
L’ un dit : — en août, j’ espère, ils reviendront tous, Jean, Pierre,
Jacques, Louis;
quand la vigne sera mûre; ... — et le vent des nuits murmure :
évanouis!
L’ autre dit : — dans les tempêtes regardez bien, et leurs têtes apparaîtront.

On les voit quand le soir tombe.
Toute vague est une tombe
d’ où sort un front. —

LA DESTINEE , XIX SUR LA FALAISE , IV

c’ est dans cette onde effrénée que leur âme au ciel est née, divin oiseau.
Toute vague est une tombe;
toute vague, ô ma colombe,
est un berceau.
28 février 1854.

1852, 04, 28

LA DESTINEE , XX

j’ ai beau comme un imbécile regarder dans ma maison, si bien qu’ on dit dans la ville que j’ ai perdu la raison,
j’ ai beau chercher; elle est morte.
Elle ne reviendra pas.
Elle est partie, et la porte est encore ouverte, hélas!
Je tressaille quand on sonne.
Je l’ attends, j’ en fais l’ aveu.
Où sont ces beaux jours d’ automne
quand elle était là, mon Dieu!
Cette âme s’ en est allée.
Elle a fui, moi demeurant.
La nuit, à l’ ombre étoilée je tends les bras en pleurant.
Je m’ accoude à ma fenêtre,
je songe aux jours révolus.
Hélas! Ce pauvre doux être qui chantait, je ne l’ ai plus!
Bruxelles, 28 avril 1852.

1853, 11, 19

LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , I

il grêle, il pleut. Neige et brume; fondrière à chaque pas.
Le torrent veut, crie, écume, et le rocher ne veut pas.
Le sabbat à notre oreille
jette ses vagues hourras.
Un fagot sur une vieille
passe en agitant les bras.
Passants hideux, clartés blanches;
il semble, en ces noirs chemins, que les hommes ont des branches,
que les arbres ont des mains.

LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , II

On entend passer un coche, le lourd coche de la mort.
Il vient, il roule, il approche.
L’ eau hurle et la bise mord.
Le dur cocher, dans la plaine aux aspects noirs et changeants, conduit sa voiture pleine
de toutes sortes de gens.

Novembre souffle, la terre frémit, la bourrasque fond;
les flèches du sagittaire
sifflent dans le ciel profond.

LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , III

— cocher, d’ où viens-tu? Dit l’ arbre.
— où vas-tu? Dit l’ eau qui fuit.
Le cocher est fait de marbre et le coche est fait de nuit.
Il emporte beauté, gloire, joie, amour, plaisirs bruyants;
la voiture est toute noire,
les chevaux sont effrayants.
L’ arbre en frissonnant s’ incline.
L’ eau sent les joncs se dresser.
Le buisson sur la colline grimpe pour le voir passer.

LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , IV

Le brin d’ herbe sur la roche, le nuage dans le ciel,
regarde marcher ce coche,
et croit voir rouler Babel.
Sur sa morne silhouette, battant de l’ aile à grands cris, volent l’ orage, chouette, et l’ ombre, chauve-souris.

Vent glacé, tu nous secoues!
Le char roule, et l’ oeil tremblant, à travers ses grandes roues, voit un crépuscule blanc.

LA DESTINEE , XXI EN MARCHANT LA NUIT DANS UN BOIS , V

La nuit, sinistre merveille, répand son effroi sacré;
toute la forêt s’ éveille
comme un dormeur effaré.
Après les oiseaux, les âmes!
Volez sous les cieux blafards.
L’ étang, miroir, rit aux femmes qui sortent des nénuphars.
L’ air sanglote, et le vent râle, et, sous l’ obscur firmament, la nuit sombre et la mort pâle
se regardent fixement.
19 novembre 1853.

1854, 03, 18

LA DESTINEE , XXII LUEUR A L’ HORIZON .

je songe. Un clair rayon luit sur le flot sonore;
le phare dit : c’ est l’ aube, et souffle son flambeau.
Je voudrais bien savoir les choses que j’ ignore et quelle est la blancheur qu’ on voit dans le tombeau.
L’ âme fuit-elle, auprès du Dieu qui la convie,
loin de ce corps glacé qui jadis remuait?
Quelle est cette lueur qu’ au delà de la vie on aperçoit au fond de l’ infini muet?
Aurons-nous la figure effrayante de l’ ombre?
Pourra-t-on dans la tombe encor nous appeler?
Deviendrons-nous des voix qu’ à travers ce mur sombre on entendra parler?
Comme les passereaux, comme les hirondelles,
l’ homme ira-t-il chercher l’ azur limpide et clair?
Nous envolerons-nous et prendrons-nous des ailes?
Passerons-nous la mort comme ils passent la mer?
Tout parle et tout s’ émeut. Le bois profond tressaille;
le boeuf reprend son joug et l’ âme sa douleur;
le matin, froid et bleu derrière la broussaille,
ferme l’ oeil de l’ étoile, ouvre l’ oeil de la fleur.
La vie avec ses biens, ses amours et ses gloires,
vaut-elle la nuée errante dans les cieux? ...
Que me voulez-vous donc, oiseaux des branches noires,
chanteurs mystérieux?

Je ne sais pas pourquoi je m’ obstine à ces rêves.
Seigneur, le laboureur creuse le sol béant,
le pêcheur va traînant son filet sur les grèves;
moi, je creuse la nuit, je traîne le néant!
Dieu, nous t’ interrogeons, et mieux vaudrait nous taire.
à quoi bon nos efforts, nos doutes, nos combats?
Pourquoi sonder l’ abîme? Attendons. Le mystère vit en paix côte à côte avec l’ homme ici-bas.

Le marin, ce jouet du sort, du vent, de l’ onde, qui siffle en levant l’ ancre et qui va s’ envoler, laisse gronder la mer, et l’ océan qui gronde laisse l’ homme siffler.
Jersey, 18 mars 1854.

1854, 05, 29

LA DESTINEE , XXIII SOUS TERRE .

— laisse-moi. — non. — ô griffe sombre,
bouche horrible! ô torture! ô deuil!
Pourquoi te glisses-tu dans l’ ombre par les fentes de mon cercueil?
— il faut renouveler ma sève,
ô mort, voici le doux été.
Toute la nature qui rêve,
spectre, a besoin de ma beauté!
Il faut qu’ aucun lys ne m’ efface;
l’ abeille attend de moi le miel;
il me faut un parfum qui fasse
pâmer les cygnes dans le ciel.
Je dois orner l’ antre morose;
je dois sourire au soir boudeur, et donner à tout quelque chose de ma grâce et de ma splendeur.
Il faut que je pare le voile des vierges au lever du jour, que je respire pour l’ étoile,
que je rougisse pour l’ amour.
Et pendant que l’ aube m’ arrose, ma racine vers toi descend.
— qui donc es-tu? — je suis la rose.
— et que veux-tu? — boire ton sang.
29 mai 1854.

1854, 10, 10

LA DESTINEE , XXIV BESTIARIUM .

les anges effarés viennent voir notre cage, et se disent : “ — vois donc celui-ci, celui-là, voici Tibère, une hydre au fond d’ un marécage;
regarde le Malthus auprès de l’ Attila. “ — ils répètent entre eux les noms dont on nous nomme, mêlés à d’ autres noms que nous ne savons pas.
Ils disent : “ — c’ est donc là ce qu’ on appelle l’ homme!
Une main dans le crime, un pied dans le trépas.
Voici l’ orgueil; voici le dol; voici l’ envie;
ce sont les plus mauvais qui sont les plus nombreux.
Ils rôdent dans la fosse immense de la vie,
et la terre tressaille à leur pas ténébreux.
Le faible est sous leurs pieds comme un grain sous les meules.
Voyez! Ils sont l’ horreur, l’ effroi, le mal sans frein;
ces coeurs sont des dragons, ces esprits ont des gueules, ces âmes à l’ oeil fauve ont des griffes d’ airain.
Ceci, c’ est le Judas; cela, c’ est le Zoïle;
tous deux dans la nuit lâche on les voit se glisser;
l’ un baise et l’ autre mord; et, sanglante, âpre et vile,
la dent grince et rugit, jalouse du baiser.
Ce maître foule aux pieds la femme sans défense,
ou, limace du coeur, bave sur son printemps.
Ce vieux, pour s’ enrichir, lie au travail l’ enfance et rive à ce boulet des forçats de huit ans;
il leur fait du labeur tourner la sombre roue, et, gorgé d’ or, se vautre en tous ses appétits pendant qu’ en ses poings noirs la fatigue secoue les membres frissonnants de ces pauvres petits.

Ceux-ci, sur les vaincus jetant un oeil farouche, disent : — percez, frappez, tuez jusqu’ au dernier! —
les chiens de Montfaucon viennent lécher leur bouche, tant leurs discours sont pleins de l’ odeur du charnier.

Ceux-ci dressent sur l’ ombre une épée enflammée;
ceux-ci sur les blés d’ or et les villes en feu font vomir les canons hideux, dont la fumée se mêle, haillon noir, aux nuages de Dieu.
Ceux-ci veulent glacer et brûler tout ensemble, et, tourmenteurs qu’ on voit dans la nuit se pencher, soufflent en même temps sur la raison qui tremble et sur la vieille torche horrible du bûcher.
Ceux-ci sont les heureux que tous les rayons dorent, et que les lâchetés servent à deux genoux;
regardez la beauté sans âme qu’ ils adorent;
elle est Vénus pour eux et squelette pour nous.
Ceux-là sont les bourreaux que l’ ombre a sous son aile;
l’ espérance agonise et s’ éteint devant eux;
avec la corde sainte où pend l’ ancre éternelle
ils font le noeud coulant du gibet monstrueux.
Cette langue est serpent, cette idée est tigresse;
ce juif contre un doublon pèse une âme en sa main;
ceux-ci, fouettant le nègre et fouettant la négresse, lâchent les chiens hurlants sur le bétail humain;
ils mettent l’ affreux bât de la bête de somme à des esprits, comme eux pensant, comme eux vivant.
La chair humaine saigne entre les mains de l’ homme;
le sauvage la mange et le chrétien la vend.

écoutez ces grands cris qui par moments s’ élèvent;
voyez rire les uns et les autres trembler;
tous ne sont pas méchants, et quelques-uns qui rêvent ont des ailes dans l’ ombre et voudraient s’ envoler.—” et les anges, cachés sous leurs radieux voiles, frémissent, l’ oeil en pleurs et le front attristé.
Nous sommes là pensifs, regardant les étoiles
à travers les barreaux de notre humanité.
10 octobre 1854.

1854, 04, 18

LA DESTINEE , XXV CHANSON .

proscrit, regarde les roses;
mai joyeux, de l’ aube en pleurs
les reçoit toutes écloses;
proscrit, regarde les fleurs.
 — je pense
aux roses que je semai.
Le mois de mai sans la France,
ce n’ est pas le mois de mai.
Proscrit, regarde les tombes;
mai, qui rit aux cieux si beaux, sous les baisers des colombes fait palpiter les tombeaux.
 — je pense
aux yeux chers que je fermai.
Le mois de mai sans la France,
ce n’ est pas le mois de mai.
Proscrit, regarde les branches,
les branches où sont les nids;
mai les remplit d’ ailes blanches et de soupirs infinis.
 — je pense
aux nids charmants où j’ aimai.
Le mois de mai sans la France,
ce n’ est pas le mois de mai.
18 mai 1854.

1854, 11, 13

LA DESTINEE , XXVI REMONTRANCES .

une nuit qu’ au milieu des bourrasques farouches, et de tous les effrois ouvrant toutes leurs bouches,
ma vitre en pleurs tremblait au choc du vent profond, éveillé, je songeais : — hélas! Qu’ est-ce que font toutes ces sombres eaux qui hurlent dans l’ espace?
Oh! Ce pauvre bateau qui dans cette ombre passe!
ô mon Dieu! Comme il lutte, et se débat, et fuit, pris dans cette prison d’ épouvante et de bruit!
Quels geôliers que les flots quand ils tiennent les hommes!
Pour un peu de pain noir, ou pour de grosses sommes, la barque affronte l’ onde et l’ air plein de sanglots
et la brume, et je plains les pâles matelots.
ô gouffre! Apocalypse! Effrayante épopée!
La mer a par moments l’ air de s’ être échappée.
Un cri farouche sort des vagues, ces tourments.
Il faudrait frissonner devant les éléments si l’ écume, l’ écueil, l’ onde, l’ aquilon sombre, pouvaient parfois briser l’ anneau noir qui dans l’ ombre
les rive à l’ équité, mystérieux pilier.
Est-ce que tout ceci serait irrégulier?
Est-ce que, par hasard, un flot passerait l’ autre?
Serait-ce un insensé que le vent qui se vautre dans la nuée, et crie aux vagues d’ accourir?
Quoi! Ce bon vieux pêcheur part ce soir pour nourrir sa famille qui souffre et dont la faim le navre, et voilà, dès qu’ il est sorti de l’ humble havre,
que l’ orage et la nuit le jugent sans appel!
Sous ses pieds, les brisants, invisible archipel,
l’ accusent; sur son front l’ ouragan le discute;
et ce bourreau masqué, l’ abîme, l’ exécute!

Tout est dit. L’ eau s’ enfuit. Est-il coupable? Non.
Est-ce que l’ océan dans son sourd cabanon peut saisir un pauvre homme et l’ étouffer sous l’ onde, Seigneur, sans déranger l’ équilibre du monde?

Est-ce qu’ il serait vrai que la nature osât
frapper sur l’ homme, ainsi qu’ on bâtonne un forçat?
L’ eau cache-t-elle un piège en sa vague lyrique?
Et que deviendrons-nous si la mer prévarique?
Dieu la laisserait-il libre et folle en effet?
Est-ce que l’ ouragan ne sait pas ce qu’ il fait?
Ah! Si la goutte d’ eau noie à tort un atome, est-ce qu’ on ne va pas, au fond du divin dôme, voir trembler l’ astre, et voir, dans la mer des rayons, pêle-mêle, sombrer les constellations?
Quoi! Puni sans mal faire! Est-ce que c’ est possible?
Quoi! D’ un carquois sans yeux l’ homme serait la cible?
Est-ce qu’ il se pourrait que le naufrage, ô Dieu, la rafale, l’ esquif coupé par le milieu,
le cadavre roulé sous les houles funèbres,
fût un tâtonnement sinistre des ténèbres,
ces aveugles d’ en haut qui frappent à côté?
Est-ce qu’ il se pourrait que cette obscurité
fît devant l’ infini des actions infâmes?
Dieu, ces gens ont des fils, des mères et des femmes;
ce matin, ces pêcheurs, dans l’ île où nous tremblons,
faisaient sur leurs genoux sauter des enfants blonds;
pourquoi permettre aux eaux, à l’ air, aux rocs, aux lames, de prendre en leurs poings noirs toutes ces pauvres âmes?
Pourquoi tiens-tu captifs, Seigneur, tous ces vivants dans l’ orageux réseau des vagues et des vents?
Pourquoi ces flots suspects font-ils ce bruit de chaînes?
Pourquoi tous ces marins, bons coeurs, sans fiel, sans haines, emportés par la mort, pris par l’ abîme amer,
liés dans l’ ombre au fond des cachots de la mer?
Qu’ ont-ils fait? Et pourquoi les frapper sans relâche?
Pourquoi tous ces éclairs que sur eux ta main lâche?
Je ne m’ explique pas ces souffles rugissants,

rués sur des plaintifs et sur des innocents.
Père, il ne se peut pas que ton gouffre se trompe, que ta sagesse ait tort, bégaie ou s’ interrompe, cela ne se peut pas; cela ferait douter.
L’ océan ne doit rien avoir à rétracter;
car l’ ouragan est juste et la foudre est intègre. — et la bise de mer, bourrue, irritée, aigre, couvrant d’ obscurs brouillards les astres que conduit la navigation immense de la nuit,
m’ apparut, face pâle, à travers ma fenêtre,
et me dit : — que sais-tu? Nous délivrons peut-être.
13 novembre 1854.

1854, 12, 25

LA DESTINEE , XXVII PATI .

pourquoi ne pas aller tout de suite à la mort?
Quoi! Vieillir pour avoir un peu plus de remord à l’ heure où Dieu videra l’ âme!
Qu’ attends-tu pour venir dans nos lits froids et noirs, ô blême épouse, ô Nuit, dont tous nos désespoirs hélas! Chantent l’ épithalame?
Pourquoi ne pas finir? Pleurer des pleurs de sang!
Vivre! Quoi! Le poison n’ est-il pas complaisant?
L’ abîme n’ est-il pas facile?
Mon couteau que j’ ai là rit de me voir souffrir.
Est-ce que l’ océan, toujours prêt à s’ ouvrir, ne dit pas à l’ homme : Imbécile!
Brutus a-t-il mal fait? Caton avait-il tort?
Est-ce qu’ ils hésitaient, ces lutteurs au bras fort,
à fermer leurs regards superbes?
Que leur faisait la vie? Est-ce que ces romains tenaient à voir passer les chars sur les chemins et le vent courber les brins d’ herbes?
Comprenant l’ ironie, ils murmuraient : assez!
Par les flèches du sort colosses traversés,
ils ôtaient eux-mêmes la cible.
Ils mouraient de sentir à leurs fronts des rougeurs;
vous préfériez la mort à la vie, ô songeurs,
et l’ idéal à l’ impossible.
La mort se dressait pâle et leur apparaissait;
graves, ils se couchaient près d’ elle, puisque c’ est avec elle qu’ il faut qu’ on dorme;
ils allaient au-devant de ce sinistre hymen;

ils mettaient leur anneau de chevalier romain
au doigt de ce squelette énorme.
Est-ce qu’ il est quelqu’ un qui blâme ces héros?
Ils ont du froid destin tordu les vains barreaux;

ils ont fait une brèche aux ombres;
maintenant à jamais, triste et des vents battu,
au bout de la sagesse, au bout de la vertu,
l’ homme voit leurs deux spectres sombres.
Oui, Caton a mal fait; oui, Brutus avait tort;
le sage est mal sorti, l’ intrépide est mal mort.
Le suicide est une fuite.
Dieu, qui seul a le droit d’ éteindre le flambeau,
quand ces grands essoufflés sont entrés au tombeau,
ne leur a dit qu’ un mot : trop vite.
Braver la destinée en s’ en rassasiant,
c’ est l’ honneur; le grand homme est le grand patient;
attendre est la vertu sévère;
sage, attends qu’ à l’ abri des verts rameaux flottants la ciguë ait fleuri; juste, laisse le temps à l’ arbre de croître au calvaire!
Socrate, et non Brutus! Jésus, et non Caton!
Vous mourrez, vous mourrez. Pourquoi se hâte-t-on?
Souffrez, enseignez, coeurs fidèles.
âme, pourquoi t’ enfuir avant l’ hiver venu, et l’ apparition de l’ azur inconnu, et le départ des hirondelles?
Quoi donc? As-tu peur d’ être oublié, passant noir?
Crains-tu d’ être ignoré du sombre vent du soir, et qu’ il t’ épargne dans ta ville, quand, terrible, il viendra balayer vers le nord
la vieille feuille morte et le vieux monde mort?
Il t’ emportera, sois tranquille!

Comme à chacun de nous ton heure sonnera.
Ton cadavre qui boit et qui mange sera écrasé, broyé dans sa boue, pétri dans le néant, supprimé, rejeté;
l’ infini passera sur toi; l’ éternité
a pour nous tous un tour de roue.
Si tu n’ es qu’ un vivant, frêle, obscur, incertain, vis et pleure; descends pas à pas ton destin :

vieillis; reste l’ homme ordinaire.
De quel droit, cendre, atome, espèce d’ ombre aux fers, fais-tu tomber sur toi la mort aux yeux d’ éclairs, et déranges-tu le tonnerre?
Ou si de toi ton siècle a fait un grand témoin, accepte échafaud, bagne, exil; sois au besoin
l’ esclave auguste de l’ exemple.
La pierre du gibet, dont le ciel est l’ aimant,
plus tard sort du charnier et monte lentement,
et devient le fronton du temple.
Ne te dérobe point par la mort aux lenteurs du supplice qu’ il faut subir sur les hauteurs;
c’ est l’ épreuve; acceptons-la toute!
Agonise et vieillis sans dire : je suis las!
L’ homme est fait pour mourir heure par heure, hélas!
Les pleurs, pour tomber goutte à goutte!
La douleur est utile; et vivre, c’ est l’ effort.
Veux-tu devenir grand? Laisse-toi faire au sort.
Bois, et ne brise pas ton verre.
Laisse blanchir ton âme ainsi que l’ orient.
Sois à la fois l’ archange au regard souriant et le titan au front sévère.
Les jours nous font saigner, mystérieux bourreaux;
saigne, et ris; c’ est ainsi qu’ on devient un héros,

c’ est ainsi qu’ on devient sublime, et que l’ on est de ceux dont l’ esprit monte et luit, et que le genre humain voit tout à coup, la nuit,
surgir splendides sur sa cime.
L’ homme est sombre; qu’ il souffre, il brillera; Dieu bon refait le diamant avec le vil charbon;
l’ aube est sous nos brumes funèbres;
et la création n’ est qu’ un gouffre d’ où sort le rayon qui, joyeux, dorant l’ ombre et la mort, s’ épanouit hors des ténèbres.

L’ âme s’ étoile au choc du sort et du devoir.
Dieu, le grand forgeron, avec son marteau noir qui sonne dans tous nos désastres, sur l’ enclume d’ airain que nous nommons l’ azur,
bat l’ ombre, la nuit, l’ homme en deuil, l’ abîme obscur;
les étincelles sont des astres.
Christmas, 25 décembre 1854.

1855, 01, 14

LA DESTINEE , XXVIII

en hiver la terre pleure; le soleil froid, pâle et doux, vient tard, et part de bonne heure,
ennuyé du rendez-vous.
Leurs idylles sont moroses.
 — soleil! Aimons! — essayons.
ô terre, où donc sont tes roses?
 — astre, où donc sont tes rayons?
Il prend un prétexte, grêle,
vent, nuage noir ou blanc, et dit : — c’ est la nuit, ma belle! — et la fait en s’ en allant;
comme un amant qui retire
chaque jour son coeur du noeud, et, ne sachant plus que dire,
s’ en va le plus tôt qu’ il peut.
14 janvier 1855.

1855, 02, 10

LA DESTINEE , XXIX

l’ absolu, l’ éternel. Rien après, rien avant.
Hors de cet horizon l’ esprit n’ est pas vivant.
S’ il n’ a point l’ abîme, il réclame.
Tout vouloir, tout savoir, tout sonder tour à tour,
c’ est la seule façon de composer un jour qui suffise au regard de l’ âme.
L’ âme veut pour plafond la vaste liberté,
et ne peut demeurer que dans l’ illimité.
Ni cloisons, ni rideaux, ni toiles.
Seuls la nuit, sous le ciel calme et silencieux,
les sphynx n’ ont, pour emplir de lumière leurs yeux,
pas trop de toutes les étoiles.
L’ immensité, c’ est là le seul asile sûr.
Je crois être banni, si je n’ ai tout l’ azur.
Tout l’ espace, c’ est là que j’ entre.
Je veux tout le ciel bleu, je veux tout le ciel noir;
l’ infini par moments me semble à peine avoir la dimension de mon antre.
10 février 1855.

1854, 10, 30

LA DESTINEE , XXX CHANSON .

il est un peu tard pour faire la belle,
reine marguerite; aux champs défleuris bientôt vont souffler le givre et la grêle.
 — passant, l’ hiver vient, et je lui souris.
Il est un peu tard pour faire la belle,
étoile du soir; les rayons taris sont tous retournés à l’ aube éternelle.
 — passant, la nuit vient, et je lui souris.
Il est un peu tard pour faire la belle,
mon âme; joyeuse en mes noirs débris,
tu m’ éblouis, fière et rouvrant ton aile.
 — passant, la mort vient, et je lui souris.
30 octobre 1854.

1870, 02, 08

LA DESTINEE , XXXI A MEURICE - A VACQUERIE .

hélas! Comme c’ est peu compris, les grandes âmes!
L’ orage était bien noir quand nous nous rencontrâmes;
je livrais au vieux monde un assaut hasardeux;
je luttais; vous, tribuns de l’ art, maîtres tous deux,
forts, dressant devant moi votre épée étoilée, vous me prîtes la main dans l’ ardente mêlée;
et dans ce siècle, où l’ âme est en proie aux moqueurs,
je fus le combattant, vous êtes les vainqueurs.
Quand s’ ouvrit l’ âpre exil aux froides casemates,
proscrit, vous me suiviez, et haï, vous m’ aimâtes.
J’ ai le flot à dompter, j’ ai la nuit à franchir;
je vous cherche en mon ciel que vous faites blanchir;
ainsi le nautonier battu des mers obscures
épiait le lever des lointains Dioscures.
Ah! Vous vous oubliez, vous qu’ on n’ oubliera pas!
C’ est grand. Vous me tirez de l’ ombre pas à pas, vous me rouvrez le port, vous me rendez les fêtes,
je sens l’ apaisement des profondes tempêtes, et je vous aime, ô vous sur qui je m’ attendris,
d’ unir des coeurs si doux à de si fiers esprits!
8 février 1870.

1870

LA DESTINEE , XXXII TOURMENTE .

oh! Comme tout devient terrible sur la mer!
Ces noirs chanteurs chantant sans cesse le même air,
les flots, dressent leur blanche crête;
et la nuée accourt, soufflant sur l’ eau qui fuit toute l’ horreur du gouffre et tout ce que la nuit contient de haine et de tempête;
et voici l’ ouragan qui monte en mugissant avec un grincement de chaîne, et qui descend, et qui remonte dans la brume,
et moi, plus frissonnant que l’ air dans mon manteau, je dis : — Seigneur! Seigneur! Qu’ est-ce que le marteau fait à cette heure sur l’ enclume?
Dieu! Quels évènements d’ airain, quels rois de fer, quels colosses armés des glaives de l’ enfer, quels géants à l’ horrible forme, vont sortir de votre ombre, et qu’ allons-nous donc voir? — ainsi je rêve au bruit que fait sous le ciel noir le soufflet de la forge énorme.
1870.

1854, 09, 13

LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , I

ma vie entre déjà dans l’ ombre de la mort, et je commence à voir le grand côté des choses.
L’ homme juste est plus beau, terrassé par le sort;
et les soleils couchants sont des apothéoses.
Brutus vaincu n’ a rien dont s’ étonne Caton;
Morus voit Thraséas et se laisse proscrire;
Socrate, qu’ Anitus fait boire au Phlégéthon, mourant, n’ empêche pas Jésus-Christ de sourire.
Le monde passe, ingrat, vain, stupide et moqueur.
Le blâme intérieur, Dieu juste, est le seul blâme.
Les caresses que fait la conscience au coeur font saigner notre chair et rayonner notre âme.
Apaisé, je médite au bord du gouffre amer;
j’ aime ce bruit sauvage où l’ infini commence;
la nuit, j’ entends les flots, les vents, les cieux, la mer;
je songe, évanoui dans cette plainte immense.

LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , II

Il faut toujours quelqu’ un qui dise : je suis prêt.
Je m’ immole. Sans quoi, ma France bien-aimée, la conscience au coeur de l’ homme se romprait;
peuple! Il ne resterait pas une âme allumée.
Il est bon en tout temps, aujourd’ hui comme hier, que des hommes sereins, en qui rien ne recule,

se sentent un amour mystérieux et fier pour l’ exil, nuit sinistre, et la mort, crépuscule.
Je suis de ceux sur qui le char roule effrayant;
l’ épreuve me flagelle et le devoir me broie;
je ne vois pas pourquoi je serais triste, ayant ce lugubre bonheur et cette sombre joie.
D’ autres, meilleurs que moi, dans le deuil et l’ affront expirèrent; ils sont dans la lumière pure.
Gloire à ces combattants du Golgotha! Leur front est d’ autant plus serein que l’ épine est plus dure.
Ils furent grands. Ils ont souffert, ils ont aimé.
Leur linceul laisse voir leur clarté sous ses voiles;
et le rude chemin du martyre est semé de leurs gouttes de sang qu’ on prend pour des étoiles.

LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , III

Socrate est un voyant; je ne suis qu’ un témoin.
Je vais. J’ ai laissé tout aux mains du sort rapace, et j’ entends mes amis d’ autrefois rire au loin pendant qu’ à l’ horizon, seul et pensif, je passe.
Ils disent, me voyant paraître tout à coup :
— qu’ est-ce donc que cette ombre au loin sur cette grève?
Regardez donc là-bas. Cela reste debout.
Est-ce un homme qui marche? Est-ce un spectre qui rêve?
C’ est l’ homme et c’ est le spectre! ô mes anciens amis,
c’ est un songeur tourné vers les profondeurs calmes,
qui, devant le tombeau priant pour être admis,
rêve sous la nuée où frissonnent les palmes.
Sachez, amis de l’ âge où l’ on se comprenait, que, si je vous parlais, ce serait de vous-même.

Je suis l’ être pensif que la douleur connaît;
mon soir mystérieux touche à l’ aube suprême.
Vous qui tournez la tête et qui dites : c’ est bien!
Et qui vous remettez à rire à votre porte, ce que j’ endure est peu, ce que je suis n’ est rien, et ce n’ est pas à moi que ma souffrance importe;
mais, quoi que vous fassiez et qui que vous soyez, quoi donc! N’ avez-vous rien au coeur qui vous déchire?
N’ avez-vous rien perdu de ceux que vous aimiez?
Qui sait où sont les morts? Comment pouvez-vous rire?

LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , IV

Heureux les éprouvés! Voilà ce que je vois; et je m’ en vais, fantôme, habiter les décombres.
Les pêcheurs, dont j’ entends sur les grèves la voix, regardent les flots croître; et moi, grandir les ombres.
Je souris au désert; je contemple et j’ attends;
j’ emplis de paix mon coeur qui n’ eut jamais d’ envie;
je tâche, craignant Dieu, de m’ éveiller à temps du rêve monstrueux qu’ on appelle la vie.
La mort va m’ emmener dans la sérénité;
j’ entends ses noirs chevaux qui viennent dans l’ espace.
Je suis comme celui qui, s’ étant trop hâté, attend sur le chemin que la voiture passe.
Ne plaignez pas l’ élu qu’ on nomme le proscrit.
Mon esprit, que le deuil et que l’ aurore attire,
voit le jour par les trous des mains de Jésus-Christ.
Toute lumière sort ici-bas du martyre.

LA DESTINEE , XXXIII , V

Je songe, ô vérité, de toi seule ébloui!
Ai-je des ennemis? J’ en ignore le nombre.
Tous les chers souvenirs, tout s’ est évanoui.
Je sens monter en moi le vaste oubli de l’ ombre.
Je ne sais même plus le nom de ceux qui m’ ont fait mordre, moi rêveur, par le mensonge infâme.
J’ aperçois les blancheurs de la cime du mont, et le bout de ton aile est déjà bleu, mon âme!
En dehors du combat pour la cause de tous, si j’ ai frappé quelqu’ un pour me venger moi-même,
si j’ ai laissé pleurant quelque être fier et doux,
si j’ ai dit : haïssez, à ceux qui disaient : j’ aime;
Dieu! Si j’ ai fait saigner des coeurs dans le passé, que votre grande voix me courbe et m’ avertisse!
Je demande pardon à ceux que j’ offensai,
voulant traîner ma peine et non mon injustice.
Je marche, à travers l’ ombre et les torts expiés, dans la vie, aujourd’ hui sans fleurs et jadis verte, morne plaine où déjà s’ allongent à mes pieds
les immenses rayons de la tombe entr’ ouverte.
13 septembre 1854.

LA DESTINEE , XXXIV ENTREE DANS L’ EXIL .

J’ ai fait en arrivant dans l’ île connaissance avec un frais vallon plein d’ ombre et d’ innocence, qui, comme moi, se plaît au bord des flots profonds.
Au même rayon d’ or tous deux nous nous chauffons;
j’ ai tout de suite avec cette humble solitude
pris une familière et charmante habitude.
Là deux arbres, un frêne, un orme à l’ air vivant, se querellent et font des gestes dans le vent comme deux avocats qui parlent pour et contre;
j’ y vais causer un peu tous les jours, j’ y rencontre mon ami le lézard, mon ami le moineau;
le roc m’ offre sa chaise et la source son eau;
j’ entends, quand je suis seul avec cette nature,
mon âme qui lui dit tout bas son aventure;
ces champs sont bonnes gens, et j’ aime, en vérité,
leur douceur, et je crois qu’ ils aiment ma fierté.

1854, 07, 22

LA DESTINEE , XXXV

l’ immense être inconnu sourit. L’ aube réveille le ciron, la fourmi, la fleur des prés, l’ abeille, les nids chuchotants, les hameaux,
la forêt aux profonds branchages, les campagnes,
l’ océan, le soleil derrière les montagnes,
mon âme derrière les maux.
L’ être rêve. Il construit le lys dans le mystère;
son doigt aide la taupe à faire un trou sous terre;
il peint les beaux rosiers vermeils;
et la création, sur son travail courbée, contemple; il fait, avec l’ aile d’ un scarabée,
l’ admiration des soleils.
Hommes, vos grands vaisseaux qui vont sous les étoiles,
embarrassant les vents dans leurs gouffres de voiles, monstres qui s’ imposent aux mers, fatiguant de leur poids la brise exténuée, et traînant dans leurs flancs chacun une nuée pleine de foudres et d’ éclairs, vos canons, vos soldats, dont la marche olympique
d’ un coin de terre obscur fait une plaine épique, vos drapeaux aux plis arrogants,
vos batailles broyant les moissons, vos tueries,
vos carnages, vos chocs, et vos cavaleries,
aigles de ces noirs ouragans,
vos régiments, pareils à l’ hydre qui serpente, vos Austerlitz tonnants, vos Lutzen, vos Lépante, vos Iéna sonnant du clairon, vos camps pleins de tambours que la mort pâle éveille, passent pendant qu’ il songe, et font à son oreille le même bruit qu’ un moucheron.

22 juillet 1854.

1854, 08, 15

LA DESTINEE , XXXVI

oh! Quoique je sois, sur la grève, le flocon d' écume qui fuit,
quoique je n' aie en moi qu' un rêve, quoique je sois poussière et nuit,
quoique je sois un peu de boue,
un ver parmi les vers humains, écrasé par ces tours de roue qu' on appelle les lendemains, quoique le mal m' ait dans sa serre, quoique je sois nu, faible, obscur, quoique je sois fait de misère et que tu sois faite d' azur, sans fléchir dans ta confiance,
sans te rebuter dans ta foi, sainte servante, conscience
tu vas dans l' ombre devant moi!
Tu vas devant moi, toujours prête, et tu me montres le chemin;
le voile du sort sur ta tête,
la lampe de Dieu dans ta main!
Tu me dis : — ta croix te réclame.
Debout! C' est ailleurs qu' on s' assied. — tu me dis : — cache ici ton âme.
Tu me dis : — pose ici ton pied.
Tu dis : — la tristesse est meilleure.
L' ombre et le deuil sont nos amis. — et tu souris lorsque je pleure, et tu chantes quand je gémis.

Tu m' éclaires, calme et ravie, marche à marche, avec ton flambeau,
toutes les douleurs de la vie, sombre descente du tombeau.

15 août 1854.

1870, 07, 18

LA DESTINEE , XXXVII EXIL .

si je pouvais voir, ô patrie,
tes amandiers et tes lilas, et fouler ton herbe fleurie,
hélas!
Si je pouvais, — mais, ô mon père, ô ma mère, je ne peux pas, — prendre pour chevet votre pierre,
hélas!
Dans le froid cercueil qui vous gêne, si je pouvais vous parler bas,
mon frère Abel, mon frère Eugène,
hélas!
Si je pouvais, ô ma colombe,
et toi, mère, qui t' envolas,
m' agenouiller sur votre tombe,
hélas!
Oh! Vers l' étoile solitaire, comme je lèverais les bras!
Comme je baiserais la terre,
hélas!
Loin de vous, ô morts que je pleure,
des flots noirs j' écoute le glas;
je voudrais fuir, mais je demeure,
hélas!

Pourtant le sort, caché dans l' ombre,
se trompe si, comptant mes pas, il croit que le vieux marcheur sombre est las.
18 juillet 1870.

1854, 08, 24

LA DESTINEE , XXXVIII

ô mon âme, en cherchant l’ azur, ton vol dévie.
Restons dans le devoir : le devoir, c’ est la vie.
Rentrons au noir foyer des hommes; essayons la chaîne des captifs; fais-toi, dans ce lieu sombre, la servante de l’ ombre,
ô fille des rayons!
Reprenons le labeur des saintes délivrances;
faisons la fonction divine des souffrances;
remettons notre lèvre à l’ éponge de fiel;
continuons les pleurs, les deuils, la lutte austère;
revenons à la terre pour retourner au ciel.
24 août 1854.

LA DESTINEE , XXXIX

Tant qu’ on verra l’ amour pleurer, la haine rire, le mal régner,
le dogme errer, l’ autel mentir, Néron proscrire, Jésus saigner,
tant qu’ on aura des rois, des églises athées,
d’ affreuses tours,
des peuples que la chaîne étreint, des Prométhées sous les vautours,
tant que je sentirai, coeur où rien ne mutile
le fier devoir, que le vol d’ une strophe irritée est utile
dans le ciel noir, je combattrai! Je sais que je serais un lâche
d’ être autrement;
je ne me laisserai détourner de ma tâche,
ô firmament!
Par rien, ni par avril, ni par l’ ombre ingénue
des verts taillis, ni par les prés en fleurs, ni par la gorge nue
d’ Amaryllis.
En présence de tant de nations qui pleurent
sous le ciel bleu,
des tyrans qui, blanchis par le prêtre, demeurent
noirs devant Dieu,
et de vous tous, vivants, en proie aux vils mensonges,
aux rois voleurs;

qui flottez dans un rêve, et n’ avez hors des songes que les douleurs;
en présence des maux, des crimes et des fautes,
des longs combats,
des hontes, des orgueils, de tant de têtes hautes et de coeurs bas;

France, tant qu’ il faudra qu’ une lueur éclaire
l’ affreux récif, je resterai fidèle à la sombre colère,
au deuil pensif;
je dirai sans relâche et redirai sans trêve
la vérité;
je serai dans l’ écume obscure de la grève
une clarté;
je serai ce fantôme, un juge; et ma voix triste
sera l’ écho
de ce clairon farouche à qui rien ne résiste dans Jéricho;
je ne quitterai point, grande France trahie,
mon tribunal!
Avant que je me taise, ô tragique Isaïe,
ô Juvénal,
ô Dante, ézéchiel à l’ oeil visionnaire,
fier d’ Aubigné,
on verra dans les cieux s’ arrêter le tonnerre,
époumoné.
2 décembre.

LA DESTINEE , XL LA NUIT PENDANT QUE LES PECHEURS SONT

EN MER .

Les visions se répandent dans le firmament terni;
de hideux nuages pendent
au noir plafond infini;
l’ étoile y vient disparaître;
il semble qu’ une main traître,
guettant les astres vermeils,
au fond de l’ ombre indignée, tend ses toiles d’ araignée pour ces mouches, les soleils.
L’ arbre se tord sur la côte;
le flot s’ acharne au récif;
une clameur triste et haute avertit l’ homme pensif;
l’ écume roule, avalanche;
la lame féroce et blanche luit comme l’ yatagan;
la terre sanglote et souffre,
livrée aux baisers du gouffre,
au viol de l’ ouragan.
La mer n’ est plus qu’ épouvante;
le ciel s’ effare; on dirait que la nature vivante devient songe et disparaît;
tout prend l’ aspect et la forme d’ une horrible ébauche énorme ou d’ un grand rêve détruit;
les ténèbres en décombres

emplissent de leurs blocs sombres
l’ antre immense de la nuit.
Ah! N’ est-ce pas, Dieu sublime,
Dieu qui fis l’ arche et le pont, que tout naufrage est un crime et que quelqu’ un en répond?

S’ il manque une seule tête, tu puniras la tempête;
tu sais, toi qui nous défends et qui fouilles les repaires, le compte de tous les pères,
le nom de tous les enfants!

1854, 11, 04

LA DESTINEE , XLI DUO .

quoique je fusse assis au bord d’ un cimetière, seul dans ce champ que l’ aube et l’ ombre ont pour frontière, et perdu dans un tas de noirs cyprès et d’ ifs et de ronces, tordant leurs sarments maladifs, le rire était si franc que je levai la tête.
C’ étaient deux jeunes gens qui venaient de la fête et qui s’ en retournaient à la ville en jasant, couple penchant déjà, mais encore innocent.
Ces enfants rayonnaient sous ces branchages sombres, lui charmant, elle pure; on eût dit dans ces ombres le mois d’ avril donnant le bras au point du jour;
et moi l’ exil, pensif, je saluai l’ amour.
Allez, amants! Chantez, vie, extase, espérance!
Ainsi marchait un soir dans un bois, à Florence,
le jeune Dante auprès de Béatrice enfant;
Dante la contemplait, ivre, heureux, triomphant;
tout à coup elle dit : si je mourais, mon Dante?
Et, tressaillant, il vit l’ enfer, la voûte ardente, la nuit, les pleurs, le deuil, les sept cercles ouverts;
et, dès le lendemain, il fit le premier vers du poëme qu’ emplit la douleur insondée;
car jamais le songeur ne refuse l’ idée;
le crâne du poëte est un dôme effrayant où de sombres oiseaux volent en tournoyant, et qui dit au grand aigle : ô farouche figure,
entre! Mon diamètre admet ton envergure.
4 novembre 1854.

1874, 01, 16

LA DESTINEE , XLII PENSEES DE NUIT .

l’ ombre ici-bas la moins transparente, c’ est l’ âme.
L’ homme est l’ énigme étrange et triste de la femme, et la femme est le sphinx de l’ homme. Sombre loi!
Personne ne connaît mon gouffre, excepté moi.
Et moi-même, ai-je été jusqu’ au fond? Mon abîme est sinistre, surtout par le côté sublime;
et l’ hydre est là, tenant mon âme, et la mordant.
Toutes nos passions sont des bêtes rôdant dans la lividité des blêmes crépuscules.
L’ homme le plus semblable aux antiques Hercules, égal par sa stature aux noirs évènements,
qui dompte la fortune en ses poings incléments, et fait au sort jaloux l’ effet d’ un belluaire, cet homme, s’ il rencontre une femme, veut plaire, tombe à genoux, adore et tremble, et ce vainqueur du destin est toujours le vaincu de son coeur.
Tout nous ment! L’ âtre est noir, la patrie est ingrate.
Prêtre, pense à Jésus; juge, pense à Socrate.
L’ homme rend la justice ainsi qu’ il joue aux dés.
Quand, tour à tour, et l’ un après l’ autre, accoudés
au même livre, on a tourné les mêmes pages, on meurt. Qu’ est-ce que c’ est que vos aréopages, conciles et sénats, conclaves et divans?
Le poëte apparaît au milieu des vivants, et, lapidé, s’ en va de la terre fatale, laissant derrière lui, comme une trace pâle,
l’ éternelle beauté du vers mystérieux.
L’ homme qui l’ insulta le met au rang des dieux.
Et puis? Un autre esprit vient. L’ homme recommence.

Tout est aveuglement quand tout n’ est pas démence;
le ciel splendide est plein de la noirceur du sort;
on entre dans la vie en criant; on en sort ruisselant, nu, glacé, comme d’ une tourmente.

Hélas! L’ enfant sanglote et l’ homme se lamente;
ignorer, c’ est pleurer, et savoir, c’ est gémir.
Je pense à tout cela quand je ne puis dormir,
la nuit, quand le vent semble une voix qui témoigne,
quand on entend le pas de quelqu’ un qui s’ éloigne.
16 janvier 1874.

LA DESTINEE , XLIII

Quand Eschyle au vautour dispute Prométhée, quand Juvénal défend Rome aux tigres jetée, quand Dante ouvre l’ enfer aux tyrans qu’ il poursuit,
ces hommes sont pareils à l’ antique euménide;
leur face, qu’ illumine une lueur livide,
semble un masque d’ airain qui parle dans la nuit.
On frémit, tant ils sont terribles! Leurs pensées, sur leurs crânes profonds sifflantes et dressées, mordant le crime heureux et les monstres rampants, font aux poëtes saints d’ effrayants diadèmes, et semblent sur ces fronts sévères et suprêmes des chevelures de serpents.
Serpents mystérieux des Minerves antiques,
ô dragons presque dieux, gorgones prophétiques,
mêlant des cris humains à votre sifflement,
votre anathème était une leçon sublime;
vous étiez à la fois, pour le peuple et le crime,
la sagesse sereine et le noir châtiment.
Jersey, zzz 1 er novembre.

1849, 01, 05

LA DESTINEE , XLIV

ô misérable amas de vanités humaines, rêves! Au premier vent qui souffle dans les plaines, comme tout se disperse et tout s’ évanouit!
Puissance, amour, douleur qui brûle dans la nuit,
orgueils et voluptés, colères enflammées,
comme cela se mêle à toutes les fumées!
à quoi bon tant d’ ardeur et tant d’ emportement pour arriver si vite à tant d’ abattement!
Hommes! Pourquoi ce bruit, et pourquoi faire attendre des colosses au monde? On croit, à vous entendre rugir dans le brasier des sombres passions, au milieu des fureurs et des ambitions,
autour de ce que l’ âme embrasse, craint, désire,
que vous êtes de bronze, et vous êtes de cire!
5 janvier 1849.

1854, 08, 04

LA DESTINEE , XLV

le sommet est désert, noir, lugubre, inclément, bordé de toutes parts d’ un sombre escarpement;
l’ horizon à l’ entour n’ est qu’ une solitude;
l’ hiver est éternel sur ce faîte âpre et rude, et j’ y trouve, ô Seigneur, des traces de pieds nus qui prouvent qu’ avant moi d’ autres y sont venus.
On y voit des carcans et des fers, comme au bagne.
J’ étais en bas, les yeux fixés sur la montagne.
Deux êtres ont passé pendant que j’ étais là;
et leurs regards brillaient, si bien qu’ il me sembla que ces deux inconnus, rayonnant sous leurs voiles, pour en faire leurs yeux avaient pris des étoiles.
L’ un avait l’ air candide et l’ autre l’ air altier.
Ils marchaient tous les deux dans le même sentier;
et l’ un murmurait : crois, et l’ autre disait : pense.
Et sur le front de l’ un on lisait : conscience,
et sur le front de l’ autre on lisait : vérité.
Moi, je les regardais, ému de leur beauté.
Alors ces deux passants sévères m’ ont fait signe de me lever; c’ était l’ aigle à côté du cygne;
et je les ai suivis, et ce sont eux qui m’ ont conduit et laissé seul sur le haut de ce mont.
4 août 1854.

LA DESTINEE , XLVI

Oui, la terre fatale, oui, le ciel nécessaire, tout laisse en moi sa trace, et rien pour ma misère
n’ est hautain ni moqueur;
et quoique je ne sois qu’ un vivant fait de cendre, quand le rayon me voit, il consent à descendre,
et se mêle à mon coeur.
J’ ai la confiance âpre et triste des apôtres, et c’ est pourquoi je suis cet homme dont les autres
parlent confusément,
plein d’ erreurs comme Adam, plein de fautes comme ève, que l’ enfer tire en bas, mais qu’ un éternel rêve enchaîne au firmament.
L’ impure forme humaine, ébauchée, incomplète, la chair, n’ empêche pas que le ciel se reflète dans l’ abîme où je suis;
près de ce vil crapaud qui bave et qui se traîne, la constellation vient resplendir sereine dans le fond de mon puits.
Par instants l’ affreux monstre, en l’ ombre qui le voile, passe et fait en passant tressaillir une étoile dans mon cloaque noir;
puis elle reparaît. Dieu que notre espoir nomme, sois béni de changer l’ eau bourbeuse de l’ homme en céleste miroir!
Oui, tes vents m’ ont parlé, toutes tes solitudes
m’ ont jeté leurs rumeurs et leurs inquiétudes, azur, nuit, vision!
à tes souffles de brume ou de clarté je vibre,

ciel, comme si j’ étais traversé par la fibre
de la création!
Comme si tous les fils invisibles de l’ être se croisaient dans mon sein que l’ univers pénètre!

Comme si, par moment,
en moi, du front aux pieds, me mêlant au problème, le sombre axe infini qui passe par Dieu même tremblait confusément!
De sorte que je suis l’ aimant de la nature,
que la création m’ emplit, moi créature, que Dieu coule en mon sang!
De sorte, ô ciel profond, que le zénith farouche se verse dans mon crâne, et que le nadir touche mon talon frémissant!
Mon âme dans sa nuit redit ta gamme immense;
je frissonne à tes bruits d’ orage ou de clémence,
vivant psaltérion;
sur ma lyre, qu’ émeut l’ esprit des Zoroastres, les sept notes jadis tombèrent des sept astres du bleu septentrion.

1854, 09, 18

LA DESTINEE , XLVII LETTRE .

est-ce que, ce mois-ci, des miens et des meilleurs,
quelqu’ un est mort, pendant que je regarde ailleurs?
Est-ce que par hasard, sur la colline verte, quelque tombe de mère ou d’ enfant s’ est ouverte?
Ami, pourquoi me plaindre aujourd’ hui plus qu’ hier?
Ai-je, sans le savoir, perdu quelqu’ un de cher?
Jadis j’ eus des douleurs et je les ai pleurées;
les larmes du tombeau sont des larmes sacrées;
sur de profonds cercueils pleins de ciel étoilé,
tous les pleurs que j’ avais dans les yeux ont coulé.
Ce fut sombre. Aujourd’ hui, qu’ est-ce donc qui m’ arrive que ta pitié s’ accroît? Je suis sur cette rive; après? Et d’ où te vient ce langage abattu?
Tu m’ écris : “ ô banni, comment les portes-tu, ces heures de l’ exil qui doivent être lourdes?”
tout est bien. Je n’ ai rien à dire aux âmes sourdes.
D’ ailleurs porté-je donc un si pesant fardeau?
Le vent souffle sur l’ homme et sur la goutte d’ eau.
Laissons souffler le vent. Qu’ importe ce que souffre mon atome, au hasard emporté dans le gouffre?
D’ autres ont plus souffert qui valaient mieux que moi.
Tout est bien. Vivre errant, rejeté, hors la loi,
l’ ombre, l’ isolement, l’ ennui qu’ on exagère,
cette glace qu’ on sent à la terre étrangère,

tout cela ne vaut pas qu’ on fronce le sourcil.
Crois-tu pas que je vais pleurnicher mon exil?
Tu me dis : “ vous voilà dans la froide Angleterre.”
et moi je dis : — salut au vieux rivage austère!
à Londre où, quand Milton parle, Cromwell répond! — tu reprends : “ — comment sont ces étrangers? “ ils sont les étrangers. Ils ont leurs soucis, leurs colères, leurs intérêts, leurs moeurs; ce sont des exemplaires

du vieil homme Adam, l’ un sur l’ autre copiés.
Dieu mit sur tous les fronts l’ azur, mais sous ses pieds
l’ homme a fait de la terre une chose diverse.
La fraternité meurt au fleuve qu’ on traverse;
on passe un bras de mer, on enjambe un chemin,
on saute un mur, on est sorti du genre humain;
on devient l’ étranger. Nous le sommes. La foule autour de nous va, vient, fait ses affaires, coule.
L’ idée est peu comprise à son avènement;
elle monte un calvaire et marche lentement;
je ne vois pas pourquoi ces hommes seraient autres que ceux qu’ a vus Socrate et qu’ ont vus les apôtres.
ô mes amis, proscrits qui m’ entourez, restons comme les Thraséas et comme les Catons, sereins, et sachons prendre en patience l’ homme.
Ceux-ci d’ ailleurs n’ ont rien que de tout simple, en somme.
Nous sommes les passants, ils sont les habitants.
D’ Aristide jusqu’ à nos jours, dans tous les temps,
le proscrit pour la foule est une énigme obscure.
On ne nous crache pas encore à la figure;
donc ne nous plaignons point. Tu me dis :—” dans ces lieux où nous te cherchons, toi, le songeur oublieux, que fais-tu? “ — je vois Dieu. Je suis l’ homme des grèves;

la nuit je fais des vers, le jour je fais des rêves.
Je lis les vieux lutteurs, Dante, Agrippa, Montluc.
Souvent, quand minuit sonne au clocher de Saint-Luc, je médite, menant dans les zones bénies de soleils en soleils cent lignes infinies, reliant dans l’ azur les constellations, architectures d’ ombre et d’ yeux et de rayons,
frontons prodigieux des célestes Solimes.
Mon esprit, combinant ces triangles sublimes, fait, comme Orphée à Delphe et Jacob dans Endor, une géométrie avec les astres d’ or.
Ainsi s’ en vont mes jours. Assis au bord des ondes, je contemple la mer dont les houles profondes ne s’ arrêtent jamais, tumultueux troupeaux bondissant jour et nuit sans halte et sans repos;

et nous nous regardons, moi rêveur, elle énorme;
elle attend que je pleure et j’ attends qu’ elle dorme.
Jersey, 18 septembre 1854.

LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS ,

PREMIERE PROMENADE .

Un tourbillon d’ écume, au centre de la baie formé par de secrets et profonds entonnoirs, se berce mollement sur l’ onde qu’ il égaie,
vasque immense d’ albâtre au milieu des flots noirs.
Seigneur! Que faites-vous de cette urne de neige?
Qu’ y versez-vous dès l’ aube et qu’ en sort-il la nuit?
La mer lui jette en vain sa vague qui l’ assiège,
le nuage sa brume et l’ ouragan son bruit.
L’ orage avec son bruit, le flot avec sa fange, passent; le tourbillon, vénéré du pêcheur,
reparaît, conservant, dans l’ abîme où tout change,
toujours la même place et la même blancheur.
Le pêcheur dit : — c’ est là, qu’ en une onde bénie, les petits enfants morts, chaque nuit de Noël, viennent blanchir leur aile au souffle humain ternie, avant de s’ envoler pour être anges au ciel. —
moi je dis : — Dieu mit là cette coupe si pure, blanche en dépit des flots et des rochers penchants,
pour être, dans le sein de la grande nature,
la figure du juste au milieu des méchants.
6 août. Passage.

LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS ,

DEUXIEME PROMENADE .

La mer donne l’ écume et la terre le sable.
L’ or se mêle à l’ argent dans les plis du flot vert.
J’ entends le bruit que fait l’ éther infranchissable,
bruit immense et lointain, de silence couvert.
Un enfant chante auprès de la mer qui murmure.
Rien n’ est grand, ni petit. Vous avez mis, mon Dieu, sur la création et sur la créature les mêmes astres d’ or et le même ciel bleu.
Notre sort est chétif; nos visions sont belles.
L’ esprit saisit le corps et l’ enlève au grand jour.
L’ homme est un point qui vole avec deux grandes ailes, dont l’ une est la pensée et dont l’ autre est l’ amour.
Sérénité de tout! Majesté! Force et grâce!
La voile rentre au port et les oiseaux aux nids.
Tout va se reposer, et j’ entends dans l’ espace palpiter vaguement des baisers infinis.
Le vent courbe les joncs sur le rocher superbe, et de l’ enfant qui chante il emporte la voix.
ô vent! Que vous courbez à la fois de brins d’ herbe!
Et que vous emportez de chansons à la fois!
Qu’ importe! Ici tout berce, et rassure, et caresse.
Plus d’ ombre dans le coeur! Plus de soucis amers!
Une ineffable paix monte et descend sans cesse du bleu profond de l’ âme au bleu profond des mers.
7 août.

LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS ,

TROISIEME PROMENADE .

Le soleil déclinait; le soir prompt à le suivre brunissait l’ horizon; sur la pierre d’ un champ un vieillard, qui n’ a plus que peu de temps à vivre,
s’ était assis pensif, tourné vers le couchant.
C’ était un vieux pasteur, berger dans la montagne, qui jadis, jeune et pauvre, heureux, libre et sans lois,
à l’ heure où le mont fuit sous l’ ombre qui le gagne,
faisait gaîment chanter sa flûte dans les bois.
Maintenant riche et vieux, l’ âme du passé pleine,
d’ une grande famille aïeul laborieux,
tandis que ses troupeaux revenaient de la plaine,
détaché de la trre, il contemplait les cieux.
Le jour qui va finir vaut le jour qui commence.
Le vieux pasteur rêvait sous cet azur si beau.
L’ océan devant lui se prolongeait, immense comme l’ espoir du juste aux portes du tombeau.
ô moment solennel! Les monts, la mer farouche, les vents, faisaient silence et cessaient leur clameur.
Le vieillard regardait le soleil qui se couche;
le soleil regardait le vieillard qui se meurt.
Passage, 5 août. 7 heures du soir.

1843, 08, 07

LA DESTINEE , XLVIII PROMENADES DANS LES ROCHERS ,

QUATRIEME PROMENADE .

Dieu! Que les monts sont beaux avec ces taches d’ ombre!
Que la mer a de grâce et le ciel de clarté!
De mes jours passagers que m’ importe le nombre!
Je touche l’ infini, je vois l’ éternité.
Orages! Passions! Taisez-vous dans mon âme!
Jamais si près de Dieu mon coeur n’ a pénétré.
Le couchant me regarde avec ses yeux de flamme,
la vaste mer me parle, et je me sens sacré.
Béni soit qui me hait et béni soit qui m’ aime!
à l’ amour, à l’ esprit donnons tous nos instants.
Fou qui poursuit la gloire ou qui creuse un problème!
Moi, je ne veux qu’ aimer, car j’ ai si peu de temps!
L’ étoile sort des flots où le soleil se noie;
le nid chante; la vague à mes pieds retentit;
dans toute sa splendeur le soleil se déploie.
Mon Dieu, que l’ âme est grande et que l’ homme est petit!
Tous les objets créés, feu qui luit, mer qui tremble, ne savent qu’ à demi le grand nom du Très-Haut.
Ils jettent vaguement des sons que seul j’ assemble;
chacun dit sa syllabe, et moi je dis le mot.
Ma voix s’ élève aux cieux, comme la tienne, abîme!
Mer, je rêve avec toi! Monts, je prie avec vous!
La nature est l’ encens, pur, éternel, sublime;
moi je suis l’ encensoir intelligent et doux.
Passage, 7 août 1843.

1859, 10, 27

LA DESTINEE , XLIX RENCONTRE D’ UNE PETITE

FAGOTIERE .

enfant au teint brun, aux dents blanches, ton petit bras derrière toi tire un tremblant faisceau de branches.
ô doux être d’ ombre et d’ effroi, dans la clairière aux vertes routes,
tu passes; nous nous regardons,
moi, plein de songes et de doutes,
toi, les pieds nus dans les chardons.
à nous deux, seuls dans la rosée, nous ferions sourire un cagot;
car, moi, je porte la pensée,
et toi, tu traînes le fagot.
27 octobre 1859.

1859, 10, 25

LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8 I

roi d’ Yvetot, mon camarade, je te dis : — salut! Il fait beau! — comme Racan à Benserade, et comme Arioste à Bembo.
En famille chez toi l’ on soupe;
ta médiocrité te plaît;
la gaîté sainte est la soucoupe
de la tasse où tu bois ton lait.
On nous prêche ici la tristesse.
Sanchez dresse procès-verbal de ce que la folle Lutèce va, fort décolletée, au bal.
Il nous pleut des sermons sans nombre,
très funèbres, point variés;
mais vous êtes là-bas dans l’ ombre
quelques sages qui souriez.
L’ intolérance aux rois s’ appuie, nous frappant de leur droit divin, pendant qu’ avril déjà ressuie
les églantiers dans ton ravin.
Un quadrille est presque une émeute.
L’ essaim des cloîtres nous poursuit;

nos bals sont mordus par la meute de tous ces dogues de la nuit.

LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8, II

Est-ce que les brumes augmentent?
L’ homme est de raison indigent
s’ il se livre à ces clercs qui chantent au Dieu juste un hymne outrageant.
Il faut être de bonne pâte pour se figurer que les rois sont sacrés, et que Dieu se hâte au moindre appel de leurs beffrois;
et qu’ il dit, laissant ses affaires,
les cieux, l’ abîme à diriger,
l’ ombre et la conduite des sphères :
— diantre! Tibère est en danger!
être l’ homme, et suivre la buse!
Croire, après un sermon peu neuf, que Dieu n’ est qu’ un porte-arquebuse debout derrière Charles neuf!
Il faut être inepte, ô Voltaire, pour dire : c’ est vrai, l’ élément et l’ astre aperçoivent sur terre
Louis quinze distinctement.
Il faut être naïf pour croire que Dieu se plaît à châtier, et qu’ Iblis, la grande âme noire,
aidé par un arbre fruitier,
invente la place de Grève, les pédants, le code civil,

parce qu’ Adam mord après ève dans une pomme de calvil.
Quand on peut croire aux lys, aux roses,

à l’ aurore, il est enfantin de croire à cent romans moroses mal traduits du grec en latin.
Il faut être un âne à la lettre pour rêver Diderot puni, pour damner Kant, et pour admettre que Dieu, l’ aïeul de l’ infini, ne s’ occupe, en sa gloire énorme,
sans cesse, hier comme demain, qu’ à faire le procès en forme
à tout ce pauvre genre humain;
et que sa clémence est à l’ aise dans le hurlement des maudits, et dans le cri d’ une fournaise couvrant le chant du paradis.

LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8, III

Depuis six mille ans on invente, on suppose, on effraie, on ment, malgré la lumière vivante
du vénérable firmament.
Le faux ciel que sur nous on penche
est de chimères pluvieux;
le mensonge a la barbe blanche;
l’ homme est enfant, le conte est vieux.
La loi devient l’ hiéroglyphe;
toujours l’ ombre au jour succéda;

Moïse, hélas, produit Caïphe,
Christ engendre Torquemada.
Quel néant l’ homme a sur sa table!
Rien fait mettre un monde à genoux.
Le temple est un lieu redoutable où le sage enfante des fous.
Les religions sont des gouffres;
à leur surface on voit un mont,
l’ erreur, puis de grands lacs de soufres, puis de l’ ombre, et Dieu triste au fond.
Non, non, ce n’ est pas pour le jeûne, le cilice et les bras en croix,
que Jacque est beau, qu’ Agnès est jeune, que l’ alouette chante aux bois!
Le diable et son soufflet de forge s’ évanouissent aussitôt que j’ écoute le rouge-gorge dans ton petit champ d’ Yvetot.
Le baïram et le carême ont le même idéal tous deux :

la femme maigre, l’ homme blême,
le ciel terrible, Dieu hideux.
Je désire autrement conclure.
Tous ces korans, en vérité, ne laissent rien, qu’ une fêlure
au cerveau de l’ humanité.
Devant ces dogmes qu’ on redoute,
ciel difficile, enfer promis, je prends le grand parti du doute,
et de remplir mon verre, amis.

LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8, IV

Le carnaval n’ est point un crime.
Jamais mon esprit ne croira qu’ on tombe à l’ éternel abîme par les trappes de l’ Opéra.
Que Dieu se fâche de la joie,
c’ est peu probable; et je suis sûr,
quand sur nos fronts l’ amour flamboie, que quelqu’ un sourit dans l’ azur.
Quand Lise, au plaisir décidée,
drape son burnous nubien,
et court au bal, j’ ai dans l’ idée, que l’ infini le prend très bien.
Je crois peu, dans ma petite ombre,
qu’ être gais, ce soit être ingrats, et que le Dies irae sombre ait pour masque le mardi gras.
Je doute que, cachant son glaive,
Michel, l’ effrayant chérubin, pour voir où Musard entraîne ève, loue un costume chez Babin.

LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8, V

Ces erreurs, nuage durable, obscurcissent la terre, et font que l’ âme humaine est misérable en présence du ciel profond.

Ces védas, ces métempsychoses, abrutissent l’ homme transi;
donc les champs sont de belles choses,
et la danse aux flambeaux aussi!
Quand mon archevêque me damne pour une tranche de jambon, et me maudit, j’ aime mieux Jeanne,
meilleure preuve d’ un Dieu bon.
J’ aime mieux rêver sous les saules que de lire les mandements de monsieur le primat des Gaules contre les poulardes du Mans.
Je trouve charmantes les belles;
et je préfère la gaîté
des Margots et des Isabelles, à Santeuil hurlant : Stupete!
Je répugne aux vieux dogmes tristes;
je veux, en deux efforts égaux, tirer l’ art des mains des puristes et Dieu des griffes des cagots.
Je hais les césars et les Romes;
ma sagesse, en ces temps railleurs,

c’ est beaucoup d’ amour pour les hommes, beaucoup de pitié pour les fleurs.
Je donnerais dix rois de France et vingt sultans de Dahomey pour ôter au pauvre une transe, une nuée au mois de mai.

LA DESTINEE , L A J . DE S . - LABOUREUR A YVETOT

MI - CAREME DE 1 8, VI

Tout homme est pris, dans son bas âge, par le mensonge triomphant;
les ténèbres, cet esclavage,
m’ ont mis au bagne, tout enfant.
Ceux pour qui l’ ignorance est l’ ordre ont, sur ma pensée où Dieu luit, pris soin de nouer et de tordre
l’ énorme chaîne de la nuit.
Chaque chaînon de cette chaîne est fait d’ autorité, de deuil, d’ énigme, et de la vieille haine forgée avec l’ antique orgueil.
La peur, tous les textes terribles, tout l’ anathème, tout l’ enfer, tous les korans, toutes les bibles,
mêlés, en composent le fer.
Cette chaîne, où rampe une flamme, sur l’ enfant comme sur l’ agneau pèse, et nous étreint; mais mon âme rit, et passe à travers l’ anneau.
25 octobre 1859.

1859, 06, 16

LA DESTINEE , LI LE PARISIEN DU FAUBOURG .

il fait la noce éternelle.
La table est dans la tonnelle;
mort ivre, il tombe dessous;
et, c’ est là sa réussite,
il va, quand il ressuscite,
au paradis pour six sous.
Rire et boire, et c’ est la vie!
On régale; on se convie
sur le vieux comptoir de plomb;
toujours fête; et le dimanche tient le lundi par la manche;
le dimanche a le bras long.
Le broc luit sous les charmilles.
— nous tendrons un verre aux filles et nous les embrasserons;
être heureux, c’ est très facile.
La Grèce avait le Poecile, la France a les Porcherons.
Las, on se couche aux carrières... —
oh! Ce peuple des barrières!
Oh! Ce peuple des faubourgs!
Fou de gaîtés puériles,
donnant quelques fleurs stériles
pour tant de profonds labours!
Il dort, il chante, il s’ irrite.
Rome dit : quel sybarite!
Sybaris dit : quel romain!
à toute minute il change;

et ce serait un archange si ce n’ était un gamin.

L’ athénien est son père.
Par moments on désespère;
il quitte et reprend son bât.
Devinez cette charade :
il achève en mascarade
ce qu’ il commence en combat.
Il n’ a plus rien dans les veines;
il emploie aux danses vaines ces grands mois, juillet, août;
quel bâtard, ou quel maroufle!
— mais un vent inconnu souffle;
il se lève tout à coup,
tout ruisselant d’ espérance,
disant : je m’ appelle France!
Splendide, ivre de péril,
beau, joyeux, l’ âme éveillée, comme une abeille mouillée
de rosée au mois d’ avril!
Il se lève formidable,
abordant l’ inabordable,
prenant dans ses poings le feu,
sonnant l’ heure solennelle, ayant l’ homme sous son aile et dans sa prunelle Dieu!
Fier, il mord dans le fer rouge.
Il change en éden le bouge, enfante chefs et soldats,
et, se dressant dans sa gloire, finit sa chanson à boire par ce cri : Léonidas!

Qu’ un autre lui jette un blâme.
Il est le peuple et la femme;
c’ est l’ enfant insoucieux qui soudain s’ allume et brille;
il descend de la Courtille,

mais il monte dans les cieux.
Guernesey, 16 juin 1859.

LA DESTINEE , LII

ô rois, de qui je vois les royaumes, là-bas, au fond d’ un gouffre plein de foudre et de combats,
je ne sais pas combien de temps Dieu vous accorde;
mais je sais qu’ il me donne en sa miséricorde un petit coin de terre où la rose fleurit.
La vaste mer connaît mon île et lui sourit, et murmure à mes pieds son doux épithalame, et je ne connais rien de plus calmant pour l’ âme que cette solitude immense, où j’ ai des fleurs.
Les frais zéphyrs de mai, mystérieux souffleurs, me chuchotent des vers de Virgile à l’ oreille;
le printemps n’ admet pas ce qui le dépareille, il chasse grêle et neige, et sur l’ hiver descend avec le gai courroux d’ un enfant tout-puissant;
l’ aurore et la jeunesse entrent en équilibre;
partout éclate et rit la grande leçon libre d’ amour, que chacun donne et que chacun reçoit;
nul n’ échappe à la loi divine, quel qu’ il soit;
la jeune fille montre au jeune homme la mousse;
le petit oiseau voit comment la feuille pousse autour de l’ humble nid, par le chêne adopté;
le papillon enseigne au lys la volupté;
je contemple ce tas d’ écoles buissonnières;
et je hais l’ affreux vent qui gonfle vos bannières!

LA DESTINEE , LIII

J’ ai coudoyé les rois, les grands, le fou, le sage,
Judas, César, Davus,
Job, Thersite, et je suis effaré du passage
des hommes que j’ ai vus.
J’ ai subi l’ insulteur qui lapide la tombe et qui raille l’ exil;
car sur nous le tonnerre auguste souvent tombe avec le crachat vil.
J’ ai cherché le malheur comme un chasseur le tigre.
Mon fruit nourrit un ver.
Je suis une hirondelle étrange, car j’ émigre du côté de l’ hiver.
Je ne serai jamais qu’ un vaincu; j’ ai pour règle
d’ être avec les blessés;
quand ils sont trop vainqueurs, je dis au peuple, à l’ aigle, à Dieu lui-même : assez!
Je pense que j’ ai fait des choses nécessaires;
je n’ ai pas de regrets;
l’ homme juste est content d’ employer ses misères à bâtir le progrès.
Pourtant vous ne pouvez empêcher que je songe,
las du sort par moments,
et de l’ ombre que laisse aux âmes le mensonge
de tant d’ évènements.
Le destin m’ a jeté de tempête en tempête,
de récif en récif;

jamais mon coeur saignant n’ a fait courber ma tête;
mon courroux est pensif.
J’ ai traversé les pleurs, les haines, les veuvages,
ce qui mord, ce qui nuit;
noir rocher, j’ ai connu tous les âpres visages
du deuil et de la nuit.

J’ ai lutté; j’ ai subi la sinistre merveille
des abîmes mouvants;
et jamais on ne vit dispersion pareille
d’ une âme à tous les vents.
Je suis presque prophète et je suis presque apôtre;
je dis : c’ est bien! Allons!
Mais je ne voudrais pas de mon sort pour un autre,
ô fauves aquilons!

1875, 07, 06

LA DESTINEE , LIV UNE ROUGEUR AU ZENITH .

quoi! Ce n’ est pas réel parce que c’ est lointain!
Ne croyez pas cela, vous qu’ un hasard hautain, une chance, une erreur, l’ invention des prêtres,
un mensonge quelconque, a faits rois, princes, maîtres;
papes, sultans, césars, czars, qui que vous soyez,
qui tenez les vivants sous le sceptre ployés, et qui mettez Berlin, Stamboul, Pétersbourg, Rome, les ténèbres, le dogme et le sabre, sur l’ homme,
vous qui vous croyez grands et nous croyez petits, regardez la lueur, et soyez avertis que nous ne serons pas toujours le troupeau triste, rois, et que l’ avenir, ce flamboiement, existe.
On vous rassure. On dit : utopie! Eh bien non;
ayez peur. Vous avez ici bas le canon, le trône, l’ échafaud, l’ obus, le knout, le glaive;
mais nous avons là-haut cette clarté, le rêve;
nous avons ce rayon, l’ idéal; nous avons ce qu’ avaient autrefois les pâles esclavons, les juifs, les huguenots et les noirs, l’ espérance;
nous avons l’ infini, sublime transparence;
nous avons la traînée effrayante de feu qui vient vers l’ homme avec un message de Dieu, et qui fait frissonner l’ ombre, blêmir la roche,
fuir l’ orfraie et hurler les loups, à son approche.
Oui, le grand éden libre avec ses songes fous, qui, l’ énorme avenir de lumière pour tous qui vous rougit le ciel, rois, et qui nous le dore, qui vous semble fournaise et qui nous semble aurore, nous l’ aurons. Nous l’ avons! Car c’ est déjà l’ avoir, c’ est déjà le tenir presque, que de le voir.
Et nous l’ apercevons, le superbe prodige!
Vous le voyez aussi. Levez les yeux, vous dis-je!

Ne vous figurez pas que pour être indistinct cela ne soit pas vrai. Quoi! Mais c’ est presque éteint!
Non. C’ est mêlé de nuit! Il le faut. Sans pilote!
Qu’ en savez-vous? Quoi donc! Cette rougeur qui flotte, c’ est quelque chose? ô rois, c’ est tout. Dans les palais, les maîtres à voix basse en parlent aux valets,
et les valets ont peur, mais font semblant de rire.
Ah! Vous pouvez frapper, supplicier, proscrire;
cela n’ en vient pas moins. Cela marche. C’ est loin, mais sûr. Rois, ce sera l’ acteur, c’ est le témoin;
c’ est le juge déjà. C’ est l’ idéal, ô princes!
C’ est le réel. Régnez, soit. Prenez des provinces, volez-vous entre vous des peuples, triomphez;
respirez notre espace à nous les étouffés;
mangez, buvez, chez nous les affamés; souffrance,
c’ est patience; ô sombre et douce délivrance,
tu viens! ô rois, régnez, cela nous est égal;
ayez la Sibérie, ayez le Sénégal;
jetez-nous au vil bagne, aux noirs exils, qu’ importe!
Pendant que des clairons chantent à votre porte et que des sabres nus gardent votre festin, au zénith, une flamme informe, le destin,
le progrès, la confuse ébauche de la vie,
la lampe des penseurs d’ un jour pâle suivie,
sur laquelle jadis Torquemada soufflait, brille et s’ avance, et jette on ne sait quel reflet,
prêtres, sur votre autel, princes, sur votre table.
La comète est ainsi vaguement formidable.
6 juillet 1875.

LA DESTINEE , LV HORREUR SACREE .

Souvent, dans le hallier où l’ églogue hypocrite
s’ en va chantant,
j’ ai tout à coup cessé de lire Théocrite
inquiétant;
Homère fait trembler; un gouffre est dans Eschyle;
parfois je veux
m’ enfuir quand Circé passe ou quand je vois Achille pris aux cheveux;
les aigles sur les bords du Gange et du Caystre sont effrayants;
rien de grand qui ne soit confusément sinistre;
les noirs paeans,
les psaumes, la chanson monstrueuse du mage ézéchiel,
font devant notre oeil fixe errer la vague image
d’ un affreux ciel.
L’ empyrée est l’ abîme, on y plonge, on y reste avec terreur.
Car planer, c’ est trembler; si l’ azur est céleste,
c’ est par l’ horreur.
L’ épouvante est au fond des choses les plus belles;
les bleus vallons
font parfois reculer d’ effroi les fauves ailes des aquilons.
Ils sont pleins de regards et d’ aspects; et les sages,
seuls dans les bois,

méditent, attentifs dans l’ ombre à des passages d’ yeux et de voix;
le poëte serein contient l’ obscur prophète;
Orphée est noir;
c’ est dans une lueur mystérieuse, faite
d’ aube et de soir,

c’ est en regardant fuir sous l’ insondable voûte
d’ affreux griffons, qu’ Amos effaré songe et qu’ Isaïe écoute
les bruits profonds;
Alcée est sidéral, Lucrèce est redoutable,
Job voit l’ Esprit;
le Sphinx vient par moments s’ accouder sur la table
où Dante écrit;
Plaute par Thalia, formidable bouffonne,
s’ entend gronder;
et Pindare en levant les yeux voit Tisiphone
le regarder;
de là tant de beautés difformes dans leurs oeuvres;
le vers charmant
est par la torsion subite des couleuvres pris brusquement;
à de certains moments toutes les jeunes flores dans la forêt
ont peur, et sur le front des blanches métaphores
l’ ombre apparaît;
c’ est qu’ Horace ou Virgile ont vu soudain le spectre noir se dresser;
c’ est que là-bas, derrière Amaryllis, électre vient de passer.

La nature est en vain pleine de fleurs, de fêtes,
et de pardons,
les poëtes ont beau rayonner sur nos têtes, nous entendons
parler de sombres voix à Delphe, aux Propylées, et dans Endor;
et la nuit a toujours des méduses mêlées aux astres d’ or.
7 décembre.

1870, 06, 01

LA DESTINEE , LVI , I

l’ âme humaine est sans cesse en tous les sens poussée.
Dans l’ étrange forêt qu’ on nomme la pensée, tout existe. Sina n’ exclut pas Cythéron.
La douce flûte alterne avec le fier clairon;
le fifre railleur donne aux lyres la réplique;
ici Vesta cachée, et là Vénus publique;
le taillis chaste admet les faunes impudents;
et, quoiqu’ un mage austère et grave soit dedans,
l’ antre n’ empêche pas les nymphes d’ être nues.
La pensée est le lieu des routes inconnues, du doute, où les chercheurs ont fait ce qu’ ils ont pu,
le vague itinéraire à chaque instant rompu.
Toujours plus loin! Voilà le seul avis que donne au songeur cette sombre et fatale Dodone.
Tout est réalité, mais tout est vision.
Marchez.

LA DESTINEE , LVI , II

Et c’ est ainsi dans la création.
Rien qui ne soit passage, essai, brume, aventure,
songe, la vie ayant la mort pour nourriture.
Décor dont les châssis des deux côtés sont peints, ici la face et là le masque. Les sapins, les chênes, les torrents, l’ attitude effarée des écueils à jamais battus par la marée, tout parle. Rien ne ment. Pas un malentendu.

Pas une note fausse et pas un cri perdu.
Pas une voix disant une chose pour l’ autre.
Le vent sait ce qu’ il dit aussi bien que l’ apôtre;
l’ étoile dialogue avec l’ aube, et quand l’ air
s’ ouvre à la déchirure énorme de l’ éclair, les orages profonds confusément murmurent le verbe dont jadis les poëtes s’ émurent, et d’ où sortit, écho du temple ténébreux, avec le paean grec, l’ hosanna des hébreux.
Chaque saison apporte et remporte sa tente.
La fauve immensité n’ est pas toujours contente, et l’ on entend en bas un grondement confus.
Mais qu’ importe. Parfois l’ ombre essaie un refus, la nuit fait ses noirceurs, l’ hiver jette sa glace;
le mal, ce grand blasphème obscur, au bien s’ enlace;
tout cela, c’ est la vie. En toute chose on peut de la nuit et du jour étudier le noeud;
le prodige divin roule dans ses tumultes pêle-mêle, nos lois, nos croyances, nos cultes, et pour faire avancer la justice, et prouver le droit, et le progrès, cet éternel lever, les désastres font presque autant que les victoires;
le mystère profond des voix contradictoires éclate, et l’ enfer donne au paradis raison

d’ un bout à l’ autre bout du sinistre horizon.
Car le sarcasme affirme, et maudire, c’ est croire.
La huée est un bruit qui constate la gloire.

LA DESTINEE , LVI , III

Oui. Tout, c’ est l’ harmonie. Adorons et pensons.
Livrons notre âme ouverte aux cris comme aux chansons.
Le vent fuit. Regardons entrer dans l’ invisible ce javelot lancé vers l’ éternelle cible;
l’ arbre pousse; observons cette croissance; ayons
l’ oeil attentif à l’ onde, aux souffles, aux rayons;

sondons de toutes parts à la fois le mystère.
Notre race, depuis qu’ elle est sur cette terre, travaille, et ne sait rien que ce que l’ homme apprit dans ces dispersions superbes de l’ esprit.
Oh! C’ est une raison de contempler sans cesse, que ce ciel sans orgueil, ce gouffre sans bassesse, cette guerre d’ où naît la paix, ces grands reflux des éléments s’ offrant entre eux leurs superflus et mêlant par les bords leurs océans farouches.
Oh! L’ unanimité sort de toutes les bouches!
Que c’ est beau, cet accord des contraires, disant le même mot sublime, effrayant, innocent!
Sombre unité! La loi des choses est la nôtre.
Une saison ne sert qu’ à faire venir l’ autre;
Hier en reculant fait avancer Demain; profonde identité. Sort! Nuit! L’ esprit humain contient le même songe obscur que la nature;
il a sur l’ infini comme elle une ouverture, mais l’ obstacle est dans l’ ombre, et nous y distinguons une porte que nul n’ ébranle sur ses gonds, c’ est l’ inconnu. L’ esprit de l’ homme, en qui tout vibre, va heurter cette porte avec une aile libre;
nous la sentons, au fond de l’ abîme serein,
faite d’ on ne sait quel mystérieux airain;
quelqu’ un parle tout haut derrière cette porte;
de ce que cette voix dit, et des mots qu’ emporte

le vent semblable au rêve, et que nous saisissons, naissent tous nos espoirs comme tous nos frissons.
Et ce sont ces mots-là qui viennent jusqu’ à l’ homme à travers les songeurs de Judée et de Rome,

à travers Jérémie et Lucrèce, à travers ce tumulte orageux de strophes et de vers qui se mêle au ciel sombre et sort, fumée ardente, de tous ces volcans, Job, Moïse, Eschyle, Dante.
Ces inspirés, en qui la nuit s’ unit au jour,
avaient ce grand courroux qui naît d’ un grand amour;
une fournaise était en leur coeur amassée.
Oui, les poëtes saints vont chercher la pensée aux mêmes profondeurs que les volcans le feu; Juvénal, noir, rongé par la muse, est un lieu autant qu’ un homme, un mont de haine, et s’ accoutume à la colère ainsi que Vésuve au bitume.
Le génie est un puits d’ éruptions; un cri sort d’ un cratère, ou bien d’ un poëte attendri;
la lave chante et bout, l’ hymne s’ embrase et souffre;
l’ ardent prophète jette une clameur de gouffre, et Dieu, que nul ne vit et que tout devina, gronde dans Isaïe autant que dans l’ Etna.
Zzz 1 er juin 1870.

1870, 07, 21

LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , I

semons ce qui demeure, ô passants que nous sommes!
Le sort est un abîme, et ses flots sont amers.
Au bord du noir destin, frères, semons des hommes, et des chênes au bord des mers!
Nous sommes envoyés, bannis, sur ce calvaire, pour être vus de loin, d’ en bas, par nos vainqueurs, et pour faire germer par l’ exemple sévère des coeurs semblables à nos coeurs.
Et nous avons aussi le devoir, ô nature,
d’ allumer des clartés sous ton fauve sourcil, et de mettre à ces rocs la grande signature
de l’ avenir et de l’ exil.
Sachez que nous pouvons faire sortir de terre le chêne triomphal que l’ univers attend, et faire frissonner dans son feuillage austère
l’ idée au sourire éclatant.
La matière aime et veut que notre appel l’ émeuve;
le globe est sous l’ esprit, et le grand verbe humain enseigne l’ être, et l’ onde, et la sève, et le fleuve, qui lui demandent leur chemin.

L’ homme, quand il commande aux flots de le connaître, aux mers de l’ écouter dans le bruit qu’ elles font,
à la terre d’ ouvrir son flanc, aux temps de naître,
est un mage immense et profond.
Ayons foi dans ce germe! Amis, il nous ressemble.
Il sera grand et fort, puisqu’ il est faible et nu.
Nous sommes ses pareils, bannis, nous en qui tremble tout un vaste monde inconnu!
Nous fûmes secoués d’ un arbre formidable,
un soir d’ hiver, à l’ heure où le monde est puni,

nous fûmes secoués, frères, dans l’ insondable, dans l’ ouragan, dans l’ infini.
Chacun de nous contient le chêne République;
chacun de nous contient le chêne Vérité;
l’ oreille qui, pieuse, à nos malheurs s’ applique,
t’ entend sourdre en nous, Liberté!
Tu nous jettes au vent, Dieu qui par nous commences!
C’ est bien. Nous disperser, ô Dieu, c’ est nous bénir!
Nous sommes la poignée obscure des semences du sombre champ de l’ avenir.
Et nous y germerons, n’ en doutez pas, mes frères, comme en ce sable, au bord des flots prompts à s’ enfler, croîtra, parmi les flux et les reflux contraires, ce gland, sur qui Dieu va souffler!

LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , II

ô nature, il s’ agit de faire un arbre énorme, mouvant comme aujourd’ hui, puissant comme demain, figurant par sa feuille et sa taille et sa forme la croissance du genre humain!

Il s’ agit de construire un chêne aux bras sans nombre, un grand chêne qui puise avec son tronc noueux de la nuit dans la terre et qui force cette ombre à s’ épanouir dans les cieux!
Il s’ agit de bâtir cette oeuvre collective d’ un chêne altier, auguste, et par tous conspiré, l’ homme y mettant son souffle et l’ océan sa rive, et l’ astre son rayon sacré!
Nature, que je sens saigner par nos fêlures, dont l’ âme est le foyer où nous nous réchauffons, et dont on voit la nuit les vagues chevelures flotter dans les souffles profonds, nous confions cet arbre à tes entrailles, mère!
Fais-le si grand, qu’ égal aux vieux cèdres d’ Hébron, il ne distingue pas l’ aigle de l’ éphémère et la foudre du moucheron;
et qu’ un jour le passant, quand luira l’ aube calme de l’ affranchissement des peuples sous les cieux, croie, en le voyant, voir la gigantesque palme
de cet effort prodigieux!
Nous te le confions, plage aux voix étouffées.
ô sinistre océan, nous te le confions;
nous confions le chêne adoré des Orphées aux flots qu’ aimaient les Amphions!
Nuages, firmaments, pléiades protectrices, écumes, durs granits, sables craints des sondeurs,

nous vous le confions; et soyez ses nourrices, ténèbres, clartés, profondeurs!

LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , III

Vents, vous travaillerez à ce travail sublime;
ô vents sourds, qui jamais ne dites : c’ est assez!
Vous mêlerez la pluie amère de l’ abîme à ses noirs cheveux hérissés.
Vous le fortifierez de vos rudes haleines;
vous l’ accoutumerez aux luttes des géants;
vous l’ effaroucherez avec vos bouches pleines
de la clameur des océans.
Et vous lui porterez, vents, du fond des campagnes, vents, vous lui porterez du fond des vastes eaux, le frisson des sapins de toutes les montagnes et des mâts de tous les vaisseaux.
Afin qu’ il soit robuste, invincible, suprême, et qu’ il n’ ait peur de rien au bord de l’ infini!
Afin qu’ étant bâti par les destructeurs même, des maudits même il soit béni!
Afin qu’ il soit sacré pour la mer sa voisine, que sa rumeur s’ effeuille en ineffables mots, et qu’ il grandisse, ayant la nuit dans sa racine et l’ aurore dans ses rameaux!

LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 1 4 JUILLET 1 8 7 0 , AUX PROSCRITS , IV

Oh! Qu’ il croisse! Qu’ il monte aux cieux où sont les flammes
!
Qu’ il ait toujours moins d’ ombre et toujours plus d’ azur, cet arbre, en qui, pieux, penchés, vidant nos âmes,
nous mettons tout l’ homme futur!

Qu’ il ait la majesté des étoiles profondes
au-dessus de sa tête, et sous ses pieds les flots!
Et qu’ il soit moins ému du murmure des mondes que des chansons des matelots!
Qu’ il soit haut comme un phare et beau comme une gerbe!
Qu’ il soit mobile et fixe, et jeune, même vieux!
Qu’ il montre aux rocs jaloux son ondoiement superbe, sa racine aux flots envieux!
Qu’ il soit l’ arbre univers, l’ arbre cité, l’ arbre homme!
Et que le penseur croie un jour, sous ses abris, entendre en ses rameaux le grand soupir de Rome et le grand hymne de Paris!
Que, l’ hiver, lutteur nu, tronc fier, vivant squelette, montrant ses poings de bronze aux souffles furieux, tordant ses coudes noirs, il soit le sombre athlète
d’ un pugilat mystérieux!
Car l’ orage est semblable au sort qui se déchaîne, la vie est un guerrier, les vents sont des bourreaux, et traitent sous les cieux le héros comme un chêne, et le chêne comme un héros.
Qu’ il abrite la fleur rampante sur le sable!
Qu’ il couvre le brin d’ herbe et le myosotis!
Qu’ il apparaisse aux vents déchaînés, formidable de sa bonté pour les petits!
Que rien ne le renverse et que rien ne le ploie!

Qu’ il soit, sur ce rivage âpre et des vents battu,
la touffe frémissante et forte de la joie,
de l’ audace et de la vertu!
Qu’ il réjouisse, auguste, aux rayons pénétrable, de son fourmillement de feuilles le ciel bleu!

Qu’ il vive! Qu’ il soit un et qu’ il soit innombrable comme le peuple et comme Dieu!

LE JARDIN DE HAUTEVILLE HOUSE LE 14 JUILLET 1870, AUX PROSCRITS, V

En attendant, écume, autan, bruits, noires bouches, ménagez l’ arbre enfant, éléments irrités!
Tant qu’ il sera petit, murmurez, voix farouches, et quand il sera grand, chantez!
Les tyrans, entassant les fléaux, blocs funèbres, brisant l’ homme idéal, broyant l’ homme animal, sont en train de bâtir un fronton de ténèbres
au vieil édifice du mal.
Avec l’ ombre qui sort des guerres et des pestes, avec les tourbillons des grands embrasements, et les miasmes lourds et les souffles funestes des fosses pleines d’ ossements, avec les toits brûlants, les villes enflammées,
le noir temple du deuil par les rois est construit;
on voit d’ ici monter ces énormes fumées,
colonnes torses de la nuit!
Nous, vaincus, construisons le bonheur! Je convie les siècles à ton ombre, ô gland d’ adversité!
Croîs, arbre; règne, idée; et que l’ arbre ait la vie,
l’ idée ayant l’ éternité!
Pierre et César sont là, pleins du passé féroce!
C’ est l’ instant de lutter, nous qu’ on osa bannir, contre le mal géant, contre l’ erreur colosse, avec ton atome, avenir!
Semons! — semons le gland, et qu’ il soit chêne immense!
Semons le droit; qu’ il soit bonheur, gloire et clarté!

Semons l’ homme et qu’ il soit peuple! Semons la France, et qu’ elle soit Humanité!
C’ est le champ de l’ exil; semons-y l’ espérance.
Semons la nuit lugubre, et qu’ elle soit le jour!

Germe en Dieu, grain obscur! Semons notre souffrance, proscrits, et qu’ elle soit l’ amour!
Oh! Que le genre humain monte sur la montagne!
Terre, souris enfin à l’ homme audacieux, et sois l’ éden, après avoir été le bagne,
ô globe emporté dans les cieux!
21 juillet 1870.

LE LIVRE ÉPIQUE

LES STATUES

Le cavalier de bronze était debout dans l’ombre.

Autour de lui dormait la ville aux toits sans nombre;
Les hauts clochers semblaient, sur les bruns horizons,
De grands pasteurs gardant des troupeaux de maisons;
Notre-Dame élevait ses deux tours, dont chacune,
Lugubre, s’effrayait, dans cette nuit sans lune,
D’entrevoir vaguement sa gigantesque sœur;
Le zénith se voilait d’une telle épaisseur
Que les lueurs du gouffre avaient disparu toutes;
Râlant seul par moments sous les nocturnes voûtes,
Le vent semblait donner passage au désespoir;
Les nuages étaient les plis d’un rideau noir;
On eût dit que le jour ne devait plus renaître,
Ni le matin rouvrir sa sereine fenêtre,
Et que, charbon terrible, âtre à jamais détruit,
Dans cette immensité sur laquelle la nuit,
Monstrueuse, s’était pour toujours refermée,
Tout le soleil éteint s’en allait en fumée,
Tant sur la terre morne et dans le firmament
L’obscurité versait d’évanouissement!

Le ciel, pour on ne sait quels spectateurs funèbres,
Ouvrait jusqu’au fond l’antre immense des ténèbres.
Calme, l’épée au flanc, et portant sur le dos
Le harnais des anciens chevaliers féodaux,
Il était là debout en habit de bataille.
Héros par le sourire et géant par la taille,
Tenant la bride noire en son noir gantelet,
Colosse et roi, tranquille, immuable, il semblait
Pétrifier la nuit par son éternel geste;
Et, se confondant presque avec l’ombre funeste,
Mêlait son airain sombre à la noirceur des cieux.

La statue, au regard fixe et mystérieux,
Vision du sommet et spectre de la cime,
À l’immobilité sinistre de l’abîme,
Car, étant du sépulcre, elle est de l’infini.
Ce livide cheval qui n’a jamais henni,
Ce guerrier qui, muet, semble le personnage
Du suprême silence et du grand témoignage,
Ce socle dominant les hommes, élevant
Sa paix sombre parmi leur orage vivant,
Et sortant de la tombe avec un air de gloire,
Ce colosse qui prend de force la mémoire,
Qui semble encor le roi, le tyran, le bourreau,
Et qui ne pourrait pas chasser un passereau,
Toute cette figure est un monstre du rêve;
Même quand le soleil la précise et l’achève
Et vient la regarder en face, même au jour,
Même quand les passants fourmillent à l’entour,
D’une crainte secrète elle reste vêtue,
Elle est funèbre encor; mais le soir, la statue,
Roi pensif, dur soldat ou lugubre empereur,
Reprend toute sa nuit et toute sa terreur.

Donc il apparaissait dans l’ombre grandiose.

Tout ce que le néant contient d’apothéose,
Tout ce qu’un front royal peut garder de serein
Dans la captivité tragique de l’airain,
L’horreur du monument, tout ce qu’une prunelle
Peut conserver d’éclair quand elle est éternelle,
Toute la vie étrange et pâle de la mort,
Ce qui reste au héros jadis illustre et fort
Quand le trépas l’étreint de ses deux ailes noires,
Tout l’effort qu’au tombeau le gagneur de victoires
En cessant d’être roi fait pour devenir Dieu,
Et la grandeur de l’heure et la grandeur du lieu,
S’ajoutaient au colosse et de son attitude
Augmentaient la suprême et grave solitude;

Et la Seine fuyait avec un triste bruit
Sous ce grand chevalier du gouffre et de la nuit.
Le vent jetait son cri, l’eau jetait son écume;
Et les arches du pont, s’enfonçant dans la brume
Avec un vague aspect de spectre et de chaos,
S’ouvraient sous la statue auguste, et sur les flots
Du fleuve humilié qui pleure et qui querelle,
Porches d’ombre pour eux, arcs triomphaux pour elle.

Soudain, dans ce silence, et sans qu’on pût savoir
Qui parlait dans ce calme impénétrable et noir
Où la profondeur sourde et terrible sommeille,
Au-dessus du colosse immobile, à l’oreille
De la statue ouvrant ses yeux fixes devant
L’espace sépulcral plein de nuit et de vent,
Une voix, qui passa comme un souffle de glace,
Dit : — Va voir si ton fils est toujours à sa place.

Si quelqu’un à cette heure eût rôdé là, marchant
Sur le quai solitaire ou près du bord penchant,
Aux clartés du falot qui vacille et qui fume,
Cet être eût entendu tout à coup, dans la brume
Qui, l’hiver, fait Paris plus noir qu’une forêt,
Un bruit rauque pareil au bruit qui sortirait
De quelque panoplie énorme des ténèbres;
Il eût senti l’horreur frémir dans ses vertèbres,
Et sa langue à la nuit bégayer des aveux,
(Qui n’a pas son remords secret?) et ses cheveux
Se dresser, et ses dents se heurter dans sa bouche;
Car sur le piédestal où, dans le vent farouche,
Les nuages semblaient d’en haut la saluer,
La statue, ô terreur! Venait de remuer.

Rien, pas même l’airain, pour jamais ne s’arrête.

Le roi tourna la bride et le cheval la tête.

Le terre-plein frémit; de longs mouvements sourds
Ébranlèrent les toits, les églises, les tours,
Et les portails sacrés que les siècles vénèrent.

Les muscles monstrueux du bronze frissonnèrent,
La croupe tressaillit, le pied toujours levé
Qui laisse l’herbe croître aux fentes du pavé
S’abaissa, l’autre pied scellé dans l’architrave
Se leva; le colosse inclina son front grave,
Le destrier, ployant ses jarrets de métal,
Horrible, s’approcha du bord du piédestal,
— Visions où jamais un œil humain ne plonge! —
Et, comme par la rampe invisible d’un songe,
La statue à pas lents du socle descendit.
Alors l’âpre ruelle au nom fauve et maudit,
L’échoppe, la maison, l’hôtel, le bouge obscène,
Les mille toits mirant leurs angles dans la Seine,
Les obscurs carrefours où, le jour, en tous sens,
Court l’hésitation confuse des passants,
Les enseignes pendant aux crocs de fer des portes,
Les palais crénelés comme des villes fortes,
Le chaland aux anneaux des berges retenu,
S’étonnèrent devant ce cimier inconnu
Dont aucun ouragan n’eût remué la plume,
Entendirent le sol tinter comme une enclume
Et, tandis qu’au fronton des tours l’heure étouffait
Sa voix, n’osant sonner au cadran stupéfait,
Virent, dans l’épaisseur des ténèbres accrues,
Droit, paisible et glacé, s’avancer dans les rues,
Accompagné d’un bruit funèbre et souterrain,
L’homme de bronze assis sur le cheval d’airain.

L’eau triste frissonnait sous la rondeur de l’arche.

Horreur prodigieuse! Une statue en marche!

La lourdeur de cette ombre étonne le pavé.
Elle glisse, elle va, morne, le front levé,
Avec une roideur de cadavre, et sa forme
Inflexible résiste au vent du gouffre énorme.
L'affreux ordre nocturne en est bouleversé.
Après que cette chose effroyable a passé,
Sous les plafonds glacés où les cercueils séjournent,
Les squelettes hagards dans leur lit se retournent
Et disent à la nuit funeste qui ne sait
Que leur répondre : ô nuit, qu'est-ce donc qui passait?
Si l'œil pouvait plonger dans ces hideux royaumes
Et percer le mystère, on verrait les fantômes,
Frissonnants, éviter le lugubre inconnu.
Larve dont le regard sans pâlir soutenu
Fait toute la grandeur de don Juan athée!
Spectre où s'ébrécherait l'épée épouvantée,
Et qu'en l'osant toucher la main sentirait froid!
Actions de la vie, amours, justice, droit,
Crime, vengeance, orgueil, qu'un simulacre traîne!
Responsabilité de la figure humaine
Prise par le granit ou le bronze fatal!
Oh! Dans l'égarement d'un orage mental,
Dans quelque âpre chaos de villes abattues,
Qui donc a vu rôder lentement des statues?
Ces êtres inouïs, impossibles, affreux,
Vont, ayant la stupeur des ténèbres sur eux;
Et l'alarme est dans l'ombre, et le rêve lui-même,
Qui distingue à minuit dans l'immensité blême
Tout un monde terrible à travers l'œil fermé,
Le rêve, aux habitants de l'ombre accoutumé,
S'épouvante de voir cette lugubre espèce
De fantômes entrer dans sa nuée épaisse,
Et frémit, car le pas de ces noirs arrivants
N'est ni le pas des morts ni le pas des vivants.

Quand l'homme s'avança, les profondeurs s'émurent.
Et le dessous des ponts où les courants murmurent,

Les cimetières noirs, sentant venir un roi,
Les parvis dominés d’un porche ou d’un beffroi
Où passaient autrefois les carrosses des sacres,
Les charniers, les égouts où le sang des massacres
S’extravase et croupit et fait de tristes lacs,
Les bornes où, pensifs, montent les Ravaillacs,
Les puits mystérieux des vieilles tours muettes,
Les lourds carcans, pendus au clou des oubliettes,
Les lointains ponts-levis des forts et des fossés,
Les pavés où, l’hiver, la pluie à flots pressés
S’abat, tombant du ciel comme des trous d’un crible,
Se mirent à trembler sous le marcheur terrible.

Et comme il est certain — l’œil du tombeau le voit —
Que derrière tout roi qui passe, quel qu’il soit,
Toute la royauté se dresse, noir fantôme,
L’ancien Paris, vibrant de la masure au dôme,
Dans son plus vil repli, dans son plus dur pilier,
Fit un bruit sombre autour du fatal cavalier.
C’était comme le cri solennel et sauvage
De la vieille misère et du vieil esclavage,
Comme le hurlement de mille ans révoltés,
Comme la voix des temps et des calamités;
Tout le passé pleurait dans cette clameur triste,
Tout, ce qui disparaît comme ce qui subsiste;
C’était le sang, la chair, et le fer, et le feu,
Râlant à travers l’ombre un grand appel à Dieu;
C’était la tombe ouvrant ses immenses entrailles.
Dans ce fauve murmure éclataient les mitrailles,
Les meurtres, les splendeurs du pouvoir triomphant;
On y distinguait l’homme et la vierge et l’enfant;
Les balles des assauts sifflaient aux meurtrières;
Les femmes rugissaient dans les salpêtrières;
Les chambres de torture attisaient leurs réchauds;
On entendait gémir les geôles, les cachots,
Et l’affreux Saint-Lazare, et ce lugubre ancêtre
De tous les parias du vieux monde, Bicêtre;

Le désespoir passait suivi de ses lépreux,
La mort de ses bourreaux, le trône de ses preux;
Les mères s’arrachaient les cheveux à poignées;
Les Te Deum chantaient les batailles gagnées;
Tout y retentissait, les carrousels charmants,
Le quadruple galop des écartèlements,
La hache, le billot, le pal, le fouet, la chaîne,
Tout l’infâme appareil de supplices que traîne
Cette vieille Thémis humaine aux yeux bandés
Qui jadis prit Jésus, joua sa robe aux dés,
Le fit crucifier par le crime et le vice,
Et compte Dieu parmi ses repris de justice;
Tout s’y mêlait, les deuils, les complots assassins,
L’arquebuse du roi Charles neuf, les tocsins,
Les cloches que l’orfraie effleure de son aile,
Les cris qu’étouffe l’eau devant la tour de Nesle,
Marguerite vidant son lit dans le tombeau,
Médicis, Brunehaut, Frédégonde, Isabeau;
Les piloris râlant à côté des trophées.

Par moments, comme un vent qui s’éteint par bouffées,
Ou comme un océan apaisant ses reflux,
La rumeur se taisait, et l’on n’entendait plus
Que le pas mesuré du passant formidable.

L’horreur blême tombait du ciel inabordable
Où les nuages noirs se font et se défont;
Des flots d’ombre roulaient dans l’infini profond.

L’homme d’airain tourna par la place Dauphine,
Puis il suivit la berge étroite qui confine,
Au sud, au vieux logis des chevaliers du guet,
Au nord, à la grand’chambre à qui Nesmond léguait
Sa robe et son portrait peint par le Primatice;
Il côtoya les tours du palais de Justice
D’où tombe sur le peuple un aveugle anankè,
Passa le pont au Change, et, côtoyant le quai,

Gagna l’hôtel de ville et la place de Grève;
Il traversa l’arcade où maintenant s’élève
Tout un palais nouveau dressant ses lourds chevets,
Laissa derrière lui le portail Saint-Gervais,
Prit à gauche, et, perçant un dédale de rues,
Cavernes du vieil âge aujourd’hui disparues,
Où les maisons avaient des faces de bandits,
Lent et grave, il entra, par le porche où jadis
Une reine voilée attendait Bassompierre,
Dans une grande place aux arcades de pierre.

Au centre de la place, un feuillage tremblant
Laissait à demi voir un grand fantôme blanc;
C’était un cavalier de marbre.
                                        Altier, austère,
Sur un socle, au milieu d’un perron solitaire,
Couronné de lauriers comme un César romain,
Il surgissait tranquille, auguste, surhumain.
Au socle était sculptée une main de justice.
Grave, le coude ouvert et le poing sur la cuisse,
Il tenait à la main un bâton d’empereur.
Les arbres s’effaraient pleins d’une vague horreur,
Et leur cime semblait d’un vent d’hiver battue.

La statue alla droit dans l’ombre à la statue;
Et celui qui marchait regarda fixement
Celui qui songeait triste, immobile et dormant,
À travers la noirceur des sombres branches d’arbre.

L’homme de bronze alors dit à l’homme de marbre :

— Viens donc voir si ton fils est à sa place encor.

Comme un chasseur s’éveille au son lointain du cor,
Louis treize sortit de son éternel rêve;
Et le blanc porte-sceptre et le noir porte-glaive,
Le pâle roi César, le fier roi chevalier,

Descendant du perron le livide escalier,
Traversèrent la place et passèrent la grille;
Et, par-dessus les toits, un spectre, la Bastille,
Les vit qui s’en allaient vers le Paris vivant;
Le cavalier d’airain, calme, marchait devant,
Tenant son doigt levé pour indiquer la route.

Ils ne passèrent point sous l’arche de la voûte;
Ils prirent par le Pas de la Mule, et, suivant
Les boulevards qu’emplit, le jour, un flot mouvant,
Montèrent vers la Ville endormie à cette heure;
Et les quatre lions du Château-d’eau qui pleure,
Les toits des vieux faubourgs aux innombrables nids,
La porte Saint-Martin, la porte Saint-Denis,
Les Porcherons où vibre encor le bruit des verres,
Tremblants, virent passer ces deux profils sévères.
Ils marchaient sans parler, sans dire : par ici.
Et les deux cavaliers arrivèrent ainsi
Dans un des carrefours immenses de la ville.
Au centre, se dressait un autre homme immobile.

Cet homme n’était pas un homme, mais un Dieu.

Son front, qui semblait fait pour le ciel toujours bleu,
Se haussait arrogant, comme indigné de l’ombre;
On voyait sur sa tête un vague soleil sombre;
Il rayonnait, lugubre; il avait l’air fatal
Et superbe, que donne aux morts le piédestal,
Et tout ce qu’un vainqueur répand d’horreur sacrée
Quand le roi qui détruit contient un Dieu qui crée.
C’était un roi de bronze ainsi que le premier;
Il n’avait ni brassards, ni haubert, ni cimier,
Et, beau comme Apollon, était nu comme Hercule;
On voyait se courber, noirs dans le crépuscule,
Quatre fleuves, l’Escaut, l’Ister, le Doubs, le Rhin,
Sous les quatre sabots de son cheval d’airain;
Tranquille, il paraissait écouter dans les brises

Des chocs de bataillons, de cris de villes prises;
Et sa crinière était d’un lion; et, sans voix,
Sans geste, il commandait; il semblait tendre aux rois
Sa fière épée, à Dieu, dans l’azur solitaire,
Sa main, et son orteil aux baisers de la terre.

Il semblait de lui-même à jamais ébloui.
Et les deux cavaliers marchèrent droit à lui.

Le vent mystérieux suspendit son murmure;
L’aveugle nuit tâcha de voir.

L’homme à l’armure
Laissa derrière lui son blême compagnon,
Et dit très haut :

— Louis, quatorzième du nom,
Réveille-toi, Louis! Et viens avant l’aurore
Voir si ton petit-fils est à sa place encore. —

Le Dieu de bronze au front vaguement étoilé
Ouvrit sa lèvre sombre et dit : — M’a-t-on parlé?
Et son regard cherchant à ses pieds, sembla naître.
— Oui. — Qui donc? — Moi. — Qu’es-tu? — Ton père, dit l’ancêtre
— Quel est ce petit-fils que ta voix m’a nommé?
— Celui que tes sujets appelaient Bien-Aimé.
— Où donc est-il, l’objet de ces idolâtries?
— Dans une grande place au bout des Tuileries.
Viens.

Le noir demi-Dieu salua les deux rois,
Puis descendit du socle auguste, et tous les trois
Se mirent à marcher dans la nuit côte à côte,
L’aïeul passant les fils de sa tête plus haute.

Ils gagnèrent le quai, laissèrent derrière eux
Le balcon où, rêvant sur Paris malheureux,

La Saint-Barthélemy s’accoude, noir fantôme,
Et passèrent devant le palais du royaume,
Bloc difforme de murs et de toits inégaux
Qui, comme les palais de Thèbes et d’Argos,
À ses Agamemnons, ses Laïus, ses Électres,
La Seine refléta, sinistre, ces trois spectres,
Le roi soldat, le roi césar et le roi dieu,
Reconnut Louis treize et chercha Richelieu.
Le vieux Louvre entr’ouvrit ses royales croisées.

Eux, muets, s’avançaient vers les Champs-Élysées.

LES CARIATIDES

Puissant Germain Pilon, toi qui, rude ouvrier,
Entendis la douleur dans les gouffres crier,
Qui sentis l'art divin protester et combattre,
Toi qui, sous les héros et sous les Henri quatre,
Dédaignant Saint-Germain, Chambord et l'Œil-de-bœuf,
Groupas les mascarons tragiques du Pont-Neuf,
Colossal pétrisseur des formes ténébreuses,
Toi qui savais qu'ouvrant ses gueules douloureuses,
La demi-brute aboie après les demi-dieux,
Et que tout le dédain de l'abîme odieux,
Tout le deuil de l'enfer et du bagne grimace
Sur le visage informe et profond de la masse,
Ô dur géant, tandis que les autres sculpteurs,
Épris du bas-relief superbe des hauteurs,
Ciselaient le fronton de la toute-puissance;
Tandis que sur le socle où le prêtre l'encense,
Comme un olympien hautain et gracieux,
Écoutant la fanfare idéale des cieux
Qu'accompagnent les vents, mystérieux orchestre,
Ils dressaient dans l'azur César, fantôme équestre;
Tandis qu'ils prosternaient sous Tibère vieillard
La flatterie infâme et splendide de l'art,
Et qu'ils faisaient lécher Néron ou Louis onze
Par les langues de feu des fournaises du bronze,
Et que, prostituant le ciseau souverain,
Ils faisaient deux laquais du marbre et de l'airain;
Pendant que, bâtissant pour la terre enchaînée
Quelque Héliogabale ou quelque Salmonée,
Ils montraient le tyran, glaive au flanc, sceptre en main,
Serein, presque au delà de l'horizon humain,
Debout dans l'empyrée où l'on voit l'aube poindre,
Si loin qu'il semble grand, si haut qu'il paraît joindre
La couronne d'orgueil qui sur la terre luit
Avec celle que peut donner la sombre nuit,

Et qu’on voit resplendir au fond des sacrés voiles
Son front ceint de lauriers vaguement ceint d’étoiles;
Pendant qu’ils construisaient sur d’altiers piédestaux
De vastes empereurs traînant de lourds manteaux,
Des princes échappant dans le bronze à la fange,
Et qu’ils transfiguraient le despote en archange,
Et qu’ils faisaient le maître, et qu’ils faisaient le roi,
Et qu’ils faisaient le Dieu, tu fis le peuple, toi!
Tu fis le grand vaincu qui crache de la lave;
Tu fis le grand forçat, tu fis le grand esclave;
Au niveau de l’horreur et du deuil abîmé,
Tu tordis dans sa nuit l’effrayant opprimé!
Sous les Charles sanglants se lavant aux aiguières,
Sous les Louis suivis des fauves Lesdiguières,
Sous François à l’œil fier, sous Diane au pied nu,
Tu sentis remuer l’Encelade inconnu;
Tu levas des vivants l’affreux drap mortuaire,
Et tu leur dis : — Venez, je suis le statuaire!
Venez, vous qui souffrez! Vous qui pleurez, venez!
Venez, tous les lépreux, venez, tous les damnés!
Sous un socle royal je vais sur cette frise
Vous faire fourmiller dans la pierre âpre et grise.
Misère, maladie, ô deuils, haillons pendants,
Colère du grabat, faim qui montres les dents,
Venez, j’étalerai sous ce roi vos ulcères
Saignants, affreux, cruels, formidables, sincères;
Je vous donnerai vie et corps sur ce vieux pont
Où la clameur du fleuve à vos douleurs répond;
L’hiver, à l’heure obscure où le vent crie et souffre,
Vous entendrez passer toutes les voix du gouffre
Sous ces arches d’écume et de trombe et de nuit! —

Alors l’antique horreur sortit de son réduit;
Alors ton œil plongea dans tous les purgatoires;
Alors vinrent à toi toutes les faces noires;
Et ton souffle alluma des flammes dans ces yeux,
Et tout ce tourbillon de fronts mystérieux

S’abattit à jamais sur ces dalles funèbres
Comme un essaim hideux de mouches des ténèbres.

Ô mascarons d’un doigt magistral ébauchés!
Êtres vertigineux! Tristes géants couchés!
En butte à ce qui souille ainsi qu’à ce qui change,
Éclaboussés par l’onde et tachés par la fange!
Leurs têtes, où l’oiseau fait sa fiente et son nid,
Percent lugubrement l’étrave de granit
Et s’avancent sur l’eau comme de noires proues,
Et leur corps se prolonge en pavé sous les roues,
Sous les talons ferrés et sous les pas perdus;
Les attelages lourds, sous le fouet éperdus,
Marchent sur eux traînant des chaînes et des câbles,
Et, par moments, les pieds, les galops implacables,
La ruade féroce et l’affreux choc des fers
À ces durs patients arrachent des éclairs.
Oh! Qui que vous soyez, qui, penchés sur les choses,
Sondez l’humanité dans ses métempsychoses,
Approchez, regardez, méditez, et tremblez.

Les voilà tous pressés, accouplés, rassemblés;
Voilà tous les souffrants et tous les lamentables;
Voilà les ramasseurs de miettes sous les tables;
Voilà tous les abjects vaguement entrevus;
Voilà Scapin, voilà Sancho, voilà Davus;
La chimère se mêle au réel qui l’attire;
Le valet rit, surpris d’être aussi le satyre;
Voilà les portefaix de tout le poids humain.
Ils regardent passer hier, aujourd’hui, demain,
Ce qui naît, ce qui meurt, ce qui va, ce qui sombre,
Ce qui flotte, attentifs on ne sait à quelle ombre.
Ils font de l’onde vaine un lugubre examen.
L’eau s’évade et poursuit son tortueux chemin
Par sa pente au hasard en liberté conduite,
Sous ces captifs penchés, tantales de la fuite.
Le reflet des eaux fait, sous l’âpre entablement,

De profil en profil errer un flamboiement,
Et la chauve-souris de l’aile les effleure.
Est-ce que cela raille? Est-ce que cela pleure?

Ô bouches où l’esprit qui passe, d’horreur plein,
Rêve Pantagruel et retrouve Ugolin!
Masque de Rabelais sur la face de Dante!
Progression d’angoisse et d’horreur ascendante!
Fronts où flambe l’enfer, comme la tombe froids!
Ô larves! Visions de l’invisible! Effrois!
Mascarade aperçue à travers le suaire!
Morne évocation du mage statuaire
Qui n’a que Michel-Ange ou Milton pour rival!
Sinistre mardi gras des spectres! Carnaval
De l’infini, flottant dans le souffle insondable!
Descente de Courtille énorme et formidable
Pétrifiée au mur du songe et de la nuit!
Est-ce que l’ouragan qui frissonne et qui fuit
Ne va pas emporter cette fresque de pierre?
Dieu! Qu’est-ce que l’église et le trône ont pu faire
À ce peuple sans nom, sans lumière, sans voix,
Sans espoir, qui sanglote et ricane à la fois
En regardant, du fond du néant qui le couvre,
D’un côté Notre-Dame et de l’autre le Louvre?

Oh! Ces enfantements et ces créations,
Ces rencontres de l’âme avec les visions
Pèsent sur le génie, et, le courbant à terre,
Le penchent du côté le plus noir du mystère.
Du jour où tout ce monde étrange t’apparut,
Des passions d’en bas râlant l’horrible rut,
T’apportant des douleurs la sublime démence,
Ô sculpteur, à partir de cet instant immense,
Ta pensée à jamais fut mêlée à la nuit!

Homme grand parmi ceux qu’une flamme conduit,
Oui, maître, ce fut là ta puissance et ta gloire :

Aux princes effarés de force et de victoire,
Au pouvoir ignorant les devoirs et les droits,
Au palais sidéral des reines et des rois,
À l’immense colosse impérial qui lève
Sa tête dans l’éclair du vertige et du rêve,
Au trône sombre ayant pour dais le firmament,
Au monarque, tu fis le grand soubassement,
L’homme; sous le tyran tu mis la multitude!
Les puissants rayonnaient dans leur haute attitude,
Confiants, sûrs du vent, sûrs du flot, sûrs du port;
Toi, grave et dédaigneux, tu donnas pour support
À leur calme, à leur joie, à leur crime, à leurs fêtes,
L’hydre cariatide aux millions de têtes;
Au-dessous de leur gloire, au-dessous de ces noms
Sonnés par la trompette et dits par les canons,
Au-dessous des splendeurs, des vertus proclamées,
Et de la nudité des fières renommées,
Et de tout ce qui crie : Adorez! Je suis beau!
Je suis pourpre, je suis glaive, je suis flambeau!
Tu fis, dans le brouillard livide qui s’écroule,
Ramper le gigantesque anonyme, la foule.
Sous les jeux et les ris, sous les molles amours,
Sous Valois, sous Bourbon, sous Condé, sous Nemours,
Sous la tendre Chevreuse et la blonde d’Humière,
Sous toute la beauté dans toute la lumière,
Sous l’olympe royal, hautain, splendide à voir,
Tu sculptas le supplice inouï du bloc noir,
L’angoisse de la masse informe, et le calvaire
Du manant redoutable et du granit sévère.
Les puissants rayonnaient, faisant en liberté
Le partage insolent de la prospérité,
Désaltérant leur soif toujours inassouvie,
Prenant tout le bonheur, prenant toute la vie;
Vénus regardait Mars avec ses plus doux yeux;
Les fiers drapeaux faisaient de grands frissons joyeux;
Les rois étaient armés, les femmes étaient nues;
Les chasses s’enfuyaient au fond des avenues;

Tout était le palais, le banquet, le gala;
Toi, tu fis, en regard de tout ce Louvre-là,
Brusquement, aux lueurs de la torche qui brille,
Du grand cachot Misère apparaître la grille
Et les faces qu'on voit à travers ses barreaux!
Ô prostestation terrible! Les héros,
Les gagneurs de bataille et les dieux de la terre,
Des hauts arcs de triomphe habitant l'acrotère,
Vainqueurs, cuirassés d'or, vêtus de diamant,
Du genre humain pensif sombre éblouissement,
Éclatants, radieux, vaillants, criant Montjoie,
Résumaient le miracle effrayant de la joie,
De l'azur sans nuage et sans fond, du soleil;
Toi, songeur, tu voulus que là, sous leur orteil,
Tout un monde aux rictus sans fin, aux yeux sans nombre,
Effroyable, exprimât le prodige de l'ombre!
Ton art, que jusqu'aux fronts réprouvés tu courbas,
Sous les monstres d'en haut mit les monstres d'en bas,
Le peuple, qui se fait chaque jour moins difforme,
Et qui deviendra grand sans cesser d'être énorme.

Oui, l'Averne terrestre avec ses Ixions,
Le poème hagard des malédictions,
Gueux, cagoux, malingreux, bohémiens, marranes,
Le menton bestial du paria, les crânes
Que sous son bas plafond l'ignorance a faits plats,
Les fauves suppliants, tout ce qui dit : hélas!
Sylvains et paysans entrevus sous les lierres,
Lèvres avec l'injure et le cri familières,
L'oreille où s'est empreint le pavé, dur chevet,
La maigreur que la loque en grelottant revêt,
Le maraud, le manant, le prolétaire blême
À qui Malthus dit : Meurs! Quand Jésus lui crie : Aime!
Les pauvres frémissant de se sentir bandits,
La lèpre des cloisons malsaines du taudis
Gagnant l'habitant sombre, et passant, incurable,
Du mur de la misère au front du misérable,

Idiots, mendiants râlant sur les chemins,
Tout le fourmillement des cloportes humains,
Le berceau condamné, l’innocence punie,
Les mourants éternels de la grande agonie,
Un Pélion hideux sous un splendide Ossa,
Voilà ce que ton bras titanique entassa!
Et, tandis qu’on sculptait, pour le sceptre et l’épée,
Le bronze dithyrambe et le marbre épopée,
Ô poète, tu fis grimacer à jamais
Sous les guerriers d’airain des lumineux sommets,
Sous les déesses d’aube et de blancheur vêtues,
Les masques, populace horrible des statues!

Et pour égayer œuvre étrange, dans ce tas
De maux, de désespoirs, de sanglots, tu jetas
Toute une parodie infernale et farouche,
Brusquet, Guillot Gorju, Turlupin, Scaramouche,
Tous les spectres qui font trembler de leurs discours
Le tréteau de la rue ou le tréteau des cours;
Tu les fis vivre là! Mais, à ton insu même,
Devin qu’illuminait une clarté suprême,
Ayant de l’avenir déjà l’âpre sueur,
Railleur démesuré, tu mettais la lueur
Des révolutions dans le regard des faunes;
Tu mêlais aux Pasquins de vagues Tisiphones;
C’est presque en menaçant les rois qu’au-dessous d’eux
Tu sculptais leurs fous noirs et leurs bouffons hideux,
Et ta fatale main, ô grand tailleur de pierre,
Dans Trivelin sinistre ébauchait Robespierre.

Ce dur Germain Pilon que l’abîme inspirait,
Ce prophète, était-il dans son propre secret?
Avait-il, âme vaste aux grands hasards poussée,
La révélation de toute sa pensée?
Savait-il, ce songeur, quel symbole il jetait
Sur ce gémissement qui jamais ne se tait,
Sur ce fleuve qui glisse ainsi qu’une couleuvre?

Son regard plongeait-il jusqu’au fond de son œuvre?
Mystère! Avoir sculpté les douleurs, les affronts,
L’effroi, la peine; avoir à ces tragiques fronts
Donné pour miroir l’onde, autre image des foules;
Sur la vague, où du vent passent les tristes houles,
Sur tous les plis que fait le grand linceul des flots,
Sur l’âpre inquiétude et sur les longs sanglots
Que le fleuve orageux dans sa fuite promène,
Ô terreur! Avoir mis toute la ride humaine
Et tous les froncements du sourcil de la nuit;
Avoir, dans l’avenir par Dieu même introduit,
Montré l’émeute aux rois comme la mer aux grèves;
Avoir démuselé les gorgones des rêves;
Avoir multiplié Méduse sur ce mur
Où l’art vertigineux ouvre son œil obscur;
Évoquer le vieillard, l’homme, l’enfant, la femme;
Effarer le granit et le pénétrer d’âme;
Faire pleurer la pierre et la désespérer;
Ouvrir tout l’horizon du gouffre, et l’ignorer!
Être, sans s’en douter, le précurseur terrible;
Être, sans le savoir, Titan; est-ce possible?

Dieu! Collaborateur ténébreux et serein!
Qui sait si le génie, effrayant souverain
À qui les astres font dans l’ombre un diadème,
À l’intuition totale de lui-même?
Oh! De l’esprit humain ces grands amphictyons,
Dante, Isaïe, Eschyle, — Étranges questions! —
Cervante et Rabelais, savaient-ils leur empire?
Shakspeare, ô profondeurs! Voyait-il tout Shakspeare?
Molière par Molière était-il ébloui?
Qui pourrait dire non? Qui pourrait dire oui?
Qu’importe! Après avoir mis ce deuil sur ce râle,
Le sculpteur est rentré dans sa nuit sidérale,
Calme et sombre, et léguant aux siècles ce tableau :
La passion du peuple et le tourment de l’eau!
Et maintenant passez, et tâchez de comprendre!

Homère savait-il qu’il faisait Alexandre?
Socrate savait-il qu’il engendrait Jésus?
Ô gouffres de l’esprit vaguement aperçus!
Amer Germain Pilon qui dans la nuit nous plonges,
Qui sait, dans le dédale insensé de tes songes,
À quelle porte d’ombre et d’horreur tu frappas?
Qui sait si ton poème inouï ne vient pas
De plus loin que la terre et de plus haut que l’homme,
Des profondeurs que nul ne connaît et ne nomme,
Du précipice ouvert au delà du cercueil?
Qui sait si tu n’as point contemplé l’affreux deuil
De la nature immense, et si, funèbre artiste,
Tu n’avais pas en toi le souffle le plus triste
Dont puisse frissonner un esprit sous les cieux,
La désolation du Mal mystérieux,
Quand, regardant ces flots, tu penchas, noir génie,
L’éternel grincement sur la plainte infinie?

Or, tandis que les eaux fuyaient, mouvants miroirs,
En voyant les trois rois marcher sur les quais noirs,
Les masques monstrueux éclatèrent de rire,
Éclat si ténébreux et plein d’un tel martyre
Qu’aujourd’hui même, après que tant de flots d’oubli
Ont coulé sous ce pont chancelant et vieilli
Depuis la sombre nuit qu’en frissonnant j’éclaire,
Plusieurs des mascarons du fronton séculaire
En gardent le reflet dans leur œil flamboyant,
Et sont encor fendus de ce rire effrayant.

Et celui qui riait le plus haut dans le gouffre,
Larve ayant dans les dents une lueur de soufre,
Face mystérieuse aux cyniques sourcils
Soudain épanouie en fauve Némésis, Jeta ce cri :

— Troupeau, tourbe, foule hagarde,
Manants, réveillez-vous! Populace, regarde;
Ouvrez vos yeux obscurs de larmes chassieux;
Voici trois de vos rois qui marchent sous les cieux.
Leur front a la noirceur que laisse un diadème.
Ils ont plus d’ombre en eux que n’en a la nuit même,
Car c’est après la mort le sort de tous ces dieux
Plus ténébreux, ayant été plus radieux.
Ils vont. Où donc vont-ils? Allez! Allez! Qu’importe!
Vous n’avez pas besoin qu’on vous pousse la porte,
Rois! La route est pavée et large est le terrain;
Allez! — L’un est en marbre et deux sont en airain;
Ces rois sont faits des cœurs de tous les rois leurs pères. —
Vous tous, réveillez-vous au fond de vos repaires,
Serfs qui depuis mille ans traînez l’immense croix,
Et regardez passer ces spectres qui sont rois!
Vous en avez pleuré, voici l’heure d’en rire.

Qui sont-ils? Écoutez ce que je vais vous dire.

Le premier, c’est la joie. Il fit tout en riant;
Il riait à la guerre, il riait en priant;
Le jour qu’il vint au monde, adopté par la gloire,
Son aïeul fit chanter sa mère et le fit boire;
Ce roi de belle humeur a ri jusqu’au tombeau;
C’est en riant qu’il fit de Dieu son escabeau;
Il marcha sur l’autel pour monter sur le trône;
Des meurtriers des siens il recevait l’aumône;
Il riait tant, qu’il dut exiler d’Aubigné,
Car le joyeux ne peut que chasser l’indigné;
Suivi de ses féaux, vaillantes valetailles,
Il s’épanouissait; il aimait les batailles
Et les filles, cherchant gaîment tous les hasards.

Oh! D’Estrée et de Bueil, d’Entrague et des Essarts!
Nuits! Parcs mystérieux, murmures des cascades!
Ô danses et chansons sous les pâles arcades!

Nymphes reines! Ô rois satyres et sylvains!
Ô bon Henri! Beautés, folles aux yeux divins!
Ces chiennes de l’amour, comme il s’en faisait suivre!
Comme il les enivrait de l’extase de vivre!
Comme il leur prodiguait les bijoux florentins,
Les fêtes, les ballets, les concerts, les festins
Sur qui, pour laisser voir les cieux, le plafond s’ouvre,
Les lits de brocart d’or dans les chambres du Louvre,
Et les vastes palais et les riches habits,
Et dans la pourpre en feu la braise des rubis,
Et les perles des mers dans les flots de la soie!
Ô temps heureux!

                                        Autour de ce trône de joie
Les juges, pour servir la royauté fougueux,
Allaient expédiant dans l’ombre un tas de gueux;
On pendait des marauds et des rustres, rebelles
À la taxe, à la taille, aux aides, aux gabelles,
Va-nu-pieds refusant les impôts; il faut bien
Que quelqu’un paie en somme et le roi n’y peut rien;
Et le soir, à travers le doux bruit des fontaines,
Quand les rires, mêlés aux musiques lointaines,
Semblaient accentuer la flûte et le hautbois,
Quand dans le jardin sombre épaissi comme un bois
On voyait des amants errer, et sous les branches
D’ardents profils chercher de vagues gorges blanches;
Quand dans les fleurs de lys planait l’amour ailé;
Quand Danaé vaincue offrait tout bas sa clé,
À l’instant où le roi, ravi, charmant, affable,
Jupiter fou, riait avec toute la fable,
Gai, ne quittant Léda que pour reprendre Hébé,
Et rendait le baiser qu’il avait dérobé
À quelque Gabrielle, à quelque Jacqueline,
Une brise jetait du haut de la colline
Une haleine de tombe entre ces deux baisers;
Et, non loin de ces jeux et de ces ris, brisés,
Nus, grelottant au vent sous les poutres muettes,

S’entre-choquant l’un l’autre et heurtés des chouettes,
Envoyant des bruits sourds jusqu’au royal balcon,
Les squelettes tordaient leur chaîne à Montfaucon!

Ce qui n’empêche pas que ce roi Henri quatre,
Ce Vert-galant qui sut aimer, boire et combattre,
Soit le meilleur de ceux qu’on appelle les rois.

Celui qui vient après fut moins joyeux; ses lois
Buvaient du sang; il fut comme un couteau qui tombe;
Son trône ténébreux eût une odeur de tombe,
Et le vautour y songe encore au haut du mont;
Faible et lugubre, il eut pour bras Laubardemont,
Pour cerveau Laffemas, pour âme La Reynie;
Un homme rouge fut son sceptre et son génie;
Son amitié menait, pour peu qu’on s’y fiât,
Concini dans l’égout, au billot d’Effiat;
Il semblait à ce roi, sombre tête perdue,
Que toute branche était comme une main tendue
Demandant un cadavre; il ne refusait pas;
Les arbres devenaient potences sous ses pas;
Jamais il ne laissait son prévôt la main vide;
Il jetait au supplice, affreuse goule avide
Qu’il croyait voir toujours dans l’ombre mendier,
Tantôt Galigaï, tantôt Urbain Grandier;
Il cherchait le charnier comme Henri la mêlée;
Il ne haïssait point l’odeur de chair brûlée;
Des chambres de torture il écoutait les bruits;
Ce vendangeur avait pour pommes et pour fruits
Les paniers du bourreau pleins de têtes coupées;
Dans sa tenaille ardente il tordait les épées;
Son prêtre lui faisait faire ce qu’il voulait;
D’une soutane horrible il était le valet;
Le sang l’éclaboussait des talons au panache;
Il séparait les duels avec un coup de hache;
Dépeuplant le sillon, décimant le manoir,
Il a sous les chouquets étendu le drap noir

À Paris, à Toulouse, à Nante, à la Rochelle;
Et de tous les gibets il a tenu l’échelle;
Et sa main en avait gardé le tremblement.
Ce temps fut morne, obscur, douloureux, inclément,
Implacable, et la Grève en fut la seule fête.
Tant que dura ce roi, le peuple eut sur la tête,
Au lieu d’azur, au lieu d’astres, au lieu de ciel,
On ne sait quoi de bas, d’infâme et de cruel;
On entendait la mort marcher sur cette voûte;
Ce règne eut pour plafond l’échafaud qui s’égoutte;
Donc ce roi, c’est le Juste.

Et celui qui le suit,
C’est le Grand. Ce héros, ce roi dont le front luit,
Fut magnifique; il fut le maître incomparable;
Fier, il avait sous lui la foule misérable,
Les disettes, les deuils, les détresses, les pleurs,
Un chaos de grabats, de fièvres, de douleurs;
Il fit, magicien, sortir de ces broussailles
Cette fleur gigantesque et splendide, Versailles.
Il fut le roi choisi, de puissance inondé;
Il eut Colbert, il eut Molière, il eut Condé;
Il fut lumière ainsi que Bel à Babylone;
Son trône fut si haut qu’il devint le seul trône,
Et tous les rois étaient de l’ombre devant lui;
La terre avait pour but d’occuper son ennui;
Et la toute-puissance et l’empire et la gloire
Et l’amour et l’orgueil faisaient dans la nuit noire
Au-dessus de sa tête un abîme étoilé;
Gloire à lui! Sous ses pieds, tandis que, Dieu voilé
Par toutes les splendeurs sur son front réunies,
Homme soleil ayant pour rayons des génies,
Vêtu d’or, triomphant, heureux, vertigineux,
Ne faisant point un pas qui ne fût lumineux,
Flamme, astre, il empourprait son olympe superbe,
Le peuple, n’ayant pas de pain, mangeait de l’herbe,
La nudité hurlait et se tordait les mains,

Les affamés gisants râlaient sur les chemins,
La France esclave avait un haillon pour livrée;
Un hiver, on en vint à ceci que, navrée,
N'ayant plus une ronce à manger, ne sachant
Que faire, ayant brouté tous les chardons du champ,
La misère attaqua les mornes catacombes;
Le soir on enjambait le mur triste des tombes;
Des cimetières noirs l'homme chassait les loups;
De la bière pourrie on écartait les clous,
Et le peuple fouillait de ses ongles les fosses;
Les femmes blasphémaient et pleuraient d'être grosses,
Et les petits enfants rongeaient les os des morts;
Les mères des cercueils tâchaient d'ouvrir les bords,
Cherchant ce qu'on pourrait manger dans ces décombres,
Creusant, mordant; si bien que les trépassés sombres,
Se dressant à travers les tombeaux écroulés,
Disaient à ces vivants : qu'est-ce que vous voulez?
Mais qu'importe! Il fut grand; il mit le monde en flamme;
Il fut le nom vainqueur que la foudre proclame;
Et les drapeaux au vent, les tambours, les canons,
Les batailles nouant leurs orageux chaînons,
Les plaines par la mort des villes élargies,
Le réseau flamboyant des vastes stratégies,
Turenne, Luxembourg, Schomberg, Lorge, Brissac,
Et Namur massacrée et Courtray mise à sac,
L'incendie à Bruxelle et le pillage à Furnes,
Les fleuves rougissant de sang leurs sombres urnes,
Gand, Maëstricht, Besançon, Heidelberg, Montmédy,
La boucherie au nord, la tuerie au midi,
L'Europe ravagée, écrasée, étouffée,
Lui firent dans son Louvre un colossal trophée
De ruine, de nuit, de cendre et de tombeaux.

Mais c'est peu, les cités ainsi que des flambeaux
Brûlant et répandant leur lueur sur la terre;
C'est peu l'éclat guerrier, la gloire militaire,
Cette goutte de sang qui s'élargit toujours;

C’est peu le choc des camps, l’écroulement des tours;
La guerre, cheval fauve, au-dessus des frontières,
Jetant aux fronts des rois ses ruades altières,
C’est peu; c’est peu l’épique et vaste assassinat
De l’Artois, de la Flandre et du Palatinat;
Remplacer les moissons par des flots de fumées,
Coucher sur les sillons des cadavres d’armées,
Briser les escadrons contre les escadrons,
Ce n’est rien; ce n’est rien la clameur des clairons,
L’obus crevant les murs, les places bombardées,
Gengiskhan et Timour passés de cent coudées;
Il fit plus, il se fit le grand bourreau de Dieu;
Pieux, il ramena, par le fer et le feu,
Son peuple à la candeur de la foi catholique,
Et Rome admire encor, dans sa joie angélique,
Ce qu’il a fait blanchir, en ces temps immortels,
D’âmes, de cœurs, d’esprits, au pied des vrais autels,
Et de crânes au pied de la potence horrible.
Oh! Comme l’évangile extermine la bible!
Comme c’est beau, le roi plein d’un Dieu furieux!
Splendides flamboiements du saint glaive des cieux!
De quoi les rois chrétiens ne sont-ils pas capables
Lorsqu’il faut venger Dieu de ces maudits, coupables
Du crime de vouloir prier à leur façon!
Ô spectacle admirable! Exil, bagne, prison,
Des pasteurs, des docteurs, des hommes consulaires
Courbés sous le bâton dans le banc des galères,
Cinq cent mille bannis, cent mille massacrés,
Dix mille brûlés vifs, rompus vifs, torturés,
Patients en chemise au seuil des basiliques,
Tourbillon des bûchers sur les places publiques,
Âcre fumée ayant des râles dans ses plis,
Surprises, guets-apens, gens tués dans leurs lits,
Juges fatals passant ainsi que des tonnerres,
Pinces tordant des seins de femme, octogénaires
Dont la barre de fer fait crier les vieux os,
Tous les dogues du meurtre ouvrant leurs noirs naseaux,

Rivières rejetant les noyés sur leurs plages,
Cavalerie affreuse écrasant les villages,
Feu, ravage, viol, le carnage, le sang,
La fange, et Bossuet, sinistre, applaudissant!
Ô roi pieux béni de l’église qu’il sauve!
Tout un peuple traqué comme une bête fauve!
Oui, ce fut comme un vol de sanglants éperviers;
Montrevel sur Tournon, Lamoignon sur Viviers;
Oui, ce fut monstrueux, oui, ce fut lamentable;
On tuait dans la rue, on tuait dans l’étable;
On jetait dans le puits l’enfant criant Jésus,
La mère, et l’on mettait une pierre dessus;
On sabrait du pasteur la vieille tête chauve;
Les crosses des mousquets écrasaient dans l’alcôve
La nourrice au berceau, l’aïeule à son rouet;
Siècle affreux! Les dragons chassaient à coups de fouet
Devant eux des troupeaux de femmes toutes nues;
La débauche inventait des rages inconnues;
L’orgie imaginait des supplices; le vin
Inspirait Sabaoth dans son courroux divin;
Cent monstres bondissaient de contrée en contrée;
La cartouche éclatait dans la vierge éventrée;
L’orthodoxie était comme un tigre qui rit,
Tartuffe encourageait de Sade au nom du Christ!
Fanatisme hideux, implacables doctrines,
Faisant de tout un peuple un monceau de ruines,
Affreux, le sabre aux dents, le crucifix au poing!
Tu ne crois pas en Dieu, Louvois! Tu n’y crois point, Letellier! Ah! Vieillards, mères, enfants, victimes!
Ce sont les ennemis de Dieu qui font ces crimes;
Le servir de la sorte, avec du sang aux mains,
C’est vouloir l’étouffer dans le cœur des humains;
Ces religions-là, ce sont les pelletées
De terre que sur Dieu jettent les noirs athées!

Et c’est pourquoi ce roi rayonne; il est flagrant
Que l’autre étant le juste, il faut qu’il soit le grand.

Ô grandeur, de charnier et de meurtre mêlée,
Qui de têtes de mort apparaît étoilée!
Lion superbe ayant le chat pour compagnon!
Conquérant coudoyé par les supplices! Nom
Où la veuve Scarron jette son ombre vile!
Sceptre qui s’est laissé manier par Bâville!
Glaive altier dont la fouine a léché le fourreau!
Lauriers où sont marqués les dix doigts du bourreau!
Roi qui tresse la claie et comble la voirie!
Ô couronne des lys qui, la nuit, se marie
Au bonnet de béguine où l’église souda
La calotte de fer du vieux Torquemada!

Ô peuple que son roi broie et détruit! Désastre
D’un monde sur qui tombe et s’écrase son astre!

Tout le soir de ce règne appartient aux hiboux;
Dans ce noir crépuscule ils sortent de leurs trous;
Les billots, les poteaux mêlent leurs vagues formes,
Et l’on voit se dresser, monstrueuses, énormes,
Une roue au couchant, une roue au levant,
Où pendent, disloqués, dans les souffles du vent,
Deux cadavres, sur qui tout le genre humain prie,
L’un est la conscience et l’autre est la patrie.

Ô grand Louis, héros, vainqueur, sacré, flatté,
Adoré, l’avenir, qui dit la vérité
Plus haut que les Fléchiers et que les Bourdaloues,
T’offre un char triomphal, mais avec ces deux roues. —

Il se fit un silence, et le masque un moment
Se tut, puis se remit à rire affreusement.
— Allez! Le fleuve gronde et le vent se courrouce.
Allez! Allez, les rois! Où vont-ils? Qui les pousse, N’ayant plus d’intérêt dans ce monde vivant?
Et qu’est-ce donc qu’ils ont à marcher en avant?
Allez! Allez! Où donc les mènes-tu, nuit blême?

Nuit! Ces trois rois en vont chercher un quatrième.

Ce quatrième-là, comment le raconter?

Venu pour tout corrompre et pour tout éhonter,
Il ne fut pas le roi du sang, mais de l’écume.
L’autre était le soleil, il vint, et fut la brume;
Il fut l’impur miasme, il fut l’extinction
De la dernière haleine et du dernier rayon;
Il répandit sur l’âme humaine exténuée
Tout ce que le bourbier peut jeter de nuée.
Il s’appela Rosbach, il s’appela Terray;
Adieu le pur, le grand, le saint, le beau, le vrai!
Corruption, débauche, impudeur, arbitraire,
Un sinistre appétit de faire le contraire
De ce que veut l’honneur, un satyre à l’affût,
Boue et néant, voilà ce que cet homme fut.
D’autres rois ont été flairés par les orfraies;
Ils ont été les pleurs, les tortures, les plaies,
Les terreurs, les fléaux; celui-ci fut l’affront,
On vit sous lui le front de la France, ce front
Où la lueur de Dieu s’épanouit et monte,
Apprendre la courbure horrible de la honte;
Ô deuil! Le drapeau franc et la peur mariés,
Deux vils sauve-qui-peut en même temps criés
Ici par la faillite, et là, par la déroute;
La vieille honnêteté publique croulant toute;
L’honneur mort; dans un siècle un seul jour : Fontenoy;
Ce règne est une cave, et sous ce lâche roi
Tout s’éclipse, grandeur, victoire, exploits célèbres;
Et, de mille fils noirs traversant les ténèbres,
Tout au fond, arrêtant dans leur vol vers l’azur
La grâce, la beauté, la jeunesse au front pur,
Son lit sombre rayonne en toile d’araignée.
Et cependant la terre est d’aurore baignée,
Un jour se lève, on sent un souffle frissonner;
La France est une forge où l’on entend sonner

Le marteau du progrès et l’enclume du monde;
Tout monte à l’idéal, lui, plonge dans l’immonde;
La France marche au jour, lui dans l’ombre s’enfuit;
Auprès de la lumière il élève la nuit;
En regard de Paris, ce roi bâtit Sodome.

Or on allait cherchant un surnom à cet homme.

Voyez : instincts rampants, amours empoisonneurs,
Toutes les lâchetés et tous les déshonneurs,
Ignorance du bien et du mal, turpitude,
Bon visage aux méchants, orgie, ingratitude,
Soupir de délivrance à la mort de son fils;
Organisant la faim, faisant d’affreux profits
Sur les peuples hagards que la misère mine,
S’engraissant de leur diète et mangeant leur famine,
Roi vampire; riant des sanglots, sourd aux cris;
Rampant, faisant régner l’Angleterre à Paris;
Laissant rouer Calas, laissant brûler Labarre;
Dur par indifférence et mollesse, barbare
Pour ne pas se donner la peine d’être bon;
Fumier fleurdelysé, Vitellius Bourbon;
Ayant sous ses plaisirs des prisons sépulcrales,
Des pleurs dans la Bastille exécrée, et des râles
Dans les cages de fer du vieux mont Saint-Michel;
Petit-fils de cent rois, mais pas le plus cruel,
Pas le plus oppresseur du peuple et de l’empire,
Pas le plus furieux ni le plus fou; — Le pire;
Le plus vil; exilant quiconque ose penser;
Débile, et par accès tâchant de redresser
Quelque horrible pilier de l’antique édifice;
Au fond du parc-aux-cerfs rêvant le saint-office;
Ayant le mal pour but, la fange pour chemin;
Ténébreux, soupçonné de bains de sang humain;
Foulant aux pieds le droit et la vertu, chimères;
Infâme; soulevant des émeutes de mères;
Froid regard, pied sali, front hautain, cœur fermé;

Comment nommer ce roi, sinon le Bien-Aimé?

On le méprise tant, ce malheureux, qu’on pleure.
Monstre! Il suffit qu’un fou d’une épingle l’effleure
Pour que ce Prusias devienne un Busiris,
Pour qu’on voie, au milieu de l’horreur et des cris,
Cent tourments, plus d’enfer que n’en a rêvé Dante,
Le feu, l’arrachement des membres, l’huile ardente,
Le plomb fondu qui fait d’un coupable un martyr,
Toute une éruption de supplices sortir
De son égratignure élargie en cratère.

Ô misérable! Il est le dégoût de la terre;
Il est l’éclat de rire insolent de vingt rois;
Et l’histoire lui tend l’opprobre et lui dit : bois!
Est-ce donc une loi, nuit, cieux incorruptibles,
Dieu bon, que les abjects succèdent aux terribles,
Qu’on n’échappe au torrent que pour choir au ruisseau,
Et que le sanglier soit suivi du pourceau!

La mort enfin souffla sur cette tête infâme;
Il rendit à la nuit ce qu’on nommait son âme;
Et comme on le portait, au glas sourd des beffrois,
À Saint-Denis où dort le noir monceau des rois,
Le lâche près du fort, l’impur près du féroce,
On vit, tandis qu’autour du funèbre carrosse
Les prêtres répandaient leur encens, vain brouillard,
Ruisseler de dessous le royal corbillard
On ne sait quelle pluie éclaboussant la roue
Qui suintait du char sombre et qui tachait la boue;
C’était ce roi, ce maître et cet homme d’orgueil
Qui tombait goutte à goutte à travers son cercueil.
Despotes, vous vivez, vous dévorez le monde,
Vous avez Pompadour, Diane ou Rosemonde,
Vous riez, vous régnez; les fronts se courbent tous;
La honte des pays frémit derrière vous;
Vous faites une tache immonde sur l’histoire;

Vous mourez : ô la chère et l'illustre mémoire!
Et l'oraison funèbre appelée au palais,
Pleurante, met sa mitre et ses bas violets,
Et, vous mêlant à Dieu, célèbre vos obsèques,
Vos gloires ne font pas reculer les évêques,
Mais vos cadavres font reculer l'embaumeur. —

Les masques bruissaient comme une onde en rumeur;
On eût cru, dans un fond insondable et sublime,
Entendre chuchoter les vagues d'un abîme;
Et l'un d'eux qui suivait les rois d'un œil ardent S'écria :

— Nord et sud! Orient! Occident!
Où le soleil se lève, où le soleil se couche,
Partout! Ils sont partout!… Oh! Le grand vent farouche,
Le vent d'en haut, quand donc se déchaînera-t-il?
Le vent de deuil, le vent d'horreur, le vent d'exil
Qui roulera les rois dans ses larges bouffées,
Fera rugir d'effroi le lion des trophées,
Trembler le piédestal sous son orageux flot,
Et prendre à la statue équestre le galop?
Ô colosses de bronze et de pierre, monarques
Dont le globe meurtri porte partout les marques,
Tyrans, soyez maudits! Puisse, à travers les cieux,
La nuit vous emporter d'un souffle furieux,
Et, le fouet de l'éclair aux mains, pâle et vivante,
Vous poursuivre, mêlant dans l'immense épouvante
Et le cheval de marbre et le cheval d'airain,
Et, rois! Faire à jamais, dans la terreur sans frein,
Au fond du gouffre, plein d'éternelles huées,
Sous votre fuite sombre écrouler les nuées! —

Et ce masque pleurait et jetait des cris sourds.
Derrière les trois rois qui s'avançaient toujours,
Implacable, il semblait la pâle conscience.

Le rieur effrayant lui cria : Patience!

Et les trois rois marchaient sur le quai ténébreux,
Sans entendre ces cris de l’ombre derrière eux.

L’Arrivée

Oh! Les mornes chevaux, comme ils allaient, farouches!
Nul souffle ne sortait de leurs fatales bouches,
Nul regard n’étoilait la noirceur de leurs yeux.
À mesure que, froids, sourds et silencieux,
Ils entraient plus avant dans la grande nuit triste,
L’infini, qui, muet, aux prodiges assiste,
Épaississait la brume au fond de l’horizon;
Et les arbres, troublés d’un sépulcral frisson,
Tordaient leurs bras souffrants et leurs branches meurtries,
Tandis que cheminaient le long des tuileries,
Toujours du même pas vertigineux et lent,
Les deux cavaliers noirs et le cavalier blanc.

Devant eux, comme un cap où les flots se déchirent,
L’angle de la terrasse apparut; ils franchirent
Ce pas sombre, et le bruit cessa sur les pavés,
Et l’ombre fit silence; ils étaient arrivés.

L’eau du fleuve fuyait, d’obscurité couverte.

Ô terreur! Au milieu de la place déserte,
Au lieu de la statue, au point même où leurs yeux
Cherchaient le Bien-Aimé triomphal et joyeux,
Apparaissaient, hideux et debout dans le vide,
Deux poteaux noirs portant un triangle livide;
Le triangle pendait, nu, dans la profondeur;
Plus bas on distinguait une vague rondeur,
Espèce de lucarne ouverte sur de l’ombre;
Deux nuages traçaient au fond des cieux ce nombre :
— Quatrevingt-treize-chiffre on ne sait d’où venu.

C’était on ne sait quel échafaud inconnu.

Lugubre, il se dressait; derrière sa charpente

De quelque étrange abîme on devinait la pente;
Les arbres regardaient l’horrible vision;
L’ouragan retenait sa respiration
Devant la silhouette informe et ténébreuse;
Et tout semblait hagard; tant la machine affreuse,
Rouge comme un carnage et noire comme un deuil,
Debout entre l’énigme et l’homme, sur un seuil
Qui peut-être est le ciel, peut-être la géhenne,
Contenait de néant, d’épouvante et de haine!
Sous le blême triangle une échelle tremblait.
L’échafaud, immobile et monstrueux, semblait
Communiquer avec la tombe universelle.
Une pourpre, semblable à celle qui ruisselle
Et qui fume le long du mur des abattoirs,
Filtrait de telle sorte entre les pavés noirs
Qu’elle écrivait ce mot mystérieux : Justice.
On devinait que l’âpre et farouche bâtisse,
Calme, définitive, inexprimable à voir,
Avait été construite avec du désespoir,
Et sortait des douleurs, des pleurs et des décombres;
Et que les deux poteaux, dans les carrefours sombres
Où l’homme marche triste, aveuglément conduit,
Avaient jadis marqué les routes de la nuit;
On pouvait, dans la brume où l’infini commence,
Lire sur l’un : Pouvoir, et sur l’autre : Démence;
Le cercle, qui s’ouvrait sous le lourd coutelas,
Rappelait le carcan et le couronne, hélas!
On sentait, à travers la vague horreur des rêves,
Que ce triangle était forgé de tous les glaives,
Du fer d’Achab ainsi que du fer d’Attila;
Toute l’immensité de la mort était là,
Montant dans la nuée et jusqu’aux cieux terribles.

À peine palpitaient les choses invisibles;
Pas un cri, pas un bruit, pas un souffle. Parfois,
Et ceci redoublait la terreur des trois rois,
Entre les deux sanglants et tragiques pilastres,

La brume s’écartait et l’on voyait les astres.

Car, ô nuit! On sentait que Dieu, le grand voilé,
À cette chose étrange et triste était mêlé;
L’éternité pesait dans ce lieu tout entière;
Cette place fatale en semblait la frontière.

Les rois lisaient le mot écrit sur le pavé.

L’œil qui dans ce moment suprême eût observé
Ces figures, de glace et de calme vêtues,
Eût vu distinctement pâlir les trois statues.

Ils se taisaient; et tout se taisait autour d’eux;
Si la mort eût tourné son sablier hideux,
On en eût entendu glisser le grain de sable.

Une tête passa dans l’ombre formidable.
Cette tête était blême; il en tombait du sang.
Et les trois cavaliers frémirent; et, froissant
Vaguement le pommeau de sa lugubre épée,
L’aïeul de bronze dit à la tête coupée (Dialogue funèbre et du gouffre écouté) :
— Oh! L’expiation, dans ce lieu redouté,
Règne sans doute avec quelque ange pour ministre?
Quel est ton crime? Ô toi qui vas, tête sinistre,
Plus pâle que le Christ sur son noir crucifix?

— Je suis le petit-fils de votre petit-fils.

— Et d’où viens-tu?

— Du trône. Ô rois, l’ombre est terrible!

— Spectre, quelle est là-bas cette machine horrible?

— C’est la fin, dit la tête au regard sombre et doux.

— Et qui donc l’a construite?

— Ô mes pères, c’est vous.
25 décembre 1857. Christmas.

SOIT. MAIS QUOI QUE CE SOIT QUI RESSEMBLE A LA HAINE

Soit. Mais quoi que ce soit qui ressemble à la haine
N’est pas le dénouement, et l’aurore est certaine;
C’est au bonheur que doit, quoi qu’on fasse, aboutir
L’effort humain, ce sombre et souriant martyr;
La vie aux yeux sereins sort toujours de la tombe;
Tout déluge a pour fin le vol d’une colombe;
Jamais l’espoir sacré n’a dit : je me trompais.
Oh! Ne vous lassez point, penseurs; versez la paix,
Versez la foi, versez l’idée et la prière,
Et sur ces flots de nuit des torrents de lumière!
Gloire à Dieu! Nul progrès ne se fait à demi.
Le malheur du méchant, le deuil de l’ennemi,
Non, ce n’est pas le but, sous ce ciel qui déborde
De bonté, de pardon, d’extase et de concorde.
Vivants, toutes les fois que ce globe de fer
Ébauche un peu d’éden, ruine un peu d’enfer,
Et qu’un écueil s’écroule, et qu’un phare flamboie,
Et que les nations font des pas vers la joie
En luttant, en cherchant, en priant, en aimant,
Le ciel rayonne et semble un grand consentement.

Les mains se chercheront de loin; tous les contraires,
Désarmés, attendris, calmés, deviendront frères;
Nous verrons se confondre en douces unions
Ce que nous acceptons et ce que nous nions;
Les parfums sortiront à travers les écorces;
L’idée éclairera l’aveuglement des forces;
L’antique antagonisme entre l’âme et le corps
Sera comme une lyre aux célestes accords;
Le souffle baisera l’argile, et la matière
Plongera dans l’esprit sa farouche frontière;
La charrue aidera l’hymne, et les travailleurs

Auront aux mains la gerbe et sur le front des fleurs;
Car pour le verbe saint nulle voix n’est muette!
La pioche du mineur, la strophe du poète,
Creusent la même énigme et cherchent le même or.
Qu’importent les chemins où l’homme marche encor
Tantôt mouillé de pluie et tantôt blanc de poudre!

C’est en fraternité que tout doit se dissoudre;
Et Dieu fera servir le calcul, la raison,
L’étude et la science, à cette guérison.
Peuples, Demain n’est pas un monstre qui nous guette;
Ni la flèche qu’Hier en s’enfuyant nous jette.
Ô peuples! L’avenir est déjà parmi nous.
Il veut le droit de tous comme le pain pour tous;
Calme, invincible, au champ de bataille suprême,
Il lutte; à voir comment il frappe, on sent qu’il aime;
Regardez-le passer, ce grand soldat masqué!
Il se dévoilera, peuples, au jour marqué;
En attendant il fait son œuvre; la pensée
Sort, lumière, à travers sa visière baissée;
Il lutte pour la femme, il lutte pour l’enfant,
Pour le peuple qu’il sert, pour l’âme qu’il défend,
Pour l’idéal splendide et libre; et la mêlée,
Sombre, de ses deux yeux de flamme est étoilée.

Son bouclier, où luit ce grand mot : Essayons!
Est fait d’une poignée énorme de rayons.
Il ébauche l’Europe, il achève la France;
Il chasse devant lui, terrible, l’ignorance,
Les superstitions où les cœurs sont plongés,
Et tout le tourbillon des pâles préjugés.
Oh! Ne le craignez pas, peuples! Son nom immense,
C’est aujourd’hui Combat et c’est demain Clémence.

À qui te cherche, ô Vrai, jamais tu n’échappas.
Une étape après l’autre. Après un pas, un pas.
Dans sa course qui met en feu son auréole,

Le Progrès n’a pas peur d’entrer, lui qui s’envole,
Chez ce monstre divin, la Révolution.
Il lui prend un éclair et lui donne un rayon;
Car il le peut, ses yeux étant faits de lumière;
Puis il sort de la haute et grondante tanière;
Et son attention est toute désormais
Sur ce grand but, plus pur que les plus blancs sommets,
Plus lointain que la nue à l’horizon perdue :
La Paix, clarté visible à travers l’étendue,
L’Harmonie, attirant vers elle l’élément,
L’Amour, prodigieux et chaud rayonnement.

L’aigle de la montagne est rentré dans son aire;
Il a fait en passant sa visite au tonnerre;
Maintenant, l’œil fixé sur l’abîme vermeil,
Calme, il rêve au moyen d’atteindre le soleil.
20 avril 1870.

LA LÉGENDE DES SIÈCLES: DERNIERE SERIE

TABLE DES MATIERES

DERNIÈRE SÉRIE

I

LES GRANDES LOIS
IRE, NON AMBIRE

II

VOIX BASSES

DANS LES TÉNÈBRES
VOIX BASSES DANS LES TÉNÈBRES

III

IV

MANSUÉTUDE

DES ANCIENS JUGES
MANSUÉTUDE DES ANCIENS JUGES

V

L’ÉCHAFAUD
L’ÉCHAFAUD

VI

INFERI

VII

LES QUATRE JOURS D'ELCIIS
LE PREMIER JOUR
GENS DE GUERRE ET GENS D'ÉGLISE
LE DEUXIÈME JOUR
ROIS ET PEUPLES
LE TROISIÈME JOUR
LES CATASTROPHES
LE QUATRIÈME JOUR
DIEU

VIII

LES PAYSANS

AU BORD DE LA MER

IX

LES ESPRITS]
LE LAPIDÉ

X

LE BEY OUTRAGÉ

XI

LA CHANSON

DES DOREURS DE PROUES

XII

TÉNÈBRES

XIII

L'AMOUR

L'AMOUR
EN GRÈCE!

XIV

RUPTURE

AVEC CE QUI AMOINDRIT

RUPTURE AVEC CE QUI AMOINDRIT

XV

LES PAROLES

DE MON ONCLE

LES
PAROLES DE MON ONCLE
LA SŒUR DE CHARITÉ

XVI

VICTORIEUX OU MORT

VICTORIEUX OU MORT

XVII

LE CERCLE DES TYRANS

LIBERTÉ!
LES MANGEURS
UN VOLEUR À UN ROI
UN VOLEUR À UN ROI
AUX ROIS
AUX ROIS

XVIII

PAROLES DE GÉANT

XIX

XX

LA VISION DE DANTE

XXI

XXII

OCÉAN

XXIII

DERNIÈRE SÉRIE

JE NE ME SENTAIS PLUS VIVANT...

*

Je ne me sentais plus vivant; je me retrouve,
Je marche, je revois le but sacré. J’éprouve
Le vertige divin, joyeux, épouvanté,
Des doutes convergeant tous vers la vérité;
Pourtant je hais le dogme, un dogme c’est un cloître.
Je sens le sombre amour des précipices croître
Dans mon sauvage cœur, saignant, blessé, banni,
Calme, et de plus en plus épars dans l’infini.
Si j’abaisse les yeux, si je regarde l’ombre,
Je sens en moi, devant les supplices sans nombre,
Les bourreaux, les tyrans, grandir à chaque pas
Une indignation qui ne m’endurcit pas,
Car s’indigner de tout, c’est tout aimer en somme,
Et tout le genre humain est l’abîme de l’homme.

Le philosophe plane et rêve sur ces flots
De douleurs, de tourments, d’angoisses, de sanglots,
Où partout quelque esquif lutte, chavire et sombre;
Ainsi qu’une hirondelle au-dessus d’une eau sombre,
Dans ce monde qui semble au hasard châtié,
L’âme tournoie autour d’un gouffre, la pitié.
Que croire? — Oh! la pitié me prend, m’emplit, m’enivre,
Me donne le dégoût formidable de vivre,
Me porte à des excès étranges, secourir
Au hasard, à tâtons, ceux que je vois souffrir,
Être indulgent, pensif, tendre, clément, stupide;
Si bien que par moments la foule me lapide.

C’est bien fait, certe. — Amis, je rentre en tout cela,
J’étais absent, j’arrive, et je dis : me voilà!

Prendre garde à ce peuple obscur sur qui l’on marche,
Aimer mieux me jeter aux flots qu’entrer dans l’arche,
N’avoir jamais le mal des autres pour souhait,
Plaindre la haine, même en celui qui me hait,
Je reviens à mon œuvre. Et j’offre à cette bouche
Qui s’ouvre obscurément dans toute âme farouche,
Aux noirs désespérés errant sans feu ni lieu,
Un peu de vie à boire, et ce verre d’eau, Dieu.

I

LES GRANDES LOIS

I

Écoute; — nous vivrons, nous saignerons, nous sommes
Faits pour souffrir parmi les femmes et les hommes,
Et nous apercevrons devant nos yeux, vois-tu,
Comme des monts, travail, honneur, devoir, vertu,
Et nous gravirons l’une après l’autre ces cimes;
Quand nous serons en bas, loin des sommets sublimes,
Nous dresserons nos fronts; mais, en haut, nos genoux
Ploieront; les passions viendront rugir en nous,
Et nous leur servirons d’antres et de repaires;
Nous pleurerons nos fils, nous pleurerons nos pères,
Nous verrons le cercueil germer dans le berceau;
Dans nos soifs, nous boirons à Dieu, comme au ruisseau,

Nous deviendrons, après nos deuils et nos attentes,
Des âmes sur le bord du tombeau palpitantes,
Car, pour l’homme ici-bas marqué d’un divin sceau,
Vivre, pleurer, souffrir, c’est devenir oiseau,
Et toutes les douleurs sont les plumes de l’aile,
Nous suivrons la puissance, au néant parallèle,
Ou, plus sages, l’amour qui fuit au fond des bois,
Nous aurons nos espoirs, nos terreurs, nos abois;
Nous nous emplirons d’ombre ou d’azur la prunelle...

Et nous nous en irons vers l’étoile éternelle!

II

IRE, NON AMBIRE

Sachons mener à bout, sans égoïsme vain,
Notre travail humain sous le travail divin;
Si l’orgueil vient, broyons du pied cette couleuvre,
L’homme est l’outil, Dieu seul est l’ouvrier de l’œuvre,

Donc servons pour servir, avec simplicité.
Sans avoir pris de grade à l’université
Et sans être nommé recteur par le ministre,
Le blond soleil dissout l’ignorance sinistre.
Éclairons comme lui, non pour nous, mais pour tous,
Et faisons gravement ce que Dieu fait pour nous.
Je crois; cela vaut-il qu’on m’adore? Je pense;
Cela mérite-t-il aucune récompense?
Je vois; mais c’est déjà posséder tout que voir!
Hommes, jusqu’au martyre acceptons le devoir;
Souffrons, aimons; soyons l’apôtre, soyons l’ange,

Et ne demandons rien, pas même une louange.
La nature adoucit l’homme par ses rayons,
Elle brille dans l’aigle et dans les alcyons,
Dans l’onde où boit l’oiseau, dans l’herbe où l’agneau bêle,
Et ne tend pas la main quand on dit : qu’elle est belle!
Mai, sans être payé, combat l’hiver qui fuit;
Le lys n’a pas besoin qu’on le décore, il luit;
La lavande embaumée où l’abeille se pose
Ne lui vend pas le miel; quand il produit la rose,
Le rosier fait gratis cette action d’éclat,
L’astre a-t-il attendu jamais qu’on l’appelât
Et que quelque Lindor chantât une romance,
Pour venir de sa flamme éblouir l’ombre immense?

III

*

Par-dessus le marché je dois être ravi.
Quoi! des vivisecteurs, à la fois, à l’envi,
Des chimistes, anglais, allemands, tous ensemble,
Loupe et scalpel en main, m’affirment qu’il leur semble

Certain, démontré presque et probable à peu près
Qu’entre l’homme d’Athène et le loup des forêts,
Qu’entre un essaim d’égout et le peuple de France,

Le total fait, il n’est aucune différence;
Qu’on trouve, en les traitant par les mêmes réchauds,
La même quantité de phosphate de chaux
Dans le plus affreux chien que dans le plus grand homme;
Que par conséquent Sparte est égale à Sodome;
Que mon droit pèse autant qu’un souffle aérien,
Et que, fussé-je Eschyle ou Christ, je ne suis rien,
Rien, l’éclair, la vapeur de la locomotive.
Je dois être enchanté de cette perspective;
Sinon, je suis vraiment bien difficile.
Ah çà!
Consultez Don Quichotte ou bien Sancho Pança,
Depuis quand un marcheur, qui pour sa longue route
N’a rien, est-il tenu d’aimer la banqueroute?
Depuis quand, grand, petit, satrape ou chevrier,
L’homme qui cherche femme et veut se marier,
L’espérant belle, est-il heureux de l’avoir laide?
Exigerez-vous donc que les juifs de Tolède
Soient contents d’être cuits tout vivants dans des fours,
Et qu’on me voie errer parmi les carrefours,
Triomphant, plein de joie et d’extase électrique,
Parce que vous m’aurez promis des coups de trique?
Examinons.

*

Sortir de l’immortalité;
Être un orang-outang qui, par ancienneté
Ou par faveur, obtient le grade de jocrisse;
Avoir l’énorme nuit des bêtes pour nourrice,
Être de l’ombre après avoir été du bruit;
Suivre d’Argens, qui suit la Beaumelle, qui suit
Locke, qui suit Pyrrhon, qui suivait Épicure;
Me remettre à tourner dans cette roue obscure;
Recommencer la vieille aventure d’Isis;
Épousseter ce tas de systèmes moisis
Qui tuaient le scrupule et mettaient au service

De Borgia le crime et de Néron le vice;
Nier la dignité des hommes au profit
Des despotes à qui le vil troupeau suffit;
Ne point savoir si rien de ce qu'on pense existe,
Et pourtant affirmer la négation triste;

Croire qu'aucun soleil n'a jamais vraiment lui;
Entre deux doutes prendre avec amour celui
Qui m'abaisse et m'emplit de cendre et non de flamme,
Et vouloir être brute ayant le choix d'être âme!

Avoir dans l'infini besoin d'être zéro!

Eh bien non.
*

Non!
Je puis tirer un numéro,
Dites-vous, dans ce sac, la nature profonde,
Dans cette loterie insondable, le monde,
Où rien n'a commencé puisque rien ne finit,
Où tout est vie et gouffre, où l'étoile au zénith
Luit comme une paillette aux plis d'une basquine;
Eh bien, je ne suis point charmé d'avoir ce quine :

Gorille. Et j'aime mieux rester tout bêtement
L'homme, et sentir en moi vivre le firmament.
Quand vous venez me dire : — Un creuset, c'est tout l'homme;
Le destin est un feu, la fumée est la somme;
Tout aboutit au même abîme universel;
La vertu, c'est du sucre, et le crime est du sel;
Au fond, nulle action n'est mauvaise ni bonne,
Le droit, c'est un journal et l'on s'y désabonne;
Aujourd'hui pour, demain contre, pas de mépris
Aux méchants, pas de culte aux bons! — je suis surpris, J'entends des cris en moi. Quoi! c'est votre programme!
L'homme est dans un flot sombre une inutile rame!

Quoi? ni devoir ni droit! rien n’est vrai, rien n’est faux!
Quoi! saluer Bismark sous les arcs triomphaux!
Avoir été la France et devenir province!
Quand Poërio meurt dans le bagne du prince,
Trouver sage le prince et fou Poërio!
Vrai, je suis peu tenté par ce scenario.
*

À vous en croire, l’homme au fond est sur la terre

Juste autant que le bœuf, l’onagre et la panthère;
Dans le premier venu des tigres l’homme est né;
L’homme est un léopard, mais perfectionné;
L’homme est parmi les ours la brute aristocrate!
*

Certe, Aristote est grand, mais j’aime mieux Socrate.
Ah! la science est belle et sublime, et je hais
Quiconque met obstacle à ses profonds souhaits;
Elle prend dans le piége auguste de ses règles
Les vérités au vol comme on prendrait des aigles,
Elle sonde le fait, le chiffre, l’élément;
Elle est vaste à ce point qu’il semble par moment
Que son puissant compas fait le tour de l’espace.
Mais pourtant quelque chose en l’homme la dépasse,
C’est la vertu. Quelqu’un est plus grand qu’elle, et va
Où jamais le calcul le plus haut n’arriva,
Quelqu’un sait mieux trouver l’or que roule le fleuve,
Quelqu’un voit mieux, quelqu’un prouve plus que la preuve,
C’est toi, Zénon, qui luis; c’est toi, Baudin, qui meurs!
Par la sérénité superbe de ses mœurs
Sparte fait plus qu’aucun docteur par sa doctrine.
Quoi! c’est zéro ce cœur qui bat dans ma poitrine!
Quoi! la chimie est tout! Quand j’ai mon résidu,
Un peu de cendre, un peu d’ombre, rien ne m’est dû!

La statique prouvant, non le droit, mais la force,

Le droit n’est pas! John Brown, Spartacus, Wilberforce, Demeurent interdits si Biot ne les secourt!
Quoi! devant Gay-Lussac Mazzini reste court!
Garibaldi ne sait que dire à Lamettrie!
Quoi! tout, hormis l’algèbre et la géométrie,
Tout, excepté Poinsot, tout, excepté Bezout,
Excepté deux et deux font quatre, se dissout!
Quoi! le martyre est vain! l’héroïsme est stupide!
Brutus, brute! On te jette au gouffre, on te lapide,
Pour avoir défendu, quoi? ton pays? niais!
Tibère est fort, donc juste; et tu calomniais
Tibère. Le scalpel fouille tout fibre à fibre

Sans rien voir qui ressemble à ceci, l’homme libre;
Donc l’homme libre, ami, n’est pas. L’homme est du vent!
*

Vous m’offrez de ramper ver de terre savant;
Eh bien, non. J’aime mieux l’ignorance étoilée
De Platon, de Pindare, âme et clarté d’Élée,
Et de ce Dante errant qui baisse factieux
Son œil farouche où tremble une lueur des cieux.
L’homme est par eux aussi lumineux qu’il puisse être.
J’ai lu monsieur Leuret, le sage de Bicêtre
Et je n’ignore pas qu’un poëte est un fou;
Je sais que Planche crie à Milton : casse-cou!

Qu’avoir fait l’Iliade est, auprès de Nonotte
Et du bon abbé Gaume, une mauvaise note,
Et qu’au nom du bon sens, du bon goût, et de l’art,
Shakspeare est dédaigné par monsieur Baculard;
Je sais cela, j’en suis tremblant, et pourtant j’ose
Trouver dans tout ce tas de songeurs quelque chose;
Je vois ce qu’ils ont vu, je crois ce qu’ils ont cru;
Le visage du vrai là-haut m’est apparu,
Splendide, et ma prunelle en demeure éblouie.

Ils ont affirmé l’âme; et tous mes sens, l’ouïe,
Les yeux, rendent chez moi témoignage pour eux.
Sans doute il est bien doux d’être fort malheureux
Et de traîner des fers pendant beaucoup d’années,
Et de se dire : Après les dures destinées,
Après avoir souffert, après avoir pleuré,
Après avoir été de griffes effleuré
Et souffleté par l’aile obscure de l’envie,
Après avoir été juste toute ma vie,
Après avoir au front porté comme un cimier
La probité, j’aurai l’honneur d’être fumier,
Et je serai l’égal dans le sépulcre infâme

De Nisard comme esprit et de Judas comme âme.
Là s’efface l’immense et vaine vision;
Et tous les hommes, ceux de Tyr, ceux de Sion,
Ceux de Gomorrhe, ceux de Paris, ceux de Rome
Marc-Aurèle, du sang des peuples économe,
Nemrod, tigre accablant la terre de ses bonds,
Ceux qu’on nomme méchants, ceux qu’on appelle bons,
Tous, l’homme de douceur, l’homme de violence,
Et le juge effrayant qui vendit la balance,
Quoi que chacun ait fait, mêlant les pas aux voix,
Tous dans la vaste nuit reçoivent à la fois
Cette absolution sinistre, la poussière.
La mort, spectre masqué, n’a rien sous sa visière.
Le gouffre, où le destin se résout et s’absout,
Arrive à l’innocence effroyable de tout;
Le bourreau vaut autant que le martyr; l’asile

S’ouvre à Sforce joyeux comme à Dante imbécile;
Avec Caligula Jésus est acquitté;
La justice pourrit avec l’iniquité;
Et Thersite, Caton, Davus gai, Bacchus sombre,
Font le même néant pêle-mêle dans l’ombre.
Matière, éclipse, songe, oubli. Tout est passé.

Eh bien, soyez surpris, oui, je suis insensé Jusqu’à ne point vouloir de cette offre. Elle est belle Certes. Oui, les vivants, vague troupeau qui bêle, Mordus toute la route et jusqu’à l’abattoir,
Saignent, et je suis un de ceux que le ciel noir
Frappe et n’empêche pas de lutter, nous subîmes
Toute la vaste pluie engouffrée aux abîmes,
Le sort nous meurtrit tous sans jamais dire assez,

Et je dois convenir que vous me proposez
Pour consolation et salaire une place
Dans le cloaque avec tous les rois, populace,
À côté du faussaire, et, près de l’assassin,
La pourriture avec Baroche pour voisin;
Eh bien non, j’aime mieux, après tant de désastres,
Être avec ce rêveur d’Homère dans les astres.
J’aime mieux croire au bien, au juste, but final,
Avec Tacite, avec Dante, avec Juvénal.
La certitude d’être un miasme me laisse
Vraiment froid, et je pousse à ce point la faiblesse
Que je n’ai nulle joie à penser que je vais
Être on ne sait plus quoi d’obscur qui sent mauvais!
Troppmann ne me fait point plaisir quand il m’avoue
Que je serai sa fange et qu’il sera ma boue;
Il faut me pardonner ma pauvreté d’esprit,
Mais je ne puis trouver Dupin égal au Christ,
Deutz égal à Bayard, et j’entends le tonnerre
Gronder si je mets Hoche auprès de Lacenaire.

Non, je ne jette point dans le même panier
Ferdinand sept geôlier et Riégo prisonnier.
Je voudrais démolir les deux tours d’injustice,
Celle où Latude expire, et l’aveugle bâtisse
Des rhéteurs confondant Caïn avec Abel,
Renverser la bastille et détruire Babel.
Quoi donc! boire, manger, jouir, voilons nos faces,
C’est tout? Alors, pourvu que tu te satisfasses

Et que je me contente, et que, rois, histrions,
Scribes, juges, soldats, prêtres, nous digérions
Nos crimes devenus nos festins et nos joies,
Pourvu que, fiers et fous, vautours parmi les oies,
Nous ayions sous nos pieds les peuples, rions d'eux
Et de nous, cela seul est réel; et, hideux,
Nous sommes sages, tout étant vide; alors, hommes,
Quoi qu'il fasse, celui qui, dans l'ombre où nous sommes,
Veut jouir, qui trahit pour jouir, qui meurtrit
Sa patrie, et qui vend sa ville, a de l'esprit,
Et celui qui, romain, meurt dans l'exil pour Rome,
Et qui, français, défend la France, est un pauvre homme;
Telle est la vérité que vos calculs nous font.

Ah! si c'est là le but, ah! si c'est là le fond,
Si c'est la vérité seule vraie, affirmée

Par Walpole, et par toi, sénateur Mérimée,
Je la déclare fausse, ô sacrés firmaments!
Et je crache dessus, et je lui dis : Tu mens!
À cette vérité qui, vile, atroce, obscène,
Donne tort à Barbès et raison à Bazaine!

Non! non! non! je l'ai dit et le dirai cent fois,
Ce n'est point pour cela qu'on a brisé les rois
Et fait entrer le jour dans les profonds repaires!
Non! non! non! ce n'est point pour cela que nos pères
Ont fait cette conquête altière, l'avenir!
Qu'ils poussaient leurs chevaux et les faisaient hennir
De Memphis à Berlin, de l'Èbre à la Thuringe!
Non! j'ai les droits de l'homme et non les droits du singe.

Je comprends qu'on se penche avec fraternité
Vers les êtres qui sont hors de l'humanité,
Qu'on éclaire leur nuit; mais qu'on s'y précipite,
Non. Je veux, de ce gouffre où la bête palpite,

Faire monter, labeur superbe et hasardeux,
Les monstres jusqu’à nous, et non tomber près d’eux;
Je veux être pour eux non l’égal, mais l’archange,
Et leur donner mon âme et non prendre leur fange.

Êtes-vous la science après tout? question.
Non, vous ne l’êtes pas. Vous doutez. Montyon
Donne un prix de vertu, Troplong un prix de crime;
Garibaldi délivre et Bonaparte opprime;
Où vont-ils? au néant? à Dieu? Tout le destin,
Si l’on vous en croit, flotte et ment, rien n’est certain;
L’énigme n’offre au loin que des plages désertes;
Vous êtes les premiers à tout ignorer; certes,
Votre doute est complet et vous le confessez;
Vous ne voyez qu’un mur fermé de noirs fossés,
C’est vous qui l’avouez; et nul ne peut conclure
Du présent l’avenir, du front la chevelure;
Nul ne voit l’autre aspect du destin, le trépas;
Nul ne sait rien. Alors j’ai le choix, n’est-ce pas?
J’ai mon goût, vous le vôtre; après tant de souffrance,
Le désespoir vous plaît, moi je prends l’espérance;
Et puisque selon vous rien n’est clair, rien n’est sûr,
Vous choisissez la cendre et je choisis l’azur.

*

Je veux être ici-bas libre, ailleurs responsable,
Je suis plus qu’un brin d’herbe et plus qu’un grain de sable;
Je me sens à jamais pensif, ailé, vivant.
*

Ce n’est point vers la nuit que je crie en avant!
Mourir n’est pas finir, c’est le matin suprême.
Non! je ne donne pas à la mort ceux que j’aime!
Je les garde, je veux le firmament pour eux,
Pour moi, pour tous, et l’aube attend les ténébreux;
L’amour en nous, passants qu’un rayon lointain dore,

Est le commencement auguste de l’aurore;
Mon cœur, s’il n’a ce jour divin, se sent banni,
Et, pour avoir le temps d’aimer, veut l’infini;
Car la vie est passée avant qu’on ait pu vivre.
C’est l’azur qui me plaît, c’est l’azur qui m’enivre,
L’azur sans nuit, sans mort, sans noirceur, sans défaut;
C’est l’empyrée immense et profond qu’il me faut,
La terre n’offrant rien de ce que je réclame,
L’heure humaine étant courte et sombre, et, pour une âme
Qui vous aime, parents, enfants, toi ma beauté,
Le ciel ayant à peine assez d’éternité!

IV

Le géant Soleil parle à la naine Étincelle :

— Ô néant, feu follet, ver que l’ombre recèle,
Lueur qui disparaît sitôt qu’elle a flotté,
Contemple-moi, je suis l’abîme de clarté.
Vois, dans mon flamboiement les mondes vont et viennent;
Mes rayons sont les fils effrayants qui les tiennent;
Sans moi le firmament ne serait qu’un linceul;
Je ne suis pas bien sûr de ne pas être seul;
Toute l’immensité, depuis l’aube première,
Me regarde effarée, ivre de ma lumière.

Ainsi parla le gouffre éblouissant de feu.
L’atome écouta l’astre, et lui répondit : Dieu.

II

VOIX BASSES

DANS LES TÉNÈBRES

II

VOIX BASSES DANS LES TÉNÈBRES

— Ô conquérants, guerriers, héros, faiseurs de cendres,
Vous les Nemrods, chasseurs géants, les Alexandres,
Vous qu'on nomme Alaric, Cyrus, Gengis, Timour,
Vous que la mort berça, petits, avec amour,
Et qui, grands, et marchant dans les apothéoses,
Ainsi qu'avril fait naître autour de lui des roses,
Avez fait sous vos pas éclore des tombeaux;
Vous que l'homme, par vous dévoré, trouve beaux;
Nous qu'il trouve hideux et qui sommes vos frères,
Nous qui sommes les noirs bénisseurs funéraires,
Les prêtres, nous avons à vous dire ceci.

Écoutez.
Notre gîte auguste fut saisi,
Comme le vôtre, hélas, par la raison humaine;
Nous avions, comme vous, les peuples pour domaine,
Et nous rôdions sur eux, puissants, l'œil en arrêt,
Vainqueurs, toute la terre étant notre forêt;
Et nous disions à Dieu : C'est par nous que tu frappes!
Car vous êtes les rois, mais nous sommes les papes;
Vous êtes Attila, nous sommes Borgia.
Nous avons la madone et la panagia,
L'idole, comme, vous, vous avez la bataille;
Princes, nous n'avons pas tout à fait votre taille,
Nous sommes le danger qui se met à genoux,
Vous grondez plus que nous, nous rampons mieux que vous;
On sent notre velours, pire que votre griffe;
Nous sommes Anitus, Torquemada, Caïphe.
Une grande tiare est sur nos fronts étroits.
Urbain huit, Sixte quint, Paul trois, Innocent trois,

Gerbert, l’âme livrée aux sombres aventures,
Dicatus, inventant les quatorze tortures,
Judas buvant le sang que Jésus-Christ suait,
La ruse, Loyola, la haine, Bossuet,
L’autodafé, l’effroi, le cachot, la bastille,
C’est nous; et notre pourpre effrayante pétille
Par moments, et s’allume, et devient flamboiement.
Nous étions, comme vous, des dieux; mais brusquement
La révolution nous mit des muselières.
La France mania de ses mains familières
Nos gueules, et, mordue et souriant, nous prit,

Fière, et sans même avoir de plaie, étant l’esprit,
Elle nous a jetés dans une basse-fosse,
Moi prêtre, et toi tyran; elle a déclaré fausse
Ma caverne, la foi, la guerre, ton palais;
Elle a d’altiers dompteurs, Mirabeau, Rabelais,
Molière, Diderot, Rousseau, Danton, Voltaire.
Maintenant nous voilà, nous qui tenions la terre,
Tenus à notre tour par la France.
Eh bien non!
À travers les barreaux de notre cabanon,
Frères, nous vous crions une bonne nouvelle :
L’orbe du soleil noir revient, et se révèle
Par un blêmissement farouche et triomphant;
Le passé, pour la terre épouvantable enfant,
Pour nous espoir, râlant d’une voix vengeresse,
Renaît, et ce cadavre en son berceau se dresse.
Son berceau c’est la tombe et son aube est la nuit.
La fleur noire du sombre autel s’épanouit
Pleine d’ombre, et promet le fruit plein de poussière.
Rome fatale vient de lever sa visière,

Dit à l’homme : Tais-toi! dit à Dieu : Le jour ment!
Et reprend la parole et le rugissement.

Encore un peu de temps, ce qui n’est que l’écorce
Tombera; le droit mort laissera voir la force;
Partout le joug, partout Pierre, partout César,
Et l’église tout bas tutoiera le bazar;
Les trônes reprendront leurs vastes équilibres,
Et les peuples seront esclaves, et nous libres.
À faire le gibet nous emploierons la croix.
Tout redeviendra guerre et vous serez les rois.
Tout redeviendra dogme et nous serons les maîtres.
Vous tyrans, étant chefs, nous bourreaux, étant prêtres,
Nous aurons de nouveau le monde sous nos pieds.
Et la terre verra puissamment copiés
Par des spectres nouveaux tous les anciens fantômes;
Et nous arrondirons les ténèbres en dômes
Au-dessus du grand temple où nous mettrons l’Erreur
Ayant le pape à droite, à gauche l’empereur.

Dans notre obscurité toute la terre plonge
Par degrés. Et déjà, d’un ongle qui s’allonge,
Par l’âme de l’enfant nous tenons l’avenir.

Chez nous, exterminer fait semblant de bénir;
La goutte de sang pleut du goupillon terrible;
Votre hache, ô guerriers, ne vaut pas notre bible;
Notre foudre est énorme, et votre quantité
De tonnerre est vraiment peu de chose à côté.
La Saint-Barthélemy sonne une sombre cloche;
Et cette cloche sainte aujourd’hui se rapproche;
Et cette cloche jette une plus grande voix
Que toute la bataille éparse autour des rois;
Car c’est derrière nous que le vrai deuil se lève;
Nous sommes le linceul, vous n’êtes que le glaive;
Vous pouvez tout au plus sur les hommes marcher,
Nous, nous leur commençons l’enfer par le bûcher.

C’est égal, vous soldats, nous prêtres, tous ensemble
Nous vaincrons; nous allons tout ravoir. Déjà tremble

La grille qu’on a mise entre le peuple et nous.
Satan en a tiré doucement les verrous.
Nous allons nous ruer sur les âmes sans nombre,
Nous allons ressaisir la terre. —
Ainsi, dans l’ombre,
Pendant que nous rêvons et que nous oublions,
La cage aux tigres parle à la cage aux lions.

III

III

Je me penchai. J’étais dans le lieu ténébreux;
Là gisent les fléaux avec la nuit sur eux;
Et je criai : — Tibère! — Eh bien? me dit cet homme.
— Tiens-toi là. — Soit. — Néron! — L’autre monstre de Rome
Dit : — Qui donc m’ose ainsi parler? — Bien. Tiens-toi là.
Je dis : — Sennachérib! Tamerlan! Attila!

— Qu’est-ce donc que tu veux? répondirent trois gueules.
— Restez là. Plus un mot. Silence. Soyez seules.
Je me tournai : — Nemrod! — Quoi? — Tais-toi. — Je repris :
— Cyrus! Rhamsès! Cambyse! Amilcar! Phalaris!
— Que veut-on? — Restez là. — Puis, passant aux modernes,
Je comparai les bruits de toutes les cavernes,
Les antres aux palais et les trônes aux bois,
Le grondement du tigre au cri d’Innocent trois,
Nuit sinistre où pas un des coupables n’échappe,
Ni sous la pourpre Othon, ni Gerbert sous la chape.
Pensif, je m’assurai qu’ils étaient bien là tous,
Et je leur dis : — Quel est le pire d’entre vous?

Alors, du fond du gouffre, ombre patibulaire
Où le nid menacé par l’immense colère
Autrefois se blottit et se réfugia,
Satan cria : — C’est moi! — Crois-tu? dit Borgia.

IV

MANSUÉTUDE

DES ANCIENS JUGES

IV

MANSUÉTUDE DES ANCIENS JUGES

Les chambres de torture étaient d’âpres demeures;
On n’y passait jamais plus de quatre ou cinq heures,
Et l’on entrait jeune homme et l’on sortait vieillard.
Le juge pour le code et le bourreau pour l’art
S’épuisaient et, mêlant fer rouge et loi romaine,
Ayant à travailler sur de la chair humaine,
N’épargnaient rien afin d’arriver à l’aveu.
Sous leurs mains, l’os, le muscle, et l’ongle et le cheveu
Frémissaient, et, hurlant plus fort selon la fibre
Qui tressaille, et selon le nerf profond qui vibre,
Un homme devenait un clavier où Vouglans
Jouait de l’agonie avec ses doigts sanglants.
Ne croyez pas pourtant que lui, ni Farinace,
Ou Levert, n’eussent rien au cœur que la menace;

Ils priaient au besoin le captif garrotté;
Ils sucraient la torture avec de la bonté;
L’accusé qui résiste attriste la grand’chambre;
Bénins, ils l’imploraient en lui brisant un membre;
Ils étaient paternels; ils se penchaient, prêchant,
Suppliant, regrettant d’agir, l’air pas méchant,
Pour faire à cet œil terne et sombre, à cette bouche,
À cette âme aux abois, vomir l’aveu farouche.
Pasquier leurrait d’espoir ces regards presque éteints;

Delancre au patient disait des vers latins;
Bodin, sachant par cœur Virgile et ses idylles,
Les citait; et parfois ils pleuraient, crocodiles.

V

L’ÉCHAFAUD

V

L’ÉCHAFAUD

C’était fini. Splendide, étincelant, superbe,
Luisant sur la cité comme la faulx sur l’herbe,
Large acier dont le jour faisait une clarté,
Ayant je ne sais quoi dans sa tranquillité
De l’éblouissement du triangle mystique,
Pareil à la lueur au fond d’un temple antique,
Le fatal couperet relevé triomphait.
Il n’avait rien gardé de ce qu’il avait fait
Qu’une petite tache imperceptible et rouge.

Le bourreau s’en était retourné dans son bouge;
Et la peine de mort, remmenant ses valets,
Juges, prêtres, était rentrée en son palais,

Avec son tombereau terrible dont la roue,
Silencieuse, laisse un sillon dans la boue,
Qui se remplit de sang sitôt qu’elle a passé.

La foule disait : bien! car l’homme est insensé,
Et ceux qui suivent tout, et dont c’est la manière,
Suivent même ce char et même cette ornière.

J’étais là. Je pensais. Le couchant empourprait
Le grave Hôtel de Ville aux luttes toujours prêt,
Entre Hier qu’il médite et Demain dont il rêve.
L’échafaud achevait, resté seul sur la Grève,
La journée, en voyant expirer le soleil.

Le crépuscule vint, aux fantômes pareil.
Et j’étais toujours là, je regardais la hache,

La nuit, la ville immense et la petite tache.

À mesure qu'au fond du firmament obscur
L'obscurité croissait comme un effrayant mur,
L'échafaud, bloc hideux de charpentes funèbres,
S'emplissait de noirceur et devenait ténèbres;
Les horloges sonnaient, non l'heure, mais le glas;

Et toujours, sur l'acier, quoique le coutelas
Ne fût plus qu'une forme épouvantable et sombre,
La rougeur de la tache apparaissait dans l'ombre.

Un astre, le premier qu'on aperçoit le soir,
Pendant que je songeais montait dans le ciel noir.

Sa lumière rendait l'échafaud plus difforme.
L'astre se répétait dans le triangle énorme;
Il y jetait, ainsi qu'en un lac, son reflet,
Lueur mystérieuse et sacrée; il semblait
Que sur la hache horrible, aux meurtres coutumière,
L'astre laissait tomber sa larme de lumière.
Son rayon, comme un dard qui heurte et rebondit,
Frappait le fer d'un choc lumineux; on eût dit
Qu'on voyait rejaillir l'étoile de la hache.
Comme un charbon tombant qui d'un feu se détache,
Il se répercutait dans ce miroir d'effroi;
Sur la justice humaine et sur l'humaine loi,
De l'éternité calme auguste éclaboussure.
Est-ce au ciel que ce fer a fait une blessure?
Pensai-je? Sur qui donc frappe l'homme hagard?
Quel est donc ton mystère, ô glaive? — Et mon regard
Errait, ne voyant plus rien qu'à travers un voile,
De la goutte de sang à la goutte d'étoile.

VI

INFERI

INFERI

On est dans l'invisible, on est dans l'impalpable.
Ici tout, jusqu'à l'air qu'on respire, est coupable,
Et l'eau qui pleure est un remords;
Sous on ne sait quelle ombre, on ne sait quelles formes
Flottent, et l'on voit, tels que des songes énormes,
Passer d'affreux univers morts!

Suivis de loin d'un œil fixe qui les regarde,
Tristement éclairés dans leur fuite hagarde
Par d'horribles astres hiboux,
Charriant prêtre et roi, prince, esclave, ministre,
Traînant dans leurs agrès l'éternité sinistre
Qui porte l'ombre à ses deux bouts;

Agitant des linceuls et secouant des chaînes,
Pleins de vers, fourmillant de monstres, noirs de haines,
Demandant au gouffre un flambeau,
En proie aux vents soufflant d'une bouche insensée,
Mondes spectres qui font hésiter la pensée
Entre le bagne et le tombeau;

Ils vont! les uns chantant ainsi que des Sodomes;
Les autres, visions, créations, fantômes,
Sans palpitation, sans bruit;
Et derrière eux, chargés des maux que nous subîmes,
Ils ont pour les pousser d'abîmes en abîmes
Toute la fureur de la nuit!

Ils vont! l'espace est morne et sourd; leurs envergures
Font dans l'affreux brouillard de lugubres figures.

Pas d'ancres et pas d'avirons.

L’hiver les bat, la grêle aux flots pressés les crible,
Et la pluie effarée à la crinière horrible
Tord les nuages sur leurs fronts.

Chiourmes de la mort, égouts, fosses communes!
On les voit vaguement comme de sombres lunes.
Rien n’arrête leur vol hideux.
Au-dessus d’eux la brume et l’horreur se répandent,
La profondeur les hait; les précipices pendent
Dans les gouffres au-dessous d’eux.

Ils traversent, allant où l’ouragan les lance,
Tantôt une tempête, et tantôt un silence;
L’univers vivant et profond
Ne les aperçoit pas dans les brouillards sans bornes;
Ils passent dans la nuit comme des faces mornes
Qui paraissent et qui s’en vont.

Ces globes, qu’en prisons, Seigneur, vous transformâtes,
Ces planètes pontons, ces mondes casemates,
Flottes noires du châtiment,
Errent, et sur les flots tortueux et funèbres
Leurs mâts de nuit, portant des voiles de ténèbres,
Frissonnent éternellement.

Des tourbillons ayant des formes de furies
Les poursuivent; les pleurs, sources jamais taries,
Les angoisses et les effrois,
Le désespoir, l’ennui, la démence, le crime,
Vident sur ces passants monstrueux de l’abîme
Toutes leurs urnes à la fois.

Là sont tous les punis et tous les misérables;
Rongés par leurs passés, ulcères incurables,
La face aux trous de leurs cachots,
Criant : où sommes-nous? d’une voix éperdue,
Et distinguant parfois, sous eux, dans l’étendue,

Des monts, pustules du chaos.

Là Caïn pleure, Achab frémit, Commode rêve,
Borgia rit, les vers de terre armés du glaive,
Les roseaux qui disaient : je veux!
Sont là; les pharaons et les Sardanapales
S'y courbent; le vent souffle; au fond, des larves pâles
Penchent leurs sinistres cheveux.

Là sont les trahisseurs mêlés aux parricides,
Tous les despotes fous redevenus lucides,
L'homme loup et l'homme renard;

Leur bagne par moment fait le bruit d'une claie;
Le ciel leur apparaît comme une immense plaie
Où chacun d'eux voit son poignard.

L'ombre est un miroir sombre où leurs forfaits se montrent,
Leur remords est debout dans tout ce qu'ils rencontrent;
Partout, dans le morne chemin,
Chacun d'eux voit son crime, et le reste est chimère;
Le même spectre fait dire à Néron : ma mère!
Et crier : mon frère! à Caïn.

Plus bas encor s'en vont dans l'ombre expiatoire
Des mondes dont la mort même ignore l'histoire,
Où le mal tord ses derniers nœuds,
Cieux où toute lueur expire évanouie,
À qui, dans la noirceur de leur brume inouïe,
Tibère apparaît lumineux.

Quelques-uns ont été des édens et des astres.
Et l'on voit maintenant, tout chargés de désastres,
Rouler, éteints, désespérés,
L'un semant dans l'espace une effroyable graine,

L'autre traînant sa lèpre et l'autre sa gangrène,

Ces noirs soleils pestiférés!

Et squelettes sans tête et crânes sans vertèbres,
Mages étudiant de lugubres algèbres,
Tous les maux par Satan rêvés,
Vices, hydres, dragons, sont là; l’horreur sanglote,
Ils passent; à l’avant le néant, leur pilote,
Regarde avec ses yeux crevés.

Où vont-ils? La nuit s’ouvre et sur eux se referme.
Le ciel, quoiqu’il soit l’ombre où la clémence germe,
Ignore le gouffre puni;
Et nul ne sait combien de millions d’années
Doivent errer, traînant les larves forcenées,
Ces lazarets de l’infini.

Ah! quel effroi sur terre, et même au fond des tombes!
Quel frisson, si, parmi les foudres et les trombes,
Aux lueurs des astres fuyants,
Nous voyions, dans la nuit où le sort nous écroue,
Surgir subitement l’épouvantable proue
D’un de ces mondes effrayants!

VII

LES QUATRE JOURS D’ELCIIS

LES QUATRE JOURS D’ELCIIS

Vérone se souvient d’un vieillard qui parla
Pendant quatre jours, grave et seul, dans la Scala,
À l’empereur Othon qui fut un prince oblique;
Othon tenait sa cour dans la place publique,
Ayant sur les degrés du trône douze rois.
Empereur d’Allemagne et roi d’Arle, Othon trois

Étant malade avait fait allumer un cierge
Et fait vœu, s’il était guéri, grâce à la Vierge, D’entendre et d’écouter, lui césar tout-puissant,
Tout ce que lui dirait n’importe quel passant,
Devant les douze rois et la garde romaine,
Cet homme parlât-il pendant une semaine.

Donc un passant fut pris rentrant dans sa maison.
On était aux beaux jours de la tiède saison;
Le passant fut conduit devant le trône; un prêtre
Lui fit savoir le vœu du roi d’Arle, et le maître
Lui dit : Aboie aussi longtemps que tu voudras.

Alors, comme autrefois devant Saül Esdras,
Pierre devant Néron et Job devant l’Abîme, L’homme parla.
Le trône était sombre et sublime;

Cent archers l’entouraient, pas un ne remuait;
Et les rois semblaient sourds et l’empereur muet.
On voyait devant eux une table servie
Avec tout ce qui peut satisfaire l’envie
Des heureux, des puissants, de ceux qui sont en haut,
Viandes et vins, fruits, fleurs, et dans l’ombre un billot.

L’homme était un vieillard très grand, à tête nue,
Tranquille; on l’emmenait chez lui, la nuit venue,
Puis on le ramenait le matin; il était
Comme celui qui parle au tigre qui se tait;
Il fit boire à César son vœu jusqu’à la lie;
Et sa sagesse fut semblable à la folie.

Il parla quatre jours, toute la cour songea,
Et, quand il eut fini, l’empereur dit : Déjà!

I

LE PREMIER JOUR

GENS DE GUERRE ET GENS D’ÉGLISE

Je suis triste. Pourquoi? Princes, que vous importe!
Vous êtes joyeux, vous. Je refermais ma porte,
J’allais mettre la barre et tirer les verrous,
Pourquoi m’appelez-vous et que me voulez-vous?
Pourquoi me pousser hors de l’ombre volontaire?
Pourquoi faire parler celui qui veut se taire?
Roi d’Arles, tant qu’il reste au vieillard une dent,
Lui faire ouvrir la bouche est toujours imprudent.
On n’est pas sûr qu’il soit de l’avis qu’on désire.
Vous avez un conseil de jeunes hommes, sire,
Fort galants, fort jolis, fort blonds, convenez-en;
Pourquoi m’y faire entrer, moi le vieux paysan
Que la rude fierté des vieilles mœurs pénètre?
Et depuis quand a-t-on l’habitude de mettre

Une pièce de cuir aux pourpoints de velours?
Pour marcher devant vous, rois, mes pas sont bien lourds.

Si vous ne savez pas de quel nom je me nomme,
Je m’appelle Elciis, et je suis gentilhomme
De la ville de Pise, âpre et sévère endroit.

Je n’ai point à Pavie étudié le droit,
Et je n’ai pas l’esprit d’un docteur de Sorbonne.

Donc, sire, si la guerre est en soi chose bonne,
Je n’en sais rien; mais, bonne ou mauvaise, je dis
Qu’il faut la faire en gens sincères et hardis,
Et que l’honnêteté publique est en détresse,
Princes, de voir qu’on fait une guerre traîtresse,
Une guerre humble, habile aux besognes de nuit,
Achetant des félons et des lâches sans bruit,
Faisant moins résonner l’estoc que la cymbale,
Ayant des espions, des colporteurs de balle,
Des moines mendiants et des juifs pour appuis,
Et l’empoisonnement des sources et des puits.

Les hommes de mon temps faisaient la guerre franche.
Tout l’arbre tressaillait quand ils cassaient la branche,
Et, quand ils coupaient l’arbre avec leur couperet,
C’était au tremblement de toute la forêt;
Car ces hommes étaient des bûcherons sublimes.
Les survivants, et ceux que nous ensevelîmes,
Sont dans le souvenir des peuples à jamais.
Les hommes de mon temps hantaient les hauts sommets;

Ils allaient droit au mur et donnaient l’escalade;
Ils méprisaient la nuit, le piége, l’embuscade;
Quand on leur demandait : Quel compagnon hardi
Emmenez-vous en guerre? ils disaient : Plein midi.
C’étaient, sous l’humble serge ou l’hermine royale,
Les bons et grands enfants de la guerre loyale.
Ils n’étaient pas de ceux qui s’endorment longtemps;
Hors du danger auguste ils étaient mécontents;
Ils ne quittaient l’épieu que pour prendre la hache;
Car l’immobilité ne sied point au panache,
Ni la rouille à l’éclair du glaive, et le repos
N’est pas fait pour les plis orageux des drapeaux.
Quand ils s’en revenaient des combats, leurs armures

Étaient rouges ainsi que des grenades mûres,
Et leurs femmes trouvaient le soir sous leur pourpoint
De larges trous saignants dont ils ne parlaient point.
De tout bien mal acquis ils disaient : qu’on le rende!
Ils ne trouvaient jamais de distance assez grande

Entre eux et le mensonge abject, ni de cloison
Assez épaisse entre eux, sire, et la trahison;
Ils parlaient haut, étant des fils des grandes races;
Leurs poitrines avaient le dédain des cuirasses;
Leur galop rendait fous les libres étriers.
Il n’était pas besoin d’envoyer des fourriers
Pour leur dire : Il convient de se mettre en campagne.
Un noir se tord moins vite autour des reins son pagne
Qu’ils ne bouclaient l’estoc à leur robuste dos.
Ils donnaient peu de temps aux paters, aux credos,
Priant Dieu bonnement, comme fait le vulgaire;
Droits, hommes de parole, ils ne s’embrouillaient guère
Aux finesses du clerc qui ment au nom des cieux,
Et dédaignaient l’argot du moine chassieux
Qui crache du latin et fait des hexamètres,
Étant des gens de guerre et non des gens de lettres.
C’est avec la gaîté du rire puéril
Qu’ils se précipitaient au plus noir du péril;
Il sortait de leur casque un souffle d’épopée;
Quand on disait : l’épée est d’acier, leur épée,

Fière et toujours au vent, répondait : l’homme aussi.
Au chaume misérable ils accordaient merci.
Ces vaillants devenaient doucement barbes grises,
Ayant pour toute joie, après les villes prises
Et les rois rétablis et tous leurs fiers travaux,
De regarder manger l’avoine à leurs chevaux.
Oh! je les ai connus! dès que les couleuvrines,
Dogues des tours, fronçaient leurs sinistres narines,
Dès que l’altier clairon sonnait, ils étaient prêts.
Ils étaient curieux d’aller tout voir de près;

Jusque dans le sépulcre ils avançaient la tête;
Et ces hommes, joyeux surtout dans la tempête,
Sans trop d'étonnement et sans trop de souci
Auraient suivi la mort leur criant : par ici!

Qu'est-ce que vous voulez maintenant qu'on vous dise?
Ce temps-ci me répugne et sent la bâtardise.
Quand venaient les hiboux, jadis l'aigle émigrait;
Je m'en vais comme lui. Barons, c'est à regret
Qu'on voit se refléter jusque dans vos repaires
Ce grand rayonnement des anciens et des pères
Au-dessus de votre ombre au fond des cieux épars.
Vous vous croyez lions, tigres et léopards;
Les lions tels que vous sont pris aux souricières.

Les marmots nus qu'on porte ou qu'on mène aux lisières
Seraient dans le danger moins bégayants que vous.
Vous avez dans vos cœurs implacables et mous
Le dédain des vieux temps que vous osez proscrire;
Vous nous faites frémir et nous vous faisons rire.
Vous avez l'œil obscur, l'âme plus louche encor
Vous faites chevaliers avec des chaînes d'or
Des trahisseurs ou bien des pages de Sodomes,
Des gueux, des affranchis, de ces espèces d'hommes
Qu'on vend publiquement dans la rue à l'encan.
Où je vois le collier, je cherche le carcan.
Princes, mon cœur se serre en vous voyant, car j'aime
Le soleil sans brouillard, l'homme sans stratagème.
Vous avez l'appétit large, le front étroit,
Le mépris de tout frein, la haine de tout droit,
Et pour sceptre un couteau de boucher. Quelle histoire!
Quels jours! Les gros butins se citent comme gloire.

Vous régnez en tuant sans jamais dire : assez!
Ô pillards, si souvent de meurtre éclaboussés
Que la rouille vous vient plus haut que la jambière!
Toujours ivres; buveurs de vin, buveurs de bière,

Buveurs de sang; couards en même temps; vivant
Dans on ne sait quel luxe abject, lâche, énervant;
Car la férocité, que la volupté mine,
Devient facilement chair molle et s’effémine;
Aujourd’hui tout déchoit dans notre fier métier;
Pour faire une cuirasse on prend un bijoutier,
De sorte que l’armure a peur d’être battue.
C’est ordinairement par derrière qu’on tue.
Vos plus fameux exploits et vos plus triomphants
Sont des dépouillements de femmes et d’enfants,
Des introductions dans les pays par fraude,
Les brusques coups de dent de la fouine qui rôde,
D’attaquer ceux qu’on a d’abord bien endormis,
D’arriver ennemis sous des masques d’amis;

Faits honteux pour l’épée et pour la seigneurie,
Vils, et dont je vous veux laisser la rêverie.
Quant à moi, si j’étais l’un des rois que voilà,
Je ne porterais point légèrement cela;
Je frémirais, à l’heure où l’ombre étend ses voiles,
D’être ainsi misérable et noir sous les étoiles.

Je ne vous cache pas que je suis attristé.
Tout pâlit, tout déchoit! et, même la beauté,
Dernier malheur! s’en va. Toute la grâce humaine
C’est la langue toscane et la bouche romaine;
Et l’on parle aujourd’hui je ne sais quel jargon.

Roi, qui cherche un lézard peut trouver un dragon;
Vous vouliez un flatteur de plus qui vous caresse
Et rie, et tout à coup la vérité se dresse.

Vous avez reconnu que les hommes trop prompts
Courent parfois grand risque en vengeant leurs affronts;
Aussi vous n’avez pas de colère soudaine.

Défié par Venise, on regarde Modène.

Vous pesez le péril, rois, quoique altiers et vains.
Vous ne guerroyez pas sans l’avis des devins;
Un astrologue baisse ou lève vos visières.
Ô princes, vous allez consulter des sorcières
Sur le degré d’honneur et d’amour du devoir
Et de témérité qu’il est prudent d’avoir;
Vous combattez de loin derrière des machines;
Et vous frottez vos bras, vos reins et vos échines,
Moins propres, sur mon âme, aux harnais qu’aux licous,
D’huile magique à rendre invulnérable aux coups.
Je voudrais bien savoir, princes, si Charlemagne
Qui, se dressant, donnait de l’ombre à l’Allemagne,
Et si le grand Cyrus et le grand Attila
Se sont graissé leurs peaux avec cet onguent-là.

Vous avez fait sans peine, ô clients des Sibylles,
Marcheurs de nuit, tendeurs d’embûches, gens habiles,
Quoique chétifs de cœur et chétifs de cerveau,
Avec le vieil empire un empire nouveau.

L’empaillement d’un aigle est chose bien aisée;
Davus remplace Alcide et Thersite Thésée.

Rois, la fraude est vilaine et donne un profit nul;
Mentir ou se tuer c’est le même calcul;
Le fourbe est transparent, tout regard le pénètre;
La trahison devient la chair même du traître;
Il se sent sur les os un mépris corrosif;
Dès qu’on est malhonnête on est rongé tout vif
Par son mauvais renom et par sa perfidie
Visible à tous les yeux et toujours agrandie;
On est renard, la haine et l’effroi du troupeau;
On a l’ombre et le mal pour robe et pour drapeau;
Et Carthage a péri dans sa sombre tunique
De mensonge, de dol, de nuit, de foi punique.

La ciguë en vos champs croît mieux que le laurier.

Je verrais sans colère, ô rois, un serrurier
Bâtir, sans oublier de griller les fenêtres,
Entre vos probités et mon argent, mes maîtres,
Une porte solide aux verrous bien fermants.
Quant à votre parole et quant à vos serments,
Plutôt que m’assoupir sur votre signature
Et sur vos jurements par la sainte écriture,
Plutôt que me fier à vous, je me fierais
Aux jaguars, aux lynx, aux tigres des forêts,
Et j’aimerais mieux, rois, me coucher dans leur antre
Et mettre pour dormir ma tête sur leur ventre.

Ah! ce siècle est d’un flot d’opprobre submergé!

Autre plaie; et fâcheuse à montrer, — le clergé.

Puisque j’expose ici la publique infortune,
Puisque j’étale aux yeux nos hontes, c’en est une
Que le prêtre ait grandi plus haut que notre droit,
Et que l’église ait pris l’allure qu’on lui voit.

De mon temps, grand, petit, riche ou gueux, vieux ou jeune,
On observait l’avent, les vigiles, le jeûne,
On priait le bon Dieu, mains jointes, fronts courbés;
Mais on tenait la bride assez haute aux abbés.
On avait l’œil sur eux, on était économe
De baisers à leur chape, et l’on craignait peu Rome;
Sire, ce que voyant, Rome se tenait coi.

Aujourd’hui Rome, à tout, dit : comment? et pourquoi?
On laisse les bedeaux sortir des sacristies;
Qui touche aux clercs est plein de piqûres d’orties.
C’est fini, plus de paix. Ils sont partout. Veut-on D’un évêque trop lourd raccourcir le bâton?
Querelle. Pour blâmer les luxures d’un moine,
Pour un prieur à qui l’on ôte un peu d’avoine,
Pour troubler dans son auge un capucin trop gras,

Foudre, anathème; on a le pape sur les bras.

Un seul fil remué fait sortir l’araignée.

Rome a sur tous les points la bataille gagnée.
On lui cède; on la craint.
Combattre des soldats
Oh! tant que vous voudrez! mais des prêtres, non pas!
La cave du lion est effrayante, et l’aire
De l’aigle a je ne sais quel aspect de colère;
On trouve là quelqu’un d’altier qui se défend;
Sire, attaquer cela, c’est beau, c’est triomphant;
Le bec est flamboyant, la gueule est colossale;
On sent que l’aquilon dont l’Afrique est vassale,
Que l’ouragan qui gronde et qui des cieux descend,
Est dans les crins de l’un encor tout frémissant,
Et qu’aux pattes de l’autre il reste de la foudre;
L’adversaire est superbe et plaît. Mais se résoudre
À mettre ses deux mains dans des fourmillements,
Poursuivre au plus épais des cloaques dormants

La bête de la bave et celle de la fange,
Avoir pour ennemi l’être plat qui se venge
De son écrasement par sa fétidité,
C’est hideux; et j’ai honte et peur, en vérité,
D’attaquer une larve au fond d’une masure,
Et de combattre un trou d’où sort une morsure!

De là l’empiétement des moûtiers, des couvents,
Des hommes tonsurés et noirs sur les vivants,
Et le frémissement du monde qui recule.

Rome a tendu sa toile au fond du crépuscule.
La vaste lâcheté des mœurs est son trésor.
Tout à Rome aboutit. Prostituée à l’or,
Rome cote, surfait, pare, étale, brocante

Son absolution que le vice fréquente;
Le saint-père est le grand mendiant indulgent;
Les choses en sont là qu'on a pour son argent
Plus ou moins de pitié, plus ou moins de prière,
Et que l'église en est la sinistre usurière.
Rome a dessous l'ordure, et la pourpre dessus.
Pour être petit, pauvre, humble, comme Jésus
Le commandait à Jacque, à Simon, à Didyme,
Le pape a le décime, et l'évêque a la dîme.
Tout est occasion fiscale, jubilé,
Sabbat, la chaise offerte et le cierge brûlé,
Cloches, confession, amulettes, jurandes,

La desserte du pain, la desserte des viandes,
Droit de manger du bœuf, droit de manger du porc,

Exorcismes, tonlieux, mortuaire, déport,
Sermons, pâque fleurie, eau bénite, corvées,
Saint chrême, enfants perdus ou filles retrouvées,
Procès, citation devant l'official.
Partout du créancier le profil glacial.
Le fisc ne quitte pas des yeux la femme grosse;
L'enfant paie. Êtes-vous dans une basse-fosse,
Le saint-père quémande à travers vos barreaux.
Vous plaît-il de fonder un hôpital? Vingt gros.
Une bonne action paie un droit; rien n'échappe;
Un juste non payant ferait loucher le pape;
Dix gros pour que l'abbé dise : sois bienvenu!

Pour faire devant soi porter un glaive nu,
Cent gros; pour acheter le blé des turcs, dispense;
Tant pour avoir le droit de penser ce qu'on pense;
Tant pour faire le mal, tant pour s'en repentir;
Péage pour entrer, péage pour sortir;
Le baptême, c'est tant; n'oubliez pas l'annate;
Tant pour l'enfant de cœur à la robe incarnate;

Tant pour vous marier; ah! vous mourez; c’est tant.
Corruption! Toujours une main qui se tend!
Dès que le père expire ou que la mère est morte,
Les enfants orphelins s’en vont de porte en porte
Mendier pour payer le prêtre, et, sans remord,
Un marchand sacré vend sa pourriture au mort.
Rome sur tout prélève une part, s’attribue
Sur deux mules la bonne et laisse la fourbue,
Taxe le berger, tond la brebis, prend l’agneau,
Goûte la fille au lit, le vin dans le tonneau,
Flaire la cargaison du vaisseau dans le havre,
Et mange avant les vers le meilleur du cadavre.
Jésus disait aimer; l’église dit : payer.

Le ciel est à qui peut acquitter le loyer,
On y sera logé bien ou mal, mieux ou guère,
Selon qu’on sera riche ou pauvre sur la terre;

Arrière le haillon! place au riche manteau!
Au mur du paradis Rome a mis écriteau.

La chaire de Saint-Pierre autrefois si sublime,
Espèce de tribune énorme de l’abîme,
Dont le dais formidable, au mystère mêlé,
Semblait s’évanouir dans un gouffre étoilé,
Est aujourd’hui l’obscure et lugubre boutique
Où le bien et le mal, la messe et le cantique,
Le vrai, le faux, le jour, la nuit, l’ombre et le vent,
Les anges, l’infini, la tombe, tout se vend!
Pourvu qu’il ait son crime en ducats dans son coffre,
L’homme le plus pervers voit le prêtre qui s’offre;
Et le plus noir bandit qui soit sous le ciel bleu
Fouille à sa poche et dit au pape : Combien Dieu?
Vous êtes un brigand, un gueux, un maniaque
De meurtres; bien; un tel, prêtre simoniaque,
Crible vos actions dans son hideux tamis,
Se signe, et dit : Allez, vos torts vous sont remis.

C’est triste d’être absous par ces viles engeances. —

Rois, si j’avais sur moi de telles indulgences,
De celles qui se font marchander et payer,
Je dirais à mon chien, pour me bien nettoyer,
De lécher le pardon d’abord, le crime ensuite.

Mais vous ne réglez pas ainsi votre conduite,
Et vous ne tombez pas dans ces scrupules vains.
Toujours, dans vos hauts faits de nuit et de ravins,
Comme vous entendez que Dieu vous soit commode,
Et comme parmi vous, en outre, il est de mode
Que la vipère prête au tigre son venin,
Vous avez près de vous un curé qui, bénin,
Vous conseille et vous sert dans toutes vos escrimes,
Qui trouve des raisons en latin à vos crimes,
Qui vous bénit après vos guets-apens, et coud
Un tedeum infâme à chaque mauvais coup.
D’où la difformité de la raison publique.
Caïphe et Busiris se donnent la réplique.
Quel est le faux? quel est le vrai? Qui donc a tort?
C’est l’honnête homme. À bas le droit! gloire au plus fort!
Le ciel a le rayon, mais le prêtre a le prisme.
La vérité bégaie et crache le sophisme;

La probité n’est plus qu’un enrouement confus.
Veut-on protester, vivre, essayer un refus?
On s’arrête, empêché dans l’immense argutie
Qu’en foule autour de vous le clergé balbutie;
On a le prêtre, là, dans le fond du gosier;
Et quand la conscience humaine veut crier
Ou parler haut, elle a l’église pour pituite.

Oh! le ciel grand ouvert, la prière gratuite,
Le prêtre pauvre au point de ne distinguer plus
Le cuivre d’un liard de l’or d’un carolus,

L’autel et l’évangile ignorant le péage
Et la monnaie, ainsi que l’astre et le nuage,
C’était beau, c’était grand, c’était ainsi jadis,
Dans le temps qu’on était des jeunes gens hardis,
Et que, libre, on allait chanter dans la montagne!
Est-ce que c’en est fait dans le deuil qui nous gagne?
Est-ce que les bons cœurs et les hommes de bien
Ne verront plus cela sous les cieux : Dieu pour rien?

Rome n’a qu’un regret, c’est que la bête échappe
À l’ombre monstrueuse et large de sa chape,
Que l’animal soit franc de son pouvoir jaloux,
Que l’ours rôde en dehors du fisc, et que les loups
Respirent l’air des cieux depuis le temps d’Évandre
Sans qu’on puisse trouver moyen de le leur vendre.

Dieu vole la nature au prêtre; il la soustrait;
Il lui dit : Sauve-toi dans la vaste forêt!
C’est son tort. Le soleil est de mauvais exemple;
Il ne réserve pas sa dorure au seul temple;
Il empourpre les toits laïcs, grands et petits,
Les maisons, les palais, les cabanes, gratis.
Quoi! le brin d’herbe est libre et donne ce scandale
De croître effrontément aux fentes de la dalle!
La folle avoine, auprès du lierre son voisin,
Pousse, sans acquitter le droit diocésain!
Quoi! depuis que l’Etna s’assied sur sa fournaise,
Géant sombre, il n’a pas encor payé sa chaise!
Quoi! l’éclair passe, va, revient, sans rien donner!
Quoi! l’étoile ose luire, éclairer, rayonner,
Sans qu’on lui puisse enfin présenter la quittance!
Le pape est avec Dieu tête à tête, et le tance.
Quoi! l’on ne peut au lys des champs, pris au collet,
Dire : pour les besoins du culte, s’il vous plaît!
Quoi! la vague, lavant les gouffres insondables,
Couvre l’énormité des plages formidables,
Quoi! l’écume jaillit jusqu’à cette hauteur

Sans retomber liard dans la main du quêteur!
Oh! si le prêtre enfin pouvait jeter sa serre
Sur la vie, et la prendre à Dieu, son adversaire!
Quel hosanna le jour où la fleur, le buisson,
Le nid, devraient payer au curé leur rançon!
Le jour où l'on pourrait mettre une bonne taxe
Sur l'usage que fait le pôle de son axe,

Chicaner sa caverne au lion, et tricher
L'eau que boit le moineau dans le creux du rocher!

Donc, viatique, psaume et vêpres, scapulaires,
Madones à clouer sur le bec des galères,
La vertu du chrétien, la liberté du juif,
Tout est en magasin et tout a son tarif.

Et les nécessités d'exploits hideux que crée
Cette vente à l'encan de la chose sacrée!
Ces pillages où Rome a plusieurs portions!
Ces envahissements et ces extorsions
D'héritages qu'on vient d'un coup de hache fendre,
Et qui n'ont plus le bras du chef pour les défendre!
Ces fouilles de corbeaux dans le ventre des morts!
Ces guerres où, n'osant s'en prendre aux hommes forts,
Craignant le bras qui frappe et la lance qui blesse,
La couardise appelle au combat la faiblesse!

Quand on a devant soi des barons, la plupart
Bandits bien crénelés et droits sur leur rempart,
Maîtres de quelque place à d'autres usurpée,
Qu'on arrondisse un peu sa terre avec l'épée,

En jouant au plus brave et non pas au plus fin,
Cela n'est pas très bien peut-être, mais enfin
Coup pour coup, le fer bat le fer, cela se passe
Entre ma panoplie et votre carapace,
Nous sommes gens gantés d'acier, bottés d'airain,

À visière féroce, à visage serein,
En guerre! et nous pouvons nous regarder en face.
Mais qu’on prenne aux petits pour les gros; mais qu’on fasse
Un apanage à tel ou tel prélat câlin
Avec des biens de veuve ou des biens d’orphelin;
Mais, au mépris des lois divines et chrétiennes,
Pour doter des frocards et des braillards d’antiennes,
Et des clercs qui, béats, par le vin attendris,
Vous disent : faites maigre! et mangent des perdrix,
Qu’on pille son douaire à cette pauvre vieille,
Qu’à cet enfant, qui fait un murmure d’abeille
Et qui rit en voyant entrer les assassins,
On vole sa maison et son champ, par les saints!
Je dis que c’est horrible, et toute honte est bue
Autant par qui reçoit que par qui distribue!

Le meurtre vole afin d’acheter le pardon.

Rome est un champ ayant le moine pour chardon;
Que l’âne de Jésus vienne donc et le broute!

Ces prêtres qui pour ombre ont derrière eux le doute,
Faux, masqués, emmiellant de leur perfide esprit
Le bord du vase au fond duquel le démon rit,
Traîtres du ciel, à qui l’opprobre profitable
Donne bon feu, bon lit, bon gîte et bonne table,
Ah! ces larrons sacrés, malheur sur eux, malheur!

Oh! que j’aime bien mieux le simple et franc voleur!
Des fauves attentats sauvage cénobite,
Il a l’ombre pour antre et pour cloître; il habite
Les déserts, les halliers creusés en entonnoirs,
Le derrière des murs croulants, les recoins noirs
Des palais qu’on bâtit, où, la nuit, dans les pierres
On entend le choc brusque et fuyant des rapières;
Ce brigand a du sang au front, mais pas de fard;
Il est âpre et hideux, mais il n’est point cafard,

Mais il ne se met pas un surplis sur le râble,
Mais il risque du moins sa peau, le misérable!

Le seigneur est la grille et le prêtre est la dent.

C’est grâce à tout cela que, la débauche aidant,
L’horreur est installée en nos tours féodales.

Ah! crimes, deuils, banquets, prêtres, femmes, scandales!
Rire et foudre mêlant leurs funèbres éclats!
Nous frissonnons de voir tout ce qu’on voit, hélas,
Dans ces vaillants manoirs si glorieux naguères,
Quand, vieux aigles blanchis, et vieux faucons des guerres,
Par les brèches que fit le glaive, nous plongeons
Nos yeux dans la noirceur lugubre des donjons!

*

Le soleil déclinait; de leurs piques bourrues
Les soldats refoulaient le peuple au coin des rues;
Les prêtres chuchotaient près du trône rangés.
— J’ai faim, dit Elciis. L’empereur dit : Mangez.

II

LE DEUXIÈME JOUR

ROIS ET PEUPLES

Vous êtes plusieurs rois ici, j’en suis bien aise.
Donc on peut vous parler en face. Toi, Farnèse,
Rends-nous compte de Parme; et toi, duc Avellan,
De Montferrat; et toi, Visconti, de Milan.
Vous avez ces pays; qu’est-ce que vous en faites?
L’Italie est heureuse et voit de belles fêtes!
Le duc Sforce est un sbire; il faudrait qu’on plongeât,

Pour trouver son pareil, plus bas que le goujat;

Voulez-vous des bandits? Guiscard vous en procure;
Strongoni, qui mourut d’une manière obscure
L’an passé, n’avait pas vécu très clairement;
Craignez Foulque après boire, Alde après un serment;
Squillaci roue et pend; Malaspina s’adonne
À mêler la jusquiame avec la belladone;
Le soir voit arriver joyeux à son festin
Des gens que voit mourir l’œil pâle du matin.
Si Pandolfe a trouvé quelque part sa patente

De général, pardieu, ce n’est pas dans la tente.
Sixte étrangla Thomond; Urbin extermina
Montecchi; le vieux Côme égorgea Gravina;
Ezzelin est faussaire, Ottobon est bigame;
Litta fait poignarder dans un bal à Bergame
Bernard Tumapailler, comte de Fezensac;

Jean massacre Borso; Pons dérobe le sac
Que Boccanegre avait laissé dans sa gondole;
Bonacossi sanglant rase la Mirandole;
Et quant à monsieur d’Este, ah! tous vos généraux
L’admirent; quel vainqueur! L’an passé, ce héros,
Avec force soudards levant la pertuisane,
Partit pour conquérir la marche trévisane;
On battait du tambour, on jouait du hautbois;
Un gros de paysans l’attaque au coin d’un bois,
L’armée au premier choc plie, et ce guerrier rare
Prit la fuite, et revint en chemise à Ferrare
Après avoir été volé dans le chemin.

Guy tue Alphonse afin d’être comte romain;
Le duc Fosdinovo vend Nice au barbaresque;
Spinetta se fait peindre ayant, dans une fresque,
Un crâne entre les dents comme un singe une noix;
Fiesque empoisonne Azzo, c’est le mode génois;
De par l’assassinat Sapandus est exarque;
Cibo, pour traverser le lac Fucin, embarque

Trois enfants, dont il doit hériter, ses neveux,
Sur un bateau doré qu’il suit de tous ses vœux,
Et qui les noie, étant fait de planches trop minces.
Mais expliquons-nous donc, vous nommez ça des princes!
Un tas de scélérats et de coupe-jarrets!
La justice en leur nom prononce des arrêts;
On les appelle grands, nobles, sérénissimes;
Ils sont comme des feux allumés sur des cimes;
Augustes marauds! gueux de l’honneur trafiquant.
Drôles que frapperaient, à l’autel comme au camp,
Au nom du chaste glaive, au nom du temple vierge,
Ulysse de son sceptre et Jésus de sa verge!

Si vous vous êtes mis dans l’esprit qu’en ayant
Plus d’infamie, on est un roi plus flamboyant,
Si vous vous figurez vos races rajeunies
Par vos férocités et vos ignominies,
Rois, je vous le redis, vous vous trompez; l’erreur,
C’est de croire qu’un nom peut grandir par l’horreur,
La fraude et les forfaits accumulés sans cesse.
Une augmentation de honte et de bassesse,

D’ombre et de déshonneur n’accroît pas les maisons;
La fange n’a jamais redoré les blasons.
Ah! deuil sans borne après les prouesses sans nombre!
Vous faites du passé votre piédestal sombre;
Sur les grands siècles morts sans tache et sans défaut
Vous montez, pour porter votre honte plus haut!
Vous semblez avec eux avoir fait la gageure
D’égaler leur lumière et leur lustre en injure,
Et de ne pas laisser à leur vieille fierté
Une splendeur sans mettre un opprobre à côté;
Et vous avez le prix dans cette affreuse joute
Où votre abjection à leur gloire s’ajoute!

Ô Dieu qui m’entendez, ces hommes sont hideux,

Certe, ils sont étonnés de nous comme nous d’eux.
Avez-vous fait erreur? et que faut-il qu’on pense?
À qui le châtiment? à qui la récompense?
Quelle nuit! N’est-ce pas le plus dur des affronts
Que nous les preux ayions pour fils eux, les poltrons!
Et qu’abjects et rompant les anciens équilibres,
Eux les tyrans, soient nés de nous, les hommes libres;
Si bien que l’honnête homme est chargé du maudit
Et que le juste doit répondre du bandit!
Qu’ont-ils fait pour porter des noms comme les nôtres?
Par quel fil pouvons-nous tenir les uns aux autres,

Dieu puissant! et comment avons-nous mérité
Eux, ces pères, et nous, cette postérité?
Ah! le siècle difforme et funeste où nous sommes,
En étalant, auprès des tombes, de tels hommes,
Si lâches, si méchants, si noirs, que j’en frémis,
Offense la pudeur des aïeux endormis.

Le vent à son gré roule et tord la banderole.
Je n’avais pas dessein quand j’ai pris la parole
De dire tout cela, mais c’est dit, et c’est bon.
Rois, je sens sur ma lèvre errer l’ardent charbon;
À moi simple, il me vient en parlant des idées;
La patrie et la nuit sur moi sont accoudées
Et toute l’Italie en mon âme descend.
Je sens mon sombre esprit comme un flot grossissant.
Dieu sans doute a voulu, sire, que votre altesse
Vît l’indignation qui sort de la tristesse.

Je sais que par instants le public devient froid
Pour le bien et le mal, pour le crime et le droit,
Le comble de la chute étant l’indifférence;
On vit, l’abjection n’est plus une souffrance;
On regarde avancer sur le même cadran
Sa propre ignominie et l’orgueil du tyran;
L’affront ne pèse plus; et même on le déclare.

À ces époques-là de sa honte on se pare;
Temps hideux où la joue est rose du soufflet.
La jeunesse a perdu l'élan qui la gonflait;
Le tocsin ne fait plus dresser la sentinelle,
Ce fauve oiseau qui bat les cloches de son aile
Est cloué sur la porte obscure du beffroi;
Oui, sire, aux mauvais jours, sous quelque méchant roi
Féroce, quoique vil, et, quoique lâche, rude,
Toute une nation se change en solitude;
L'échine et le bâton semblent être d'accord,
L'un frappe et l'autre accepte; et le peuple a l'air mort;
On mange, on boit; toujours la foule, plus personne;
Les âmes sont un sol aride où le pied sonne;
Les foyers sont éteints, les cœurs sont endormis;

Rois, voyant ce sommeil, on se croit tout permis.
Ah! la tourbe est ignoble et l'élite est indigne.
De l'avilissement l'homme porte le signe.
L'air tiède et mou, le temps qui passe, la gaîté,
Les chants, l'oubli des morts, tout est complicité;
Tous sont traîtres à tous, et la foule se rue À traîner les vaincus par les pieds dans la rue;
Le silence est au fond de tout le bruit qu'on fait;
On est prêt à baiser Satan s'il triomphait;
Le mal qui réussit devient digne d'estime;
L'applaudissement suit, la chaîne au cou, le crime,
Que la libre huée a d'abord précédé;
On voit — car le malheur lui-même dégradé
Abdique la colère et se couche et se vautre,
Dans l'espoir d'avoir part au pillage d'un autre —
Les extorqués faisant cortége aux extorqueurs.
Pas une résistance illustre dans les cœurs!
La tyrannie altière, atroce, inexorable,
Est le vaste échafaud de l'homme misérable;
Le maître est le gibet, les flatteurs sont les clous.
Mangé de la vermine ou dévoré des loups,
Tel est le sort du peuple; il faut qu'il s'y résigne.

Des vautours, des corbeaux. Mais où donc est le cygne?

Où donc est la colombe? où donc est l’alcyon?
Quand on n’est pas Tibère, on est Trimalcion.
L’un rampe, lèche et rit pendant que l’autre opprime,
Sombre histoire! le vice est le fumier du crime;
Les hommes sont bassesse ou bien férocité;
Meurtre dans le palais, fange dans la cité;
Le tyran est doublé du valet; et le monde
Va de l’antre du fauve à l’auge de l’immonde.

Tout ce que je dis là vous fait l’esprit content;
C’est votre joie, ô rois, mais écoutez pourtant.

Rois, qu’une seule voix proteste, elle réveille
Au fond de ce silence une sinistre oreille
Et fait rouvrir un œil terrible en cette nuit;
Prenez garde à celui qui fait le premier bruit;
Un seul passant sévère et ferme déconcerte
Dans son abjection l’immensité déserte;
Un vivant n’a qu’à dire aux cadavres un mot,
Et l’ossuaire va se lever en sursaut.
Princes, aussi longtemps qu’on croit le ciel compère,
On se tait; tant qu’on voit le tyran qui prospère
Et le lâche succès qui le suit comme un chien,
C’est bon; tant que le mal qu’il fait se porte bien,
Sa personne est un dogme et son règne est un culte.
Un beau jour, brusquement, catastrophe, tumulte,
Tout croule et se disperse, et dans l’ombre, les cris,

L’horreur, tout disparaît; et, quant à moi, je ris
De ceux qu’ébahiraient ces chutes de tonnerre.

Pisistrate, Manfred, Hippias, Foulques-Nerre,
Hatto du Rhin, Jean deux, le pire des dauphins,
Macrin, Vitellius, ont fait de sombres fins;

Rois, ce ne sont point là des choses que j’invente;
C’est de l’histoire. On peut régner par l’épouvante
Et la fraude, assisté de tel prêtre moqueur
Et fourbe, à qui les vers mangent déjà le cœur,
On peut courber les grands, fouler la basse classe;
Mais à la fin quelqu’un dans la foule se lasse,
Et l’ombre soudain s’ouvre, et de quelque manteau
Sort un poing qui se crispe et qui tient un couteau.
Vous dites : — Devant moi tout fléchit et recule;
Moi, je viens de Turnus; moi je descends d’Hercule;
J’ai le respect de tous, étant né radieux
Et fils de ces héros qui touchaient presque aux dieux. —
Ne vous fiez pas trop à vos grands noms, mes maîtres;
Car vous seriez frappés, quels que soient vos ancêtres,
Eussiez-vous sur le front l’étoile Aldebaran.
On s’inquiète peu des aïeux d’un tyran,

Du Chéréas quelconque on applaudit l’audace,
Qu’Aurélien soit noble ou bourgeois, qu’il soit dace
Ou hongrois, ce n’est pas ce que je veux savoir;
Mais il fut dur et sombre, et, quant au vengeur noir
Qui rejette au tombeau cette âme ensanglantée,
Que ce soit Mucapor ou que ce soit Mnesthée,
Qu’importe? Un tyran tombe, un despote est détruit,
Je n’en demande pas davantage à la nuit.

Ces meurtres-là sont grands; Brutus en est la marque;
Chion, Léonidas en poignardant Cléarque,
Ont montré qu’ils étaient disciples de Platon;
Harmodius n’avait point de poil au menton
Quand il dit : je tuerai le tyran; il le tue;

Et la Grèce lui fait dresser une statue
Qui tenait à la main une épée et des fleurs.
On peut frapper le roi qui vit de vos malheurs,
L’usurpateur armé de forfaits et de ruses;
C’était l’opinion des grecs amants des muses,

Peuple si délicat que, sous ces nobles cieux,
Les orfèvres, sculpteurs des métaux précieux,
Moulaient les coupes d’or sur la gorge des femmes.
Ainsi furent punis certains hommes infâmes,
Car on n’épargne point qui n’a rien épargné;
Et l’histoire les suit d’un regard indigné.

Moi, je ne juge pas ces justices sinistres;
Je les vois, je n’ai point la garde des registres
Ni la revision des arrêts; je n’ai pas
De signature à mettre au bas de ces trépas;
C’est la chose de Dieu, non la mienne; l’affaire
Le regarde, et non moi, vieux néant de la guerre,
Spectre qui vais traînant mes pas estropiés,
Et qui sens des douleurs sous la plante des pieds;
Après tout, je ne suis ni mage ni prophète;
Et que la volonté du ciel profond soit faite!
Rois, je n’apporte ici que l’avertissement.

Ô princes, vous pouvez crouler subitement.
Vous avez beau compter sur vos soldats horribles;
Les comètes aussi sont fortes et terribles,

Elles vont à l’assaut du soleil rayonnant,
Elles font peur au ciel; mais Dieu, rien qu’en tournant
Son doigt mystérieux vers les nuits scélérates,
Fait dans l’océan noir fuir ces astres pirates.

Le pas des lansquenets sonnait sur les pavés.
— J’ai soif, dit Elciis. L’empereur dit : Buvez.

III

LE TROISIÈME JOUR

LES CATASTROPHES

L’éternité n’est point dans vos apothéoses;
Et Dieu ne l’a donnée à rien, pas même aux roses.
Le temps que vous avez n’est pas illimité.
Un jour vient, tout se paie; et la calamité,
Qui sortit si souvent de vos palais, y rentre.
La foule alors, autour du maître dans son antre,
Bouillonne et s’enfle; on voit les pauvres demi-nus
Rugir, humbles hier, brusquement devenus
Plus hagards que les huns et que les massagètes.
Ah! les reines — je plains les femmes — sont sujettes
Aux cheveux blanchissant dans une seule nuit.
L’incendie au sommet des tours s’épanouit,

Seule utile lueur qui sorte du despote;
Au-dessus du palais, buisson de flamme, il flotte,
Et, croissant à travers les toits, ouvre au milieu
Ses pétales d’aurore et ses feuilles de feu,
Étant la rose horrible et fauve des décombres.
Vous avez dans vos cœurs ces pressentiments sombres;
C’est pourquoi, malgré vous, vous êtes pleins d’ennuis.

Qui suis-je maintenant, moi qui parle? Je suis
Un vieux homme qui va sur la route. On l’arrête.
Entrez; il parle, il dit son avis sur la fête;
Rien de plus. Rois, je suis cet horrible inconnu
Qu’on nomme le passant et le premier venu;
Je suis la grande voix du dehors; et les choses
Que je dis, et qui font blêmir vos fronts moroses,
Sont celles qu’à vos pieds tout un peuple vivant
Rêve et pense, et qu’emporte au fond des cieux le vent.

Car lorsque je disais que les âmes sont mortes,
Tout à l’heure, et que rien ne remue à vos portes,
Et que la lâcheté publique a fait la paix
Avec votre infamie, ô rois, je me trompais.

Non, Rome vit dans Rome, et l’eau bout dans le vase.

Mais à mon âge on peut broncher dans une phrase;
Faire erreur sur un mot n’est rien; l’essentiel
C’est d’être une âme honnête et droite sous le ciel.

Donc, le moment approche où la grappe, étant mûre,
Tombera. L’heure vient. — Mais j’entends qu’on murmure.
Est-ce que par hasard ils ont imaginé
Ces princes, ces bandits compagnons d’un damné,
Ces gangrenés du mal, ces rois en qui suppure
Toute l’abjection de notre époque impure,
Que j’étais un soldat de l’humeur des valets;
Qu’en me disant : parlez, vous qui passez! j’allais
Avec la flatterie, immonde et vil dictame,
Panser complaisamment l’ulcère de leur âme;
Que moi, le vieux pisan, je courberais le front,
Et qu’ils pourraient, étant les malheureux qu’ils sont,
Ce Ranuce, ce Jean, ce Ratbert, cet Alonze,
Faire sucer leur plaie à la bouche de bronze!

Pour adorer Ratbert il faut être Ratbert;
Pour admirer Ranuce en perfidie expert
Et Jean l’homme du meurtre, il faudrait que je n’eusse
Pas plus de cœur que Jean ni d’âme que Ranuce.

Oh! laissez-moi cacher mon front sous mon manteau.
Quand me descendra-t-on dans le Campo-Santo,
Avec les trépassés augustes qu’on oublie,
Avec les chevaliers de la vieille Italie,
Loin des vivants, parmi les spectres d’Orcagna!
Pourquoi faut-il qu’à ceux que la guerre épargna
La mort vienne si tard, hélas! menant en laisse
Ces deux chiens monstrueux, la honte et la vieillesse!

Ah! jeunes gens! les ans font plier mes genoux.
Je suis triste jusqu’à la haine devant vous!
Ah! la décrépitude à l’opprobre ressemble!
Le dedans reste ferme; hélas, le dehors tremble.

Nous avons beau flétrir ces nouveaux arrivants,
Nous ne pouvons punir; nous ne sommes vivants
Que juste ce qu’il faut pour endurer l’offense.
Qu’il est dur de rentrer dans la mort par l’enfance!
Ah! c’est un grand malheur et c’est un grand dépit
D’être encore lion quand le renard glapit,
D’entendre les chacals et les bêtes funèbres
Faire leur fête horrible au milieu des ténèbres,
Et de ne pouvoir pas, étant malade et vieux,
Secouer sa crinière énorme jusqu’aux cieux!

Je vois ce qui s’écroule et je vois ce qui monte,
Ruine de la gloire et croissance de honte,
Et j’ouvre avec regret mes vieux yeux assoupis.
Et si je vais trop loin dans mes discours, tant pis!
Car je n’ai pas le temps de prendre des mesures
Du degré de respect qu’on doit à vos masures,
À vos tours, à vous, sire, et de la quantité
De mépris qui convient à votre majesté.

Ô misère, pendant que tout entiers vous êtes
Aux plaisirs, aux chansons, aux bals, aux coupe-têtes,
Aux meurtres, aux festins abjects, aux jeux brutaux,
Aux piéges qu’on se tend de châteaux à châteaux,
Ceux-ci pillant ceux-là, ceux-là tondant les autres,
Les plus sanglants disant tout bas des patenôtres,
Sournois, ayant toujours votre ami pour danger;
Pendant que vous passez votre temps à manger,

À vous soûler de vin et d’horreurs inconnues,
Regardant l’impudeur des femmes presque nues,
Contemplant aux miroirs vos malsaines pâleurs,
Vous parfumant de musc, vous couronnant de fleurs,
Et des gens que j’ai dit grossissant les prébendes,
Hélas! les sarrasins du Fraxinet, par bandes,
Infestent la Provence et le bas Dauphiné;
Humbert, dauphin de Vienne, est chez lui confiné;

Personne ne défend la marche occidentale

Où la cavalerie espagnole s’installe,
Et je ne sache pas qu’un comte ou qu’un marquis
S’en montre curieux et qu’on se soit enquis
De quels Guadalquivirs et de quelles Navarres
Sortent ces catalans et ces almogavares.
Partout l’étranger vient et de Naple aux Grisons
Montre sa pique au bord de nos noirs horizons.
Chocs, alertes, assauts, invasions soudaines;
Ils viennent de Nubie, ils viennent des Ardennes.
Au duc Welf qui, lassé de ne voir ni vaillant,
Ni prince devant lui, vous regarde en bâillant,
Quel bras opposez-vous, dites? Quel capitaine
Aux usurpations des tyrans d’Aquitaine?

Une maille de moins défait tout le tricot;
Vous n’avez plus le Var, vous n’avez plus l’Escaut.
Chaque passant arrache au vieux temple une brique.
Abraham, empereur des maures en Afrique,
Laissant derrière lui les royaumes penchés
Et saignants, et les champs de cadavres jonchés,
Approche, et le voilà qui touche à l’Italie;
Nos murs, dont le drapeau frissonnant se replie,
Chancellent, et déjà sur leur morne blancheur
Nous pouvons voir grandir l’ombre de ce faucheur.
Du sud accourt le nègre, et du nord vient le singe;
Les huns sortent velus des forêts de Thuringe;

Le spectre d’Alaric rôde et sonne du cor;
Les vieilles nations vandales sont encor
À nos portes, grinçant les dents et hurlant toutes,
Dans la Souabe, pays fauve et qui n’a pour routes
Que des sentiers perdus dans le sombre des bois.
L’empereur grec pâlit dans Byzance aux abois;
Son armée est sans duc, sa flotte est sans drungaire;
Pas d’hommes, pas d’argent; comment faire la guerre?

Toute la chrétienté le laisse sans appui;
Ce livide Andronic, entre les turcs et lui,
N’a plus qu’un bras de mer de deux milles de large;

Ce césar plie au poids du monde qui le charge;
Du toit de son palais, il voit à l’orient
Les barbares tirer leurs sabres en riant;
Son fils, Kyr Michaël, craint de livrer bataille.

Ici, quels chefs a-t-on? qui? de la valetaille.
Car vous n’obéissez qu’à plus petit que vous;
Vous avez l’orgueil bas ayant le cœur jaloux.
Princes, l’infirmité de ce croulant empire,
C’est que toujours le moindre est choisi par le pire;
Le cul-de-jatte est duc dans le camp des goîtreux.
Quant aux moines à casque, ils se battent entre eux,
Au lieu de s’occuper de notre délivrance.
Villiers de l’Ile-Adam, de la langue de France,
Guerroie Ugoccion, grand maître des portiers.

Une gorgone sort de tous ces bénitiers;
Et le pape à servir des messes utilise
Azon cinq, général des troupes de l’église.
Le peu qui nous restait des bons vieux généraux
Meurt de votre dédain aidé de vos bourreaux;
On oublie à Final don Fabrice, on expulse
Roger, on met au ban de l’empire Trivulce;
Et l’ennemi s’avance, et vous n’avez plus là
Bélisaire pour faire échec à Totila.

Tout le vieux fer romain n’est plus que de la rouille.

Deux femmes autrefois qui filaient leur quenouille,
Voyant que l’étranger enjambait le fossé,
Ont crié : guerre! et pris la pique, et l’ont chassé;
Ces deux femmes, c’étaient, autant qu’il m’en souvienne,
Auxilia de Nice, et Mahaud d’Albon-Vienne.

Fils de ces femmes-là qui battaient vos vainqueurs,
Vous avez hérité des fuseaux, non des cœurs.

Déserteurs du pays, oppresseurs de l’empire,

Le peuple est stupéfait et ne sait plus que dire
Dans le saisissement de votre lâcheté.
Que reste-t-il du ciel, rois, le soleil ôté,
Et de la terre, hélas! l’Italie éclipsée?

Voilà. Je vous ai dit à peu près ma pensée.
*

Elciis s’arrêtant, car le jour était chaud,
Dit : Je voudrais dormir. L’empereur dit : Bientôt.

IV

LE QUATRIÈME JOUR

DIEU

Le maître est insensé de peser ce qu’il pèse,
Et, parce qu’on se tait, de croire qu’on s’apaise.

Princes, sachez-le bien. Les hommes d’autrefois
Valaient mieux paysans que vous ne valez rois;
La clarté de leurs yeux gêne vos regards traîtres.
Leurs pieds font en marchant un bruit de pas d’ancêtres.
Quand, survenant du fond du vieil honneur lointain,
Un d’eux entre chez vous à l’heure du festin,
Il sent frémir autour de ses talons sévères
Le tremblement des cœurs, des glaives, et des verres.

Oui, vous êtes les nains d’un temps chétif et laid;
Que le plus grand de vous mette mon gantelet,
Je gage que son poing entrera dans le pouce.

Au rebours de l’honneur le vil instinct vous pousse.

Nous sommes les vaillants; vous, vos morts même ont peur;
L’angoisse d’un cœur faux et d’un esprit trompeur
Fait grelotter vos os; si bien que nos natures
Se distinguent encor jusqu’en nos pourritures;
Vous êtes les petits et nous sommes les bons;
Et lorsque vous tombez, et lorsque nous tombons,
La mort montre, parmi les broussailles farouches,
Nos cadavres aux loups, et les vôtres aux mouches.

Les signes de ce temps, les voici : des clairons,
Des femmes dans les camps, des plumes sur les fronts,
Des carnavals durant la moitié de l’année,
Une jeunesse folle au plaisir acharnée,
Joyeuse; et la rougeur sinistre des vieillards.

Quand deux pères rôdant le soir dans les brouillards
Se rencontrent non loin de vos éclats de rire,
Ils passent sans lever les yeux et sans rien dire.

Spectacle ténébreux qu’un peuple décroissant!
Même quand tous sont là, l’on sent quelqu’un d’absent;
C’est l’âme, c’est l’esprit sacré, c’est la patrie.
Une foule avilie, une race flétrie

Perd sa lumière ainsi qu’un bois mort perd sa fleur.
Que ce soit l’Italie ajoute à ma douleur.
La chose est surprenante et triste que des traîtres,
Des coquins, généraux de moines et de reîtres,
Puissent rapetisser lentement dans leur main
Un peuple, quand ce peuple est le peuple romain.
En lisant aux enfants l’histoire d’Agricole
Ou de Cincinnatus, les vieux maîtres d’école
S’arrêtent et n’ont pas la force d’achever.
Hélas, on voit encor les astres se lever,

L’aube sur l’Apennin jeter sa clarté douce,
L’oiseau faire son nid avec les brins de mousse,
La mer battre les rocs dans ses flux et reflux,
Mais la grandeur des cœurs c’est ce qu’on ne voit plus.

Ne croyez pas pourtant que je me décourage.
Je ne fais pas ici le bruit d’un vent d’orage
Pour n’aboutir qu’au doute et qu’à l’accablement.
Non, je vous le redis, sire, le grand dormant
S’éveillera; non, non, Dieu n’est pas mort, ô princes.
Le peuple ramassant ses tronçons, ses provinces,
Tous ses morceaux coupés par vous, pâle, effrayant,
Se dressera, le front dans la nuée, ayant
Des jaillissements d’aube aux cils de ses paupières;
Tout luira; le tocsin sonnera dans les pierres;
Tout frémira, du cap d’Otrante au mont Ventoux;
L’Italie, ô tyrans, sortira de vous tous.

De votre monstrueuse et cynique mêlée
Elle s’évadera, la belle échevelée,
En poussant jusqu’au ciel ce cri : la liberté!
Le vieil honneur tient bon et n’a pas déserté.
Pour ouvrir dans la honte ou la roche une issue,
Il suffit d’un coup d’âme ou d’un coup de massue.

Tous les peuples sont vrais, même les plus niés.
Vous vous tromperiez fort si vous imaginiez
Que Dieu permet aux rois, conseillés par le prêtre, D’éteindre la lumière auguste, et qu’il peut être
Au pouvoir de quelque homme ici-bas que ce soit
De le vaincre, et d’aller aux cieux tuer le droit.

Régnez, frappez, soyez mauvais, faites des fautes,

Faites des crimes, soit; il est des lois très hautes.
Les flots sont doute, erreur, trouble; le fond est sûr.

Sachez-le, rois d’en bas, pour que ce globe obscur,
Création fatale et sainte, rayonnante,
Puis lugubre, et de tant de souffles frissonnante,
Ne soit pas, dans l’horreur de l’abîme ignoré,
Comme un sombre navire errant désemparé,
Rois, afin que la vie, et l’être, et la nature,
Restent et n’aillent pas se perdre à l’aventure
Dans le morne océan du mystère inconnu,
Par quatre chaînes d’or le monde est retenu;
Ces chaînes sont : Raison, Foi, Vérité, Justice;
Et l’homme, en attendant que la mort l’engloutisse,
Pèse sur l’infini, sur Dieu, sur l’univers,
Et s’agite, et s’efforce, orageux, noir, pervers,
Avec ses passions folles ou criminelles,
Sans pouvoir arracher ces ancres éternelles?
*

Les yeux sous les sourcils, l’empereur très clément
Et très noble écouta l’homme patiemment,
Et consulta des yeux les rois; puis il fit signe
Au bourreau, qui saisit la hache.
— J’en suis digne,
Dit le vieillard, c’est bien, et cette fin me plaît. —
Et calme il rabattit de ses mains son collet,

Se tourna vers la hache, et dit : — Je te salue.
Maîtres, je ne suis point de la taille voulue,
Et vous avez raison. Vous, princes et vous, roi,
J’ai la tête de plus que vous, ôtez-la-moi.

VIII

LES PAYSANS

AU BORD DE LA MER

LES PAYSANS AU BORD DE LA MER

I

Les pauvres gens de la côte,
L’hiver, quand la mer est haute
Et qu’il fait nuit,
    Viennent où finit la terre
    Voir les flots pleins de mystère
    Et pleins de bruit.

    Ils sondent la mer sans bornes;
    Ils pensent aux écueils mornes
    Et triomphants;
    L’orpheline pâle et seule
    Crie : Ô mon père! et l’aïeule
    Dit : Mes enfants!

    La mère écoute et se penche;
    La veuve à la coiffe blanche
    Pleure et s’en va.
    Ces cœurs qu’épouvante l’onde
    Tremblent dans ta main profonde,
    Ô Jéhovah.

    Où sont-ils tous ceux qu’on aime?
    Elles ont peur. La nuit blême
    Cache Vénus;
    L’océan jette sa brume
    Dans leur âme, et son écume
    Sur leurs pieds nus.

    On guette, on doute, on ignore
    Ce que l’ombre et l’eau sonore

Aux durs combats
Et les rocs aux trous d'éponges,
Pareils aux formes des songes,
Disent tout bas.

L'une frémit, l'autre espère.
Le vent semble une vipère.

On pense à Dieu
Par qui l'esquif vogue ou sombre
Et qui change en gouffre d'ombre
Le gouffre bleu!

II

La pluie inonde leurs tresses.
Elles mêlent leurs détresses
Et leurs espoirs.
Toutes ces tremblantes femmes,
Hélas! font voler leurs âmes
Sur les flots noirs.

Et, selon les espérances,
Chacun voit des apparences
À l'horizon.
Le troupeau des vagues saute
Et blanchit toute la côte
De sa toison.

Et le groupe inquiet pleure.
Cet abîme obscur qu'effleure
Le goëland

Est comme une ombre vivante
Où la brebis Épouvante
Passe en bêlant.

Ah! cette mer est méchante,

Et l’affreux vent d’ouest qui chante
En troublant l’eau,
Tout en sonnant sa fanfare,
Souffle souvent sur le phare
De Saint-Malo.
III

Dans les mers il n’est pas rare
Que la foudre au lieu de phare
Brille dans l’air,
Et que sur l’eau qui se dresse
Le sloop-fantôme apparaisse
Dans un éclair.

Alors tremblez. Car l’eau jappe
Quand le vaisseau mort la frappe
De l’aviron,
Car le bois devient farouche
Quand le chasseur spectre embouche
Son noir clairon.

Malheur au chasse-marée
Qui voit la nef abhorrée!
Ô nuit! terreur!
Tout le navire frissonne,
Et la cloche, à l’avant, sonne
Avec horreur.

C’est le hollandais! la barque
Que le doigt flamboyant marque!
L’esquif puni!

C’est la voile scélérate!
C’est le sinistre pirate
De l’infini!

Il était hier au pôle

Et le voici! Tombe et geôle,
Il court sans fin.
Judas songe, sans prière,
Sur l’avant, et sur l’arrière
Rêve Caïn.

Il suffirait, pour qu’une île
Croulât dans l’onde infertile,
Qu’il y passât;
Il fuit dans la nuit damnée;
La tempête est enchaînée
À ce forçat.

Il change l’onde en hyène,
Et que veut-on que devienne
Le matelot,
Quand, brisant la lame en poudre,
L’enfer vomit dans la foudre
Ce noir brûlot?

La lugubre goëlette
Jette à travers son squelette
Un blanc rayon;
La lame devient hagarde,
L’abîme effaré regarde
La vision.

Les rocs qui gardent la terre Disent : Va-t’en, solitaire!
Démon, va-t’en!
L’homme entend de sa chaumière
Aboyer les chiens de pierre Après Satan.

Et les femmes sur la grève
Se parlent du vaisseau rêve
En frémissant;

Il est plein de clameurs vagues
Il traîne avec lui des vagues
Pleines de sang.

IV

Et l’on se conte à voix basse
Que le noir vaisseau qui passe
Est en granit,

Et qu’à son bord rien ne bouge;
Les agrès sont en fer rouge,
Le mât hennit.

Et l’on se met en prières,
Pendant que joncs et bruyères
Et bois touffus,
Vents sans borne et flots sans nombre,
Jettent dans toute cette ombre
Des cris confus.

V

Et les écueils centenaires
Rendent des bruits de tonnerres
Dans l’ouragan;
Il semble en ces nuits d’automne
Qu’un canon monstrueux tonne
Sur l’océan.

L’ombre est pleine de furie.
Ô chaos! onde ahurie,
Caps ruisselants,
Vent que les mères implorent,
Noir gouffre où s’entre-dévorent
Les flots hurlants!

Comme un fou tirant sa chaîne,
L’eau jette des cris de haine

Aux durs récifs;

Les rocs, sourds à ses huées,
Mêlent aux blêmes nuées
Leurs fronts pensifs.

La mer traîne en sa caverne
L’esquif que le flot gouverne,
Le mât détruit,
Et la barre, et la voilure
Que noue à sa chevelure
L’horrible nuit.

Et sur les sombres falaises
Les pêcheuses granvillaises
Tremblent au vent,
Pendant que tu ris sur l’onde,
De l’autre côté du monde,
Soleil levant!

IX

[

LES ESPRITS]

I

Un homme aux yeux profonds passait; un patriarche
Lui demanda : — Combien as-tu de jours de marche, Ô voyageur qui viens du côté du levant?
L’homme dit : — Je ne sais. Le vieux reprit : — Le vent,
Ô voyageur qui viens du côté de l’aurore,
T’a-t-il bien poursuivi? L’homme dit : — Je l’ignore.
Le vieillard dit : — Tu dois avoir près d’Engaddi
Trouvé la caravane allant vers le midi?
Combien de voyageurs et de bêtes de somme?
— Je n’ai rien rencontré ni rien compté, dit l’homme.
— Les hérons gris ont-ils passé dans le brouillard?
Dit le vieux. L’homme dit : — Je n’ai rien vu, vieillard.

Et le vieillard reprit : — Homme au sombre visage,
Aujourd’hui, dans ta route, as-tu selon l’usage,
Auprès de la citerne entre Édom et Gaza,
Crié trois fois le nom du saint qui la creusa?
Et l’homme répondit : — Quel saint? que veux-tu dire?
Le vieillard repartit : — Homme, est-ce de la myrrhe
Ou du baume qu’on doit en tribut envoyer
Au tétrarque Antipas pour laver son foyer
Et parfumer son lit? — Je ne sais pas, dit l’homme.
— Quoi! tu ne connais point le roi que je te nomme?
— Non. — Le vieillard reprit : — Tu ne distingues pas
Entre le lit de pourpre où se couche Antipas
Et la paille qui sert aux bêtes de litière?
— Non, dit l’homme.
Ils parlaient auprès d’un cimetière.
L’œil du vieillard tomba sur les fosses; il dit :
— Tous ces êtres, hélas! sur qui l’herbe grandit,
Étaient jadis vivants, bruyants, joyeux, utiles;
Maintenant les voilà tombés chez les reptiles,

Mangés des vers, mêlés à la terre, mêlés
À la cendre, et gisants. — Non, dit l'homme. Envolés.
Arriver au tombeau, c'est atteindre le faîte. —

Le patriarche alors reconnut un prophète,
Et murmura pensif, à voix basse, pendant
Que ce passant, doré par le rouge occident, Disparaissait au loin dans le désert sublime :
— Ô savant seulement des choses de l'abîme!

II

Un grand esprit en marche a ses rumeurs, ses houles,
Ses chocs, et fait frémir profondément les foules,
Et remue en passant le monde autour de lui.
On est épouvanté si l'on n'est ébloui;
L'homme comme un nuage erre et change de forme;
Nul, si petit qu'il soit, n'échappe au souffle énorme;
Les plus humbles, pendant qu'il parle, ont le frisson.

Ainsi quand, évadé dans le vaste horizon,
L'aquilon qui se hâte et qui cherche aventure
Tord la pluie et l'éclair, comme de sa ceinture

Une fille défait en souriant le nœud,
Quand l'immense vent gronde et passe, tout s'émeut;
Pas un brin d'herbe au fond des ravins, que ne touche
Cette rapidité formidable et farouche.

III

Autrefois, j'ai connu Ferdousi dans Mysore.
Il semblait avoir pris une flamme à l'aurore
Pour s'en faire une aigrette et se la mettre au front;
Il ressemblait aux rois que n'atteint nul affront,
Portait le turban rouge où le rubis éclate
Et traversait la ville habillé d'écarlate.

Je le revis dix ans après vêtu de noir.

Et je lui dis :
— Ô toi qu'on venait jadis voir
Comme un homme de pourpre errer devant nos portes,
Toi, le seigneur vermeil, d'où vient donc que tu portes
Cet habit noir, qui semble avec de l'ombre teint?

— C'est, me répondit-il, que je me suis éteint.

IV

LE LAPIDÉ

Celui qui parle ici marchait dans une plaine
Sombre au point qu'un sentier s'y distinguait à peine;
On entendait un bruit de foudre à l'horizon.

Il vit on ne sait quoi d'affreux dans le gazon;
Un monceau d'ossements, noir sous un tas de pierres.
Alors, lui, le marcheur qui baisse les paupières,
Il s'arrêta, sévère et triste, et dit à Dieu :
— Dieu! sous votre ciel calme et dans cet âpre lieu
Où le vent vient gronder et l'apôtre se taire,
Dans ce désert voisin d'Horeb, je vois à terre

Quelque chose qui fut un homme, et qui vivait.
C'était un mage; il eut debout à son chevet,
Tout le temps qu'il vécut, votre esprit formidable;
Et votre esprit parlait à son âme; et le sable,
Et la poussière, et l'eau qui coule du rocher,
N'ont jamais empêché ses pieds nus de marcher;
Il passait les torrents et traversait les plaines;
Il était sur la terre une de vos haleines;
Il parlait au pontife, au scribe, au juge, au roi,
Et sa bouche soufflait sur eux le vaste effroi;
Il ne ménageait pas non plus la sombre foule;
Il passait, dispersant sa parole, et la houle
A le même frisson sous la trombe, et le bois

Sous l’orage indigné, que l’homme sous sa voix.
Du moins ce fut ainsi tant que vécut ce mage.

En bas son âme, en haut l’astre, étaient du même âge,
Et le peuple à ses pieds songeait dans la cité
Quand il parlait au gouffre avec fraternité.
Si bien que maintenant le voici dans cette herbe.
Le peuple est trop obscur, le prêtre est trop superbe
Pour se laisser longtemps crier par un passant
Qu’il faut aider le faible et bénir l’innocent,
Qu’il faut craindre l’augure et son sceptre d’érable,
Mais que la vérité surtout est vénérable,
Et que les fils d’Adam doivent se dire entre eux
Qu’il s’agit d’être juste et non pas d’être heureux.
Cet homme était sublime et pur dans ses prières;
C’est pourquoi, je le dis, le voilà sous ces pierres.
Ce mage a cet amas d’affreux cailloux pour lit,
Qui le tua vivant et mort l’ensevelit.
Certes, l’arbre qui près du cadavre s’élève
A plus d’ombrage ayant à ses pieds plus de sève;
L’herbe est belle, et les vers de terre sont contents;
Les loups ont, j’en conviens, à manger pour longtemps;
L’hyène après la chair rongera le squelette;
J’entends se réjouir dans l’ombre la belette,
Et le corbeau qui hait votre soleil divin;
Et l’églantier sauvage en fleur dans ce ravin

A pu boire le sang dont ses roses sont faites.
Est-ce donc à cela que servent les prophètes?

Et Dieu lui répondit :
— D’abord, c’est à cela.
Il faut que la fleur dise à l’aube : me voilà!
L’arbre existe; il est bon que l’herbe soit épaisse
Afin que la brebis joyeuse s’en repaisse;
Le ver de terre a droit de vivre; et le vautour
Dans le banquet du jour et de l’ombre a son tour;

Le grand ordre ignoré n’exclut pas la belette
De ceux que la mamelle universelle allaite;

Et moi qui sais que tout a pour racine tout,
Que, si l’un est couché, c’est que l’autre est debout,
Que l’être naît de l’être, et sans fin se transforme,
Et que l’éternité tourne en ce cercle énorme,
Sans quoi dans l’azur noir les soleils s’éteindraient,
Je ne vois pas pourquoi les prophètes seraient
Dispensés de donner leur chair pour nourriture
À l’affamée immense et sombre, la nature.
Et puis ce lapidé sert encore à ceci :
C’est qu’il te fait songer. L’homme passe, obscurci
Par la nuit, par l’hiver, par l’ombre, et par son âme,
Car il met de la cendre où j’ai mis de la flamme;
Eh bien, puisqu’il est sourd, et puisqu’il est haineux
À ceux qu’il voit venir ayant mon souffle en eux,
Puisqu’il a son plaisir pour loi, pour dieu son ventre,
Il est bon qu’en venant de jouer dans quelque antre
Ses jours, son bien, son cœur, tout, sur un coup de dé,
Soudain il voie à terre un sage lapidé,

Et qu’il compare, ému d’une terreur sacrée,
Les cadavres qu’il fait aux esprits que je crée.

— Et, poursuivit l’Esprit immense, écoute encor.
Quand, tels que des chasseurs menant au son du cor
Leur meute dans le bois sinistre des ténèbres
Les peuples, devant eux poussant ces chiens funèbres,
Haine, Ignorance, Envie, Orgueil, Rébellion,
Ont traqué mon prophète ainsi que le lion,
Quand ils boivent le sang et le vin dans leurs salles,
Adorant, nains hideux, leurs fautes colossales,
Quand le brûleur, soufflant sur un tas de charbon,
Se dit mon prêtre, et quand le mal leur semble bon,
Les mages inspirés parlent aux multitudes,
Comme le sombre vent, du fond des solitudes,

Mais je n’ignore pas que ce n’est point assez.
Le prophète est bien grand, mais ne peut, je le sais,
Dire les mots divins qu’avec la langue humaine;
Il sied que le prodige et que le phénomène
Apparaisse, et me nomme aux peuples, oublieux
De tout ce que j’ai mis d’obscur sur les hauts lieux;

Il faut faire entrevoir à l’homme mon mystère,
L’ordre silencieux doit cesser de se taire,
Et, pour le ciel profond, c’est le moment d’avoir
La clameur rappelant les peuples au devoir;
Un avertissement farouche est nécessaire;
Votre terre a besoin qu’un verbe altier, sincère,
Innocent, prenne l’ombre effrayante à témoin;
Alors il faut quelqu’un qu’on entende de loin
Et qui parle plus haut que la voix ordinaire,
Et c’est un des emplois que je donne au tonnerre.

X

LE BEY OUTRAGÉ

Le vieux bey de la régence
Murmure en baissant le front :
Demain s’appelle vengeance
Quand hier s’appelle affront.

Lui qui creusa tant de fosses
Que, lorsqu’il passe, inclément,
Le ventre des femmes grosses
Tressaille lugubrement,

Il tient nu son cimeterre;
Pâle, il bâille par instants;
Puis il regarde la terre Comme s’il disait : Attends.

Il rêve. On sent qu’il résiste
Comme le pin des forêts,
Et qu’il sera d’abord triste
Pour être terrible après.

Ses regards sont insondables;
Son glaive dans ses yeux luit;
Ses paupières formidables,
Où passe un éclair de nuit,

Laissent, sans qu’il les essuie,
Tomber sur son yatagan
Ces larges gouttes de pluie
Qui précèdent l’ouragan.

XI

LA CHANSON

DES DOREURS DE PROUES

Nous sommes les doreurs de proues.
Les vents, tournant comme des roues,
Sur la verte rondeur des eaux
Mêlent les lueurs et les ombres,
 Et dans les plis des vagues sombres
 Traînent les obliques vaisseaux.

La bourrasque décrit des courbes,
Les vents sont tortueux et fourbes,
L’archer noir souffle dans son cor,
Ces bruits s’ajoutent aux vertiges,
Et c’est nous qui dans ces prodiges
Faisons rôder des spectres d’or,

Car c’est un spectre que la proue.
Le flot l’étreint, l’air la secoue;
Fière, elle sort de nos bazars
Pour servir aux éclairs de cible,
Et pour être un regard terrible
Parmi les sinistres hasards.

Roi, prends le frais sous les platanes;
Sultan, sois jaloux des sultanes,
Et tiens sous des voiles caché
L’essaim des femmes inconnues
Qu’hier on vendait toutes nues
À la criée en plein marché;

Qu’importe au vent! qu’importe à l’onde!
Une femme est noire, une est blonde,
L’autre est d’Alep ou d’Ispahan;
Toutes tremblent devant ta face;
Et que veut-on que cela fasse
Au mystérieux océan?

Vous avez chacun votre fête;
Sois le prince, il est la tempête,
Lui l’éclair, toi l’yatagan,
Vous avez chacun votre glaive;
Sous le sultan le peuple rêve,
Le flot songe sous l’ouragan.

Nous travaillons pour l’un et l’autre.
Cette double tâche est la nôtre,
Et nous chantons! Ô sombre émir,

Tes yeux d’acier, ton cœur de marbre,
N’empêchent pas le soir dans l’arbre
Les petits oiseaux de dormir;

Car la nature est éternelle
Et tranquille, et Dieu sous son aile
Abrite les vivants pensifs.
Nous chantons dans l’ombre sereine
Des chansons où se mêle à peine
La vision des noirs récifs.

Nous laissons aux maîtres les palmes
Et les lauriers; nous sommes calmes
Tant qu’ils n’ont pas pris dans leur main
Les étoiles diminuées,
Tant que la fuite des nuées
Ne dépend pas d’un souffle humain.

L’été luit, les fleurs sont écloses,
Les seins blancs ont des pointes roses,
On chasse, on rit, les ouvriers
Chantent, et les moines s’ennuient;
Les vagues biches qui s’enfuient
Font tressaillir les lévriers.

Oh! s’il fallait que tu t’emplisses,
Sultan, de toutes les délices
Qui t’environnent, tu mourrais.
Vis et règne, — la vie est douce.
Le chevreuil couché sur la mousse
Fait des songes dans les forêts;

Monter ne sert qu’à redescendre;
Tout est flamme, puis tout est cendre;

La tombe dit à l’homme : vois!
Le temps change, les oiseaux muent,
Et les vastes eaux se remuent,
Et l’on entend passer des voix;

L’air est chaud, les femmes se baignent,
Les fleurs entre elles se dédaignent;
Tout est joyeux, tout est charmant,
Des blancheurs dans l’eau se reflètent;
Les roses des bois se complètent
Par les astres du firmament.

Ta galère que nous dorâmes
A soixante paires de rames
Qui de Lépante à Moganez
Domptent le vent et la marée,
Et dont chacune est manœuvrée
Par quatre forçats enchaînés.

XII

TÉNÈBRES

TÉNÈBRES

I

L’homme est humilié de son lot; il se croit
Fait pour un ciel plus pur, pour un sort moins étroit;
L’homme ne trouve pas de sa dignité d’être
Malade, las, souffrant, errant sans rien connaître,
Pareil au bœuf qui mange, au bouc qui s’assouvit,
Poudreux d’un pas qu’il fait, souillé d’un jour qu’il vit,
Fatigué du seul poids de l’heure vaine, esclave
Du lit qui le repose et du bain qui le lave;
Il s’irrite, il s’indigne; il se déclare enfin
Avili par la soif, insulté par la faim.
Hélas! vieillir, trembler comme une feuille d’arbre,
Se refroidir, sentir ses os devenir marbre,
Après des songes noirs avoir de froids réveils,
Quel sort! et l’homme pleure.
— Eh, disent les soleils,

Qu’est-ce donc que veut l’homme? et quelle est sa folie?
Le joug universel le comprime et le lie;
Eh bien? que lui faut-il et de quoi se plaint-il?
L’être le plus grossier, l’être le plus subtil
Sont courbés comme lui par la force invisible.
Insensé, qui voudrait étreindre l’impossible
Dans les crispations débiles de son poing!
Il ne sait point que l’être est un; il ne sait point
Que le mystère obscur couvre tout de sa brume;
Que les vagues de l’ombre ont une affreuse écume
À qui nul front n’échappe, éblouissant ou noir,
Et que tout ce qui vit est fait pour recevoir
L’éclaboussure énorme et sombre de l’abîme.
Il trouve son destin trop humble et trop infime;

Il se sent abaissé par ce ciel écrasant,
Eh! c’est la loi commune, et rien n’en est exempt.
Il hait la cause; il garde à l’infini rancune;
Il voudrait être clair, limpide, sans aucune
De ces obscurités qui s’expliquent plus tard,
Que nous nommons énigme et qu’il nomme hasard;
Il se rêve complet, sans tache, sans problème,
Portant sur son front l’aube ainsi qu’un diadème.
Pur, lumineux, serein, parfait, calme; il voudrait
Être seul en dehors de l’effrayant secret.

Quoi! tout ce qui naît, vit, s’allume, se consomme,
Brille et meurt, ce serait pour aboutir à l’homme!
L’homme serait le but du splendide univers!
Mais que dirait la cendre et que diraient les vers?
Quoi! la création aurait pour toute fête
Et pour tout horizon d’avoir l’homme à son faîte!
Dieu serait pour l’atome un piédestal d’orgueil!
Non! l’homme souffre et rampe; il est son propre écueil;
Il tremble et tombe; il sent peser sur lui sans cesse
Son âme en ignorance et sa chair en bassesse;
Il est triste le soir et triste le matin;
Il tâte en vain le cercle où tourne son destin;
L’astre qu’il porte en lui suit une obscure ellipse;
La matière le voile et le sommeil l’éclipse;
Son berceau cache un gouffre ainsi que son cercueil;
C’est que tout a son crêpe et que tout a son deuil!
Eh! ne sommes-nous pas humiliés nous-même,
Nous les soleils, les feux du firmament suprême,
Quand l’ombre ouvre l’abîme où nous nous engouffrons :
Avec les sombres nuits, ces immenses affronts! —

II

La nuit! la nuit! la nuit! Et voilà que commence
Le noir de profundis de l’océan immense.
Le marin tremble, aux flots livré;

Miserere, dit l’homme; et, dans le ciel qui gronde,
L’air dit : miserere! Miserere, dit l’onde;
Miserere! miserere!

Le dolmen, dont l’ortie ensevelit les tables,
Pousse un soupir; les morts se dressent lamentables.
Gémissent-ils? écoutent-ils?
La jusquiame affreuse entr’ouvre ses corolles;
La mandragore laisse échapper des paroles
De ses mystérieux pistils.

Qu’a-t-on fait à la ronce et qu’a-t-on fait à l’arbre?
Qu’ont-ils donc à pleurer? Pour qui l’antre de marbre
Verse-t-il ces larmes d’adieux?
Sont-ce les noirs Caïns d’une faute première?
Deuil! ils ont la souffrance et n’ont pas la lumière!
Ils ont des pleurs et n’ont pas d’yeux!

Le navire se plaint comme un homme qui souffre,
Le tuyau grince et fume, et le flot qui s’engouffre
Blanchit les tambours du steamer,
Le crabe, le dragon, l’orphe aux larges ouïes,
Nagent dans l’ombre où rampe en formes inouïes
La vie horrible de la mer.

Le hallier crie; il semble, à travers l’âpre bise,
Qu’on entende hurler Nemrod, Sylla, Cambyse,
Rongés du ver et du corbeau,
Et sortir, dans l’orage et la brume et la haine,
Des froids caveaux où sont les damnés à la chaîne,
Les rugissements du tombeau.

Est-il quelqu’un qui cherche? est-il quelqu’un qui rêve?
Est-il quelqu’un qui marche à l’heure où sur la grève
Rôdent le spectre et l’assassin,
Et qui sache, ô vivants! pourquoi sanglote et râle
La forêt, monstrueuse et fauve cathédrale,

Où le vent sonne le tocsin?

On entend vous parler à l’oreille des bouches;
On voit dans les clartés des branchages farouches
Où passent de mornes convois;
Le vent, bouleversant l’arbre aux cimes altières,
Emplit de tourbillons les blêmes cimetières;
Quelle est donc cette étrange voix?

Quel est ce psaume énorme et que rien ne fait taire?
Et qui donc chante, avec les souffles de la terre,
Avec le murmure des cieux,
Avec le tremblement de la vague superbe,
Les joncs, les eaux, les bois, le sifflement de l’herbe,
Le requiem mystérieux?

Ô sépulcres! j’entends l’orgue effrayant de l’ombre,
Formé de tous les cris de la nature sombre
Et du bruit de tous les écueils;
La mort est au clavier qui frémit dans les branches,
Et les touches, tantôt noires et tantôt blanches,
Sont vos pierres et vos cercueils.

III

L’homme se trompe! Il voit que pour lui tout est sombre;
Il tremble et doute; il croit à la haine de l’ombre;
Son œil ne s’ouvre qu’à demi;
Il dit : — Ne suis-je pas le damné de la terre,
Lugubre atome, ayant l’immensité pour guerre
Et l’univers pour ennemi? —

S’il regarde la vie, elle est aussi le gouffre.
Toute l’histoire pleure et saigne et crie et souffre;
Tous les purs flambeaux sont éteints;
Morus après Caton dans le cirque se couche;
Le genre humain assiste au pugilat farouche

Des grands cœurs et des noirs destins.

L’énigme universelle est proposée à l’âme,
L’âme cherche; la terre et l’eau, l’air et la flamme
Font le mal, triste vision!

Le vent, la mer, la nuit sont pris en forfaiture;
Hélas! que comprend-on? Peu de la créature,
Et rien de la création.

Les faits, qui sont muets et qui semblent funèbres,
Surgissent au regard comme un bloc de ténèbres,
Et rien n’éclaire et rien ne luit;
L’horizon est de l’ombre où l’ombre se prolonge,
Où se dresse, devant l’humanité qui songe,
Toute une montagne de nuit.

Le sombre sphinx Nature, accroupi sur la cime,
Rêve, pétrifiant de son regard d’abîme
Le mage aux essors inouïs.
Tout le groupe pensif des blêmes Zoroastres,
Les guetteurs de soleils et les espions d’astres,
Les effarés, les éblouis,

Il semble à tout ce tas d’Œdipes qui frissonne
Que l’ouragan, clairon des nuages qui sonne,
La comète, horreur du voyant,
L’hiver, la mort, l’éclair, l’onde affreuse et vivante,
Tout ce que le mystère et l’ombre ont d’épouvante
Sorte de cet œil effrayant.

La nuit autour du sphinx roule tumultueuse. —
Si l’on pouvait lever sa patte monstrueuse,
Que contemplèrent tour à tour
Newton, l’esprit d’hier, et l’antique Mercure,
Sous la paume sinistre et sous la griffe obscure
On trouverait ce mot : Amour.

XIII

L’AMOUR

I

L’AMOUR

Quoi! le libérateur qui par degrés desserre
La double chaîne noire, ignorance et misère,
Le balayeur qui jette au vent le préjugé,
Quoi! l’immense marcheur, jamais découragé,
Le Progrès, qui de flamme éblouit le vulgaire,
Détrône l’échafaud et musèle la guerre,
Qui fait avec les mœurs des ratures aux lois,
Change en romain l’étrusque, en français le gaulois,
Crée et brise, sans cesse use l’un contre l’autre
Les mensonges, et va, rapide et ferme apôtre,
Lui, dont la chaude haleine émeut l’homme troublé,
Quoi! lui, le destructeur flamboyant, étoilé,
De l’antique caverne et de l’antique geôle,
Il n’a pu fondre encor la glace que d’un pôle!
Quoi! celles qui de l’âme élèvent le niveau
Et qui n’ont qu’à passer pour faire un ciel nouveau,
Quoi! du pur idéal ces comètes errantes,
Ces guerrières du bien, ces vastes conquérantes,
Les révolutions, archanges de clarté,
N’ont mis que la moitié de l’homme en liberté!

L’autre est encore aux fers, et c’est la plus divine.
Doux oiseaux qui chantez là-bas dans la ravine,
Quand donc lèvera-t-on l’écrou du triste amour?

Ô rossignol de l’ombre, alouette du jour,
Vous, gais pillards des blés, des seigles et des orges,
Moineaux, vous, amoureux de l’azur, rouges-gorges,
Fauvettes qui planez de l’aube jusqu’au soir,
C’est pour vous, n’est-ce pas? une douleur de voir

Que la porte de l’air s’est brusquement fermée
Au moment où les cœurs à travers la ramée
S’envolaient, tendre essaim vers le ciel bleu poussé,
Et que la vieille cage horrible du passé,
Où toujours notre effort retombe et nous ramène,
Tient par une aile encor cette pauvre âme humaine!
Ô libres oiseaux, fiers, charmants, purs, sans ennuis,
Vous dites à l’aurore, aux fleurs, à l’astre, aux nuits :
— Est-ce qu’on ne peut pas aimer quand on est homme?

Et l’aube où Dieu se montre, et l’astre où Dieu se nomme,
La nuit qui fait tomber ses soupirs les plus doux
Du nid des rossignols dans le trou des hiboux,

Les fleurs dont les parfums dans les rayons se fondent,
Et les herbes, les eaux, les pierres vous répondent,
D’une si douce voix qu’on ne peut l’exprimer :
— Ô bons petits oiseaux, tout est fait pour aimer!

II

Regardez-les jouer sur le sable accroupis,
Ou sur l’herbe, au milieu des fleurs, tendre tapis;

L’un traîne la charrette et l’autre tient la pelle.
Le paradis leur parle et l’hymen les appelle.
Six ans donne parfois une tape à trois ans.
Puis l’âge vient, on marche, ô frais sentiers glissants!
Elle a six ans, il a neuf ans; on se marie;
L’aurore et le printemps sont en coquetterie;
Les moineaux dans les bois font des choses entre eux
Qui changent deux enfants dans l’ombre en amoureux.
Encore un an, ou deux; les filles sont farouches
Tout à coup, disent non, et sentent sur leur bouche
L’éclosion charmante et sombre du baiser;
Ô mères, prenez garde! Éros vient se poser
Dans les cœurs; fauve oiseau, sans loi, sans frein, sans règle,
Qui commence en colombe et finit comme l’aigle.

N’importe! c’est exquis. Cupidon est Bébé;
Pyrame ne sait pas de quel sexe est Thisbé,
Et Bérénice joue au volant avec Tite.
Bel âge, où l’idylle est encor toute petite!

III

Il faut boire et frapper la terre d’un pied libre!
Dit Horace; et la chose est vraie aux bords du Tibre,
Vraie aux bords de la Seine; et songeons aux amours,
Maintenant, dit Horace, et moi je dis : Toujours!
Amis! amis! amis! soyons tous frères! gloire
À la beauté, vêtue ou non! Va-t’en, nuit noire!
La jeune année arrive avec l’aurore au front,
Remet le temps à neuf, court d’un pas leste et prompt
Lave le ciel, sourit à la terre engourdie,
Et commence gaîment, par une mélodie,
Le printemps. Chantez, nids! Ô fleurs, dans les fossés,
Les ravins, les étangs, les bois, les champs, croissez!
Boutons d’or que j’ai vus jadis aux Feuillantines,
Renaissez! Fourmillez, liserons, églantines,

Pâquerettes, iris, muguets, lilas, jasmins!
Le petit enfant mai frappe dans ses deux mains.
Allons, dépêchez-vous de naître, il vous appelle.
Il veut parer la terre ainsi qu’une chapelle,
Et mettre une guirlande autour du genre humain.
Avril s’appelle Amour et juin s’appelle Hymen,
Le fruit suivra la fleur. Faisons des nids, fauvettes!
La jeune fille rêve et rit quand vous en faites.
Donnez l’exemple, oiseaux! les vierges aux yeux doux
Vous regardent, ayant des ailes comme vous.
J’erre; un vent tiède émeut les bois, je vois les scènes
Que font les pauvres fleurs aux papillons obscènes;
Le lys vers le bourdon se penche, et, l’écoutant,
A l’air de s’écrier : Ah! vous m’en direz tant!
L’ombre a le tremblement sonore d’une tente
Et cache les amours; la nature est contente;

Et la fécondité fermente; et les appas,

Les soupirs, les baisers, ne s’inquiètent pas
Si quelque orage couve, et si cette gorgone,
La foudre, au loin, là-bas, à l’horizon bougonne.
Le vallon fleuri semble un encensoir fumant.
Quelqu’un a mis le feu partout, l’embrasement
Va de l’arbre au nuage et du ciel à la terre;
La prairie a l’éclat glorieux d’un cratère,
Partout des fleurs de pourpre, et tout flambe et tout luit,
Et la création bouillonnant à grand bruit
Bout tout entière ainsi qu’une eau dans la chaudière,
Et tout rit, le soleil étant l’incendiaire.
Oh! quelle vaste joie en cet abîme bleu!
À toute cette aurore il faudra dire adieu.
Hélas! cela finit par s’éteindre, une fête!
Nous n’y consentons pas, on détourne la tête,
À chaque heure qui passe on veut se retenir.
Mais rien ne ralentit le pas de l’avenir,
Il ne demande pas la permission d’être,
Il vient. Souvenons-nous que demain est un traître,
Et, puisque nous avons Aujourd’hui, jouissons.
L’eau qui fuit en chantant nous donne des leçons;
Fuyons, mais chantons. L’air est plein de senteurs douces
Un ensemencement de fleurs couvre les mousses.
L’homme est ombre; on ne peut guère dire pourquoi
Nous sommes sur la terre. Eh bien, je le dis, moi,

C’est pour aimer. Et Dieu nous a créés pour faire
Éclore un peu d’amour sur cette obscure sphère
Et pour faire lever un astre dans nos cœurs.
Être deux, c’est la loi. Les merles, ces moqueurs,
L’observent aussi bien que le ramier fidèle.
Si la nature, avec de si puissants coups d’aile,
Remue éperdument et partout à la fois
La vie au fond des mers, des cieux, des champs, des bois,
C’est afin d’arriver à son but, faire un couple.

Si le chêne est solide et si la branche est souple,
C'est parce que le nid a besoin dans l'azur
Que le rameau soit tendre, et que l'arbre soit sûr.
L'ombre en son innocence énorme a le satyre.
L'homme cherche, la vierge attend, la femme attire;
Léandre veut Héro, Manon veut Desgrieux;
Sachez cela, vous tous, vivants mystérieux.
Paix aux cœurs douloureux et joie aux fronts moroses!
Quel tourbillonnement éblouissant de roses!

IV

EN GRÈCE!

Écoute, si tu veux, puisque nous nous aimons,
Nous allons tous les deux fuir par delà les monts;
Nous irons sous le ciel de Grèce, où sont les muses.
Tu verras, toi qu'un rien charme, toi qui t'amuses
Du vol d'un papillon, comment les aigles font
Quand ils planent autour du firmament profond;
Tu verras par moments le fronton blanc d'un temple,
Avec la modestie auguste de l'exemple,
Se montrer à demi derrière un bois vermeil;
Tu verras l'aloès étaler au soleil
Des petits lacs de pluie aux pointes de ses feuilles;
Toi qui souvent, pensive et pure, te recueilles,
Toi qui soupires, toi qui songes, toi qui vois,
Tu prêteras l'oreille à de sauvages voix,
Et tu te pencheras sur des échos sublimes;
Car c'est l'altier pays des gouffres et des cimes,

Belle, et le cœur de l'homme y devient oublieux
De tout ce qui n'est pas l'aurore et les hauts lieux;
Et tu seras bien là, toi radieuse et fière;
Tu seras à mon ombre et moi dans ta lumière.

Viens; devant la splendeur de cet horizon bleu,

Nous sentirons en nous croître dans l’ombre un dieu;
Viens, nous nous aimerons dans ces fiers paysages
Comme s’aimaient jadis les belles et les sages,
Comme Socrate aimait Aspasie aux seins nus,
Comme Eschyle, le chantre immense, aimait Vénus,
Dans l’extase sereine et sainte, dans l’ivresse,
L’héroïsme, la joie et l’espoir; car la Grèce,
Terre où dans le réel l’idéal se confond,
Seule, a de ces amours, avec l’Olympe au fond.
Oh! l’amour, le superbe amour, c’est le mystère!
Dieu manquerait au ciel s’il manquait à la terre,
Car la création n’est qu’un vaste baiser;
Aimer, c’est le moyen de Dieu pour apaiser.
C’est le cœur qui nous crée et l’âme qui nous sauve;
Car l’hostie et l’hymen, et l’autel et l’alcôve

Ont chacun un rayon sacré du même jour;
La prière est la sœur tremblante de l’amour;
Qui prie adore; aimer, c’est prier une femme;
Les deux lumières sont au fond la même flamme.
Belle au tendre regard, ce que nous demandons
Aux baisers, aux transports brûlants, aux abandons
S’achevant en sommeil dans les bras l’un de l’autre
C’est ce que demandait aux tonnerres l’apôtre,
C’est ce que dans Tharsis, dans Thèbes, dans Ombos,
Le prophète éperdu demandait aux tombeaux,
La révélation, l’éternité, la vie!
À la suite d’une âme être une âme ravie,
Sentir l’être sacré frémir dans l’être cher,
Apercevoir un astre à travers une chair,
Voir à travers le cœur humain l’âme divine,
Achever ce qu’on voit avec ce qu’on devine,
C’est croire, c’est aimer. Par Ève l’homme naît.
La femme est vers le ciel tournée, et ce qui n’est
Que parfum dans la rose est encens dans la femme.
Adorons.
Nous irons au pays du dictame,

Du laurier, et de l’arbre à palmes, cher aux dieux;

Lieux bénis où le vent reste mélodieux
À force d’avoir mis son souffle dans les lyres.
Ô femme, ô fier œil noir qui m’emplis de délires,
Viens montrer à ce ciel de Grèce ton éclair,
Viens montrer à Paros le marbre de ta chair;
Toi, la Vénus nouvelle, à la Vénus ancienne
Viens te comparer! Toi, cette parisienne
Céleste, qui s’habille avec un goût profond,
Qui livre et cache, donne et reprend, sait à fond L’art de la transparence enivrante, et câline
Mes yeux ardents avec la blanche mousseline,
Belle, viens compléter Athène avec Paris.

Ô toi qui souffres, plains, consoles et souris,
Je t’aime. Tu me fais l’effet d’une harmonie
Éclose d’on ne sait quelle harpe infinie.
N’es-tu pas l’esprit simple et calme? N’as-tu pas
Un rythme obscur et doux dans chacun de tes pas?
Galatée est lascive et Lesbie impudique;
Toi, même au bain, jamais ta chasteté n’abdique;

Ta beauté tremble et flotte au gré du flot mouvant,
Mais tu fuis si le bruit des feuilles dans le vent
Éveille le souci de pudeur qui t’obsède,
Et toute l’épaisseur de l’eau te vient en aide
Ainsi qu’une nuée au secours d’un rayon;
Naïade, tu craindrais un regard d’alcyon.
Tu dis : Mon cœur demeure innocent, puisqu’on m’aime!
Rien ne peut te ternir, ô pur albâtre; et, même
Dans les ravissements de l’amour accepté,
Tu restes la candeur, étant la volupté.
Parfois tu viens, muette et grave, sous l’yeuse
T’asseoir, puis te voilà subitement joyeuse,
Tu te mets à chanter quelque chanson d’enfant,
Et j’écoute, attendri, ton rire triomphant.

Oh! quel être charmant que celui qui varie
Tantôt son enjouement jusqu’à la rêverie,
Tantôt son chant plaintif jusqu’au refrain railleur,
Et qui, soudain, quittant pour le hallier en fleur
L’empyrée où l’esprit en plein azur s’enfonce,
Terrestre et cependant aérien, renonce
Au vol de l’ange et prend les ailes de l’oiseau!
Ta taille a la souplesse aimable du roseau;

Une lueur errante emplit ton sourcil sombre,
Comme si l’âme allait et venait dans cette ombre;
Il semble que Dieu met un ange à ton côté;
Tu m’éblouis; parfois je crois, fleur de beauté,
Entendre autour de toi des murmures d’abeille.
Quand près de moi tu viens, apportant ta corbeille,
Comme dans leur vieux cloître autrefois les nonnains,
Faire un tas de petits chefs-d’œuvre féminins,
Je t’admire, et je crois voir l’aube qui se lève.
On a beau tout rêver, tu dépasses le rêve;
Ton œil promet l’amour, ton cœur donne le ciel.
Tu passes dans la vie, humble, sans peur, sans fiel,
Sans faire de reproche à l’ombre, toi l’étoile.
Une musique sort, comme à travers un voile,
De ta beauté naïve et farouche à la fois;
Ta grâce est comme un luth qui vibre au fond du bois;
Tu sembles une note adorable ajoutée
Au concert qu’ici-bas l’âme écoute enchantée;
Car la femme est de tout le divin complément,
Car dans l’hymne éternel rien n’est faux, rien ne ment,
Et la nature, voix profonde, chante juste.

Viens, nous habiterons un coin de terre auguste

Que je connais; un fleuve est dans ce paradis,
C’est le Diras, torrent superbe, qui jadis
Sortit de terre afin de secourir Hercule;
Puis, jusqu’à l’horizon si le regard recule,

On voit le Sperchius, sorti des mêmes monts
Que le Diras, hanté par les mêmes démons,
Qui serpente et qui va se perdre aux mers de Crète,
Puis Thélos, devant qui le tonnerre s’arrête,
Car c’est là qu’autrefois, fronçant leurs noirs sourcils,
Les grands amphictyons songeaient, en cercle assis.

XIV

RUPTURE

AVEC CE QUI AMOINDRIT

XIV

RUPTURE AVEC CE QUI AMOINDRIT

Trêve à toutes ces vaines choses!
Vous êtes dans l’ombre, sortons.
Sans vous brouiller avec les roses,
Évadez-vous des Jeannetons.

Enfuyez-vous de ces drôlesses.
Derrière ces bonheurs changeants
Se dressent de pâles vieillesses
Qui menacent les jeunes gens.

Crains Manon qui te tend son verre;
Crains le grenier où l’on est bien.
Perse, à l’alcôve de Néère,
Préférait l’autan libyen.

Ami, ta vie est mansardée,
À ce petit ciel bas, plafond

De la volupté sans idée,
Les âmes se heurtent le front.

Le temps déforme la jeunesse
Comme un vieux décor d’opéra.
Gare à vous! c’est par l’ivrognesse
Que la bacchante finira.

L’églogue serait indignée,
Dans vos noirs galetas sans jour,
De voir des toiles d’araignée
Au bout des ailes de l’amour.

Le houx sacré, frère du lierre,
Que cueillait Plaute au fond des bois,
À Margoton trop familière
Eût dans l’ombre piqué les doigts.

L’antique muse tiburtine
Baisait les fleurs, le jasmin pur,
Le lys, et n’était libertine
Qu’avec les rayons, dans l’azur.

Vous avez autre chose à faire
Que d’engloutir votre raison
Dans la chanson qu’Anna préfère
Et dans le vin que boit Suzon.

Il est temps d’avoir d’autres fièvres
Que de voir se coiffer, le soir,
Lise, une épingle entre les lèvres,
Éblouissement d’un miroir.

Frère, l’heure folle est passée.
Debout, frère! il est peu séant
D’attarder l’œil de sa pensée
À la figure du néant.

Laisse là Fanchon et Fanchette!
Fermons les jours faux et charmants.
L’honneur d’être un homme s’achète
Par ces graves renoncements.

Les amourettes énervantes
Fatiguent, sans les émouvoir,
Les âmes, ces grandes servantes
De la justice et du devoir.

Viens aux champs! les champs sont sévères

Et pensifs plus que tu ne crois;
Les monts font songer aux calvaires,
Les arbres font songer aux croix.

Oublions les soupers, les veilles,
Le vin, le brelan, l’écarté!
Viens noyer ton cœur aux merveilles
De l’immense sérénité!

Fuyez; prenez votre volée.
Un peu plus et nous traînerons

Notre rauque idylle éculée
Dans le ruisseau des Porcherons.

Ouvrez les ailes de vos âmes;
Enfoncez le toit s’il le faut,
Les révélations, les flammes,
Et les ouragans sont là-haut.

Levez vos cœurs, levez vos têtes.
Allez où l’on a sur le front
Le vaste espace, les tempêtes,
Les étoiles, et pas d’affront.

Vous êtes faits comme les lyres,
Et pleins d’altiers frémissements;
De profonds et vagues sourires
Vous appellent aux firmaments.

Viens, nous lirons les livres sombres
Des penseurs et des combattants,
Pendant que Dieu fera des ombres
Et des clartés dans le printemps.

Nous scruterons les maux, les guerres,
Et le creux fatal qu’a laissé

Le pied tragique de nos pères
Dans l’âpre fange du passé.

Nous examinerons les songes,
L’autel, les korans, les clergés,
Les spectres mêlés aux mensonges,
Les dieux mêlés aux préjugés.

Molière, au fourbe ôtant sa guimpe,
Mina Bossuet comme il put;
Pascal frappa; Swift à l’Olympe
Offrit ce miroir, Lilliput.

Nous regarderons sur la terre
Ce tas d’erreurs que Beaumarchais
Rabelais, Diderot, Voltaire,
Ont remué de leurs crochets.

Nous saluerons ces Diogènes
De la raison et du bon sens;
Nous entendrons tomber les chaînes
Derrière ces divins passants.

Ô France, grâce à ces sceptiques,
Tu voyais le fond; tu trouvais

Des ordures sous les portiques
Et sous les dogmes des forfaits.

Ces puissants balayeurs d’étable
Ont fait un lion d’un baudet;
Dans leur cynisme redoutable
Un tonnerre profond grondait.

Sur l’homme dans l’ignominie
Ils jetaient leur rude gaîté,

Sachant que c’est à l’ironie
Que commence la liberté.

Dieu fait précéder, quand il change
En victime, hélas, le bourreau,
L’effrayant glaive de l’archange
Par le rasoir de Figaro.

La comédie amère et saine
Fait entrer Méduse en sortant;
Quand Beaumarchais est sur la scène
Danton dans la coulisse attend.

Les railleurs sous leur joug lugubre
Consolent les âges de fer;

Leur éclat de rire salubre
Déconcerte l’antique enfer.

Ils ont fait l’interrogatoire
Farouche, à travers le bâillon,
Des religions par l’histoire,
De la pourpre par le haillon.

Durs au bigot, fatals au cuistre,
Ils promènent à petit bruit
Une lueur gaie et sinistre
Dans le grand bagne de la nuit.

Escobar est le chat qui rôde
Et fuit, mais Voltaire est le lynx.
Ils font, sans pitié pour la fraude,
Rire la Gaule au nez du sphinx.

Ces douteurs ont frayé nos routes,
Et sont si grands sous le ciel bleu
Qu’à cette heure, grâce à leurs doutes

On peut enfin affirmer Dieu!

Leur rouge lanterne nous mène.
Ces contemplateurs du pavé,
En fouillant la guenille humaine,
Cherchaient le peuple, et l’ont trouvé.

Ils ont, dans la nuit où nous sommes,
Retrouvé la raison, les droits,
L’égalité volée aux hommes,
En vidant les poches des rois.

Ils ont fait, moqueurs nécessaires,
Et plus exacts que Mézeray,
De la torsion des misères
Tomber goutte à goutte le vrai.

Ils ont nié la vieille bible;
Ces guérisseurs, ces factieux
Ont fait cette chose terrible :
L’ouverture de tous les yeux.

Ils ont, sur la cime vermeille,
Montré l’aurore au genre humain;
Ils ont été la grande veille
Du formidable lendemain.

La révolution française
C’est le salut, d’horreur mêlé.
De la tête de Louis seize,
Hélas! la lumière a coulé.

XV

LES PAROLES

DE MON ONCLE

XV

LES

PAROLES DE MON ONCLE

LA SŒUR DE CHARITÉ

J’avais vingt ans, j’étais criblé de coups de lance,
On me porta sanglant et pâle à l’ambulance.
On me fit un lit d’herbe, on me déshabilla.
J’avais sur moi des vers; j’étais, dans ce temps-là,
Poëte, comme Horace amoureux de Barine.
Les lances qui m’avaient fort piqué la poitrine
Avaient aussi troué mes quatrains à Chloris.
Tout manquait; on n’est pas soigné comme à Paris
Dans ces vieilles forêts du pays de Thuringe;
Le chirurgien dit : — Nous n’avons pas de linge.
Il lut mes vers et dit : — C’est un payen, je crois.

La sœur de charité fit un signe de croix.
Et le docteur reprit : — Pas de linge! que faire? —
Ah! cette guerre était grande, et je la préfère
À votre paix. Quel temps! je suis un des témoins.
J’ai des grades de plus et des cheveux de moins,
Le vieux général songe au jeune capitaine;
Et l’envie. Ah! l’aurore est charmante, et lointaine! —
Donc je perdais mon sang, j’étais évanoui.
J’étais jeune, blessé, mourant, mais vivant; oui,
Très vivant! Le docteur disait : — La mort est sûre
Si l’on ne parvient pas à bander la blessure;
Du linge! ou dans une heure il est mort! — Cependant
Il partit. La bataille autour de nous grondant,

Pleine de chocs, de meurtre et d’ombre, et des haleines
De l’immense agonie éparse dans les plaines,
L’appelait de sa voix formidable au secours;
On ne donne aux blessés que des instants très courts.
J’étais seul, et mon flanc saignait, et mon épaule
Ruisselait, et la sœur de Saint-Vincent de Paule,
Très jeune, pâle, et rose à travers sa pâleur,
Me veillait. Elle dit : — Sauvons-le! quel malheur!
S’il mourait, il serait damné, ce pauvre impie! —
Elle arracha sa guimpe et fit de la charpie.
Tout entière à ses soins pour le jeune inconnu,
Elle ne voyait pas que son sein était nu,
Moi, je rouvrais les yeux... — Ô muses de Sicile,
Dire à quoi je pensais, ce serait difficile!

XVI

VICTORIEUX OU MORT

XVI

VICTORIEUX OU MORT

Une telle promesse étant faite à l’abîme,
On attend la lueur d’une action sublime
Et, s’en croyant déjà vaguement éclairé,
Le peuple bat des mains. — Va donc, hélas! — J’irai,
Dit-il, et reviendrai vainqueur ou mort.
La plaine
De tous les grondements de la bataille est pleine.
Soldats, sabres au vent! histoire, sois témoin!
Dans la vaste fumée il disparaît au loin.
Et la journée est longue et la mêlée est noire.

Il revient! — Cueillez tous des palmes! hurrah! gloire!
Le peuple, à saluer les nobles têtes prompt,
Accourt. — France! il revient, c’est un laurier au front,
Ou, comme Franceschi qu’on rapporta naguère,
Couché tout de son long sous son manteau de guerre!
C’est un grand nom de plus au livre d’or inscrit... —

Et la victoire pleure, et le sépulcre rit.

XVII

LE CERCLE DES TYRANS

I

LIBERTÉ!

De quel droit mettez-vous des oiseaux dans des cages?

De quel droit ôtez-vous ces chanteurs aux bocages,
Aux sources, à l’aurore, à la nuée, aux vents?
De quel droit volez-vous la vie à des vivants?
Homme, crois-tu que Dieu, ce père, fasse naître
L’aile pour l’accrocher au clou de ta fenêtre?
Ne peux-tu vivre heureux et content sans cela?
Qu’est-ce qu’ils ont donc fait tous ces innocents-là
Pour être au bagne avec leur nid et leur femelle?

Qui sait comment leur sort à notre sort se mêle?
Qui sait si le verdier qu’on dérobe aux rameaux,
Qui sait si le malheur qu’on fait aux animaux

Et si la servitude inutile des bêtes
Ne se résolvent pas en Nérons sur nos têtes?
Qui sait si le carcan ne sort pas des licous?
Oh! de nos actions qui sait les contre-coups,
Et quels noirs croisements ont au fond du mystère
Tant de choses qu’on fait en riant sur la terre?
Quand vous cadenassez sous un réseau de fer
Tous ces buveurs d’azur faits pour s’enivrer d’air,
Tous ces nageurs charmants de la lumière bleue,
Chardonneret, pinson, moineau franc, hochequeue,
Croyez-vous que le bec sanglant des passereaux
Ne touche pas à l’homme en heurtant ces barreaux?
Prenez garde à la sombre équité. Prenez garde!
Partout où pleure et crie un captif, Dieu regarde.
Ne comprenez-vous pas que vous êtes méchants?

À tous ces enfermés donnez la clef des champs!
Aux champs les rossignols, aux champs les hirondelles!
Les âmes expieront tout ce qu’on fait aux ailes.
La balance invisible a deux plateaux obscurs.
Prenez garde aux cachots dont vous ornez vos murs!
Du treillage aux fils d’or naissent les noires grilles;
La volière sinistre est mère des bastilles.
Respect aux doux passants des airs, des prés, des eaux!
Toute la liberté qu’on prend à des oiseaux
Le destin juste et dur la reprend à des hommes.
Nous avons des tyrans parce que nous en sommes.
Tu veux être libre, homme? et de quel droit, ayant

Chez toi le détenu, ce témoin effrayant?
Ce qu’on croit sans défense est défendu par l’ombre.
Toute l’immensité sur le pauvre oiseau sombre
Se penche, et te dévoue à l’expiation.
Je t’admire, oppresseur, criant : oppression!
Le sort te tient pendant que ta démence brave
Ce forçat qui sur toi jette une ombre d’esclave;
Et la cage qui pend au seuil de ta maison
Vit, chante, et fait sortir de terre la prison.

II

LES MANGEURS

Ils ont des surnoms, Juste, Auguste, Grand, Petit,
Bien-Aimé, Sage, et tous ont beaucoup d’appétit.
Qui sont-ils? Ils sont ceux qui nous mangent. La vie
Des hommes, notre vie à tous, leur est servie.

Ils nous mangent. Quel est leur droit? Le droit divin.

Ils vivent. Tout le reste est inutile et vain,
Le vent après le vent, le nombre après le nombre
Passe, et le genre humain n’est qu’une fuite d’ombre.

Est-ce qu’ils ont pour voix la foudre? Ils ont la voix Que vous avez. Sont-ils malades? Quelquefois.
Sont-ils forts? Comme vous. Beaux? Comme vous. Leur âme?
Vous ressemble. Et de qui sont-ils nés? D’une femme.
Ils ont, pour vous dompter et vous accabler tous,
Des châteaux, des donjons. Bâtis par qui? Par vous.
Et quelle est leur grandeur? À peu près votre taille.
Ils ont une servante affreuse, la bataille;
Ils ont un noir valet qu’on nomme l’échafaud.
Ils ont pour fonction de n’avoir nul défaut,
D’être pour les passants, chefs, souverains et maîtres,
Pour la femme aux seins nus sultans, dieux pour les prêtres.
Par ces êtres, élus du destin hasardeux,
La suprême parole est dite, et chacun d’eux
Pèse plus à lui seul qu’un monde et qu’une foule;
Il écrit : ma raison, sur le canon qui roule.
Et quels sont leurs cerveaux? Étroits. Leurs volontés?
Énormes. Quelles sont leurs œuvres? Écoutez.
Celui-ci, que la croix du vieil Ivan protége,

A le bonheur d’avoir un sépulcre de neige
Assez grand pour y mettre un peuple tout entier;
Il y met la Pologne; il faut bien châtier
Ce peuple puisqu’il ose exister. Cette reine
Fut jeune, belle, heureuse, ignorante, sereine,
Et n’a jamais fait grâce, et tout son alphabet,
Hélas! commence au trône et finit au gibet.
Celui-ci parle au nom du martyr qu’on adore;
Sous la sublime croix qu’un reflet du ciel dore,
Cet homme plein d’un sombre et périlleux pouvoir,
Prie et songe, et n’est pas épouvanté de voir
Son crucifix jeter l’ombre des guillotines,
Cet autre, torche au poing, dans les cités mutines,
Se rue, et brûle et pille, et d’Irun à Cadix
Règne, et fait fusiller un prisonnier sur dix,
Et dit : Je n’en fais pas fusiller davantage,

Étant civilisé; puis il reprend : Le Tage

Et l’Èbre feront voir que le maître est présent;
Peuples, je veux qu’on dise en voyant tant de sang
Et tant de morts passer que c’est le roi qui passe! —
Cet autre est un césar de l’espèce rapace;
Le laurier est chétif, mais le profit est grand,
Cela suffit; il vient; et que fait-il? il prend.
Il empoche; quoi? tout; les sacs d’or qu’on lui compte,
Les provinces, les morts, Strasbourg, Metz, et la honte;
Ce que fit Metternich est refait par Bismarck.
Le père de cet autre a bombardé Saint-Marc
Et dans l’affreux Spielberg reconstruit la Bastille
Cet autre à son visir a marié sa fille :
Cette fille abusant de son droit à l’enfant,
Met au monde un garçon, ce que la loi défend;
L’aïeul fait étrangler son petit-fils. Cet autre,
Jeune, dans les tripots et les femmes se vautre,
Puis il se dit : Je suis Bonaparte à peu près;
Si je songeais au trône et si je m’empourprais?
Il s’empourpre; il devient sanglant. C’est un vrai prince.

Chez eux le plus puissant est souvent le plus mince;

Ils ont le cœur des rocs et la dent des lions;
Ils sont ivres d’encens, d’effroi, de millions,
De volupté, d’horreur, et leur splendeur est noire.
S’ils ont soif, il leur faut beaucoup de sang à boire;
La guerre leur en verse; il leur faut, s’ils ont faim,
Beaucoup de nations à dévorer.
Enfin,
Revanche! les mangeurs sont mangés, ô mystère!

— Comme c’est bon les rois! disent les vers de terre.

III

Archiloque l’atteste, Athène l’entendit,

Un jour un magistrat devint terrible et dit :
— Je m’en vais, je cherche un refuge,
L’Aréopage pèse à faux poids. Temps d’effroi!
Voilez-vous, cieux! on voit le droit hors de la loi
Et la justice hors du juge!

Cicéron était là quand un centurion
Brisa son glaive et dit à César : — Histrion,
Je connais ta pensée intime;

L’armée après toi marche avec ses généraux;
Pas moi. Je ne suis pas l’espèce de héros
Qu’il te faut pour commettre un crime.

Ô noir Machiavel, génie et paria,
Tu t’en souviens, un jour un apôtre cria :
— C’est trop! le pape trompe l’homme.
Horreur! Satan et lui mettent le même anneau.
Jérusalem, ils font dévorer ton agneau
Par la vieille louve de Rome! —

La conscience humaine est engloutie au fond D’un océan de honte où tout rampe et se fond,
Mer sombre et sans route frayée;
Ce gouffre écume et roule, et l’on voit par moment
Reparaître au milieu des flots confusément
Le cadavre de la noyée.

IV

UN VOLEUR À UN ROI

IV

UN VOLEUR À UN ROI

Vous êtes, sous le ciel par moments obscurci,

Un ambitieux, sire, et j’en suis un aussi;
Roi, nous avons, car l’homme est diversement ivre,
Le même but tous deux, c’est d’avoir de quoi vivre;
Il nous faut pour cela, suis-je sage? es-tu fou?
À toi, prince, un royaume, à moi penseur, un sou.
Tout l’homme est le même homme et fait la même chose.
Roi, la bonté de l’Être inconnu se compose
De la dispersion de tout dans l’infini;
Nul n’est déshérité, personne n’est banni;
Et les vents, car telle est l’immensité des souffles,
Jettent aux rois l’empire et l’obole aux maroufles.
Nous voulons tous les deux, à tout prix, n’importe où,
Toi grossir ton royaume et moi gagner mon sou;
Et dans notre sagesse et dans notre démence,
Roi, nous sommes aidés par le hasard immense.
Seulement je vaux plus que toi. Daigne écouter.

Nous sommes tous deux fils, toi qu’il faut redouter,

De l’étrangère, et moi de la bohémienne;
Roi, que ta majesté fasse pendre la mienne,
Cela ne prouve pas qu’en notre désaccord
La tienne ait raison, sire, et que la mienne ait tort.
Je suis né, laisse-moi te raconter ce conte,
Pour avoir faim toujours et n’avoir jamais honte,
Car ce n’est pas honteux de manger. Rien n’est vrai
Que la faim; et l’enfer, dont l’homme fait l’essai,
C’est l’éternel refus du pain fuyant les bouches;
Et c’est pourquoi je rôde au fond des bois farouches.
Je ne suis pas méchant, moi qui parle; je veux,
Sans ôter aux mortels un seul de leurs cheveux,
Leur retirer un peu des choses superflues
Et pesantes qui font leurs bourses trop joufflues.
Je dépense à cela beaucoup de talent. Roi,

Je ne verse jamais le sang. Écoute-moi;
Médite si tu peux, et, si tu veux, digère,

Mais comprends-moi. Je hais le mal qui s’exagère;
Tuer, c’est de l’orgueil. Casser un bourgeois, fi!
À quoi bon? L’assassin est un larron bouffi.
Roi, je suis un aimant mystérieux qui passe
Et qui, par sa douceur éparse dans l’espace,
Attire, sans vacarme et sans brutalité,
Et fait venir à lui de bonne volonté
Les farthings endormis dans les poches des hommes.
Je m’annexe les sous sans mépriser les sommes,
Mais les bons sacs bien lourds c’est rare; il me suffit
D’un denier; et souvent je n’ai pour tout profit
De mes subtils travaux, dignes de vos estimes,
Messieurs les empereurs et rois, que cinq centimes;

Je m’en contente, étant aux hommes indulgent.
Je tâche de coûter au peuple peu d’argent,
Mais de manger. Avoir un trou, m’en faire un Louvre;
Guetter l’homme qui passe ou le volet qui s’ouvre;
Attendre qu’un marchand sous les brises du soir
Rêve, et laisse bâiller le tiroir du comptoir,
Vite y fourrer avec une agilité d’ange
Ma patte, et n’être vu dans ce mystère étrange
Que des astres pensifs au fond du ciel profond;
Épier la minute où les belles défont
Leur jarretière afin de leur chiper leur montre;
Des sous avec ma griffe opérer la rencontre;
Ajouter pour rallonge au destin mes dix doigts;
Dire à Dieu : Tu sais bien, au fond, que tu me dois,
Donc ne te fâche pas! telle est ma vie, altesse.
Vous avez la grandeur, moi j’ai la petitesse;
Mais devant le soleil, ce prodige flagrant,
L’infiniment petit vaut l’infiniment grand.
Vaut mieux. Je ne prends pas au sérieux l’étoffe
Qui m’habille, moi ver de terre et philosophe;

Jouer la comédie est le faible de Dieu;
Il ne s’irrite pas, mais il se moque un peu;

C’est un poëte; et l’homme est sa marionnette.
La naissance et la mort sont deux coups de sonnette,
L’un à l’entrée, et l’autre au départ du pantin,
Je ris avec le vieux machiniste Destin.
Tout est décor. Au fond la réalité manque.
Tout est fardé, le roi comme le saltimbanque;
Jocrisse, Hamlet. Sachez ceci, mortels tremblants,
Avec du calicot qui fait de grands plis blancs,
Avec de la farine et du blanc de céruse,
On est en scène un spectre, ou bien Pierrot. Ma ruse,
À moi, qui suis un être infinitésimal,
C’est de ne vraiment faire aux hommes aucun mal,
Et de vivre pourtant. Fais ça. Je t’en défie.

Roi, ce n’est pas de trop cette philosophie;
Je poursuis.
Je prétends que je vaux mieux que toi,
Que tous; et je le prouve, à toi foule, à vous roi.

J’ai remarqué que l’homme, infirme et pâle ébauche,
N’a rien que la main droite, et tout au plus la gauche,

Ce qui fait que toi, prince, homme, auguste animal,
Tu portes bien la force et la justice mal;
Alors j’ai médité, voulant dépasser l’homme;
Et, sûr de mon bon droit, mais d’emphase économe,
Bienveillant, point hâbleur, discret sous le ciel bleu,
Réparateur obscur des lacunes de Dieu,
À force de songer et de vouloir, à force
De sonder toute chose au delà de l’écorce,
Prince, et d’étudier à fond le cœur humain,
J’ai fini par avoir une troisième main.
Celle qu’on ne voit pas. La bonne. Tel est, sire,
Mon art. Le résultat, voleur. Masque de cire,
Fantôme, ombre, poussière et cendre, majesté,
As-tu compris? Ô rois, vous êtes un côté;
Je suis l’autre. Je suis l’homme d’esprit, le maître

Du crépuscule obscur, du risque, du peut-être,
Du néant, du passant, du souffle aérien;
Je possède ce tout que vous appelez rien;
Je combine le vent avec la destinée;
Et j’existe. Mon âme est vers l’azur tournée
Et songeant qu’après tout, dans ce monde gueusard,
Je suis un becqueteur paisible du hasard,
Que mes dents ne sont pas des dents inexorables,
Que je ne répands point le sang des misérables
Comme un juge, comme un bourreau, comme un soldat,

Songeant que de zéro je suis le candidat,
Que mon ambition, sans haine et sans durée,
Plane sur les humains d’une aile modérée
Et s’arrête à l’endroit où s’achève ma faim,
Et que je ne fais rien que ce que font enfin
Les gais oiseaux du ciel sous l’orme et sous l’érable,
Pour n’être point méchant je me sens vénérable.
Oui, je suis un mortel doué de facultés
Que n’ont pas bien des rois dans le marbre sculptés;
Un baïoque, métal inerte, simple cuivre,
S’il me sent là, devient vivant, cherche à me suivre,
Et la monnaie en moi voit son Pygmalion;
Et les sous des bourgeois qui sans rébellion,
Sans bruit, reconnaissant un chef à mon approche,
Les quittent pour venir tendrement dans ma poche,
Représentent, seigneur, de ma part tant de soins,
Tant d’adresse, un si beau scrupule en mes besoins,

Et tant de glissements d’anguille et de couleuvre,
Qu’ils sont chez eux des sous et chez moi des chefs-d’œuvre.
Ah! quel art que le mien! Mon collaborateur,
Dieu, qui met le possible, ô prince, à ma hauteur,
Sait tout ce qu’il me faut de calcul, d’industrie,
D’héroïsme, d’aplomb, de haute rêverie,
De sourires au sort bourru, de doux regards
À la fortune, fille aimable aux yeux hagards,

De patience auguste et d’étude acharnée,
Et de travaux, pour faire, au bout d’une journée
De pas errants, d’essais puissants, d’efforts hardis,
Changer de maître à deux ou trois maravédis!

Mais toi, quelle est ta peine? aucune; et ton mérite?
Nul. On croit être grand, quoi! parce qu’on hérite!
Ton père t’a laissé le monde en s’en allant.
Être né, quel effort! avoir faim, quel talent!
Téter sa mère, et puis manger un peuple! Ô prince!
Ton appétit est gros, mais ton génie est mince,
Un beau jour, sous ta pourpre et sous ton cordon bleu,
Trouvant qu’avoir un peuple à toi seul, c’est trop peu,
Tu jettes un regard de douce convoitise
Sur un empire ainsi qu’un bouc sur un cytise.
Tu dis : Si j’empochais le peuple d’à côté?
Alors, de force, aidé dans ta férocité
Par le prêtre qui fouille au fond du ciel, dévisse
La foudre, et met le Dieu de l’ombre à ton service,
De ton flamboiement noir toi-même t’aveuglant,

Tu saisis, glorieux, sacré, béni, sanglant,
N’importe quel pays qui soit à ta portée;
Toute la terre tremble et crie épouvantée;
Toi, tu viens dévorer, tu fais ce qu’on t’apprit;
Tu ne te mets en frais d’aucun effort d’esprit;
Tu fais assassiner tout avec nonchalance,
À coups d’obus, à coups de sabre, à coups de lance.
C’est simple. Eh bien, tu viens prendre une nation,
Voilà tout. N’es-tu pas l’extermination,
Le droit divin, l’élu qu’un fakir, un flamine,
Un bonze, a frotté d’huile et mis dans de l’hermine!
Va, prends. Les hommes sont ta chose. Alors cités, Fleuves, monts, bois tremblants d’un vent sombre agités,
Les plaines, les hameaux, tant pis s’ils sont en flammes,
Les berceaux, les foyers sacrés, l’honneur des femmes,
Tu mets sur tout cela tes ongles monstrueux;

Et l’église te brûle un encens tortueux,
Et le doux tedeum éclaire avec des cierges
Le meurtre des enfants et le viol des vierges;
Et tout ce qui n’est pas gisant est à genoux.

Moi, pendant ce temps-là je rôde, calme et doux.

Telle est notre nuance, ô le meilleur des princes,
Je conquiers des liards, tu voles des provinces.

V

Qu’est-ce que ce cercueil déposé sur deux chaises?
C’est Charles premier, roi. Les communes anglaises Ont fait ce monument de justice. Et quel est
Cet homme à l’œil sévère, au rude gantelet,
Qui s’avance pensif vers la bière hagarde,
Soulève le couvercle effrayant, et regarde?
C’est Cromwell. Il fut grand; tout devant lui trembla.

Soit; nous ne voulons plus de ces spectacles-là.
C’est grand dans le passé; c’est mauvais dans notre âge.
Quoiqu’un reste de nuit nous souille et nous outrage,
Désormais, ô vivants, nous avons fait ce pas,
Il faut aux nations un sauveur qui n’ait pas
De curiosité pour les têtes coupées;

Nous rejetons la hache au tas noir des épées;
Nous l’abhorrons; il faut aux hommes maintenant
Un libérateur pur, apaisé, rayonnant,
Qui ne soit pas vampire en même temps qu’archange,
Et qui n’ait pas au front, en tirant de la fange
Les peuples de misère et d’opprobre couverts,
La sinistre lueur des cercueils entr’ouverts.

VI

Je marchais au hasard, devant moi, n’importe où;
Et je ne sais pourquoi je songeais à Coustou

Dont la blanche bergère, au seuil des Tuileries,
Faite pour tant d’amour, a vu tant de furies.

Que de crimes commis dans ce palais! hélas!

Les sculpteurs font voler marbre et pierre en éclats
Et font sortir des blocs dieux et déesses nues
Qui peuplent des jardins les longues avenues.
Ô fantômes sacrés! ô spectres radieux!
Leur front serein contemple et la terre et les cieux;
Le temps n’altère pas leurs traits indélébiles;
Ils ont cet air profond des choses immobiles;
Ils ont la nudité, le calme et la beauté;
La nature en secret sent leur divinité;
Les pleurs mystérieux de l’aube les arrosent.
Et je ne comprends pas comment les hommes osent,
Eux dont l’esprit n’a rien que d’obscures lueurs,
Montrer leur cœur difforme à ces marbres rêveurs.

VII

AUX ROIS

VII

AUX ROIS

I

Est-ce que vous croyez que nous qui sommes là,
Nous que de tout son poids toujours l’ombre accabla,
Nous le noir genre humain farouche, nous la plèbe,
Nous, les forçats du sol, les captifs de la glèbe,
Nous qui, de lassitude expirants, n’avons droit
Qu’à la faim, à la soif, à l’indigence, au froid,
Qui, tués de travail, agonisons pour vivre,
Nous qu’à force d’horreur le destin sombre enivre;

Est-ce que vous croyez que nous vous aimons, vous!
Nous vassaux, vous les rois! nous moutons, vous les loups?
Ah! vraiment, ce serait curieux que des hommes
Hideux, désespérés, hagards comme nous sommes,
Nus sous leurs toits infects et leurs haillons crasseux,
Se prissent de tendresse et d’extase pour ceux
Qui les mangent, pour ceux dont leur chair est la proie,

Qui construisent avec leur douleur de la joie,
Et qui, repus, gorgés, triomphants, gais, charmants,
Bâtissent des palais avec leurs ossements!
Vous fourmillez sur nous! vous pullulez horribles!
Ce serait un miracle à mettre dans les bibles
Que nous vous bénissions pour être dévorants
À nos dépens; qu’un peuple eût le goût des tyrans,
Qu’une nation fût de sa honte complice,
Que la suppliciée admirât le supplice
Comme une femme adore et baise son époux,
Et qu’un lion devînt amoureux de ses poux!
Vos vices, ô tyrans, ont pour lustre vos crimes;
Quand les rois, débauchés, ivrognes, bas, infimes,
Se sentent dégradés et vils à tous les yeux,
Vite en guerre! et voilà des hommes glorieux!
C’est avec notre sang que leur fange se lave.
Par vous l’homme est reptile et le peuple est esclave;

Car par vous, j’en atteste ici le bleu matin,
J’en atteste l’affreux mystère du destin
Qui pèse sur nous tous et qui nous environne,
Par vous, les porte-sceptre et les porte-couronne,
Par vous, les tout-puissants et les forts, c’est par vous
Que nous avons l’infâme écorchure aux genoux,
Que nous sommes abjects, sinistres, incurables,
Et que notre misère est faite, ô misérables!
Aussi, je vous le dis, rois, nous vous détestons!
Nous rampons dans la cave éternelle à tâtons,
Notre prunelle luit, nous sommes dans nos antres,

Maigres, pensifs, avec nos petits sous nos ventres,
Et nous songeons à vous, les rois et les barons,
Et nous vous exécrons et nous vous abhorrons!

Mais nous sommes pourtant façonnés de la sorte
Que demain, s’il advient, rois, que l’un de vous sorte
Tout à coup de la nuit avec un astre au front,
S’il est pour secourir son pays brave et prompt,
Ou s’il chante, toujours jeune et beau, malgré l’âge,
S’il est le roi David, s’il est le roi Pélage,
Nous sommes éblouis! les oublis, les pardons,
Nous remplissent le cœur, et nous ne demandons

Rien à celui-là, rien! Malgré notre souffrance,
S’il est grand par l’idée ou par la délivrance,
Nous l’aimons! nous aimons sa lyre! nous aimons
Son glaive flamboyant dans l’ombre sur les monts!
Nous pourrions lui garder rancune de vous autres;
Mais non, nous devenons ses soldats, ses apôtres,
Ses légions, son camp, sa tribu, ses amis.
Nous lui sommes acquis, nous lui sommes soumis,
Il peut faire de nous ce qu’il veut. Dans notre âme
Nous voyons nos cités et nos hameaux en flamme
Sauvés par ce vengeur qui chasse l’étranger;
Ou nous sentons au fond de nos haines plonger
L’hymne de paix sorti d’une bouche divine,
Notre cœur s’ouvre au chant sublime où l’on devine
Tout cet immense amour par qui le monde vit;
Et nous suivons Pélage et nous suivons David!
Oui, pour que l’un de vous, bien qu’en nous tout réclame;
Fasse fondre l’hiver que nous avons dans l’âme,
Pour qu’un de nos tyrans devienne un de nos dieux,
Pour que nous, qui souffrons sous le ciel radieux,
Nous fils du désespoir et fils de la patrie,
Nous servions l’un de vous avec idolâtrie,
Une chose suffit, c’est qu’on lui voie au poing
Le fer que l’étranger insolent n’attend point,

Ou que sa grande voix verse au cœur l’harmonie;
C’est qu’il soit un héros ou qu’il soit un génie!

Rois, nous ne sommes pas plus méchants que cela.

C’est pourtant vrai! toujours, quand un prince brilla,
Quand il eut un rayon quelconque sur la tête,
L’immense peuple altier, puissant, auguste, et bête,
S’est fait son serviteur, son chien, son courtisan.

Mais celui-ci, qu’est-il? qu’a-t-il fait? parlons-en.
Il est né. Bien? Non, mal. C’est mal naître qu’entendre
Tout petit vous parler avec une voix tendre
Ceux que l’homme connaît par leur rugissement;
C’est mal naître, c’est naître épouvantablement
Qu’être dans son berceau léché d’une tigresse;
Par sa croissance, hélas! donner de l’allégresse
À l’hyène, et donner de la crainte à l’agneau,
C’est mal croître, être fait de bronze, être un anneau
De la chaîne de rois que l’humanité traîne,
C’est triste; et ce n’est point, certe, une aube sereine
Que celle qui voit naître un tyran! Celui-ci.
Donc, mal né, vécut mal. Les gueux ont pour souci
De voler des liards, il vola des provinces.

Il a fait ce que font à peu près tous les princes,
Il a mangé, dormi, bu, tué devant lui;
Il a régné féroce au hasard de l’ennui;
Il fut l’homme qui frappe, opprime, égorge, exile;
Ce fut un scélérat, ce fut un imbécile.
J’en parle simplement comme on en doit parler.
La mort savait son nom et vient de l’appeler;
Il est là. Le tombeau, c’est l’endroit difficile;
Ce n’est point un cachot, ce n’est point un asile;
C’est le lieu sombre où nul n’est plus en sûreté;
Le rendez-vous du fourbe avec la vérité,
Le rendez-vous de l’homme avec la conscience.

C’est là que l’inconnu perd enfin patience.
Vous autres vous vivez; mais l’âme, sans le corps,
Est nue et tremble; il faut qu’elle écoute. En dehors
Des bonnes actions qu’ils peuvent avoir faites,
S’ils ne sont ni docteurs, ni mages, ni prophètes,
Je n’ai pas de raison pour respecter les morts.
Honte aux vils trépassés que hante le remords,
Mêlé dans leur sépulcre au miasme insalubre!
Le fantôme est là seul sous le plafond lugubre,
Je m’ajoute aux vautours, je m’ajoute aux corbeaux.
Je sais que ce n’est point un de ces grands tombeaux
Où Rachel songe, où Jean médite, où pleure Électre,

Je me dresse, et je crache à la face du spectre.
II

N’opposez à ce qui se passe
Ni vos néants, ni vos grandeurs.
Laissez en paix les profondeurs.
L’ombre travaille dans l’espace.

Que fait-elle? Vous le saurez.
Derrière l’horizon, la nue
Monte, et l’on entend la venue
D’événements démesurés.

L’humanité marche et s’éclaire;
Le progrès est l’immense aimant;
À ce qui vient tranquillement
N’ajoutez pas de la colère.

N’irritez pas le peuple obscur.
Aveugles rois, tourbe inquiète,
Ne soyez pas l’enfant qui jette
Des pierres par-dessus le mur.

Dieu, sous les faits, qui sont ses voiles,

Continue un dessein béni.
Montrer le poing à l’infini,
Cela ne fait rien aux étoiles.

Dieu ne s’interrompt pas pour vous.
Ce qu’il fait, il faut qu’il le fasse.
Son travail, rude à la surface,
Dur pour vous, pour le peuple est doux.

Rois, respect au progrès sublime;
Rois, craignez ces reflux grondants;
Ne faites pas, rois imprudents,
Perdre patience à l’abîme.

Sait-on ses courroux, ses sanglots,
Ses chocs, son but, ses lois, ses formes?
Connaît-on les ordres énormes
Que le tonnerre donne aux flots?

Ne vous mêlez pas de ces choses.
Votre vain souffle aérien
Agite l’eau, mais ne peut rien
Sur l’immobilité des causes.

Hélas! tâchez de bien finir.
Redoutez l’onde soulevée,
Et ne troublez pas l’arrivée
Formidable de l’avenir.

Ah! prenez garde! les marées
Qu’on nomme révolutions
Et qu’il faut que nous apaisions,
Par vous, princes, sont effarées,

Et les gouffres sont plus amers,
Et la vague est plus écumante,
Quand l’orage insensé tourmente

La sombre liberté des mers.

XVIII

PAROLES DE GÉANT

Je suis votre vaincu, mais, regardez ma taille,
Dieux, je reste montagne après votre bataille;
Et moi qui suis pour vous un sombre encombrement,
À peine je vous vois au fond du firmament.
Si vous existez, soit. Je dors.
Vous, troglodytes,
Hommes qui ne savez jamais ce que vous dites,
Vivants qui fourmillez dans de l’ombre, indistincts,
Ayant déjà les vers de terre en vos instincts,
Vous qu’attend le sépulcre et qui rampez d’avance,
Sachez que la prière est une connivence,
Et ne me plaignez pas! Nains promis aux linceuls,

Tremblez si vous voulez, mais tremblez pour vous seuls!

Quant à moi, que Vénus, déesse aux yeux de grue,
Que Mars bête et sanglant, que Diane bourrue,
Viennent rire au-dessus de mon sinistre exil
Ou faire un froncement quelconque de sourcil,
Que dans mon ciel farouche et lourd l’Olympe ébauche
Son tumulte mêlé de crime et de débauche,
Qu’il raille le grand Pan, croyant l’avoir tué,

Que Jupiter joyeux, tonnant, infatué,
Démusèle les vents imbéciles, dérègle
L’éclair et l’aquilon, et déchaîne son aigle,
Cela m’est bien égal à moi qui suis trois fois
Plus haut que n’est profond l’océan plein de voix.
Hommes, je ris des nœuds dont la peur vous enlace.
Tous ces olympiens sont de la populace.
Ah! certes, ces passants, que vous nommez les dieux,
Furent de fiers bandits sous le ciel radieux;
Les montagnes, avec leurs bois et leurs vallées,
Sont de leur noir viol toutes échevelées,

Je le sais, et, resté presque seul maintenant,
Je suis par la grandeur de ma chute gênant;
Non, je ne les crains pas; et, quant à leurs approches,
Je les attends avec des roulements de roches,
Je les appelle gueux et voleurs, c’est leur nom,
Et ne veux pas savoir s’ils sont contents ou non.

Ô vivants, il paraît qu’à la haine tenaces,
Ces dieux me font de loin dans l’ombre des menaces.
Soit, j’oublie et je songe; et je m’informe peu
Si l’éclair que je vois est la lueur d’un dieu.
J’ai ma flûte et j’en joue au penchant des montagnes,

Je m’ajoute aux sommets au-dessus des campagnes,
Et je laisse les dieux bruire et bougonner.
Croit-on que je prendrai la peine de tourner
La tête dans les bois et sur les hautes cimes,
Que je m’effarerai dans les forêts sublimes,
Et que j’interromprai mon rêve et ma chanson,
Pour un roucoulement de foudre à l’horizon!

XIX

Quand le Cid fut entré dans le Généralife,
Il alla droit au but et tua le calife,
Le noir calife Ogrul, haï de ses sujets.
Le cid Campeador aux prunelles de jais,
Au poing de bronze, au cœur de flamme, à l'âme honnête,
Fit son devoir, frappa le calife à la tête,
Et sortit du palais seul, tranquille et rêveur.
Devant ce meurtrier et devant ce sauveur
Tout semblait s'écarter comme dans un prodige.

Soudain parut Médnat, le vieillard qui rédige

Le commentaire obscur et sacré du koran
Et regarde la nuit l'étoile Aldebaran.
Il dit au Cid, après le salut ordinaire :

— Cid, as-tu rencontré quelqu'un?
— Oui, le tonnerre.

— Je le sais; je l'ai vu, répondit le docteur.
Il m'a parlé. J'étais monté sur la hauteur,
Pour prier. Le tonnerre a dit à mon oreille :
Me voici, la douleur des peuples me réveille,
Et je descends du ciel quand un prince est mauvais;
Mais je vois arriver le Cid et je m'en vais.

XX

LA VISION DE DANTE

LA VISION DE DANTE

Dante m’est apparu. Voici ce qu’il m’a dit :

I

Je dormais sous la pierre où l’homme refroidit.
Je sentais pénétrer, abattu comme l’arbre,
L’oubli dans ma pensée et dans mes os le marbre.
Tout en dormant je crus entendre à mon côté
Une voix qui parlait dans une obscurité,
Et qui disait des mots étranges et funèbres.
Je m’écriai : Qui donc est là dans les ténèbres?
Et j’ajoutai, frottant mes yeux noirs et pesants :
Combien ai-je dormi? La voix dit : Cinq cents ans;
Tu viens de t’éveiller pour finir ton poëme
Dans l’an cinquante-trois du siècle dix-neuvième.

Et je me réveillai tout à fait; je n’avais
Plus rien autour de moi; la tombe aux durs chevets
S’était évanouie avec sa voûte sombre,
Et j’étais hors du temps, de la forme et du nombre;

Debout sans savoir où ni sans savoir sur quoi.
Enfin un peu de jour arriva jusqu’à moi,
Mes prunelles s’étant à l’ombre habituées
Alors je distinguai deux portes de nuées;
L’une au fond, devant moi; l’autre en bas, au-dessous
D’un brouillard composé des éléments dissous,
Comme un puits qu’on verrait dans les eaux. La première,
Splendide, semblait faite avec de la lumière;
C’était un trou de feu dans un nuage d’or;
Quelqu’un, celui qui parle aux sibylles d’Endor,
Pour construire cet arc, splendide météore,
Avait pris et courbé les rayons de l’aurore;

Du moins je le pensai, non sans frémissement.
Cette porte, où luisaient l’astre et le diamant,
Brillait au plus profond de l’espace livide

Comme un point lumineux et posait sur le vide;
On voyait au-dessous le libre éther flotter,
Car nul mont n’eût osé s’offrir pour la porter,
Et, sous les saints piliers de cette arche vivante,
Le Sinaï lui-même eût croulé d’épouvante.
L’autre porte à mes pieds montrait son cintre obscur
Noir comme une fumée, et ridé comme un mur
Vaguement aperçu dans des épaisseurs mornes,
Mêlant ses bords confus aux profondeurs sans bornes,
Espèce d’antre informe en ténèbres construit,

Cratère fait de bronze et couronnant la nuit.
Cette porte semblait la bouche des abîmes.

Songeant à tous les maux qu’ici-bas nous subîmes,
Mon esprit, où la crainte accompagne l’espoir,
Du portail rayonnant allait au porche noir,
Et, me ressouvenant de ce qu’on fait sur terre,
J’entrevis que c’étaient les portes du mystère.

Soudain tout s’éclipsa, brusquement obscurci.
II

Et je sentis mes yeux se fermer, comme si,
Dans la brume, à chacun des cils de mes paupières
Une main invisible avait lié des pierres.
J’étais comme est un prêtre au seuil du saint parvis,
Songeant, et, quand mes yeux se rouvrirent, je vis
L’ombre; l’ombre hideuse, ignorée, insondable,

De l’invisible Rien vision formidable,
Sans forme, sans contour, sans plancher, sans plafond,
Où dans l’obscurité l’obscurité se fond;

Point d’escalier, de pont, de spirale, de rampe;
L’ombre sans un regard, l’ombre sans une lampe;
Le noir de l’inconnu, d’aucun vent agité;
L’ombre, voile effrayant du spectre éternité.
Qui n’a point vu cela n’a rien vu de terrible.
C’est l’espace béant, l’étendue impossible,
Quelque chose d’affreux, de trouble et de perdu
Qui fuit dans tous les sens devant l’œil éperdu,
La cécité glacée est plus qu’un marbre lourde,
Une tranquillité muette, aveugle et sourde,
L’horrible intérieur d’un sépulcre infini.
Cependant un reflet sur mon cercueil jauni

Me fit tressaillir, mais tout restait immobile;
Et je vis dans cette ombre une lueur tranquille,
Un flamboiement profond, fixe, silencieux,
Pareil à la clarté que ferait à nos yeux
Derrière un rideau noir une torche allumée.
Et nul bruit ne sortait de l’ombre inanimée;
Car, sachez-le, vivants, hors du clair firmament,
L’affreuse immensité se tait lugubrement.
Cette clarté semblait, à la fois vie et flamme,
Regarder comme un œil et penser comme une âme;
Ce n’était cependant qu’un voile, et l’on sentait
Derrière la lueur quelqu’un qui méditait.

III

Ce flamboiement flottant sur les nuits éternelles
Entrait de plus en plus dans mes vagues prunelles;
Je compris où j’étais et j’eus un tremblement;
Car soudain j’aperçus, dans ce rayonnement
Semblable aux visions que voyaient les prophètes,
Les sept anges pensifs qui tiennent sept trompettes;
La clarté se mêlait à leurs cheveux vermeils;
Ils étaient là, debout, les yeux baissés, pareils

Aux sept géants qui sont sur le palais Farnèse,

Et, comme lorsqu’on est devant une fournaise,
Ils étaient noirs, ayant derrière eux la clarté.
L’abîme obscur, hagard, funèbre, illimité,
Semblait plein de terreur devant cette lumière.
J’essayai de prier, mais en vain; la prière
Rentra dans mon esprit comme un oiseau qui fuit
Et rentre au nid, tremblant, parce qu’il fait trop nuit
Et je restai glacé devant la clarté blême
Comme si j’eusse été quelque abîme moi-même.
Et je me dis : Voici qu’on va juger quelqu’un.
Cette ombre, des forfaits c’est le gouffre commun;
Ce feu, c’est la clarté de la face du juge.
Et j’eus peur.

IV

Ô sentence! ô peine sans refuge!

Tomber dans le silence et la brume à jamais!
D’abord quelque clarté des lumineux sommets
Vous laisse distinguer vos mains désespérées.
On tombe, on voit passer des formes effarées,
Bouches ouvertes, fronts ruisselants de sueur,
Des visages hideux qu’éclaire une lueur.
Puis on ne voit plus rien. Tout s’efface et recule,
La nuit morne succède au sombre crépuscule.
On tombe. On n’est pas seul dans ces limbes d’en bas;
On sent frissonner ceux qu’on ne distingue pas;
On ne sait si ce sont des hydres ou des hommes;
On se sent devenir les larves que nous sommes;
On entrevoit l’horreur des lieux inaperçus,
Et l’abîme au-dessous, et l’abîme au-dessus.
Puis tout est vide! On est le grain que le vent sème.
On n’entend pas le cri qu’on a poussé soi-même;
On sent les profondeurs qui s’emparent de vous;
Les mains ne peuvent plus atteindre les genoux;
On lève au ciel les yeux et l’on voit l’ombre horrible.
On est dans l’impalpable, on est dans l’invisible;

Des souffles par moments passent dans cette nuit.
Puis on ne sent plus rien. — Pas un vent, pas un bruit,
Pas un souffle; la mort, la nuit; nulle rencontre;
Rien, pas même une chute affreuse ne se montre.

Et l’on songe à la vie, au soleil, aux amours,
Et l’on pense toujours, et l’on tombe toujours!
Et le froid du néant lentement vous pénètre!
Vivants! tomber, tomber, et tomber, sans connaître
Où l’on va, sans savoir où les autres s’en vont!
Une chute sans fin dans une nuit sans fond,
Voilà l’enfer.

V

Pendant que je songeais, l’espace
Vibra comme un vitrail quand un chariot passe
Et je vis apparaître un ange surprenant.
C’était un être ailé, sévère et rayonnant.
Comme Jésus du front passait les douze apôtres,
Ce bel archange était plus grand que tous les autres,
Il avait la hauteur de deux stades romains;
Il tenait les morceaux d’un glaive dans ses mains;
Il portait sur sa tête ingénue et superbe

Ce mot des cieux, ce mot qui contient tout le verbe :
— JUSTICE. — On le pouvait lire distinctement,
Chaque lettre du mot était un diamant.

Justice! Ô mot profond que les gouffres vénèrent!

Quand l’archange parut, les trompettes sonnèrent.

Et l’archange cria : — Trépassés! trépassés!
Levez-vous, accourez, venez, comparaissez!
Voici l’instant où l’aigle aura peur des colombes.
Ô victimes! sortez des nuits, sortez des tombes,
Sortez de terre en foule, à la hâte, à la fois!

Venez du fond des mers, venez du fond des bois,
Venez, celui qui saigne avec celui qui pleure!
Car le juge est assis pour punir, et c’est l’heure

Où les clairons du ciel sonnent aux quatre vents,
Et Dieu veut que les morts lui parlent des vivants

Et quand l’ange eut fini, les ténèbres s’émurent.

VI

Un bruit, pareil au bruit des mouches qui murmurent,
Éclata tout à coup dans le gouffre muet,
Et je vis quelque chose en bas qui remuait.
C’était comme un point noir, puis comme une fumée,
Puis comme la poussière où s’avance une armée,
Puis comme une île d’ombre au sein des nuits flottant.
Et cet amas sinistre et lourd, vers nous montant,
Triste, livide, énorme, ayant un air de rage,
Venait et grandissait, poussé d’un vent d’orage.
Ce bloc était confus comme un brouillard du soir.
Quand il fut près de nous, je me penchai pour voir.

C’était une nuée et c’était une foule.

Cela voguait, courait, roulait comme une houle;
Et puis cela faisait un bruit mystérieux.
Dans cette ombre on voyait des faces et des yeux.
Je leur criai : — Quels sont les noms dont on vous nomme?
Ô spectres, comme vous j’étais jadis un homme,
Vous êtes maintenant des spectres comme moi. —
Ils n’entendirent point et passèrent. L’effroi
Et la stupeur glaçaient ce noir tourbillon d’ombres.
Les uns étaient assis sur d’informes décombres;
D’autres, je les voyais quoiqu’un vent les chassât,
Terribles, agitaient des vestes de forçat;
D’autres étaient au joug liés comme des bêtes;
D’autres étaient des corps qui n’avaient pas de têtes;

Des femmes sur leur sein montraient les clous du fouet;
Des enfants morts tenaient encore leur jouet,
Et leur crâne entr’ouvert laissait voir leurs cervelles;
D’autres gisaient en tas ainsi que des javelles;
D’autres avaient au cou la corde du gibet;
D’autres traînaient des fers; un autre se courbait,

L’affreux plafond trop bas d’un cachot solitaire
Ayant ployé sa tête à jamais vers la terre;
Des vieillards, dont le sang coulait à longs ruisseaux,
Tiraient avec leurs doigts des balles de leurs os;
D’autres touchaient leurs yeux crevés par les mitrailles;
D’autres avec leurs mains soutenaient leurs entrailles;
Innombrables, meurtris, pâles, échevelés,
Tous, dans la nuit farouche affreusement mêlés,
Dressaient leur front, et ceux qui n’avaient pas de têtes
Élevaient leurs deux poings, et le vent des tempêtes
Soufflait, et derrière eux, accroupis, accablés,
On voyait un monceau de fantômes voilés,
Muets et noirs; c’étaient les veuves et les mères.
La rumeur qui sortait de ces ombres amères
Ressemblait au bruit sourd que les grands arbres font;
Et, devant la clarté qui flamboyait au fond,
Joignant leurs mains, tordant leurs bras, ils s’arrêtèrent,
Et, comme tous sortaient de la fosse, ils ôtèrent
La terre de leur bouche, et crièrent : Seigneur!

À ce grand mot qui dit gloire, amour et bonheur,

L’abîme qui n’a plus, sous la verge inflexible,
Le droit de prononcer ce nom inaccessible
Poussa dans la nuit triste un long gémissement.
VII

Ils reprirent : Seigneur! Ce fut un noir moment.
Les cris d’enfant surtout venaient à mon oreille;
Car, dans cette nuit-là, gouffre où l’équité veille

La voix des innocents sur toute autre prévaut,
C’est le cri des enfants qui monte le plus haut,
Et le vagissement fait le bruit du tonnerre.

— « Seigneur! Seigneur! Seigneur! Justice pour la terre!
« Nous sommes les martyrs, nous sommes l’équité,
« La loi sainte, l’honneur, la foi, la liberté;
« Chassés par les brigands que là-haut on encense,
« Nous sommes la vertu, nous sommes l’innocence,
« Que Satan forgeron frappe à coups de marteau.
« Nous sommes ceux qu’on a liés au vil poteau,
« Ceux qu’égorgea le sabre et que perça l’épée;
« Nous sommes le sang tiède et la tête coupée;

« Nous sommes ceux qu’on jette aux chiens, ceux que la dent
« Déchire, ceux qu’on brise et qu’on foule, pendant « Que les vices lascifs et les crimes énormes
« Au-dessus de leurs fronts chantent, géants difformes.
« Nous crions vers vous, père! Ô Dieu bon, punissez!
« Car vous êtes l’espoir de ceux qu’on a chassés,
« Car vous êtes patrie à celui qu’on exile,
« Car vous êtes le port, la demeure et l’asile;
« Les oiseaux ont le nid et les hommes ont Dieu.
« Là-haut le meurtre seul est libre; c’est un jeu
« D’égorger les vivants; le droit n’a plus de base,
« Et le bien et le mal, comme l’eau dans un vase,
« Sont mêlés, et le monde est en proie à la mort.
« Au sud on tue, on pend, on extermine; au nord
« On élargit le bagne, on élargit les fosses;
« On coupe à coups de knout le ventre aux femmes grosses;

« Le glaive a reparu, hideux, comme jadis.
« Dans Brescia, dans Milan, on a vu des bandits
« Écraser du talon le sein des vierges mortes;
« Des vieillards aux fronts blancs massacrés sur leurs portes
« Imprimaient à leur seuil leurs doigts ensanglantés,
« Et les petits enfants, du haut des toits jetés,

« Étaient reçus en bas sur les pointes des piques.
« Les mines de Tobolsk, les cachots des tropiques,
« Cayenne, Lambessa, le Spielberg, les pontons
« Sont pleins de nos douleurs! Seigneur, nous en sortons.
« Nous nous nommons le peuple, et sommes une plaie.
« Le genre humain saignant est traîné sur la claie.
« Nous venons de l'exil, nous venons du tombeau,
« Et nous vous rapportons l'âme, notre flambeau!
« Ô Dieu juste, il est temps que votre bras nous venge! »

— Quels sont vos meurtriers et vos bourreaux? dit l'ange,

Et d'une seule voix ils dirent : — Les soldats.

VIII

Jean à Pathmos, Manou rêvant sur les védas,
N'ont rien vu de pareil à ce que je raconte,

Comme après un nuage un autre brouillard monte
Je vis alors monter de l'abîme obscurci
Un autre amas informe, et l'ange dit : Ici!

Et ce groupe arriva, confus comme une ville,
Devant la clarté sombre et toujours immobile.
C'étaient des millions d'hommes bardés de fer,
Comme Bordeaux en vit du temps de Gaïfer,
Cavaliers, fantassins, multitudes fatales,
Au cri rauque, au pas lourd, aux statures brutales,
À l'œil stupide, ayant des chiffres sur le front.
Quelques-uns ressemblaient aux hiboux à l'œil rond,
D'autres au léopard hurlant dans sa tanière.

Ils étaient tous vêtus de la même manière;
Ils étaient teints de sang, des cheveux aux talons;
Noirs, pressés, ils venaient, sauvages bataillons;
Leurs armes m'étonnaient et m'étaient inconnues.
Ils surgissaient en foule et par mille avenues.

C’étaient des légions et puis des légions,
Flot d’hommes inondant ces mornes régions,
Chaos, têtes sans nombre au loin diminuées;

Les croupes des chevaux se mêlaient aux nuées;
Ils traînaient après eux des chariots d’airain
Avec le roulement d’un foudre souterrain.
Un grand vautour doré les guidait comme un phare.
Tant qu’ils étaient au fond de l’ombre, la fanfare,
Comme un aigle agitant ses bruyants ailerons,
Chantait claire et joyeuse au fond des escadrons,
Trompettes et tambours sonnaient, et des centaures
Frappaient des ronds de cuivre entre leurs mains sonores,
Mais, dès qu’ils arrivaient devant le flamboiement,
Les clairons effarés se taisaient brusquement,
Tout ce bruit s’éteignait. Reculant en désordre,
Leurs chevaux se cabraient et cherchaient à les mordre,
Et la lance et l’épée échappaient à leur poing.
En voyant la lueur qu’ils ne comprenaient point,
Ils s’arrêtaient, courbant leurs faces étonnées;
Ils avaient ce front bas des bêtes enchaînées
Quand, le loup étant pris au piége et garrotté,
L’air terrible fait place à l’air épouvanté.

Ô spectacle de voir la force au pied de l’être!
De voir s’évanouir le gendarme et le reître,
Hommes, glaives, chevaux, clairons, férocité,
Tout le sombre ouragan, devant cette clarté!

IX

L’ange dit : — Qu’êtes-vous?
— Nous sommes les armées.
Alors, pâles, debout, les ombres ranimées
Crièrent, écartant les linceuls de leurs seins :

— Malheur! malheur! malheur à tous ces assassins!

Et l’ange dit, levant les bras pour les confondre :

— Vous avez entendu. Qu’avez-vous à répondre?

Et les morts répétaient : — Malheur aux assassins!

— Répondez, cria l’ange.
Alors ces lourds essaims,
Ces soldats plus nombreux que les épis des plaines, Dirent :
— Ce n’est pas nous, ce sont nos capitaines.
Nous dûmes obéir à leur ordre inhumain;
Nous n’étions que le glaive, eux, ils étaient la main.
C’est sur eux, non sur nous, que le crime retombe. —

L’ange, vers la lueur calme comme une tombe,

Leva, grave et pensif, son œil fixe aux cils blonds,
Puis, se tournant, il fit un signe aux aquilons.

Les vents ayant soufflé, ces hommes disparurent.
X

Puis au fond de la nuit les aquilons coururent
Et revinrent, poussant une nuée encor.
Et ce nuage était plein de fantômes d’or.

Il s’ouvrit devant l’ange avec un sourd tonnerre.

Je vis des commandants sur leurs chevaux de guerre,
L’épée au flanc, la plume au front, l’air irrité,
Debout sur la nuée avec autorité,
Des flammes dans leurs yeux et du sang dans leurs bouches;
Triomphants, quelques-uns très vieux, et plus farouches
Que les durs Teutatès et les noirs Irmensuls.
Ils tenaient des bâtons comme font les consuls.

Et l’ange leur cria : — C’est vous les capitaines?

— C’est nous. Que nous veux-tu?

— Silence aux voix hautaines!
Regardez cet oiseau qui dort, et taisez-vous!
Dit l’ange; et, dérangeant sa robe avec courroux,
Il leur montra la foudre en son sein endormie.

Il reprit : — Vous avez ainsi qu’une ennemie
Traité la race humaine; où vous avez passé
Tout est mort, l’herbe a crû; vous avez écrasé
Les femmes, les enfants, les vieillards aux fronts chauves,
Et lâché vos soldats comme des bêtes fauves;
Vous avez relevé le glaive et l’échafaud,
Brisé la loi d’en bas, bravé la loi d’en haut;
Vous êtes devant Dieu; qu’avez-vous à répondre?

Comme devant la braise on voit la cire fondre,
Ces noirs victorieux tombèrent à genoux,
Et, criant et pleurant, dirent :
— Ce n’est pas nous!
Ce n’est pas nous, Seigneur! Seigneur, ce sont les juges.
Après les châtiments, les fléaux, les déluges,
Les hommes ont assis sur des sièges sacrés
D’autres hommes savants, austères, vénérés,
Pour être au milieu d’eux comme la loi vivante.
Seigneur, quand nous frappions, tous ces juges qu’on vante Disaient : — Vous faites bien. Tirez. Versez le sang.

Ceci, c’est le coupable. — Or c’était l’innocent.
Nous ne le savions pas. Nous, troupe au mal poussée,
Nous n’étions que le bras, ils étaient la pensée;
Nous n’étions que la force, eux, ils étaient l’esprit.
Nos meurtres sont leur crime!
Et l’archange reprit :

— Allez! —
Tout s’effaça comme un flocon d’écume.

XI

L’ange leva le doigt, et je vis, dans la brume,
Monter et croître au fond des brouillards épaissis
Une espèce de cirque, et là, muets, assis,
Un tas d’hommes vêtus d’hermine et de simarres,
Et je vis à leurs pieds du sang en larges mares,
Des billots, des gibets, des fers, des piloris.

Ces hommes regardaient l’ange d’un air surpris;
Comme, en lettres de feu, rayonnait sur sa face

Son nom, JUSTICE, entre eux ils disaient à voix basse :
— Que veut dire ce mot qu’il porte sur son front?

L’ange cria :
— Malheur à ceux qui mentiront!
Vos noms? parlez! —
Et tous semblaient vouloir se taire.

— Vous êtes, dit l’esprit, les juges de la terre.
De vous tous qui teniez le livre de la loi
Pas un ne me connaît, mais je vous connais, moi.
Écoutez. Vous avez trahi le droit auguste,
Absous les scélérats, condamné l’homme juste,
Et lié l’innocence aux pieds du crime heureux.
Quand le massacre ouvrant ses ongles ténébreux,
Planait sur la cité qui lutte et qui s’effraie,
Vous avez comme un aigle adoré cette orfraie;
Quand les soldats noyaient dans le meurtre les lois,
À leurs cris furieux vous mêliez votre voix,
Vous mettiez votre bouche à leurs clairons de cuivre,
C’est vous qui de la loi tenant toujours le livre,
Des martyrs aux brigands partagiez les habits;

C’est vous qui livriez aux tigres les brebis;

C’est vous qui des héros traîniez les agonies
Du carcan au gibet, du bagne aux gémonies,
Juges; et le bourreau d’épouvante vêtu,
Voyant qu’on lui disait d’égorger la vertu,
Pensait dans son esprit : Ces hommes-là se trompent.
Vous vous êtes assis aux festins qui corrompent,
Vous avez applaudi le mal, ri du remords,
Et vous avez craché sur la face des morts.
Ô juges, ce sont là des choses exécrables.
Qu’avez-vous à répondre?
Alors ces misérables,
Tombant hors de leur siége et se prosternant tous, Tremblant et gémissant, dirent :
— Ce n’est pas nous.

— Mais qui donc est coupable alors?
Ce sont les princes.
La terre est par les rois divisée en provinces.
Nous renvoyons aux rois toutes nos actions.
Les princes commandaient; nous leur obéissons,
Seigneur, car de tout temps les prêtres et les mages
Nous ont dit que les rois, ô Dieu, sont vos images.

L’ange dit : — Amenez les images de Dieu.

Des êtres monstrueux parurent.

XII

Du milieu
De l’abîme on les vit surgir dans l’ombre impure.
L’un ressemblait au meurtre et l’autre à la luxure,
L’autre à la fraude, l’autre à l’orgueil, celui-ci
Au mensonge, et d’horreur je demeurai saisi,
Car ils avaient du mal toutes les ressemblances.

À travers cette nuit, les brouillards, les silences,
Dans ce gouffre sans fond de toutes parts béant,
Dans ces immensités qu’emplissait le néant,
Ils se dressaient, le sceptre appuyé sur l’épaule;
Les uns, Molochs blanchis par les neiges du pôle,
D’autres ayant au front un reflet du midi,
Tous habillés de pourpre et d’or, l’œil engourdi,

L’air superbe, l’épée au flanc, couronne en tête,
Globe en main; chacun d’eux était seul sur le faîte
D’un trône, comme un roi d’Édom ou d’Issachar,
Et chaque trône était porté sur un grand char.
Devant chaque fantôme, en la brume glacée,
Ayant le vague aspect d’une croix renversée
Venait un glaive nu, ferme et droit dans le vent.
Qu’aucun bras ne tenait et qui semblait vivant.
Les vapeurs au-dessous flottaient basses et lentes.
Les chars étaient traînés par des bêtes volantes,
Montres inconnus même au gouffre sans clarté;
Attelages impurs! L’un était emporté
Par des tigres ailés au pied large, aux yeux mornes,
L’autre par des griffons, l’autre par des licornes,
L’autre par des vautours à deux têtes, ayant
Des diadèmes d’or sur leur front flamboyant.
Tous ces monstres poussaient des cris, battaient de l’aile

Tantôt mêlés, tantôt en ligne parallèle.
Les trônes approchaient sous ces lugubres cieux,
On entendait gémir autour des noirs essieux
La clameur de tous ceux qu’avaient broyés leurs roues;
Ils venaient, ils fendaient l’ombre comme des proues;
Sous un souffle invisible ils semblaient se mouvoir;
Rien n’était plus étrange et plus farouche à voir
Que ces chars effrayants tourbillonnant dans l’ombre.
Dans le gouffre tranquille où l’humanité sombre,
Ces trônes de la terre apparaissaient hideux.

Le dernier qui venait, horrible au milieu d’eux,
Était à chaque marche encombré de squelettes
Et de cadavres froids aux bouches violettes,
Et le plancher rougi fumait, de sang baigné;
Le char qui le portait dans l’ombre était traîné
Par un hibou tenant dans sa griffe une hache.
Un être aux yeux de loup, homme par la moustache,
Au sommet de ce char s’agitait étonné,
Et se courbait furtif, livide et couronné.

Pas un de ces césars à l’allure guerrière
Ne regardait cet homme. À l’écart, et derrière,
Vêtu d’un noir manteau qui semblait un linceul,
Espèce de lépreux du trône, il venait seul;
Il posait les deux mains sur sa face morose
Comme pour empêcher qu’on y vît quelque chose :
Quand parfois il ôtait ses mains en se baissant,
En lettres qui semblaient faites avec du sang
On lisait sur son front ces trois mots : Je le jure.

Quoiqu’ils fussent encore au fond de l’ombre obscure,
Hommes hideux, de traits et d’âge différents,
Je les distinguais tous, car ils étaient très grands.
Je crus voir les titans de l’antique nature.
Mais ces géants brumeux décroissaient à mesure
Qu’ils s’éloignaient du point dont ils étaient partis,
Et, plus ils s’approchaient, plus ils étaient petits.
Ils rentraient par degrés dans la stature humaine;
La clarté les fondait ainsi qu’une ombre vaine;
Eux que j’avais crus hauts plus que les Apennins,
Quand ils furent tout près de moi, c’étaient des nains.

Et l’ange, se dressant dans la brume indécise,
Était penché sur eux comme la tour de Pise.
XIII

Et les glaives s’étaient éclipsés.

L’ange dit :

— Qu’êtes-vous?
Et le groupe à ses pieds répondit :

— Rois, et maîtres de tout, du droit de nos ancêtres.

— Rois! vous êtes les rois, vous n’êtes pas les maîtres,
Dit l’ange. Allons, venez, c’est l’heure, arrivez tous.
Vous voilà donc enfin, princes? D’où sortez-vous?
Ô princes, vous sortez, et je vais vous le dire,
Des forfaits, des fureurs, du meurtre et du délire,
Des deuils, des faux serments dont l’homme est éperdu,
Et du sang innocent à grands flots répandu,
Vous sortez des palais qu’habite la démence,
Des fortins, des charniers, et de la plaine immense
Du monde entier criant vers le haut firmament!
Rois! l’homme n’est pas fait pour votre amusement.

Rois! la terre est un temple et non pas une étable.
Le tyran, dans l’orgie, accoudé sur la table,
Commande au crime, et Dieu commande au châtiment.
Princes, avant que Dieu regarde froidement
Tout le sang qui ruisselle autour de vos armures,
Les astres tomberont comme des figues mûres
Qui tombent d’un figuier secoué par le vent.
Ô rois qui massacrez sous l’œil du Dieu vivant,
La voix du genre humain contre vos fronts s’élève.
Plus nombreux que les flots gémissant sur la grève
Les morts auprès de Dieu, rois, vous ont précédés
Ôtez votre couronne, accusés, répondez.
Tous ces crimes abjects, mêlés au vice immonde,
Les avez-vous commis?
Et ces maîtres du monde
Tremblèrent comme l’arbre au vol des ouragans,
Et l’ange regardait pâlir ces arrogants;
Et chacun d’eux, pareil au renard qui s’échappe,

Criait :
— Ce n’est pas nous!

— Et qui donc?
— C’est le pape.
Seigneur, vous aviez mis parmi nous ce docteur.
Il était le semeur, il était le pasteur,
Il enseignait d’en haut comme votre vicaire.
Nos trônes faisaient cercle autour de cette chaire.
Nous écoutions son verbe ainsi que votre voix.
Il nous disait : « Je suis celui qui parle aux rois;
« Quiconque me résiste et me brave est impie.
« Ce qu’ici-bas j’écris, là-haut Dieu le copie.
« L’église, mon épouse, éclose au mont Thabor,
« A fait de la doctrine une cage aux fils d’or,
« Et comme des oiseaux j’y tiens toutes les âmes.
« Seul je suis le mystère et seul j’ai les dictames.
« Rois, obéissez-moi selon qu’il est écrit.
« Quand vous me regardez, vous voyez Jésus-Christ.
« Je fais et je défais la loi quand je la touche,
« Et l’explication de tout est dans ma bouche;
« Je suis l’homme-justice et l’homme-vérité. »
Or, quand nous abattions droit, peuple, liberté,
Quand nous eûmes tué le tribun et l’apôtre,
Nous étions d’un côté, les morts étaient de l’autre,
Nous lui dîmes : — Quels sont les bons et les pervers?
Et cet homme leva la main, et l’univers
Vit descendre, seigneur, de cette main suprême
Sur nous l’apothéose et sur eux l’anathème;
Quand nous exterminions l’aïeul aux pas tremblants,

Ce vieillard nous criait : Malheur aux cheveux blancs!
Quand nous percions l’enfant au ventre de sa mère,
Il nous criait, debout au fond du sanctuaire,
Devant la mère froide et devant l’enfant mort :
L’enfant était coupable et la mère avait tort!
Il faisait, pour punir quiconque pense et rêve,

Jaillir des crucifix sous les éclairs du glaive!
Sa main, plus que nos bras, multipliait les coups.
Répondez, Pazzoli, Simoncelli, vous tous!
Cet homme interrompait la messe à l’offertoire,
Ce prêtre rejetait la gorgée au ciboire,

Seigneur, pour faire signe au bourreau de frapper,
Et lui montrer du doigt les têtes à couper.
Sa ceinture servait de corde à nos potences,
Il liait de ses mains l’agneau sous nos sentences,
Et quand on nous criait : Grâce! il nous criait! Feu!
C’est à lui que le mal revient. Voilà, grand Dieu,
Ce qu’il a fait; voilà ce qu’il nous a fait faire.
Cet homme était le pôle et l’axe de la sphère;
Il est le responsable et nous le dénonçons!
Seigneur, nous n’avons fait que suivre ses leçons,
Seigneur, nous n’avons fait que suivre son exemple.
Nos forfaits sous ses pieds sont nés dans votre temple.
Il nous a mis l’enfer dans l’âme au lieu du ciel
Lui seul porte le poids du crime universel!

Et l’archange cria :
— Faites venir cet homme!

Alors les sept clairons dirent :
— Pape de Rome!
Mastaï! Mastaï! nous t’appelons sept fois.
Viens rapporter à Dieu les peuples et les rois,
Car l’Éternel t’attend, assis sur les nuées.

Toutes les profondeurs frémirent, remuées.

Un vieillard blanc et pâle apparut dans la nuit.

XIV

Debout, morne, il tremblait comme un homme qui fuit,

Et des mains le tenaient au collet dans la brume,
Vêtu de lin plus blanc qu’un encensoir qui fume,
Il avait, spectre blême aux idoles pareil,
Les baisers de la foule empreints sur son orteil,
Dans sa droite un bâton comme l’antique archonte,
Sur son front la tiare, et dans ses yeux la honte.
De son cou descendait un long manteau doré,
Et dans son poignet gauche il tenait, effaré,
Comme un voleur surpris par celui qu’il dérobe,
Des clefs qu’il essayait de cacher sous sa robe.
Il était effrayant à force de terreur.

Quand surgit ce vieillard, on vit dans la lueur
L’ombre et le mouvement de quelqu’un qui se penche.
À l’apparition de cette robe blanche,
Au plus noir de l’abîme un tonnerre gronda.
L’archange, tout à coup terrible, regarda,
De cet œil flamboyant que vit luire Sodome, L’ombre profonde, et dit :

— Connaissez-vous cet homme?

Alors, de tous les points de ces immensités,
Tous, — car je m’aperçus que tous étaient restés, —
Des flancs de la nuée et du bord des abîmes,
De toutes parts, en haut, en bas, tyrans, victimes,
Mères, enfants, vieillards, les juges, les jugés,
Les égorgeurs mêlés avec les égorgés,
Les grands et les petits, les obscurs, les célèbres,
Tous ceux que j’avais vus passer dans les ténèbres
Avançant leur front triste, ouvrant leur œil terni,
Fourmillement affreux qui peuplait l’infini,
Tous ces spectres vivant, parlant, riant naguère,
Martyrs, bourreaux, et gens du peuple et gens de guerre,
Regardant l’homme blanc d’épouvante ébloui,
Élevèrent la main et crièrent : C’est lui

Et pendant qu’ils criaient, sa robe devint rouge.

Au fond du gouffre où rien ne tressaille et ne bouge
Un écho répéta : — C’est lui! — Les sombres rois
Dirent : — C’est lui! c’est lui! c’est lui! voilà sa croix!
Les clefs du paradis sont dans ses mains fatales. —
Et l’homme-loup, debout sur les cadavres pâles
Dont le sang tiède encor tombait dans l’infini,
Cria d’une voix rauque et sourde : — Il m’a béni.

Et la lueur soudain grandit, funèbre et pure,
Et devint formidable ainsi qu’une figure.
Il semblait que ce fût le jour qui se levait.

XV

L’ange, pareil au lys que la candeur revêt, Dieu au vieillard :
— Écoute et vois. Le juge est proche,
Tu sais pourquoi tu viens et ce qu’on te reproche,
Réponds. —
Lui se tourna vers l’ange en frissonnant,
Et je vis le spectacle horrible et surprenant
D’un homme qui vieillit pendant qu’on le regarde.
L’agonie éteignit sa prunelle hagarde,
Sa bouche bégaya, son jarret se rompit,
Ses cheveux blanchissaient sur son front décrépit,
Ses tempes se ridaient comme si les années
S’étaient subitement sur sa face acharnées,
Ses yeux pleuraient, ses dents claquaient comme au gibet
Les genoux d’un squelette, et sa peau se plombait,
Et, stupide, il baissait, à chaque instant plus pâle,
Sa tête qu’écrasait la tiare papale.

L’ange dit :
— Comprends-tu, vieillard, ce que tu vois?

Il frappa sa poitrine et demeura sans voix,
Et je vis, ô terreur! qu'il vieillissait encore.
Farouche, il regardait cette lugubre aurore
Et la robe de sang dont il était vêtu.

L'ange reprit :
— Voyons, défends-toi, parle; as-tu,
Pour lui jeter ta faute et pour qu'il en réponde,
Au-dessus de ta tête un être dans ce monde?

Et l'homme répondit :
— Je n'ai que vous, mon Dieu!

Alors je crus voir luire un rayon du ciel bleu,
Des sept anges rêveurs les clairons se baissèrent,
Le gouffre, que les nuits insondables enserrent,
Frémit comme frémit l'oiseau pris au lacet,
Et l'espace entendit une voix qui disait :

XVI

« Les vivants sous le ciel tremblent, souffrent et pleurent;

« La vertu, la raison et la sagesse meurent;
« Le crime est consommé.
« L'homme récolte ici ce que là-bas il sème.
« Mastaï, mastaï, Pie appelé neuvième, « Approche, infortuné!

« Nul ne s'évade. Ici les choses sont connues,
« Les os sont transparents et les âmes sont nues;
« Ici tout est clartés;
« L'ombre de l'homme prend la forme de sa vie.
« La justice affamée ici n'est assouvie
« Que de réalités.

« Quand les princes foulaient aux pieds les multitudes,
« Transformaient des pays vivants en solitudes,

« Dressaient les échafauds,
« Et marchaient sur le peuple, affreux, vainqueurs, superbes, « Comme le moissonneur à grands pas dans les herbes
« Marche avec une faulx;

« Tandis que l’orphelin pleurait avec la veuve,
« Et que l’humanité gémissait comme un fleuve,
« Et qu’eux étaient joyeux,
« Et qu’ils pillaient le peuple avec leurs économes,
« Tandis que tous ces rois versaient le sang des hommes
« Comme moi l’eau des cieux;

« Tandis que des couteaux ils aiguisaient les pointes,
« Toi, tu les bénissais; tu tombais les mains jointes
« À genoux sous un dais,
« Et tu me rendais grâce à moi, souverain maître,
« Ne t’imaginant pas que j’existais, ô prêtre,
« Et que je t’entendais!

« Me voici. Vois ma face; et sache que j’existe.
« Ô malheureux, regarde en toi-même et sois triste.
« Une main t’a saisi;
« Comme une vision rappelle-toi le monde;
« Ceci c’est ma clarté; le reste est nuit profonde;
« C’est moi qui suis ici!

« Sache que c’était moi qui t’avais mis au faîte.
« Le jour où, proclamé roi, pontife et prophète,
« Joyeux, tu te courbas,

« Tandis qu’on t’enivrait d’un hymne de victoire,
« Et que tout l’univers te chantait dans ta gloire,
« Je t’ai parlé tout bas;

« Je t’ai dit : — Mastaï, je te charge des hommes.
« Voici la clef du coffre et le compte des sommes
« Qu’il faudra rendre un jour.

« Sois le gardien sublime et le grand solitaire.
« C’est toi qui veilleras au centre de la terre
« Sur le haut de ma tour,

« Je t’ai dit : — Mastaï, travaille en ma présence,
« Remets de la vertu dans l’âme ou l’innocence
« Lentement se détruit;
« C’est toi qui verseras de l’huile dans ma lampe,
« Pour qu’en l’esprit de l’homme où le mal parfois rampe
« Il ne soit jamais nuit.

« Je t’ai dit : — Mastaï, chasse Satan, s’il entre.
« Tous les crimes hideux, rôdant hors de leur antre,
« Guettant l’homme éprouvé,
« Te trouveront debout sur leur route, ô pontife,
« Et fermeront leur gueule et baisseront leur griffe
« Devant ton doigt levé.

« Or, le monde t’a vu, toi le saint, toi l’auguste,
« Dire au crime : courage! et la porte du juste

« A tremblé sur ses gonds.
« Tu louas les bourreaux vainqueurs, toi mon ministre
« Tu pris sur tes genoux, magicien sinistre,
« La tête des dragons.

« Devant le créateur, devant les créatures,
« Tu mis sur les tyrans, tu mis sur les parjures,
« Sur le vol effronté,
« Sur le meurtre ivre et fou qui dans le sang se plonge,
« Tu mis sur cet amas d’horreur et de mensonge
« Mon sceau de vérité.

« Chien du troupeau, tu fus un loup comme les autres!
« Ô rois, ses attentats amnistiaient les vôtres;
« Si bien, pape romain,
« Qu’aujourd’hui, dans le trouble et dans l’inquiétude,

« Pas un abri lointain, pas une certitude
« Ne reste au genre humain!

« Pure étoile éclairant les vivants dans leurs routes,
« La vérité brillait au fond des sombres voûtes
« Où l’œil de l’homme atteint,
« Je t’avais, comme Aron et comme Zoroastre,

« Mis si haut que toi seul pouvais souffler sur l’astre;
« Prêtre, tu l’as éteint!

« J’avais entre tes mains déposé la justice,
« De peur que l’homme n’erre et ne se pervertisse
« Comme au temps de Japhet,
« Des âmes des vivants j’avais fait ton domaine,
« Je t’avais confié la conscience humaine.
« Réponds, qu’en as-tu fait? »
XVII

L’homme resta béant, et, sans cri, sans prière
Et sans souffle, il tomba les deux mains en arrière,
Comme s’il eût été poussé par la clarté
Je sentis tressaillir l’obscure éternité.

Et, comme je fuyais, dans la nuée ardente
Une face apparut et me cria : Mon Dante,
Prends ce pape qui fit le mal et non le bien,
Mets-le dans ton enfer, je le mets dans le mien.

XXI

XXI

Dieu fait les questions pour que l’enfant réponde.

— Les deux bêtes les plus gracieuses du monde,
Le chat et la souris, se haïssent. Pourquoi?
Explique-moi cela, Jeanne. — Non sans effroi
Devant l’énormité de l’ombre et du mystère,
Jeanne se mit à rire. — Eh bien? — Petit grand-père,
Je ne sais pas. Jouons. — Et Jeanne repartit :
— Vois-tu, le chat c’est gros, la souris c’est petit.
— Eh bien? — Et Jeanne alors, en se grattant la tête,
Reprit : — Si la souris était la grosse bête,
À moins que le bon Dieu là-haut ne se fâchât,
Ce serait la souris qui mangerait le chat.

XXII

OCÉAN

OCÉAN

I

Ces bâtiments qui font voile
Suivent chacun leur étoile
Et leur dessein;

Et l’eau bat toutes les proues,
Et l’air souffle à pleines joues
Sur cet essaim.

Ils se dispersent sur l’onde.
Ils vont; ils jettent la sonde
Au flot félon;

Ils ont leur carte et leurs règles;
Ils vont où vont les quatre aigles
De l’aquilon.

— Je pars, dit le capitaine,
Pour Gibraltar, pour Athène,
Pour Tafilet.
— Nous partons, disent les mousses,
Pour Malte où les nuits sont douces
Comme le lait.

— Nous partons, dit le pilote,
Pour l’Inde où la jonque flotte,
Pour Tétuan,
Pour Chypre, île aux belles femmes...
— Et pour le pays des âmes,
Dit l’océan.

La création aveugle
Hurle, glapit, grince et beugle;

Mais, sous sa main,
L’homme la dompte et la brise;
La forêt grondante est prise
Au piége humain.

Le tigre au Jardin des plantes
Passe ses pattes tremblantes

Par les barreaux;
Toute bête est terrassée
Par l’amour et la pensée,
Ces deux héros.

Tous deux ont le diadème.
Ces dompteurs, que l’enfer même
Jadis craignait.
Rois de tous les esclavages,
Tiennent les choses sauvages
Dans leur poignet.

Le fier taureau d’Asturie,
Qui marchait dans sa furie
Sans dévier,
Lui plus noir que l’eau marine,
Un anneau dans la narine,
Suit un bouvier.

Ce grand monstre, la nature,

Qui vivait à l’aventure,
N’écoutant rien,
Ouvrant sur l’homme qui souffre
Toutes les gueules du gouffre,
N’est plus qu’un chien.

L’homme s’accroît et se hausse.
Nul ne sait ce qu’en sa fosse,
Loin du ciel bleu,
Voyant qu’il faut qu’il y dorme,
Le lion, forçat énorme,
Reproche à Dieu.

Persée étouffe Gorgone,
Marthe écrase la dragone
Aux yeux ardents.
Visconti, vêtu de cuivre,
D’un coup de poing, à la guivre
Casse les dents.

Béhémot craint l’homme blême.
Le boa, n’ouvrant pas même
L’œil à demi,
N’est plus, lui serpent superbe,
Qu’un tronc d’arbre qui dans l’herbe
S’est endormi.

Le jaguar tourne en sa cage.
Le morse en un marécage
Croupit muré.
La chanson du pâtre attire
Hors des branches le satyre
Tout effaré.

Depuis Hercule et Thésée,
Teb à la lance aiguisée,
Bellérophon,
Icare qui nomme un golfe,
Hermès sur le sphinx, Astolphe
Sur le griffon,

Il n’est pas au monde un être

Qui ne reconnaisse un maître;
Tout est dompté.
La conquête se consomme;
L’ombre voit au front de l’homme
Une clarté.

Le lynx s’abat sur le ventre
Quand la ménade en son antre
Chante paean;
On prend l’aigle dans son aire...
— Où donc est mon belluaire?
Dit l’océan.

Et l’océan fauve ajoute :
— Je ne suis pas une route.
Que me veut-on?
Je te hais, flambeau sublime,
Que Colomb sur mon abîme
Passe à Fulton.

J’ai ma vague, Etna se lave.
Etna n’est pas un esclave.
Ni moi non plus.

J’ai pour reine et pour captive
La sombre terre attentive
À mon reflux.

Je ne suis pas fait pour être,
Comme le sentier champêtre,
Plein de vivants;
Je suis l’Onde en sa tanière,
Que prennent à la crinière
Les quatre vents!

Je suis le noir gouffre inculte;
Je donne, en mon fier tumulte,

Où rien ne ment,
Pour maître aux flots sourds l’air libre,
Et pour base à l’équilibre
Le tremblement.

Rien n’arrête et ne dirige
Mon formidable quadrige,
Que les typhons
Traînent, et qui, de la Perse
Jusqu’aux Hébrides, disperse
Ses bruits profonds.

Je suis la vaste mêlée,
Reptile, étant l’onde, ailée,
Étant le vent;
Force et fuite, haine et vie,
Houle immense, poursuivie
Et poursuivant.

Je suis, dans l’ombre étoilée,
La figure échevelée
De l’inconnu;
Ma vague, qu’Éole augmente,
Est, quand il lui plaît, charmante
Comme un sein nu.

Je ne suis pas votre auberge,
Je suis la tempête vierge
Qui peut briser
Caps et rochers comme verre,
À qui parfois le tonnerre
Prend un baiser.

Je m’appelle solitude,
Je m’appelle inquiétude,
Et mon roulis
Couvre à jamais des navires,

Des voix, des chansons, des rires,
Ensevelis.

Je suis funeste et salubre.

Je suis le fileur lugubre
Des noirs vallons
Que l’orage sans fin mouille,
Et qui file à sa quenouille
Les aquilons.

Je suis, dans l’écume en poudre,
Le combattant de la foudre,
L’hydre titan.
Je suis sans forme et sans nombre.
Venez, les vents, l’horreur, l’ombre.
Homme, va-t’en.

Je suis souffle, éclair et lame.
Je prends volontiers leur âme
Aux curieux.
Je suis le triple Cerbère
Dont le regard réverbère
Dieu furieux.

J’ai plus de nuit que la tombe.
Léviathan dans ma trombe
N’est plus qu’un ver;
Tout tremble sur mon épaule.
Je lie au poteau du pôle
Le spectre hiver.

Homme, la terre est ta mère.
Cherche ton bien éphémère
Dans ses douleurs;
Broie, arrache, brûle, embrasse.
Perce des chemins. Écrase

Ce tas de fleurs!

La plaine, quand on la ferre,
Obéit, et laisse faire
L’homme ennemi.
La terre est une imbécile;
Et la montagne est docile
À la fourmi.

Les Alpes sont des géantes
Terribles, fauves, béantes,
L’orage au cou;
L’homme rit des monts féroces,
Et, taupe, sous les colosses,
Il fait son trou.

Moi, je ne suis pas la rue.
J’ai pour roue et pour charrue
Le tourbillon;
Je bondis, c’est ma manière;
Je n’accepte pas l’ornière
Ni le sillon.

J’écume à flots sur ma grève,
Va-t’en. Ne viens pas, fils d’Ève,
Frêle rival,

Sauter sur mon dos farouche
Et mettre un mors à la bouche
De mon cheval.

Ma plaine est la grande plaine;
Mon souffle est la grande haleine
Je suis terreur;
J’ai tous les vents de la terre
Pour passants et le mystère
Pour laboureur.

Le météore en ma houle
Tombe, la nuée y croule
En rugissant;
L’écueil, écumant monarque,
À qui je donne la barque,
Me rend le sang;

L’aurore avec épouvante
Regarde mon eau vivante,
Mes rocs ouverts,
Mes colères, mes batailles,
Et les glissements d’écailles
Sous mes flots verts.

Vénus m’apporte son globe.
Je lui relève sa robe
Jusqu’au genou.

Le zéphyr des moissons blondes,
S’il se risque sur mes ondes,
Y devient fou.

Un jour l’orage des plaines
Vint chez moi sur mes baleines
Lancer ses traits;
Mais j’ai, d’un seul cri de rage,
Chassé ce canard sauvage
Dans vos marais!

Quand il vit dans ma caverne
Se sauver l’hydre de Lerne,
Mon compagnon
Typhon dit : Cela nous souille,
Gardons-nous cette grenouille?
Et j’ai dit Non!

Si je faisais une rose,
Moi, gouffre en qui toute chose
S’ébauche et vit,

Le soleil, flambeau fidèle,
Se lèverait auprès d’elle
Sans qu’on le vît.

Hommes, vous rêvez de croire
Que vous vaincrez mon eau noire,
Aux fiers bouillons,
Ma vague aux mille étincelles,
En pendant à des ficelles
Quelques haillons!

C’est donc là votre navire!
Une écorce qui chavire
Sous tout climat!
Cette épingle qui m’éraille,
C’est l’ancre, et ce brin de paille,
C’est le grand mât!

Ces quatre planches mal jointes
Se déchireront aux pointes
Du moindre écueil.
L’homme au front triste, aux mains blanches,
Ne sait clouer que les planches
De son cercueil.

Quoi! je serais si candide!
Porter sur mon dos splendide
Votre wagon!
Dans mon azur sans limite
Voir fumer votre marmite,
Moi le dragon!

Quoi! lui chez moi! l’homme! Il entre!

Sachez que devant mon antre,
Qu’emplit la nuit,
Le sage lion s’arrête,
Et qu’en voyant ma tempête
L’aigle s’enfuit!

Votre présence m’outrage.
Dieu fit mon immense orage
Mystérieux

Et mes flots pleins de désastres,
Pour être vus par ses astres,
Non par vos yeux.

Homme, ta marche est peu droite;
Ton commerce avide exploite
Les flots mouvants;
L’âpre soif de l’or t’anime;
Je donne pour rien l’abîme,
Toi, tu le vends.

Ne viens pas chez moi, te dis-je.
Ne mêle pas au prodige
Tes vils chemins.
Crains mes fureurs justicières!
Ah! vous frémiriez, poussières,
Pâles humains,

Si vous entendiez les choses
Que nous tous, les vents moroses
Et les saisons,
L’air qui souffle et l’eau qui tremble,
Quand nous sommes seuls ensemble,
Nous nous disons!

Devant votre crépuscule
Mon sombre horizon recule;

Vous m’insultez!
Genre humain, foule confuse,
L’ombre éternelle refuse
Vos nouveautés.

Elle refuse vos phares,
Vos boussoles, vos fanfares,
Vos noirs vaisseaux,

Et, quand passe votre flotte,
Indignée, elle sanglote
Au fond des eaux.

Allez-vous-en! Je devine
Qu’on rêve une ère divine
Fin des fléaux.
On court sur l’onde aplanie.
On m’emploie à l’harmonie!
Moi, le chaos!

C’est la paix qui se prépare.
Je n’en veux point. Je sépare.
Je n’unis pas.
Je brise à coups de nageoires
Et je broie en mes mâchoires
Votre compas!

L’homme doit courber sa tête
Sous la guerre et la tempête
Et le volcan.
La terre, c’est la géhenne.
Que chacun garde sa haine
Et son carcan.

Tu n’es pas même un fantôme!
Monstre pour l’archange, atome
Pour le titan,

Rien pour l’espace et le nombre!
L’homme n’est qu’une pénombre;
L’ombre est Satan.

Être mauvais, c’est ta peine.
Sois mauvais. Ta race traîne L’anneau de fer.
Nous sommes tous la souffrance;
Et l’hirondelle espérance
Fuit notre hiver.

Sache que nous, et ces mondes
Qu’on voit, dans nos nuits immondes,
Au firmament,
Nous habitons l’insondable,
L’extrémité formidable
Du châtiment.

Notre nuit est si fatale
Que si la pitié, vestale
Chère aux élus,
Disait : Où donc est ce monde?
J’ai peur que Dieu ne réponde :
Je ne sais plus!

Donc subissez la loi dure.
Endurez ce que j’endure,
L’isolement;
Et soyez, dans votre bouge,
L’un pour l’autre le fer rouge,
Et non l’aimant.

N’essayez pas, dans ma sphère,
D’être frères, et de faire,
Dans ce tombeau,
Quand tout à l’ombre ressemble,
De vos esprits mis ensemble

Un grand flambeau,

Les hommes deviendraient anges!
Je ne veux pas de mésanges,
Moi, maintenant!
Je veux le glaive et le glaive.
Vivez comme dans un rêve,
Tas frissonnant!

Faites comme ont fait vos pères,
Et crénelez vos repaires.
Abhorrez-vous.
Barricadez vos Sodomes.
Dévorez-vous. Soyez hommes
Et restez loups.

Que l’Écosse ait sa claymore,
Le juif sa rage, et le more
Son yatagan;
Que chacun reste en sa ville;
Et qu’on me laisse tranquille
Dans l’ouragan.

II

Et l’homme dit : — Mer affreuse,
Que le char des foudres creuse
Sous son essieu,
Tais-toi dans ton ossuaire.
Tu cherches ton belluaire?
Gouffre, c’est Dieu!

Écoute-moi. La loi change.
Je vois poindre aux cieux l’archange!
L’esprit du ciel
M’a crié sur la montagne :
« Tout enfer s’éteint; nul bagne

N’est éternel. »

Je ne hais plus, mer profonde.
J’aime. J enseigne, je fonde.
Laisse passer.
Satan meurt, un autre empire
Naît, et la morsure expire
Dans un baiser.

Tu ne dois plus dire : arrière!
Tu n’es plus une barrière,
Dragon marin.

Sers l’avenir! porte l’arche.
Rien n’arrête l’homme en marche
Vers Dieu serein.

Rien! pas même toi, chimère,
Monstre de l’écume amère,
Géant puni,
Toi qui, seul dans ta nuit sombre,
As fait ton onde avec l’ombre
De l’infini!

Je vais! je suis le prophète.
À la houle stupéfaite
Je dis mon nom.
La trombe accourt; ma pensée
Fait rentrer cette insensée
Au cabanon.

L’esprit de l’homme, lumière,
Domptant la nature entière,
Onde ou volcan,
Plonge sa clarté sacrée
Dans la prunelle effarée
De l’ouragan.

Pour qu’à nos pas on se range,
Nous n’avons qu’à dire à l’ange
Comme aux démons,
Qu’à dire aux torrents de soufre,
Et qu’à te dire à toi, gouffre :
Nous nous aimons!

L’amour, c’est la loi suprême.
L’amour te vaincra toi-même.
Ton bruit est vain.
Pour que, caressant ta grève,
Ton hymne d’enfer s’achève
En chant divin,

Pour que ton hurlement tombe
Il suffit que la colombe
Qui vient le soir,
Ô sombre gouffre d’écume,
Laisse tomber une plume
Sur ton flot noir.

L’amour, c’est le fond de l’homme.
L’amour, c’est l’antique pomme
Qu’Ève cueillit.
L’ombre passe, l’amour reste.
Il est astre au dais céleste,
Perle en ton lit.

Nos inventions nouvelles
Prendront à tes vents des ailes;
Dieu nous sourit;
Nous monterons sur ta rage,
Nous attellerons l’orage
À notre esprit.

Oui, malgré tes chocs sauvages,

Nous lierons tes deux rivages

D’un trait de feu;
L’avenir aura deux Romes,
Et, près de celle des hommes,
Celle de Dieu.

L’avenir aura deux temples,
Deux lumières, deux exemples,
Un double hymen,
La liberté, force et verbe,
L’unité, portant la gerbe
Du genre humain.

Tais-toi, mer! Les cœurs s’appellent;
Les fils de Caïn se mêlent
Aux fils d’Abel;
L’homme, que Dieu mène et juge,
Bâtira sur toi, déluge,
Une Babel.

À cette Babel morale
Aboutira la spirale
Des deux Sions,
Où sans cesse recommence
Le fourmillement immense
Des nations;

Et tu verras sans colère,
Du tropique au flot polaire
Dieu te calmant,

Au-dessus de l’eau sonore,
Se construire dans l’aurore
Superbement

Les progrès et les idées,

Pont de cent mille coudées
Que rien ne rompt,
Et sur tes sombres marées
Ces arches démesurées Resplendiront.

XXIII

Ô Dieu, dont l’œuvre va plus loin que notre rêve

Ô Dieu, dont l’œuvre va plus loin que notre rêve,
Créateur qui n’as pas de relâche et de trêve!
Œil sans paupière et sans sommeils!
Éternel jet de vie! âme jamais fermée!
Gouffre mystérieux d’où sort une fumée
D’hommes, d’êtres et de soleils!

Humanités dans tous les espaces semées,
Liguez-vous; dressez-vous, innombrables armées,
Et déclarez la guerre à Dieu;
Soit. Luttez, attaquez cet être inabordable,
Cet infini si doux qu’il en est formidable,
Et si profond qu’il en est bleu.

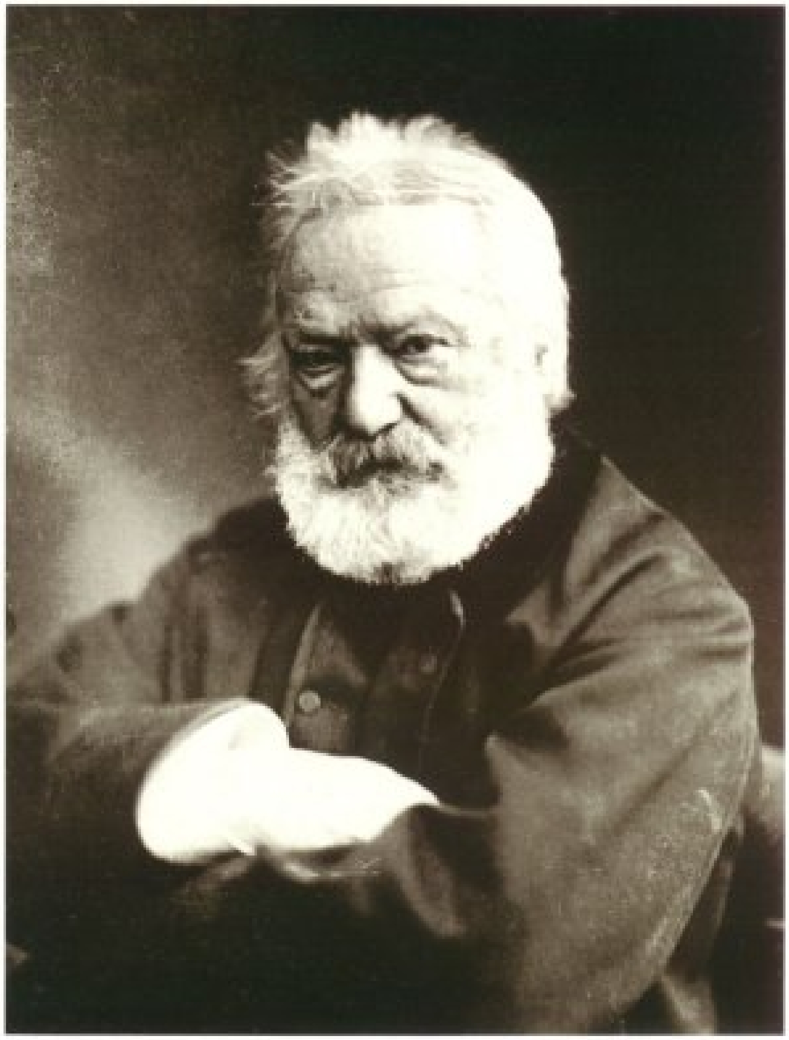
Mesurez-vous, vous l’ombre, à lui la plénitude.
Vous aurez, ô passants, légions, multitude,
Assiégeants de l’immense tour,
Essaim tourbillonnant autour du grand pilastre,
Vivants, avant qu’il ait usé son premier astre,
Dépensé votre dernier jour!

LA FIN DE SATAN

TABLE DES MATIERES

HORS DE LA TERRE I
ET NOX FACTA EST
LA PREMIÈRE PAGE
I. L’ENTRÉE DANS L’OMBRE
II. LA SORTIE DE L’OMBRE
LIVRE PREMIER - LE GLAIVE
STROPHE PREMIÈRE. NEMROD
STROPHE DEUXIÈME. CEUX QUI PARLAIENT DANS LE BOIS
STROPHE TROISIÈME. SELON ORPHÉE ET SELON MELCHISÉDECH
STROPHE QUATRIÈME. L’EXODE DE NEMROD
STROPHE CINQUIÈME. LA TRAPPE D’EN BAS ET LA TRAPPE D’EN HAUT
STROPHE SIXIÈME. LES MAGES ATTENTIFS
Hors de la terre II
La Plume de Satan
LIVRE DEUXIÈME - LE GIBET
I. LA JUDÉE
II. HÉRODE ET CAÏPHE
III. CELUI QUI EST VENU
IV. LES TREIZE PORTES DE JÉRUSALEM
V. LA JUDÉE
VI. LES PAROLES DU DOCTEUR DE LA LOI
VII. CAÏPHE EN CONTEMPLATION
VIII. LA SIBYLLE
II. JÉSUS-CHRIST
I. LA POUTRE
II. LE CANTIQUE DE BETHPHAGÉ
III. LE TRIOMPHE
IV. LE DEVOIR
V. DEUX DIFFÉRENTES MANIÈRES D’AIMER

VI. APRÈS LA PÂQUE
VII. COMMENCEMENT DE L’ANGOISSE
VIII. CHRIST VOIT CE QUI ARRIVERA
IX. JUDAS
X. LILITH-ISIS
XI. JÉSUS CHEZ ANNE
XII. LES DIX-NEUF
XIII. LA CHOSE JUGÉE
XIV. LA FIDÉLITE DU MEILLEUR
XV. L’AUTRE CHAISE D’IVOIRE
XVI. ROSMOPHIM
XVII. PIRE QUE JUDAS
XVIII. LE CHAMP DU POTIER
XIX. ECCE HOMO
XX. LA MARCHE AU SUPPLICE
XXI. TÉNÈBRES
III. LE CRUCIFIX
HORS DE LA TERRE III
Satan dans la nuit
L’ANGE LIBERTÉ
LIVRE TROISIÈME - LA PRISON
La Bastille
DÉNOUEMENT



Hugo, close to the time of his death

HORS DE LA TERRE I

ET NOX FACTA EST

I

Depuis quatre mille ans il tombait dans l’abîme.

Il n’avait pas encor pu saisir une cime,
Ni lever une fois son front démesuré.
Il s’enfonçait dans l’ombre et la brume, effaré,
Seul, et derrière lui, dans les nuits éternelles, Tombaient plus lentement les plumes de ses ailes.
Il tombait foudroyé, morne silencieux,
Triste, la bouche ouverte et les pieds vers les cieux,
L’horreur du gouffre empreinte à sa face livide.
Il cria: - Mort! - les poings tendus vers l’ombre vide.
Ce mot plus tard fut homme et s’appela Caïn.
Il tombait. Tout à coup un roc heurta sa main;
Il l’étreignit, ainsi qu’un mort étreint sa tombe,
Et s’arrêta.
 Quelqu’un, d’en haut, lui cria: - Tombe!
Les soleils s’éteindront autour de toi, maudit! -
Et la voix dans l’horreur immense se perdit.
Et, pâle, il regarda vers l’éternelle aurore.
Les soleils étaient loin, mais ils brillaient encore.
Satan dressa la tête et dit, levant le bras:
— Tu mens! - Ce mot plus tard fut l’âme de Judas.
Pareil aux dieux d’airain debout sur leurs pilastres,
Il attendit mille ans, l’oeil fixé sur les astres.
Les soleils étaient loin, mais ils brillaient toujours.
La foudre alors gronda dans les cieux froids et sourds.
Satan rit, et cracha du côté du tonnerre.
L’immensité, qu’emplit l’ombre visionnaire,
Frissonna. Ce crachat fut plus tard Barabbas.
Un souffle qui passait le fit tomber plus bas.
II

La chute du damné recommença. - Terrible,
Sombre, et piqué de trous lumineux comme un crible,
Le ciel plein de soleils s’éloignait, la clarté
Tremblait, et dans la nuit le grand précipité,
Nu, sinistre, et tiré par le poids de son crime,
Tombait, et, comme un coin, sa tête ouvrait l’abîme.
Plus bas! plus bas! toujours plus bas! Tout à présent
Le fuyait; pas d’obstacle à saisir en passant,
Pas un mont, pas un roc croulant, pas une pierre,
Rien, l’ombre, et d’épouvante il ferma sa paupière.
Quand il rouvrit les yeux, trois soleils seulement
Brillaient, et l’ombre avait rongé le firmament.
Tous les autres soleils étaient morts.

III

Une roche
Sortait du noir brouillard comme un bras qui s’approche.
Il la prit, et ses pieds touchèrent des sommets.

Alors l’être effrayant qui s’appelle Jamais
Songea. Son front tomba dans ses mains criminelles.
Les trois soleils, de loin, ainsi que trois prunelles,
Le regardaient, et lui ne les regardait pas.
L’espace ressemblait aux plaines d’ici-bas,
Le soir, quand l’horizon qui tressaille et recule,
Noircit sous les yeux blancs du spectre crépuscule.
De longs rayons rampaient aux pieds du grand banni.
Derrière lui son ombre emplissait l’infini.
Les cimes du chaos se confondaient entre elles.
Tout à coup il se vit pousser d’horribles ailes;
Il se vit devenir monstre, et que l’ange en lui
Mourait, et le rebelle en sentit quelque ennui.
Il laissa son épaule, autrefois lumineuse,
Frémir au froid hideux de l’aile membraneuse,
Et croisant ses deux bras, et relevant son front,
Ce bandit, comme s’il grandissait sous l’affront,

Seul dans ces profondeurs que la ruine encombre,
Regarda fixement la caverne de l’ombre.
Les ténèbres sans bruit croissaient dans le néant.
L’opaque obscurité fermait le ciel béant;
Et, faisant, au-delà du dernier promontoire,
Une triple fêlure à cette vitre noire,
Les trois soleils mêlaient leurs trois rayonnements.
Après quelque combat dans les hauts firmaments,
D’un char de feu brisé l’on eût dit les trois roues.
Les monts hors du brouillard sortaient comme des proues.
Eh bien, cria Satan, soit! Je puis encor voir!
Il aura le ciel bleu, moi j’aurai le ciel noir.
Croit-il pas que j’irai sangloter à sa porte?
Je le hais. Trois soleils suffisent. Que m’importe!
Je hais le jour, l’azur, le rayon, le parfum! -

Soudain, il tressaillit; il n’en restait plus qu’un.

IV

L’abîme s’effaçait. Rien n’avait plus de forme.
L’obscurité semblait gonfler sa vague énorme.
C’était on ne sait quoi de submergé; c’était
Ce qui n’est plus, ce qui s’en va, ce qui se tait;
Et l’on n’aurait pu dire, en cette horreur profonde,
Si ce reste effrayant d’un mystère ou d’un monde,
Pareil au brouillard vague où le songe s’enfuit,
S’appelait le naufrage ou s’appelait la nuit;
Et l’archange sentit qu’il devenait fantôme.
Il dit: - Enfer! - Ce mot plus tard créa Sodome.

Et la voix répéta lentement sur son front:
— Maudit! autour de toi les astres s’éteindront. -

Et déjà le soleil n’était plus qu’une étoile.

V

Et tout disparaissait par degrés sous un voile.

L’archange alors frémit; Satan eut le frisson.
Vers l’astre qui tremblait, livide, à l’horizon,
Il s’élança, sautant d’un faîte à l’autre faîte.
Puis, quoiqu’il eût horreur des ailes de la bête,
Quoique ce fût pour lui l’habit de la prison,
Comme un oiseau qui va de buisson en buisson,
Hideux, il prit son vol de montagne en montagne,
Et ce forçat se mit à courir dans ce bagne.

Il courait, il volait, il criait: - Astre d’or!
Frère! attends-moi! j’accours! ne t’éteins pas encor!
Ne me laisse pas seul! -

Le monstre de la sorte
Franchit les premiers lacs de l’immensité morte,
D’anciens chaos vidés et croupissant déjà,
Et dans les profondeurs lugubres se plongea.

L’étoile maintenant n’était qu’une étincelle.

Il entra plus avant dans l’ombre universelle,
S’enfonça, se jeta, se rua dans la nuit,
Gravit les monts fangeux dont le front mouillé luit,
Et dont la base au fond des cloaques chancelle,
Et, triste, regarda devant lui.

L’étincelle
N’était qu’un point rougeâtre au fond d’un gouffre obscur.
VI

Comme entre deux créneaux se penche sur le mur
L’archer qu’en son donjon le crépuscule gagne,
Farouche, il se pencha du haut de la montagne,
Et sur l’astre, espérant le faire étinceler,
Comme sur une braise il se mit à souffler,
Et l’angoisse gonfla sa féroce narine.
Le souffle qui sortit alors de sa poitrine

Est aujourd’hui sur terre et s’appelle ouragan.
A ce souffle, un grand bruit troubla l’ombre, océan
Qu’aucun être n’habite et qu’aucuns feux n’éclairent,
Les monts qui se trouvaient près de là s’envolèrent,
Le chaos monstrueux plein d’effroi se leva
Et se mit à hurler: Jéhova! Jéhova!
L’infini s’entr’ouvrit, fendu comme une toile,
Mais rien ne remua dans la lugubre étoile;
Et le damné criant: - Ne t’éteins pas! j’irai!
J’arriverai! - reprit son vol désespéré.

Et les volcans mêlés aux nuits qui leur ressemblent
Se renversaient ainsi que des bêtes qui tremblent,
Et les noirs tourbillons et les gouffres hideux
Se courbaient éperdus pendant qu’au-dessus d’eux,
Volant vers l’astre ainsi qu’une flèche à la cible,
Passait, fauve et hagard, ce suppliant terrible.

Et depuis qu’il a vu ce passage effrayant,
L’âpre abîme, effaré comme un homme fuyant,
Garde à jamais un air d’horreur et de démence,
Tant ce fut monstrueux de voir, dans l’ombre immense,
Voler, ouvrant son aile affreuse loin du ciel,
Cette chauve-souris du cachot éternel!
VII

Il vola dix mille ans. Pendant dix mille années, Tendant son cou farouche et ses mains forcenées,
Il vola sans trouver un mont où se poser.
L’astre parfois semblait s’éteindre et s’éclipser,
Et l’horreur du tombeau faisait frissonner l’ange;
Puis une clarté pâle, obscure, vague, étrange,
Reparaissait, et l’ange alors disait: Allons.
Autour de lui planaient les oiseaux aquilons.
Il volait. L’infini sans cesse recommence.
Son vol dans cette mer faisait un effet immense.
La nuit regardait fuir ses horribles talons.

Comme un nuage sent tomber ses tourbillons,
Il sentait s’écrouler ses forces dans le gouffre.
L’hiver murmurait: tremble! et l’ombre disait: souffre!
Enfin il aperçut au loin un noir sommet
Que dans l’ombre un reflet formidable enflammait.
Satan, comme un nageur fait un effort suprême,
Tendit son aile onglée et chauve, et, spectre blême,
Haletant, brisé, las, et, de sueur fumant,
Il s’abattit au bord de l’âpre escarpement.

VIII

Le soleil était là qui mourait dans l’abîme.

L’astre, au fond du brouillard, sans vent qui le ranime
Se refroidissait, morne et lentement détruit.
On voyait sa rondeur sinistre dans la nuit;
Et l’on voyait décroître, en ce silence sombre,
Ses ulcères de feu sous une lèpre d’ombre.
Charbon d’un monde éteint! flambeau soufflé par Dieu!
Ses crevasses montraient encore un peu de feu
Comme si par les trous du crâne on voyait l’âme.
Au centre palpitait et rampait une flamme
Qui par instants léchait les bords extérieurs,
Et de chaque cratère, il sortait des lueurs
Qui frissonnaient ainsi que de flamboyants glaives,
Et s’évanouissaient sans bruit comme des rêves.
L’astre était presque noir. L’archange était si las Qu’il n’avait plus de voix et plus de souffle, hélas!
Et l’astre agonisait sous ses regards farouches.
Il mourait, il luttait. Avec ses sombres bouches
Dans l’obscurité froide il lançait par moments
Des flots ardents, des blocs rougis, des monts fumants,
Des rocs tout écumants de sa clarté première:
Comme si ce volcan de vie et de lumière,
Englouti par la brume où tout s’évanouit,
N’eût point voulu mourir sans insulter la nuit
Et sans cracher sa lave à la face de l’ombre.

Autour de lui le temps et l’espace et le nombre
Et la forme et le bruit expiraient, en créant
L’unité formidable et noire du néant.
Le spectre Rien levait sa tête hors du gouffre.
Soudain, du cœur de l’astre, un âpre jet de soufre,
Pareil à la clameur du mourant éperdu,
Sortit, clair, éclatant, splendide, inattendu,
Et, découpant au loin mille formes funèbres,
Enorme, illumina, jusqu’au fond des ténèbres,
Les porches monstrueux de l’infini profond.
Les angles que la nuit et l’immensité font
Apparurent. Satan, égaré, sans haleine,
La prunelle éblouie et de ce rayon pleine,
Battit de l’aile, ouvrit les mains, puis tressaillit
Et cria: - Désespoir! le voilà qui pâlit! -

Et l’archange comprit, pareil au mât qui sombre,
Qu’il était le noyé du déluge de l’ombre;
Il reploya ses ailes aux ongles de granit,
Et se tordit les bras, et l’astre s’éteignit.
IX

Or, près des cieux, au bord du gouffre où rien ne change,
Une plume échappée à l’aile de l’archange
Etait restée, et pure et blanche, frissonnait.
L’ange au front de qui l’aube éblouissante naît,
La vit, la prit, et dit, l’oeil, sur le ciel sublime:
— Seigneur, faut-il qu’elle aille, elle aussi, dans l’abîme? -
Il leva la main, Lui par la vie absorbé,
Et dit: - Ne jetez pas ce qui n’est pas tombé.
*

Antres noirs du passé, porches de la durée
Sans dates, sans rayons, sombre et démesurée,
Cycles antérieurs à l’homme, chaos, cieux,
Monde terrible et plein d’êtres mystérieux,
O brume épouvantable où les préadamites

Apparaissent, debout dans l’ombre sans limites,
Qui pourrait vous sonder, gouffres, temps inconnus!
Le penseur qui, pareil aux pauvres, va pieds nus
Par respect pour Celui qu’on ne voit pas, le mage,
Fouille la profondeur et l’origine et l’âge,
Creuse et cherche au-delà des colosses, plus loin
Que les faits dont le ciel d’à présent est témoin,
Arrive en pâlissant aux choses soupçonnées,
Et trouve, en soulevant des ténèbres d’années,
Et des couches de jours, de mondes, de néants,
Les siècles monstres morts sous les siècles géants.
Et c’est ainsi que songe au fond des nuits le sage
Dont un reflet d’abîme éclaire le visage.

LA PREMIÈRE PAGE

I. L'ENTRÉE DANS L'OMBRE

I

Noë rêvait. Le ciel était plein de nuées.
On entendait au loin les chants et les huées
Des hommes malheureux qu'un souffle allait courber.
Un nuage muet soudain laissa tomber
Une goutte de pluie au front du patriarche.
Alors Noë, suivi des siens, entra dans l'arche,
Et Dieu pensif poussa du dehors le verrou.

Le mal avait filtré dans les hommes. Par où?
Par l'idole; par l'âpre ouverture que creuse
Un culte affreux dans l'âme humaine ténébreuse.
Ces temps noirs adoraient le spectre Isis-Lilith,
La fille du démon, que l'Homme eut dans son lit
Avant qu'Eve apparût sous les astres sans nombre,
Monstre et femme que fit Satan avec de l'ombre
Afin qu'Adam reçût le fiel avant le miel,
Et l'amour de l'enfer avant l'amour du ciel.
Eve était nue. Isis-Lilith était voilée.
Les corbeaux l'entouraient de leur fauve volée;
Les hommes la nommaient Sort, Fortune, Ananké;
Son temple était muré, son prêtre était masqué;
On l'abreuvait de sang dans le bois solitaire;
Elle avait des autels effrayants. Et la terre Subissait cette abjecte et double obscurité:
En bas Idolâtrie, en haut Fatalité.

Aussi depuis longtemps tout était deuil et crainte.
Le juste - un seul restait - attendait la mort sainte
Comme un captif attend qu'on lève son écrou.

Le tigre en sa caverne et la taupe en son trou

Disaient depuis longtemps: l’homme commet des crimes.
Une noire vapeur montait aux cieux sublimes,
Fumée aux flots épais des sombres actions.
Depuis longtemps l’azur perdait ses purs rayons,
Et par instants semblait plein de hideuses toiles
Où l’araignée humaine avait pris les étoiles.

Car dans ces temps lointains, de ténèbres voilés,
Où la nature et l’homme étaient encore mêlés,
Les forfaits rayonnaient dans l’espace, en désastres,
Et les vices allaient éteindre au ciel les astres.
Le mal sortait de l’homme et montait jusqu’à Dieu.
Le char du crime avait du sang jusqu’à l’essieu;
Le meurtre, l’attentat, les luxures livides
Riaient, buvaient, chantaient, régnaient; les fils avides
Soufflaient sur les parents comme sur un flambeau;
Ce que la mort assise au seuil noir du tombeau
Voyait d’horreurs, faisait parler cette muette.
La nuit du cœur humain effrayait la chouette;
L’ignorance indignait l’âne; les guet-apens,
Les dols, les trahisons faisaient honte aux serpents;
Si bien que l’homme ayant rempli son âme immonde
D’abîmes, Dieu put dire au gouffre: Emplis le monde.

L’urne du gouffre alors se pencha. Le jour fuit;
Et tout ce qui vivait et marchait devint nuit.
Eve joignit les mains dans sa tombe profonde.
II

Tout avait disparu. L’onde montait sur l’onde.
Dieu lisait dans son livre et tout était détruit.
Dans le ciel par moments on entendait le bruit
Que font en se tournant les pages d’un registre.
L’abîme seul savait, dans sa brume sinistre,
Ce qu’étaient devenus l’homme, les voix, les monts.
Les cèdres se mêlaient sous l’onde aux goémons;
La vague fouillait l’antre où la bête se vautre.

Les oiseaux fatigués tombaient l’un après l’autre.
Sous cette mer roulant sur tous les horizons
On avait quelque temps distingué des maisons,
Des villes, des palais difformes, des fantômes
De temples dont les flots faisaient trembler les dômes;
Puis l’angle des frontons et la blancheur des fûts
S’étaient mêlés au fond de l’onde aux plis confus;
Tout s’était effacé dans l’horreur de l’eau sombre.
Le gouffre d’eau montait sous une voûte d’ombre;
Par moments, sous la grêle, au loin, on pouvait voir
Sur le blême horizon passer un coffre noir;
On eût dit qu’un cercueil flottait dans cette tombe.
Les tourbillons hurlants roulaient l’écume en trombe.
Des lueurs frissonnaient sur la rondeur des flots.
Ce n’était ni le jour, ni la nuit. Des sanglots,
Et l’ombre. L’orient ne faisait rien éclore.
Il semblait que l’abîme eût englouti l’aurore.
Dans les cieux, transformés en gouffres inouïs,
La lune et le soleil s’étaient évanouis;
L’affreuse immensité n’était plus qu’une bouche
Noire et soufflant la pluie avec un bruit farouche.
La nuée et le vent passaient en se tordant.
On eût dit qu’au milieu de ce gouffre grondant
On entendait les cris de l’horreur éternelle.

Soudain le bruit cessa. Le vent ploya son aile.
Sur le plus haut sommet où l’on pouvait monter
La vague énorme enfin venait de s’arrêter,
Car l’élément connaît son mystère et sa règle.
Le dernier flot avait noyé le dernier aigle.
On n’apercevait plus dans l’espace aplani
Que l’eau qui se taisait dans l’ombre, ayant fini.
Le silence emplissait la lugubre étendue.
La terre, sphère d’eau dans le ciel suspendue,
Sans cri, sans mouvement, sans voix, sans jour, sans bruit,
N’était plus qu’une larme immense dans la nuit.

III

Dans ce moment-là, tout étant dans l'insondable,
Un fantôme apparut sur l'onde formidable.
Ce géant était trombe, ouragan et torrent.
Des hydres se tordaient dans son oeil transparent;
Il semblait encor plein de la tempête enfuie;
Sa face d'eau tremblait sous ses cheveux de pluie;
Et voici ce que l'ombre effarée entendit:
Le géant se tourna vers le gouffre maudit,
Fit trois pas, et cria: - Chaos, reprends ce monde!

Une tête sortit de la brume profonde;
Aveugle, énorme, horrible, à l'autre bout des cieux;
Ayant deux gouffres noirs à la place des yeux;
Se dressa, pâle, et dit: - Je ne veux pas, déluge!
IV

LE DELUGE.
Reprends-le.

LE CHAOS.
Non.

LE DELUGE.
Il est rejeté.

LE CHAOS.
Par quel juge?

LE DELUGE.
Par Lui.

LE CHAOS.
Pourquoi?

LE DELUGE.
Le ver s'est glissé dans le fruit.

Le condamné d’en bas a soufflé dans la nuit
Le mal au cœur de l’homme à travers la nature;
L’homme, ouvert à l’erreur, au piège, à l’imposture,
Jusqu’au crime de vice en vice descendu,
Est devenu vipère, et sa bouche a mordu;
Le talon du Seigneur a senti la piqûre;
Et voilà ce qu’a fait, du fond de l’ombre obscure,
L’être qui vit sous terre au Dieu qui vit au ciel.
Ce monde était méchant et noir, l’être éternel
Le laisse tomber, monstre, et tu peux le reprendre.

LE CHAOS.
Pourquoi me l’a-t-il pris, si c’est pour me le rendre?

LE DELUGE.
J’ai roulé sur les monts le flot sombre et tonnant.
Tout est mort. J’ai fini; c’est à toi maintenant.
Reçois ce monde au fond de l’abîme où nous sommes.

LE CHAOS.
J’ai déjà les dragons, je ne veux pas des hommes.
V

L’éclair cria: - Silence aux pieds d’Adonaï! -
Et le chaos se tut dans le gouffre ébloui.
Et l’archange qui veille entre deux pilastres
Du seuil mystérieux plein d’yeux qui sont les astres,
Se courba sous l’azur sans oser faire un pas
Et dit au Dieu vivant: Le chaos n’en veut pas.
Et Dieu dit: Je consens que ce monde revive.

II. LA SORTIE DE L’OMBRE

I

L’eau baissa, comme un flux qui s’en va d’une rive,
Et les flots monstrueux, décroissant par degrés,
Descendirent du haut des monts démesurés.
Au-dessus de la terre une voix dit: Clémence!
Le crâne décharné de la noyée immense
Apparut, et l’horreur éclaira sous les cieux
Ce cadavre sans souffle et sans forme et sans yeux,
Les rochers, les vallons, et les forêts mouillées
Qui pendaient à son front de marbre, échevelées.
L’antre, où les noirs arrêts dans l’ombre étaient écrits,
Semblait la bouche ouverte encor pleine de cris;
Les monts sortaient de l’eau comme une épaule nue.
Comme l’onde qui bout dans l’airain diminue,
L’océan s’en allait, laissant des lacs amers.
Ces quelques flaques d’eau sont aujourd’hui nos mers.
Tout ce que le flot perd, la nature le gagne.
L’île s’élargissant se changeait en montagne;
Les archipels grandis devenaient continents.
De son dos monstrueux poussant leurs gonds tournants,
Le déluge fermait ses invisibles portes.
Les ténèbres dormaient sur les profondeurs mortes,
Et laissaient distinguer à peine l’ossement
Du monde, que les eaux découvraient lentement.
Soudain, réverbérée au vague front des cimes,
Une lueur de sang glissa sur les abîmes;
On vit à l’horizon lugubrement vermeil
Poindre une lune rouge, et c’était le soleil.

Pendant quarante jours et quarante nuits sombres,
La mer, laissant à nu d’effroyables décombres,
Recula, posant l’arche aux monts près d’Henocha,

Puis ce lion, rentré dans l’antre, se coucha.

II

Dieu permit au soleil de jeter l’étincelle.
Alors un bruit sortit de l’ombre universelle,
Le jour se leva, prit son flambeau qui blêmit,
Et vint; le vent, clairon de l’aube, se remit
A souffler; un frisson courut de plaine en plaine;
L’immensité frémit de sentir une haleine,
La montagne sourit, l’espace s’éveilla,
Et le brin d’herbe au bord des eaux, dit: Me voilà!

Mais tout était hagard, morne et sinistre encore,
Et c’est dans un tombeau que se levait l’aurore.

III

Derrière ces grands monts où plus tard l’aube a lui
Et que nous appelons les Alpes aujourd’hui,
Un marais descendait vers l’océan sans borne.
Dans ce désert vaste, âpre, impénétrable et morne,
Comme un ver qui se glisse à travers les roseaux,
Un fleuve, né d’hier, traînait ses pâles eaux,
Et découpait une île au pied d’un coteau sombre,
Sans savoir qu’en ces joncs, pleins de souffles sans nombre,
Germait, foetus géant, la plus grande des Tyrs.
Le coteau, qui plus tard fut le mont des martyrs,
Lugubre, se dressait sur l’île et sur le fleuve.
L’oiseau, l’être qui va, la bête qui s’abreuve,
Etaient absents; l’espace était vide et muet,
Et le vent dans les cieux lentement remuait
Les sombres profondeurs par les rayons trouées.
Dans la fange expiraient des hydres échouées.

C’est dans cet endroit-là, tout étant mort, pendant
Que les nuages gris croulaient sur l’occident
Comme de grands vaisseaux qui dans la nuit chavirent,
C’est là que les forêts et les collines virent

Soudain, tout se taisant dans l’univers détruit,
Un voile blanc marcher droit dans l’ombre et sans bruit;
Et l’ombre eut peur; et l’arbre, et la vague, et l’étoile,
Et les joncs, frissonnaient de voir passer ce voile.
Il allait, comme si quelqu’un était dessous.
Les êtres du passé, dans la vase dissous,
Semblaient, cherchant encore à tordre leurs vertèbres,
Rouvrir quand il passait leurs yeux pleins de ténèbres.
Le ciel qui s’entr’ouvrait referma son azur.

Tout à coup une voix sortit du voile obscur;
Le flot, qui sous le vent redevenait sonore,
Se tut, et quatre fois cette voix vers l’aurore,
Vers le sud, vers le triste occident, vers le nord,
Cria: Je suis Isis, l’âme du monde mort!

IV

Un long frisson émut le cadavre; la fange,
Pleine de monstres morts, fit une plainte étrange;
Et le spectre se mit à parler dans les vents:
Il a pu noyer l’homme et les êtres vivants,
Mais il n’a pu tuer l’airain, le bois, la pierre.
Or, nature qui viens de fermer la paupière,
Ecoute, écoutez-moi, flots, rochers, vents du ciel,
Car, ô témoins pensifs du deuil universel,
Il faut que vous sachiez ces sombres aventures:
Lorsque Caïn, l’aïeul des noires créatures,
Eut terrassé son frère, Abel au front serein,
Il le frappa d’abord avec un clou d’airain,
Puis avec un bâton, puis avec une pierre;
Puis il cacha ses trois complices sous la terre
Où ma main qui s’ouvrait dans l’ombre les a pris.
Je les ai. Sachez donc ceci, vents, flots, esprits,
Tant qu’il me restera dans les mains ces trois armes,
Je vaincrai Dieu; matin, tu verseras des larmes!
L’être qui vit sous terre et moi, nous lutterons.
Si Dieu veut sous les eaux engloutir les affronts,

Les haines, les forfaits, le meurtre, la démence,
Les fureurs, il faudra toujours qu’il recommence.
Oui, les déluges noirs, pareils aux chiens grondants
Qui veulent qu’on les lâche et qui montrent les dents,
Tant que le vieux Caïn vivra sous ces trois formes,
Pourront à l’horizon gonfler leurs flots énormes.

V

Le voile en s’écartant laissa voir dans deux mains
Un bâton, une pierre arrachée aux chemins,
Puis un long clou, semblable au verrou d’une porte;
Et si, dans ce tombeau de la nature morte,
Quelque oeil vivant eût pu rester dans l’ombre ouvert,
Sur le clou, sur le bois noueux et jadis vert,
Et sur l’affreux caillou pareil aux crânes vides,
Cet oeil eût distingué trois souillures livides;
Et le spectre montra ces trois taches au ciel,
Et cria: Cieux profonds! Voici du sang d’Abel!

Alors une lueur sortit, sinistre et sombre,
De ces trois noirs témoins des temps qui sont dans l’ombre;
L’être toujours voilé, blanc et marchant sans bruit,
Se pencha vers la terre et cria dans la nuit,
Et comme s’il parlait à quelqu’un sous l’abîme:
— O père! J’ai sauvé les trois germes du crime!

Sous la terre profonde un bruit sourd répondit.

Il reprit: - Clou d’airain qui servis au bandit,
Tu t’appelleras Glaive et tu seras la guerre;
Toi, bois hideux, ton nom sera Gibet; toi, pierre,
Vis, creuse-toi, grandis, monte sur l’horizon,
Et le pâle avenir te nommera prison.

LIVRE PREMIER - LE GLAIVE

STROPHE PREMIÈRE. NEMROD

I

De nouveaux jours brillaient; la terre était vivante;
Mais tout, comme autrefois, était plein d'épouvante.
L'ombre était sur Babel et l'horreur sur Endor.
On voyait le matin, quand l'aube au carquois d'or
Lance aux astres fuyants ses blanches javelines,
Des hommes monstrueux assis sur les collines;
On entendait parler de formidables voix,
Et les géants allaient et venaient dans les bois.
II

Nemrod, comme le chêne est plus haut que les ormes,
Etait le plus grand front parmi ces fronts énormes;
Il était fils de Chus, fils de Cham, qui vivait
En Judée et prenait le Sina pour chevet.
Son aïeul était Cham, le fils au rire infâme,
Dont Noë dans la nuit avait rejeté l'âme.
Cham, depuis lors, grondait comme un vase qui bout.
Cham assis dépassait les colosses debout,
Et debout il faisait prosterner les colosses.
Il avait deux lions d'Afrique pour molosses.
Atlas et le Liban lugubre au sommet noir
Tremblaient quand il jouait de la flûte le soir;
Parfois Cham, dans l'orage ouvrant ses mains fatales,
Tâchait de prendre au vol l'éclair aux angles pâles;
Arrachant la nuée, affreux, blême, ébloui,
Il bondissait de roche en roche, et devant lui,
Le tonnerre fuyait comme une sauterelle.
Si l'ouragan passait, Cham lui cherchait querelle.
Quand il fut vieux, Nemrod le laissa mourir seul.
Ayant ri comme fils, il pleura comme aïeul.
Donc Nemrod était fils de ces deux hommes sombres.

La terre était encore couverte de décombres
Quand était né, sous l’oeil fixe d’Adonaï,
Ce Nemrod qui portait tant de ruine en lui.

Etant jeune, et, chassant les lynx dans leur refuge,
Il avait, en fouillant les fanges du déluge,
Trouvé dans cette vase un clou d’airain, tordu,
Colossal, noir débris de l’univers perdu,
Et qu’on eût dit forgé par les géants du rêve;
Et de ce clou sinistre il avait fait son glaive.
Nemrod était profond comme l’eau Nagaïn;
Son arc avait été fait par Tubalcaïn
Et douze jougs de bœuf l’eussent pu tendre à peine;
Il entendait marcher la fourmi dans la plaine;
Chacune de ses mains, affreux poignets de fer,
Avait six doigts pareils à des gonds de l’enfer;
Ses cheveux se mêlaient aux nuages sublimes;
Son cor prodigieux qui sonnait sur les cimes
Etait fait d’une dent des antiques mammons,
Et ses flèches perçaient de part en part les monts.

III

Un jour, il vit un tigre et le saisit; la bête
Sauta, bondit, dressa son effroyable tête,
Et se mit à rugir dans les rocs effrayés
Comme la mer immense, et lui lécha les pieds;
Et quand il eut dompté le tigre, il dompta l’homme;
Et quand il eut pris l’homme, il prit Dan, Tyr, Sodome,
Suze, et tout l’univers du Caucase au delta,
Et quand il eut conquis le monde, il s’arrêta.

Alors il devint triste et dit: Que vais-je faire?

IV

Son glaive nu donnait le frisson à la terre.
Derrière ce glaive âpre, affreux, hideux, rouillé,
La Guerre, se dressant comme un pâtre éveillé,

Levait à l’horizon sa face de fantôme.
Et, tout tremblants, au fond des cités, sous le chaume,
Les hommes éperdus distinguaient dans la nuit,
Fronde en main, et soufflant dans des trompes épiques,
Cet effrayant berger du noir troupeau des piques.
Ce spectre était debout à droite de Nemrod.

Nemrod, foulant aux pieds la tiare et l’éphod,
Avait atteint, béni du scribe et de l’augure,
Le sommet sombre où l’homme en dieu se transfigure.
Il avait pour ministre un eunuque nommé
Zaïm, et vivait seul, dans sa tour enfermé.
L’eunuque lui montrait du doigt le mal à faire.
Et Nemrod regardait comme l’aigle en son aire;
Ses yeux fixes faisaient hurler le léopard.
Quand on disait son nom sur terre quelque part,
La momie ouvrait l’oeil dans la grande syringe,
Et les peuples velus à la face de singe
Qui vivent dans des trous à la surface du Nil
Tremblaient comme des chiens qui rentrent au chenil.
Les bêtes ne savaient s’il était homme ou bête.
Les hommes sous Nemrod comme sous la tempête
Se courbaient; il était l’effroi, la mort, l’affront;
Il avait le baiser de l’horreur sur le front;
Les prêtres lui disaient: O Roi, Dieu vous admire!
Ur lui brûlait l’encens, Tyr lui portait la myrrhe.
Autour du conquérant le jour était obscur.
Il en avait noirci des deux côtés l’azur;
A l’orient montait une sombre fumée
De cent villes brûlant dans la plaine enflammée;
Au couchant, plein de mort, d’ossements, de tombeaux,
S’abattait un essaim immense de corbeaux;
Et Nemrod contemplait, roi de l’horreur profonde,
Ces deux nuages noirs qu’il faisait sur le monde,
Et les montrait, disant: Nations, venez voir
Mon ombre en même temps sur l’aube et sur le soir.

STROPHE DEUXIÈME. CEUX QUI PARLAIENT DANS LE BOIS

I

Pendant qu'on l'adorait, l'eunuque son ministre
Chantait d'une voix douce au fond du bois sinistre:

Mourez, vivants! Croulez, murs! Séchez-vous, sillons!
Tombez, mouches du soir, peuples, vains tourbillons!
Blanchissez, ossements! Pleurs, coulez! Incendies
Etendez sur les monts vos pourpres agrandies!
Cités, brûlez au vent! Cadavres, pourrissez!
Jamais l'eunuque noir ne dira: C'est assez!
Car ce banni rugit sur l'éden plein de flamme;
Car ce veuf de l'amour est en deuil de son âme;
Car il ne sera pas le père au front joyeux;
Car il ne verra point une femme aux doux yeux
Emplir, assise au seuil de la maison morose,
La bouche d'un enfant du bout de son sein rose!
Je suis du paradis le témoin torturé.
O vivants, je me venge, et le maître exécré,
C'est moi qui l'ai lâché sur la terre où nous sommes;
J'ai vu Nemrod errant dans la forêt des hommes;
J'ai fait un tigre avec ce lion qui passait.
Je jette ma pensée, invisible lacet,
Et je sens tressaillir dans ce filet le monde.
L'arbre est vert; j'applaudis la hache qui l'émonde;
Des hommes dévorés j'écoute les abois;
Chasse, ô Nemrod! - C'est moi qui au glaive: bois!
Et j'attise à genoux la guerre, moi l'envie.
Les autres êtres sont les vases de la vie,
Moi je suis l'urne horrible et vide du néant.
Je verse l'ombre. Nain, j'habite le géant;

Toutes ses actions composent ma victoire;
Il est le bras farouche et je suis l’âme noire.
La guerre est. Désormais, dans mille ans, ou demain,
Toute guerre sera parmi le genre humain
Une flèche de l’arc de Nemrod échappée.
O Nemrod, premier roi du règne de l’épée,
Va! c’est fait. L’âme humaine est allumée, et rien
Ne l’éteindra. L’indou, l’osque, l’assyrien,
Ont mordu dans la chair comme Eve dans la pomme.
La guerre maintenant ne peut s’arrêter, l’homme
Ayant bu du sang d’homme et l’ayant trouvé bon.
L’embrasement sans fin naîtra du vil charbon.
Mort! l’homme va crouler sur l’homme en avalanche.
Mort! l’humanité noire et l’humanité blanche,
Les grands et les petits, les tours et les fossés
Vont se heurter ainsi que des flots insensés.
Temps futurs! lutte, horreur, tas sanglants, foules viles!
Chaînes autour des camps, chaînes autour des villes,
Marches nocturnes, pas ténébreux, voix dans l’air;
Les tentes sur les monts, les voiles sur la mer!
O vision! chevaux aux croupes pommelées!
O tempêtes de chars et d’escadron! mêlées!
Nuages d’hommes, chocs, panaches, éperons!
Bouches ivres de bruit soufflant dans des clairons!
Les casques d’or; les tours sonnant des funérailles;
Des murailles sans fin; d’où sortez-vous, murailles?
Des champs dorés changés en gueules de l’enfer;
Les hydres légions aux écailles de fer;
Des glaives et des yeux tourbillonnant en trombes;
La semence des os faisant lever des tombes;
L’orgueil aveugle aux chants joyeux, chaque troupeau
Promenant son linceul qu’il appelle drapeau;
Des vaisseaux se mordant avec des becs difformes,
Si bien que la mer glauque et l’onde aux plis énormes,
Les gouffres, les écueils, verront l’homme hideux,
Et que Léviathan dira: Nous sommes deux!
O tumulte profond des siècles dans la haine!

Abrutissement fauve et fou! terreur! géhenne!
Obscurité! furie à toute heure, en tout lieu!
Sinistre cliquetis de l’homme contre Dieu!
Combattants! combattants! sortez des nuits profondes.
Les uns viendront avec des haches et des frondes;
Des bêtes de la mort faites par l’homme horrible.
Des couleuvres de bronze au cou long et terrible
Souffleront et feront s’envoler à grand bruit
Le cheval, la fanfare et l’homme dans la nuit.
On meurt! on meurt! hiboux, corbeaux, noires volées!
Villes prises d’assaut! ô femmes violées!
O vengeance! - tuez! pourquoi? pour rien. Allez.
Ils tueront. Ils tueront, de massacres essoufflés,
Le riche en son palais, les pauvres dans les bouges,
Et se proposeront, portant des urnes rouges,
D’emplir avec du sang le sépulcre sans fond.
Tuez. Ce que Dieu fit, les hommes le défont.
Bien. O guerre! ô dragon qui dans l’ombre me lèches!
Le grand ciel est rayé d’un ouragan de flèches!
Bien. Guerre, roule-toi sur les peuples agneaux;
Noue à l’humanité tes lugubres anneaux;
Guerre! L’homme content veux que tu l’extermines.
Détruis! fais fourmiller les légions vermines.
Mange! Mange les camps, les murs, les chars mouvants,
Mange les tours de pierre et les ventres vivants;
Mange les dieux et mange aussi les rois; travaille;
Mange le laboureur, le soc, l’épi, la paille,
Le champ; mange l’abeille et mange l’alcyon;
Sois le ver monstrueux du fruit création.
Dieu! Pourquoi créas-tu la mort? l’homme invente;
L’eunuque bat des mains, ébloui d’épouvante.
Tuez, tuez! - Au nord, au couchant, au midi,
Partout, cercle effroyable et sans cesse agrandi,
La bataille repaît mes yeux visionnaires.
Oh! le sombre avenir roule plein de tonnerres!
Oh! dans l’air à jamais je vois la mort sifflant!
Oh! je vois à jamais saigner la guerre au flanc

De l’humanité triste, affreuse et criminelle;
Et le mutilé rit à la plaie éternelle!
Les races sécheront comme un torrent d’été;
La vierge sera veuve avant d’avoir été;
La mère pleurera d’avoir été féconde,
O joie! - En ce moment Nemrod est seul au monde;
La terre est encor faible et n’en peut porter qu’un;
Mais le ciel germera sous le ciel importun,
Mais vous pullulerez, ô glaive, ô cimeterre;
Quel spectacle quand tout se mordra sur la terre,
Et quand tous les Nemrods se mangeront entr’eux!
Parfois je vais, au bord d’un fleuve ténébreux,
Regarder, sur le sable ou dans les joncs d’une île,
Le vautour disputer sa proie au crocodile;
Chacun veut être seul, chacun veut être roi,
Chacun veut tout; et moi, je ris des cris d’effroi
Que poussent les roseaux de l’Euphrate ou du Tigre
Quand le lézard brigand lutte avec l’oiseau tigre.
Ainsi, peuples, de loin, je savoure vos deuils.
Vous avez les berceaux, vivants! J’ai les cercueils.
J’aspire le parfum des corps sans sépulture.
Ah! pourquoi m’a-t-on pris ma part de la nature!
Vous m’avez arraché du sein qui m’échauffait,
Quand j’étais tout petit, moi qui n’avais rien fait!
Vous avez tué l’homme et laissé l’enfant vivre!
Soyez maudits! Je hais. Ma propre horreur m’enivre.
Malheur à ce qui vit! Malheur à ce qui luit!
Je suis le mal, je suis le deuil, je suis la nuit.
Malheur! Pendant qu’au bois le loup étreint la louve,
Pendant que l’ours ému cherche l’ourse et la trouve,
Que la femme est à l’homme, et le nid à l’oiseau,
Que l’air féconde l’eau tremblante, le ruisseau
L’herbe, et que le ramier s’accouple à la colombe,
Moi l’eunuque, j’ai pris pour épouse une tombe!

II

Et dans le même bois et de l’autre côté

Un lépreux s’écriait:

Nature! immensité!
Etoiles! profondeurs! fleurs qu’en tremblant je nomme,
Ne maudissez pas que moi! soyez bonnes pour l’homme!
O Dieu, quand je suis né, vous ne regardiez pas.
La lèpre, rat hideux de la cave trépas,
Me ronge, et j’ai la chair toute déchiquetée.
Je suis la créature immonde et redoutée.
La terre ne m’a pris que pour me rejeter.
Les buissons ont pitié de me voir végéter;
Ce qu’ils ont en bourgeons sur moi croît en pustules.
Ma peau, quand je suis nu, fait peur aux tarentules.
De loin, au chevrier, au pâtre, au laboureur,
J’apparais, spectre, avec le masque de l’horreur.
La lèpre erre sur moi comme un lierre sur l’orme.
La sève qui, gonflant tout de son flot énorme,
Emplit de lionceaux les antres, les doux nids
De soupirs, de rameaux les arbres rajeunis,
La rose de parfums et l’espace de mondes,
Me fait manger vivant par des bêtes immondes!
Je suis le souffle peste et le toucher poison;
Je suis dans une plaie un esprit en prison,
Ame qui pleure au fond d’une fange qui saigne,
Je suis ce que le pied foule, écrase et dédaigne,
L’ordure, le rebut, le crapaud du chemin,
Le crachat de la vie au front du genre humain.
Je me tords, enviant la beauté des chenilles.
Mon reflet rend la source horrible; mes guenilles
Montrent ma chair, ma chair montre mes os; je suis
L’abjection du jour, l’infection des nuits.
Ainsi qu’un fruit pourri, la vie est dans ma bouche.
J’ai beau me retourner sur la cendre où je couche,
Je ressemble au remords qui ne peut pas dormir.
Quand je sors, ma maison a l’air de me vomir;
Quand je rentre, je sens me résister ma porte.
Seigneur! Seigneur! je suis importun au cloporte,

Le chien me fuit, l’oiseau craint mon front qui pâlit,
Et le porc monstrueux regarde mal mon lit.
Sous le ciel profond et bleu, mon âme est seule.
Ma bouche n’ose pas même baiser la gueule.
L’antre en me voyant gronde et devient soucieux.
Chaque jour rayonnant qui passe sous les cieux
Est un bourreau qui vient me traîner dans la claie.
Le tesson du bourbier, dont j’ai raclé ma plaie,
Va s’en plaindre à la fange et dit: il m’a sali.
Tout est votre pensée et je suis votre oubli,
Seigneur; le mal me tient sous sa griffe cruelle.
Des enfants en riant m’ont cassé mon écuelle;
Je n’ai plus que ma main lépreuse pour puiser
L’eau dans le creux du roc où l’air vient la verser,
De sorte qu’à présent je bois dans mon ulcère.
Seigneur! Seigneur! je suis dans le cachot misère.
La création voit ma face et dit: dehors!
La ville des vivants me repousse, et les morts
Ne veulent pas de moi, dégoût des catacombes.
Le ver des lèpres fait horreur au ver des tombes.
Dieu! je ne suis pas mort et ne suis pas vivant.
Je suis l’ombre qui souffre, et les hommes trouvant
Que pour l’être qui pleure et qui rampe et se traîne,
C’était trop peu du chancre, ont ajouté la haine.
Leur foule, ô Dieu, qui rit et qui chante, en passant
Me lapide saignant, expirant, innocent;
Ils vont marchant sur moi comme sur de la terre;
Je n’ai pas une plaie où ne tombe une pierre.
Eh bien! je suis content, Dieu, si je souffre seul!
Eh bien! je tire à moi tous les plis du linceul
Pour qu’il n’en flotte rien sur la tête des autres!
Eh bien! je ne sais pas quelles lois sont les vôtres,
Mais, dans mon anathème et mon accablement,
Je le dis, puisse, ô Dieu du profond firmament,
Du fond de ma nuit noire, en ce monde où nous sommes,
Mon malheur rayonner en bonheur sur les hommes!
Qu’ils vivent dans la joie et l’oubli, jamais las!

Ce qu’il vous doit, ô Dieu, l’homme l’ignore hélas!
Oh! que je sois celui qui pleure et qui rachète!
Laissez-moi vous payer leur rançon en cachette,
Dieu bon, par qui Noë connut le raisin mûr!
Femmes qui, si ma tête ose passer mon mur,
Si je tâche en passant de voir votre lumière,
Frémissantes, crachez sur ma pauvre chaumière,
Et qui vous enfuyez avec des cris d’effroi,
Que Dieu vous donne, hélas! L’amour qu’il m’ôte à moi!
Je vous bénis. Chantez dans cette vie amère.
Petit enfant qui tiens la robe de ta mère,
Et qui, si tu me vois songeant sous l’infini,
Dis: Mère, quel est donc ce monstre? sois béni.
Vous hommes, qui riez des pleurs de mes paupières,
O mes frères lointains qui me jetez des pierres,
Soyez bénis! bénis sur terre et dans les cieux!
Pères, dans vos enfants, et, fils, dans vos aïeux!
Car, puisque l’eau veut bien que ma lèvre la touche,
La bénédiction doit sortir de ma bouche,
Puisque mon bras peut prendre un fruit dans le chemin,
La bénédiction doit tomber de ma main,
Et, Ciel, puisque mon oeil voit ta face éternelle,
La bénédiction doit emplir ma prunelle!
Oui, j’ai le droit d’aimer! J’ai le droit de pencher
Mon cœur sur l’homme, l’arbre et l’onde et le rocher;
J’ai le droit de sacrer la terre vénérable
Etant le plus abject et le plus misérable!
Je dois bénir le plus étant le plus maudit.
Donc, terre, monts sacrés dont Adam descendit,
Fleuves, je vous bénis, et je vous bénis, plaines;
Vous tous, êtres! oiseaux, moutons aux blondes laines,
Fourmis des bois, pasteurs dans vos tentes de crin,
Toi, mer, qui resplendis comme un liquide airain,
Bêtes qui ressemblez à des branches horribles,
Fleurs dont les parfums sont des rayons invisibles,
Ciel qui nous dis tout bas dans l’ombre: je suis près;
Nocturnes profondeurs des muettes forêts,

Sources qui répandez vos murmures dans l'herbe,
Joncs frémissants qu'émeut le souffle, né du verbe,
Bœuf qui mugis, lion qui vas, chevreau qui pais,
Soyez dans la lumière et soyez dans la paix!
Moi je dois me cacher, l'homme n'est pas mon hôte;
J'ai la nuit. Pourquoi suis-je horrible? C'est ma faute.
Pardonnez-moi! pardon, ô femme! pardon, fleur!
Pardon, jour! - entrouvrant ses lèvres de douleur,
Mon ulcère, ô vivants, tâche de vous sourire.
Oui, vous avez bien fait, frères, de me proscrire
Puisque je souffrais tant que je vous faisais peur.
C'est de l'amour qui sort quand vous broyez mon cœur.
Le lépreux y consent, vivez, homme et nature!
Dans le ciel radieux je jette ma torture,
Ma nuit, ma soif, ma fièvre et mes os chassieux,
Et le pus de ma plaie et les pleurs de mes yeux,
Je les sème au sillon des splendeurs infinies,
Et sortez de mes maux, biens, vertus, harmonies!
Répands-toi sur la vie et la création,
Sur l'homme et sur l'enfant, lèpre! et deviens rayon!
Sur mes frères que l'ombre aveugle de ses voiles,
Pustules, ouvrez-vous et semez les étoiles!
O Dieu! dont ici-bas tout n'est que la vapeur,
O Dieu, rayonnement qu'adore ma stupeur,
O Dieu, qui portez l'astre et tenez le tonnerre,
Clarté que l'aigle montre aux aiglons dans son aire,
Ame! abîme! écoutez la prière du ver!
Faites devant l'été décroître l'âpre hiver,
La triste nuit devant l'aurore, les misères
Devant l'homme, les maux devant le bien, les serres
Devant le doux oiseau, les loups devant le daim!
Ramenez par la main le couple dans Eden.
Réconciliez l'être, ô père, avec les choses.
Arrachez doucement les épines des roses.
Faites que la brebis admire le lion.
Supprimez le combat, le choc, le talion;
Soufflez sur les fureurs et les horreurs humaines,

Et faites une fleur avec toutes ces haines!
Versez sur tous leurs fronts la sereine beauté.
O songeur de l’obscure et calme éternité,
Etre mystérieux dont les sphères débordent,
Dieu! faites se baiser les bouches qui se mordent;
Emplissez de bonheur les rameaux verts, mettez
La femme dans la grâce et l’homme à ses côtés;
Faites mûrir le fruit; faites lâcher la proie;
Faites des berceaux blancs sortir un bruit de joie,
Croître le lys, fleurir l’arbre, rire le jour,
Et sous l’immense azur chanter l’immense amour!

Et les astres voyaient dans les splendeurs profondes,
Pendant que, bénissant l’homme, les plaines blondes,
Les grands fleuves, les bois, les monts silencieux,
S’ouvrait et se dressait lentement vers les cieux,
La main du lépreux, noire, affreuse, triste et frêle,
La main de Jéhovah se lever derrière elle.

STROPHE TROISIÈME. SELON ORPHÉE ET SELON MELCHISÉDECH

I

Dans son désœuvrement Nemrod, d’ombre chargé,
Ravagea de nouveau le monde ravagé,
Recommença, brûla deux fois les mêmes villes,
Rougit la vaste mer du flamboiement des îles,
Brûla Ségor, brûla Gergesus, brûla Tyr.
Puis, ayant tout détruit, il se mit à bâtir.
Il construisit Achad, il créa Babylone,
Il bâtit Gour dans l’ombre où le vent tourbillonne,
Resen dans les palmiers, Chalanné sur les monts;
Lieux qu’on ne nommait pas comme nous les nommons.
Il fit, pour abriter Pytiunte et Dioscure,
Un mur énorme au fond de la Tauride obscure;
Il habilla d’acier ses soldats triomphants;
Il fit trembler des tours au dos des éléphants;
Il troua le Caucase ébranlé sur son axe;
Il versa dans la mer le Cyrus et l’Araxe;
Mais rien n’emplit son âme; il disait: J’ai vécu.
Que faire? et, chaque jour, plus las et plus vaincu,
Morne, il sentait monter dans son cœur solitaire
L’immense ennui d’avoir conquis toute la terre.
II

L’an deux mille, Nemrod, passant les flots émus,
Vint jusqu’à Dodanim que nous nommons l’Hémus.
Là, dans un noir désert dont le lion est l’hôte,
Il entendit quelqu’un qui parlait à voix haute.
C’était Orphée. Orphée au front calme, écouté
Par la sombre nature émue à sa clarté,
Homme à qui se frottait le dos des bêtes fauves,

Racontait aux forêts, aux vents, aux vieux monts chauves,
La bataille où les dieux vainquirent les typhons.
Voici ce que disait Orphée aux bois profonds:

«Les géants n'avaient plus de montagnes. Leur fuite «Commençait, et l'Europe était presque détruite.
«Ils avaient entassé Pinde, Ossa, Pélion,
«Rhodope, et ces monts noirs d'où fuyait le lion,
«Nus, renversés, fumaient d'éclairs et de brûlures,
«Et leurs torrents pendaient comme des chevelures.
«Et les géant s couraient vers les mers où fut Tyr.
«Ils voyaient les dieux vaincre, et Neptune engloutir «Oromédon sous Cos, Polybe sous Nisyre.
«Thryx embrasé fondait comme un flambeau de cire.
«Porphyrion, levant ses mains vides, criait
«A la terre, rôdant au loin, spectre inquiet:
«Mais apporte-nous donc une montagne, mère!
«Crès, par la foudre étreint, lui jetait l'onde amère.
«Andès, frère d'Astrée et père de Thallo,
«S'en allait à grands pas au plus profond de l'eau,
«Et jusqu'à la ceinture avait la mer Egée;
«Zeus Jupiter vint, la main d'éclairs chargée,
«Et lui cria: Sois pierre, ô monstre! Et le géant
«Vit Zeus, devint roche et s'arrêta béant.
«Et Titan dit: Merci! tu nous donnes des armes!
«Et, pendant que tremblait la terre, aïeule en larmes,
«Il courut, et, prenant Andès par le milieu,
«Il jeta le géant à la tête du dieu.»

Et Nemrod rêveur dit: Titan est mon ancêtre.

Il revint vers les monts où l'on voit l'aube naître;
Il rentra dans Assur que la splendeur revêt.
Son glaive, d'où la guerre était sortie, avait
Une tache inconnue, empreinte indélébile,
Que Nemrod par moments contemplait immobile.

Un soir, dans un lieu sombre où marchait ce bandit,
Une voix qui parlait dans un rocher, lui dit:
— Passe, Dieu reste. - Et lui, cria: J’ai pour royaume
Le monde; toi, qu’es-tu? - La voix reprit: - Fantôme,
Je suis Melchisédech, je vivrai dans mille ans. -
Nemrod dit: - Qu’as-tu vu depuis que dans ses flancs
Ce roc t’enferme? - Et l’être enfoui sous la pierre
Dit: « - Je suis âme, et l’âme est un oeil sans paupière.
«Le monde a commencé par être horrible. Avant
«Que le front se dressât plein de l’esprit vivant,
«Avant que, dominant l’animal et la plante,
«La pensée habitât la prunelle parlante,
«Et qu’Adam, par la main tenant Eve, apparût,
«L’ébauche fourmillait dans la nature en rut,
«Le poulpe aux bras touffus, la torpille étoilée,
«D’immenses vers volants, dont l’aile était onglée,
«De hauts mammons velus, nés dans les noirs limons, «Troublaient l’onde, ou levaient leurs trompes sur les monts.
«Sous l’enchevêtrement des forêts inondées
«Glissaient des mille-pieds, long de cinq cent coudées,
«Et de grands vibrions, des volvoces géants
«Se tordaient à travers les glauques océans.
«L’être était effrayant. La vie était difforme.
«Partout rampait l’impur, l’affreux, l’obscur, l’énorme.
«La vermine habitait le globe chevelu.
«Et l’homme était absent; Dieu n’ayant pas voulu
«Donner ce noir spectacle à voir à l’âme humaine.
«Satan, dans ce lugubre et féroce domaine,
«Passait, comme un chasseur qui souffle dans son cor;
«Mais, avant ce temps-là, c’était plus sombre encor.
«Tout l’univers n’était qu’une morne fumée.
«Ainsi que des oiseaux dans une main fermée,
«L’horreur tenait captifs le germe et l’élément.
«Un tout, qui n’était rien, vivait confusément.
«Des apparitions flottaient sur l’insondable.
«Au fond de cette brume étrange et formidable,
«Comme si, quoique rien ne fût encor puni,

«Le gouffre eût essayé d’engloutir l’infini,
«On voyait, aux lueur des visions funèbres,
«S’ouvrir et se fermer la gueule des ténèbres.
«Partout apparaissait, à l’oeil épouvanté,
«La face du néant, faite d’obscurité.
«A chaque instant, le fond redevenait la cîme;
«Et, comme une nuée au-dessus d’un abîme,
«Dans cette ombre où rampaient les larves des fléaux,
«Le monstre Nuit planait sur la bête Chaos.
«C’était ainsi quand Dieu se levant, dit à l’ombre:
«Je suis. Ce mot créa les étoiles sans nombre,
«Et Satan dit à Dieu: Tu ne seras pas seul.”

Nemrod pensif cria: - Satan est mon aïeul.

III

Il resta trente jours au fond des solitudes
Rêvant par les rocs aux sombres attitudes;
Quand il revint son oeil brillait comme un flambeau.
Son eunuque Zaïm, plus noir que le tombeau,
Se prosternant, lui dit: - Roi, vous avez la terre.
Vous êtes roi d’Assur, dont Tyr est tributaire.
Il a suffi qu’Assur vînt pour qu’il triomphât
Aux sources de Cadès qu’on nomme aussi Misphat.
Dieu règne moins que vous. Votre face est sacrée.
Et vous faites couler, sur la terre qu’il crée,
Des rivières de sang près de ses fleuves d’eau.
L’homme porte Nemrod, et l’âne porte son fardeau.
A qui sont les palmiers d’Edom, l’herbe fleurie
D’Hébron, les trois cents tours qui gardent Samarie?
A vous. A qui les fronts, les yeux et les genoux
Des vieillards, des enfants et des femmes? A vous.
A qui l’Ibère brun qui parle avec emphase?
A vous. Sarapanis, citadelle de Phase?
A vous. Vous avez pris, sous les dattiers lointains,
Sa ville à Phetrusim, père des philistins.
Le Nil est votre chien, Thèbe est votre captive.

Trois chars passent de front sur les murs de Ninive;
Et Ninive est à vous. Gour veut vous obéir.
Sidon, les horréens dans les monts de Seïr,
Ophir, les bijoutiers qui sculptent les ivoires
Dans Cariathaïm, la ville aux portes noires,
Tout est à vous; Sichem, Chanaan, Hazerod.
Il ne reste plus rien.

- Que le ciel, dit Nemrod.

STROPHE QUATRIÈME. L’EXODE DE NEMROD

I

Il s’en retourna seul au désert; et cet homme,
Ce chasseur, c’est ainsi que la terre le nomme,
Avait un projet sombre; et les vagues démons
Se le montraient du doigt. Il prit sur de grands monts
Que battaient la nuée et l’éclair et la grêle,
Quatre aigles qui passaient dans l’air, et sous leur aile
Il mit tout ce qu’il put de la foudre et des vents.
Puis il écartela, hurlant, mordant, vivants,
Entre ses poings de fer, quatre lions lybiques,
Et suspendit leurs chairs au bout de quatre piques.
Puis le géant rentra dans Suze aux larges tours,
Et songea trente jours; au bout des trente jours,
Nemrod prit dans sa main les aigles, sur sa nuque
Chargea les lions morts, et, suivi de l’eunuque,
S’en alla vers le mont Ararat, grand témoin.
Il monta vers la cime où les peuples de loin
Voyaient trembler au vent le squelette de l’arche.
Il atteignit le faîte en deux heures de marche.
L’arche en voyant Nemrod trembla. Le dur chasseur
Prit ces débris, verdis dans leur lourde épaisseur
Par la terre mouillée, antique marécage,
Et de ces madriers construisit une cage,
Chevillée en airain, carrée, à quatre pans,
Et sur les trous du bois mit des peaux de serpents;
Et cette cage, vaste et sinistre tanière,
Pour toute porte avait deux trappes à charnière,
L’une dans le plafond, l’autre dans le plancher.
Et l’eunuque tremblait et n’osait approcher.
Nemrod debout foulait le pic inabordable.

Il allait et venait, charpentier formidable;
La terre l'écoutait remuer sur le mont;
Le bruit de son marteau, troublant l'éther profond,
Faisait au loin lever la tête aux monts Carpathes;
Accroupis, devant Thèbe allongeant leurs deux pattes,
De leur oeil fixe où l'ombre a l'air de rayonner,
Les sphynx le regardaient, cherchant à deviner.
Et la mer Caspienne en bas rongeait la grève.

Au bout d'un long sapin il attacha son glaive,
Puis pesa dans sa main ce vaste javelot,
Et dit: c'est bien. Le mont qu'avait couvert le flot
Et qui connaissait Dieu, frémit sous sa pensée.
II

Par une corde au sol la cage était fixée.
Il mit aux quatre coins les quatre aigles béants.
Il leur noua la serre avec ses doigts géants
Et les monts entendaient les durs oiseaux se plaindre.
Puis il lia, si haut qu'ils n'y pouvaient atteindre,
Au-dessus de leurs fronts inondés de rayons
Les piques où pendaient la viande des lions;
Nemrod dans ce char, noir comme l'antique Erèbe,
Mit un siège pareil à son trône de Thèbe,
Et cent pains de maïs et cent outres de vin.
Zaïm n'essayait pas même un murmure vain;
Et dans la cage, auprès de sa chaise thébaine,
Le roi fit accroupir l'eunuque au front d'ébène;
Et les cèdres disaient: Que va-t-il se passer?
Sur la cage inquiète et prête à traverser
Des horizons nouveaux et d'étranges tropiques,
Les quatre aigles criaient au pied des quatre piques.

Alors, une tiare au front comme Mithra,
Nemrod, son arc au dos, sa flèche au poing, entra
Dans la cage, et le roc tressaillit sur sa base;
Et lui, sans prendre garde aux frissons du Caucase,

Vieux mont qui songe à Dieu sous les soirs étoilés,
Coupa la corde, et dit aux quatre aigles: Allez.

Et d’un bond les oiseaux effrayants s’envolèrent.

III

Et dans l’immensité que les astres éclairent,
La cage s’éleva, liée à leurs pieds noirs.
Alors, tandis qu’en bas les lacs, vastes miroirs,
Les palmiers verts, les champs rayés par les cultures,
Horeb et Sinaï, sombres architectures,
Et les bois et les tours rampaient, et qu’emportés
Dans l’air, battant de l’aile au milieu des clartés,
Les quatre aigles cherchaient du bec la chair sanglante,
Il sortit presque hors de la cage volante,
Farouche, et regarda les montagnes d’Assur
Qui, s’enfonçant avec leurs forêts dans l’azur,
Semblaient tomber, dans l’ombre au loin diminuées,
Et s’écria, penché sur le gouffre:

- O nuées,
Nemrod, le conquérant de la terre, s’en va!
Je t’avertis là-haut, Jéhovah! Jéhovah!
C’est moi. C’est moi qui passe, ô monts aux cimes blanches,
Bois, regardez monter l’homme à qui sont vos branches,
Mer, regarde monter l’homme à qui sont tes flots,
Morts, regardez monter l’homme à qui sont vos os!
Terre, herbes que les vents courbent sous leurs haleines,
O déserts, noirs vallons, lacs, rochers, grandes plaines,
Levez vos fronts sans nombre et vos millions d’yeux,
Je m’en vais conquérir le ciel mystérieux!

IV

Et l’esquif monstrueux se ruait dans l’espace.
Les noirs oiseaux volaient, ouvrant leur bec rapace.
Les invisibles yeux qui sont dans l’ombre épars
Et dans le vague azur s’ouvrent de toutes parts,

Stupéfaits, regardaient la sinistre figure
De ces brigands ailés à l’immense envergure,
Et le char vision, tout baigné de vapeur,
Montait; les quatre vents n’osaient souffler de peur
De voir se hérisser le poitrail des quatre aigles.

Plus sans frein, sans repos, sans relâche et sans règles,
Les aigles s’élançaient vers les lambeaux hideux,
Plus le but reculant montait au-dessus d’eux,
Et, criant comme un bœuf qui réclame l’étable,
Les grands oiseaux, traînant la cage redoutable,
Le poursuivaient toujours sans l’atteindre jamais.
Et pendant qu’ils montaient, gouffres noirs, clairs sommets,
Tout s’effarait; l’étrusque, et l’osque, et le pélasge
Disaient: - Qu’est-ce que c’est que ce sombre attelage?
Est-ce le char où sont les orages grondants?
Est-ce un tombeau qui monte avec l’âme dedans? -
Pharan, Nachor, Sephar, solitudes maudites,
Les colosses gardiens des cryptes troglodytes,
Les faucons de la mer, les mouettes, les plongeons,
L’homme du bord des eaux dans sa hutte de joncs,
Chalanné, devant qui Thèbes semblait petite,
Gomorrhe, fiancée au noir lac asphaltite,
Sardes, Ninive, Tyr, maintenant sombre amas,
Hoba, ville qu’on voit à gauche de Damas,
Edom sous le figuier, Saba sous le lentisque,
Avaient peur; Ur tremblait; et les joueurs de disque
S’interrompaient, levant la tête et regardant;
Les chameaux, dont le cou dort sur le sable ardent,
Ouvraient l’oeil; le lézard se dressait sous le lierre,
Et la ruche disait: vois! à la fourmilière.
Le nuage hésitait et rentrait son éclair;
La cigogne lâchait la couleuvre dans l’air;
Et la machine ailée en l’azur solitaire
Fuyait, et pour la voir vint de dessous la terre
Un oiseau qu’aujourd’hui nous nommons le condor.
Et la mer d’Ionie, aux grandes îles d’or,

Ce gouffre bleu d’où sort l’odeur des violettes,
Frissonnait; dans les champs de meurtre, les squelettes
Se parlaient; le sépulcre au fronton nubien,
Le chêne qui salue et dit à Dieu: c’est bien!
Et l’antre où les lions songent près des prophètes,
Tremblaient de voir courir cette ombre sur leurs têtes
Et regardaient passer cet étrange astre noir.
Et Babel s’étonnait. Calme comme le soir
Nemrod rêvait au fond de la cage fermée.
Et les puissants oiseaux, la prunelle enflammée,
Montaient, montaient sans cesse, et volant, furieux,
Vers la chair, le faisaient envoler vers les cieux.

Symbole de nos sens lorsqu’allant vers la femme,
Eperdus, dans l’amour ils précipitent l’âme.

Mais l’amour n’était pas au cœur du dur chasseur.

Isis montrait ce char à Cybèle sa sœur.
Dans les temples profonds de Crète et de Tyrrhène
Les dieux olympiens à la face sereine
Ecoutaient l’affreux vol des quatre alérions.
Même aujourd’hui, l’arabe, à l’heure où nous prions,
Cherche s’il ne va pas voir encore dans l’espace
La constellation des quatre aigles qui passe;
Et, dans l’Afrique ardente où meurt le doux gazon,
Morne terre qui voit toujours à l’horizon
Nemrod, l’homme effrayant, debout, spectre de gloire,
Le pâtre, si son oeil trouve une tâche noire
Sur le sable où vivaient Sidon et Sarepta,
Devient pensif et dit: C’est l’ombre qu’il jeta.

V

Et les aigles montaient.

  Leurs ailes éperdues
Faisaient, troublant au loin les calmes étendues,

Un vaste tremblement dans l’immobilité;
Autour du char vibrait l’éther illimité,
Mer que Dieu jusque-là seul avait remuée.

Comme ils allaient franchir la dernière nuée,
Les monts noirs qui gisaient sur terre, soucieux,
Virent le premier aigle escaladant les cieux
Comme s’il ne devait jamais en redescendre,
Se tourner vers l’aurore et crier: Alexandre!
Le deuxième cria du côté du midi:
Annibal! Le troisième, à l’oeil fixe et hardi,
Sur le rouge occident jeta ce cri sonore:
César! Le dernier, vaste et plus terrible encore,
Fit dans le sombre azur signe au septentrion
Ouvrit son bec de flamme et dit: Napoléon!

STROPHE CINQUIÈME. LA TRAPPE D’EN BAS ET LA TRAPPE D’EN HAUT

I

L’infini se laissait pousser comme une porte;
Et tout le premier jour se passa de la sorte;
Et les aigles montaient.
   Or Nemrod, sans le voir,
Sentit, au souffle obscur qui se répand le soir,
Que la nuit folle allait couvrir sa pâle crypte;
Les mains sur les genoux comme l’Hermès d’Egypte,
Il dit au noir: - Hibou que ma droite soutient,
Vois comment comme est la terre et ce qu’elle devient. -
L’eunuque ouvrit la trappe en bas, et dit: - La terre,
Tachée et jaune ainsi qu’une peau de panthère,
Emplit l’immensité; dans l’espace changeant
Les fleuves sont épars comme des fils d’argent;
Notre ombre noire court sur les collines vertes;
De vos ennemis morts les plaines sont couvertes
Comme d’épis fauchés au temps de la moisson;;
Les villes sont en flamme autour de l’horizon;
O Roi, vous êtes grand. Malheur à qui vous brave!
— Approchons-nous du ciel, dit Nemrod? - et l’esclave Ouvrit la trappe haute et dit: - Le ciel est bleu.
II

Et les aigles montaient.

    L’espace sans milieu
Ne leur résistait pas et cédait à leurs ailes;
L’ombre, où les soleils sont comme des étincelles,
Laissait passer ce char plein d’un sombre projet.
Lorsque l’eunuque avait faim ou soif, il mangeait;

Et Nemrod regardait, muet, cette chair noire
Prendre un pain et manger, percer une outre et boire;
Le chasseur infernal qui se croyait divin
Songeait, et, dédaignant le maïs et le vin,
Il buvait et mangeait, cet homme de désastres,
L'orgueil d'être traîné par les aigles aux astres.
Sans dire un mot, sans faire un geste, il attendit,
Rêveur une semaine entière, puis il dit:
— Vois comment est la terre. - Et l'eunuque difforme
Dit: - La terre apparaît comme une sphère énorme
Et pâle, et les vapeurs, à travers leurs réseaux, Laissent voir par moments les plaines et les eaux. - Nemrod dit: - Et le ciel? - Zaïm reprit: - Roi sombre, Le ciel est bleu. -

III

Le vent soufflait en bas dans l'ombre.
Et les aigles montaient.

Et Nemrod attendit
Un mois; montant toujours; puis il cria: - Maudit, Regarde en bas et vois ce que devient la terre. -
Zaïm dit: - Roi, sous qui la foudre doit se taire,
La terre est un point noir et semble un grain de mil. -
Et Nemrod fut joyeux. - Nous approchons, dit-il.
Vois! regarde le ciel maintenant. Il doit être
Plus près. - Zaïm leva la trappe et dit: - O maître, Le ciel est bleu. -

IV

Le vent triste soufflait en bas;
Et les aigles montaient.

L'archer des noirs combats
Attendit, sans qu'un souffle échappât à son âme,
Un an, montant toujours, puis: - Chien que hait la femme,
Cria-t-il! Vois! La terre a-t-elle encor décru?

L’eunuque répondit: - La terre a disparu?
Roi, l’on ne voit plus rien dans la profondeur sombre.
Nemrod dit: - Que m’importe une terre qui sombre!
Vois comment est le ciel. Approchons-nous un peu?
Regarde. - Et Zaïm dit: - O roi, le ciel est bleu.

V

Le vent soufflait en bas.

Tournant son cou rapide,
Un aigle cria alors: - J’ai faim, homme stupide! -
Et Nemrod leur donna l’eunuque à dévorer.

Les aigles montaient.

Rien ne venait murmurer
Autour de la machine sa course effrénée.
Nemrod, montant toujours, attendit une année,
Dans l’ombre, et le géant, durant ce noir chemin,
Compta les douze mois sur les doigts de sa main;
Quand l’an fut révolu, le sinistre satrape
Resté seul, n’ayant plus l’eunuque, ouvrit la trappe
Que le soleil dora d’une lueur de feu;
Et regarda le ciel, et le ciel était bleu.

VI

Alors, son arc en main, tranquille l’homme énorme
Sortit hors de la cage et sur la plate-forme
Se dressa tout debout et cria: Me voilà.
Il ne regarda rien en bas; il contempla,
Pensif, les bras croisés, le ciel toujours le même;
Puis, calme et sans qu’un pli tremblât sur son front blême,
Il ajusta la flèche à son arc redouté.
Les aigles frissonnants regardaient de côté.
Nemrod éleva l’arc au dessus de sa tête,
Le câble lâché fit le bruit d’une tempête,
Et, comme un éclair meurt quand on ferme les yeux,

L’effrayant javelot disparut dans les cieux.

Et la terre entendit un long coup de tonnerre.
VII

Un mois après, la nuit, un pâtre centenaire
Qui rêvait dans la plaine où Caïn prit Abel,
Champ hideux d’où l’on voit le front noir de Babel,
Vit tout à coup tomber des cieux, dans l’ombre étrange,
Quelqu’un de monstrueux qu’il prit pour un archange;
C’était Nemrod.
VIII

   Couché sur le dos, mort, puni,
Le noir chasseur tournait encor vers l’infini
Sa tête aux yeux profonds que rien n’avait courbée.
Auprès de lui gisait sa flèche retombée.
La pointe, qui s’était enfoncée au ciel bleu,
Etait teinte de sang. Avait-il blessé Dieu?

STROPHE SIXIÈME. LES MAGES ATTENTIFS

Et Nemrod disparu n’emporta pas la Guerre.
Elle resta, parlant plus haut que le tonnerre;
Son regard au sillon faisait rentrer l’épi;
Et ce spectre, mille ans, sur le monde accroupi,
Lugubre, et comme un chien mâche un os, rongeant l’homme,
Couva l’œuf monstrueux d’où sortit l’aigle Rome.
Et pendant ce temps-là, comme parfois aux yeux
Une vapeur trahit un feu mystérieux,
Il sortait par endroits de la terre où nous sommes
D’affreux brouillards vivants qui devenaient des hommes,
Puis des dieux, qu’on nommait Teutatès, Mars, Baal,
Et qui semblaient avoir en eux l’âme du mal.
L’horreur, le sang, le deuil couvraient la race humaine;
Et les mages, que Dieu dans le désert amène,
Collaient l’oreille au sable, et, de terreur ployés,
Frémissants, sous la terre, au-dessous de leurs pieds,
Ils entendaient quelqu’un dans les nuits éternelles
Qui volait, et frappait la voûte de ses ailes.

Hors de la terre II

La Plume de Satan

La plume, seul débris qui restât des deux ailes
De l’archange englouti dans les nuits éternelles,
Etait toujours au bord du gouffre ténébreux.
Les morts laissent ainsi quelquefois derrière eux
Quelque chose d’eux-mêmes au seuil de la nuit triste,
Sorte de lueur vague et sombre, qui persiste.

Cette plume avait-elle une âme? qui le sait?
Elle avait un aspect étrange; elle gisait
Et rayonnait; c’était de la clarté tombée.

Les anges la venaient voir à la dérobée.
Elle leur rappelait le grand Porte-Flambeau;
Ils l’admiraient, pensant à cet être si beau
Plus hideux maintenant que l’hydre et le crotale;
Ils songeaient à Satan dont la blancheur fatale,
D’abord ravissement, puis terreur du ciel bleu,
Fut monstrueuse au point de s’égaler à Dieu.
Cette plume faisait revivre l’envergure
De l’Ange, colossale et hautaine figure;
Elle couvrait d’éclairs splendides le rocher;
Parfois les séraphins, effarés d’approcher
De ces bas-fonds où l’âme en dragon se transforme,
Reculaient, aveuglés par sa lumière énorme;
Une flamme semblait flotter dans son duvet;
On sentait, à la voir frissonner, qu’elle avait
Fait partie autrefois d’une aile révoltée;
Le jour, la nuit, la foi tendre, l’audace athée,
La curiosité des gouffres, les essors
Démesurés, bravant les hasards et les sorts,
L’onde et l’air, la sagesse auguste, la démence,
Palpitaient vaguement dans cette plume immense;
Mais dans son ineffable et sourd frémissement,

Au souffle de l’abîme, au vent du firmament,
On sentait plus d’amour encor que de tempête.

Et sans cesse, tandis que sur l’éternel faîte
Celui qui songe à tous pensait dans sa bonté,
La plume du plus grand des anges, rejeté
Hors de la conscience et hors de l’harmonie,
Frissonnait, près du puits de la chute infinie,
Entre l’abîme plein de noirceur et les cieux.
Tout à coup un rayon de l’oeil prodigieux
Qui fit le monde avec du jour, tomba sur elle.
Sous ce rayon, lueur douce et surnaturelle,
La plume tressaillit, brilla, vibra, grandit,
Prit une forme et fut vivante, et l’on eût dit
Un éblouissement qui devient une femme.
Avec le glissement mystérieux d’une âme,
Elle se souleva debout, et, se dressant,
Eclaira l’infini d’un sourire innocent.
Et les anges tremblants d’amour la regardèrent.
Les chérubins jumeaux qui l’un à l’autre adhèrent,
Les groupes constellés du matin et du soir,
Les Vertus, les Esprits, se penchèrent pour voir
Cette sœur de l’enfer et du paradis naître.
Jamais le ciel sacré n’avait contemplé d’être
Plus sublime au milieu des souffles et des voix.
En la voyant si fière et si pure à la fois,
La pensée hésitait entre l’aigle et la vierge;
Sa face, défiant le gouffre qui submerge,
Mêlant l’embrasement et le rayonnement,
Flamboyait, et c’était , sous un sourcil charmant,
Le regard de la foudre avec l’oeil de l’aurore.

L’archange du soleil, qu’un feu céleste dore,
Dit: - De quel nom faut-il nommer cet ange, ô Dieu?

Alors, dans l’absolu que l’Etre a pour milieu,
On entendit sortir des profondeurs du Verbe

Ce mot qui, sur le front du jeune ange superbe
Encor vague et flottant dans la vaste clarté,
Fit tout à coup éclore un astre: - Liberté.

LIVRE DEUXIÈME - LE GIBET

I. LA JUDÉE

I. LA TERRE SOUS LE TROISIÈME CÉSAR

En ce temps-là, le monde était dans la terreur;
Caïphe était grand-prêtre et Tibère empereur;
Hérode roi des juifs gouvernait sous Pilate;
Rome était la nuée où le tonnerre éclate;
Jérusalem était l’âne sous le bâton.
Des proconsuls assis le poing sous le menton,
Vêtus de pourpre, ayant le roi pour satellite,
Remplaçaient au-dessus du peuple israélite
Les pharaons à l’oeil fixe et mystérieux.
Quelques rares autels fumaient sur les hauts lieux,
Mais c’étaient les autels des guèbres, que tolère
Rome ayant trop de dieux pour croire avec colère.

Temps fatals! César roi, tout le reste sujet.
La conquête romaine, immense, submergeait
Les peuples qu’elle avait saisis l’un après l’autre;
Et cette vague épaisse où le soldat se vautre
Grossissait, et, de proche en proche, envahissait
La terre, où les songeurs disaient: Qu’est-ce que c’est?
Cette inondation de Rome était lugubre;
L’empire était partout comme une ombre insalubre;
Il croissait comme un fleuve épars sous des forêts,
Et changeait lentement l’univers en marais.
Les docteurs méditaient sur ce second déluge.
Ayant leurs livres saints pour cime et pour refuge,
Les prêtres, rattachés aux textes, au-dessus
Des hommes débordés dans un gouffre aperçus,
Laissaient couler sous eux ces vastes avalanches,
Pareils à des serpents enroulés dans des branches.

Un peuple commandait, le monde subissait.

Les jaguars, les lions, les ours pris au lacet,
Le tigre redouté même de sa femelle,
Rugissaient sous les pieds de Rome pêle-mêle
Avec les nations dans le même filet.
L’esclavage, à voix basse et dans la nuit, parlait.
L’unique grandeur d’âme était l’insouciance.
La force avait le droit. Qu’était la conscience?
Une reptilité sous un écrasement.
On regardait l’autel en face et le serment,
Et l’on se parjurait, et l’hymne et la huée
Riaient, et l’âme humaine était diminuée.
L’honnête et le néfaste et le mal et le bien
S’effaçaient dans les cœurs; l’homme ne voyait rien
Qu’une noirceur croissante au-dessus de sa tête;
Une lueur de torche illuminait le faîte
De l’univers sur qui marchaient les conquérants;
Les uns étaient petits, les autres étaient grands,
Personne n’était pur, saint, vénérable et juste;
De même que d’Octave avait pu naître Auguste,
De la fange partout sortait l’autorité.
Le destin avait l’air d’un abîme irrité;
L’ombre se résolvait en haine autour de l’âme.
L’or sentait bon. Le sage était celui qui blâme
La vertu, le devoir, la foi, le dévouement;
Le plus voisin du vrai c’était celui qui ment;
La mort régnait avec les licteurs pour ministres;
Le genre humain pendait en deux haillons sinistres,
Comme si Dieu l’avait déchiré de ses mains;
Les hommes d’un côté, de l’autre les romains.

II. HÉRODE ET CAÏPHE

Sous l’ongle dédaigneux de Rome fatiguée
Vivait la royauté des Juifs qu’avait léguée
L’Hérode Ascalonite à l’Hérode Antipas.
Cet idiot mêlait le meurtre à ses repas,
Et regardait danser Hérodiade nue.
Il avait redoré l’aigle que dans la nue
Son père avait sculptée au fronton du saint lieu,
Car, pour flatter César, ces rois insultaient Dieu;
Il avait fait murer dans le royal repaire
La chambre où, sur un lit de pourpre et d’or, son père,
Surnommé Grand, avait été mangé des vers;
Des paons rôdaient parmi ses jardins toujours verts;
Au fond brillait un lac dit le Bain du Tétrarque;
On y voyait errer les pêcheurs dont la barque
Vogue à coups d’avirons lents et bien maniés.
Il aimait les rhéteurs, l’un par l’autre niés,
Les philosophes grecs, les histrions, les mimes,
Et son ennui traînait le poids sombre des crimes.
Il avait, de l’argent d’un péage imposé
Aux caravanes d’Ur, d’Ophir et de Jessé,
Fait faire à son palais une enceinte de brique;
Car, dès les temps anciens, les marchands de l’Afrique
Venaient des profondeurs du désert calciné;
Ils apportaient des dents d’éléphant, du séné,
De l’alcali, des peaux de buffle, de la gomme,
Et de la pourpre verte aux proconsuls de Rome.

Caïphe, qui des lois dirigeait le timon,
Avait été nommé grand-prêtre après Simon;
Ce n’était point une âme inclinée aux mystères;
Caïphe n’était pas un de ces solitaires
Qui, pour sonder le sens glissant et ténébreux
Des prophètes luttant confusément entre eux,

Gardent la nuit leur lampe à côté de leurs couches,
Et songent, éperdus, sur ces livres farouches
Où l’on entend le choc des glaives de l’esprit.
Trop petit pour la tâche auguste qu’entreprit
Celui qu’on nomme Aaron, c’est-à-dire montagne,
Tortueux, il avait la fraude pour compagne;
Les yeux d’Hérode était sincères près des siens;
Son miel était poison; les chefs pharisiens,
Banaïas, intendant d’Epher, Jean l’économe,
Maccès, à qui Pilate avait donné pour nome
Tout le pays d’Horeb et tout le Nephath d’or,
Venaient lui parler bas dans le saint corridor;
De la couleuvre froide il avait la paresse;
Il était ce qui rampe et ce qui se redresse;
Il était chaste avec les femmes, redoutant
Le démon qu’à travers leur parole on entend,
Mais ces chastetés-là font brûler les Sodomes;
Comme prêtre, il était de cette espèce d’hommes
Qui, si le sénat vote aux pauvres quelque argent,
Disent: « non pas! l’état est lui-même indigent!”
Et qui trouvent utile et juste qu’on obère
Le trésor pour bâtir quelque temple à Tibère.
Caïphe eût aux renards indiqué des sentiers;
C’était un homme sombre, et pourtant volontiers
Il riait à travers l’ombre de sa pensée;
Mais on se sentait pris d’une sueur glacée
Devant cette gaieté, couvercle d’un cercueil.

Rosmophim de Joppé, prêtre au profond coup d’oeil,
Et docteur, l’assistait dans les choses civiles.

III. CELUI QUI EST VENU

Cependant il était question dans les villes
De quelqu’un d’étonnant, d’un homme radieux
Que les anges suivaient de leurs millions d’yeux;
Cet homme, qu’entourait la rumeur grossissante,
Semblait un dieu faisant sur terre une descente;
On eût dit un pasteur rassemblant ses troupeaux;
Les publicains, assis au bureau des impôts,
Se levaient s’il passait, quittant tout pour le suivre;
Cet homme, paraissant hors de ce monde vivre,
Tandis qu’autour de lui la foule remuait,
Avait des visions dont il restait muet;
Il parlait aux cités, fuyait les solitudes,
Et laissait sa clarté dans l’oeil des multitudes;
Les paysans le soir, de sa lueur troublés,
Le regardaient de loin marcher le long des blés,
Et sa main qui s’ouvrait et devenait immense,
Semblait jeter aux vents de l’ombre une semence.
On racontait sa vie, et qu’il avait été
Par une vierge au fond d’une étable enfanté
Sous une claire étoile et dans la nuit sereine;
L’âne et le bœuf, pensifs, l’ignorance et la peine,
Etaient à sa naissance, et sous le firmament
Se penchaient, ayant l’air d’espérer vaguement;
On contait qu’il avait une raison profonde,
Qu’il était sérieux comme celui qui fonde,
Qu’il montrait l’âme aux sens, le but aux paresseux,
Et qu’il blâmait les grands, les prêtres, et tous ceux
Qui marchent entourés d’hommes armés de piques.
Il avait, disait-on, guéri des hydropiques;
Des impotents, cloués vingt ans sous leurs rideaux,
En le quittant, portaient leur grabat sur leur dos;
Son oeil fixe appelait hors du tombeau les vierges;
Les aveugles, les sourds, - ô destin, tu submerges

Ceux-ci dans le silence et ceux-là dans la nuit! -
Le voyaient, l’entendaient; et dans son vil réduit
Il touchait le lépreux, isolé sous des claies;
Ses doigts tenaient les clefs invisibles des plaies,
Et les fermaient; les cœurs vivaient en le suivant;
Il marchait sur l’eau sombre et menaçait le vent;
Il avait arraché sept monstres d’une femme;
Le malade incurable et le pêcheur infâme
L’imploraient, et leurs mains tremblantes s’élevaient;
Il sortait des vertus de lui qui les sauvaient;
Un homme demeurait dans les sépulcres; fauve,
Il mordait, comme un loup qui dans les bois se sauve;
Parfois on l’attachait, mais il brisait ses fers
Et fuyait, le démon le poussant aux déserts;
Ce maître, le baisant, lui dit: Paix à toi, frère!
L’homme, en qui cent damnés semblaient rugir et braire,
Cria: Gloire! et, soudain, parlant avec bon sens,
Sourit, ce qui remplit de crainte les passants.
Ce prophète honorait les femmes économes;
Il avait à Gessé ressuscité deux hommes
Tués par un bandit appelé Barabbas;
Il osait, pour guérir, violer les sabbats,
Rendait la vie aux nerfs d’une main desséchée;
Et cet homme égalait David et Mardochée.
Un jour ce redresseur, que le peuple louait,
Vit des vendeurs au seuil du temple, et prit un fouet;
Pareils aux rats hideux que les aigles déterrent,
Tous ces marchands, essaims immondes, redoutèrent
Son visage empourpré des célestes rougeurs;
Sévère, il renversa les tables des changeurs
Et l’escabeau de ceux qui vendaient des colombes.
Son geste surhumain ouvrait les catacombes.
L’arbre qu’il regardait changeait ses fleurs en fruits.
Un jour que quelques juifs profonds et très instruits
Lui disaient: « - Dans le ciel que le pied divin foule,
Quel sera le plus grand?” cet homme dans la foule
Prit un petit enfant qu’il mit au milieu d’eux.

Calme, il forçait l’essaim invisible et hideux
Des noirs esprits du mal, rois des ténébreux mondes,
A se précipiter dans les bêtes immondes.
Et ce mage était grand plus qu’Isaïe, et plus
Que tous ces noirs vieillards épars dans les reflux
De la vertigineuse et sombre prophétie;
Et l’homme du désert, Jean, près de ce Messie,
N’était rien qu’un roseau secoué par le vent.
Il n’était pas docteur, mais il était savant;
Il conversait avec les faces inconnues
Qu’un homme endormi voit en rêve dans les nues;
Des lumières venaient lui parler sur les monts;
Il lavait les péchés ainsi que des limons,
Et délivrait l’esprit de la fange charnelle;
Satan fuyait devant l’éclair de sa prunelle;
Ses miracles étaient l’expulsion du mal;
Il calmait l’ouragan, haranguait l’animal,
Et parfois on voyait naître à ses pieds des roses;
Et sa mère en son cœur gardait toutes ces choses.
Des morts blêmes, depuis quatre jours inhumés,
Se dressaient à sa voix; et pour les affamés,
Les pains multipliés sortaient de ses mains pures.

Voilà ce que contait la foule; et les murmures,
Les cris du peuple enfant qui réclame un appui,
Environnaient cet homme; on l’adorait; et lui
Etait doux.

Tous les mots qui tombaient de sa bouche
Etaient comme une main céleste qui vous touche.
Il disait: - « Les derniers sont les premiers. - La fin,
«C’est le commencement. - Ne fais pas au prochain
«Ce que tu ne veux pas qu’on te fasse à toi-même.
«- On récolte le deuil quand c’est la mort qu’on sème.
«- Celui qui se repent est grand deux fois. - L’enfant «Touche à Dieu. - Par le bien du mal on se défend.
«- Que le puits soit profond, mais que l’eau reste claire.”

Il disait: « - Regardez les choses sans colère;
«Car, si l’oeil est mauvais, le corps est ténébreux.
«- L’aube est pour les Gentils comme pour les Hébreux.
«- Mangez le fruit des bois, buvez l’eau de la source;
«- N’ayez pas de souliers, pas de sac, pas de bourse,
«Entrez dans les maisons et dites: Paix à tous!
«- Nul n’est exempt du pli sublime des genoux;
«Donc, qui que vous soyez, priez. Courbez vos têtes.
«- Dieu, présent à la nuit, n’est pas absent des bêtes.
«Dieu vit dans les lions comme dans Daniel.
«- Errer étant humain, faillir est véniel.
«Absolvez le pécheur en condamnant la faute.
«- On ajoute à l’esprit ce qu’à la chair on ôte.”
Il tenait compte en tout des faits accidentels.
Dans le champ du supplice il disait des mots tels
Que nul n’osait toucher à la première pierre;
Il haïssait la haine, il combattait la guerre;
Il disait: sois mon frère! à l’esclave qu’on vend;
Et, tranquille, il passait comme un pardon vivant;
Il blanchissait le siècle autour de lui, de sorte
Que les justes, dont l’âme encor n’était pas morte,
Dans ces temps sans pitié, sans pudeur, sans amour,
Voyaient en s’éveillant luire deux points du jour,
L’aurore dans le ciel et sur terre cet homme.
Cet être était trop pur pour être vu par Rome.
Pourtant parmi les juifs, dans leur temple obscurci,
Chez leur roi lâche et triste, on en prenait souci;
Et Caïphe y songeait dans sa chaire d’ivoire;
Et, sans savoir encor ce qu’il en devait croire,
Hérode était allé jusqu’à dire: - Il paraît
Qu’il existe un certain Jésus de Nazareth.

Quelques hommes, de ceux qui ne savent pas lire,
De pauvres pâtres, pris d’on ne sait quel délire
Et du ravissement de l’entendre parler,
Le suivaient, l’aimaient tant qu’il les faisait trembler,
Et le montraient au peuple en disant: - C’est le maître.

L’un d’eux, vieillard, semblait près de cet homme naître;
Et le plus jeune, enfant, avait l’air près de lui
D’un sombre aïeul pensif, gravement ébloui.
Humbles, ils lui tendaient leurs cœurs comme des urnes.
Et ces hommes, pareils à des lampes nocturnes
Adorant un soleil dans une vision,
Etaient devant ce maître en contemplation,
Et l’entouraient, ainsi qu’une auréole d’âmes.

IV. LES TREIZE PORTES DE JÉRUSALEM

Dans les vieux temps, l’archange aux quatre ailes de flamme, Stellial dit un jour au noir Zorobabel
Quand ce maçon, porteur d’une échelle du ciel,
Eut entouré Sion de murailles très fortes:
— Pourquoi donc à la ville as-tu fait treize portes?
Et Zorobabel dit: - Ninive aux larges tours
Eut autant de portails que l’année a de jours,
Pour que jamais le temps, quand du gouffre il arrive,
Quel qu’il fût, ne restât en dehors de Ninive.
— Eh bien, dit Stellial, l’archange couvert d’yeux,
Le zodiaque ayant douze signes aux cieux,
Douze portes, c’était assez, mage imbécile,
Pour que chacun des mois pût entrer dans la ville.
— Ange, j’ai fait, reprit le maçon magistrat,
Treize portes afin que l’avenir entrât.
Chaque année on verra par les douze premières
Passer les douze mois, portant douze lumières,
Purs, sacrés, et menant par la main la saison;
Par la treizième doit passer la trahison.

V. LA JUDÉE

D’innombrables hameaux répandent leurs fumées
D’Arphac à Borcéos dans les six Idumées;
La Judée est dorée et verte sous l’azur;
Elle a des bois des monts, des lacs; son air est pur;
Le vent du sud le trouble et le vent d’est le calme;
Rome estime ses vins; comme l’huile de palme,
L’huile d’olive abonde à flots sous son pressoir;
L’ombre du Sinaï la couvre vers le soir.
La Judée est la terre où de temps en temps passe
Une lueur de Dieu qui se perd dans l’espace.

L’Egypte est, au couchant, cette plaine des blés
Où, dans les noirs tombeaux, dont les puits sont comblés,
Un miroir d’or massif pend au cou des momies
Pour refléter l’essaim des spectres, les lamies,
Les stryges, et la face errante des démons;
Au midi, les chacals, les rats, les ichneumons,
Remplissent le désert; au nord, la mer murmure.

La moisson en Judée est deux fois par an mûre;
Le moindre champ y donne un boisseau de maïs.

Ce qui va se passer dans ce fatal pays
Fait un nuage obscur sur l’avenir, et trouble
Abraham enterré dans la caverne double
Dont on voit l’âpre brèche et le seuil délabré
Au champ d’Ephron, voisin des chênes de Mambré.

VI. LES PAROLES DU DOCTEUR DE LA LOI

Deux prêtres, dont la robe est en toile d'ortie,
Veillent, l'un à l'entrée et l'autre à la sortie
Du Temple que jadis Salomon fit bâtir
Par Oliab avec le bois du roi de Tyr.
Sévère, à quelques pas des deux prêtres qui semblent
Faire taire la ville où mille bruits sourds tremblent,
Un docteur de la loi parle au peuple devant
Ce seuil terrible où luit l'arche du Dieu vivant.
Il est seul sur sa chaise; et, qu'on entre ou qu'on sorte,
Il ne s'arrête point, et continue; il porte
Le taled blanc où pend le zizith à cinq nœuds;
Le dogme sombre emplit son oeil vertigineux;
Des croyants sont auprès du docteur; les uns lisent
Dans des livres pendant qu'il parle; d'autres gisent
En travers de la porte, et l'on marche dessus;
Un plat brille à ses pieds où les dons sont reçus;
La foule abonde autour du prêtre, et l'environne;
Vieillard qu'une lueur de science couronne,
Calme et grave, il déploie au-dessus de son front
Ce que les siècles, l'un après l'autre, liront,
Le texte saint, écrit sur le rouleau mystique;
Il enseigne la foi, le rite, la pratique,
Au peuple remuant les lèvres par moment;
Et chaque fois qu'il lèvre un doigt au firmament,
Tous, éperdus devant l'insondable prière,
Ensemble et frémissants, font trois pas en arrière.

Il dit:

 - Voici la loi. Fais silence, Israël!
Peuple, crois au Dieu vrai, distinct, un, personnel,
Seul, unique, incréé, voyant ce que fait l'homme.
Dieu, c'est le créancier qui veut toute la somme,

C’est le jaloux qui veut tout le cœur, c’est la mer
Dont le flot, repoussé par la terre, est amer;
Dieu, s’il est repoussé par les hommes, se venge.
Observez le saint jour, Peuple, ou redoutez l’ange
Qui plane sur l’impie et d’un souffle l’abat;
Le plus pauvre a sa lampe, et, le jour du sabbat,
Peuple, il doit l’allumer, dût-il mendier l’huile;
Nos pères, ce jour-là, purifiaient la ville;
Ces hommes qui vivaient à l’ombre du palmier,
Etaient saints, et toujours nommaient Dieu le premier;
Ce respect les faisait vivre six cents années;
Le sabbat est le jour où les ombres damnées
Peuvent se retourner dans le lit de l’enfer;
Sepher tua Phinée, Aod tua Sepher,
Ces meurtres ne sont rien près du dogme qu’on brise
Et du sabbat qu’on met sous ses pieds, et Moïse
Dans sa tombe, et Jacob, et Job, ont moins d’effroi
Du sang d’un homme, ô juifs, que du sang de la loi;
Le fiel est plus amer que le coing n’est acide,
Or l’impiété, juifs, c’est le fiel; l’homicide,
Pâle, et suivi d’enfants crachant sur ses talons,
Marche à travers la ville avec ses cheveux longs,
La main droite liée au cou par une chaîne;
Mais l’impie a son spectre en croix dans la géhenne;
L’homme pèse sur l’un, sur l’autre pèse Dieu.
Les jours saints, taisez-vous, ne faites pas de feu;
Le salut dans le ciel est sur terre l’exemple;
Dieu vient à la prière; il entre dans le temple
Sitôt la porte ouverte et pourvu qu’on soit dix;
Donc, pratiquez la loi. Tremblez d’être maudits.
L’anathème entre au corps du maudit, qu’il traverse.
Theglath fut roi d’Egypte, Azer fut roi de Perse;
Gad les maudit; dès lors l’enfer fut dans ces rois
Qui voyaient se mêler une flamme à leur voix.
Chaque texte est un doigt montrant ce qu’il faut suivre;
Si vous ne faites pas ce que prescrit le livre,
Vous serez malheureux comme celui qui voit

Dans un songe tomber les poutres de son toit.
Trois tribunaux nous sont légués par les ancêtres;
Aaron pour enseigner a délégué Cent prêtres,
Onze pour gouverner, et Dix-Neuf pour juger;
Le sanhédrin les nomme et seul peut les changer.
Que la femme soit chaste et muette, et que l’homme
Ait dans un roseau creux tout le deutéronome.
Sinon, nous maudirons vos seuils et votre sang.
L’anathème qu’un saint jette au mal en passant
Est une si fatale et si noire rosée
Qu’un chien ayant été maudit par Elizée,
L’anathème rongea les oreilles du chien.
Femmes, l’homme est le roi; tremblez! et songez bien
A la sombre Lilith, femme née avant Eve;
Adam la renvoya dans l’ombre et dans le rêve;
Lilith répudiée est un spectre de nuit.
Lilith était l’orgueil, la querelle et le bruit;
Satan, voulant saisir l’homme, l’avait créée;
Elle roule à jamais dans la noire nuée;
Elle s’appelle Isis dans l’Inde où Satan luit,
Et l’encens de l’Egypte horrible la poursuit.
La femme file, trait la vache, bat le beurre,
Tourne le sablier quand vient la fin de l’heure,
Gronde l’esclave aux champs et l’enfant dans son jeu,
Veille et travaille; et l’homme est pensif devant Dieu.
Au temple, en récitant le verset ordinaire,
Etendez vos deux mains devant le luminaire;
L’ange du jour assiste à vos repas; mais fuit,
Sitôt que vous riez, devant l’ange de nuit;
Etudiez la loi sans cesse, et qu’on la lise
Dans le texte que fit Esdras d’après Moïse.
Pour faire un Livre, ô juifs, n’employez pas de lin;
Cousez avec des nerfs une peau de vélin,
Ecrivez-y, tremblants, le verbe inénarrable,
Et roulez le vélin sur deux bâtons d’érable.
Ayez des habits longs conformes à vos rangs;
Craignez le drap tissu de deux fils différents;

Jéhovah n’est pas deux. Fuyez les hommes ivres;
Ne faites point sécher des herbes dans vos livres;
L’herbe imprime un démon aux plis du parchemin;
Ne regardez jamais les lignes de la main;
Dans le texte sacré respectez les consonnes,
Au moment de la mort appelez dix personnes;
Confessez vos péchés, jougs par la chair subis,
Et que ceux qui sont là déchirent leurs habits;
La mort, même du juste, est une obscure fête.
Mettez aux morts un sac de terre sous la tête;
Tournez sept fois autour de la fosse en priant.
Redoutez l’occident et craignez l’orient,
Ce sont les deux endroits de Dieu. Le ciel le nomme.
Redoutez-le. La mort, c’est l’ombre. Il n’est pour l’homme
Rien d’éternel après cette vie; il ne peut
Rien retenir de lui quand Dieu brise ce nœud;
Ce qu’on appelle âme est un souffle, céleste
Chez les bons, infernal chez les méchants, qui reste
Un moment au-dessus du corps dans le trépas,
Puis pâlit, puis s’éteint, car Dieu seul ne meurt pas.
Pourtant le châtiment peut saisir ce fantôme
Et le fouetter longtemps sous le ténébreux dôme,
Et lui heurter le front aux poutres de la nuit.
Rien de ce qu’on a fait n’est perdu, ni détruit;
Tout compte. Justes poids et balances exactes.
Là-haut, le doigt toujours tourné vers tous vos actes,
La prière Bathkol, la Fille de la Voix,
Se tient près d’Elohim et lui dit: Seigneur, vois.
Lisez la Pentateuque à cinq; l’Exode à quatre.
Sachez punir, sachez venger, sachez combattre;
Haïssez les mauvais! Haïssez, haïssez
Ceux qui doutent, d’audace et d’orgueil hérissés,
L’incrédule, le lâche et le pusillanime,
Ceux pour qui le saint livre ouvert est un abîme,
Ceux qui tremblent devant les célestes degrés,
Et sur le bord de Dieu s’arrêtent effarés!
S’ils sont nombreux, s’ils ont de l’or dans leurs mains viles,

S’ils sont un peuple, ayant des moissons et des villes,
Des femmes, des vieillards, des enfants nouveau-nés,
Des vierges, des aïeux, des fils, exterminez!
Moïse commença par creuser une fosse,
O juifs, pour y coucher la religion fausse;
Il y jeta des tas de peuples révoltés;
Il remplit ce tonneau d’homme et de cités,
Et l’on distingue encor dans cette ombre profonde
D’énormes ossements dont chacun fut un monde;
Num ravage Amalec, Joram dévaste Ammon;
Partout où l’on voyait la lueur du démon,
Partout où l’on prenait qualque faux dieu pour règle,
Salomon accourait avec le bruit d’un aigle,
O Peuple, et c’est du sang que la terre a sué
Derrière Anathias, Saül et Josué;
Jéhovah bénissait ces grands impitoyables;
Sobres, purs, ils menaient au combat, dans les sables,
Dans la nuit, sans jamais songer au lendemain,
Des soldats qui buvaient dans le creux de leur main;
Le Tabernacle a crû dans le sang; Dieu consacre
Par un carnage Aser, Lévi par un massacre,
Et l’antique Lévite est saint pour ce seul trait
Qu’il marchait en tuant tous ceux qu’il rencontrait;
Samson ne laissait pas d’un mur pierre sur pierre;
Macchabée était plein d’une telle lumière
Que les peuples disaient: son armure est en or;
Et Lysias, Seron, Gorgias, Nicanor,
Fuyaient devant cet homme aux cris de guerre étranges,
Que suivaient, à cheval sur les vents, cinq archanges!
Ces héros ont toujours Jéhovah pour effort;
Leur fer ouvre un sillon; Peuple, ils font de la mort
Sortir la vie, et, grâce à leurs lances vermeilles,
Les gueules des lions sont des ruches d’abeilles.
Ayez autour de vous la peur, en vous l’effroi;
C’est le dogme. David fut un sublime roi;
Il se plaisait au rire, aux chants, aux grappes mûres,
Un jour il se pencha sur les choses obscures,

Et, pâle, il reconnut que le commencement
De la sagesse était un profond tremblement.
O Peuple, Sabaoth lugubrement médite
Sur la race d'Adam presque toujours maudite,
Sur le sang de Jacob presque toujours puni,
Et Dieu, c'est le sourcil froncé de l'infini.
Vivez les yeux fixés sur la terreur du gouffre!
Guerre à l'impie! Il faut qu'on punisse, ou qu'on souffre, Frappez pour vous sauver. Songez au châtiment;
Songez à l'océan d'angoisse et de tourment;
Songez à cet enfer: l'immensité des larmes.
Les ennemis de Dieu pourront avoir des armes,
Ils pourront être fiers et puissants, ils pourront
Pousser des chars, avoir des casques sur le front;
Qu'est-ce que cela fait, si leur âme est de l'ombre?
Les festins, les palais que la splendeur encombre,
Le bonheur, les plaisirs, le triomphe effronté,
Sont des endroits d'oubli, mais non de sûreté.
Soit. Oubliez. Qu'importe au souvenir suprême?
La vengeance attend, calme, et la colère sème... -
Vous rirez, vous aurez des songes dans les yeux,
Tout à coup, au plus noir du ciel mystérieux
Que l'homme frémissant verra par échappées,
On entendra le bruit que font deux mains frappées,
L'archange porte-glaive, immense, apparaîtra;
Alors, sentant sous eux crouler Bel et Mithra,
Les méchants trembleront comme un vaisseau qui sombre,
Et tous reconnaîtront l'inutilité sombre
Des boucliers d'airain et des casques de cuir;
Ils souhaiteront d'être assez petits pour fuir
Par le bas d'une porte ou par les trous d'un crible,
La grande épée ayant un flamboiement terrible!
Mais Dieu dira: Trop tard! Donc, ô vivants, tremblez.
Dieu court dans les maudits comme un feu dans les blés.
Ecrasez d'épouvante et de haine l'impie.
Faites lever votre âme aux vices accroupie,
Et récitez, avant que l'archange soit là,

Le sharrith le matin, le soir le néhila.
Vengez Dieu par le glaive et vivez dans la crainte.
Tout ce que je vous dis, Peuple, c’est la loi sainte,
La loi d’en haut, connue aux seuls fils de Lévi.

Un homme en ce moment, de douze hommes suivi,
Blond, jeune, et regardé fixement par le prêtre,
L’interrompit et dit avec l’accent d’un maître:

— Toute la loi d’en haut est dans ce mot: aimer.

— Peuple, cria le prêtre, il vient de blasphémer.

VII. CAÏPHE EN CONTEMPLATION

Les deux guetteurs du temple ont aperçu la lune;
Le mois commence.

Aux champs la terre est encor brune;
Il pleut sur le mont Glon et sur le mont Sion;
Mais l'hiver va finir. On fait l'ablution
Du temple, dont on brosse et dérouille les chaînes,
Les gonds et les verrous, pour les fêtes prochaines.

Seul près du grand autel derrière le rideau,
Pendant que, se courbant sur des vases pleins d'eau,
Et répandant partout le nard et l'hyacinthe,
Les lévites portiers lavent la triple enceinte,
S'interrompant parfois pour baiser les pavés.
Le grand-prêtre se tient debout, les bras levés.
On dirait un fantôme avec son blanc suaire.

L'arche est sur une estrade au fond du sanctuaire;
Elohim lui laissa l'empreinte de son doigt;
Un éblouissement l'environne, et l'on voit
Des boîtes de parfum d'aspic sur chaque marche
Du degré qui se perd sous la splendeur de l'arche.
Caïphe est de la chose éternelle occupé.

Un docteur cependant, Rosmophim de Joppé
A soulevé ce voile et marche vers Caïphe
Qui ne dérange pas son geste de pontife
Et n'ouvre qu'à demi son oeil vague et fermé.

Le prêtre dit: - Je viens. Je me suis informé, Hannasci, de celui des douze auquel tu penses.
C'est lui que dans la bande on charge des dépenses;
Quand on voyage, il compte avec les hôteliers;

Les autres semblent fiers de porter leurs colliers;
Lui seul a l’air d’un loup parmi les chiens; sa voie
Est obscure; à Naïm, une fille de joie
Avait, avec du baume et des parfums, lavé
Les pieds du maître, un peu meurtris par le pavé;
Cet homme s’emporta contre elle jusqu’à dire:
Tu viens de perdre là pour vingt deniers de myrrhe!
Et Caïphe répond: - C’est l’homme qu’il faudrait.
— Oui, répond Rosmophim. Il est jaloux, secret,
Triste, oblique, inquiet, solitaire, économe.
Prince, tu désirais savoir comme on le nomme.
Je l’ignorais le jour où tu le demandas.
Je le sais aujourd’hui. - Quel est son nom? - Judas.

VIII. LA SIBYLLE

La sibylle d'Achlab parle dans sa caverne;
Elle est seule; un esprit farouche la gouverne,
La courbe comme un feu sous un vol de démons,
Et de sa bouche obscure et de ses noirs poumons
Fait sortir le hasard des paroles terribles.
Des feuilles, qui plus tard s'iront coller aux Bibles,
S'échappent par moments de son antre, et s'en vont
En vagues flamboiements dans l'espace sans fond.
Elle les suit des yeux, et rit; puis recommence,
L'immensité s'étant mêlée à sa démence,
Et le souffle infini la traversant toujours.
Elle s'adresse à l'ombre, au gouffre, aux rochers sourds.
Spectre par le regard, par la maigreur squelette,
Elle parle une langue étrange où se reflète
L'avenir, à demi visible sur son front,
Et prononce déjà des mots qui ne seront
Dits par le genre humain que dans trois mille années.

Ses mains sur ses seins nus se crispent décharnées;
Son oeil lugubre songe, ivre d'obscurité;
Ce spectre balbutie avec autorité;
On dirait qu'elle fait la lecture éperdue
D'un mystérieux livre ouvert dans l'étendue;
Parfois elle s'arrête en disant: Je ne puis.

En ce moment, au fond de sa grotte, affreux puits
Plein de l'effarement des visions occultes,
Ce sont les fondateurs de dogmes et de cultes
Et de religions que son regard poursuit.
Il semble qu'elle parle, à travers l'âpre nuit,
A ceux qui cherchent Dieu pour le montrer aux hommes.
.
.

«- ... Le livre d'en haut dit: - Qui que tu sois, qui sommes «L'Etre de s'expliquer et le sphynx d'être clair,
«Qui que tu sois qui veux saisir l'eau, tenir l'air,
«Donner à la nuée une forme, et qui plonges,
«Avec ta nasse, bonne à la pêche des songes,
«Dans le sinistre abîme où flotte ce mot: Dieu;
«Qui que tu sois, qui viens forcer l'ombre à l'aveu,
«Tâter la certitude avec ta main peu sûre,
«Au temple sidéral adosser ta masure,
«Et désigner à l'Etre un texte, un nombre, un lieu;
«Homme, qui que tu sois, qui viens faire du feu
«Sous la foudre, allumer ta lampe sous l'étoile,
«Et dire à l'univers sans fond: Lève-toi, voile!
«Qui que tu sois qui prends l'impossible aux cheveux,
«Qui prononces ces mots inutiles: « - Je veux,
«Je sais, je suis, je crois, je sauve, je ranime; -"
«Qui que tu sois qui dis à l'Etre: « - Allons, abîme, «Réponds, puisque c'est moi qui t'ai questionné. -"
«Sache que ta folie est sombre, infortuné!

«L'erreur sort du nuage et sans fin se dévide.
«Un rite, c'est un geste au hasard dans le vide;
«Avortement du chiffre et du mot! labeur vain
«De la voix pour nommer le prodige divin!
«Trimourti! Trinité! Triade! Triple Hécate!
«Brahmâ, c'est Abraham; dans Adonis éclate
«Adonaï; Jovis jaillit de Jéhovah;
«Toujours au même mot l'impuissance arriva;
«Toujours le sombre effort des religions tombe
«Dans le même fantôme et dans la même tombe.
«Toutes ces questions: « - Où? quand? pourquoi? comment?
«Jusqu'où?" - font le bruit sourd d'un engloutissement.

«Le livre d'en haut dit: - O penseurs, prenez garde!
«Il veut qu'on le contemple et non qu'on le regarde.
«Courbez-vous. L'adoré doit rester l'inconnu.

«Toutes les fois qu’un homme, un esprit, est venu
«L’approcher de trop près, et s’est, opiniâtre,
«Mis à souffler sur lui comme on souffle sur l’âtre,
«Il a frappé. Malheur aux obstinés qui vont
«Faire une fouille sombre en cet être profond!
«Vous qui vous appelez hier, demain, le sage,
«Le savant, le chercheur, la fuite, le passage,
«Larves! y songez-vous d’imposer à celui
«Qui songe et qui s’appelle à jamais Aujourd’hui,
«Vos auscultations, vos calculs, votre étude,
«Et la vibration de votre inquiétude!
«Il lui déplaît d’avoir vos chiffres hasardeux
«Courant partout sur lui, fourmillement hideux.
«Ta curiosité l’importune, ô vermine!
«L’Incréé n’aime pas que l’homme l’examine,
«Et sentir des esprits fureter dans ses coins.
«Sacrilège! le plus, mesuré par le moins!
«La mouche humaine allant heurter aux cieux son aile!
«Et l’essaim, effleurant l’attitude éternelle! -

«Le livre d’en haut dit: - Lui! lui! pas de témoins.
«Hommes, ne faites point un pas hors des besoins;
«L’homme est tortue, et l’ombre est votre carapace;
«Ne sortez pas du temps, du nombre et de l’espace;
«Car il se vengera, l’être mystérieux,
«Des voix, des bruits, des pas, des lampes et des yeux!
«Il est le maître obscur des tortures aiguës,
«Des haches, des brasiers, des chanvres, des ciguës.
«Il choisira les forts, il prendra dans sa main «Ceux qui sont les cerveaux de tout le genre humain,
«Et, fatal, les jetant au glaive froid qui tue,
«Il décapitera la sagesse têtue.
«Pour punir les chercheurs, il n’a qu’à les livrer
«A la fureur de ceux qu’ils voudront éclairer.

«O sages, pour gravir les cieux où sont les Tables,
«Vous hantez les hauts lieux, ces cimes redoutables,

«Que visite l’horreur et que la bise mord;
«Vous y cherchez le jour, vous y trouvez la mort;
«Certains sommets fatals ont d’âpres calvities
«Où les hideuses croix, par le meurtre noircies,
«Se dressent, attendant les pâles rédempteurs;
«Et vous êtes, hélas, trahis par les hauteurs.
«Caïn sur cette terre, où le juste est victime,
«Traître, a laissé de quoi recommencer son crime;
«L’homme abrège, ô penseurs, vos ans déjà si courts!
«Pour vous assassiner, justes, l’homme a toujours
«Entre les mains assez du premier fratricide;
«Plus tard, le genre humain, redevenu lucide,
«Vient glorifier ceux que sa rage courbait...
«L’un a bu le poison, l’autre pend au gibet!

«Pensez-vous quelquefois à ce que fait l’archange,
«L’Etre d’en bas? Il est le Méchant. Il s’en venge?
«Il prend l’âme, la vie et le jour à revers;
«Et de sa chute il fait celle de l’univers.
«L’enfer est tout entier dans ce mot: Solitude.
«Avec tous les remords qui sont l’inquiétude
«Et le deuil de la terre, et dont il est l’aïeul, «Dans l’effrayant cachot des nuits, Satan est seul.
«Le rocher qui le mure est fait avec du crime;
«Les autres condamnés sont dans un autre abîme;
«Il peut les torturer, mais il ne peut les voir.
«Seul, toujours seul, il est aveugle dans le noir.
«En lui, hors de lui, l’ombre. Il regarde, il se hausse,
«Il cherche; il n’a pas même une hydre dans sa fosse;
«Une hydre, ce serait quelqu’un. L’ange damné
«Vole et rôde, et, hagard, voudrait n’être pas né.
«Si les bêtes voyaient son cloaque, cet antre
«Ferait ramper les loups frémissants à plat ventre, «Trembler le tigre, et fuir les hiboux aux yeux ronds.
«A chaque mouvement de ses lourds ailerons,
«Pendant qu’il plane, il sort du monstre des fumées;
«Elles montent sur terre, et ce sont des armées;

«Elles montent sur terre, et, dans nos régions,
«Ce sont des lois, des mœurs et des religions;
«Elles montent sur terre et prennent des figures
«De rois, de conquérants, de pontifes, d’augures;
«Et l’on entend le cri des hommes sous le pied
«D’un Satan Dieu qui règne et dans la nuit s’assied, «Fantôme ressemblant au spectre des ténèbres;
«Et, triomphants, sacrés, grands, illustres, célèbres,
«Des vampires, la mitre ou le laurier au front,
«Elevant jusqu’au ciel une gloire d’affront,
«Disent: Je suis le Dogme, et je me nomme Empire.
«Et cent fléaux, fatals, noirs, dont l’homme est le pire,
«Se déchaînent; - Satan en bas plane toujours; - «Peste, terre qui tremble, eau sur les rochers sourds,
«Le typhon sur les flots, le semoun dans les sables... -
«O sombres battements des ailes formidables!

«Le livre d’en haut dit: - Donc pas de curieux.
«La nuit est un conseil que le ciel donne aux yeux.
«Laissez l’Etre exister. Soyez ce que vous êtes.
«Regards, soyez l’effroi; bêtes, soyez les bêtes;
«Beauté, sois le squelette; homme, sois le néant.
«Dieu fait du ténébreux le bourreau du voyant.
«Ou, s’il lui plaît, savants, penseurs, ô tourbe infime,
«De vous abandonner à votre propre abîme,
«Il laissera l’ennui pesant, le moi jaloux,
«Le vertige et la peur croître d’eux-mêmes en vous,
«Et vos socs effrayés ne creuser que des fosses,
«Et se dresser, au fond de vos recherches fausses,
«Le chaos des erreurs, des fièvres, des tourments,
«Et s’offrir le fer rouge à vos tâtonnements;
«Si bien que de sa loi, de son énigme austère,
«De son nom, de son dogme obscur, de son mystère,
«Vous ôterez vos mains fumantes en criant:
«Nous nous sommes brûlés à cet être effrayant!
«Mage, il t’engloutira sous les bouillons de l’urne;
«Il remuera sous toi l’âpre échelle nocturne;

«Il rendra trouble, avec trop de lumière, l'oeil
«De la témérité, du rêve et de l'orgueil;
«Il n'aura qu'à montrer, pour vous mettre en démence,
«Un de ses attributs dans sa splendeur immense;
«Car le plus aveuglé, c'est le plus ébloui.
«Oui, si vous labourez au même champ que lui,
«Il emplira de cendre et de mort vos semailles.
«De toute la science il crèvera les mailles.
«L'infini ne se peut prendre dans un filet.
«Il ne souffrira point qu'on sache ce qu'il est.
«Il mettra les fléaux, les forces, les tonnerres,
«L'ombre, à votre poursuite, ô noirs visionnaires!
«Et s'il regarde, horreur! tout s'évanouira.
«Et les penseurs crieront: Grâce! Il leur suffira,
«Pour sentir la pensée en leurs fronts se dissoudre,
«D'entrevoir un moment sa prunelle de foudre.-

«Le livre d'en haut dit: - Vivez sans regarder.
«Passant, ta fonction est de passer. Sonder,
«C'est blesser. Qu'êtes-vous? Qu'es-tu? Ton nom? - Terpandre.
«Toi? - Linus. - Toi? - Thalès. - Vous vous appelez Cendre!
«Vous vous appelez Brume et Nuit! Disparaissez, «Mourez. Parler est trop, bégayer est assez.
«Es-tu sage? tais-toi. Le silence est l'hommage.
«Quoi! tu veux pénétrer l'impénétrable, ô mage!
«Tu viens escalader avec effraction
«Le problème, le jour, la nuit, la vision,
«L'infini! Tu commets un attentat nocturne
«Sur la virginité du tombeau taciturne!
«Tu lèves ce couvercle, ô mage audacieux!
«Que fais-tu là, rôdeur des barrières des cieux?
«Tu viens, furtif, armé de ta vanité sombre,
«Forcer l'éternité! tu viens crocheter l'ombre,
«Fourrer ta fausse clé dans la porte de feu,
«Et faire une pesée, avec l'orgueil, sous Dieu!
«Va-t'en de la lumière, et va-t'en des ténèbres!
«Dehors! Va-t'en avec ta strophe et tes algèbres,

«Poète, géomètre, astronome, voleur!

«Ne cherchez pas; rampez. Tremblez, c’est le meilleur.
«Espace, point d’Icare; astres, pas de lunettes.
«O vivants, vous serez dans le vrai, si vous n’êtes
«Que ce que les vivants d’avant vous ont été.
«Ne voyez que la grande et calme éternité.
«Le bas est immobile et le haut immuable.
«En bas est l’ancre; en haut l’obscur anneau du câble.
«Est-ce que la nature essaie autour de vous
«De changer d’attitude, ô mortels vains et fous?
«Qu’est-ce que le tombeau? Le puits des nuits funèbres;
«Il a la plénitude auguste des ténèbres;
«Il ne demande rien, il ne fait pas de bruit;
«Le sépulcre est le vase où Dieu garde la nuit,
«L’astre est le vase où Dieu conserve la lumière;
«Tous deux sont à jamais ce que la loi première
«Les créa; l’un est l’ombre et l’autre est le rayon;
«Pourquoi l’homme veut-il changer sa fonction?
«Il est souffle; qu’il passe. A quoi bon la pensée?
«A quoi bon tant de force obscure dépensée?
«A quoi Zoroastre ou Moïse? A quoi sert
«Ce Jean, vêtu de peaux, parlant dans le désert?
«A quoi bon vos Talmuds? N’est-ce pas une honte
«De voir s’entreheurter Tyr contre Sélinonte, «Delphes contre Eleusis, Thèbes contre Sion,
«Dans l’immobilité de la création?
«C’est l’ennui du voyant d’entendre les querelles
«Des superstitions se dévorant entre elles,
«Tous ces mages, luttant, affirmant ou niant,
«Et tous ces disputeurs de cendre et de néant
«Qui font tourbillonner leurs misérables rixes
«Entre les tombeaux noirs et les étoiles fixes!

«Un dogme est l’oiseleur, guettant dans la forêt,
«Qui, parce qu’il a pris un passereau, croirait
«Avoir tous les oiseaux du ciel bleu dans sa cage.

«La salutation du jonc au marécage
«N'est pas plus vaine, au fond du bois vague et jauni, «Que les saluts que fait un homme à l'infini.
«Tout ce que vous nommez vérité devient fable
«Devant l'inénarrable et devant l'ineffable.
«Dieu! rêve! Oui finit par ressembler à Non.
«La raison de celui qui prononce ce nom
«S'en va, comme le sang quand on ouvre la veine.
«Oh! que le verbe est nul! que la syllabe est vaine!
«Comme le nombre est vite essoufflé quand il faut
«Faire l'addition du bas avec le haut,
«Et, de la profondeur remontant à la cime,
«Compter le gouffre après avoir compté l'abîme!”
.
.

Pendant qu'elle parlait, pleine du sphynx caché,
Sur le puits ténébreux quelqu'un s'était penché;
Le soleil éclairait sur le seuil de la cave
Une figure douce, éblouissante et grave;
Un homme était pieds nus dans l'herbe et les genêts.

— Je ne t'ai jamais vu, mais je te reconnais.
Salut, Nazaréen! Dit la femme hagarde.

Et, montrant du doigt l'ombre, elle ajouta: Prends garde.

Alors entre la femme et cet homme, tandis
Que l'aube réchauffait les serpents engourdis
Et que les fleurs ouvraient au soleil leurs corolles,
Il se fit un échange auguste de paroles
Que la terre ignora, personne n'écrivant
Ce dialogue sombré emporté par le vent.

LE NAZARÉEN
O Prophétesse, il faut pourtant sauver les hommes.

LA SIBYLLE
A quoi bon?

LE NAZARÉEN
Pour sortir de cette ombre où nous sommes.

LA SIBYLLE
Restes-y.

LE NAZARÉEN
C’est la loi de monter vers le jour,
Qu’après l’iniquité la justice ait son tour,
C’est la loi.

LA SIBYLLE
La justice sur terre est un rêve.

LE NAZARÉEN
Les hommes pleins de haine ont à la main le glaive.
O femme, en les aimant on peut les apaiser.
Que dis-tu de l’amour? Parle.

LA SIBYLLE
Crains le baiser.

II. JÉSUS-CHRIST

I. LA POUTRE

Le brigand Barabbas est en prison. Son heure
Approche, car il faut que le meurtrier meure;
C’est du moins ce que dit le peuple.

Hors des murs,
Dans un champ où, pareil au ver dans les fruits mûrs,
Le chacal entre au flanc des charognes farouches,
Plaine où des os épars font bourdonner les mouches,
On entend un bruit sourd de scie et de marteaux.
Un homme dans un bouge équarrit des poteaux.
C’est Psyphax, charpentier de croix. Dehors un zèbre,
Des poules, du fumier, un coq. Psyphax est guèbre,
Adore le soleil et construit des gibets.

Le faubourg Zem, quartier des marchands au rabais
Et des fripiers vendant les haillons de la ville,
Borne au sud cette plaine âpre, déserte et vile.
Des cordes où parfois on se heurte en rêvant,
Où les laveuses font sécher leur linge au vent,
Flottent à des piquets plantés dans les décombres.
Les petits enfant nus de ces masures sombres
Où la famine habite et d’où la peste sort,
Vivent de ramasser dans l’herbe du bois mort
Qu’ils vont vendre en fagots sur les marches du temple.
Le prophète qui fait des gestes et contemple,
Quelque centurion par l’orgie attardé,
Des joueurs agitant la bassette ou le dé,
Hantent seuls ce lieu triste et cette lande aride.
Au-delà des terrains que l’ardent soleil ride,
Et que couvre un gazon brûlé, lépreux et court,
On voit les toits confus des maisons du faubourg
Où les femmes le soir médisent sur leurs portes.

Les mendiants hideux pareils à des cloportes
Rôdent aux alentours, tendant leurs pâles mains.
Au lieu de l’essaim d’or errant dans les jasmins,
L’oiseau de proie, affreux, vole aux carcasses mortes.
Près des maisons, les gueux, les nains aux jambes tortes,
Les goitreux, les boiteux, fourmillent en tous sens;
Et la difformité honteuse des passants,
Et ce faubourg infirme et malade, et ces bouges,
Importunent au loin l’aigle aux paupières rouges,
Et les vastes vautours africains dont le bec
Semble plein des rayons du désert de Balbeck.

Au fond de l’horizon est le Golgotha fauve;
Mont sans arbre, sans herbe et sans fleurs; sommet chauve
Et propre à la croissance horrible des gibets;
Ceux qui cherchent le sens des anciens alphabets
Et qui font du Talmud leur sévère lecture,
Tremblent devant ce mont, sachant son aventure;
Le vaste Adam est là, sous la terre dormant;
Si bien que le Calvaire est le noir renflement
De ce grand corps gisant sous la morne campagne,
Et qu’un air de cadavre en reste à la montagne.

Le toit de Psyphax, bas et marqué d’un poteau,
Fait une ampoule au centre isolé du plateau.
Le peuple craint les toits mystérieux des guèbres.
Ces fous de la lumière ont l’oeil plein de ténèbres;
On les voue aux métiers immondes: ils les font.
Ils mêlent leur chimère au céleste plafond;
Ils contemplent la nuit, d’astres profonds semée,
Et l’appellent Saba, ce qui veut dire armée;
Ils adorent un point du ciel nommé Kébla;
A toute heure de l’ombre et de l’aube, ils sont là
S’offrant, les hommes nus et les femmes sans voiles,
Au dieu soleil époux des déesses étoiles;
Ils maudissent la fève et l’ail, craignent le sel
Et l’ambre, et font lever le pain avec du miel.

Ils vont jusqu’en Egypte, affrontant les numides,
Pieds nus, sacrifier des coqs aux pyramides,
Ces trois tombeaux de Seth, d’Enos et de Sabi;
L’arabe en pâlissant leur ferme son gourbi;
Ils font un philtre avec des herbes qu’ils écrasent;
Ils respectent le bœuf et la brebis, se rasent,
Et n’osent pas nommer l’astre à qui leurs élus
Font, de l’aurore au soir, soixante-trois saluts;
Ils ont pour ville Haran en Mésopotamie;
Leur tabernacle, autel de trouble et d’infamie,
Au lieu de l’occident regarde le levant;
Ils adressent, hagards, des questions au vent,
Comptent l’onde, et parmi leurs prophètes on nomme
Loth, roi des Philistins, et Numa, roi de Rome;
Dans le mois du Bélier leur tribu danse en rond;
Ils vénèrent Péor, le faune obscène; ils ont
Sept temples dédiés par Cham aux sept planètes;
Ils sont jongleurs, charmeurs de tigres, proxénètes,
Baigneurs, marchands de sorts, plongeurs de tourbillons;
Quand ils sèment, ils font deux parts de leurs sillons,
Dont l’une est pour le dieu, l’autre pour les déesses;
Leurs femmes ont parfois des serpents dans leurs tresses;
Ils reprochent au char la plainte de l’essieu;
Ils regardent, pensifs, les ratures que Dieu
A faites sur le tigre ainsi que sur le zèbre;
C’est parce que tous deux ont ce signe funèbre
Et cette ombre des mots inconnus sur le dos
Que l’un porte la haine et l’autre les fardeaux;
Presque à l’égal du temple ils révèrent l’étable;
Leur sommeil est étrange, agité, redoutable;
Le sage est dur pour eux, même dans sa bonté,
Car leur religion donne à l’humanité
Une difformité misérable et terrible;
Ils ont un livre écrit par Satan, chose horrible;
Un autre par Adam, un autre par Enos;
Tous savent lire et sont des songeurs infernaux;
Ce sont, sous l’azur sombre où les nuages glissent,

Des hommes stupéfaits et fauves qu’éblouissent
Les immenses couchers du soleil dans les monts,
Et qui mangent du sang ainsi que les démons.

Près d’un champ maigre, où croît plus de ronce que d’orge,
Dans son hangar croulant qu’empourpre un feu de forge,
Psyphax le guèbre est seul; sans veste, sans bonnet,
Bras nus, la scie aux poings, il travaille; et l’on est
A la fin du mois Jar, le second de l’année.

Dans cette plaine vaste, obscure, abandonnée,
Deux hommes vers le soir, marchant dans les fossés,
Se rencontrent, venant de deux points opposés.
Ils se parlent très bas avec un air de honte.
— Voici l’argent.

- Combien?

- Trente.

- Comptons.

On compte;
Dans l’ombre; en étouffant, comme en flagrant délit,
Le bruit d’un sac d’argent qu’on vide et qu’on remplit.

— Marché fait.

- Viendra-t-il pour la fête?

- Peut-être.

— Mais au milieu des siens comment le reconnaître?

— Celui qu’on me verra baiser, ce sera lui.

— C’est dit.

Et souriant, mais non sans quelque ennui,
L’homme qui prend l’argent fait un salut servile,
Met le sac sous sa robe et rentre dans la ville.

Et l’autre attend qu’il ait disparu, puis, sans bruit,
Regardant si de loin personne ne le suit,
Il s’enfonce à pas sourds dans la plaine funèbre,
Et l’on dirait qu’il va vers la maison du guèbre.

Psyphax travaille. Il ouvre au milieu des outils
Un vieux livre, et ses yeux y semblent engloutis,
Comme s’ils en puisaient la lueur vénérable;
Puis il reprend la vrille et l’équerre d’érable,
Et se remet à fendre un bloc informe et noir;
Puis il lit, quoiqu’on lise avec peine le soir,
De sorte que cet homme à la fois semble suivre
Son travail sous l’outil et sa loi dans le livre;
Soudain, au soupirail du toit presque détruit,
Apparaît la première étoile de la nuit;
Psyphax lève les yeux, l’aperçoit, se redresse,
Ebloui, pâle, et dit à voix basse: O déesse!
Or l’homme qui venait arrive. Il montre un sceau.
Il crache sur le livre ouvert, et dit: - Pourceau,
Je suis du temple. - Il laisse, en l’écartant, paraître
Sous son manteau dans l’ombre une robe de prêtre.
Et le payen se tait, avec ce pli du front
Que donne l’habitude horrible de l’affront;
Car il a reconnu Rosmophim, un des sages
Qui du Talmud au peuple expliquent les passages,
Docteur et juge, après Caïphe le premier.
Il tremble; le rayon rend visite au fumier.
Pourquoi?

C’est ce docteur Rosmophim qui, naguère,
A, d’après la loi sainte et le texte vulgaire,
Condamné Barabbas, et dit: Deux fois malheur!

Mort sur le meurtrier et mort sur le voleur!

Rosmophim dit: - Au nom du sanhédrin! - L'esclave
S'incline, et Rosmophim reprend d'une voix grave,
Pendant que son regard sur le guèbre tombait:
— As-tu quelque tronc d'arbre à faire un grand gibet;

Dans une sorte d'antre au fond de la masure
Gisaient de noirs poteaux de diverse mesure;
Le payen remua ces affreux blocs dormants,
Ainsi qu'un fossoyeur trouble un tas d'ossements,
Et l'on en voyait fuir des bêtes qu'on ignore;
Les poutres retombaient sur la terre sonore;
Soudain l'homme, que l'âtre aidait de sa clarté,
Poussant un dernier bloc, non sans peine écarté,
Montra du doigt au prêtre un madrier difforme,
Ayant le poids du chêne avec les nœuds de l'orme,
Lourd, vaste, et comme empreint de cinq doigts monstrueux;
On voyait au gros bout, renflement tortueux,
On ne sait quelle tache épouvantable et sombre,
Et l'on eût dit du sang élargi dans de l'ombre.
Rosmophim regarda la poutre, maugréant:
— Serait-ce le bâton de marche d'un géant?

— Seigneur, c'est en effet cela, dit l'idolâtre.

Et le prêtre jeta trois grains d'encens dans l'âtre
Pour purifier l'air où l'homme avait parlé.

L'homme reprit:
- Un champ qui fait mourir le blé,
Qui n'a pas un rameau vivant où l'oiseau dorme,
Egout où du déluge on voit la boue énorme,
Est le lieu sombre où j'ai trouvé ce tronc hideux.
Les hommes d'autrefois ne pouvaient être deux
Sans combattre, et l'un l'autre ils se prenaient pour cible,
Et la marque d'un meurtre est sur cet arbre horrible.

Les géants de la race Énacim, qui d’abord
Ont habité la terre antique, ont fait la mort.
Leur ombre immense couvre encor les races neuves.
Ils écrasaient du pied les éléphants des fleuves
Devant qui la forêt monstrueuse se tait;
Leur bâton de voyage ou de défense était
Un chêne qu’ils avaient cassé dans la clairière;
Et nous pourrions bâtir toute une tour de pierre Avec un des cailloux qu’ils tenaient dans leur poing.

— Oui, dit le docteur, Dieu qui ne s’égare point
En attendant le nombre, exagéra la forme;
Le monde a commencé par la famille énorme;
Du groupe gigantesque est né le genre humain;
Le bloc d’hier sera tas de pierres demain;
Un géant tient d’abord la place d’une foule;
Puis, comme la nuée en gouttes d’eau s’écroule,
De génération en génération,
Il s’amoindrit, pullule, et devient nation;
Et Dieu fait le colosse avant la fourmilière.
Il reprit: - Ce tronc d’arbre a des traces de lierre.

— Non, c’est la pression du poignet du géant,
Dit l’esclave.

- Chien vil, dit le docteur songeant,
Je choisis ce poteau. Dans ton ombre mortelle
Fais-en vite une croix vaste et haute, mais telle
Qu’un homme cependant puisse encor la traîner.

Laissant derrière lui Psyphax se prosterner,
Le prêtre s’en alla, l’oeil plein d’une âpre flamme.
Et le guèbre, tirant du tas la poutre infâme,
La regardait, la hache au poing, disant tout bas:

— Il paraît qu’on veut faire honneur à Barabbas.

II. LE CANTIQUE DE BETHPHAGÉ

CHOEUR DE FEMMES
L’ombre des bois d’Aser est toute parfumée.
Quel est celui qui vient par le frais chemin vert?
Est-ce le bien-aimé qu’attend la bien-aimée?
Il est jeune, il est doux. Il monte du désert
Comme de l’encensoir s’élève une fumée.
Est-ce le bien-aimé qu’attend la bien-aimée?
UNE JEUNE FILLE
J’aime. O vents, chassez l’hiver.
Les plaines sont embaumées.
L’oiseau semble, aux bois d’Aser;
Une âme dans les ramées.

L’amante court vers l’amant
Il me chante et je le chante;
Oh! comme on dort mollement
Sous une branche penchante!

Je m’éveille en le chantant;
En me chantant il s’éveille;
Et l’aube croit qu’elle entend
Deux bourdonnements d’abeille.

L’un vers l’autre nous allons;
Il dit: « O belle des belles,
«La rose est sous tes talons,
«L’astre frémit dans tes ailes!”

Je dis: « La terre a cent rois;
«Les jeunes gens sont sans nombre;
«Mais c’est lui que j’aime, ô bois!
«Il est flamme et je suis ombre.”

Il reprend: « Viens avec moi
«Nous perdre au fond des vallées
«Dans l'éblouissant effroi
«Des vastes nuits étoilées."

Et j'ajoute: « Je mourrais
«Pour un baiser de sa bouche;
«Vous le savez, ô forêts,
«O grand murmure farouche!"

L'eau coule, le ciel est clair.
Nos chansons, au vent semées,
Se croisent comme dans l'air
Les flèches de deux armées.
CHOEUR DE FEMMES
L'oiseau semble, aux bois d'Aser,
Une âme dans les ramées.
UN JEUNE HOMME
Elle dormait, sa tête appuyée à son bras;
Ne la réveillez pas avant qu'elle le veuille;
Par les fleurs, par le daim qui tremble sous la feuille,
Par les astres du ciel, ne la réveillez pas!

On ne la croit point femme; on lui dit: « Quoi! tu manges,
Tu bois! c'est à coup sûr quelque sainte liqueur!"
Tous les parfums ont l'air de sortir de son cœur;
Elle tient ses pieds joints comme les pieds des anges.

On dirait qu'elle a fait un vase de son corps
Pour ces baumes d'en haut qu'aucun miasme n'altère;
Elle s'occupe aussi des choses de la terre,
Car la feuille du lys est courbée en dehors.

Le bois des rossignols comme le bois des merles
L'admirent, et ses pas sont pour eux des faveurs;
Sa beauté, qui rayonne et luit, rendrait rêveurs
Les rois de l'Inde ayant des coffres pleins de perles.

Quand elle passe, avec des danses et des chants,
Le vieillard qui grondait, sourit; les plus maussades
L'admettent dans leur pré fermé de palissades;
La forme de son ombre est agréable aux champs.

Je pleure par moments, tant elle est douce et frêle!
L'autre jour, un oiseau, pas plus grand que le doigt,
S'est posé, frissonnant, sur le bord de mon toit;
J'ai dit: « Oiseau, soyez béni! priez pour elle.

Si je l'épouse, oh non! je ne veux plus partir.
Je ne m'en irai pas d'auprès de toi que j'aime,
Je ne m'en irai pas d'auprès de toi, quand même
Salomon m'enverrait vers Hiram roi de Tyr!

Son cœur, tout en dormant, m'adorait; douce gloire!
Un ange qui venait des cieux, passant par là,
Vit son amour, en prit sa part, et s'envola;
Car où la vierge boit la colombe peut boire.

Elle dormait ainsi qu'Annah rêvant d'Esdras;
O ma beauté, je fus le jour où vous m'aimâtes,
Ivre comme la biche au mont des aromates;
Son sein pur soulevait la blancheur de ses draps.
CHOEUR DE FEMMES
Ne la réveillez pas avant qu'elle le veuille;
Par les fleurs, par le daim qui tremble sous la feuille,
Par les astres du ciel, ne la réveillez pas!
LA JEUNE FILLE
Par l'ouverture de ma porte
Mon bien-aimé passa sa main,
El je me réveillai, de sorte
Que nous nous marions demain.
Mon bien-aimé passa sa main
Par l'ouverture de ma porte.

De la montagne de l’encens
A la colline de la myrrhe,
C’est lui que souhaitent mes sens,
Et c’est lui que mon âme admire
De la colline de la myrrhe,
À la montagne de l’encens.

Je ne sais comment le lui dire,
J’ai dépouillé mes vêtements;
Dites-le lui, cieux! Il soupire,
Et moi je brûle, ô firmaments!
J’ai dépouillé mes vêtements;
Je ne sais comment le lui dire.
CHOEUR DE FEMMES
Cieux! c’est lui que son âme admire,
C’est lui que souhaitent ses sens
De la colline de la myrrhe
À la montagne de l’encens.
LE JEUNE HOMME
Elle m’enflamme et je l’embrase,
Et je vais l’appelant, le cœur gonflé d’extase.
O nuages, elle est ce que j’aime le mieux.
Comme elle est belle avec son rire d’épousée,
L’oeil plein d’un ciel mystérieux,
Et les pieds nus dans la rosée!

Je la parfumerai de nard.
O rêve! elle mettra, dans notre couche étroite,
A mon front sa main gauche, à mon cœur sa main droite.
La nuit mes yeux joyeux font peur au loup hagard.
Je ressemble à celui qui trouve une émeraude.
Ma fierté fond sous son regard
Comme la neige sous l’eau chaude.

Son cou se passe de colliers;
La sagesse à la grâce en ses discours se mêle
Comme le ramier vole auprès de sa femelle;

Les séraphins lui font des signes familiers;
Cette vierge, ô David, ô roi rempli de gloire,
Ressemble à votre tour d'ivoire
Où pendent mille boucliers.

Femmes, croyez-vous qu'elle sorte?
Elle reste au logis et tourne son fuseau.
Et je l'appelle... mais je suis aimé, qu'importe!
Je bondis comme un faon des monts Nabujesso,
Comme si je planais dans l'air qui me réclame,
Et comme si j'avais une âme
Faite avec des plumes d'oiseau.

Venez voir quelqu'un de superbe!
Venez voir l'amant, fier comme un palmier dans l'herbe,
Beau comme l'aloès en fleur au mois d'élul!
Venez voir l'amoureux qui vaincrait les colosses!
Venez voir le grand roi Saül
Avec sa couronne de noces!
CHOEUR DE FEMMES
Venez voir le grand roi Saül
Avec sa couronne de noces!
LA JEUNE FILLE
L'amour porte bonheur. Chantez. L'air était doux,
Je le vis, l'herbe en fleur nous venait aux genoux,
Je riais, et nous nous aimâmes;
Laissez faire leur nid aux cigognes, laissez
L'amour, qui vient du fond des azurs insensés,
Entrer dans la chambre des âmes!

Qu'est-ce que des amants? Ce sont des nouveau-nés.
Mon bien-aimé, venez des monts, des bois! venez!
Profitez des portes mal closes,
Je voudrais bien savoir comment je m'y prendrais
Pour ne pas adorer son rire jeune et frais,
Venez, mon lit est plein de roses!

Ma maison est cachée et semble faite exprès;
Le plafond est en cèdre et l’alcôve en cyprès;
Oh! le jour où nous nous parlâmes,
Il était blanc, les nids chantaient, il me semblait
Fils des cygnes qu’on croit lavés avec du lait,
Et je vis dans le ciel des flammes.

Dans l’obscurité, grand, dans la clarté, divin,
Vous régnez; votre front brille en ce monde vain
Comme un bleuet parmi les seigles;
Absent, présent, de loin, de près, vous me tenez;
Venez de l’ombre où sont les lions, et venez
De la lumière où sont les aigles!

J’ai cherché dans ma chambre et ne l’ai pas trouvé;
Et j’ai toute la nuit couru sur le pavé,
Et la lune était froide et blême,
Et la ville était noire, et le vent était dur,
Et j’ai dit au soldat sinistre au haut du mur:
Avez-vous vu celui que j’aime?

Quand tu rejetteras la perle en ton reflux,
O mer; quand le printemps dira: « Je ne veux plus «Ni de l’ambre, ni du cinname!”
Quand on verra le mois Nisan congédier
La rose, le jasmin, l’iris et l’amandier,
Je le renverrai de mon âme.

S’il savait à quel point je l’aime, il pâlirait.
Viens! le lys s’ouvre ainsi qu’un précieux coffret,
Les agneaux sont dans la prairie,
Le vent passe et me dit: « Ton souffle est embaumé!”
Mon bien-aimé, mon bien-aimé, mon bien-aimé,
Toute la montagne est fleurie!

Oh! quand donc viendra-t-il, mon amour, mon orgueil?
C’est lui qui me fait gaie ou sombre; il est mon deuil,

Il est ma joie; et je l’adore;
Il est beau. Tour à tour sur sa tête on peut voir
L’étoile du matin et l’étoile du soir,
Car il est la nuit et l’aurore!

Pourquoi fais-tu languir celle qui t’aime tant?
Viens! Pourquoi perdre une heure? Hélas, mon cœur attend;
Je suis triste comme les tombes;
Est-ce qu’on met du temps, dis, entre les éclairs
De deux nuages noirs qui roulent dans les airs,
Et les baisers de deux colombes?
CHOEUR DE FEMMES
Viens! ô toi qu’on attend! Chantons! l’air était doux.
Il la vit; l’herbe en fleur leur venait aux genoux.

III. LE TRIOMPHE

C’est ainsi que chantait, devant le ciel qui brille,
Le jeune homme alternant avec la jeune fille,
Un groupe des enfants du bourg de Bethphagé.
Au-delà d’un vallon de brume submergé,
On distinguait des tours, un mur blanc, une porte;
C’était Jérusalem. L’encens que l’aube apporte,
Les souffles purs, les fleurs s’éveillant dans les bois,
Les rayons, se mêlaient à l’ivresse des voix;
Et c’était à côté du chemin de la ville.
Hors du village, et près de la borne du Mille,
Tout en allant aux champs, ils s’étaient rencontrés;
L’herbe était verte, et l’aube éblouissait les prés;
Les hommes avaient dit: Trêve au travail austère!
Et les femmes avaient posé leur cruche à terre,
Et, sereins, ils s’étaient mis à chanter, tandis
Que les oiseaux poussaient des cris du paradis;
Une aïeule riait au seuil d’une masure;
Trois laboureurs hâlés, pour marquer la mesure,
Frappaient la terre avec le manche de leur faulx;
Les vierges, au front pur comme un lys sans défauts,
Songeaient, et, l’oeil noyé, la bouche haletante,
Regardaient l’horizon dans une vague attente.

Tout à coup, au moment où les femmes en chœur
Jetaient aux forêts l’hymne enflammé de leur cœur
Que marquait la cadence agreste des faucilles,
Quelqu’un dit: - Ecoutez! paix! - Et les jeunes filles
S’arrêtèrent, le doigt sur la bouche, entendant
Derrière le coteau brûlé du jour ardent,
D’autres voix qui chantaient, douces comme des âmes:

— « Le bien-aimé, celui que vous attendez, femmes,
«C’est celui-ci qui passe et que nous amenons.

«Le triomphe nous a choisis pour compagnons,
«La lumière permet que nous marchions près d’elle,
«Et nous menons le maître à son peuple fidèle,
«Voici le bien-aimé des âmes! et celui
«Sur qui la grande étoile éblouissante a lui!
«Toutes les majestés forment son diadème;
«Il pourrait foudroyer, il préfère qu’on l’aime;
«Il console Rachel, il relève Sara;
«Il marche entre la joie et la gloire; il sera
«Comme un bouquet de myrrhe entre deux seins célestes;
«Son sceptre anéantit dans les rayons les restes
«Du vieux monde terrible où se tord le serpent;
«Son nom divin est comme une huile qu’on répand;
«Au-dessus de sa tête, étonnement des anges,
«Le ciel est un murmure immense de louanges;
«Il est plus glorieux qu’Alexandre, et plus beau
«Que Salomon qui tient un lys dans son tombeau;
«Il a pour champ la terre, et l’esprit pour domaine;
«Il vient ôter la nuit de dessus l’âme humaine;
«Il fera reculer l’Hydre qui triomphait,
«Il transfigurera le monde stupéfait;
«L’abîme le regarde et l’aurore l’approuve;
«Le grondement du tigre et le cri de la louve,
«La haine, la fureur soulevant un pavé,
«La guerre, se tairont devant son doigt levé.
«Dans son immensité Moloch s’écroule et sombre.
«Il est sans tache, il est sans borne, il est sans nombre;
«Il produit, en fixant au ciel son oeil béni,
«La disparition du mal dans l’infini.
«Les chars de Pharaon près de lui sont de l’ombre.
«Il est plus radieux que Nemrod n’était sombre;
«Il brille plus qu’Ammon à qui rien ne manquait,
«Et dont le trône était le centre d’un banquet;
«Il dépasse Cyrus, debout sur son pilastre.
«Peuple, toute son âme est une clarté d’astre.
«C’est un roi; plus qu’un roi. C’est lui le Conquérant, «C’est lui l’élu, c’est lui le vrai, c’est lui le grand!

«Gloire à lui! Le soleil le voit, l’ombre l’écoute.”

Alors on aperçut, au détour de la route,
Un homme qui venait monté sur un ânon.

Cet homme, dont chacun se redisait le nom,
Etait le même à qui naguère un prêtre blême
Avait jeté du haut du temple l’anathème.
Il avait les cheveux partagés sur le front;
Des femmes qui riaient et qui dansaient en rond,
Le suivaient, et de fleurs elles étaient couvertes,
Et des petits enfants portaient des branches vertes;
Et de partout, des champs, des toits, des bois obscurs,
Et de Jérusalem dont on voyait les murs,
Sortait la foule, gaie, heureuse, pêle-mêle;
Des mères lui montraient leur fils à la mamelle,
Et les vieillards criaient: Hosanna! Quelques-uns
Soufflaient sur des réchauds où brûlaient des parfums;
Il s’avançait avec le calme du mystère;
Et ces hommes louaient cet homme, et sur la terre Etendaient leurs habits pour qu’il passât dessus;
Quelques lambeaux de pourpre à la hâte cousus
Faisaient une bannière en avant du cortège;
Et tous disaient: - Que Dieu le Père le protège!
Voilà celui qui vient pour nous rendre meilleurs! -
Lui, pensif, regarda Jérusalem, les fleurs,
Le soleil au plus haut des cieux comme une fête,
Ces tapis sous ses pieds, ces rameaux sur sa tête,
Et les femmes chanter, et le peuple accourir,
Et sourit, en disant: Je vais bientôt mourir.

IV. LE DEVOIR

Marie était assise entre Thomas et Jude;
Et le maître debout disait: - La solitude
Est un rayon d’en haut qu’on met dans son esprit;
Mais le sauveur va droit au peuple et s’y meurtrit;
Dieu livre le Messie aux multitudes viles;
La palme ne croit pas aux déserts, mais aux villes;
Malheur à qui se cache et malheur à qui fuit!
Laissons mûrir sur nous la mort ainsi qu’un fruit;
Et ne la troublons pas dans sa lente croissance;
Dieu, quand il juge un homme en sa toute-puissance,
Voit ce qu’il a vécu moins que ce qu’il a fait;
Au soleil de la mort David se réchauffait;
Ce serait mal aimer un frère que lui dire:
Recule! quand vers Dieu le sépulcre l’attire;
Et ce serait haïr et perdre son enfant
Que l’ôter du chemin funeste et triomphant;
Le calice est amer, mais l’exemple est utile;
Et c’est pourquoi je suis venu dans cette ville.

Ainsi parlait le fils et la mère écoutait.

V. DEUX DIFFÉRENTES MANIÈRES D'AIMER

C'est l'heure où le ramier rentre au nid et se tait.

Une femme se hâte en une rue étroite;
Elle regarde à gauche, elle regarde à droite,
Et marche. S'il faisait moins sombre au firmament,
On pourrait à ses doigts distinguer vaguement
Le cercle délicat des bagues disparues;
Son pied blanc n'est pas fait pour le pavé des rues;
Elle porte un long voile aux plis égyptiens
Plein de rayons nouveaux et de parfums anciens;
Jeune et blonde, elle est belle entre toutes les femmes;
Elle a dans l'oeil des pleurs semblables à des flammes;
C'est Madeleine, sœur de Lazare.

Elle court.
Près de son pas céleste un oiseau serait lourd.
Où va-t-elle?

Il est nuit, et personne ne passe.

Une lumière brille en une maison basse.

Une autre femme, grave, est debout sut le seuil.
Son front est gris; elle est sévère sans orgueil,
Douce comme un enfant et grande comme un sage.
Elle pleure et médite; on voit sur son visage
La résignation au sacrifice noir;
On dirait la statue en larmes du devoir;
Le cœur tremblant s'appuie en elle à l'âme forte;
C'est la mère.

Elle a l’air de garder cette porte.

Madeleine l’aborde, et presque avec des cris
Lui parle, et s’épouvante, et tord ses bras meurtris.

— Mère, ouvre-moi. Je viens. Il s’agit de sa vie.
Me voici. J’ai couru de peur d’être suivie.
On creuse l’ombre autour de ton fils. Je te dis
Que je sens fourmiller les serpents enhardis.
J’ai connu les démons, du temps que j’étais belle;
Je sais ce que l’enfer met dans une prunelle;
Je viens de voir passer Judas; cela suffit.
C’est un calculateur de fraude et de profit;
C’est un monstre. Ouvre-moi, que j’entre chez le maître.
Le temps presse. Il sera trop tard demain peut-être.
Il faut que ce soir même il fuie, et que jamais
Il ne revienne! ô mère! et, si tu le permets,
Je vais l’emmener, moi! Ces prêtres sont infâmes!
Manquer sa mission, ne point sauver les âmes,
Que nous importe, à nous les femmes qui l’aimons!
Il sera mieux avec les tigres dans les monts
Que dans Jérusalem avec les prêtres. Mère, Qu’il renonce au salut des hommes, sa chimère,
Qu’il fuie! Oh! n’est-ce pas? nous baisons ses talons,
Et qu’il vive, voilà tout ce que nous voulons.
Ces juifs l’égorgeront! Demande à ma sœur Marthe
Si c’est vrai, s’il n’est pas nécessaire qu’il parte.
Laisse-moi l’arracher à son affreux devoir!
Oh! te figures-tu cela, mère? le voir
Saisi, lié, tué peut-être à coups de pierre!
O Dieu! le voir saigner, lui, ce corps de lumière!
Ouvre-moi. Je sais bien qu’il est dans ta maison
Puisque je vois sa lampe à travers la cloison.
O mère, laisse-moi l’implorer pour que vite
Il s’en aille et s’échappe et qu’il prenne la fuite!
A quoi songes-tu donc que tu ne réponds rien?
Si tu veux, à nous deux, nous le sauverons bien!

Veux-tu te joindre à moi pour arracher notre ange
Au gouffre monstrueux de ce devoir étrange,
Aux bourreaux, à Judas, son hideux compagnon?

La mère en sanglotant lui fait signe que non.

VI. APRÈS LA PÂQUE

On était aux grands jours où le temple flamboie,
Où les petits enfants s'éveillent pleins de joie;
La Pâque était venue. On avait dans les fours
Cuit le pain sans levain qu'on vend aux carrefours.

Or Jésus-Christ était sur la montagne obscure;
Au lieu même où plus tard fut un temple à Mercure
Bâti par Adrien, détruit par Constantin.

C'était le soir; Jésus avait dit le matin
Aux disciples rangés autour de lui: « - Vous, Jacques, «Vous, Pierre, vous, Thomas, voici le jour de Pâques;
«Vous irez dans la ville où des gens passeront;
«Vous trouverez un homme ayant sa cruche au front;
«À l'endroit où cet homme ira, quel qu'il puisse être,
«Vous irez à sa suite, et vous direz: - Le Maître
«Vient faire ici la Pâque. - Et pour cette raison
«Le maître du logis donnera sa maison.
«Il sied que Dieu toujours nous mène où bon lui semble.
«Et nous célébrerons la Pâque tous ensemble.

Et cela s'était fait ainsi qu'il l'avait dit.

Ce que la Cène vit et ce qu'elle entendit
Est écrit, dans le livre où pas un mot ne change,
Par les quatre hommes purs près de qui l'on voit l'ange,
Le lion, et le bœuf, et l'aigle, et le ciel bleu;
Cette histoire par eux semble ajoutée à Dieu
Comme s'ils écrivaient en marge de l'abîme;
Tout leur livre ressemble au rayon d'une cime;
Chaque page y frémit sous le frisson sacré;
Et c'est pourquoi la terre a dit: Je le lirai!
Les âmes du côté de ce livre mendient,

Et vingt siècles penchés dans l’ombre l’étudient.

C’était donc le soir même où cet être divin
Venait de partager le gâteau sans levain;
Christ, assis, lui treizième, au centre de la table,
— Et ce noir chiffre Treize est resté redoutable, -
Avait rompu le pain, versé le vin, disant:
«Mangez, voici ma chair; buvez, voici mon sang.”
Puis il avait repris: « Allons où Dieu nous mène!”
Et tous étaient allés en sortant de la Cène
Au jardin qui fleurit derrière le Cédron.

Ce torrent, que jamais n’a touché l’aviron,
Coulait hors de la ville au pied d’une colline.
Les pâtres y montraient la cave sibylline
De Lilith, femme spectre, amante du démon;
C’est près de ce coteau que le prêtre Simon
Fit creuser le canal à laver les hosties;
Des sources y versaient, à travers les orties,
Une eau qui de la ville emplissait les viviers;
Et ce lieu s’appelait le Mont des Oliviers.

On venait sur ce mont aux époques de jeûnes.

Une plantation d’oliviers alors jeunes
Le couvrait en effet, jetant aux verts sentiers
Une ombre qui faisait durer les églantiers.
Christ y vint, murmurant tout bas: Que Dieu m’assiste!
Et ce qui s’y passa ce soir-là fut si triste,
Si lâche et si fatal qu’aujourd’hui ce jardin
Est voisin de l’enfer comme du ciel l’Eden.

Voici ce que Jésus disait sur la montagne;

«Ce qu’on perd sur la terre au ciel on le regagne.

«Qui regarde en arrière et s’étonne de peu, «Celui-là n’est pas propre au royaume de Dieu.

«Dieu se dévoile assez pour que l’homme le voie.

«Je suis moins grand que lui, mais c’est lui qui m’envoie.
«Quand je parle, c’est lui qui dit ce que je dis.
«Si vous vous aimez bien, voilà le paradis.

«Soyez bons. Dieu choisit ceux que je lui désigne.

«Il est le vigneron, et moi je suis la vigne.
«Il viendra, comme il fit pour Job et pour Amos,
«Une serpe à la main, émonder mes rameaux,
«Et, gardant les féconds, coupera les stériles.

«Enseignez tendrement le peuple dans les villes,
«Souriez, n’ayez point entre vous de débats.

«Quand vous êtes parmi les tombes, parlez bas;
«Car au fond du sépulcre une oreille est ouverte;
«Ceux qu’on croit endormis sous la grande herbe verte,
«Ecoutent, et vos voix leur parlent dans les vents,
«Et sachez que c’est là la maison des vivants.

«Qui maudit doit trembler. Ne faites rien trop vite.
«Esdras, voyant l’enfant d’une femme maudite,
«Le prit et le jeta tout vivant dans la mer
«Par l’effet surprenant d’un zèle trop amer.
«Dieu l’a puni.

  Marchez dans la route tracée.
«Aimez. N’enviez pas à d’autres leur pensée;
«Il faut se contenter des lumières qu’on a;
«L’un est plus sage et l’autre est plus doux; Dieu donna
«Plus de fruit au figuier, plus d’ombre au sycomore.
«Croyez.”

Il ajouta d’autres choses encore;
Puis soudain il dit, pâle et d’un frisson saisi:

— Allons! celui qui doit me vendre est près d’ici.

VII. COMMENCEMENT DE L’ANGOISSE

Alors il s’éloigna de près d’un jet de pierre,
Et se mit à genoux, et fit une prière.

Il resta longtemps seul et comme plein d’effroi.

Il disait: - « Ecartez ce calice de moi,
«Seigneur! S’il faut mourir pourtant, que la mort vienne!
«Que votre volonté soit faite, et non la mienne.”

Le reste dans le ciel ténébreux se perdit.

Les disciples dormaient. Christ revint, et leur dit:

— Quoi donc! vous n’avez pu même veiller une heure!

Il reprit:

- C’est ainsi qu’il convient que je meure.
Cela doit être, et nul au monde n’y peut rien.
Je suis venu pour être abandonné. C’est bien.
Il faut qu’on me rejette ainsi qu’un misérable.

On distinguait au loin le temple vénérable
Bâti par Salomon sur le mont Moria.

— Pardon pour tous! dit Christ. Mais Pierre s’écria:

— Si quelqu’un vous délaisse et vous quitte, ô mon maître,
Ce ne sera pas moi, car je suis votre prêtre.
Que le tombeau pour vous s’ouvre, j’y descendrai.

Jésus lui répondit, calme, tandis qu’André,
Jude et Thomas tournaient vers lui leurs têtes grises:

— Vous m’aurez renié, vous Pierre, à trois reprises
Que le coq n’aura pas encor chanté trois fois.

VIII. CHRIST VOIT CE QUI ARRIVERA

Il alla de nouveau prier au fond du bois.

Il songeait, et sa voix disait:

— Mon âme est triste
Jusqu’à la mort; et l’homme en moi tremble et résiste;
Je frémis comme Job, je crains comme Judith.

Puis il parla si bas que Dieu seul entendit.

Soudain il s’écria, pâle comme un prophète:

— Deuil, lamentation et douleur sur ta tête,
O Balaath qu’emplit un peuple querelleur!
Malheur, Corozaïm! Bethsaïde, malheur!
Parce que vous avez dédaigné mes oracles,
Parce que si j’avais fait les mêmes miracles,
Crié le même appel et le même pardon
Dans Ninive aux cent tours, dans Tyr et dans Sidon,
On aurait vu pleurer Ninive, et Tyr descendre
De son trône, et Sidon vêtir le sac de cendre!
C’est fini. Je vous vois désertes. Vous voilà
Muettes comme un lac dont toute l’eau coula.
Vos jardins ont l’odeur des charniers insalubres.
Tout croule. Vos palais sont devenus lugubres
Sous le passage obscur des châtiments divins;
Ce sont des pans de mur inutiles et vains;
Les mâchoires des morts ne sont pas plus terribles.
Malheur! on ne voit plus le grain sortir des cribles;
Plus de fille de joie assise sur son lit;
On n’entend plus cracher les passants; l’herbe emplit
Les sentiers que suivaient les mulets et les zèbres.
Le plein midi ne fait qu’augmenter vos ténèbres;

On a beau peindre en blanc le sépulcre, il est noir.
Le soleil est présent à votre désespoir;
Vos décombres sont pleins d'antres épouvantables.
O Moïse, ils ont fait une fêlure aux tables,
Ils ont brisé la loi; c'est bien, mourez. Assez!
Vous serez si tremblants, peuples, et si chassés
Que vous ferez sous terre une seconde ville.
Comme sous le pressoir on voit déborder l'huile,
Le sang en longs ruisseaux jaillit sous le talon
Des princes écrasant Ruben et Zabulon;
Isaachar et Lévi sont abolis. Partage
Et désert, comme après la chute de Carthage.
On vend un peuple ainsi qu'une bête au marché.
Malheur, Jérusalem! ô maison du péché,
Malheur; tu seras morte entre les cités mortes;
Les rois feront sculpter un pourceau sur tes portes;
Tu seras une ville infâme et sans témoin,
Qu'il sera défendu de regarder de loin.
La femme pleurera d'être grosse ou nourrice.
Qui te verra croira qu'il voit la cicatrice
Des tonnerres au front du monde châtié;
Et tu seras l'endroit où finit la pitié.

Quand il eut ainsi fait des reproches aux villes,
Il s'approcha des siens et dit:

— Soyez tranquilles;
Ce n'est pas à présent votre jour, c'est le mien.
Tout est bon si ma mort enseigne, tout est bien
Si dans la vérité l'homme se désaltère.
Or je m'élèverai de dessus cette terre
Et j'attirerai tout à moi du haut du ciel.
Christ finit le combat commencé par Michel.

Son oeil devint étrange et semblait voir des choses
Au fond de son esprit confusément écloses.

— Les trois femmes en deuil dans la tombe entreront,
Marchant l’une après l’autre, humbles, courbant le front
A cause du lieu bas et de l’entrée étroite,
Et verront un jeune homme assis dans l’angle à droite
Qui leur dira, serein comme un soleil levant:
«Pourquoi donc chez les morts cherchez-vous le vivant?

La vision d’un être inouï qui se lève
Dans un sépulcre avec la lumière du rêve,
Fera fuir les soldats pleins d’un effroi sacré.

Trois jours après ma mort je ressusciterai;
Mais quand j’apparaîtrai blanc près de la fontaine,
Vous me verrez ainsi qu’une forme incertaine;
Madeleine croira que c’est le jardinier;
Thomas commencera par douter et nier,
Mais les trous de mes pieds le forceront à croire;
Et quand il aura mis dans ma blessure noire
Son doigt qu’il ôtera tiède et mouillé de sang,
Il s’en ira songer dans l’ombre en frémissant.

Priez. Ne livrez point ma doctrine aux querelles.
Est-ce que les épis sont pour les sauterelles?
Quand je serai parti, vous répandrez ma loi.
Beaucoup se tromperont, l’erreur naîtra de moi.
L’ombre est noire toujours même tombant des cygnes.

Quand je ne serai plus vous verrez de grands signes.
Les ténèbres croîtront sur le front d’Israël;
On entendra parler une voix dans le ciel,
Et tous regarderont l’ombre extraordinaire:
Luc dira: c’est un ange; et Jean, c’est le tonnerre.

Je porterai les cœurs ainsi que des fardeaux;
Des laboureurs feront des sillons sur mon dos;
Ces laboureurs, c’est vous; et votre œuvre est austère.
L’homme n’a rien, ni sac plein d’or, ni coin de terre,

Qu’il puisse regarder ici-bas comme sien.
Allez sans hésiter dire au pharisien:
«Prends garde à cette fange immonde où tu te vautres!”
Soyez doux. Aimez-vous toujours les uns les autres.

En cet instant Jésus tressaillit, se parla
A lui-même, et, fermant les yeux, dit: le voilà.

Judas parut suivi d’hommes armés d’épées.

IX. JUDAS

Et Judas s’approchant, blême et les mains crispées, Baisa Christ.

Et le ciel sacré fut obscurci.

— Mon ami, dit Jésus, que viens-tu faire ici?

Puis il reprit, tourné vers Dieu:

- Tu m’abandonnes;
Mais je ne perds aucun de ceux que tu me donnes,
Seigneur. Ma mort suffit, et seul je la subis.
Le pasteur doit périr en sauvant les brebis.

Et, désignant du doigt ses disciples, le maître
Dit aux soldats:

- Le Christ est facile à connaître.
Je suis celui qu’on cherche et dont on a souci.
Me voilà. Prenez-moi. Laissez aller ceux-ci.

Or Simon surnommé Pierre avait une épée,
Il cria:
- Dieu par qui Jézabel fut frappée,
Viens défendre ton Christ, ô Dieu qui châtias
Hérode pour avoir fait mourir Mathias!

Et, levant son épée, il vint droit à la troupe,
Et blessa le premier qui s’offrit dans le groupe,
Un nommé Malchus, aide et garde du bourreau.
— Remettez, dit Jésus, votre épée au fourreau.
Qui frappe avec le glaive est frappé par le glaive.
Il reprit: - Puisqu’on a commencé, qu’on achève. -

Et se mit de lui-même au milieu des soldats.
Il ne regardait rien, pour épargner Judas.
Quelqu’un du temple dit: - Marchons. L’heure s’écoule.
— Vous pouviez me saisir tous les jours dans la foule,
Dit Jésus, en offrant aux cordes ses poignets;
Quand j’allais dans le temple et lorsque j’enseignais, J’étais sous votre main. Vous n’aviez qu’à l’étendre;
Et c’est par trahison que vous venez me prendre!
Et vous venez la nuit comme pour un voleur!
Je pourrais dire à Dieu: Père, apparaissez-leur!
Et vous entendriez accourir les tempêtes,
Et vous verriez, tremblants, au-dessus de vos têtes,
S’ouvrir et flamboyer l’ombre, et des millions
D’anges, et tout l’abîme avec tous ses lions!
Et si j’ajoutais: Viens toi-même! vos prunelles
Verraient soudain, parmi les foudres éternelles,
Sortir de la nuée un front prodigieux!
Mais il ne convient pas que j’appelle les cieux;
Faites; car c’est ici votre heure, et la puissance
Des ténèbres, et Dieu vous livre l’innocence;
Et tout doit s’accomplir ainsi qu’il est écrit.

Alors on acheva de lier Jésus-Christ;
Et le chef dit: - Il faut l’emmener. Ce qu’ils firent.
Et tous ceux que cet homme avait aimés, s’enfuirent.

X. LILITH-ISIS

Ô Jean, visionnaire effaré de Pathmos,
Comme tu te cachais derrière les rameaux,
Avec saint Marc, alors jeune et l’un des lévites,
En vous penchant parmi les arbres noirs, vous vîtes
Sur la colline un être effrayant, vague, seul,
Debout dans le frisson livide d’un linceul;
C’était de l’ombre ayant la forme d’une femme;
Cet être guettait Christ dans cette troupe infâme,
Comme s’il était là pour une mission;
Or la bande aperçut, en rentrant dans Sion,
Cette femme fixant sur eux dans les ténèbres
Ses deux yeux qui semblaient deux étoiles funèbres;
Un d’eux, que le Toldos appelle Eddon-Azir,
Courut vers elle, et comme il allait la saisir,
L’être, pareil aux feux fuyant dans l’ossuaire,
Disparut, lui laissant dans les mains le suaire.

Et plus tard, les soldats, contant après l’arrêt
Comment ils avaient pris Jésus de Nazareth,
Dirent qu’ils avaient vu sur la montagne sombre
La fille de Satan, la grande femme d’ombre,
Cette Lilith qu’on nomme Isis au bord du Nil.

XI. JÉSUS CHEZ ANNE

Jésus lié marchait disant: Ainsi soit-il!

On le mena d'abord chez Anne, ancien grand-prêtre,
Pour qu'il attendit là l'heure de comparaître,
Des servantes, des gueux, des vendeurs de poissons,
Des sacrificateurs vêtus de caleçons,
Le flot des curieux qui passe et qui repasse,
Entouraient Christ assis dans une salle basse;
Il était nuit; mais Anne, étant levé déjà,
Descendit, vint trouver Christ, et l'interrogea.
Et Christ lui répondit: - Interrogez la foule.
J'ai versé mon esprit comme une eau qui s'écoule.
Prêtre, j'ai deux témoins: l'homme et le firmament.
Parlez-leur. J'enseignais partout publiquement.
Et quant à mon royaume, il n'est pas de la terre.
Je n'ai rien à vous dire et n'ai rien à vous taire.
Qu'est-ce que vous venez demander à présent? -
Un soldat le frappa de sa verge en disant:
— Est-ce ainsi qu'on répond à notre ancien grand-prêtre?
— Si j'ai mal dit, tu peux blâmer, dit le doux maître;
Mais si j'ai bien parlé, pourquoi me frappes-tu?
Anne disait, s'étant à la hâte vêtu:
— J'ai froid. - Et tous criaient: - C'est un impie! Exemple!
Châtiment! il a dit qu'il détruirait le temple,
Seigneur, et qu'en trois jours il le rebâtirait.
— Peuple, le tribunal prononcera l'arrêt,
Dit Anne, et non pas moi: car je n'en suis plus membre.

Et, leur laissant leur proie, il rentra dans sa chambre.

Alors, ayant bandé les yeux du patient,
Ils l'outragèrent, tous pêle-mêle, et criant:
— Devine qui te frappe! et prophétise, ô sage!

Dis-nous quel est celui qui te crache au visage?
Fais sécher, si tu peux, le poing qui te meurtrit, Messie!

Et les valets souffletaient Jésus-Christ.

XII. LES DIX-NEUF

Le jour est loin encor, pas un rayon n'effleure
L'orient froid et noir, mais on devance l'heure.

Les juges, dont l'orgueil est d'aller lentement,
Montent au tribunal d'un air calme et dormant.
Le grand-prêtre en souliers, les prêtres en sandales,
Marchent tous à la file et traversent les dalles.
Chacun d'eux a son nom sur sa chaise gravé.
Le Gabbatha, qu'on nomme aussi le Haut-Pavé,
Est le palais lugubre où le tribunal siège.

Devant la porte, un vase, où sur l'eau flotte un liège,
Semble dire au passant, qui songe avec effroi:
L'eau c'est le peuple, et rien ne submerge la loi.

Le sanhédrin, sous qui la Judée est courbée,
Ebauché par Moïse, accru par Macchabée,
Depuis qu'il a subi l'arrogant examen
Du préteur Gabinus, oeil du sénat romain,
Se réfugie, ainsi qu'une orfraie effarée,
Dans une sorte d'ombre inquiète et sacrée;
Jadis le peuple vil qui fourmille au soleil
Parfois apercevait cet austère appareil
Que la loi triste emplit de sa vague colère,
Les tables, les gradins, la chambre circulaire,
Les docteurs dans leur chaire assis sur les hauteurs,
Les scribes dans leur stalle aux genoux des docteurs,
Et l'essaim des enfants aux robes incarnates,
Les lévites, épars à terre sur les nattes;
Maintenant tout est clos. C'est loin de tous les yeux
Que le Prince s'assied, spectre mystérieux,
Ayant le Père à droite, ayant le Sage à gauche;
C'est dans l'obscurité qu'on laboure et qu'on fauche;

Rome pouvant entendre, on cache les débats;
Le sanhédrin se mure et la loi parle bas.

Donc depuis Gabinus, ce sénat de prière
Qui s’assemble au lieu dit le Conclave de Pierre,
Ce sanhédrin qui fait une haie à la loi,
Qui seul sait le comment et seul dit le pourquoi,
Pour punir le blasphème a commis dix-neuf juges.
Ces dix-neuf, devant qui l’impie est sans refuges,
Comme Dieu sur l’Horeb sont sur le Gabbatha.

La salle est large et haute. Oliab la sculpta.
La nuit ne sort jamais de ce lieu sans fenêtres.
Une lampe suffit au front blême des prêtres.
Dix-neuf chaises de cèdre, au fond du cintre obscur,
Mêlent leur double étage aux ténèbres du mur;
On sent que là, vertu, crime, innocence et vice,
Tremblent devant cette ombre humaine, la justice.

La poussière des ans, près du plafond, ternit
Un chérubin ouvrant six ailes de granit.

Les taffilins, nommés par les grecs phylactères,
Couvrent la voûte; à l’or de leurs saints caractères,
Textes brumeux épars sur des plaques de fer,
La lampe par instant arrache un vague éclair.

Les juges, les voici: huit scribes, tête nue;
Quatre docteurs qu’emplit la science inconnue,
Ceints du taled, l’esprit hors du monde réel;
Et, mêlés aux docteurs, sept anciens d’Israël,
Vêtus de blanc, pensifs sous leurs turbans à mitres.

Sabaoth luit dans l’oeil de ces sombres arbitres.

En montant à sa place, ainsi qu’Aaron faisait,
Chaque juge récite à voix haute un verset;

On dirait que la loi farouche les enivre.

Le sciamas tient les clefs; le cazan tient le livre.

L’oeil fixé sur le texte écrit par David roi,
Les deux hommes nommés les Epoux de la Loi
Lisent, en alternant d’une grave manière,
L’un la première page et l’autre la dernière.

La lampe a quatre bras comme celle d’Endor.

Un degré de sithim étoilé de clous d’or
Exhausse un large trône en ivoire où préside
Caïphe destiné dans l’ombre au suicide.
Ses souliers sont de pourpre et sa robe est de lin;
Autour de chaque bras il porte un taffilin
Où l’on peut lire un vers résumant la doctrine;
Et le rational qu’il a sur la poitrine
Mêle à la majesté de ses sacrés habits
Tous les noms des tribus gravés sur des rubis;
Le grand-prêtre est assis, fatal comme un prophète;
Et l’on voit remuer vaguement sur sa tête,
Comme au vent de la nuit brille et tremble un fanal,
La tiare, clarté du sombre tribunal.

La rumeur des versets qu’on récite s’apaise;
On se tait; chaque juge est assis dans sa chaise.

Christ est debout devant ces hommes ténébreux;
Son oeil inépuisable en rayons luit sur eux.

XIII. LA CHOSE JUGÉE

L’huissier du dogme dit: - Silence! on délibère.
Gloire au Dieu saint! et gloire à l’empereur Tibère!

Rosmophim parle. Il dit: - « L’homme que vous voyez
«Rit des lois et des saints par Dieu même envoyés;
«Il se croit plus grand qu’eux et se prétend Messie.
«Il se dit Roi des Juifs. Il ment. L’arche est noircie, «O Prêtres, par la nuit qui sort de ses discours.
«Cet homme doit mourir. Nos pères ont toujours
«Fait creuser des tombeaux par la loi violée.

Josaphat crie: - « A mort l’homme de Galilée!

«- Observons la loi, dit Achias de Membré.
«Il faut que par le prêtre au prince il soit livré,
«Et qu’Hérode l’envoie à Pilate. A quoi servent
«Des lois que ni le roi ni le juge n’observent?

Joseph de Ramatha dit: « L’homme est innocent.”

«- L’exil, dit Potiphar.

   - Non, dit Samech, du sang!”

Et Nicodemus dit: - « Il faut d’abord qu’on prouve.

«- D’abord, répond Teras, qu’on le tue! et qu’on trouve, «Demain, puisque cet homme a dit: nous sommes trois;
«Deux voleurs pour l’aller compléter sur la croix;

«- Qu’il meure, dit Riphar, dans les formes prescrites.”

Gamaliel se lève. Il est le chef des rites;

Et ce maître inflexible a vu le premier vol
Du jeune aigle effrayant qui plus tard fut saint Paul.
Il parle, l'oeil au ciel: - « L'indulgence est un leurre.
«Juste ou non, attaquant les lois, il faut qu'il meure.

«- Non, réplique Joram, j'absous! Je pense, moi,
«Que les arrêts trop durs font mal vivre la loi;
«Il sied qu'à l'accusé le juge compatisse;
«Sur la sévérité des juges la justice
«Pleure comme l'enfant sut le pain noir qu'il mord.

«- Ce langage est payen, dit Saréas. La mort.

«- Mort! dit Elieris; il prêche le ravage.

«- Mort! répète Diras; il combat l'esclavage.

Et Sabinti s'indigne au nom du sanhédrin;
Il atteste le vase aux douze bœufs d'airain,
Et crie: « - A mort! qu'il meure! ou l'arche est abattue!"

Simon, qui fut plus tard lépreux, dit: « - Qu'on le tue."

Le sénateur Mesa se lève après Simon:
«- S'il dit vrai, c'est un dieu; s'il ment, c'est un démon.
«Donc il faut qu'on l'adore ou bien qu'on l'extermine.

«- Dieu, dit Ptoloméus, peut avoir sa vermine.

Et Rabam jette un cri dans la rumeur perdu:
«- Ne le condamnez pas sans l'avoir entendu!"

La sagesse commence et finit au pontife;
Tout arrêt doit venir du grand-prêtre.

   Caïphe
Se lève le dernier, la double corne au front;

Dressant cette tiare où toujours brilleront
Les deux rayons du chef de la terre promise,
Sombre, et plus ressemblant à Satan qu'à Moïse,
Il dit:

« - Mieux vaut la mort d'un homme que la mort
«D'un peuple, et du viol des lois le gibet sort;
«Il faut punir. Sinon, malheur! Quiconque hésite
«Est une âme de nuit que le démon visite;
«Le juge indulgent suit le crime comme un chien;
«Celui qui ne sait pas ces choses ne sait rien.

Puis, à demi tourné vers Jésus, il ajoute:

«- Sa voix fera peut-être écrouler cette voûte.
«Pourtant, parle. Est-il vrai que tu te sois vanté «D'être le fils de Dieu saint dans l'éternité?

Christ répondit: - C'est vous, ô prêtre, qui le dites.

Et, comme on pouvait voir confusément écrites
Des sentences au mur que le temps effaçait,
Calme, il montrait du doigt aux juges ce verset:

«Le sage adore Dieu. Quiconque est esprit, l'aime.
«Le soleil n'est nié dans la sphère suprême
«Ni par l'astre Allioth, ni par l'étoile Algol.
«Quand Dieu luit, refuser de croire, c'est un vol.
«Celui qui nie est fils de celui qui dérobe."

Caïphe dit: Blasphème! et déchira sa robe,
Quoique cela lui fût défendu par la loi.
Et, pâle, il s'écria:

« - Paix à quiconque a foi!
«Moi, Caïphe, courbé sous le Seigneur, je pense
«Qu'on doit au mal la peine, au bien la récompense,

«Et qu’il faut éclairer ceux qu’un fourbe a déçus,
«Et je condamne à mort l’homme appelé Jésus.”

Un prêtre casse en deux une baguette noire.

Caïphe se rassied sur son trône d’ivoire.

On emmène Jésus.

Les juges restent seuls;
Leurs robes dans la nuit paraissent des linceuls;
Tous font silence autour de Caïphe en prière.

XIV. LA FIDÉLITE DU MEILLEUR

Une servante vint dans la cour et vit Pierre
Qui se chauffait, ouvrant ses mains devant le feu:

— Vous étiez, lui dit-elle, un des gens de ce dieu,
De ce Jésus, car c’est le nom dont on le nomme.

— Et Pierre répondit: - Femme, quel est cet homme?
Je ne le connais point.

Alors le coq chanta.

Cependant les bourreaux, au haut du Golgotha,
Creusaient la terre afin d’y planter la potence.

Dans la cour du grand-prêtre et parmi l’assistance,
Pierre pensait.

Quelqu’un tout à coup l’appela
Et cria: - Vous étiez avec cet homme-là.

Pierre dit: - Je ne sais ce que vous voulez dire.

Une femme, un moment après, se prit à rire,
Disant: - Vous connaissez l’homme qu’on juge ici.
Car vous êtes venu de Galilée aussi.

Sur quoi Pierre jura d’une exécrable sorte:
— Non! je n’ai jamais vu cet homme!

Sur la porte
Le coq chanta.

La nuit couvrait les noirs chemins.

Pierre, se souvenant, prit son front dans ses mains
Et se mit à pleurer amèrement dans l’ombre.

XV. L'AUTRE CHAISE D'IVOIRE

Les scribes, les docteurs, les prêtres en grand nombre,
Entourent, précédés d'un lévite crieur,
Dans la cour du prétoire un porche extérieur
Qui sous son dôme abrite une chaise d'ivoire.

Cette chaise a l'aspect farouche de la gloire;
Et l'on y sent le droit que donne au conquérant
Le peuple qu'on massacre et la ville qu'on prend.
A cette chaise monte un escalier de bronze.

Ils sont tous là, les Cent, les Dix-Neuf et les Onze.

Derrière eux, et tombant parfois sur le genou,
Vient Jésus qu'un soldat traîne par un licou
Comme un muletier tire une bête de somme.

L'avertisseur public, un avocat de Rome,
Le vieux Némurion Plancus, grammairien
De la loi, que plus tard fit changer Adrien,
Parle et dit ce qu'il faut qu'on évite ou qu'on suive:

Un homme est arrêté par les juifs; la loi juive
Le condamne; les juifs peuvent le lapider;
C'est leur droit; cela dit, qu'ont-ils à demander?
La lapidation leur paraît trop rapide;
Ils veulent qu'on le cloue et non qu'on le lapide;
Ils viennent supplier qu'on mène l'homme en croix.
Or ceci touche Rome, et César, et ses droits.
Doit-on crucifier l'homme? voilà l'affaire.
D'où vient que pour ce juif le sanhédrin préfère
A leur supplice hébreu le supplice romain?
Est-il rebelle? est-il voleur de grand chemin?
Cela n'est point prouvé par les juifs: c'est leur culte

Qui semble avoir souffert de l’homme quelque insulte;
Or jamais un dieu juif ne recevra d’affront
Dont César sentira la rougeur à son front.
Un blasphémateur juif est-il un parricide?
Ce sanhédrin le dit; que le préteur décide.
Ces peuples, après tout, respectent le tribun;
S’ils tiennent à la mort honteuse de quelqu’un,
César clément leur peut accorder cette grâce.

Pendant que Plancus parle, un murmure s’amasse
Dans l’auditoire plein de gestes et de voix;
Tous les prêtres hagards éclatent à la fois:

— Préteur! c’est ton devoir de crucifier l’homme!
Il s’est dit Roi des Juifs; il est rebelle à Rome;
Notre dogme est ici d’accord avec ta loi;
Et c’est nier César que de s’affirmer roi.

Un licteur sous le porche écoute sans colère.

Derrière le licteur est l’homme consulaire,
Ponce Pilate, assis, distrait, calme, indolent.

Son pied chaussé de pourpre est sur du marbre blanc;
Ce marbre, qui l’exhausse au fond de la coupole,
Pour les romains l’honore et pour les juifs l’isole;
Et nul autre que lui ne touche du talon
Cette dalle que fit placer là Corbulon,
Proconsul en l’an deux du consulat d’Octave.
Pilate, ancien préfet dans le pays batave,
Fut si fidèle au temps de la rébellion
Qu’Auguste lui donna sa villa de Lyon.
Il est procurateur, lieutenant consulaire.
Le port de Tyr lui paie un talent par galère;
Il possède à Cythère en Grèce, un revenu
Que lui doivent, le droit de César retenu,
Les chercheurs de corail et les pêcheurs d’éponges.

Sa femme Procula sait le secret des songes.
C’est un homme d’esprit prudent, d’âge moyen.
Le peuple juif méprise en tremblant ce payen.
Pilate autour du front porte trois bandelettes
Dont une est écarlate et deux sont violettes;
Sa laticlave blanche à bandes rouges pend
Sur un nain familier entre ses pieds rampant;
Dans son ombre un greffier écrit sur une table;
Quand on parle trop haut, le licteur redoutable
Fait un signe, le bruit des voix contrariant
Le préteur assoupi comme un roi d’orient.

Et, sculptée au dossier de sa chaise curule,
Pendant que de ces cœurs, où tant de haine brûle,
Sort le gibet infâme entrevu vaguement,
Au-dessus des avis, des voix, du jugement,
Au-dessus de ce tas de scribes et de prêtres,
Sur tous ces noirs complots, sur tous ces regards traîtres,
Sur tous ces vils orgueils, l’âpre louve d’airain
Dresse son bâillement sinistre et souverain.

XVI. ROSMOPHIM

Les fossoyeurs de croix piochent sur le Calvaire.
Le brouillard, ce manteau de deuil du ciel sévère,
Couvre le mont, où, seuls, ces hommes, loin du bruit,
Dans l’ombre, ont travaillé presque toute la nuit.
On entend le Cédron dont les eaux sont très grosses.
Ils s’arrêtent après avoir creusé deux fosses.
Et l’un d’eux, le plus vieux, dit aux autres: - Je crois
Que c’est tout; nous n’avons d’ordres que pour deux croix,
Pour deux larrons qu’on doit mettre à mort dans les fêtes;
Dismas et Gestas; or, les deux fosses sont faites.
Un prêtre en ce moment, Rosmophim de Joppé,
Qui vient de survenir, d’ombres enveloppé,
Sort de la brume ainsi qu’un tigre sort de l’antre,
Et leur dit: - Creusez-en une troisième au centre.

XVII. PIRE QUE JUDAS

Alors Judas sentit le poids des trente écus.
Par le mal qu'ils ont fait les hommes sont vaincus.
Il vint au temple et vit Caïphe sur la porte,
Et, lui montrant le sac, il dit: - Je le rapporte.
J'ai vendu l'innocent; reprends ton or. Malheur!
Caïphe! reprends tout. - Je serais un voleur.
Garde ton sac, va-t'en! répondit le grand-prêtre.
J'ai l'homme, et toi l'argent. Tout est comme il doit être.
Tu dois être content. - Non. Je suis réprouvé!
Dit Judas, et, jetant l'argent sur le pavé,
Il cria: - Je rends tout. Voilà toute la somme!
Et les prêtres riaient; et ce malheureux homme
S'en alla dans un lieu sinistre et se pendit.

Où? dans quel vil ravin? dans quel recoin maudit?
Comment ce criminel subit-il sa sentence?
De quel arbre effrayant fit-il une potence?
Est-ce à quelque vieux clou d'un mur qui pourrissait
Qu'il attacha le nœud vengeur? Nul ne le sait.
Cette corde à jamais flotte dans les ténèbres.

XVIII. LE CHAMP DU POTIER

Oh! des champs sont fatals, des charniers sont célèbres,
Des plaines et des mers sont sanglantes, parfois
Des vallons ont la marque effroyable des rois
L’odeur des attentats, la trace des carnages;
Des crimes monstrueux, comme des personnages,
Ont traversé des bois ou des rochers, qu’on voit
Avec peur, en mettant sur ses lèvres son doigt,
Ascalon est hideux, Josaphat est austère,
Le lac Asphalte est noir; mais pas un lieu sur terre
Ne te passe en horreur, funèbre Haceldama!
Les vases qu’un potier de ta fange forma
Tremblent dans la lueur trouble des catacombes
Et blêmissent ainsi que des urnes de tombes;
Sans doute, dans l’endroit implacable et profond,
Ce sont ces vases-là que portent sur le front
Les spectres, quand ils vont puiser de l’ombre au gouffre.
Ton nom semble tragique et fait d’un mot qui souffre,
Haceldama! ce mot crie ainsi qu’un blessé.

Le sac de Judas fut des prêtres ramassé.

Or ils cherchaient un lieu de sépulture vile
Pour les gentils mourant par hasard dans la ville,
Afin que l’étranger restât toujours dehors,
Et ne fût pas chez lui, même étant chez les morts.
Ils choisirent l’enclos du potier solitaire.

Les trente écus dont fut payé ce coin de terre Avaient déjà servi pour payer Jésus-Christ.

Et ce lieu depuis lors est nocturne.

Il fleurit.

Il verdoie, et l’aurore en s’éveillant le touche,
Rien ne peut dissiper sa nuit; il est farouche.
Il appartient au deuil, au silence, au regard
Fixe et terrifiant de l’infini hagard;
Une chauve-souris éternelle l’effleure;
Toujours quel que soit l’astre et quelle que soit l’heure,
L’oeil dans ce champ lugubre entrevoit à demi
L’épouvantable argent par Judas revomi;
On sent là remuer des linceuls invisibles,
Le sang pend goutte à goutte aux brins d’herbes terribles,
Des vols mystérieux de larves font du vent
Sur le front du songeur ténébreux et rêvant,
Et de vagues blancheurs frissonnent dans la brume
Hélas!

XIX. ECCE HOMO

C’était, le jour de Pâque, une coutume
Fort ancienne, où les juifs et Rome étaient d’accord,
Que le peuple, parmi les condamnés à mort,
Choisit un misérable auquel on faisait grâce.

Prés du palais, lieu sombre où la foule s’entasse,
Se pressait, comme autour des ruches les essaims,
Le peuple de la ville et des pays voisins
Qu’un licteur contenait du manche de sa hache.
Les paysans, menant par la corde leur vache,
Les femmes apportant au marché leurs paniers,
Devant le seuil, gardé par douze centeniers,
S’arrêtaient, éclairés par l’aurore vermeille.
La rumeur de la fête avait depuis la veille
Vers les quatre coteaux de Sion dirigé
Les habitants d’Aser et ceux de Bethphagé,
Ceux de Naim et ceux d’Émath; et sur la place
Chaque faubourg avait versé sa populace;
On y voyait aller et venir, sans bâton,
Gais, l’oeil joyeux, des gens qui jadis, disait-on,
Blêmes, et mendiant aux portes des boutiques,
Etaient aveugles, sourds, boiteux, paralytiques,
Et que l’homme appelé le Christ avait guéris.
C’était la même foule aux tumultueux cris
Qui, naguère, agitant au vent des branches vertes,
Et les âmes à Dieu toutes grandes ouvertes,
Battant des mains, chantant des cantiques, courait
Dans les chemins devant Jésus de Nazareth.
Plusieurs l’avaient béni comme un dieu qu’on écoute;
Et, pour avoir jeté leurs manteaux sur sa route,
Ils avaient de la terre encore à leurs habits.
Deux hastati de Rome, aux casques bien fourbis,
Se promenaient devant la porte du prétoire;

Et des marchandes d’eau vendaient au peuple à boire,
Et les petits enfants jouaient aux osselets.

Tout à coup apparut sur le seuil du palais
Christ couronné d’épine et vêtu d’écarlate;
Il avait un roseau dans la main; et Pilate,
Le leur montrant, leur dit: Voilà l’homme.

Le Christ
Se taisait, l’oeil au ciel.

Et Pilate reprit:
— C’est aujourd’hui qu’on laisse un misérable vivre.
Peuple, lequel des deux veux-tu que je délivre:
Barabbas, ou Jésus nommé Christ; - Barabbas;
Cria le peuple. Alors, au-dessous de leur pas,
Ils crurent tous entendre on ne sait quel tonnerre
Rouler... - C’était quelqu’un qui riait sous la terre.

Ainsi jugeaient les juifs sous l’oeil froid des romains.

Ponce Pilate songe et se lave les mains.

XX. LA MARCHE AU SUPPLICE

La première heure allait finir quand de la geôle
Jésus sortit, portant une croix sur l'épaule;
On avait délié les cordes du poignet;
Ayant été battu de verges, il saignait;
On le huait; la loi frappe, le peuple accable;
La croix, démesurée, écrasante, implacable,
Dont la cognée à peine avait taillé les nœuds,
Etait faite d'un bois féroce et vénéneux,
Et qui semblait avoir déjà commis des crimes.

La foule, allant, courant, mangeant les pains azymes,
Chantant, montrait les poings à Christ des deux côtés
De la route où marchaient ses pas ensanglantés;
Des vierges, reflétant l'aube sur leur visage,
L'insultaient, et battaient des mains sur son passage,
Et riaient des cailloux déchirant ses talons;
Et l'on voyait des tas de têtes d'enfants blonds
Aux portes des maisons, pour la fête fleuries.

Quelques disciples, fronts baissés, les trois Maries,
Sa mère, le suivaient de loin dans le trajet.

L'oeil sinistre de Jean dans les gouffres plongeait.
Le jour, blême, fuyait. L'attente était profonde.

Quatre anges se tenaient aux quatre coins du monde;
Ces anges arrêtaient au vol les quatre vents,
Pour qu'aucun vent ne pût souffler sur les vivants,
Ni troubler le sommet des montagnes de marbre,
Ni soulever un flot, ni remuer un arbre.

XXI. TÉNÈBRES

Barabbas stupéfait est libre.
  Sous les plis
D’un brouillard monstrueux dont les cieux sont remplis,
La ville est un chaos de maisons et de rues.
Des geôliers tout à l’heure, en paroles bourrues
Racontant l’aventure entre eux confusément,
Ont ouvert son cachot, rompu son ferrement,
Puis ont dit: - Va; le peuple a fait grâce! - De sorte
Qu’il ne sait rien, sinon qu’on a poussé la porte,
Que le ciel est tout noir, que nul ne le poursuit,
Et qu’il peut s’envoler dans l’ombre, oiseau de nuit.
Ce choix qui fait mourir Jésus et le fait vivre,
Tout ce récit, lui semble un vin dont il est ivre;
Il erre dans la ville, il y rampe, il en sort,
Comme parfois on voit marcher quelqu’un qui dort.
Quelle route prend-il; La première venue.
Il avance, il hésite et cherche, et continue,
Et ne sait pas, devant l’obscure immensité;
Il a derrière lui les murs de la cité,
Mais il ne les voit pas; son front troublé s’incline;
Il ne s’aperçoit point qu’il monte une colline;
Monter, descendre, aller, venir, hier, aujourd’hui,
Qu’importe; il rôde, ayant comme un nuage en lui;
Il erre, il passe, avec de la brume éternelle
Et du songe et du gouffre au fond de sa prunelle.
Il se dit par moments: c’est moi qui marche. Oui.
Tout est si ténébreux qu’il est comme ébloui.

Le chemin qu’au hasard il suit, rampe et s’enfonce
Aux flancs d’un mont où croît à peine quelque ronce,
Et Barabbas pensif, gravissant le rocher,
Sans voir où vont ses pas laisse ses pieds marcher;
La vague horreur du lieu plaît à cette âme louve;

Or, tout en cheminant, de la sorte, il se trouve
Sur un espace sombre et qui semble un sommet;
Il s’arrête, puis tend les mains, et se remet
A rôder à travers la profondeur farouche.

Tout en marchant, il heurte un obstacle; il le touche;
— Quel est cet arbre; où donc suis-je; dit Barabbas.
Le long de l’arbre obscur il lève ses deux bras
Si longtemps enchaînés qu’il les dresse avec peine.
— Cet arbre est un poteau, dit-il. Il y promène
Ses doigts par la torture atroce estropiés;
Et tout à coup, hagard, pâle, il tâte des pieds.
Comme un hibou surpris rentre sous la feuillée,
Il retire sa main; elle est toute mouillée;
Ces pieds sont froids, un clou les traverse, et de sang
Et de fange et d’horreur tout le bois est glissant;
Barabbas éperdu recule; son oeil s’ouvre
Epouvanté, dans l’ombre épaisse qui le couvre,
Et, par degrés, un blême et noir linéament
S’ébauche à son regard sous l’obscur firmament;
C’est une croix.

En bas on voit un vase où plonge
Une touffe d’hysope entourant une éponge;
Et, sur l’affreux poteau, nu, sanglant, les yeux morts,
Le front penché, les bras portant le poids du corps,
Ceint de cordes de chanvre autour des reins nouées,
Le flanc percé, les pieds cloués, les mains clouées,
Meurtri, ployé, pendant, rompu, défiguré,
Un cadavre apparaît, blanc, et comme éclairé
De la lividité sépulcrale du rêve;
Et cette croix au fond du silence s’élève.

Barabbas, comme un homme en sursaut réveillé,
Tressaillit. C’était bien un gibet, froid, souillé,
Effroyable, fixé par des coins dans le sable.
Il regarda. L’horreur était inexprimable;

Le ciel était dissous dans une âcre vapeur
Où l’on ne sentait rien sinon qu’on avait peur;
Partout la cécité, la stupeur, une fuite
De la vie, éclipsée, effrayée, ou détruite;
Linceul sur Josaphat, suaire sur Sion;
L’ombre immense avait l’air d’une accusation;
Le monde était couvert d’une nuit infamante;
C’était l’accablement plus noir que la tourmente;
Pas une flamme, pas un souffle, pas un bruit.
Pour l’oeil de l’âme, avec ces lettres de la nuit
Qui rendent la pensée insondable lisible,
Une main écrivait au fond de l’invisible:
Responsabilité de l’homme devant Dieu.
Le silence, l’espace obscur, l’heure, le lieu,
Le roc, le sang, la croix, les clous, semblaient des juges;
Et Barabbas, devant cette ombre sans refuges
Frémit comme devant la face de la loi,
Et, regardant le ciel, lui dit: ce n’est pas moi;

Puis, fantôme lui-même en cette nuit stagnante,
Larve tout effarée et toute frissonnante,
Pâle, il se rapprocha lentement du gibet;
Et, tout en y marchant, craintif, il se courbait,
Plus chancelant qu’un mât sur la vague mouvante,
Fauve, et comme attiré, malgré son épouvante,
Par l’espèce de jour qui sortait de ce mort.
Spectre, il montait, avec une sorte d’effort,
Vers l’autre spectre, vague ainsi qu’un crépuscule;
Et cet homme avançait de l’air dont on recule,
Inquiet, hérissé, comme agité du vent,
Et prêt à fuir après chaque pas en avant.
Jésus mort répandait un rayonnement blême:
La mort comme n’osant s’achever elle-même,
Laissait flotter, au trou morne et sanglant des yeux,
Le reste d’un regard tendre et mystérieux;
Son front triste semblait s’éclairer à mesure
Que cet homme approchait d’une marche mal sûre;

Quand Barabbas fut près, la prunelle brilla.
Si quelque ange, venu des cieux, eût été là,
Il eût cru voir ramper dans l'horreur d'une tombe
Un serpent fasciné par l'oeil d'une colombe.

Et le bandit, courbé sous l'épaississement
De la brume croissant de moment en moment,
Contemplait, et la terre avait l'air orpheline;
L'ombre songeait.

Alors, sur cette âpre colline,
Et sous les vastes cieux désolés et ternis,
Comme si le frisson des pensers infinis
Tombait de cette croix ouvrant ses bras funèbres,
On ne sait quel esprit entra dans les ténèbres
De cet homme, et le fit devenir effrayant.
Un feu profond jaillit de son oeil foudroyant;
L'âme immense d'Adam, couché sous le Calvaire,
Sembla soudain monter dans ce voleur sévère,
Il éleva la voix tout à coup, du côté
Où les monts s'enfonçaient dans plus d'obscurité,
Cachant Jérusalem sous le brouillard perdue,
Et pendant qu'il parlait, jetant dans l'étendue,
L'anathème, les cris, les plaintes, les affronts,
Quelque chose qu'on vit plus tard sur d'autres fronts,
Une langue de flamme, au-dessus de sa tête
Brillait et volait, comme en un vent de tempête;
Et Barabbas debout, transfiguré, tremblant,
Terrible, cria:

- Peuple, affreux peuple sanglant,
Qu'as-tu fait; Ô Caïn, Dathan, Nemrod, vous autres,
Quel est ce crime-ci qui passe tous les nôtres;
Voilà donc ce qu'on fait des justes ici-bas;
Populace! à ses pieds jadis tu te courbas,
Tu courais l'adorer sur les places publiques,
Tu voyais sur son dos deux ailes angéliques,

Il était ton berger, ton guide, ton soutien.
Dès qu’un homme paraît pour te faire du bien,
Peuple, et pour t’apporter quelque divin message,
Pour te faire meilleur, plus fort, plus doux, plus sage,
Pour t’ouvrir le ciel sombre, espérance des morts,
Tu le suis d’abord, puis, tout à coup, tu le mords,
Tu le railles, le hais, l’insultes, le dénigres;
O troupeau de moutons d’où sort un tas de tigres;
Quel prix pour tant de saints et sublimes combats;
Celui-ci, c’est Jésus; ceci, c’est Barabbas.
L’archange est mort, et moi, l’assassin, je suis libre;
Ils ont mis l’astre avec la fange en équilibre,
Et du côté hideux leur balance a penché.
Quoi; d’une part le ciel, de l’autre le péché;
Ici, l’amour, la paix, le pardon, la prière,
La foudre évanouie et dissoute en lumière,
Les malades guéris, les morts ressuscités,
Un être tout couvert de vie et de clartés;
Là, le tueur, sous qui l’épouvante se creuse,
Tous les vices, le vol, l’ombre, une âme lépreuse,
Un brigand, d’attentats sans nombre hérissé... -
Oh; si c’était à moi qu’on se fût adressé,
Si, quand j’avais le cou scellé dans la muraille,
Pilate était venu me trouver sur ma paille,
S’il m’avait dit: « Voyons, on te laisse le choix,
C’est une fête, il faut mettre quelqu’un en croix,
Ou Christ de Galilée, ou toi la bête fauve;
Réponds, bandit, lequel des deux veux-tu qu’on sauve;”
J’aurais tendu mes poings et j’aurais dit: clouez;
Cieux; les rois sont bénis, les prêtres sont loués,
Le vêtement de gloire est sur l’âme de cendre;
Un gouffre était béant, l’homme vient d’y descendre;
Un crime restait vierge, il vient de l’épouser;
Oh; Caïn maintenant tue avec un baiser;
C’est fini; le dragon règne, le mal se fonde,
On ne chantera plus dans la forêt profonde,
Les hommes n’auront plus d’aurore dans leur cœur,

L’amour est mort, le deuil lamentable est vainqueur,
La dernière lueur s’éteint dans la nature;
Eux-mêmes ont de leur main fait cette fermeture
De la pierre effroyable et sourde du tombeau;
Puisque le vrai, le pur, le saint, le bon, le beau,
Est là sur ce poteau, tout est dit, rien n’existe.
L’homme est dorénavant abominable et triste,
Cette croix va couvrir d’échafauds les sommets;
Ce monde est de la proie; il aura désormais
L’obscurité pour loi, pour juge l’ignorance;
Vaincre sera pour lui la seule différence;
La mise en liberté des monstres lui convient;
Cette bête, la Nuit scélérate, le tient.
Le mal ne serait pas s’il n’avait pas une âme;
Cette chaîne d’horreur qui, dans ce monde infâme,
Commencée à César, s’achève à Barabbas,
Dépasse l’homme et va dans l’ombre encor plus bas;
Et, comme le serpent s’enfle sous la broussaille,
Je sens un être affreux qui sous terre tressaille.
Sois content, toi, là-bas, sous nos pieds; J’aperçois
Au fond de cette brume et devant cette croix
Ton grincement de dents, ce rire des ténèbres.
Et toi, vil monde, à race humaine, qui célèbres
Les rites de l’enfer sur des autels d’effroi,
Tremble en tes profondeurs; j’entends autour de toi
La réclamation des gueules de l’abîme.
Je demande à genoux pardon à ta victime;
Genre humain, ta noirceur en est là maintenant
Que le gibet saisit l’apôtre rayonnant,
Que sous le poids de l’ombre abjecte, l’aube expire,
Et que lui, le meilleur, périt sous moi, le pire;
Oh; je baise sa croix et ses pieds refroidis,
Et, monstrueusement sauvé par toi, je dis:
Malheur sur toi!

    Malheur, monde impur, lâche et rude;
Monde où je n’ai de bon que mon ingratitude,

Sois maudit par celui que tu viens d’épargner;
Puisse à jamais ce Christ sur ta tête saigner;
Qu’un déluge d’opprobre et de deuil t’engloutisse,
Homme, plus prompt à choir du haut de la justice
Que l’éclair à tomber du haut du firmament;
Sois maudit dans ces clous, dans ce gibet fumant,
Dans ce fiel! sois maudit dans ma chaîne brisée;
Sois damné, monde à qui le sang sert de rosée,
Pour m’avoir délivré, pour l’avoir rejeté,
Monde affreux qui fais grâce avec férocité,
Toi dont l’aveuglement crucifie et lapide,
Toi qui n’hésites pas sur l’abîme, et, stupide,
N’as pas même senti frissonner un cheveu
Dans ce choix formidable entre Satan et Dieu.

III. LE CRUCIFIX

Depuis ce jour, pareille au damné qui rend compte,
La morne humanité, sur qui pèse la honte
Des justes condamnés et des méchants absous,
Est comme renversée en arrière au-dessous
D’une vision triste, éternelle et terrible.
Un Calvaire apparaît dans la nuée horrible
Que tout le genre humain regarde fixement;
Une lividité de crâne et d’ossement
Couvre ce mont difforme où monte un homme pâle;
L’homme porte une croix, et l’on entend son râle,
Ses pieds dans les cailloux saignent, ses yeux noyés
Pleurent, pleins de crachats qu’on n’a pas essuyés,
Le sang colle et noircit ses cheveux sur sa tempe;
Et l’homme, que la croix accable, tombe, rampe,
Se traîne, et sur ses mains retombe, et par moment
Ne peut plus que lever son front lugubrement.

Et l’oeil du genre humain frémissant continue
De regarder monter cet homme dans la nue.

Une tourbe le suit; il arrive au plateau;
D’infâmes poings crispés arrachent son manteau;
Cris féroces; va donc! pas de miséricorde;
Il va, montrant son dos rouge de coups de corde,
Hué par l’aboiement et mordu par les crocs
D’on ne sait quel vil peuple, envieux des bourreaux;
Au milieu des affronts il est comme une cible.
On étend l’homme, nu comme un Adam terrible,
Sur le gibet qu’il a traîné dans le chemin;
On enfonce des clous dans ses mains; chaque main
Jette un long flot de sang à celui qui la cloue,
Et le bourreau blasphème en essuyant sa joue;
La foule rit. On cloue après les mains, les pieds;

Le marteau maladroit meurtrit ses doigts broyés;
On appuie à son front la couronne d'épines;
Puis, entre deux bandits expiant leurs rapines,
On élève la croix en jurant, en frappant,
En secouant le corps qui se disloque et pend;
Le sang le long du bois en ruisseaux rouges coule;
Et la mère est en bas qui gémit; et la foule
Rit: - Voyons, dieu Jésus, descends de cette croix; -
Une éponge de fiel se dresse. - As-tu soif? bois; -
Le peuple horrible a l'air du loup dans le repaire;
Et le grand patient dit: - Pardonnez-leur, Père,
Car ces infortunés ne savent ce qu'ils font.

Et voici que la terre avec le ciel se fond.
Nuit! ô nuit; tout frémit, même le prêtre louche.
Et soudain, à ce cri qui sort de cette bouche:
— Elohim; Elohim; lamma sabacthani! -
On voit un tremblement au fond de l'infini,
Et comme un blême éclair qui tressaille et qui sombre
Dans l'immobilité formidable de l'ombre.
Et pendant que les cœurs, les mains jointes, les yeux,
Sont éperdus devant ce gibet monstrueux,
Pendant que, sous la brume épouvantable où tremble
Ce crime qui contient tous les crimes ensemble,
Brume où Judas recule, où chancelle la croix,
Où le centurion s'étonne et dit: je crois;
Pendant que, sous le poids de l'action maudite,
Sous Dieu saignant, l'effroi du genre humain médite,
Des voix parlent, on voit des songeurs bégayants,
La pitié se déchire en récits effrayants.
La tradition, fable errante qu'on recueille,
Entrecoupée ainsi que le vent dans la feuille,
Apparaît, disparaît, revient, s'évanouit,
Et, tournoyant sur l'homme en cette étrange nuit,
La légende sinistre, éparse dans les bouches,
Passe, et dans le ciel noir vole en haillons farouches;
Si bien que cette foule humaine a la stupeur

Du fait toujours présent là-haut dans la vapeur,
Vrai, réel, et pourtant traversé par des rêves.

•

.
«Comme il montait, suant et piqué par les glaives,
«Une femme eut pitié, le voyant prêt à choir,
«Et l’essuya, posant sur son iront un mouchoir;
«Or, quand elle rentra chez elle, cette femme
«Vit sur le mouchoir sombre une face de flamme.”

.
«Comme il continuait de monter, tout en sang,
«Il s’arrêta, livide, épuisé, fléchissant
«Sous la croix exécrée et l’infâme anathème,
«Un homme lui cria: marche; - Marche toi-même,
«Dit Jésus-Christ. Et l’homme est errant à jamais.”

.
«Un des voleurs lui dit: - Faux dieu; tu blasphémais!
«Es-tu dieu; Sauve-nous et sauve-toi toi-même;
«L’autre voleur cria: - Jésus; je crois! je t’aime!
«Souviens-toi qu’un mourant s’est à toi confié!
«Alors, levant ses yeux vers ce crucifié,
«Jésus agonisant parvint à lui sourire:
«- Homme, pour avoir dit ce que tu viens de dire,
«O voleur sur la croix misérable expirant,
«Tu vas entrer aux cieux, et tu seras plus grand «Qu’un empereur portant la couronne et le globe.”

.
«Ils se sont partagé le manteau, mais la robe
«N’ayant pas de couture, ils l’ont jouée aux dés.”

.
«De six à neuf, les monts furent d’ombre inondés;
«Toute la terre fut couverte de ténèbres;

«Comme si quelque main eût ployé ses vertèbres,
«Il baissa tout à coup la tête, et dans ses yeux
«Lugubres apparut la profondeur des cieux;
«Et, poussant un grand cri, Jésus expira. L’ombre «Monta, fumée infâme, aux étoiles sans nombre;
«Dans le temple, les bœufs d’airain firent un pas,
«Le voile se fendit en deux du haut en bas.
«Hors des murs, il se fit un gouffre où se dressèrent
«D’affreux êtres sur qui les rochers se resserrent
«Et que la vaste fange inconnue enfouit;
«Et tout devint si noir que tout s’évanouit;
«Les sépulcres, s’ouvrant subitement, restèrent
«Béants, montrant leur cave où les taupes déterrent
«Les squelettes couchés dans des draps en lambeaux;
«Des morts pâles, étant sortis de leurs tombeaux, «Furent vus par plusieurs personnes dans la ville.”

.
Ainsi sur ce troupeau frémissant, immobile,
Lugubre et stupéfait, qu’on nomme Humanité,
Tombent, du fond de l’ombre et de l’éternité,
On ne sait quels lambeaux de chimère et d’histoire
Et de songe, où l’enfer mêle sa lueur noire.
Et l’on a peur du ciel qui saigne à l’orient.
Et l’ouragan est plein de spectres s’écriant:
O nations; le meurtre éternel se consomme;
Et, parmi tous les mots que peut prononcer l’homme
Pas un, si frissonnant qu’il fût, ne suffirait
A peindre cette horreur de tombe et de forêt,
Le sourd chuchotement des quatre évangélistes,
Et l’agitation des grandes ailes tristes
Qu’en ce gouffre de deuil et de rébellion
Dressent l’aigle, le bœuf, l’archange et le lion.
Dix-huit cents ans ont pu s’écouler sans que l’homme,
Autour duquel mouraient Byzance, Athène et Rome,
Et passait Charlemagne et montait Mahomet,
Ait quitté du regard cette croix, ce sommet,

Cette blancheur sanglante, et ces lueurs divines
Sous l’entrelacement monstrueux des épines;
Et sans qu’il ait cessé d’entendre un seul moment
L’immense cri jeté dans le noir firmament,
Et lisible à jamais sur ce sombre registre,
Et le déchirement du grand voile sinistre,
Et dans l’obscurité consciente, au-dessus
De ce gibet où pend l’être appelé Jésus,
Au-dessus des songeurs étudiant les bibles,
Le sanglot effrayant des bouches invisibles.
Quand donc pourra-t-on dire: Hommes, le mal n’est plus;
Quand verra-t-on finir le flux et le reflux;

O nuit! ce qui sortit de Jésus, c’est Caïphe.
Le tigre, ayant encor de ce sang à la griffe,
Remonta sur l’autel et dit: je suis l’agneau.
Christ, ce libérateur, ne brisa qu’un anneau
De la chaîne du mal, du meurtre et de la guerre;
Lui mort, son dogme, hélas! servit à la refaire;
La tiare s’accrut de son gibet. Jésus,
Dans les cieux au-delà du sépulcre aperçus,
S’en alla, comme Abel, comme Job, comme Elie;
Quand il eut disparu, l’œuvre étant accomplie,
En même temps qu’au loin se répandait sa loi:
«- Vivez! aimez; marchez! délivrez! ayez foi! -”
Le serpent relevait son front dans les décombres,
Et l’on vit, ô frisson! ô deuil! des prêtres sombres
Aiguiser des poignards à ses préceptes saints,
Et de l’assassiné naître des assassins!
Ghisleri, Borgia, Caraffa, Dominique!... -
Faites donc que jamais l’homme ne soit inique,
Et que jamais le prêtre, impie et solennel,
N’emploie à quelque usage infâme l’Eternel!
La flagellation du Christ n’est pas finie.
Tout ce qu’il a souffert dans sa lente agonie,
Au mont des oliviers et dans les carrefours,
Sous la croix, sur la croix, il le souffre toujours.

Après le Golgotha, Jésus, ouvrant son aile,
A beau s'être envolé dans l'étoile éternelle;
il a beau resplendir, superbe et gracieux,
Dans la sérénité magnifique des cieux,
Dans la gloire, parmi les archanges solaires,
Au-dessus des douleurs, au-dessus des colères,
Au-dessus du nuage âpre et confus des jours;
Chaque fois que sur terre et dans nos temples sourds
Et dans nos vils palais, des docteurs et des scribes
Versent sur l'innocent leurs lâches diatribes,
Chaque fois que celui qui doit enseigner, ment,
Chaque fois que d'un traître il jaillit un serment,
Chaque fois que le juge, après une prière,
Jette au peuple ce mot: Justice! et, par-derrière,
Tend une main hideuse à l'or mystérieux,
Chaque fois que le prêtre, époussetant ses dieux,
Chante au crime Hosanna, bat des mains aux désastres,
Et dit: gloire à César! Là-haut, parmi les astres,
Dans l'azur qu'aucun souffle orageux ne corrompt,
Christ frémissant essuie un crachat sur son front.
— Torquemada, j'entends le bruit de ta cognée.
Tes bras sorti nus, ta face est de sueur baignée;
À quoi travailles-tu seul dans ton noir sentier; -
Torquemada répond: - Je suis le charpentier.
Et j'ai la hache au poing dans ce monde où nous sommes.
— Qu'est-ce donc que tu fais; - Un bûcher pour les hommes — Avec quel bois; - Avec la croix de Jésus-Christ.
Après avoir courbé sous la loi qui flétrit
Et sous la loi qui tue, hélas! cet être auguste,
Après avoir cloué sur le gibet ce juste
D'où ruisselle le sang et d'où le pardon sort,
Devant l'obscurité des sentences de mort,
Devant l'affreux pouvoir d'ôter la vie, et d'être
Celui qui fait mourir, mais qui ne fait pas naître,
Devant le tribunal, devant le cabanon,
Devant le glaive, l'homme a-t-il reculé? non.
Sous cette croix que charge une horreur inconnue,

Ce qu’on nomme ici-bas Justice, continue.
Ce spectre aveugle et sourd, dont l’ombre est le manteau,
A peine se souvient d’avoir à ce poteau
Attaché cette immense innocence étoilée.

En présence du bien, du mal, dans la mêlée
Des fautes, des erreurs, où le juste périt,
Pas un juge n’a peur de ce mot: Jésus-Christ!
Le Calvaire n’a point découragé la Grève;
Montfaucon à côté du Golgotha s’élève;
Et le Messie a pu mourir sans éclairer.
L’homme n’a pas cessé de se dénaturer
Dans le tragique orgueil de condamner son frère.
L’ouverture hideuse, infâme, téméraire,
Du sépulcre au milieu des lois, c’est là le port;
Et le noir genre humain s’abrite dans la mort.

Tristes juges! ô deuil! quoi! pas un ne s’arrête!
Le grand spectre qui porte au-dessus de sa tête
L’écriteau ténébreux et flamboyant: INRI,
Pâle, éploré, sanglant, fouetté, percé, meurtri,
Pend devant eux au bois de la croix douloureuse,
Tandis que chaque mot prononcé par eux, creuse
Une fosse dans l’ombre et dresse un échafaud:
A mort cet homme! à mort cette femme! il le faut!
A mort le fils du peuple! à mort l’enfant du chaume!
— Vous ne voyez donc pas mes clous! dit le fantôme.
Et que de justes morts! Que de bons condamnés!
Que de saints, d’un arrêt infâme couronnés!
O martyre! escalade horrible du supplice!
Le meurtre fier, sacré, public; la loi complice!
Flots du sang innocent! Si, sur quelque sommet, L’homme des anciens jours, Jacob se rendormait,
il reverrait encore une ascension d’anges,
Pensifs, purs, tout baignés de lumières étranges,
Montant l’un après l’autre, ayant de l’orient
Et de l’immensité sur leur front souriant,

Ceux-ci levant leurs mains, ceux-là dressant leur aile,
Calmes, éblouissants, sereins, et cette échelle,
Sœur de celle que l'ombre à ses yeux dérobait,
Hélas, n'aboutit pas au ciel, mais au gibet.
Oh! puisque c'est ainsi que les choses sont faites,
Puisque toujours la terre égorge ses prophètes,
Qu'est-ce qu'on doit penser et croire, ô vastes cieux!
Contre la vérité le prêtre est factieux;
Tous les cultes, soufflant l'enfer de leurs narines,
Mâchent des ossements mêlés à leurs doctrines;
Tous se sont proclamés vrais sous peine de mort;
Pas un autel sur terre, hélas, n'est sans remord.
Les faux dieux ont partout laissé leur cicatrice
A la nature, sainte et suprême matrice;
Partout l'homme est méchant, cœur vil sous un oeil fier,
Et mérite la chute immense de l'éclair;
Toute divinité dans ses mains dégénère
En idole, et devient digne aussi du tonnerre.
Qui donc a tort; qui donc a raison; que penser;
Dieu semble chaque jour plus avant s'enfoncer
Dans la profondeur sourde et fatale du vide;
Le Zend est ténébreux; le Talmud est livide;
Nul ne sait ce qu'un temple, et le dieu qu'on y sent,
Aime mieux voir fumer, de l'encens, ou du sang;
Toute église a le meurtre infiltré dans ses dalles;
Les chaires font en bas d'inutiles scandales,
Les foudres font en haut d'inutiles éclairs;
Ce qu'on doit faire avec ce qu'on doit croire, hélas!
Presque toujours conteste et rarement s'accorde.
L'abîme profond s'ouvre; un dogme est une corde
Qui pend dans l'ombre énorme et se perd dans le puits.
Ainsi mourut Jésus; et les peuples depuis,
Atterrés, ont senti que l'inconnu lui-même
Leur était apparu dans cet Homme Suprême,
Et que son évangile était pareil au ciel.
Le Golgotha, funeste et pestilentiel,
Leur semble la tumeur difforme de l'abîme;

Fauve, il se dresse au fond mystérieux du crime;
Et le plus blême éclair du gouffre est sur ce lieu Où la religion, sinistre, tua Dieu.

HORS DE LA TERRE III

Satan dans la nuit

I

Je l’aime! - Nuit, cachot sépulcral, mort vivante,
Ombre que mon sanglot ténébreux épouvante,
Solitudes du mal où fuit le grand puni,
Glaciers démesurés de l’hiver infini,
O flots du noir chaos qui m’avez vu proscrire,
Désespoir dont j’entends le sombre éclat de rire,
Vide où s’évanouit l’être, le temps, le lieu,
Gouffres profonds, enfers, abîmes; j’aime Dieu.
Je l’aime. C’est fini. - Lumière; fiancée
De tout esprit; soleil! feu de toute pensée;
Vie! où donc êtes-vous; Je vous cherche. O tourment!
La création vit dans l’éblouissement;
O regard éclatant de l’aube idolâtrée,
Rayon dont la nature est toute pénétrée!
Les fleuves sont joyeux dans l’herbe; l’horizon
Resplendit; le vent court; des fleurs plein le gazon,
Des oiseaux, des oiseaux, et des oiseaux encore;
Tout cela chante, rit, aime, inondé d’aurore;
Le tigre dit: et moi! je veux ma part du ciel! -
L’aube dore le tigre et l’offre à l’Eternel.

Moi seul je reste affreux! Hélas, rien n’est immonde.
Moi seul, je suis la honte et la tache du monde.
Ma laideur, vague effroi des astres soucieux,
Perce à travers ma nuit et va salir les cieux.
Je ne vois rien, étant maudit; mais dans l’espace
J’entends, j’entends dans l’eau qui fuit, dans l’air qui passe,
J’entends dans l’univers ce murmure: va-t’en!
Le porc dit au fumier: je méprise Satan.
Je sens la nuit penser que je la déshonore.
Le tourbillonnement du grand souffle sonore,

Le vent du matin, libre et lâché dans le ciel,
Evite mon front morne et pestilentiel.

Jadis, ce jour levant, cette lueur candide,
C’était moi. - Moi! - J’étais l’archange au front splendide,
La prunelle de feu de l’azur rayonnant,
Dorant le ciel, la vie et l’homme; maintenant
Je suis l’astre hideux qui blanchit l’ossuaire.
Je portais le flambeau, je traîne le suaire;
J’arrive avec la nuit dans ma main; et partout
Où je vais, surgissant derrière moi, debout,
L’hydre immense de l’ombre ouvre ses ailes noires.

Les profonds infinis croisent leurs promontoires.
Tout devant moi, vers qui jadis l’amour vola,
Recule et fuit.

Je fus envieux. Ce fut là
Mon crime. Tout fut dit, et la bouche sublime
Cria: mauvais! et Dieu me cracha dans l’abîme.

Oh! je l’aime! c’est là l’horreur, c’est là le feu!
Que vais-je devenir, abîmes; J’aime Dieu!
Je suis damné!
II

L’enfer, c’est l’absence éternelle.
C’est d’aimer. C’est de dire: hélas! où donc est-elle,
Ma lumière; Où donc est ma vie et ma clarté;
Elle livre aux regards éperdus sa beauté.
Elle sourit là-haut à d’autres; d’autres baisent
Sa robe, et dans ses bras s’enivrent et s’apaisent;
D’autres l’ont. Désespoir!

Oh; quand je fus jeté
Du haut de la splendeur dans cette cécité,
Après l’écroulement de l’ombre sur ma tête,

Après la chute, nu, précipité du faîte
A jamais, à la tombe inexorable uni,
Quand je me trouvai seul au bas de l'infini,
J'eus un moment si noir que je me mis à rire;
La vaste obscurité m'emplit de son délire,
Je sentis dans mon cœur, où mourait Dieu détruit,
La plénitude étrange et fauve de la nuit,
Et je criai, joyeux, triomphant, implacable:
— « Guerre à ces firmaments dont la lumière accable!
«Guerre à ce ciel où Dieu met tant de faux attraits!
«Il a cru m'en chasser, c'est moi qui m'y soustrais.
«Il me croit prisonnier, je suis libre. Je plane.
«Et le démon, c'est l'aigle, et le monde, c'est l'âne.
«Et je ris. Je suis fier et content. J'ai quitté
«Les anges vains, abjects, vils, et toi, la clarté, «Qui les corromps, et toi, l'amour, qui les subornes!
«O gouffres, quel bonheur que la haine sans bornes!
«Ce Dieu, ce cœur de Tout, ce père lumineux
«Que l'ange, l'astre, l'homme, et la bête, ont en eux,
«Ce pasteur près de qui le troupeau se resserre,
«Cet être, seul vivant, seul vrai, seul nécessaire,
«Je vais m'en passer, moi le colosse puni!
«C'est bien. Comme je vais maudire ce béni,
«Et faire contre lui, tandis qu'Adam l'encense,
«De la révolte avec mon ancienne puissance
«Et de la flamme avec les rayons que j'avais!
«Comme je vais rugir sur lui! Comme je vais,
«Moi l'affreux face à face avec lui le suprême,
«Le haïr, l'exécrer et l'abhorrer!" - Je l'aime!
..

DANS L'AIR

CHANSON DES OISEAUX

Vie! ô bonheur! bois profonds,
Nous vivons.
L'essor sans fin nous réclame;

Planons sur l’air et les eaux!
Les oiseaux
Sont de la poussière d’âme.

Accourez, planez! volons
Aux vallons,
A l’antre, à l’arbre, à l’asile!
Perdons-nous dans cette mer
De l’éther
Où la nuée est une île!

Du fond des rocs et des joncs
Des donjons,
Des monts que le jour embrase,
Volons, et, frémissants, fous,
Plongeons-nous
Dans l’inexprimable extase!

Oiseaux, volez aux clochers,
Aux rochers,
Au précipice, à la cime,
Aux glaciers, aux lacs, aux prés;
Savourez
La liberté de l’abîme!

Vie! azur! rayons! frissons!
Traversons
La vaste gaîté sereine,
Pendant que sur les vivants,
Dans les vents,
L’ombre des nuages traîne!

Avril ouvre à deux battants
Le printemps;
L’été le suit, et déploie
Sur la terre un beau tapis
Fait d’épis,

D’herbe, de fleurs, et de joie.

Buvons, mangeons; becquetons
Les festons
De la ronce et de la vigne;
Le banquet dans la forêt
Est tout prêt;
Chaque branche nous fait signe.

Les pivoines sont en feu;
Le ciel bleu
Allume cent fleurs écloses;
Le printemps est pour nos yeux
Tout joyeux
Une fournaise de roses.

Tu nous dores aussi tous,
Feu si doux
Qui du haut des cieux ruisselles;
Les aigles sont dans les airs
Des éclairs,
Les moineaux des étincelles.

Nous rentrons dans les rayons;
Nous fuyons
Dans la clarté notre mère;
L’oiseau sort de la forêt
Et paraît
S’évanouir en lumière.

Parfois on rampe accablé
Dans le blé,
Mais juillet a pour ressource
L’ombre, où, loin des chauds sillons,
Nous mouillons
Nos pieds roses dans la source.

Depuis qu’ils sont sous les cieux,
Soucieux
Du bonheur de la prairie,
L’herbe et l’arbre chevelu
Ont voulu
Dans leur tendre rêverie

Qu’à jamais le fruit, le grain,
L’air serein,
L’amourette, la nichée,
L’aube, la chanson, l’appât,
Occupât
Notre joie effarouchée.

Vivons! chantons! Tout est pur
Dans l’azur;
Tout est beau dans la lumière;
Tour vers son but, jour et nuit,
Est conduit;
Sans se tromper, le fleuve erre.

Toute la campagne rit;
Un esprit
Palpite sous chaque feuille;
— Aimons! murmure une voix
Dans les bois;
Et la fleur veut qu’on la cueille.

Quand l’iris a diapré
Tout le pré,
Quand le jour plus tiède augmente,
Quand le soir luit dans l’étang
Eclatant,
Quand la verdure est charmante,

Que dit l’essaim ébloui;
Oui! oui! oui!

Les collines, les fontaines,
Les bourgeons verts, les fruits mûrs,
Les azurs
Pleins de visions lointaines,

Le champ, le lac, le marais,
L’antre frais,
Composent, sans pleurs ni mine,
Et font monter vers le ciel
Eternel
L’affirmation sereine!

L’aube et l’éblouissement
Vont semant
Partout des perles de flamme;
L’oiseau n’est pas orphelin;
Tout est plein
De la mystérieuse âme!

Quelqu’un que l’on ne voit pas
Est là-bas
Dans la maison qu’on ignore;
Et cet inconnu bénit
Notre nid,
Et sa fenêtre est l’aurore.

Et c’est à cause de lui
Que l’appui
Jamais ne manque à nos ailes,
Et que les colombes vont
Sur le mont
Boire où boivent les gazelles.

Grâce à ce doux inconnu,
Adam nu
Nous souriait sous les branches;
Le cygne sous le bouleau

A de l’eau
Pour laver ses plumes blanches.

Grâce à lui, le piquebois
Vit sans lois,
Chéri des pins vénérables,
Et délivrant des fourmis
Ses amis
Les tilleuls et les érables.

Grâce à lui, le passereau
Du sureau
S’envole, et monte au grand orme;
C’est lui qui fait le buisson
De façon
Qu’on y chante et qu’on y dorme.

Il nous met tous à l’abri,
Colibri,
Chardonneret, hochequeue,
Tout l’essaim que l’air ravit
Et qui vit
Dans la grande lueur bleue.

A cause de lui, les airs
Et les mers,
Les bois d’aulnes et d’yeuses
La sauge en fleur, le matin,
Et le thym,
Sont des fêtes radieuses;

Les blés sont dorés, les cieux
Spacieux,
L’eau joyeuse et l’herbe douce;
Mais il se fiche souvent
Quand le vent
Nous vole nos brins de mousse.

Il dit au vent: - Paix, autan;
Et va-t’en;
Laisse mes oiseaux tranquilles.
Arrache, si tu le veux,
Leurs cheveux
De fumée aux sombres villes! -

Celui sous qui nous planons
Sait nos noms.
Nous chantons. Que nous importe;
Notre humble essor ignorant
Est si grand!
Notre faiblesse est si forte!

La tempête au vol tonnant,
Déchaînant
Les trombes, les bruits, les grêles,
Fouettant, malgré leurs sanglots,
Les grands flots,
S’émousse à nos plumes frêles.

Il veut les petits contents,
Le beau temps,
Et l’innocence sauvée;
Il abaisse, calme et doux,
Comme nous,
Ses ailes sur sa couvée.

Grâce à lui, sous le hallier
Familier
A notre aile coutumière,
Sur les mousses de velours,
Nos amours
Coulent dans de la lumière.

Il est bon; et sa bonté

C’est l’été;
C’est le charmant sorbier rouge;
C’est que rien ne vienne à nous
Dans nos trous
Sans que le feuillage bouge.

Sa bonté, c’est Tout; c’est l’air,
Le feu clair,
Le bois où, dans la nuit brune,
Ta chanson, qui prend son vol,
Rossignol,
Semble un rêve de la lune.

C’est ce qu’au gré des saisons
Nous faisons;
C’est le rocher que l’eau creuse;
C’est l’oiseau, des vents bercé,
Composé
D’une inquiétude heureuse.

Il est puissant, étoilé,
Et voilé.
Le soir, avec les murmures
Des troupeaux qu’on reconduit,
Et le bruit
Des abeilles sous les mûres,

Avec la nuit sur les toits,
Sur les bois,
Sur les montagnes prochaines,
C’est sa grandeur qui descend,
Et qu’on sent
Dans le tremblement des chênes.

Il n’eut qu’à vouloir un jour,
Et l’amour
Devint l’harmonie immense;

Tous les êtres étaient là;
Il mêla
Sa sagesse à leur démence.

Il voulut que tout fût un;
Le parfum
Eut pour sœur l’aurore pure;
Et les choses, se touchant
Dans un chant,
Furent la sainte nature.

Il mit sur les flots, profonds
Les typhons;
Il mit la fleur sur la tige;
Il se montra fulgurant
Dans le grand;
Le petit fut son prodige.

Avec la même beauté
Sa clarté
Créa l’aimable et l’énorme;
Il fit sortir l’alcyon
Du rayon
Qui baise la mer difforme.

L’effrayant devint charmant;
L’élément,
Monstre, colosse, fantôme,
Par Lui, qui le veut ainsi,
Radouci,
Vint s’accoupler à l’atome.

On vit alors dans Ophir
L’humble asfir
Vert comme l’hydre farouche;
Le flamboiement de l’Etna
Rayonna

Sur l’aile de l’oiseau-mouche.

Vie est le mot souverain,
Et serein,
Sans fin, sans forme, sans nombre,
Tendre, inépuisable, ardent,
Débordant
De toute la terre sombre.

L’aube se marie au soir;
Le bec noir
Au bec flamboyant se mêle;
L’éclair, mâle affreux, poursuit
Dans la nuit
La mer, sa rauque femelle.

Volons, volons, et volons!
Les sillons
Sont rayés, et l’onde est verte.
La vie est là sous nos yeux,
Dans les cieux,
Claire et toute grande ouverte.

Hirondelle, fais ton nid,
Le granit
T’offre son ombre et ses lierres;
Aux palais pour tes amours
Prends des tours,
Et de la paille aux chaumières.

Le nid que l’oiseau bâtit
Si petit,
Est une chose profonde;
L’œuf ôté de la forêt
Manquerait
A l’équilibre du monde.
..

III

Si je ne l’aimais point, je ne souffrirais pas.
Laissez-moi remonter, gouffres! - Non, pas à pas,
Je descends, je m’enfonce, à chaque effort je glisse
Plus avant. Le malheur de la nuit, son supplice, C’est d’adorer le jour et de rester la nuit.
Cet amour, c’est l’horreur, et le mal est son fruit.
O ma lumière, où donc es-tu; Satan t’implore.
M’entends-tu, dis? reviens, aurore, aurore, aurore!
Ne leur dis pas: toujours; ne me dis pas: jamais;
Je souffre! - oh; tout est noir, je ne vois pas, je hais!

Je hais; - oui, je vous hais, tas humain, foule blême,
Parce que vous l’aimez, parce que Dieu vous aime,
Parce que sa clarté brille à travers vos os,
Parce que vous plongez vos urnes aux ruisseaux,
Parce que vous passez vivants dans la nature,
Parce que vous avez, pendant que la torture
Me tenaille et que j’ai mon âme pour vautour,
Dans vos yeux l’espérance et dans vos cœurs l’amour!

Hommes, larves, néants, ombres, faces rapides,
Vous n’êtes pas contents; ô favoris stupides,
Vous vous plaignez d’aller chaque jour vieillissant,
De passer, de sentir refroidir votre sang,
Et vous accusez Dieu! Quel rêve est donc le vôtre!
J’ai perdu plus que vous, moi; J’ai, l’un après l’autre,
Vu tomber mes rayons, comme vous vos cheveux!
IV

Ne pouvoir remonter, même quand je le veux;

Quoi! les morts repentants s’envolent de leurs tombes
Radieux, les hiboux se changent en colombes,
Les démons pardonnés rentrent au firmament,
Et moi, le spectre noir, je les vois lentement

Blanchir dans la nuit sombre et redevenir anges!
Des astres, fleurs du gouffre, éclosent dans les fanges!
Quoi! César est parti; Torquemada s'en va;
Busiris, dans la cave où le tient Jéhovah,
Distingue une lueur et commence à sourire;
Nemrod attend; je viens d'entendre Judas dire,
Dans la geôle où, son crime et moi, nous le lions:
— Je n'ai plus maintenant que quatre millions
De siècles à rester à la chaîne dans l'ombre. -
Que Judas est heureux! il peut compter un nombre.
Pour tous, pour tous, pour tous l'horizon blanchira.
Caïn, le vieux Caïn, lui-même sortira!
Moi seul, je resterai dans les déserts funèbres.
Horreur sans fond! Je suis l'éternel des ténèbres.

Je suis le misérable à perpétuité.
V

Mais je me vengerai sur son humanité,
Sur l'homme qu'il créa, sur Adam et sur Eve,
Sur l'âme qui sourit, sur le jour qui se lève,
Sur toi, l'astre! sur toi, l'aile! sur toi, la fleur!
Sur la vierge, et la mère, et sur l'enfant! Malheur!
Je défigurerai la face universelle.
Serpent, je secouerai dans l'ombre ma crécelle.
J'inventerai des dieux: Moloch, Vishnou, Baal.
Je prendrai le réel pour briser l'idéal,
Les pierres des édens pour bâtir les sodomes.
A travers les rameaux de la forêt des hommes
On verra mes yeux luire, et l'on dira: c'est lui.
Plus effaré du mal que du bien ébloui,
Le sage doutera de Dieu. Je mordrai l'âme.
J'enlaidirai l'amour dans le cœur de la femme.
Je mêlerai ma cendre à ces charbons éteints.
Et, mauvais, je rirai, rayant tous leurs instincts
Et toutes leurs vertus de l'ongle de mes ailes.
Je serai si hideux que toutes les prunelles

Auront je ne sais quoi de sombre; et les méchants
Et les pervers croîtront comme l’herbe des champs,
Le fils, devant le juge aux lèvres indignées,
Apparaîtra, tenant dans ses mains des poignées
De cheveux blancs du père égorgé. Je dirai
Au pauvre: vole; au riche: opprime. Je ferai
Jeter le nouveau-né par la mère aux latrines.
Tremble, ô Dieu! J’ouvrirai de mes mains leurs poitrines, J’arracherai, fumant, et je tordrai leur cœur,
Et j’en exprimerai tous les crimes, l’horreur,
La trahison, le meurtre, Achab, Tibère, Atrée,
Sur ta création rayonnante et sacrée!
Tu seras Providence et moi Fatalité.
J’ai fait mieux que la Haine; ô vide! ô cécité!
J’ai fait l’Envie. En vain ce Dieu bon multiplie
Ces colosses dont l’âme est de rayons remplie,
Le génie et l’amour et l’héroïsme; moi
Par la négation je fais ronger la foi;
Je suis Zoïle; autour des Socrates j’excite
Anitus, et je mets sur Achille Thersite,
Et tout pleure, et j’égale, à force de venins,
A l’éclat des géants le gonflement des nains.
La matière a mon signe au front. Je la querelle.
J’effare l’eau sans fond sous des gouffres de grêle.
Je contrains l’océan, que Dieu tient sous sa loi,
Et la terre, à créer du chaos avec moi,
Je fais de la laideur énorme avec leur force,
Un monstre avec l’écume, un monstre avec l’écorce,
Sur terre Béhémoth, Léviathan sur mer.
Je complète partout le chaos par l’enfer,
La bête par l’idole, et les rats, les belettes,
La torpille, l’hyène acharnée aux squelettes,
La bave du crapaud, la dent du caïman,
Par le bonze, l’obi, le fakir et l’iman.
Dieu passe dans le cœur des hommes, j’y séjourne.
Sa roue avec un bruit sidéral roule et tourne,
Mais c’est mon grain lugubre et sanglant qu’elle moud;

Jéhovah reculant sent aujourd’hui partout
Une création de Satan sous la sienne;
Son feu ne peut briller sans que mon souffle vienne.
Il est le char; je suis l’ornière. Nous croisons
Nos forces; et j’emploie aux pestes, aux poisons,
Aux monstres, aux déserts, son pur soleil candide;
C’est Dieu qui fait le front, moi qui creuse la ride;
Il est dans le prophète et moi dans les devins.
Guerre et deuil! je lui prends tous ses glaives divins,
Le glaive d’air, le vent, le glaive d’eau, la pluie,
L’épée éclair, stupeur de la terre éblouie,
Je m’en sers pour mon œuvre; et la nature a peur.
A mon haleine une hydre éclôt dans la vapeur,
Et la goutte d’eau tombe en déluge agrandie;
Avec le doux foyer qui chauffe, j’incendie;
Je fais du miel le fiel, je fais l’écueil du port;
Dieu bénit le meilleur, je sacre le plus fort;
Dieu fait les radieux, je fais les sanguinaires.
Oui, pour broyer ses fils je prendrai ses tonnerres!
Oui, je me dresserai de toute ma hauteur!
Je veux dans ce qu’il fait tuer ce créateur,
Je veux le torturer dans son œuvre, et l’entendre
Râler dans la justice et la pudeur à vendre,
Dans les champs que la guerre accable de ses bonds,
Dans les peuples livrés aux princes; dans les bons
Et dans les saints, dans l’âme humaine tout entière!
Je veux qu’il se débatte, esprit, sous la matière;
Qu’il saigne dans le juste assassiné; je veux
Qu’il se torde, couvert de prêtres monstrueux,
Qu’il pleure, bâillonné par les idolâtries;
Je veux que des lys morts et des roses flétries,
Du cygne sous le bec des vautours frémissant,
Des beautés, des vertus, de toutes parts, son sang,
Son propre sang divin sur lui coule et l’inonde.
Voyez, regardez, Cieux! L’échafaud, c’est le monde,
Je suis le bourreau sombre, et j’exécute Dieu.
Dieu mourra. Grâce à moi, les chars sous leur essieu,

Les rois sous leur pouvoir, les aigles sous leurs griffes,
Les dogmes ténébreux et noirs, sous leurs pontifes,
Tout ce qui sur la terre à cette heure est debout,
Même les innocents sous leurs pieds, ont partout
Quelque chose de Dieu que dans l'ombre ils écrasent.
Mes flamboiements rampant sous l'univers, l'embrasent.
Je suis le mal; je suis la nuit; je suis l'effroi.

VI

Grâce! pardonne-moi! rappelle-moi! prends-moi!
Grâce! Ne sens-tu pas qu'il faut que toute chaîne
Se rompe, et que le mal finisse, et que la haine
S'éteigne, évanouie en ta sérénité;
Quoi; le bien infini, le mal illimité!
Toi le bien, moi le mal! est-ce que c'est possible;
Le monde gouverné par un double invisible!
Y songez-vous, Seigneur; un partage entre nous!
Non, vous êtes la face, et je suis les genoux.
Laissez-moi me plier et tomber, juge immense,
Sur ce pavé des cieux qu'on nomme la clémence!
Grâce, ô Dieu! L'univers, les terres et les eaux, L'éther sans bornes, plein d'invisibles oiseaux,
Les glauques océans qui font rugir leurs ondes,
L'énormité vivante où rayonnent les mondes,
Quoi! c'est une balance où nous pesons tous deux;
Qu'en dites-vous, soleils; Lui charmant, moi hideux!
Quoi! lui dans un plateau, soleils, et moi dans l'autre!
La chair est ma servante et l'âme est son apôtre.
Je lutte. Nous tenons chacun notre côté.
Avoir l'infini, c'est avoir l'égalité.
Ton paradis ne fait qu'équilibre à mon bagne.
Dieu! - la création ainsi qu'une montagne,
Pèse sur moi; je lève à travers les chaos
Mon front d'où mes douleurs retombent en fléaux;
Je me tords sans repas, sans fin, sans espérance.
C'est une majesté qu'une telle souffrance.
Oui, c'est l'énigme, ô nuit, de tes millions d'yeux:

Le grand souffrant fait face au grand mystérieux.
Grâce, ô Dieu! pour toi-même il faut que je l'obtienne.
Ma perpétuité fait ombre sur la tienne.
Devant ton oeil flambeau rien ne doit demeurer,
Tout doit changer, vieillir et se transfigurer.
Toi seul vis. Devant toi tout doit avoir un âge.
Et c'est pour ta splendeur un importun nuage
Qu'on voie un spectre assis au fond de ton ciel bleu, Et l'éternel Satan devant l'éternel Dieu!

VII

Ils sont là-haut! Ils sont dans l'hymne et dans la joie;
L'éther des paradis devant eux se déploie.
Ils planent satisfaits, bienveillants, sérieux,
Dans le rayonnement du ciel mystérieux;
Leurs robes dans l'azur font des plis de lumière;
Ils ont leur innocence et leur blancheur première.
Ils vont d'un monde à l'autre ainsi que des oiseaux.
L'amour les courbe ainsi que le vent les roseaux,
Et les redresse ainsi que le foyer ses flammes.
Ils s'abîment en Dieu tout en restant des âmes,
Et contemplent, heureux, la face de clarté.
Ils s'accouplent, noyés dans la félicité.
Ils le regardent être, il les regarde vivre.
Ils montent à jamais vers lui. Lui les enivre
Du sourire inouï de son immensité.
Il les voit. Il leur parle; il est Grâce et Beauté;
L'impénétrable est doux, le formidable est tendre... -
Oh! je voudrais saisir, arracher, tenir, prendre,
Oh! je voudrais broyer l'étoile du matin!

Le boiteux, le lépreux, et l'aveugle incertain,
Ceux qui marchent pieds nus et ceux qui n'ont pas même
Un toit l'hiver, ce sont des riches. Dieu les aime.
Ils ont pour vêtement ton regard de bonté.
Dieu! n'être pas aimé, c'est là la nudité!
Etre dehors, c'est là le bitume et le soufre.

VIII

J’ai mis sous une pierre et scellé dans un gouffre
La justice, le bien, le pur, le vrai, le beau;
Tout ce qui peut servir à l’homme de flambeau,
La vertu, la raison, penser, espérer, croire,
Ce qu’on nomme sagesse et ce qu’on nomme gloire,
Et je rêve accoudé sur ce tombeau profond.
Je suis grand. Et sous moi les ténèbres défont
Ce qu’a fait la lumière, et dans les noirs abîmes,
Pensif, j’entends tomber goutte à goutte les crimes.
Le chaos me contemple, et j’ai le pied dessus.
Hélas! hélas! mieux vaut l’étable où naît Jésus
Que Babel et Ninive et Tyr et Babylone,
Et Job sur son fumier que Satan sur son trône!

Oh! si j’étais heureux, je serais bon; Pitié!
Je ne maudirais pas! L’onagre a-t-il crié,
Le bœuf a-t-il mugi quand ils ont eu de l’herbe;
L’amour, l’azur, les lys, la lumière superbe,
Les grands rayons dorés qui vont s’élargissant,
Les vierges, les enfants joyeux, l’ange innocent,
La frange d’or de l’aube au rebord des ravines,
Oh; je crie éperdu vers ces choses divines
Que je ne vois plus; - Dieu; - Dieu; - Les splendeurs d’en haut
Ajoutent de la nuit, hélas, à mon cachot.
Il me tombe, de tous les concerts, des huées.

..
DANS L’INFINI
CHANT DES ASTRES
Lumière
..

Je souffre. Je voudrais attendrir les nuées,
Je tends les mains aux fleurs, je crie aux aquilons:
Grâce! Ayant tous les maux du monde pour haillons,

Je pleure, je demande à la ronce, à la gerbe,
Au nuage, à la tombe, à l’étoile, au brin d’herbe,
Aux bêtes reculant devant le front humain,
Aux cailloux qu’un forçat casse au bord du chemin,
A tout, au jour qui naît, au vent qui recommence,
De la pitié! Je suis le mendiant immense.

IX

Encor si je pouvais dormir; Si, seulement
Une heure, une minute, un instant, un moment,
Le temps qu’une onde passe au fond du lac sonore,
Fût-ce pour m’éveiller plus lamentable encore,
Sur n’importe quels durs et funèbres chevets,
Si je pouvais poser mon front; Si je pouvais,
Nu, sur un bloc de bronze ou sur un tas de pierres,
L’une de l’autre, hélas! rapprocher mes paupières,
Et m’étendre, et sentir quelque chose de frais,
De doux et de serein, comme si je mourais;
Si je pouvais me perdre un moment dans un songe,
Apaiser dans mon flanc ce qui remue et ronge,
Aspirer un fluide étrange, aérien,
Impalpable, et flotter, et n’entendre plus rien,
Ni mon aile frémir, ni battre mon artère,
Ni ces cris dont je suis la cause sur la terre:
— Tuons! Frappons! Damnons! J’ai peur! J’ai froid! J’ai faim!
Sentir ma misérable oreille sourde enfin!
Oh! me coucher, rentrer mes griffes sous ma tête,
Dire: « C’est bien! je dors, tout comme une autre bête,
«Comme un léopard, comme un chacal, comme un loup!
«Une nuée auguste et calme me dissout!”
Mais non; jamais! Je traîne à jamais l’insomnie
Dans une immensité sinistre d’agonie.
Ne pas mourir, ne pas dormir. Voilà mon sort.
En songe on ne sort pas, mais on croit que l’on sort;
C’est assez. Je n’ai point cette trêve. Ma peine
C’est d’être là, toujours debout; d’être une haine
Eternelle, guettant dans l’ombre affreusement;

Et c’est de regarder sans cesse fixement
Les escarpements noirs du mystère insondable.
Voir toujours fuir, ainsi qu’une île inabordable,
Le sommeil et le rêve, obscurs paradis bleus
Où sourit on ne sait quel azur nébuleux;
O condamnation!

Je suis sous cette voûte.
Je regarde l’horreur profonde, et je l’écoute.
Pas un être ne peut souffrir sans que j’en sois.
Je suis l’affreux milieu des douleurs. Je perçois
Chaque pulsation de la fièvre du monde.
Mon ouïe est le centre où se répète et gronde
Tout le bruit ténébreux dans l’étendue épars;
J’entends l’ombre. O tourment; le mal de toutes parts
M’apporte en mon cachot son âpre joie aiguë;
J’entends glisser l’aspic et croître la ciguë;
Le mal pèse sur moi du zénith au nadir;
La mer a beau hurler, l’avalanche bondir,
L’orage entreheurter les foudres qu’il secoue,
L’éclatant zodiaque a beau tourner sa roue
De constellations, sombre meule des cieux,
A travers le fracas vaste et prodigieux
Des astres dont parfois le groupe énorme penche,
A travers l’océan, la foudre et l’avalanche
Roulant du haut des monts parmi les sapins verts,
J’entends le pas d’un crime au bout de l’univers.
La parole qu’on dit tout bas, qui n’est pas vraie,
L’obscur tressaillement du blé qu’étreint l’ivraie,
La gangrène qui vient mordre la plaie à vif,
Le chuchotement sourd des flots noyant l’esquif,
Le silence du chien près du nid de la grive,
J’entends tout, je n’échappe à rien, et tout m’arrive
A la fois dans ce bagne où je suis submergé;
Tous les fléaux en moi retentissent; et j’ai
Le contre-coup de tous les monstres; et je songe,
Ecoutant la fureur, la chute, le mensonge

De toute cette race immonde de Japhet;
Je distingue le bruit mystérieux que fait
Dans une conscience un forfait qu’on décide;
O nuit! j’entends Néron devenir parricide.

Sommeil, lieu sombre, espace ineffable, où l’on est
Doux comme l’aube et pur comme l’enfant qui naît,
Dormir, ô guérison, détachement, rosée,
Stupeur épanouie, immense ombre apaisée,
Repos sacré, douceur farouche, bercement
Qui trempe dans les cieux les cœurs, noir et charmant,
Oh! ce bain des remords, ce baume des ulcères,
La paix qui fait lâcher ce qu’on a dans les serres
N’avoir jamais cela; jamais! n’avoir jamais
Cet assoupissement sur les vagues sommets,
Ce sommeil, devant qui les âmes sont pareilles,
Qui change l’antre en nid, et permet aux abeilles
De voler dans la gueule ouverte des lions!
Oh! cette voix qui dit: calmons et délions;
Ne l’entendre jamais dans mes nuits convulsives;
La flamme à la prunelle et la bave aux gencives,
Veiller, veiller, veiller, grincer des dents, voilà
Dans quelles profondeurs ma faute me scella;
Sort hideux; m’enfermer dans la nuit, et m’exclure
Du sommeil! me livrer à cette âcre brûlure,
La veille sans repos, le regard toujours noir,
Toujours ouvert! O nuit sans pitié; ne pouvoir
Lui prendre un peu de calme, et l’avoir sur moi toute!
Englouti dans l’oubli, n’en pas boire une goutte;

Toujours être aux aguets; toujours être en éveil!

O vous tous, êtres! fils de l’ombre ou du soleil,
Qui que vous soyez, morts, vivants, oiseaux des grèves,
Esprits de l’air, esprits du jour, larves des rêves,
Faces de l’invisible, anges, spectres, venez,
Vous trouverez Satan les yeux ouverts. Planez,

Rampez, allez-vous-en, revenez; Satan veille
Les yeux ouverts. C’est l’ombre ou c’est l’aube vermeille;
Il a les yeux ouverts. Hier, demain, toujours!
Laissez s’enfuir les pas du temps, tardifs ou courts,
Après des millions de jours, de mois, d’années,
De siècles, de saisons écloses ou fanées,
De flux et de reflux, de printemps et d’hivers,
Venez, vous trouverez Satan les yeux ouverts.
Deux yeux fixes, voilà le fond de l’épouvante.

L’obscurité spectrale, informe, décevante,
Chimérique, me tient dans ces gouffres, béant
Et ployé sous le poids monstrueux du néant.
Je souffre. Oh! seulement un instant que je dorme.
X

Je l’aime d’être beau, moi qui suis le difforme.
Que j’oublie un instant! - ô souvenir! - Je vois
Les anges lui parler dans l’ombre à demi-voix.
Que leur dit-il; je suis jaloux; Je me rappelle Qu’il me parlait aussi, que la lumière est belle!
Je l’aime d’être bon, moi qui suis le mauvais.
Oh! le temps d’un éclair, hélas! si je pouvais
Au fond de mon chaos voir son ombre apparaître!
Je l’adore, ô terreur, plus que Jephté son prêtre,
Plus qu’Amos son prophète et David son chanteur.
Je l’aime d’être vrai, moi qui suis le menteur.
Le sang brûle mes yeux, l’écume emplit ma bouche,
Et, chien de l’infini, chassé du ciel, farouche,
Hagard, pleurant mon maître, à la porte du jour,
Mâchant le genre humain, je hurle mon amour!

Oui, chien!

En lui parlant ma voix devient horrible.
Parfois, pensif, courbé sous mon plafond terrible,
J’entends les séraphins le chanter dans les cieux,

Et, quand ils ont fini, l’écho chante après eux;
Alors je dis: - Eh bien, moi comme eux, moi de même,
Dieu, je veux te chanter; ô lumière, je t’aime!
Je veux d’un chant d’enfer ravir l’écho du ciel,
Satan est une lyre ainsi que Gabriel.
Dieu; c’est à toi, vrai jour, c’est à toi, seul refuge,
Dieu; c’est à toi, pasteur, roi, père, maître et juge,
Que la création songe éternellement; -
Et fou, vieux cœur de fer attiré par l’aimant,
Je dis: gloire! et ma strophe éclate en diadème,
Et je leur chante un hymne ineffable et suprême,
Hymne aux versets charmants d’ombre et d’extase emplis,
[Et] qui pourrait sortir de la bouche d’un lys,
Puis j’écoute; et l’écho qui me répond aboie!
XI

Les plus mornes cachots ont une claire-voie;
Au fond de l’oubliette, au fond du cabanon,
Quelque chose encor semble exister; ici, non.

Satan vers Jéhovah se tourne, las d’abîme.
Oh! l’unique assassin et l’unique victime,
C’est moi. J’ai pour tourment le mal que mes mains font
Les autres êtres sont, puis ne sont plus, ils vont
Puis s’arrêtent, un bruit, puis rien; je les envie.
Les autres sont morts; - moi, je suis veuf de la vie.
L’effroyable vivant du sépulcre, c’est moi.

Oui, le supplicié râle et rugit; la loi
Le tient dans ses poignets de bronze qu’on redoute,
Le tue à petit feu, l’égorge goutte à goutte,
Et s’interrompt parfois pour qu’il meure longtemps.
Ses pieds fument, sa chair pétille, et par instants
Flambe, et l’on voit sortir du ventre ses entrailles;
Il hurle; l’huile bout dans la cuve; tenailles,
Plomb fondu, roue, horreur; Par degrés cependant,
Malgré le vil bourreau de plus en plus ardent,

Sur l’homme évanoui la torture s’émousse;
La sinistre agonie arrive, affreuse et douce;
Le tourment vaincu semble à la surface errer;
Le misérable sent, au moment d’expirer,
Comme un éloignement ténébreux du supplice.
Entre ses cils brûlés un rayon pâle glisse,
C’est la mort, c’est le ciel, c’est l’infini profond;
Il y tombe, il y flotte, il lui semble qu’il fond;
Ses yeux tout grands ouverts se fixent sur du vide;
Il est mort. - Oh; cela, gouffres, j’en suis avide,
Je l’implore, et je crie: A mon secours, bourreaux;
La roue aux mille dents, les chevalets, les crocs,
L’attention du juge affreux, lent et barbare,
Les pinces, les crampons rougis, les coups de barre,
L’huile ardente rongeant la cuve de granit,
Le fer, le feu, c’est bon, c’est doux, cela finit.

XII

Ayez de la pitié, gouffres, prison, géhenne,
Sépulcre, chaos, nuit, désolation, haine,
Ayez de la pitié, si le ciel n’en a pas;
Sur Satan, de si haut précipité si bas,
O voûtes de l’enfer, laissez tomber des larmes;
Non, c’est Dieu, c’est le ciel, c’est l’azur plein de charmes,
L’aurore se livrant toute nue à mes yeux,
C’est le baiser du jour, c’est l’amour que je veux;
Rien; le deuil. Rien! l’hiver. Rien; l’âpre solitude.
Le vil chaos, toujours dans la même attitude;
Les blocs mystérieux de l’expiation;
Je ne puis même, hélas, voir une vision,
Un reflet, comme on voit du jour aux trous d’un crible.
J’écoute du néant le monologue horrible,
L’immensité pour moi ne contient qu’un affront.
Jamais Dieu; - Tout est noir. - Quand ma main sur mon front
Cherche les deux rayons de l’archange, elle y trouve
Les deux cornes du bouc; je ne sais quelle louve
Qui tient l’être en sa gueule et l’emporte et le mord,

Vient me lécher dans l’ombre, et dit: Je suis la mort.
Quoi; j’ai le désespoir à jamais pour demeure;
Horreur! je t’aime, ô Dieu! Grâce, ô mon Dieu!

Bien, pleure
Sanglote, implore, écume, aime; et sois rebuté!
Recommence toujours la même lâcheté!
Chien Satan, vautre-toi toujours dans ta bassesse! -
Oh; je monte et descends et remonte sans cesse,
De la création fouillant le souterrain,
Le bas est de l’acier, le haut est de l’airain,
A jamais, à jamais, à jamais; Je frissonne,
Et je cherche et je crie et j’appelle. Personne;
Et furieux, tremblant, désespéré, banni,
Frappant des pieds, des mains et du front l’infini,
Ainsi qu’un moucheron heurte une vitre sombre,
A l’immensité morne arrachant des pans d’ombre,
Seul, sans trouver d’issue et sans voir de clarté,
Je tâte dans la nuit ce mur, l’éternité.
...
DANS LE CIEL
HYMNE DES ANGES
Pensée
...
XIII

Ici la tombe, là le chaos; sur ma tête
La noirceur, sous mes pieds la chute; où je m’arrête,
La profondeur s’écroule, et tout est vide; eh bien,
Tous ces gouffres mêlés sur moi ne seraient rien
Si je pouvais donner le change à ma pensée,
Moi-même m’enivrer de ma fureur versée,
Et me persuader que je hais; Ce n’est pas
De la crypte stupide et sourde du trépas,
Ce n’est pas du cachot, du puits, de la géhenne,
Ce n’est pas du verrou, ce n’est pas de la chaîne,
C’est de son propre cœur qu’on est le prisonnier.

Haïr délivre.

XIV

Hélas, à force de nier,
Et d’enfoncer dans tout mon sarcasme, âpre lame;
A force de railler le grand épithalame,
Et de crier d’en bas aux crimes: je suis là!
Et de continuer Nemrod dans Attila,
Et de recommencer dans Borgia Caïphe,
A force d’ajouter à toute aile une griffe,
A force d’inspirer les basses actions,
A force de jeter mon cloaque aux rayons,
A force d’être l’ange infâme que sature
Tout le crime possible en la sombre nature,
A force de m’emplir de ténèbres, j’ai froid.

XV

Oh! l’essence de Dieu, c’est d’aimer. L’homme croit
Que Dieu n’est, comme lui, qu’une âme, et qu’il s’isole
De l’univers, poussière immense qui s’envole;
Mais moi, l’ennemi triste et l’éternel moqueur,
Je le sais, Dieu n’est pas une âme, c’est un cœur.
Dieu, centre aimant du monde, à ses fibres divines
Rattache tous les fils de toutes les racines,
Et sa tendresse égale un ver au séraphin;
Et c’est l’étonnement des espaces sans fin
Que ce cœur effrayant, blasphémé par les prêtres,
Ait autant de rayons que l’univers a d’êtres.
Pour lui créer, penser, méditer, animer,
Semer, détruire, faire, être, voir, c’est aimer.
Splendide, il aime, et c’est par reflux qu’on l’adore;
Tout en lui roule; il tient à la nuit par l’aurore,
Aux esprits par l’idée, aux fleurs par le parfum;
Et ce cœur dans son gouffre a l’infini, moins un.
Moins Satan, à jamais rejeté, damné, morne.
Dieu m’excepte. Il finit à moi. Je suis sa borne.
Dieu serait infini si je n’existais pas.

Je lui dis: Tu fis bien, Dieu, quand tu me frappas!
Je ne l’accuse point, non; mais je désespère!
O sombre éternité, je suis le fils sans père.
Du côté de Satan il est, mais n’est plus Dieu.

XVI

Cent fois, cent fois, cent fois, j’en répète l’aveu, J’aime! Et Dieu me torture, et voici mon blasphème,
Voici ma frénésie et mon hurlement: j’aime!
J’aime à faire trembler les cieux! - Quoi; tout est vain;
Oh! c’est là l’inouï, l’horrible, le divin,
De se dresser, d’ouvrir des ailes insensées,
De s’attacher, sanglant, à toutes les pensées
Qu’on peut saisir, avec des cris, avec des pleurs,
De sonder les terreurs, de sonder les douleurs,
Toutes, celles qu’on souffre et celles qu’on invente,
De parcourir le cercle entier de l’épouvante,
Pour retomber toujours au même désespoir;
Dieu veut que l’homme las s’endorme, il fait le soir;
Il creuse pour la taupe une chambre sous terre;
Il donne au singe, à l’ours, au lynx, à la panthère,
L’âpre hospitalité des antres et des monts;
Aux baleines les mers, aux crapauds les limons,
Les roseaux aux serpents secouant leurs sonnettes;
Il fait tourner autour des soleils les planètes
Et dans la blanche main des vierges les fuseaux;
Il entre dans les nids, touche aux petits oiseaux,
Et dit: La bise vient, j’épaissirai leurs plumes;
Il laisse l’étincelle échapper aux enclumes,
Et lui permet de fuir, joyeuse, les marteaux;
Il montre son grand ciel aux lions de l’Athos;
Il étale dans l’aube, ainsi que des corbeilles,
Sous des flots de rayons, les printemps pleins d’abeilles
Sa grandeur pour le monde en bonté se résout.
Une vaste lueur ardente embrase tout,
De l’archange à la brute et de l’astre à la pierre,

Croise en forêt de feu ses rameaux de lumière,
Va, vient, monte, descend, féconde, enflamme, emplit,
Combat l’hiver liant les fleuves dans leur lit,
Et lui fait lâcher prise, et rit dans toute chose,
Luit mollement derrière une feuille de rose,
Chauffe l’énormité sidérale des cieux,
Brille, et de mon côté, prodige monstrueux,
Ce flamboiement se dresse en muraille de glace;
Oui, la création heureuse s’entrelace
Tout entière, clartés et brume, esprits et corps,
Dans le Dieu bon, avec d’ineffables accords;
L’être le plus déchu retrouve l’innocence
Dans sa toute tendresse et sa toute puissance;
Moi seul, moi le maudit, l’incurable apostat,
Je m’approche de Dieu sans autre résultat
Que de faire gronder vaguement le tonnerre!
Dieu veut que cet essaim d’atomes le vénère,
Il leur demande à tous leur cœur, leur chant, leur bruit,
Leur parfum, leur prière; à moi rien, de la nuit.
O misère sans fond; Ecoutez ceci, sphères,
Etoiles, firmaments, ô vieux soleils, mes frères,
Vers qui monte en pleurant mon douloureux souhait,
Cieux, azurs, profondeurs, splendeurs, - l’amour me hait!

L’ANGE LIBERTÉ

I

De la lumière. Et puis de la lumière encore.
Chaos de firmaments dans des gouffres d’aurore.

L’ange Liberté plane en l’azur spacieux.
On dirait que son oeil cherche une issue aux cieux.
Elle voit une étoile. Elle s’approche: - Ecoute,
Etoile; conduis-moi sous la fatale voûte;
Dieu permet que je parle à celui qui fut grand.
— Je ne puis, répond l’astre. Et Liberté reprend:
— Du moins, dis-moi la route et comment y descendre.
— Parle à l’Eclair, dit l’astre. Il peut seul te l’apprendre.
Cet ange est dans le ciel le seul qui sait tomber.

D’une aile que le vent même ne peut courber,
L’Ange Liberté part et franchit l’éther sombre.

Elle vola longtemps; - l’homme n’a pas de nombre
Pour compter ce temps-là; - son vol fier était sûr.

Tout à coup, dans un angle informe de l’azur,
Elle vit l’écurie énorme des nuées.
On entendait sonner des chaînes dénouées,
Et rouler on ne sait quels effrayants essieux;
L’ange Eclair travaillait dans cet antre des cieux;
Il en faisait sortir tous les chars du tonnerre;
Quelques-uns n’étaient faits que de flamme ordinaire;
D’autres semblaient forgés dans l’enfer par les nuits;
Et des ruissellements de foudres inouïs
Ebauchaient vaguement leur forme épouvantable;
Les écueils dans la mer, les taureaux dans l’étable,
Sont des roucoulements près des monstrueux bruits

De tous ces chars avec de l’abîme construits.

Liberté s’avança vers l’Eclair. L’immortelle
Sourit: - Ange, tu dois connaître, lui dit-elle, L’éclatant Lucifer tombé dans le trépas.
— C’est moi qui l’ai frappé, je ne le connais pas,
Dit l’Eclair. - Mais le gouffre où tu jetas cette âme,
Tu peux me le montrer; - Non, dit l’esprit de flamme.
Va trouver le vieil ange Hiver. Il est le seul
Qui connaisse les plis ténébreux du linceul.
Moi, je ne me souviens de rien. Je brise, et passe.

Puis, il montra du doigt un point noir dans l’espace, C’était la terre.

- Va, dit-il. Le triste enfer
Touche à ce monde et là tu trouveras l’hiver.

Et l’ange Liberté, telle qu’un jet de fronde,
Partit, et vit grandir la sphère obscure et ronde,
Et, superbe, et bravant la bise et le mistral,
S’abattit sur la terre à l’endroit sépulcral.

Dans ce cercle effrayant que les glaciers enserrent,
Au fond du désert blême où jamais ne passèrent
Les Colomb, les Gama, ces lumineux sondeurs,
Dans ces obscurités et dans ces profondeurs
Sur la création par le néant conquises,
Au-delà des spitzbergs, des flots et des banquises,
Au centre de la brume où tout rayon finit,
Loin du jour, dans l’eau marbre et dans la mer granit,
Le sombre archange Hiver se dresse sur le pôle;
La trompette à la bouche et l’ombre sur l’épaule,
Il est là, sans qu’il sorte, au milieu de ce deuil,
De son clairon un souffle, un éclair de son oeil;
Il ne rêve pas même, étant un bloc de neige;
Les vents ailés, pareils à l’oiseau pris au piège,

Sont dans sa main, captifs du silence éternel;
Son oeil éteint regarde affreusement le ciel;
Le givre est dans ses os, le givre est sur sa tête;
L’horreur pétrifiée autour de lui s’arrête;
Sa sinistre attitude effare l’infini;
Dur, morne, il est glacé, c’est-à-dire banni;
La terre sous ses pieds, de ténèbres vêtue,
Se tait; il est la blanche et muette statue
Debout sur ce tombeau dans l’éternelle nuit;
Jamais une lueur, un mouvement, un bruit
N’effleurent le géant, seul sous de sombres voiles.
Quand, à tous ces cadrans qu’on nomme les étoiles,
L’heure du dernier jour sans terme et sans milieu
Sonnera, la clarté de la face de Dieu
Dégèlera le spectre, et tout à coup sa bouche
Se gonflera d’un pli formidable et farouche,
Et les mondes, esquifs roulant sans aviron,
Entendront l’ouragan sortir de son clairon.

Jamais l’essaim chantant des paradis n’approche
Cette âme du silence et du deuil, faite roche,
Geôlière des cieux morts et des firmaments noirs;
Ce brouillard gris, pareil à la chute des soirs,
Fait peur aux chérubins extasiés et tendres;
Les neiges, cette forme effroyable des cendres,
Font de cet horizon, dont l’aube hait le seuil,
Quelque chose qui semble un dedans de cercueil.

L’ange-vierge, à travers les glaciers blancs décombres,
Vola droit au géant, seul dans ces déserts sombres
Dont le jour ne veut pas et qu’il n’a pas reçus.
D’abord elle plana radieuse au-dessus
Du lourd colosse, avec les grands cercles de l’aigle;
Puis, s’approchant, lui dit: - Celui qui juge et règle,
Celui qui fait tout vivre et qui fait tout trembler,
M’a permis de venir ici; je veux parler
A quelqu’un d’effrayant dont seul tu connais l’antre;

O géant, ouvre-moi le gouffre, pour que j’entre.

Le Vieillard de la Nuit resta sourd et muet;
Pas un pli du brouillard pesant ne remuait
Dans cette immensité d’ombre et de solitude;
Seulement, sans que rien troublât son attitude,
Et sans qu’un mouvement fit voir qu’il entendît,
La glace sous ses pieds lentement se fendit.
Une crevasse étrange apparut; ouverture
D’on ne sait quelle horreur qui n’est plus la nature,
Bouche d’un puits livide et morne, escarpement
D’un abîme qui va plus loin que l’élément,
Vision du néant formidable, enfermée
Entre deux murs sans forme où rampe une fumée;
Deuil, brume; obscurité sans fond et sans contour.

La vierge Liberté, blanche et faite de jour,
Sentit le froid du lieu funeste où rien n’existe.
La désolation de ce gouffre était triste
Et profonde; et c’était l’infini de la nuit.

Elle ouvrit sa grande aile où l’azur des cieux luit,
Et, calme, descendit dans cette ombre terrible.

II

Or, en ce même instant, l’horreur indivisible,
Sans palpitation, sans souffle et sans échos,
La lugubre unité de tombe et de chaos
Qu’on nomme Enfer, voyait une chose inouïe.

Une forme, parfois soudain évanouie,
Puis renaissant, flottant au loin, puis s’abîmant,
Sorte de voile ayant un vague mouvement,
Glissait sous ce plafond qu’on prendrait pour un rêve.

Cette figure était la même que la grève
Du fleuve Seine avait vue errer autrefois,

Et jeter dans les vents sa redoutable voix.

Elle allait, comme l’algue erre... - A travers le voile
La fixité des yeux flamboyait, et la toile
Dont ce voile était fait, semblait avoir été Tissue avec du rêve et de l’obscurité.
Elle sondait l’enfer qui sans fin se prolonge;
Dans la stagnation des ténèbres, qui songe,
Et qui, farouche, a l’air d’un crime qui se tait,
Elle passait, tournait, descendait, remontait,
Prenant on ne sait quels plis informes pour guides,
Blême aux endroits obscurs, noire aux endroits livides.
Ainsi vole à travers les branches l’émouchet.
Parfois, comme quelqu’un qui cherche, elle touchait
Le mur prodigieux de la cave du monde.
Elle serpentait, lente et souple comme une onde,
Dans l’abîme où l’esprit lit ce mot triste: Absent.
Souvent elle laissait derrière elle en passant
Le bleuissement pâle et fugitif du soufre.

Soudain, comme sentant sous elle plus de gouffre,
Elle hésita, pencha ce qui semblait son front,
Et regarda.

La nuit qu’aucun jour n’interrompt
Gisait dans l’étendue effroyable et sublime.
Ce précipice émit de la mort, faite abîme.
On y sentait flotter du sépulcre dissous.
On voyait de la nuit sous la nuit; au-dessous
De l’ombre, dans un vide étrange, on voyait l’ombre.

Tout au fond remuait une apparence sombre;
Un fantôme entrevu, submergé, trouble, enfui,
Errant, rampant; c’était le Damné; c’était Lui.

On distinguait un front, des ailes, des vertèbres.

C’était l’archange larve, âme des lieux funèbres
Mêlant en lui de l’astre avec de l’animal;
C’était l’être sinistre en qui pense le mal;
C’était le criminel que le crime exécute;
C’était plus qu’un esprit tombé; c’était la Chute.

Le chaos se roulait sur l’ange en se gonflant;
Par intervalle, un ongle, un large crâne, un flanc
Rayé comme les lynx, les guêpes et les zèbres
Se dressait dans le spasme horrible des ténèbres
Ses écailles semblaient de fumée et de jais.
On croyait voir quelqu’un de ces vagues objets
Tortueux et flottants, dont on craint la piqûre.
Offrant tous les aspects dans une ébauche obscure,
Céleste, bestial, humain, vertigineux,
Laissant voir une face au milieu de ses nœuds,
Enflant des plis confus dans l’ombre où rien ne brille,
C’était par instants l’hydre et parfois la chenille.
Il se traînait, visqueux, blême, éclipsé, terni,
Reptile colossal du cloaque infini.

La caverne d’en bas de Tout; voilà ce gouffre.

C’était du vide en pleurs et du miasme qui souffre.
D’affreux rocs ébauchaient de noirs décharnements;
On croyait, dans la brume épaisse, par moments,
Entrevoir le cadavre effrayant de la Cause;
Tout était mort; Satan rôdait dans quelque chose D’informe et de hideux qui paraissait détruit;
De sorte qu’au milieu de la fétide nuit,
Tout étant noirceur, peste, épouvante, misère,
Lividité, ruine, il semblait nécessaire
Qu’au fond de cette tombe on vit ramper ce ver.

Si quelque ange, égaré dans l’éternel hiver,
Fouillant la profondeur du vide impénétrable,
Hélas! fût arrivé jusqu’à ce misérable,

Il n’eût rien retrouvé dans ce dieu de l’enfer
Du géant éclaireur qu’on nommait Lucifer.
L’abîme avait fini par entrer dans sa forme.
La condamnation, lourde, lépreuse, énorme,
S’était, sur cet archange à jamais rejeté,
Lentement déposée en monstruosité.
L’impur typhus sortait de son haleine amère.
Parfois, car ce brouillard est rempli de chimère,
Dans cette nuit que, seul, le vertige connaît,
Quelque ruissellement de lueur dessinait
Son dos ou la membrane immonde de son aile.
La rondeur de sa rouge et fatale prunelle
Semblait, dans la terreur de ces lieux inouïs,
Une goutte de flamme au fond du puits des nuits.
Sa face était le masque effaré du vertige.
A de certains moments, phases du noir prodige,
Un flamboiement, sortant de lui, glissait sur lui;
L’abîme aveugle était brusquement ébloui;
Alors, ô vision! à travers l’insondable,
A travers l’inconnu qui n’est pas regardable,
Dans l’étrange épaisseur du gouffre devenu
Glauque autour du colosse inexprimable et nu,
Satan apparaissait dans toute sa souffrance;
Le démon fulgurant, dans cette transparence,
Horrible, se tordait comme un éclair noyé.
Puis la nuit revenait, glacée et sans pitié;
La vaste cécité refluait sous la voûte
De l’éternel silence et l’engloutissait toute;
Et l’enfer, un instant montré, se refermant,
Lugubre, s’emplissait d’évanouissement.

III

La goule Isis-Lilith cria dans cette fosse:

— « Sois content. Tout périt.” (Oh; toute langue est fausse Comment rendre ces cris de spectre en mots humains?)
«Père, ce qu’une fois j’ai saisi dans mes mains,

«Moi, la Fatalité, jamais je ne le lâche.
«L'airain, le bois, la pierre, ont accompli leur tâche;
«L'airain s'est fait soldat, roi, prince, chevalier,
«Et le bois s'est fait juge et la pierre geôlier;
«Caïn a reparu sous trois formes, le glaive,
«Le gibet, la prison; et Babel se relève;
«Le sang coule, Jésus est mort, l'enfer prévaut;
«L'échafaud monstrueux du monde est le pivot;
«Tout croule; et dans le sang humain l'homme se lave;
«La guerre le fait brute et la prison esclave;
«L'homme subit le joug en sortant du combat;
«Et, tigre dans le cirque, est âne sous le bât.
«Sois content. Tout est fauve, impitoyable et triste.
«Tu règnes. Cependant un obstacle résiste;
«Dans cette fourmilière obscure un peuple luit;
«Il est le verbe, il est la voix, il est le bruit;
«Il agite au-dessus de la terre une flamme;
«Ce peuple étrange est plus qu'un peuple, c'est une âme;
«Ce peuple est l'Homme même; il brave avec dédain
«L'enfer, et, dans la nuit, cherche à tâtons l'Eden;
«Ce peuple, c'est Adam; mais Adam qui se venge,
«Adam ayant volé le glaive ardent de l'ange,
«Et chassant devant lui la Nuit et le Trépas;
«Il va; tous les progrès sont faits avec ses pas;
«Pas de haute action que ses mains ne consomment;
«Les autres nations l'admirent, et le nomment
«FRANCE, et ce nom combat dans l'ombre contre nous.
«Cette France est l'amour et la joie en courroux,
«C'est le bien qui rugit, l'idéal qui s'irrite;
«Tous nos prêtres, docteur qui ment, juge hypocrite,
«Faux juges, faux savants déformant les esprits,
«Nagent dans le crachat de son large mépris;
«Elle est volcan, torrent, flot, lave; elle bouillonne;
«Fière, elle a plus qu'Athène et plus que Babylone,
«Elle a Paris, la Ville univers, pour cerveau;
«Sur l'horizon humain, vaste, orageux, nouveau,
«Elle souffle la vie ainsi qu'une tempête.

«Mais écoute, ce peuple est vaincu: sur sa tête
«J’ai mis le joug; il est l’aube, je suis la fin.
«La pierre dont Abel fut frappé par Caïn,
«Gisait dans le sang, noire, inexorable, athée;
«Tu l’en souviens, je l’ai ramassée et jetée
«Près de la Seine, ainsi qu’une graine en un champ;
«Ton haleine, perçant le globe, et la touchant,
«L’a fait croître et grandir jusqu’au ciel, tour affreuse;
«Cette tour en cachots innombrables se creuse;
«Les rois en font leur antre; elle écrase Paris;
«Elle éteint sa lumière, elle étouffe ses cris;
«C’est là que toute chaîne aboutit et commence;
«Elle est le cadenas de l’esclavage immense;
«Elle est la glace au front de la France qui bout;
«Elle est la tombe; et l’ombre avec elle est debout.
«Elle garde en ses flancs le billot et la roue;
«Cette tour est la geôle où le vieux dogme écroue
«L’âme et la vie, et met l’esprit humain aux fers;
«Car Paris bâillonné fait muet l’univers;
«La prison de la France est le cachot du monde.
«Maintenant, c’est fini, tout râle et rien ne gronde;
«Ris, Satan. Plus que toi les hommes sont proscrits;
«La Bastille, implacable et dure, est sur Paris
«Comme l’épée avec la croix, sur les deux Romes.
«Puisque tous deux, moi spectre et toi démon, nous sommes
«Les damnés, sans repos, sans sommeil; les témoins;
«Puisque nous ne pouvons dormir, ayons du moins
«La joie âcre du mal dans notre fièvre horrible;
«A travers ton plafond comme à travers un crible,
«Toi, souffle la fureur aux hommes malheureux,
«Et moi je secouerai le suaire sur eux.
«Oui, ta vengeance étreint le monde, et le ravage.
«Dans ces trois cercles noirs, Haine, Meurtre, Esclavage,
«Le morne enfer tient l’homme à jamais enfermé.
«Un brouillard, d’ignorance et de douleur formé,
«Envahit lentement la terre comme une onde.
«O grand désespéré, dans ta tombe profonde,

«Sois content. Nuit, terreur, mort. Eclipse de Dieu.

Et le spectre, penchant ses prunelles de feu,
Regardant l'épaisseur qu'aucun frisson n'anime,
Attendit la réponse énorme de l'abîme.

Mais rien ne remua. Rien ne semblait vivant.

Le fantôme étonné regarda plus avant.

— Es-tu là? cria-t-il.

L'ombre resta muette.

Soudain la colossale et sombre silhouette
De l'ange monstre en qui le ciel s'évanouit,
Apparut, surnageant sur le flot de la nuit.

Sur son front formidable une molle fumée
Flottait, et sa paupière horrible était fermée.

O Prodige; Satan venait de s'endormir.

Une commotion de stupeur fit frémir
L'immuable nuée au fond du précipice.

L'antique patient de l'éternel supplice,
Pour souffrir à jamais à jamais rajeuni,
Lui, l'immense oeil de tigre ouvert sur l'infini,
Satan, le mal, l'horreur condensée en génie,
L'anxiété, le guet, la douleur, l'insomnie,
Dormait.

En même temps la terre eut un répit.
La lave folle aux flancs de l'Hékla s'assoupit;
Le fouet oublia l'âne; et l'ours, las de ses courses,
Vint boire avec la biche à la clarté des sources;

La rose parut belle aux dragons éblouis;
L’âme de Marc-Aurèle entra dans saint Louis;
Le plus grand, attendri, se pencha sur le moindre;
Le bonze, croyant voir de la lumière poindre,
Eut peur, chouette, et dit en frémissant: déjà!
La plante, qu’étouffait le roc, se dégagea;
Les mouches, qui pendaient aux toiles d’araignées,
S’envolèrent, de vie et d’aurore baignées;
Le poids se souleva des reins du portefaix;
Le vent s’arrêta court sur les flots stupéfaits,
Et fit grâce, et laissa rentrer la barque au havre;
L’enfant mort, dont la mère embrassait le cadavre,
Rouvrant les yeux, reprit le sein en souriant.

Satan dormait.
IV

Isis recula s’écriant:
— Il dort! Je souffre seule! Oh! je le hais.

Sa bouche
Ecarta presque, avec cette clameur farouche,
Le voile par ses yeux flamboyants traversé;
Puis les plis du linceul froid et toujours baissé
Tombèrent longs et droits, et Lilith immobile Songea.

Ce rêve obscur d’un spectre, la sibylle
Peut seule l’entrevoir quand dans son noir réduit
Elle médite, ayant sous son coude la nuit.

On entendait suinter le néant goutte à goutte.

Soudain Isis leva son regard vers la voûte,
Et, comme la fumée aux cimes de l’Etna,
Dans toute sa longueur son linceul frissonna;
Elle se dressa haute, épouvantable et pâle,

Et jeta, secouant son voile, avec le râle
Du tigre apercevant le lion importun,
Ce cri, prodigieux dans ce gouffre: Quelqu'un!

Un ange éblouissant les ailes déployées, Entrait.

Les profondeurs avec Satan broyées,
Tous ces monts que la fable appelle Othryx, Ossa,
Phlégon, et que le jet de soufre éclaboussa,
Monts frappés comme lui quand Dieu brisa son aile,
Et roulés dans sa chute avec lui pêle-mêle,
Les blocs cicatrisés et morts, les rocs maudits
Que Michel, soleil foudre, extermina jadis,
Crurent revoir l'éclair du grand coup de tonnerre.

Tout l'enfer tressaillit.

L'ange, extraordinaire,
Superbe, souriant, descendait.

Sa clarté
Sereine, blêmissait l'enfer épouvanté.
Le chaos éperdu montra sa pourriture.
On voyait au zénith du gouffre une ouverture
D'où tombait la lueur ineffable des cieux.
La géhenne s'ouvrit comme un oeil chassieux;
Tout le plafond, pendant en haillon formidable,
S'éclaira. L'on put voir le fond de l'insondable,
Et les recoins confus du grand cachot souillé;
L'abîme frissonna comme un voleur fouillé;
On distinguait les bords des précipices traîtres;
Les brouillards qui flottaient prirent des formes d'êtres
Monstrueux, qui semblaient ramper, et vivre là;
La menace qu'on sent dans les lieux noirs sembla
Plus fauve, et le visage irrité des décombres,
Le blanchissement vague et difforme des ombres,

Se hérissaient, montrant des aspects foudroyés;
Tous les renversements en arrière, effrayés,
Se dressaient; les granits remuaient sous la nue;
L'obscurité lugubre apparut toute nue;
On eût dit qu'elle ôtait l'ombre qui la revêt,
Que le masque inouï de l'enfer se levait,
Et qu'on voyait la face effroyable du vide.

L'ange continuait de descendre, splendide,
Dans cet effarement immense de la nuit.
V

Le vautour ne sait plus s'il poursuit ou s'il fuit
Quand il voit l'aigle au fond du nuage apparaître.

Isis, se retournant vers ce radieux être
Beau comme vesper, l'astre et l'ange avant-coureur,
Se dressa dans un geste effrayant dont l'horreur
S'accroissait sous le voile, et lui cria:

    - « Lumière,
«Qu'es-tu? Que nous veux-tu? N'avance pas. Arrière, «Arrière! Les rayons sont de ce gouffre exclus.
«Va-t'en. Ne donne pas un coup d'aile de plus, «Tremble! N'avance pas!"

 L'ange approchait, tranquille.

La rage alors sortit de l'abîme immobile;
On entendit, terreur! le cri du lieu muet;
L'enfer aboya.

    L'ombre écumait et huait.
L'ange approchait.

   Isis frémit. La pâle stryge,
Avec un mouvement de rêve et de prodige,

Se déploya debout tout entière devant
L’ange, majestueux comme le jour levant.

— « Mais réveille-toi donc, Satan; dit le fantôme.

Satan dormait.
VI

Ce fut, sous le ténébreux dôme,
Une attente sans nom quand l’abîme comprit
Que cette larve allait combattre cet esprit.

L’ange était une femme; il ne semblait pas même
S’apercevoir, du haut de sa fierté suprême,
Qu’il eût quitté l’azur où Dieu rayonne et vit.
Il venait.

Quand il fut près d’Isis, ce qu’on vit
Fut hideux, et l’horreur s’accrut, dans la mesure
De ce gouffre où Babel, le colosse masure,
Ne serait qu’un tesson et Chéops qu’un gravat.

A travers l’affreux voile, et sans qu’il se levât,
Une tête de mort, sombre masque de flamme,
Parut, et le linceul laissa voir sous sa trame
Un squelette de feu flottant dans ses plis noirs;
Deux yeux brillaient, ainsi que deux ardents miroirs,
Sur cet épouvantable et sinistre visage;
Isis ouvrit les bras, pour barrer le passage,
Ainsi que le gibet au haut du Golgotha;
Et l’apparition formidable jeta
Ces mots à l’ange, avec une clameur profonde:

«Je suis Lilith-Isis, l’âme noire du monde.
«Tremble! L’être inconnu, funeste, illimité,
«Que l’homme en frémissant nomme Fatalité,
«C’est moi. Tremble! Anankè, c’est moi. Tremble! Le voile, «C’est moi. Je suis la brume et tu n’es que l’étoile;

«Tu n’es qu’un des flambeaux possibles, moi je suis
«La noirceur éternelle et farouche des nuits;
«Je suis la bouche obscure et soufflant sur les phares;
«Tremble; malheur à toi, ver luisant qui t’égares!
«Qu’est-ce que tu viens faire ici? Va-t’en. Ces lieux
«Sont du ciel et du jour et du maître, oublieux.
«Qui que tu sois, malheur à ce qui s’aventure
«Dans la négation et dans la sépulture;
«Malheur à vous, fourmis volantes du ciel bleu,
«Malheur! si vous tentez l’ombre où l’athée est Dieu,
«L’antre où le démon tient le sceptre de la cendre;
«Si je poussais un cri, tu te sentirais prendre
«Par ce qu’on ne voit pas, l’invisible forêt
«Lâcherait son hibou, la nuit se lèverait
«Et t’envelopperait dans la grande aile onglée!
«Fuis, imbécile esprit! Fuis, lumière aveuglée!
«Vil oiseau de l’azur, rentre à ton firmament.
«Qu’est-ce que tu viens faire au fond du châtiment?
«Qu’est-ce que tu viens faire, ô frêle créature,
«Dans les profonds dessous de la sombre nature,
«Dans la Haine, au-delà des êtres, dans Satan?
«Quoi! la mouche entre où n’ose entrer Léviathan!
«Misérable ange, tremble et fuis! Va-t’en, atome!

L’ange sans dire un mot regarda le fantôme
Fixement, et gonfla sa lèvre avec dédain.
L’étoile qu’elle avait au front se mit soudain
A grandir, emplissant d’aurore l’ombre obscure.
O vision terrible et sublime! à mesure
Que l’astre grandissait, la larve décroissait;
L’ardent grossissement de l’étoile poussait
Lilith-Isis vers l’ombre, et mêlait à la fange
Le fantôme rongé par la clarté de l’ange;
Les rayons dévoraient l’affreux linceul flottant;
L’étoile aux feux divins, plus large à chaque instant,
Météore d’abord, puis comète et fournaise,

Fondait le monstre ainsi qu’un glaçon dans la braise.
Quand l’astre fut soleil, le spectre n’était plus.

VII

Tout fit silence au fond du gouffre sans reflux,
Et rien ne troubla plus l’immobilité morte.

Comme le goëmon que le flot berce et porte,
Satan dormait toujours.

Dans la nappe de nuit
Où s’enfonçait son corps de chimère construit,
Ce qu’on entrevoyait, c’était sa forme humaine.

Semblable au flocon blanc qu’un vent dans l’ombre amène,
L’ange arrêta sur lui ses ailes qui flottaient,
Et pleura.

L’on eût dit que ses larmes étaient
De la lumière en pleurs coulant de deux étoiles.
Comme la tarentule au centre de ses toiles,
Le vaste malheureux et le vaste méchant
Palpitait; et la vierge immortelle, penchant
L’escarboucle allumée au sommet de sa tète,
Tendit les bras vers l’ange englouti dans la bête,
Et lui parla, planant et pourtant à genoux;
Et l’accent de sa voix divine était plus doux
Que l’incarnation vague et sombre des sphères.

«O toi; je viens. je pleure. Ici, dans les misères,
«Dans le deuil, dans l’enfer où l’astre se perdit,
«Je viens te demander une grâce, ô maudit!
«Ici, je ne suis plus qu’une larme qui brille.
«Ce qui survit de toi, c’est moi. Je suis ta fille.
«Sens-tu que je suis là? Me reconnais-tu, dis?
«M’entends-tu? C’est du fond des divins paradis, «C’est de la profondeur lumineuse et sacrée,

«C’est de ce grand ciel clair où vit celui qui crée,
«Que je viens, éperdue, à toi, l’ange enfoui!
«J’ai crié vers Dieu; Dieu formidable a dit Oui;
«Il me laisse descendre au fond des nuits difformes,
«Et, pour que je te parle, il permet que tu dormes.
«Car, Père, pour tes yeux, hélas, le firmament
«Ne peut plus s’entr’ouvrir qu’en songe seulement!
«Oh! toute cette nuit, c’est affreux! Père, Père!
«Quoi! toi dans ce cachot! Quoi! toi dans ce repaire!
«Toi puni; toi mauvais! toi, l’aîné des élus!
«Te voilà donc si bas que Dieu ne te voit plus!,
«L’enfer! l’océan Nuit! Pas de flot, pas d’écume,
«Pas de souffle. Partout le Noir. C’est, dans la brume,
«Ta respiration lugubre que j’entends.
«La longueur de ton deuil dépassera le temps;
«Le chiffre de tes maux dépassera le nombre.
«Les soleils me disaient: prends garde, il est dans l’ombre!
«Et moi j’ai dit: je veux voir le désespéré.
«Hélas, l’astre du ciel te hait, la fleur du pré
«Te craint, autour de toi tous les êtres ensemble
«Frémissent, les clartés frissonnent, l’azur tremble,
«L’infini te redoute et t’abhorre: Eh bien, moi,
«Je t’apporte en amour tout cet immense effroi!

«Je viens te prier, toi qu’on proscrit. Toi qu’on souille, «Je viens avec des pleurs te laver. J’agenouille
«La lumière devant ton horreur, et l’espoir
«Devant les coups de foudre empreints sur ton front noir;
«Entends-moi dans ton rêve à travers l’anathème.
«Ne te courrouce point, père, puisque je t’aime!
«Le blessé ne hait pas la main qui le soutient;
«L’affamé n’a jamais maudit celui qui vient
«Disant: Voici du pain et de l’eau. Bois et mange.

«Oh! quand j’étais mêlée à tes ailes, quel ange
«Que Satan, dans l’aurore et dans l’immensité!
«Dieu se nommant Bonté, tu t’appelais Beauté.

«Ta chevelure était blonde et surnaturelle,
«Et frissonnait splendide, et laissait derrière elle «Une inondation de rayons dans la nuit!
«L’abîme était par toi comme par Dieu conduit.
«Un jour les éléments te prirent pour Lui-même;
«Comme tu te dressais avec ton diadème
«Sur le ciel, de ton lustre effrayant envahi,
«L’air dit: Emmanuel; et l’onde: Adonaï;
«Ton char faisait jaillir des mondes sous sa roue.
«Près de toi, Raphaël, Gabriel, qui secoue
«Un météore épars en flammes sur son front,
«Michel, dont la clarté jamais ne s’interrompt,
«Ithuriel, qui mêle aux rayons les dictames,
«Stellial, Azraël, porte-flambeau des âmes,
«N’étaient plus que l’essaim confus de la forêt;
«Un resplendissement de blancheur t’entourait;
«Et l’aube en te voyant s’écriait: je suis noire;
«Tu passais au milieu d’un ouragan de gloire;
«Les éthers t’attendaient pour devenir azurs;
«Les univers naissaient, prodigieux et purs,
«Avec des millions de fleurs et d’étincelles,
«Dans un rythme marqué par tes battements d’ailes;
«Tu faisais, en fixant sur eux ton oeil charmant,
«Reculer les soleils dans l’éblouissement;
«Tu flamboyais, candeur et force; un lys archange!
«Comme après le héros s’avance la phalange,
«A ta suite marchaient les constellations;
«L’ombre pleurait d’amour quand nous la traversions;
«La nuit, tu te levais dans un triomphe d’astres;
«Et les dômes divins et les sacrés pilastres,
«Et les éternels cieux et l’éden nouveau-né,
«T’adoraient dans ta joie immense, infortuné!

«Hélas, dès qu’en ce bagne, où nul regard ne plonge,
«Tu fus précipité, Satan, tu fis ce songe
«De te venger, démon géant, sur l’infini!
«Prés de l’ange proscrit tu mis l’homme banni;

«Tu fis tomber Adam et tu fis déchoir Eve;
«Tu voulus frapper Dieu dans le germe et la sève,
«Dans l’enfant, dans le nid des bois, dans l’alcyon;
«Seul, à jamais muré sous la création,
«Tu devins, dans l’horreur, le grand rêveur funeste;
«Dans les vierges forêts tu fis sortir la peste
«De l’épaisseur charmante et terrible des fleurs;
«Avec les voluptés tu forgeas les douleurs;
«Tu te mêlas à l’être auguste qui gouverne;
«L’espace se remplit d’un esprit de caverne;
«Tu dis à l’Eternel: à nous deux maintenant!
«Tu souillas l’infini rien qu’en l’espionnant.
«A travers l’océan tu soufflas le naufrage;
«Captif, tu pénétras la terre de ta rage;
«Le dessous ténébreux de la vie appartint
«A ta vengeance, et fut par ton haleine atteint;
«Tu mordis les tombeaux; tu mordis les racines;
«Tu mêlas aux parfums les herbes assassines;
«Tu mis partout le monstre à côté de la loi;
«Une émanation de nuit sortit de toi,
«Et tu déshonoras l’univers magnanime.
«Dieu rayonnait le bien, tu rayonnas le crime.
«Tu fis d’en bas, avec tes miasmes, des démons;
«Tu pris les instincts vils et les impurs limons
«Et tu créas avec cette fange les traîtres,
«Les lâches, les cruels; et tu fis dieux et maîtres
«Des êtres de l’abîme et des esprits forçats;
«Tu poussas les Nemrods aux guerres, tu dressas
«Les Caïphes sanglants contre les Christs sublimes;
«Et souvent là-haut, nous, les anges, nous pâlîmes
«D’entendre dans le deuil les prêtres et les rois
«Rire, et de voir grandir le glaive énorme en croix.

«A quoi cela t’a-t-il servi? plus de misère;
«Voilà tout. Ton éclair ronge et brûle ta serre;
«Ton empoisonnement du monde a commencé
«Par toi-même, ô géant d’un combat insensé.

«Le mal ne fait pas peur à Dieu; Dieu se courrouce,
«Et frappe. Tu croyais que la vengeance est douce;
«Elle est amère. Hélas! le crime est châtiment.
«La croissance du mal augmente ton tourment;
«Le mal qu'on fait souffrir s'ajoute au mal qu'on souffre;
«Ta lave au fond des nuits sur toi retombe en soufre;
«Et toi-même on t'entend par moments l'avouer.
«Le supplice de Tout sur toi vient échouer.
«Tu fais tout chanceler, tout trembler sur sa base,
«Tout crouler, et c'est toi que ton effort écrase;
«La Terre est sous ton joug, tu règnes à présent.
«Et te voilà sous plus d'épouvante gisant;
«Te voilà plus difforme, et ton cœur d'airain saigne!

«Mais, Satan, il faut bien qu'à la fin on te plaigne,
«Tu dois avoir besoin de voir quelqu'un pleurer,
«Je viens à toi!

Je viens gémir, luire, éclairer,
«T'ôter du moins le poids de la terrestre chaîne,
«Et guérir à ton flanc la sombre plaie humaine.
«Mon père, écoute-moi. Pour baume et pour calmant,
«Pour mêler quelque joie à ton accablement,
«Tu n'as jusqu'à cette heure, en ton âpre géhenne,
«Essayé que la nuit, la vengeance et la haine.
«O Titan misérable, essaye enfin le jour!
«Laisse planer le cygne à ta place, ô vautour!
«Laisse un ange sorti de tes ailes répandre
«Sur les fléaux un souffle irrésistible et tendre.
«Faisons lever Caïn accroupi sur Abel.
«Assez d'ombre et de crime! Empêchons que Babel «Pousse encor plus avant ses hideuses spirales.
«Oh! laisse-moi rouvrir les portes sépulcrales
«Que, du fond de l'enfer, sur l'âme tu fermais!
«Laisse-moi mettre l'homme en liberté. Permets
«Que je tende la main à l'univers qui sombre.
«Laisse-moi renverser la montagne de l'ombre;

«Laisse-moi foudroyer l’infâme tour du mal!

«Permets que, grâce à moi, dans l’azur baptismal
«Le monde rentre, afin que l’Eden reparaisse!
«Hélas! Sens-tu mon cœur tremblant qui te caresse?
«M’entends-tu sangloter dans ton cachot? Consens
«Que je sauve les bons, les purs, les innocents;
«Laisse s’envoler l’âme et finir la souffrance.
«Dieu me fit Liberté; toi, fais-moi Délivrance!
«Oh! ne me défends pas de jeter dans les cieux
«Et les enfers, le cri de l’amour factieux;
«Laisse-moi prodiguer à la terrestre sphère
«L’air vaste, le ciel bleu, l’espoir sans borne, et faire
«Sortir du front de l’homme un rayon d’infini.
«Laisse-moi sauver tout, moi ton côté béni!
«Consens! Oh! moi qui viens de toi, permets que j’aille
«Chez ces vivants, afin d’achever là bataille
«Entre leur ignorance, hélas, et leur raison,
«Pour mettre une rougeur sacrée à l’horizon,
«Pour que l’affreux passé dans les ténèbres roule,
«Pour que la terre tremble et que la prison croule,
«Pour que l’éruption se fasse, et pour qu’enfin
«L’homme voie, au-dessus des douleurs, de la faim,
«De la guerre, des rois, des dieux, de la démence,
«Le volcan de la joie enfler sa lave immense!

VIII

Tandis que cette vierge adorable parlait,
Pareille au sein versant goutte à goutte le lait
A l’enfant nouveau-né qui dort, la bouche ouverte,
Satan, toujours flottant comme une herbe en eau verte,
Remuait dans le gouffre, et semblait par moment
A travers son sommeil frémir éperdument;
Ainsi qu’en un brouillard l’aube éclôt, puis s’efface,
Le démon s’éclairait, puis pâlissait; sa face
Etait comme le champ d’un combat ténébreux;
Le bien, le mal, luttaient sur son visage entr’eux

Avec tous les reflux de deux sombres armées;
Ses lèvres se crispaient, sinistrement fermées;
Ses poings s’entreheurtaient, monstrueux et noircis;
Il n’ouvrait pas les yeux, mais sous ses lourds sourcils
On voyait les lueurs de cette âme inconnue;
Tel le tonnerre fait des pourpres sous la nue;
L’ange le regardait, les mains jointes; enfin
Une clarté, qu’eût pu jeter un séraphin,
Sortit de ce grand front tout brûlé par les fièvres;
Plus difficilement que deux rochers, ses lèvres
S’écartèrent, un souffle orageux souleva
Son flanc terrible, et l’ange entendit ce mot: Va!

LIVRE TROISIÈME - LA PRISON

La Bastille

I

LES SQUELETTES

La tour est âpre et noire, et, du haut jusqu’en bas,
Elle est un instrument de supplice; un étage
Fait agoniser moins ou souffrir davantage;
Changer de cabanon, c’est changer de tourment;
Le captif, dans la cave, expire lentement;
Sous le toit, dans un trou qu’on nomme la calotte,
Il étouffe en juillet, en décembre il grelotte;
Sous plus ou moins d’horreur l’homme se sent plier
À mesure qu’il monte ou descends l’escalier;
Nulle part le repos, l’air frais, la clarté pure.
Chaque chambre a la forme utile à la torture;
Ici l’on gèle; ici l’on brûle; ici l’on meurt.

•

Dans ce lieu morne,
La minute est bourreau, l’heure est épouvantail.

Une horloge apparaît. Au-dessus du portail.
Autour du cadran triste, une chaîne est sculptée,
Cercle affreux, chaîne énorme à lier Prométhée;
Elle entoure le temps, et, monstrueuse à voir,
Saisit par ses deux bouts, au bas du fronton noir,
Une statue étrange et morne, prisonnière
Qui grince et fait effort pour sortir de la pierre;
La statue a deux fronts, l’un jeune et l’autre vieux;
Sur le cadran, rouillé par l’hiver pluvieux,
L’aiguille, résumant dans une heure une vie,
Par la chaîne toujours à tous ses pas suivie,

Part du jeune homme et vient aboutir au vieillard.
Lugubre, elle paraît marcher sous un brouillard;
On croit voir l’affreux doigt de la bastille sombre
Montrant ce qu’elle fait du prisonnier dans l’ombre,
Et disant - C’est ici que les pas sont tremblants,
Et que les cheveux noirs deviennent cheveux blancs.

Effroyable prison qui n’a point de mémoire!
La geôle, au dehors noire est aveugle au dedans;
Elle prend! sans les voir, des hommes dans ses dents
Et, sans s’informer d’eux, les mâche et les dévore.

En entrant dans ces murs terribles, où, pour eux,
Les heures maintenant, hélas, seront si lentes,
Les captifs sont inscrits sur des feuilles volantes;
Pas de livre d’écrou. Tout est fait de façon
Que rien ne laisse trace en cette âpre prison,
Et que le nom s’y perde en même temps que l’homme.
Quel est ce prisonnier, et comment on le nomme,
Après dix ou vingt ans, personne ne le sait;
Pas même lui. La dalle ignore ce que c’est,
Le carcan le saisit au cou sans le connaître,
Et le ver, qui déjà goûte à sa chair peut-être,
Ne peut dire son nom à la taupe qui fuit.
Hier, aujourd’hui, demain, ne font qu’un. Plus un bruit.
L’homme, qui maintenant va mourir goutte à goutte,
Une fois qu’il a mit le pied sous cette voûte,
Sent au-dessus de lui son propre effacement.
Sa vie est à jamais mêlée a ce ciment.
Le fil qui nous rattache au monde dont nous sommes,
Et lie à travers l’ombre un homme aux autres hommes,
Se brise ici. Sans air, sans jour, sans point d’appui,
L’homme le sent flotter rompu derrière lui.

Un vivant n’est plus là qu’un rêve dans un gouffre.

Entrer là, c’est entrer dans de l’oubli. L’on souffre,
On rampe, on saigne, on râle, on crie; on ne sait pas.
Le captif va, vient, tremble; il fait de vagues pas,
Sent à son pied sa chaîne et s’arrête farouche,
Boit à sa cruche, mord à son pain noir, se couche,
Se lève, se rendort, tressaille, et, réveillé,
Dit: Où suis-je? que suis-je? et tâte un mur mouillé.

Il ne sait plus qu’il souffre, il ne sent plus qu’il pleure;
Il semble à ce damné qu’il s’enfonce à chaque heure
Plus bas dans la prison, et que, dans lui vivant,
La prison chaque jour pénètre plus avant;
La Bastille le tient; hagard, il s’incorpore
A cet épouvantable et hideux madrépore;
Morne, il constate, au froid toujours croissant du fer,
La transformation de son bagne en enfer;
Il croit que l’heure est morte au-dessus de sa tête,
Et que l’éternité dans son cachot s’arrête.
Est-ce que son œil voit? est-ce que son cœur bat?
Il s’accoude des mois entiers sur son grabat,
Ecoutant dans un coin filer quelque araignée.
Son âme se détache et lui semble éloignée;
Il croit heurter sa bière en touchant à son lit;
L’évanouissement par degrés le remplit;
Il ne peut plus fixer un temps, compter un nombre;
La pierre devient nuit, lui-même il devient ombre,
Et sent croître, à travers la stupeur de l’ennui,
Autour de lui la tombe et le fantôme en lui.

•

O triste genre humain! Sur tous les échafauds
Tant de sang fut versé dans les deux hémisphères
Que du fer qu’on en eût tiré l’on eût pu faire
Hélas! tous les barreaux de toutes les prisons!

•

...le cabanon prépare à l’échafaud.
Le patient commence au captif; les supplices
Ont pour aide la geôle obscure, et pour complices
La cruche d’eau, l’ennui, la paille, le barreau;
Qu’est-ce que les verrous? des valets du bourreau.

L’énorme tour a douze étages de cachots,
Noirs, hideux, et selon la saison, froids ou chauds;
Des fournaises en juin, en janvier des glacières;
Chaque cellule est basse, et l’on voit des poussières
Qui jadis ont vécu, dans l’ombre des piliers;
Des squelettes, dans l’angle obscur des escaliers,
Sont adossés au mur, ayant au cou des chaînes;
On entend le vent fuir dans les forêts prochaines,
Et les captifs au fond du donjon sont pensifs;
Les portes sont de fer, les verrous sont massifs,
Et le trousseau de clefs fait la charge d’un homme.
Le roi, qui des deniers du peuple est économe,
A quinze ou vingt palais à meubler, de façon
Qu’il n’a pas de quoi mettre un lit dans la prison;
Aussi les prisonniers couchent-ils sur la pierre.
Cent vingt archers du guet, à la longue rapière,
Graves, muets, portant la jaquette à grands plis
Sous le hoqueton bleu semé de fleurs-de-lys,
Veillent du haut en bas, six devant chaque porte.

Oh! qu’elle avait commis de crimes, la géante!

II

CAMILLE ET LUCILE

III

LA PRISE DE LA BASTILLE

DÉNOUEMENT

SATAN PARDONNÉ

Le sanglot de Satan dans l’ombre continue.

Satan sous sa voûte

Je me dresse, marqué par l’effroyable trait:
Dernier degré de l’horreur! — L’amour me hait.
DIEU PARLE DANS L’INFINI

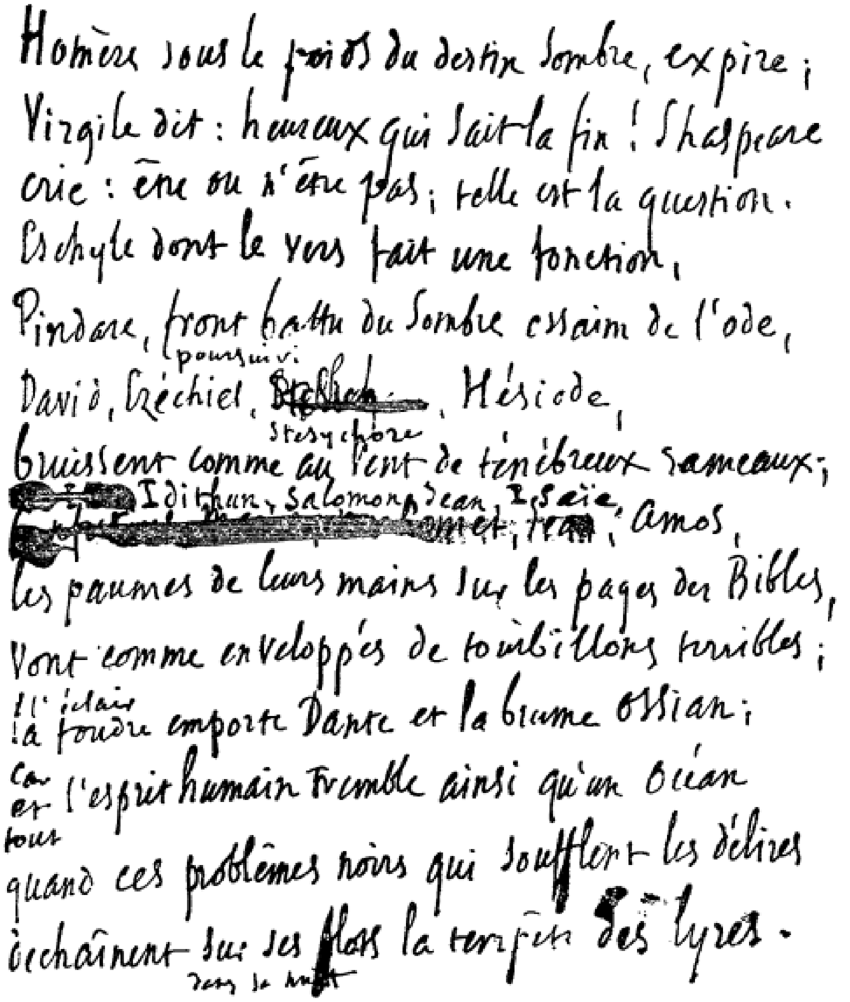
Non, je ne te hais pas

Un ange est entre nous; ce qu’elle a fait te compte;
L’homme, enchaîné par toi, par elle est délivré.
Ô Satan, tu peux dire à présent: je vivrai!
Viens, la prison détruite abolit la géhenne!
Viens, l’ange Liberté c’est ta fille et la mienne.
Cette paternité sublime nous unit.
L’archange ressuscite et le démon finit,
Et j’efface la nuit infâme, et rien n’en reste;
Satan est mort, renais, ô Lucifer céleste!
Remonte hors de l’ombre avec l’aurore au front!
..

À écrire au verso de la dernière page
Ô mondes du dehors, Dieu rayonne pour tous,
Vos mystères profonds ne regardent que vous.

TOUTE LA LYRE

This collection of poems was published posthumously in 1888. It includes both poems previously published and uncollected, dating from 1854 to 1875, the most productive period of Hugo's poetry.



Homère sous le poids du destin sombre, expire ;
Virgile dit : heureux qui sait la fin ! Shakspeare crie : être ou n'être pas ; telle est la question.
Eschyle dont le vers fait une fonction,
Pindare, front battu du sombre essaim de l'ode,
poursuivi
David, Ezéchiel, ~~[illegible]~~, Hésiode, Stésichore
bruissent comme au vent de ténébreux rameaux ;
Idithun, Salomon, Jean, Isaïe, [illegible] ~~Comet~~, ~~Jean~~, Amos,
les paumes de leurs mains sur les pages des Bibles,
vont comme enveloppés de tourbillons terribles ;
l'éclair
la foudre emporte Dante et la brume Ossian ; car et tout
l'esprit humain tremble ainsi qu'un océan
quand ces problèmes noirs qui soufflent les délires déchaînent sur ses flots la tempête des lyres.
dans la nuit

Toute la lyre — an original manuscript

TABLE DES MATIERES

TOUTE LA LYRE: INTRODUCTION
I Les nuages volaient
II LES ÉVANGÉLISTES
III Comme leurs yeux troublés
V Du songe universel
VI INSCRIPTION
VII Quand Auguste mourut
VIII Quand le vieux monde dut périr
IX ÈRE DES CÉSARS
X Le Mausolée est beau
XI INVOCATION DU MAGE CONTRE LES DEUX ROIS
XII Fuyez au mont inabordable!
XIII Le calife a puni les gens de la montagne
XV LE PASSAGE DES ÊTRES SOMBRES
XVI Le Campéador
XVII Muse!
XVIII Éole allait criant:
XIX LE VIEUX DE BRISACH
XX La bête regarda l'homme
XXI Batailles!
XXII HUGO DUNDAS
XXIII ÉCRIT SUR LE MUR DE VERSAILLES À CÔTÉ DU CORDON DE SONNETTE DE LOUIS XIV
XXIV LA PEAU DE TIGRE
XXV Oui, duc, nous sommes beaux
XXVI Les révolutions,
XXVII Quinze cents ans
XXVIII TALAVEYRA RÉCIT DE MON PÈRE
XXIX ÉCRIT SUR UN LIVRE DU JEUNE MICHEL NEY
XXX À UN SOLDAT DEVENU VALET
XXXI Qu'était-ce que l'enfant?
XXXII Au bord des flots,
XXXIII LES DEUX CÔTÉS DE L'HORIZON
XXXIV Elle prend un miroir,

XXXV BALMA
XXXVI Les mères
XXXVII J’ai vu
XXXVIII ÉCRIT AU BAS D’UN PORTRAIT DE MADAME LA DUCHESSE D’ORLÉANS
XXXIX Ayant vu le massacre immense
XL Ô Georges
II Je ne vois pas pourquoi
III LETTRE
IV Quand la lune apparaît
V Une tempête
VI Nous marchons;
VII Le matin,
VIII Seigneur,
IX ÉGLOGUE
X Le soir calme et profond
XI On devient attentif et rêveur
XII David, le marbre est saint,
XIII Je me fais paysan comme eux.
XIV AUX CHAMPS
XV Nature!
XVI Un monument romain
XVII Les paupières des fleurs,
XVIII L’ÉTÉ À COUTANCES
XIX À GUERNESEY
XX GROS TEMPS LA NUIT
XXI DANS MA STALLE
XXII C’est l’heure
XXIII SOIR
XXIV Nuit,
XXV QUAND NOUS QUITTIONS AVRANCHES
XXVI
XXVII JARDINS DE LA MARGRAVE SIBYLLE
XXVIII Seul dans tes grands bois
XXIX CE QUE C’EST QUE DE SORTIR EN EMPORTANT UN NUMÉRO DU CONSTITUTIONNEL
XXX Seul au fond d’un désert,

XXXI Cette création,
XXXII Ne vous croyez ni grand,
XXXIII Dans les ravins
XXXIV NUIT
XXXV L’aube est moins claire,
XXXVI L’espace est noir
XXXVIIÔ poète!
XXXVIII Dans cette ville où rien ne rit
XXXIX À DOS D’ÉLÉPHANT
XL SOIR
XLI UN DESSIN D’ALBERT-DORER
XLII Qui donc mêle au néant de l’homme vicieux
XLIII O RUS?
XLIV C’est l’hiver.
XLVI UNITÉ
XLVII Ô champs mystérieux!
XLVIII ARRIVÉE
XLIX Chacun choisit un homme,
I EFFETS DE RÉVEIL
II Quand l’enfant nous regarde,
III LA FEMME
V Farouche austérité
VI Si le sort t’a fait riche,
VII À CEUX QUI FONT DE PETITES FAUTES
VIII Tandis qu’on ne sait quoi d’étrange
IX Quant à l’obscurité
X L’homme est faible;
XI Voilà l’homme.
XIII Ah! la philosophie est vorace!
XIV Parce que tu ne sais,
XV Qui donc passe au-dessus de nous
XVI Rends-tu de temps en temps des services à Dieu?
XVII Ceux par qui le malheur
XVIII L’espoir
XIX Y pensez-vous.?
XX Ce que vous appelez
XXI Jeunes gens,

XXII ÉPITAPHES D’ENFANTS
XXIII LA GUERRE QUI EST DANS L’AVENIR IMPORTUNE LES DEVINS
XXIV Ah! prenez garde
XXV Un homme est innocent;
XXVI Oh.! que l’homme n’est rien
XXVII À PAUL M.
XXVIII Vous êtes, ô jeune homme,
XXIX À mesure qu’au loin s’éclipse
XXX NUIT
XXXI L’homme croit avoir fait un pas
XXXII Les écrivains
XXXIII EN SORTANT D’UNE ÉGLISE
XXXIV Quand l’honneur est tombé
XXXV CONTEMPLATION, CONSOLATION
XXXVI Là-haut,
XXXVII Une nuit je rêvais,
XXXVIII Je rêve une nature innocente
XXXIX DANS LE CIMETIÈRE DE ...
XL Un jour que je songeais,
XLI Oh dis!
XLII INSCRIPTION DE SÉPULCRE
XLIII Sombres aboyeurs des ténèbres,
XLIV Nous sommes deux familles d’hommes
XLV UMBRA
XLVI DIEU SUIT SA VOIE
XLVII Qui sait
XLVIII Tu veux comprendre Dieu,
XLIX La haine,
LI À CEUX QUI SONT PETITS
LII Ô gloire,
LIII LE CHOEUR
LIV LE MAL
LVII Souffrance,
LVIII Ne laissez rien partir
LIX Homme, les avatars
LX Qu’est-ce que ta sagesse

LXI L’homme étreint dans ses bras
LXII Quelle idée as-tu donc de la mort,
LXIII Les anges du Seigneur
LXIV Homme, pourquoi nier
LXV Au nom de ce qui vit,
LXVI Vous dont la part est la meilleure,
LXVII Le calcul, c’est l’abîme.
LXVIII Collabore avec Dieu;
LXIX Des sages?
LXX MATÉRIALISME ET SPIRITUALISME
I Autrefois,
II Deux beaux enfants,
III Sur la coupe
IV Toujours l’esprit avance
VI L’expiation triste
VII Quand le poète est las,
VIII Quand tout un continent tremble
IX Aux heures où le ciel est noir,
XI Quand tu marches,
XII Honte au vain philosophe,
XIII À UN GRAND COMÉDIEN
XIV Lorsque j’étais enfant,
XV L’hexamètre,
XVI Doux poètes, chantez!
XVII CHANSON
XVIII Pour nous, nouveaux venus,
XIX BONHEUR D’ADMIRER
XX À PROPOS D’UNE GRILLE DE BON GOÛT
XXI Shakspeare alors,
XXII Les instruments sont pleins de la voix
XXIII ÉCRIT SUR UN VIRGILE
XXIV Dans le monde meilleur
XXV J’étais petit
XXVI LE RIRE
XXVIII La nature, éternelle mère,
XXIX Thiers raille Mazzini;
XXX Quand ce charmant petit poète gracieux

XXXI Oui, le Génie a ses athées.
XXXII C’est une loi: Veuillot existe,
XXXIII À UN POËTE
XXXIV LE DEVOIR
XXXV POURQUOI LES GRANDS HOMMES SONT MALHEUREUX
XXXVI À THÉOPHILE GAUTIER
I À LOUIS B.
II Admire, enfant!
III À UNE RELIGIEUSE
IV À cette heure indécise
V La France, ô mes enfants,
VI L’autre jour,
VII Vous êtes bien des fois venus
VIII À OL
IX Vénus rit toute nue
X A cette heure de nuit
XI Le couchant flamboyait
XII Virgile, en ce beau mois
XIII Le bien germe parfois
XIV Mon âme était en deuil;
XV JE TRAVAILLE
XVI Tu me dis Finis
XVII Quand je marelle à mon but,
XVIII Ô toi qui m’as maudit
XIX À UN ENFANT
XX Je marchais;
XXI J’ai mené parfois dure vie,
XXII À DEUX ENNEMIS AMIS
XXIII D.G.D.G.
XXIV UN SOIR
XXV LETTRE DE L’EXILÉ ARRIVANT DANS LE DÉSERT
XXVI Ô doux êtres!
XXVII À l’heure où
XXVIII J’aspire à m’enfouir sous les arbres
XXIX À JEANNE
XXX Si dans ce grand Paris,
XXXI CALOMNIÉ

XXXII SOUFFREZ, ô PRÉCURSEURS!
XXXIII L'aquilon change,
XXXIV AVE, DEA; MORITURUS TE SALUTAT
XXXV ENVOI
XXXVI Pygmée et Myrmidon,
XXXVIII Je ne m'arrête pas,
XXXIX Je vais dans la fureur du gouffre,
XL Omnia vidit
XLI Vous demandez à quoi je rêve?
XLII Vous qui, vainqueurs,
XLIV Ah! vous faites du froid
XLV La haute honnêteté,
XLVI L'enfant est très petit
XLVII Je suis enragé.
XLVIII ÉCHAPPÉ À L'ERREUR
XLIX APRÈS L'HIVER
LI Le vieillard
LII Tu rentreras comme Voltaire
I Lorsque ma main frémit
II Oh! si vous existez, mon ange,
III Vois-tu, mon ange,
IV Ce qu'en vous voyant si belle
V Vous m'avez éprouvé
VI Sais-tu ce que Dieu dit
VII Certe,
VIII ROMAN EN TROIS SONNETS
IX CHANSON
X HERMINA
XI Oh! la femme et l'amour!
XII J'étais le songeur qui pense
XIII L'AMOUR VIENT EN LISANT CHANSON
XIV Elle vit
XV Vous ne la fuyez pas, oiseaux,
XVI COMMENCEMENT D'UNE ILLUSION
XVII TRUMEAU
XVIII TOUTE LA VIE D'UN COEUR
XIX L'amour n'est plus

XX Or nous cueillions ensemble
XXI Il était une fois un caporal
XXII Un coup de vent passa,
XXIII QUINZE-VINGT
XXIV J’ai toujours redouté
XXV Qu’est-ce que cette année
XXVI DANS UN VIEUX CLOÎTRE
XXVII J’avais dans ma mansarde
XXVIII VIRGILE DANS L’OMBRE
XXIX Oui, je suis le regard
XXX N’est-ce pas, mon amour,
XXXI Je ne viens pas vous voir
XXXII L’heure sonne.
XXXIII À DEUX SOEURS
XXXIV UN JOUR QU’ELLE M’AVAIT DIT:
XXXV NI VEA NON FRIGIDA
XXXVI À MADAME LA PRINCESSE SOPHIE GALITZINE
XXXVII À MADAME J.
XXXVIII Je ne sais pas pourquoi
XXXIX PENDANT QU’ELLE DORT
XL LA FORÊT
XLI CHANSON
XLII J’étais un lycéen honnête;
XLIII FURENS FOEMINA
XLIV Cela la désennuie;
XLV CHANSON DE CELLE QUI N’A PAS PARLÉ
XLVI Ô toi d’où me vient ma pensée
XLVII DANSE EN ROND
XLVIII Oh! dis, te souviens-tu
XLIX Garde à jamais
L Ah çà mais! quelle idée as-tu,
LI À UNE IMMORTELLE
LII Horace,
LIII CHANSON
LIV À force de rêver
LV LES PÉRIPÉTIES DE L’IDYLLE
LVI Je pressais ton bras

LVII AU BAL
LVIII Nous étions, elle et moi,
LIX Aujourd’hui Galatée
LX DANGER D’ALLER DANS LES BOIS
LXI Tous deux
LXII L’OUTRAGE PEUT ÊTRE AUSSI DANS LA CARESSE
LXIII Son chien est couché
LXIV Quand deux cœurs en s’aimant
I LA BLANCHE AMINTE
II LE PRINCE FAINÉANT
III CE QUE GEMMA PENSE D’EMMA
IV VASE DE CHINE À LA PETITE CHINOISE Y-HANG-TSEI
V MAUVAISES LANGUES
VI Danseuse, écoute-moi.
VII LE PORCHE DE SAINT-LUC
VIII CHANSON
IX Oui, fût-on Homère,
X EN AFRIQUE
XI Quiconque est amoureux
XII À l’âge des bergeries,
XIII BRUIT DE GUITARE
XIV LA LUNE
XV Le marquis de Bade a deux cornes
XVI Veux-tu vivre,
XVIII Il avait le front bas,
XIX Messeigneurs,
XX Fils, je veux dans ce conte,
XXI QUAI DE LA FERRAILLE
XXII Un salon.
I LA MARQUISE ANTOINETTE
II IDYLLE
III COCARDE ET LOUCHON
IV AU LUXEMBOURG
V LE MENDIANT
VII IDYLLE DE LA RUE N.D. DE LORETTE
VIII Une rue
IX SUSURRANT VOCES

X Sylvia
XI André et Lise
XII ENTRE LE ZIST ET LE ZEST
XXIII CHANSONS
II Il était une fois
III Je suis Jean
IV L’oiseau passe
V CANCION
VI CHANSON DE MAGLIA
VII CHANSON EN CANOT
VIII LA CHANSON DU SPECTRE
IX MARGOT
X Rien
XI Tourne-toi
XII CHANSON DE BORD
XIII DANS LA FORÊT
XIV RONDE POUR LES ENFANTS
XV JEAN, JEANNE, JEANNOT
XVI LE CHANT DU VIEUX BERGER
XVII CHANT DES SONGES
XVIII Lamour f- le camp
XIX AIR DE LA PRINCESSE D’ORANGE
XX CHANT DU BOL DE PUNCH
XXI SÉRÉNADE
XXII LE CHÂTEAU DE L’ARBRELLES
XXIII Le joli page
XXIV CHANSONS DE GAVROCHE
LA CORDE D’AIRAIN
À LA FRANCE DE 1872
I APRÈS SEDAN
II À DES RÉGIMENTS DÉCOURAGÉS
III DESTRUCTION DE LA COLONNE
IV La grande République
V APRÈS L’ÉCROULEMENT DE L’HOMME
VI L’ORGIE DES MEURTRES
VII Oui, l’on a sauvé l’ordre et l’état
VIII En Belgique

IX À UN ROI DE TROISIÈME ORDRE
X ALSACE ET LORRAINE
XI LA LIBÉRATION DU TERRITOIRE
XII Le lionceau songeait
XIII Ô royauté!
XIV Quoi donc!
XV Un grand sabre
XVI AUX HISTORIENS
XVII VICTOIRES ET CONQUÊTES DE LA RELIGION
XVIII Ô sombre femme,
XIX LA QUESTION SOCIALE
XX Crois-tu donc qu’on sera César sans l’expier
XXI Jeunes hommes
XXII RENTRÉE DANS LA SOLITUDE
XXIII Ô princes insensés!
XXIV LE POËTE PREND LA PAROLE
XXV GRANDES OREILLES
XXVI À de certains moments,
XXVII À VOUS TOUS
Annexes
II Dossier des «Chansons des rues et des bois»
DROIT DE REPRENDRE HALEINE
VISIONS DE LYCÉEN
LA FIGLIOLA
L’IDYLLE DE FLORIANE
À UN RAT
SOUS LES SAULES
III « Être aimé»

TOUTE LA LYRE: INTRODUCTION

Aie une muse belluaire,
Sinon tu seras dévoré.
Le ciel t’offre un double suaire,
L’un étoilé, l’autre azuré.
Va, revêts-les l’un après l’autre;
Et verse aux hommes, tour à tour,
Justicier sombre ou tendre apôtre,
Tantôt l’ombre et tantôt le jour.
Sois la nuit qui montre les astres;
Puis sois le soleil tout à coup,
Témoin des biens et des désastres,
Eclairant tout, éclipsant tout.
Car tu ressembles au prophète
Qui foudroyait et souriait;
Et ton âme de flots est faite
Comme l’océan inquiet.
Sois par l’aigle et par la chouette
Contemplé dans l’horreur des bois;
Sois l’immobile silhouette;
Sois la lueur et sois la voix.
Le psaltérion formidable
Vibre en tes mains, ô barde roi,
Esprit, poète, âme insondable!
Une aurore est derrière toi.
L’ange en passant te fait des signes;
Les lions te suivent des yeux;
Et, comme sept immenses lignes
S’allongeant de la terre aux cieux,
On voit, grâce à toi qui sais lire
Dans le coeur des hommes mouvants,
L’ombre des cordes de la lyre
Sur tout ce que font les vivants.

10 avril 1876

I Les nuages volaient

Les nuages volaient dans la lueur hagarde,
Noir troupeau que le vent lugubre a sous sa garde;
Et dans la profondeur blême au-dessous de moi,
Si bas que tout mon être en haletait d'effroi,
J'aperçus un sommet par une déchirure.

Ce faîte monstrueux sortait de l'ombre obscure;
Ses pentes se perdaient dans le gouffre inconnu;
Sur ce. plateau gisait, fauve, terrible, nu,
Un géant dont le corps se tordait sur la pierre;
Il en coulait du sang avec de la lumière;
Sa face regardait la nuit triste, et ses pieds,
Ses coudes, ses genoux, ses poings, étaient liés
D'une chaîne d'airain vivante, impitoyable
Et je voyais décroître et renaître effroyable
Son ventre qu'un vautour rongeait, oiseau bandit.
Le patient était colossal; on eût dit
Deux montagnes, dont l'une agonisait sur l'autre.
— Quel est, dis-je, ce sang qui coule ainsi? -Le vôtre,
Dit le vautour. Ce mont dont tu vois les sommets,
C'est le Caucase. -Et quand t'en iras-tu? -Jamais.
Et le supplicié me cria: Je suis l'Homme.
Et tout se confondit comme fine eau noire, ou comme
L'ombre se confondrait avec l'éclair qui luit
Sous une grande main qui mêlerait la nuit.

Une sorte de puits se fit dans l'insondable;
Le haut d'un autre mont en sortit formidable.
L'ombre avait cette horreur dont l'hiver la revêt;
Et j'entendis crier: Ararat! Il pleuvait.

— Qu'es-tu? dis-je à la cime âpre et des vents fouettée.
— J'attends l'arche; et j'attends la famille exceptée.
— Quelle arche? -Il pleut! il pleut! -Et le reste? -Englouti.

Quoi! dis-je, est-on créé pour être anéanti?
O terre! est-ce ta faute? O ciel! est-ce ton crime?
Mais tout déjà s’était effacé dans l’abîme.

Une flaque de bleu soudain perça l’amas
Des grêles, des brouillards, des vents et des frimas;
Un mont doré surgit dans cet azur terrible;
Là, sans frein, sans pitié, régnait la joie horrible;
Sur ce mont rayonnaient douze êtres sereins, beaux,
Joyeux, dans des carquois ayant tous les fléaux;
La nuée autour d’eux tremblait, et par les brèches
Le genre humain était la cible de leurs flèches;
On voyait à leurs pieds l’amour, les jeux, les ris;
Où l’on ne voyait rien on entendait des cris.
Une voix dit: Olympe! Et tout croula. L’espace,
Où l’informe à jamais flotte, passe et repasse,
Redevint un bloc noir; puis j’entendis un bruit
Qui fit une ouverture éclatante à la nuit,
Et je vis un sommet montré par les tonnerres;
Les vieux pins inclinaient leurs têtes centenaires,
L’aigle en fuite semblait craindre d’être importun;
Et là je vis quelqu’un qui parlait à quelqu’un,
Un homme face à face avec Dieu dans un rêve;
Un prophète effrayant qui recevait un glaive,
Et qui redescendit plein d’un céleste ennui
Vers la terre, emportant de la foudre avec lui.
Et l’infini cria: Sinaï! Puis la brume
Se referma, pareille à des nappes d’écume.
Les vents grondaient; le gouffre était au-dessous d’eux,
Noir dans l’immensité d’un tremblement hideux.
Soudain, comme heurté par quelque ouragan fauve,
Il s’ouvrit; et je vis une colline chauve;
Le crépuscule horrible et farouche tombait.
Un homme expirait là, cloué sur un gibet,
Entre deux vagues croix où pendaient deux fantômes;
D’une ville lugubre on distinguait les dômes;
Et le supplicié me cria: Je suis Dieu.

Les nuages erraient dans des rougeurs de feu;
J’entendis dans la nuit redoutable et sévère
Comme un souffle d’horreur qui murmurait: Calvaire!
L’obscurité faisait des plis comme un linceul.
Pâle, je contemplais, dans l’ombre où j’étais seul,
Comme on verrait tourner des pages de registres,
Ces apparitions de montagnes sinistres.

2 juillet 1856.

II LES ÉVANGÉLISTES

Sur des livres où rien n'était écrit-encore,
Quatre hommes méditaient quand mourut l'homme-Dieu;
Tournés au nord, au sud, au couchant, à l'aurore,
Ces hommes se nommaient Luc, Jean, Marc et Matthieu.
Pendant que sur leur noir registre
Tombait l'ombre du mont sinistre,
Et qu'ils rêvaient, battus des vents,
On vit, sur la croix qui nous navre;
Les clous de l'immense cadavre
Grandir et devenir vivants.

Le premier clou devint un aigle à forme étrange,
Le second fut un boeuf, le troisième un lion,
Le quatrième prit la figure d'un ange
Ayant l'éclair pour aile et pour oeil le rayon;
Puis, s'envolant du haut calvaire,
Ils quittèrent l'arbre sévère,
Ils quittèrent l'affreux, chevet,
Et chacun, dans l'ombre où nous sommes,
À l'oreille de ces. quatre hommes
Vint raconter ce qu'il savait.

4 avril 1854.

III Comme leurs yeux troublés

Comme leurs yeux troublés de sentiments contraires
Se baissaient devant lui,
Il dit: Allez en paix! allez en paix, mes frères,
Vous qui m’avez trahi!
Vivez, et que jamais sous vos pas ne s’entr’ouvre
Un piège inattendu,
Que la main du Seigneur vous assiste et vous couvre,
Vous qui m’avez vendu!

IV BOURGEOIS PARLANT DE JÉSUS-CHRIST

— Sa morale a du bon. -Il est mort à trente ans.
— Il changeait en vin l'eau. -Ça s'est dit dans son temps.
— Il était de Judée. -Il avait douze apôtres.
— Gens grossiers. -Gens de rien. -Jaloux les uns des autres.
— Il leur lavait les pieds. -C'est curieux, le puits
De la Samaritaine, et puis le diable, et puis L'histoire de l'aveugle et du paralytique.
— J'en doute. -Il n'aimait pas les gens tenant boutique.
— A-t-il vraiment tiré Lazare du tombeau?
— C'était un sage. -Un fou. -Son système est fort beau.
— Vrai dans la théorie et faux dans la pratique.
— Son procès est réel. Judas est authentique.
— L'honnête homme au gibet et le voleur absous!
— On voit bien clairement les prêtres là-dessous.
— Tout change. Maintenant il a pour lui les prêtres.
— Un menuisier pour père, et des rois pour ancêtres,
C'est singulier. -Non pas. Une branche descend,
Puis remonte, mais c'est toujours le même sang;
Cela n'est pas très rare en généalogie.
— Il savait qu'on voulait l'accuser de magie
Et que de son supplice on faisait les apprêts.
— Sa Madeleine était une fille. -A peu près.
— Ça ne l'empêche pas d'être sainte. -Au contraire.
— Etait-il Dieu? -Non. -Oui. -Peut-être. -On n'y croit guère.
— Tout ce qu'on dit de lui prouve un homme très doux.
— Il était beau. -Fort beau, l'air juif, pâle. -Un peu roux.
— Le certain, c'est qu'il a fait du bien sur la terre;
Un grand bien; il était bon, fraternel, austère;
Il a montré que tout, excepté l'âme, est vain;
Sans doute il n'est pas dieu, mais certe il est divin.
Il fit l'homme nouveau meilleur que l'homme antique.
— Quel malheur qu'il se soit mêlé de politique!

V Du songe universel

Du songe universel notre pensée est faite;
Et le dragon était consulté du prophète,
Et jadis, dans l’horreur des antres lumineux,
Entr’ouvrant de leur griffe ou tordant en leurs noeuds
D’effrayants livres pleins de sinistres passages,
Les monstres chuchotaient à l’oreille des sages.

VI INSCRIPTION

Un sculpteur, qui vivait voilà bien trois mille ans,
Fit pour le noir Pluton, qu’en leurs cachots brûlants
Les ombres ont horreur de voir au milieu d’elles,
Ce temple, qu’aujourd’hui Dieu donne aux hirondelles.

17 juillet 1846.

VII Quand Auguste mourut

Quand Auguste mourut, Rome, donnant l’exemple,
Sur le mont Palatin lui fit bâtir un temple;
Et Livie y dressa des figures d’airain;
Elle mit au sommet du fronton souverain
Neptune et Jupiter, et sous le péristyle
Le mime Claudius et le danseur Bathylle

VIII Quand le vieux monde dut périr

Quand le vieux monde dut périr, sombre damné,
Quand l’empire romain d’horreur fut couronné,
Chaque vice vint faire au monstre une caresse.;
Luxure, Gourmandise, Avarice, Paresse,
Colère, Envie, Orgueil, vinrent; sur les sept monts
Rome vit se dresser debout les sept démons;

Tout fut dit. Le destin fit, pour l’oeuvre insondable,
Passer de main en main la pioche formidable;
Et l’on vit succéder, Christ étant au gibet,
Pour creuser le sépulcre où l’univers tombait,
La démence qui chante au mal qui délibère,
Le fossoyeur Néron au fossoyeur Tibère.

IX ÈRE DES CÉSARS

Un philosophe grec, persan ou byzantin,
Débarqua sur les bords du Tibre un beau matin.
Maint bourgeois tout de suite étourdit le pauvre homme
Des curiosités de la ville de Rome.
— Vous arrivez, monsieur? Si vous le permettez,
Nous visiterons Rome et toutés ses beautés:
Dès demain, nous irons, le jour levant à peine,
.Voir le pommier punique et la porte Capène,
L’Aventin, la cavale aux satyres, les bains,
La chapelle du vieux Sangus, roi des sabins,
Les Thermes, Cypris chauve, Isis patricienne,
Les faiseurs de cercueils bordant la voie ancienne,
Je vous montrerai tout, Jupiter Viminal,
L’autel de la Santé sur le mont Quirinal,
Le forum tout rempli de bruit et de scandales,
Apollon au colosse, Apollon aux sandales,
Le temple que Vénus a chez Salluste, et puis
Le vieux et noir quartier des Couvercles de Puits;
Ensuite, le Marché des Baladins, l’Auberge
Des Muses, le Juturne à côté de l’Eau Vierge,
Petit bois Somélis, grand bois Petilinus,
Nous verrons tout, endroits connus et non connus;
Enfin, pour que ce jour marque à jamais sa date,
Nous verrons les chevaux d’airain de Tiridate,
Et nous terminerons par les courses en char... -

— Romain, dit l’étranger, je voudrais voir César.

— Lequel? dites celui que vous voulez. Nous sommes
Fort riches en Césars. Nous avons plusieurs Romes
Et nous avons plusieurs Césars, jeunes et vieux.
Deux qui sont empereurs, et trente qui sont dieux.

Le penseur répondit: C’est là votre misère.

Pour qu’un peuple soit fort et règne sur la terre.
Un grand homme suffit, ô fils de Romulus,.
Et vous en avez tant que vous n’en avez plus!

16 août 1846.

X Le Mausolée est beau

Le Mausolée est beau, vaste, admirable à voir;
Sa première muraille est toute en granit noir,
La deuxième en albâtre, et la troisième enceinte
Est en gypse incrusté d'onyx et d'hyacinthe;
Franchissez-les; voilà le mur de jade vert
Qu'Eryclète, ouvrier de Corinthe, a couvert
De bas-reliefs où Flore aime et pleure Zéphyre;
Passez; vous rencontrez l'enceinte de porphyre;
Puis la salle d'argent ouvre son corridor;
Entrez; au centre luit l'immense trône d'or;
Sur le trône, approchez, sous un dais magnifique
Orné d'inscriptions d'écriture cufique,
Brille un cercueil formé d'un seul bloc de cristal,
Et dont on voit de loin, sur un haut piédestal,
Resplendir, comme une aube au fond des galeries,
Le couvercle étoilé d'un ciel de pierreries;
Regardez à travers ce grand cristal sacré,
Incorruptible, pur, vénérable, entouré
Des pleurs des nations scellés dans quatre vases,
Sous tous ces diamants, sous toutes ces topazes,
Regardez,-vous voici près du fond, près du roi,
Dérangez ces rubis, et que trouvez-vous? Moi.

XI INVOCATION DU MAGE CONTRE LES DEUX ROIS

Vents, souffles du zénith obscur et tutélaire,
N’éveillerez-vous pas quelque immense colère
Là-haut, dans le ciel sombre, en faveur des humains?
Puisque deux nations vont en venir aux mains
Parce que les deux rois se sont pris de querelle;
Puisque la plaine verte où court la sauterelle,
Où rit l’aube, où se chauffe au soleil le lézard,
Va tout à l’heure voir passer l’affreux hasard
Secouant dans la nuit ses mains pleines de flèches;
Puisqu’aux torrents taris entre les pierres sèches,
Vont succéder demain de longs ruisseaux de sang;
Puisque le grand lion qui pour boire descend
S’arrêtera pensif, surpris de ce flot rouge;
Puisque le paysan va trembler dans son bouge;
Puisque, si ces deux rois, le numide et le hun,
Ne sont pas soudain pris aux cheveux par quelqu’un,
On va voir éclater pour leurs folles chimères
La désolation lamentable des mères,
Et les deux camps côurir l’un sur l’autre acharnés,
Et, lorsqu’ils se seront entre eux exterminés,
Les durs vainqueurs, pareils aux bêtes des repaires,
Tuer les hommes, fils, frères, maris et pères,
Et les femmes, tordant leurs bras, cachant leurs seins,
Fuir devant les baisers de tous ces assassins;
Puisque deux peuples vont tomber dans cet abîme,
Vents, ne ferez-vous rien pour empêcher ce crime,
Et, vous qui pénétrez dans les profondeurs, vous
Qui vous réunissez ou vous dispersez tous
Plus vite que l’éclair, là-haut, quand, bon vous semble,
Vents, noirs avertisseurs, sur la terre qui tremble,
En ce moment funeste, en ce champ odieux,
N’amènerez-vous pas les formidables dieux?

28 juillet 1870.

XII Fuyez au mont inabordable!

Fuyez au mont inabordable!
Fuyez dans le creux du vallon!
Une nation formidable
Vient du côté de l’aquilon.

Ils auront de bons capitaines,
Ils auront de bons matelots,
Ils viendront à travers les plaines,
Ils viendront à travers les flots.

Ils auront des artilleries,
Des chariots, des pavillons;
Leurs immenses cavaleries
Seront comme des tourbillons.
Comme crie une aigle échappée,
Ils crieront: Nous venons enfin!
Meurent les hommes par l’épée!
Meurent les femmes par la faim!

On les distinguera dans l’ombre
Jetant la lueur et l’éclair.
Ils feront en marche un bruit sombre
Comme les vagues de la mer.

Ils sembleront avoir des ailes,
Ils voleront dans le ciel noir
Plus nombreux que les étincelles
D’un chaume qui brûle le soir.

Ils viendront, le coeur plein de haines
Avec des glaives dans les mains... -
Oh! ne sortez pas dans les plaines!
Oh! n’allez pas dans les chemins!

Car dans nos campagnes antiques
On n’entend plus que les clairons,
Et l’on n’y voit plus que les piques,
Que les piques des escadrons!

Oh! que de chars! que de fumée!
Ils viendront, hurlant et riant,
Ils seront une grande armée,
Ils seront un peuple effrayant,

Mais que Dieu, sous qui le ciel tremble,
Montre sa face dans ce bruit,
Ils disparaîtront tous ensemble
Comme une vision de nuit”

5 août 1846.

XIII Le calife a puni les gens de la montagne

Le calife a puni les gens de la montagne.
Ses soldats sont venus! Allah les accompagne,
Car ils n’ont rien laissé de vivant derrière eux.
Maintenant, oh! qùel deuil dans ce champ désastreux!
Les os de tout un peuple y gisent dans les pierres.
Le vautour décharné, l’aigle aux rouges paupières

Sont là seuls, triomphants, joyeux, le bec ouvert.
Tout est mort. Le chemin qui va dans le désert
Semble dallé, depuis Agra jusqu’à Nicée,
De tous ces crânes blancs qui couvrent la chaussée;
Et quand des chameliers passent dans cet endroit,
Le plus vieux, l’oeil fixé sur un poteau qu’Un voit,
Lit cette inscription au groupe qui l’écoute:
«Les paveurs du calife ont pavé cette route.”

22 septembre 1846.

XIV Tu volais donc mes bœufs

— Tu volais donc mes boeufs.
— C’en est fait de ma peau.
— Tu n’as pas de turban?
— Pas même de chapeau.
— Prends celui-ci.
— La mode en cette capitale
Est-elle qu’on vous coiffe avant qu’on vous empale?
— Tes habits sont troués.
— Monseigneur le sultan,
C’est vrai.
— Mets ce caftan.
— Moi!
— Toi. Mets ce caftan.
Esclaves, approchez. Choisis les trois plus belles.
— Moi!
— Je choisis pour toi. Prends ces trois-là.
— Lesquelles?
— Ces troupeaux sont à toi.
— À moi!
— Prends ce collier, présent d’un ancien roi.
— Qu’il est lourd! un collier d’or massif! Ça m’achève.
Ah çà! je n’y comprends rien du tout. C’est un rêve.
Ces trois astres! J’ai peur.

À moi ton turban vért, à moi ton caftan bleu!
Et tu me mets-au cou ce collier d’or! Au lieu
De me couper la tête ou de me faire pendre!
Tu me donnes, à moi qui voulais te les prendre,.
Tes troupeaux,, et de plus trois femmes pour moi seul!
— N’as-tu donc pas été l’hôte de mon aïeul.?

XV LE PASSAGE DES ÊTRES SOMBRES

Les démons, dont-le chant ressémble à des huées,
Volent dans le tumulte horrible des nuées,
Et jettent, en fuyant à travers l’infini,
Des cris d’amour au mal, surpris d’être béni.
— Chaleur, feu,, clarté, vie, enfantez les désastres!
Nature aux triples.seins, sous ton vêtement d’astres,
Sois bonne mère, et fais deux plis à ton manteau;
Mets un agneau dans l’un, dans l’autre un, louveteau.
Sanglier, deviens porc dans l’herbe où tu te vautres..
Malheurs, engéndrez-vous sans fin les uns les autres.
O bouches des fureùrs et des rugissements,
0 lionne, ô panthère, appelez vos amants!
Boas, vautours, requins, crocodiles, vipères,
Monstres, accomplissez au fond de vos repaires
L’auguste loi de croître et de multiplier.
Verdoie, et remplis-toi d’ombre, ô mancenillier,
Ours, renards, caïmans,. scorpions! ô famille
Du meurtre, du chaos et du néant, fourmille!
Vers de terre, oyez plus nombreux que les fleurs.
Ricanez dans les bois sacrés, merles siffleurs.
Voici le mois de mai, mésanges, tourterelles,
Ramiers, accouplez-vous dans les nids chauds et frêles,
Et, dans le bercement des. arbres murmurants,
Faites avec amour des petits pour les grands.
O prêtres, cachez Dieu. Cachez le soleil, bibles.
Masques, soyez charmants sur des faces horribles.
Asile où le lynx guette, où rôde lé jaguar,
Solitude, ouvre-toi devant l’errante Agar.
L’aile est au moucheron, l’araignée a ses toiles.
Dresse toujours plus haut sous le ciel plein d’étoiles,
Dans l’azur, dans le souffle orageux des typhons,
Au-dessus des étangs et des bourbiers profonds,
Tes branchages d’où sort le miasme insalubre,
Sombre monde ignoré, forêt, vierge lugubre!

Grandissez, passereaux, car l’épervier grandit.
Joie! ô bandit, sois prince! ô prince, sois bandit.
Règne, imposture, et prends le fils après le père.
Réussissez, rois, dieux, peste! Echafaud, prospère!
Ô guerre, ô fratricide, ayez tous les bonheurs
Que peuvent vous donner les tueurs, les seigneurs,
Les bourreaux, les mangeurs d’enfants, les chasseurs d’hommes.
Croîs, Babel! Sybaris, chantez! Aimez, Sodomes!
Ô pourriture, sois heureuse; écroulement,
Travaille; pullulez, corbeaux; et toi, gaîment,
Tourne,-ô meule de grès, et rends la lame aiguë.
Jusquiame, aconit, germez; fleuris, ciguë;
Chante sous les gibets, mandragore; venins
Des joncs vils, des buissons rampants, des arbres nains,
Gonflez-vous, car c’est nous, les inconnus terribles,
Qui, filtrant l’âpre sève à travers d’affreux cribles,
Confiant au printemps l’assassinat, faisons
Votre épaississement formidable, ô poisons!
Nous sommes l’essaim noir qui passe, et qui souhaite
Le cadavre au chacal, la nuit à la chouette,
Un sac d’or à Judas, à Jésus un baiser.
Nous voulons voir l’eau vive en marais s’apaiser;
Nous aimons ce qui hait; notre bonté procure
Une hache à Caïn qu’enivre une âme obscure.
Enfer, sois vrai; César, sois fort; tigre, sois beau;
Que ta faim soit toujours assouvie, ô tombeau!
Rose, accepte l’argent hideux de la limace;
Que sous toute beauté l’ossement vil grimace.
Tout est faux; de quel crime es-tu née, ô vertu?
Et toi, cendre, réponds, de quel fruit d’or viens-tu?
Car la surface a beau, chair pure ou clarté sainte,
Etre adorable, exquise et fraîche, et si bien peinte
Que les hommes sont pris d’amour en la voyant,
C’est à nous qu’appartient le dessous effrayant.
Abîme! il faut que tout ce qui vit, se hérisse,
Aime, se meut, va, vient, rit ou pleure, périsse;
Car tout est le sépulcre; et l’invisible écueil

Vers lequel le berceau flotte, c’est le cercueil,
Et le nouveau-né blanc et rose est un squelette,
Ô mort, que ta mamelle épouvantable allaite. -
Ainsi parle l’essaim, des démons factieux,
Et tout ce qui commet des crimes sous les cieux,
Les faux prêtres, les rois sanglants, le vent d’orage,
La peste, l’échafaud, la mort, reprend courage.

V. H. 29 août 1872.

XVI Le Campéador

Le Campéador, l’homme honnête et sans ennui,
Cria dans la forêt profonde devant lui,
— Ici, lion! il faut que je te parle. Approche.
Alors on vit sortir de derrière une roche
L’habitant chevelu dés monts d’Almonacid.
— Tiens, vous me tutoyez, dit le lion au Cid.
Pourquoi? -Le Cid terrible et doux, cher à l’Espagne,
Dit: -Parce que je suis ton frère: -Et la montagne,
Et la forêt, la rose, ét. l’herbe, et le buisson
Trouvèrent que le Cid superbe avait raison.

XVII Muse!

paix aux bergers, et paix aux laboureurs!
La justice, étrangère aux humaines erreurs,
Luit sur l’homme des champs comme une pure étoile,
Éclairant jusqu’au fond des-coeurs que rien ne voile, Le vieillard au front gris, l’enfant aUx cheveux blonds;
Et le soir, on rencontre au penchant des vallons,
Retournant au logis par le chemin des vignes,
Les plus sages parlant d’elle avec les plus dignes.

XVIII Éole allait criant:

Éole allait criant: Bacchus m’a pris mon outre.
Mithra-lui dit avec son sourire divin:.
Qu’y mettais-tu? Du vent. -Qu’y mettra-t-il? -Du vin.
Tu peux te consoler, bonhomme, et passer outre,
Et laisser à Bacchus ton outre, dit Mithra,
La tempête en sortait,-l’ivresse en sortira.

Jersey, 28 octobre 1852.

XIX LE VIEUX DE BRISACH

(Paraissant sur le haut de sa tour)

Je me dis en moi-même et depuis uh moment
Voilà bien du vacarme et bien de l’aboiement.
J’ai puni les barons voleurs, les noirs burgraves
Qui remplissaient le Rhin de leurs forfaits hardis.
Rois, j’ai frappé les coups; j’ai fait sur ces bandits
Luire ce vieil estoc qui maintenant se rouille;
Vous vous êtes rués, vous rois, sur la dépouille,
Partageant tout ainsi que des associés;
De tout ce qui restait de ces suppliciés,
Princes, je vous ai vus vous faire un héritage;
Je n’ai pas trouvé bon d’entrer dans le partage,
N’ayant pas pour métier d’ôter les clous aux croix,
Et d’aller décrocher, la nuit, au fond des bois,
Pour les revendre aux juifs les chaînes des potences;
Sans cela, si j’avais usé des circonstances,
Si j’eusse, comme vous, mis la main dans le sac,
Je serais aujourd’hui, moi, le vieux de Brisach,
Riche à voir les abbés m’offrir leurs politesses,
Et, si bon m’eût semblé, roi comme vos altesses;
Je n’eusse eu pour cela, vous le savez bien tous,
Qu’à brocanter son peuple à quelqu’un d’entre vous;
Car tous, petits et grands, vous êtes à l’enchère,
Et, pour quitter ces monts, pour faire bonne chère
Ailleurs qu’en vos donjons aux sauvages créneaux,
Pour aller vivre à Rome auprès des cardinaux
Et du Saint-Père avec quelque drôlesse vile,
Il n’est pas un de vous qui n’eût vendu sa ville.
Princes, jusqu’à mes pieds quand jadis vous rampâtes,
Était-ce sur le ventre? était-ce à quatre pattes?
Je ne m’en souviens plus. Aujourd’hui, c’est fort bien,
Vous me montrez les dents quand je ne suis plus rien
Qu’un bonhomme qui songe et qu’une barbe grise;

Et vous me déchirez, et j’ai peu de surprise
De vous trouver renards et loups, vous sachant rois.
Votre courage est fait de vos anciens exploits.
Et je n’en dirai rien, sinon que je vous brave,
Et vous défie, ô rois, toi marquis, toi landgrave,
Toi duc, troupeau hurlant à ma piste attaché,
De mordre aucune place où vous n’ayez léché “.

XX La bête regarda l’homme

La bête regarda l’homme venir vers elle.
Ses quatre pieds, sa croupe âpre et surnaturelle,
Et son ventre hideux couvraient plus d’un arpent;
Avec les torsions subites du serpent
Elle avait l’oeil du tigre, et les vautours farouches
Volaient sur elle ainsi que sur un ver les mouches;
On eût dit que le mont sous son poids étouffait
Un lion rugissant près d’elle n’eût pas fait
Plus d’effet que Moschus soupirant une idylle;
L’ombre semblait   avoir peur de ce crocodile;
Sa gueule était le gouffre où la lave apparaît;
Ses glissements étaient marqués-dans la forêt
Par des écrasements de-roches et de chênes;
Sa prunelle était faite avec toutes les haines
Que l’enfer fait flamber à, ses noirs soupiraux;
Elle rugit. -Bonjour, lézard, dit le héros.

XXI Batailles!

Batailles! noirs duels de la force et du droit!
Guerres,-par le hasard en courant décidées,
N’êtes-vous pas souvent funestes aux idées?
Que de fois vous avez souillé d’iniquités
La Justice et la Paix, ces chastes déités!
Tout ne s’en va-t-il pas dans le bruit que vous faites,
O victoires! fracas! étincelantes fêtes!
Illuminations sous les grands arbres noirs!
Feux d’or épanouis dans le ciel clair des soirs!
Longue acclamation de la foule.aux armées!
Concerts! chants belliqueux! cris éclatants! fumées!
Qui remuez le coeur de chaque citoyen,
Et dont le lendemain il ne reste plus rien
Que des lampions vils mêlés aux branches d’arbre,
Et des taches de suif sur les Vénus de marbre!

XXII HUGO DUNDAS

Devant les douze lords de la chambre étoilée,
Hugo Dundas fut grand.
Du fond d'une tribune une femme voilée
L'admirait en pleurant.

Nuit, flambeaux, murs drapés, blasons des deux royaumes,
C'était sinistre et beau.
Les douze pairs muets semblaient douze fantômes,
Assis dans un tombeau.

Une hache brillait. Le peuple criait: honte!
Le peuple et les soldats.
Tous menaçaient. Mais rien ne fit pâlir le comte,
Le comte Hugo Dtindas.

— La Révolte a troublé les monts où l'aigle plane,
Et vous étiez là tous.
Que faisiez-vous, mylord, à Dumbar, à Cartlane?
Mylord, qu'y faisiez-vous?

— Mes pairs, j'ai défendu le roi que mon coeur nomme,
Mon clan, mon étendard.
J'aime l'aigle et le roi, car je suis gentilhomme
Et je suis montagnard. -
Ainsi le juge austère et le comte superbe
Se parlaient dans la tour.
Heureux le bon soldat qui meurt, couché sur l'herbe,
En plein air, en plein jour!

La cour se retira. -L'on voyait dans.la salle
Le peuple fourmiller.
Enfin l'aube apparut comme une vierge pâle
Que l'homme va souiller.

Les portes du conseil, de bronze revêtues,
S’ébranlèrent alors;
Et l’on vit, à pas lents, comme douze statues
Rentrer les douze lords.

Le juge en cheveux blancs, debout, parlant au comte,
Dit: -Nos jours durent peu.
Puisque cet homme au roi ne veut pas rendre compte,
Il rendra compte à Dieu.

I ÉCRIT SUR LE MUR DE VERSAILLES.

Sachez qu’on va dresser dévant la Tour de Londre
Un grand échafaud noir.
Lord comte Hugo Dundas, qù’avez-vous à répondre?
Vous mourrez demain soir. -
Alors un de ces cris, qui font que l’effroi monte Jusqu’au juge inquiet,
Retentit sous la voûte... -On regarda le comte;
Le comté souriait.

Il dit: -Adieu la vie! -’Et; sans troùble dans l’âme,
Il salua la cour
Puis se tournant vers l’ombre où pleurait une femme,
— Adieu, dit-il, amour!

14 janvier 1844.

XXIII ÉCRIT SUR LE MUR DE VERSAILLES À CÔTÉ DU CORDON DE SONNETTE DE LOUIS XIV

L’objet est illustre
Dans ce temps caduc.
Le duc sonne un rustre,
Le roi sonne un duc.
Siècle étrange! il taille,
Sans mêler les rangs,
De la valetaille
A même les grands.
Il tient fous et sages
Au bout de son fil.
Il a deux-visages,
Mais un seul profil.
Il a sur l’épaule
Dans le même sac
Le duc et le drôle,
Frontin et Fronsac.

Versailles, IO août 1830

XXIV LA PEAU DE TIGRE

Quand la marquise était avec le roi fâchée,
Avant l'invention d'Esther par Mardochée,
Afin que chez Vasti Sa Majesté rentrât,
Il fallait mieux qu'un prince et plus qu'un magistrat;
Il fallait, pour conduire Alcandre à Cydalise,
Quelqu'un qui fût lettré, mais qui fût de l'église;
Pour porter les soupirs, pour mettre à l'entretien
Du maître et de la belle un peu d'accent chrétien,
Il convenait d'avoir en cour un personnage
Qui, sage par sa robe et grave par son âge,
Fût superbement prêtre et saintement valet;
Il fallait un pieux porte-voix; il fallait,
Pour qu'une bouche ayant d'austères habitudes,
Chère aux vices pédants, clémente aux fautes prudes,
Pût au besoin donner leur sens aux demi-mots,
Que monsieur Bossuet fût évêque de Meaux.

Certes, ce prêtre était farouche; il avait l'âme
Faite d'ombre, d'éclairs, de colère et de flamme;
Les Cévennes ont vu rugir ce sombre abbé,
Et quand le roi montait l'escalier dérobé,
Ce tigre était là; mais il servait de descente
Au lit où Montespan palpitait, rougissante.

XXV Oui, duc, nous sommes beaux

Oui, duc, nous sommes beaux, et nous avons l’amour
Dans les yeux, et l’esprit sur le front! Un beau jour,
Car il faut bien que tout, même le mal, finisse,
Bref, après avoir eu la fièvre et la jaunisse,
Après avoir aimé fort peu, beaucoup haï,
Après avoir menti, trompé, triché, trahi,
Fait rage; après un tas de choses mal agies,
Nuits au tripot, brelans, lansquenets, tabagies,
Nous crevons. Vils faquins que l’orgueil étouffait!
Et nous ne savons plus ce que nous avons fait
De notre âme, l’ayant derrière nous semée
Au hasard, dans cette ombre et dans cette fumée.
L’homme, fausse monnaie, écu sinistre et noir,
Et que Satan changeur souvent cloue au comptoir,
Sequin que la mort garde en paîment de l’orgie,
Est du néant que Dieu marque à son effigie.

XXVI Les révolutions,

Les révolutions, ces grandes affranchies,
Sont farouches, étant filles des monarchies.

Donc, quand le genre humain voulut, enfin lassé,
Entrer dans l’avenir et sortir du passé,
Il n’aperçut pas d’autre ouverture que celle
Qui s’offrait, sous ce fer où l’éclair étincelle,
Entre ces deux poteaux, chambranles effrayants.

Oui, c’est la seule issue, hommes, troupeaux fuyants;
Sortez par ce sépulcre. O mystère insondable!
Hélas! c’est du passé la porte formidable,!
Entrez dans l’avenir par ce pas sépulcral.
C’est à travers le mal qu’il faut sortir du mal.
Le genre humain, pour fuir de la sanglante ornière,
Marche sur une tête humaine, la dernière;
C’est avec de l’enfer qu’il commence ses cieux;
Et l’homme en écrasant le monstre est monstrueux.

Eruption des droits de l’homme! Sombres laves!
Sortie exaspérée et fauve des esclaves!
Triste loi du reflux qui ne peut dévier!
Lugubre enfantement du Vingt-et-un-Janvier 19!
Tout un monde surgit, tout un monde s’écroule;
Fiacre horrible qui passe au milieu de la foule!
Sacerdoce et Pouvoir sont là; que disent-ils?
Morne chuchotement de ces deux noirs profils!
Pendant qu’autour d’eux gronde, éclate et se proclame
La révolte du peuple et l’émeute de l’âme,
Pendant que, sur la terre et dans le firmament,
On entend le funèbre et double craquement
De l’ancien paradis et de l’ancien royaume,
Le roi spectre tout bas parle au prêtre fantôme.

Qu’est-ce qu’il avait fait, ce roi, ce condamné,
Ce patient pensif et pâle? Il était né.
Est-ce une injuste mort? Qui donc l’oserait dire?
C’est la punition; c’est aussi le martyre.
Responsabilité sombre de l’innocent!
O révolutions! l’idéal est en sang;
Le sublime est horrible et l’horrible est sublime;
Et comment expliquer ces aspects de l’abîme?

Oh! quels chocs de faisceaux, de tribuns, de pavois!
Je vois luire les fronts, j’entends parler les voix;
La lumière est accrue et l’ombre est agrandie;
Toute cette héroïque et vaste tragédie
Passe devant mes yeux comme par tourbillons.

La Marseillaise dit: Formez vos bataillons!
Là-bas, dans un rayon de gouffre et de colère,
Le vieux bonnet damné du forçat séculaire
Luit au bout d’une pique, étrange labarum.
Ce n’est pas un sénat, ce n’est pas un forum,
C’est un tas de Titans qui vient tout reconstruire;
Ces colosses hagards se mettent à bruire;
Nuit, tourmente; océan épouvantable et beau!
Chaque vague qui fuit s’appelle Mirabeau,
Robespierre, Brissot, Guadet, Buzot, Barnave,
Pétion... -Hébert salit l’écume de sa bave.
Et, submergé, saignant, arraché, mort, épars,
Le vieux dogme, partout, noyé de toutes parts,
Tombe, et tout le passé s’en va dans la même onde.
Danton parle; il est plein de la rumeur d’un monde;
C’est une idée et c’est un homme; il resplendit;
Il ébranle les coeurs et les murs; ce qu’il dit
Est semblable au passage orageux d’un quadrige;
Un torrent de parole énorme qu’il dirige,
Un verbe surhumain, superbe, engloutissant,
S’écroule de sa bouche en tempête, et descend
Et coule et se répand sur la foule profonde;

Il bâtit? non, il brise; il détruit? non, il fonde.
Pendant qu’il jette au vent de l’avenir ses cris,
Mêlés à la clameur de vieux trônes proscrits,
Le peuple voit passer une roue inouïe
De tonnerre et d’éclairs dont l’ombre est éblouie;
Il parle; il est l’élu, l’archange, l’envoyé!
Et l’interrompra-t-on? qui l’ose est foudroyé.
Qui pourrait lui barrer la route? qui? personne.
Tout ploie en l’écoutant, tout s’émeut, tout frissonne,
Tant ces discours, tombés d’en haut, sont accablants,
Tant l’âme est forte, et tant, pour les hommes tremblants,
Ces roulements du char de l’esprit sont terribles!

Auprès des flamboyants se dressent les horribles:
Justiciers, punisseurs, vengeurs, démons du bien.
— Grâce.! encore un moment! grâce! -Ils répondent: Rien.
Entendez-vous Marat qui hurle dans sa cave?
Sa morsure aux tyrans s’en va baiser l’esclave.
Il souffle la fureur;,:les griefs acharnés,
La vengeance, la mort, la vie, aux déchaînés
A plat ventre, grinçant des dents, livide, oblique,
Il travaille à l’immense évasion publique;
Il perce l’épais mur du bagne, et, dans son trou,
Du grand cachot de l’ombre il tire le verrou;
Il saisit l’ancien monde; il met à nu sa plaie;
Il le traîne de rue en rue, il est la claie;
Il est en même temps la huée; il écrit;
Le vent d’orage emporte et -sème son esprit,
Une feuille, de fange et d’aurore inondée,
Espèce de guenille horrible de. l’idée;
Il dénonce, il délivre; il. console, il maudit;
De la liberté sainte il est l’âpre bandit;
Il agite l’antique et monstrueuse chaîne,
Hideux, faisant sonner ce fer contre sa haine;
On voit autour de lui des ossements humains;.
Charlotte, ayant le coeur des ancêtres romains,
Seule osera tenter cet antre inabordable;

Il est le misérable,. il est le formidable;
Il est l'auguste infâme; il est le nain géant;
Il égorge, massacre, extermine, en créant;
Un pauvre en deuil l'émeut, un roi saignant le charme;
Sa fureur aime; il verse une effroyable larme;
Comme il pleure avec rage au secours des souffrants!
Il crie au mourant: Tue! Il crie au volé: Prends!
Il crie à l'opprimé: Foule aux pieds! broie! accable!
Doux pour une détresse et pour l'autre implacable,
Il fait à cette foule, à cette nation,
A ce peuple, un salut d'extermination.
Dur, mais grand; front livide entre les fronts célèbres!
Ténébreux, il attaque et poursuit les ténèbres.
Cette chauve-souris fait la guerre au corbeau.
Prêtre imposteur du vrai, difforme amant du beau,
Il combat l'ombre avec toutes les armes noires.
Pierres, boue et crachats, affronts, cris dérisoires,
Hymnes à l'échafaud, poignard, rire infernal,
Il puise à pleines mains dans l'affreux arsenal;
Cet homme peut toucher à tout, hors à la foudre.

La meule doit broyer si le moulin veut moudre;
Sur les versants divers des abîmes penchants,
Ceux qui paraissent bons, ceux qui semblent méchants,
Ébauchent en commun la même délivrance;
Ils font le droit, ils font le peuple, ils font la France.
Qu'appelez-vous Bourbon, majesté, roi, dauphin?
Toute chose dont sort l'indigence, la faim,

L'ignorance, le mal, la guerre, l'homme brute,
C'est fini, cela doit s'en aller dans la chute;
C'est une tête. Eh bien, le panier la reçoit.
Ils marchent, détruisant l'obstacle, quel qu'il soit;
Et c'est leur dogme à tous: -Tuer quiconque tue.
Ruine où l'ordre éclôt, vit et se constitue!
C'est par excès d'amour qu'ils abhorrent; bonté
Devient haine; ils n'ont plus de coeur que d'un côté

A force de songer au sort des misérables,
Et par miséricorde ils sont inexorables.
Pour eux ce blond dauphin, c’est déjà tout un roi;
Qu’importe sa pâleur, sa fièvre, son effroi?
Ils écoutent le triste avenir qui sanglote;
L’enfant a dans leur main la lourdeur d’un despote;
Ils l’écrasent meurs donc! -sous le trône natal.
Ainsi tous les débris du vieux monde fatal,
Évêques mis aux fers, rois traînés à la barre,
Disparaissent, broyés sous leur pitié barbare.
Tigres compatissants! formidables agneaux!
Le sang que Danton verse éclabousse Vergniaux
Sous la Montagne ainsi qu’aux pieds de la Gironde
Le même avenir chante et la même horreur gronde.

Oui, le droit se dressa sur les codes bâtards;
Oui, l’on sentit, ainsi qu’à tous les avatars,
Le tressaillement sourd du flanc des destinées,
Quand, montant lentement son escalier d’années,
Le dix-huitième siècle atteignit quatrevingt;
Encor treize, le nombre étrange, et le jour vint.
Alors, comme il arrive à chaque phénomène,
A chaque changement d’âge de l’âme humaine,
Comme lorsque Jésus mourut au Golgotha,
L’éternel sablier des siècles s’arrêta,
Laissant l’heure incomplète et discontinuée;
L’oeil profond des penseurs plongea dans la nuée,
Et l’on vit une main qui retournait le temps.
On comprit qu’on touchait aux solennels instants,
Que tout recommençait, qu’on entrait. dans la phase,
Que le sommet allait descendre sous la base,
Que le nadir allait devenir le zénith,
Que le peuple montait sur le roi qui finit!

Un blême crépuscule apparut sur Sodome,
Promesse menaçante; et le peuple, pauvre homme,
Mendiant dont le vent tordait le vil manteau,

Forçat dans sa galère ou juif dans'son ghetto,
Se leva, suspendit sa plainte monotone,
Et rit, et s'écria: -Voici la grande automne!
La saison vient. C'est mûr. Un signe est dans les cieux.

La Révolution, pressoir prodigieux,
Commença le travail de la vaste récolte,
Et, des coeurs comprimés exprimant la révolte,
Broyant les rois caducs debout depuis Clovis,
Fit son oeuvre suprême et triste, et sous sa vis
Toute l'Europe fut comme une vigne sombre.
Alors, dans le champ vague et livide de l'ombre,
Se répandit, fumant, on ne sait quel flot noir,
O terreur! et l'on vit, sous l'effrayant pressoir,
Naître de la lumière à travers d'affreux voiles,
Et jaillir et couler du sang et des étoiles;
On vit le vieux sapin des trônes ruisseler,
Tandis qu'on entendait tout le passé râler,
Et, le front radieux, la main rouge et fangeuse,
Chanter la Liberté, la grande vendangeuse.
Jours du peuple cyclope et de l'esprit titan!
Vie et trépas tournant le même cabestan!
Temps splendide et fatal, qui mêle en sa fournaise
Au cri d'un Josaphat l'hymne d'une Genèse!
Quiconque t'osera regarder fixement,
Convention, cratère, Etna, gouffre fumant,
Quiconque plongera la fourche dans ta braise,
Quiconque sondera ce puits: Quatrevingt-treize,
Sentira se cabrer et s'enfuir son esprit.
Quand Moïse vit Dieu, le vertige le prit;
Et moi, devant l'histoire aux horizons sans nombre,
Je tremble, et j'ai le même éblouissement sombre,
Car c'est voir Dieu que voir les grandes lois du sort.
Non, le glaive, la mort répondant à la mort,
Non, ce n'est pas la fin. Jette plus bas la sonde,
Mon esprit. Ce serait l'étonnement du monde
Et la déception des hommes qu'un progrès

N’apparût qu’en laissant aux justes des regrets,
Que l’ombre attristât l’aube à se lever si lente,
Et que, pour le toucher avec sa main sanglante
Le temps de lui céder la place et le chemin,
Toujours l’affreux hier ensanglantât demain!
Non, ce n’est pas la fin. Non, il n’est pas possible,
Dieu, que toute ta loi soit de changer de cible,
Et de faire passer le meurtre et le forfait
Des mains des rois aux mains du peuple stupéfait.
Le peuple ne veut pas de ce morne héritage 20.

Que serait donc l’effort de l’homme si le sage N’avait à constater qu’un résultat si vain,
Le choc du droit humain contre le droit divin!
Et s’il n’apercevait que cette lueur trouble
Quand il écoute au fond de l’ombre la voix double,
Le passé, l’avenir, la matière, l’esprit,
La voix du peuple Enfer, la voix du peuple Christ!

C’est vrai, l’histoire est sombre. Ô rois! hommes tragiques!
Démences du pouvoir sans limites! logiques
De l’épée et du sceptre, exterminant, broyant,
Allant à travers tout à leur but effrayant!
Oh! la toute-puissance a Caïn pour ancêtre.
Rien qu’à voir par éclairs les siècles apparaître,
Quels règnes inouïs! que d’étranges lueurs!
Voici les idiots à côté des tueurs.
Zam, s’éveillant trop tard, met l’aurore à l’amende;
Claude égorge sa femme et puis la redemande;
Bajazet veut lier les vents à des poteaux;
Xercès fouette la mer, Phur crache sur l’Athos;
Pillage, trahison, vol, parjure, homicide;
Ici le parricide et là l’infanticide;
Pères dénaturés, fils en rébellion;
Octave usurpe, opprime, égorge, et dans Lyon
Soixante nations lui bâtissent un temple;
La Flandre est un bûcher que Philippe contemple;

Léon dix en riant étrangle un cardinal;
Maxence après Galère apparaît infernal;
Voilà Sanche, abruti d'ivresses funéraires;
Celui-ci, Mahomet, tua ses dix-neuf frères;
Après avoir frappé son père, Manfredi
S'assied dessus jusqu'à ce qu'il soit refroidi;
Les Transtamares font revivre les Orestes;
Achab fait ramasser sous sa table ses restes
Par des hommes sans mains, sans pieds, sans dents, sans yeux;
Caïus triomphe avec du sang jusqu'aux essieux;
Richard d'York étouffe Édouard cinq; Ramire
Le Mauvais est mauvais, mais Jean le Bon est pire;
Sélim, tout effaré de débauche et d'encens,
Court dans Stamboul, perçant de flèches les passants;
Zeb plante une forêt de gibets à Nicée;
Christiern fait tous les jours arroser d'eau glacée
Des captifs enchaînés nus dans des souterrains;
Galéas Visconti, les bras liés aux reins,
Râle, étreint par les noeuds de la corde que Sforce
Passe dans les oeillets de sa veste de force;
Cosme, à l'heure où midi change en brasier le ciel,
Fait lécher par-un bouc son père enduit de miel;
Soliman met Tauris en feu pour se distraire;
Alonze, furieux qu'on allaite son frère,
Coupe le bout des seins d'Urraque avec-ses dents;
Vlad regarde mourir ses neveux prétendants
Et rit de voir le pal leur sortir par la bouche;
Borgia communie; Abbas, maçon farouche,
Fait avec de la brique et des hommes vivants
D' épouvantables tours qui hurlent dans les vents;
Là, le sceptre vandale, ici la loi burgonde;
Cléopâtre renaît pire dans Frédégonde;
Ivan est sur Moscou, Carlos est sur Madrid;
Sous cet autre, Louis dit le Grand, on ouvrit
Les mères pour tuer leurs enfants dans leurs ventres.
Mais où sont donc les loups! Oh! les antres! les antres!
La jungle où les boas glissent, fangeux et froids!

Est-ce du sang qui coule aux veines de ces rois?
Ont-ils des coeurs aussi? Sont-ils ce que nous sommes?
Cieux profonds! Oh! plutôt que l'aspect de ces hommes,
La rencontre du tigre, et, plutôt que leur voix,
Le sourd rugissement des lions dans les bois!
Eh bien, vengeance donc! mort! malheur! représailles!
La torche aux Rhamséions, aux Kremlins, aux Versailles!
Qu'Ossa soit à son tour broyé par Pélion!
Au bourreau les bourreaux! Justice! talion!

Non! Jamais d'échafauds! C'est par d'autres répliques
Que doivent s'affirmer les saintes républiques.
Ce siècle, le plus grand des siècles, l'a compris.
Le jour où Février se leva sur Paris,
Il fit deux parts de l'oeuvre immense de nos pères,
Et, grave, agenouillé devant les grands mystères,
Ne gardant que le droit, rendit à Dieu la mort.
Notre doigt n'est pas fait pour presser le ressort
De ce fer monstrueux qui tombe et se relève;
La liberté n'est pas un outil de la Grève;
Elle s'emmanche mal au couperet hideux;
Carrier, Le Bas, Hébert, sont des Philippes deux;
Fouquier-Tinville touche au duc d'Albe; Barrère
Vaut de Maistre, et Chaumette a Bâville pour frère;
Marat, Couthon, Saint-Just, d'où la vengeance sort,
Servent la vie avec les choses de la mort;
Ce qu'ils font est fatal; c'est toujours la vieille oeuvre,
Et l'on y sent le froid de l'antique couleuvre.
Non, le vrai ne doit point avoir de repentirs;
Au nom de tous les morts et de tous les martyrs,
Non, jamais de vengeance! et la vie est sacrée.
L'aigle des temps nouveaux, planant dans l'empyrée,

Laisse le sang rouiller le bec du vieux vautour;
Le peuple doit grandir; étant maître à son tour,
Et c'est par la douceur que la grandeur se prouve.
Concorde! Nos enfants ne tettent plus la louve;

Notre avenir n’est plus dans un antre, allaité
Par l’affreux ventre noir de la fatalité.

Ce patient, traîné dans un tombeau qui roule,
Ces prunelles de tigre éclatant dans la foule,
Ce prêtre, ce bourreau, tout ce groupe fatal,
Ce tréteau, pilori s’il n’est pas piédestal,
Ce panier, cette fosse infâme qui se creuse,
Cette hache, c’était de l’ombre malheureuse;
Cela cachait le ciel, le vrai, l’astre éclipsé;
C’était du crépuscule et c’était du passé;
Le peuple sent en lui sa nouvelle âme éclore,
Et ne veut rien du soir et veut tout de l’aurore.
Avançons. Le progrès, c’est un besoin d’azur.
Certes, Danton fut grand; Robespierre était pur;
Jadis, broyant, malgré les cris et les menaces,
Les mâchoires de l’hydre entre ses poings tenaces,
Gladiateur géant du cirque des fléaux,
Ayant à déblayer tout l’antique chaos,
Ce grand Quatrevingt-treize a fait ce qu’il dut faire;
Mais nous qui respirons l’idéale atmosphère,
Nous sommes d’autres coeurs; les temps fatals sont clos;
Notre siècle, au-dessus du vieux niveau des flots,
Au-dessus de la haine, au-dessus de la crainte,
Fait sa tâche; il construit la grande Babel sainte;
Dieu laisse cette fois l’homme bâtir sa tour.
La république doit s’affirmer par l’amour,
Par l’entrelacement des mains et des pensées,
Par tous les lys s’ouvrant à toutes les rosées,
Par le beau, par le bon, par le vrai, par le grand,
Par le progrès debout, vivant, marchant, flagrant,
Par la matière à l’homme enfin libre asservie,
Par le sourire auguste et calme de la vie,
Par la fraternité sur tous les seuils riant,
Et par une blancheur immense à l’orient.

Après le dix août superbe, où dans la brume

Sous le dernier éclair le dernier trône fume,
Après Louis, martyr de son hérédité,
Roi que brise la France en mal de liberté,
Après cette naissance, après cette agonie,
Toute l'oeuvre tragique et farouche est finie.
L'ère d'apaisement suit l'ère de terreur.

Le droit n'a pas besoin de se mettre en fureur,
Et d'arriver les mains pléines de violences,
Et de jeter un glaive au plateau des balances;
Il paraît, on tressaille; il marché, on dit C'est Dieu.

Mort à la mort! Au:feu la loi sanglante! au feu
Le vieux koran de fer, l'affreux code implacable
Qui tord l'irrémissible avec l'irrévocable,
Qui frappe, qui se venge, et qui se trompe! À bas,
Croix qui saisis Jésus et lâches Barabbas!
A bas, potence, avec toutes tes branches noires!
Fourche que Vouglans mêle à ses réquisitoires,
Solive épouvantable où Tristan s'accouda,
Machine de Tyburn et de la Cebada,
Démolis-toi toi-même, et croule, mutilée,
Avec le saint-office et la chambre étoilée,
Et tourne contre toi la mort que tu contiens!
Charpente que l'enfer fait lécher à ses chiens,
Va pourrir dans la terre éternelle et divine
Qui ne te connaît point, toi l'arbre sans racine,
Qui t'exclut de la sève et qui ne donne pas
La vie au bois féroce où germe le trépas!
Fuis, dissous-toi, perds-toi dans la grande nature!
Engins qu'ont maniés le meurtre et la torture;
Ô monstrueux outils de la tombe, assassins,
Rappelez-vous les bons, les innocents, les saints,
Et demandez-vous-en compte les uns aux autres!
Tous les crimes du faible ont pour source les vôtres.

Poutre, ébrèche la hache et brise le couteau;

Hache, deviens cognée et frappe le poteau,
Frappe; exterminez-vous, ô ténébreux complices!
Et tombe pêle-mêle, ô forêt des supplices,
Roue, échelle, garrot, gibet, et glaive, et faulx,
Sous le bras du progrès, bûcheron d’échafauds!

XXVII Quinze cents ans

Quinze cents ans avaient fait sur l’homme la nuit;
Le vieux monde était là, de ténèbres construit,
Babel aux spirales sans nombre;
La Révolution cria: finissons-en!
Et d’un seul coup, ce spectre au pied de paysan
Fit écrouler toute cette ombre.

La Révolution, qui vint à pas bruyants,
Bras nus, pieds nus, sortait des siècles effrayants
De la torture et du malaise;
Elle saignait encor quand elle triomphait;
C’est du bois du gibet des peuples que Dieu fait
Les sabots de Quatrevingt-treize

XXVIII TALAVEYRA RÉCIT DE MON PÈRE

C’est à Talaveyra de la Reine, en Espagne.
Les anglais, contre qui nous étions en campagne,
Tenaient, en s’appuyant sur un vieux château-fort,
Le coteau du midi, nous le coteau du nord.
Deux versants; un ravin entre les deux armées.
On se battait depuis le matin; les fumées
Monstrueuses que fait un combat furieux
Salissaient le soleil, terrible au fond des cieux;
Et lui, l’astre éternel d’où sort l’aube éphémère,
Vieux, et jeune toujours comme le vieil Homère,
Lui, ce même soleil qu’Achille vit jadis,
Se vengeait sur nous tous combattants, assourdis
Par le vaste fracas des canons en démence,
Il versait les flots noirs de sa lumière immense,
Il nous aveuglait; sombre, il jetait au milieu
Des tonnerres humains le grand rayon de Dieu.
Il brillait, il régnait; il nous brûlait, sinistre.

Le roi don Charles quatre et Godoji, son ministre,
Nous avaient mis l’armée anglaise sur les bras,
Mais les anglais, qui sont peu faits pour les sierras,
Avaient chaud comme nous. La journée était dure.
Pas un brin d’herbe; au fond du ravin la verdure
De quelques pins d’Alep, espèce de rideau
Laissant voir sous son antre un maigre filet d’eau.
De même que les cils séparent deux paupières,
Ces arbres couvrant l’eau qui courait dans les pierres
Séparaient les deux plans inclinés du vallon.
Or, comme le semeur attaque l’aquilon,
Nous nous heurtions, français contre anglais. Les mitrailles Pleuvaient, et l’on voyait des crânes, des entrailles,
Des ventres entr’ouverts ainsi qu’un fruit vermeil,
Et, sur l’immense mort sanglante, le soléil.
Le sabre, le canon, l’espingole; la pique,

C’est tout simple, on s’y fait; mais avoir le tropique
Sur sa tête, c’est trop. Nous avions soif. Le fer
Et le plomb, c’est la mort; mais la soif, c’est l’enfer.
Le soleil, la sueur, la soif, oh! quelle rage!
Nous n’en faisions pas moins notre implacable ouvrage,
Et l’on se massacrait éperdûment. Partout
Des cadavres, mêlés aux combattants debout,
Gisaient, indifférents déjà comme des marbres.
Tout à coup j’aperçus le ruisseau sous les arbres.
Un espagnol le vit et cria: caramba!
Je descendis vers l’eau, qu’un anglais enjamba;
Un français accourut, puis deux, puis trois, puis quatre;
On se mit à genoux, on cessa de se battre,
Quitte à recommencer; les blessés, à pas lents,
Se traînaient; on trinqua dans les casques sanglants.
— A votre santé! dis-je. Ils dirent: A la vôtre! -
Et c’est ainsi qu’on vint boire un peu l’un chez l’autre.

La bataille reprit, sans trêve cette fois,
Affreuse; et nous songions, nous, en pensant aux rois,
Aux empereurs, à tous ces sombres téméraires,
Qu’ils font des ennemis, mais que Dieu fait des frères.

XXIX ÉCRIT SUR UN LIVRE DU JEUNE MICHEL NEY

Enfants! fils des héros disparus! fils des hommes
Qui firent mon. pays plus grand que les deux Romes,
Et qui s’en sont allés, dans l’abîme engloutis!
Vous que nous voyons rire et jouer tout petits,
Sur vos fronts innocents la. sombre histoire pèse.
Vous êtes tout couverts de la gloire française.

Oh! quand l’âge où l’on pense, où l’on ouvré les yeux,
Viendra pour vous, enfants, regardez vos aïeux
Avec un tremblement de joie et d’épouvante.
Ayez toujours leur âme en vos âmes vivante,
Soyez nobles, loyaux et vaillants entre tous;’
Car vos noms sont si grands qu’ils ne sont pas à vous!

Tout passant peut venir vous en demander compte.
Ils sont notre trésor dans nos moments de honte,
Dans nos abaissements et dans nos abandons;
C’est vous qui les portez, c’est nous qui les gardons.

14 avril 1847.

XXX À UN SOLDAT DEVENU VALET

Jadis, ô vieux soldat, tu n’étais pas un homme.
La colonne trajane, antique orgueil de Rome,
Sur son marbre où revit en foule un peuple roi,
N’avait pas un profil plus farouche que toi!
Paysan chevelu, dans ta chaumière aimée,
Pris par la grande main qui fit la grande armée,
Tu vins tout jeune aux camps, pauvre pâtre breton.
Pour saisir un fusil tu jetas ton bâton.
Et c’est là qu’un beau jour, un matin de bataille,
En écoutant un bruit de bombe et de mitraille,
En voyant au galop passer Napoléon,
Éperdu, frissonnant, tu te sentis lion!
Tu fus lion dix ans. Autant qu’il t’en souvienne,
Tu visitas Madrid, Dresde, Berlin et Vienne;
Et ces villes tremblaient derrière les canons,
Quand elles te voyaient, parmi tes compagnons,
Accourir, haletant, formidable, invincible,
Secouant ta crinière avec un cri terrible!
Toi, partout, tu marchais, plein d’orgueil et de foi,
Car te sentir lion, c’était te sentir roi!
L’empire est mort. Hélas! quels fantômes nous sommes!
Les lions à la paix redeviennent des hommes.
L’homme est plein de misère. Il faut bien vivre enfin!
On bravait la mitraille, on se rend à la faim.
On descend chaque jour d’un pas. De chute en chute
L’homme arrive où jamais ne tomberait la brute.
Maintenant, ô soldat, maintenant, ô vainqueur,
Galonné comme un suisse à la porte du choeur,
L’oeil baissé, l’air dévot, tu portes à l’église
Le petit chien griffon d’une vieille marquise;
Et tandis qu’en tes bras jappe le chien moqueur,
L’ancien lion rugit de honte dans ton coeur!

13 mai 1835.

XXXI Qu’était-ce que l’enfant?

Qu’était-ce que l’enfant? qu’était-ce que la mère?
Je l’ignorais. C’était la saisôn éphémère
Qui nous enchante; et n’a qu’un défaut, durer peu,
Avril. De ma mansarde, entr’ouverte au ciel bleu,
Je regardais, à l’heure où le jour vient de naître,
Une femme tournant le dos à la fenêtre,
Assise sûr son lit, un enfant dans ses bras;
Je devinais l’enfant, je ne le voyàis pas,
Tant ils étaient tous deux serrés l’un contre l’autre.
Malheur au faible! ô sombre horizon que le nôtre!
Cette femme était là seulé, en ce bouge étroit.
Elle avait un enfant; mais avait-elle un toit?
Était-elle, humble plante et rose infortunée,
Livrée à ce vent noir qu’on nomme destinée,
Qui brise au haut des monts le cèdre et le sapin?
Avait-elle du lait? avait-elle du pain?
De quoi manger? de quoi nourrir? poignant problème!
Nos lois sont lés carcans de la misère blême..
Avait-elle un amant? avait-elle un m àri?
Qu’un rameau soit flétri parce qu’il est fleuri,
C’est triste, et c’est, hélas, souvent le sort des femmes!
Ce vil monde punit l’éclosion des âmes.
Elle semblait rêver sous un nuage obscur;
Elle ne parlait pas et regardait son mur;
Moi j’étais dans l’aurore, elle dans lés ténèbres;
Et je ne distinguais, dans ces ombres funèbres,
De ce double destin entrevu vaguement,
Rien que deux petits bras pressant un cou charmant.

9 mai 1877.

XXXII Au bord des flots,

Au bord des flots, au sein des sombres Babylones,
Reste à jamais debout sur les hautes colonnes!
Veille sur nos vaisseaux et veille sur nos tours!
Sois toujours fier de nous! Libre, calme, sereine,
La France a l’avenir! La France est encor reine!
Ton empire est tombé, ton peuple vit toujours.

Une aube meilleure
Sur nous brillera.

Nous attendons l’heure,
Mais l’heure viendra!
Comme Dieu lui-même
Qui récolte et sème
Dans l’immensité,
Notre auguste France
A la patience
De l’éternité!
En vain Londre et Moscou, dans leur rage inféconde,
L’une hors de l’Europe et l’autre hors du monde,
Ont mutilé la France alors que tu tombas;
Et sur nos maux profonds qui saignent et s’irritent
Ont posé, comme un vase où des serpents s’agitent,
Une fragile paix pleine de sourds combats!

Une aube meilleure
Sur nous brillera...
Dieu veut la grande France et la grande Allemagne.
Il fit Napoléon comme il fit Charlemagne,
Pour donner à l’Europe un centre souverain.
Que Stamboul meure, alors vers l’orient tournée,
Teutonia, de gloire et de paix couronnée,
Reprendra le Danube et nous rendra le Rhin!

Une aube meilleure
Sur nous brillera...
En attendant ce jour que chaque instant amène,
Jour où l’amour luira sur la famille humaine,
Jour où s’effaceront les crimes expiés,
Vois au-dessous de toi, figure solennelle,
L’éternelle tempête et la haine éternelle,
L’Océan sous tes yeux, l’Angleterre à tes pieds!

Une aube meilleure
Sur nous brillera.
Nous attendons l’heure,
Mais l’heure viendra.
Comme Dieu lui-même
Qui récolte et sème
Dans l’immensité,
Notre auguste France
A la patience
De l’éternité!

30 juillet 1841.

XXXIII LES DEUX CÔTÉS DE L’HORIZON

Comme lorsqu’une armée inonde des campagnes,
Une. immense rumeur se disperse dans l’air.
Il se fait un grand bruit du côté des montagnes;
Il se fait un grand bruit du côté de la mer.
Le poète a crié: -Qu’est ce bruit? Dans les ombres
Il remplit la montagne, il remplit l’océan.
N’est-ce pas l’avalanche, aigle des Alpes sombres?
O goèland des flots, n’est-ce pas l’ouragan?

Le goèland, du fond des mers où la nef penche,
Est venu. Le grand aigle est venu du Mont Blanc.
Et l’aigle a répondu: -Ce n’est pas l’avalanche.
— Ce n’est pas la tempête, a. dit le goëland.

Ô farouches oiseaux! quoi! cé n’est pas la trombe,
Ce n’est pas l’aquilon que votre aile connaît?
— Non, du côté des monts c’ést un monde qui tombe.
— Non, du çôté des mers c’est; un monde qui naît.

Et le poète a dit: -Que Dieu vous accompagne!
Retournez l’un et l’autre à vos nids hasardeux.
Toi, va-t’en à:ta mer. Toi, rentre à ta montagne.
Et maintenant, Seigneur, expliquons-nous tous deux.

L’Amérique surgit, et Rome meurt! ta Rome!
Crains-tu pas d’effacer, Seigneur, notre chemin,
Et de dénaturer le fond même de l’homme,
En déplaçant ainsi tout le génie humain?

Donc la matière prend le monde à la pensée!.
L’Italie était l’art, la foi, le coeur,. le. feu.
L’Amérique est sans âme. Ouvrière glacée,
Elle a l’homme pour but. L’Italie avait Dieu.

Un astre ardent se couche, un astre froid se lève.
Seigneur! Philadelphie, “un comptoir de marchands,
Va remplacer la ville où Michel-Ange rêve,
Où Jésus met sa croix, où Flaccus mit ses chants!

C’est ton secret, Seigneur. Mais, ô Raison profonde,
Pourras-tu, sans livrer l’âme humaine au sommeil,
Et sans diminuer la lumière du monde,
Lui donner cette lune au lieu de ce soleil 25?

9 avril 1840.

XXXIV Elle prend un miroir,

Elle prend un miroir, s’y regarde, le jette avec horreur, souffle son flambeau, et tombe à genoux auprès de son lit.
Oh! je suis monstrueuse et les autres sont belles!
Cette bosse! ô mon Dieu!...

Elle cache son visage dans ses mains et laisse tomber sa tête sur le lit.
Elle s’endort.

UNE VOIX
C’est là que sont tes ailes!
La chambre s’emplit d’une lumière vague. -Elle dort toujours.
Au fond une forme ailée apparaît dans un nimbe de rayons.

Écoute-moi. Je suis ton fiancé des cieux.
Tu portes sur ton dos le sac mystérieux,
Tu portes sur ton dos l’oeuf divin de la tombe;
Sous ce poids bienheureux ton corps chancelle et tombe,
Et le regard humain a cette infirmité
De voir dans ta splendeur une difformité.
Ta gloire dans le ciel est ton fardeau sur terre.
Tu pleures. Mais pour nous, les voyants du mystère,
Qui savons ce que Dieu met dans l’humanité,
De ton épaule sombre il sort une clarté.
Etre qui fais pitié même aux prostituées,
O femme en proie au rire, à l’affront, aux huées,
Sur qui semble à jamais s’être accroupi Smarra,
A ta mort ton épaule informe s’ouvrira,
Car la chair s’ouvre alors pour laisser passer l’âme,
O femme, et l’on verra de cette bosse infâme,
Moquée et vile, horrible à tout être vivant,
Sortir deux ailes d’ange immenses, que le vent
Gonflera dans les cieux comme il gonfle des voiles,
Et qui se déploieront toutes pleines d’étoiles!
Oui, Lise, écoute-moi. Nous autres nous voyons

L’ange à travers le monstre, et je vois tes rayons!
Du songe où ta laideur rampe, se cache et pleure,
Oui, de ce songe affreux que tu fais à cette heure,
Tu t’éveilleras belle au-delà de tes voeux!
Tu flotteras, voilée avec tes longs cheveux
Et dans la nudité célèste de la tombe,
Et tu resteras femme en devenant colombe.
Tu percevras, dans l’ombre et dans l’immensité,
Un sombre hymne d’amour montant vers ta beauté;
Les hommes à leur tour te paraîtront difformes;
Tu verras sur leurs dos leurs fautes, poids énormes;
Les fleurs éclaireront ton corps divin et beau,
Car leur parfum devient clarté dans le tombeau;
Les astres t’offriront leur rose épanouie.
Tu prendras pour miroir, de toi-même éblouie,
Ce grand ciel qui te semble aujourd’hui plein de deuil;
Ailée et frissonnante au bord de ton cercueil,
Comme l’oiseau qui tremble au penchant des ravines,
Tu sentiras frémir dans les brises divines
Ton corps fait de splendeur; ton sein blanc, ton front pur,
Et tu t’envoleras dans le profond azur!

8 mars 1854.

XXXV BALMA

S’était-il dit: « L’hiver, les gouffres, la tempête, «Gardent le roi des monts sous son dais de brouillards;
«Nul homme encor n’a pu fouler du pied sa tête,
«Presque inaccessible aux regards.
«J’irai! J’assiégerai, dans ma sublime audace,
«Cette forteresse de glace,
«Et ces tours, qui touchent aux cieux!
«Sur le sommet neigeux du mont hyperborée
«La Gloire fait fleurir-une palme ignorée
«Qui n’est visible qu’à mes yeux!”

Avait-il, l’humble pâtre, entendu dans un rêve
D’aériennes voix lui crier: « Ne dors pas!
«Jusqu’au front du Mont-Blanc que ton âme s’élève:
«Qu’elle y précipite tes pas!:
«Berger, qu’à ces hauteurs la terre te contemple.
«Va! l’esprit divin, comme un temple,
«Habita toujours le haut lieu.
«Va! quelque vision sans doute t’est promise.
«Sur ce nouveau Sina, comme un nouveau Moïse,
«Monte à la rencontre de Dieu!”

Je ne sais: mais un jour, à l’heure où dans les ombres
L’aube n’a pas atteint le front des Alpes sombres,
Il partit. Le Mont-Blanc, éclairé seul encor,
Comme un roi diligent, lorsque son camp sommeille,
Avant tous ses guerriers, tout armé se réveille,
Sur les monts obscurcis levait son casque d’or.

Quand on le vit portant sa lourde carnassière,
Et l’échelle d’écorce, et la hache de pierre,
Les pâtres, les chasseurs à l’oeil audacieux,
L’entouraient, demandant le but de ses voyages;
Et, d’abord, à son doigt levé vers les nuages,

On ne sut s’il montrait le Mont-Blanc ou les cieux.

Mais lorsqu’il révéla son dessein magnanime:
«Frère! du mont maudit tu veux toucher la cime?
«Quel démon à ta mort te conduit par la main?
«Arrière, malheureux! Tu veux périr sans doute!
«L’ouragan et l’abîme ont fermé cette route!...”
Il écouta leurs cris, et reprit son chemin.

Il franchit la colline où, sur ses lames blanches,
Le glacier des Buissons brise les avalanches;
Et le pic des Chamois, les degrés du Malpas,
Les torrents, les glaçons dressés en pyramides,
Et les granits glissants, et les gazons humides,
Et la mousse et les rocs fatiguèrent ses pas.

Il montait; et, volant sur les neiges tombées,
Renversant sur son dos ses cornes recourbées,
Le vif chamois fuyait vers ses antres amis;
Et les pierres, roulant sous sa marche incertaine,
Sondant les flancs du mont dans leur chute lointaine,
Éveillaient des échos jusqu’alors endormis.

Il montait; et bientôt disparurent les chênes,
Les mélèzes, des monts voilant les hautes chaînes,
Les noirs sapins, pressés dans les ravins déserts;
Puis les fleurs, tapissant le flanc des roches nues,
Puis l’eau qui court, l’oiseau qui vole dans les nues,
Puis l’herbe sous ses pieds, puis le bruit dans les airs.

Il montait; l’air déjà manquait à son haleine;
Les nuages pesants lui dérobaient la plaine;
Le lichen des rochers dorait le front vermeil;
Et ses pas, imprimés aux glaces éternelles,
Epouvantaient au loin l’aigle aux puissantes ailes
Qui ne lève les yeux que pour voir le soleil!

XXXVI Les mères

Les mères ont senti tressaillir leurs entrailles.
Les lourds caissons chargés de boîtes à mitrailles
Courent, et l’on dirait qu’ils bondissent joyeux.
Le peuple de Paris, pensif, les suit des yeux
Et s’en va par les quais vers les Champs-Élysées.
On ferme les maisons, on se penche aux croisées;
La cohue en haillons, morne comme la nuit,
Marche, grossit, s’avance, et l’on entend le bruit
Que font les bataillons et les cavaleries.
Elle passe, sinistre, auprès des Tuileries.
Oh! de ceux qui s’en vont, rêvant, par ce chemin,
Combien ne verront pas le soleil de demain!
Dans cette multitude aux pantomimes sombres
Combien parlent encor qui déjà sont des ombres!
Guerre civile! émeute! ô deuil! combien ce soir
Auront pour dernier lit le pavé froid et noir!.

XXXVII J’ai vu

J’ai vu pendant trois jours de haine et de remords
L’eau refléter des feux et charrier des morts
Dans une grande et noble ville 28.
Le tisserand, par l’ombre et la faim énervé,
De son dernier métier brûlé sur le pavé
Attisait la guerre civile.

Le soldat fratricide égorgeait l’ouvrier;
L’ouvrier sacrilège, aveugle meurtrier,
Massacrait le soldat son frère;
Peuple, armée, oubliaient qu’ils sont du même sang;
Et les sages pensifs disaient en frémissant:
O siècle! ô patrie! ô misère!

Durant trois nuits la ville, hélas! ne dormit plus.
Tous luttaient. Le tocsin fut le seul angelus
Qu’eurent ces sinistres aurores.
Les noirs canons, roulant à travers la cité,
Ébranlaient, au-dessus du fleuve ensanglanté,
L’arche sombre des ponts sonores!

Ah! la nature et Dieu, devant l’humanité,
Même étalant leur grâce avec leur majesté,
N’empêchent pas ces tristes choses!
Car ces événements se passaient, ô destin,
Sur les bords où Lyon à l’horizon lointain
Voit resplendir les Alpes roses.

4 septembre 1841.
22 février 1848.

XXXVIII ÉCRIT AU BAS D’UN PORTRAIT DE MADAME LA DUCHESSE D’ORLÉANS

Quand cette noble femme eut touché la frontière,
Proscrite et fugitive, hélas! mais reine encor,
Emportant son grand coeur, sa tristesse humble et fière,
Et ses enfants, tout son trésor,

À ce port de l’exil la voyant arrivée,
Après tant de périls dans ces sombres chemins,
Ceux qui l’accompagnaient disaient: Elle est sauvée!
Et pleuraient en joignant les mains.

Vers ces derniers amis que le malheur envoie,
Elle inclina son front et s’écria: Seigneur!
Me voici hors de France! ils en pleurent de joie,
Et moi, j’en pleure de douleur!

1 mars 1848.

XXXIX Ayant vu le massacre immense

Ayant vu le massacre immense, le combat,
Le peuple sur sa croix, Paris sur son grabat,
La pitié formidable était dans tes paroles;
Tu faisais ce que font les grandes âmes folles,
Et lasse de lutter, de rêver, de souffrir,
Tu disais: J’ai tué! car tu voulais mourir.

Tu mentais contre toi, terrible et surhumaine.
Judith la sombre juive, Arria la romaine,
Eussent battu des mains pendant que tu parlais.
Tu disais aux greniers: J’ai brûlé les palais!
Tu glorifiais ceux qu’on écrase et qu’on foule;
Tu criais: J’ai tué, qu’on me tue! Et la foule
Écoutait cette femme altière s’accuser.
Tu semblais envoyer au sépulcre un baiser;
Ton oeil fixe pesait sur les juges livides,
Et tu songeais, pareille aux graves Euménides.
La pâle mort était debout derrière toi.
Toute la vaste salle était pleine d’effroi,
Car le peuple saignant hait la guerre civile.
Dehors on entendait la rumeur de la ville.

Cette femme écoutait la vie aux bruits confus,
D’en haut, dans l’attitude austère du refus.
Elle n’avait pas l’air de comprendre autre chose
Qu’un pilori dressé pour une apothéose,
Et trouvant l’affront noble et le supplice beau,
Sinistre, elle hâtait le pas vers le tombeau.
Les juges murmuraient: Qu’elle meure. C’est juste.
Elle est infâme. -A moins qu’elle ne soit auguste,
Disait leur conscience; et les juges pensifs,
Devant oui, devant non, comme entre deux récifs,
Hésitaient, regardant, la sévère coupable.

Et ceux qui comme moi te savent incapable
De tout ce qui n’est pas héroïsme et vertu,
Qui savent que si Dieu te disait: D’où viens-tu?
Tu répondrais: Je viens de la nuit où l’on souffre;
Dieu, je sors du devoir dont vous faites un gouffre!
Ceux qui savent tes vers mystérieux et doux,
Tes jours, tes nuits, tes soins, tes pleurs, donnés à tous,
Ton oubli de toi-même à secourir les autres,
Ta parole semblable aux flammes des apôtres;
Ceux qui savent le toit sans feu, sans air, sans pain,
Le lit de sangle avec la table de sapin,
Ta bonté, ta fierté de femme populaire,
L’âpre attendrissement qui dort sous ta colère,
Ton long regard de haine à tous les inhumains,
Et les pieds des enfants réchauffés dans tes mains;
Ceux-là, femme, devant ta majesté farouche,
Méditaient, et, malgré l’amer pli de ta bouche,
Malgré le maudisseur qui, s’acharnant sur toi,
Te jetait tous les cris indignés de la loi,
Malgré ta voix fatale et haute qui t’accuse,
Voyaient resplendir l’ange à travers la méduse.

Tu fus belle et semblas étrange en ces débats;
Car, chétifs comme sont les vivants d’ici-bas,
Rien ne les trouble plus que deux âmes mêlées,
Que le divin chaos des choses étoilées
Aperçu tout au fond d’un grand coeur inclément,
Et qu’un rayonnement vu dans un flamboiement.

Décembre 1871.

XL Ô Georges

Ô Georges, tu seras un homme. -Tu sauras
A qui tu dois ton coeur, à qui tu dois ton bras,
Ce que ta voix doit dire au peuple, à l’homme, au monde;
Et je t’écouterai dans ma tombe profonde.
Songe que je suis là; songe que je t’entends;
Demande-toi si nous, les morts, sommes contents;
Tu le voudras, mon George. Oh! je suis bien tranquille!

Ce que pour le grand peuple a fait la grande ville,
Tout ce qu’après Cécrops, tout ce qu’après Rhéa,
Paris chercha, trouva, porta, fonda, créa,
Ces passages du Nil, du Rhin et de l’Adige,
La Révolution française, ce prodige,
La chute du passé, d’où, l’homme libre sort,
La clarté du génie et la noirceur du sort,
La France subjuguant et délivrant la terre,
Tout cela t’emplira l’âme de ce mystère
Dont l’homme est saisi, quand, à l’horizon lointain,
Il sent la mer immense ou l’énorme destin.

C’est ainsi que se font ceux qui parlent aux foules,
Ceux que les ouragans, les rocs, les flots, les houles,
Attirent, et qui sont rêveurs dans ce milieu
Où le travail de l’homme aide au travail de Dieu.
Alors tu songeras à nos vaillants ancêtres
Ôtant le sceptre aux rois, ôtant les dieux aux prêtres,
Au groupe affreux, tyrans, pontifes, scélérats;
Ému, tu penseras; pensif, tu grandiras.
Est-ce un rêve? oh! je crois t’entendre. A l’âme humaine,
Aux nations qu’un vent d’en haut remue et mène,
Aux peuples entraînés vers le but pas à pas,
Tu diras les efforts tentés, les beaux trépas,
Les combats, les travaux, les reprises sans nombre,
L’aube démesurée emplissant la grande ombre.;

Pour maintenir les coeurs à ce puissant niveau,
Tu feras des anciens jaillir l’esprit nouveau;
Tu diras de nos temps les lutteurs héroïques,
Ces vainqueurs purs, ces fiers soldats, ces fronts stoïques,
Et tu feras songer, en les peignant si bien,
Le jeune homme à ton père et le,vieillard au mien.

Novembre 1879.

II Je ne vois pas pourquoi

Je ne vois pas pourquoi je ferais autre chose Que de rêver sous l’arbre où le ramier se pose;
Les chars passent, j’entends grincer les durs essieux;

Quand les filles s’en vont laver à la fontaine,
Elles prêtent l’oreille à ma chanson lointaine,
Et moi je reste au fond des bois mystérieux,

Parce que le hallier m’offre des fleurs sans nombre,
Parce qu’il me suffit de voir voler dans l’ombre
Mon chant vers les esprits et l’oiseau vers les cieux.

5 mars.

III LETTRE

La Champagne est fort laide où je suis; mais qu'importe,
J'ai de l'air, un peu d'herbe, une vigne à ma porte;
D'ailleurs, je ne suis pas ici pour bien longtemps.
N'ayant pas mes petits près de moi, je prétends
Avoir droit à la fuite, et j'y songe à toute heure.
Et tous les jours je veux partir, et je demeure.
L'homme est ainsi. Parfois tout s'efface à mes yeux
Sous la mauvaise humeur du nuage ennuyeux;
Il pleut; triste pays. Moins de blé que d'ivraie.
Bientôt j'irai chercher la solitude vraie,
Où sont les fiers écueils, sombres, jamais vaincus,
La mer. En attendant, comme Horace à Fuscus,
Je t'envoie, ami cher, les paroles civiles
Que doit l'hôte des champs à l'habitant des villes;
Tu songes au milieu des tumultes hagards;
Et je salue avec toutes sortes d'égards,
Moi qui vois les fourmis, tôi qui vois les pygmées.

Parce que vous avez la forge aux renommées,
Aux vacarmes, aux faits tapageurs et soudains,
Ne croyez pas qu'à Bray-sur-Marne, ô citadins,
On soit des paysans au point d'être des brutes;
Non, on danse, on se cherche au bois, on fait des chutes;
On s'aime; on est toujours Estelle et Némorin;
Simone et Gros Thomas sautent au tambourin;
Et les grands vieux parents grondent quand le dimanche
Les filles vont tirer les garçons par la manche;
Le presbytère est là qui garde le troupeau;
Parfois j'entre à l'église et j'ôte mon chapeau
Quand monsieur le curé foudroie en pleine chaire
L'idylle d'un bouvier avec une vachère.
Mais je suis indulgent plus que lui le ciel bleu,
Diable! et le doux. printemps, tout céla trouble un peu;
Et les petits oiseaux, quel détestable exemple!

Le jeune mois de mai, c’est toujours le vieux temple
Où, doucement raillés par les merles siffleurs,
Le gens qui s’aiment vont s’adorer dans les fleurs;
Jadis c’était Phyllis, aujourd’hui c’est Javotte,
Mais c’est toujours la femme au mois de mai dévote.
Moi, je suis spectateur, et je pardonne; ayant
L’âme très débonnaire et l’air très effrayant;
Car j’inquiète fort le village. On me nomme
Le sorcier; on m’évite; ils disent: C’est un homme
Qu’on entend parler haut dans sa chambre, le soir.
Or on ne parle seul qu’avec quelqu’un de noir.
C’est pourquoi je fais peur. La maison que j’habite,
Grotte dont j’ai fait. choix pour être cénobite,
C’est l’auberge;ion y boit dans la salle d’en bas;
Les filles du pays viennent, ôtent leurs bas,
Et salissent leurs pieds dans la mare voisine.
La soupe aux choux, c’est là toute notre cuisine;
Un lit et quatre murs, c’est là tout mon logis.
Je vis; les champs le soir sont largement rougis;
L’espace est, le matin, confusément sonore;
L’angélus se répand dans le ciel dès l’aurore,
Et j’ai le bercement des cloches en dormant.
Poésie: un roulier avec un jurement.;
Des poules becquetant un vieux mur en décombre;
De lointains aboiements dialoguant dans l’ombre;
Parfois un vol d’oiseaux sauvages émigrant.
C’est petit, car c’est laid, et le beau seul est grand.
Cette campagne où l’aube à regret semble naître,
M’offre à perte de, vue au loin sous ma fenêtre
Rien, la route, un sol âpre, usé, morne, inclément.
Quelques arbres sont là; j’écoute vaguement
Les conversations du vent avec les branches;
La plaine brune alterne avec les plaines blanches;
Pas un coteau, des prés maigres, peu de gazon;
Et j’ai pour tout plaisir de voir à l’horizon
Un groupe de toits bas d’où sort une fumée,
Le paysage étant plat comme Mérimée.

IV Quand la lune apparaît

Quand la lune apparaît dans la brume des plaines,
Quand l’ombre émue a l’air de retrouver la voix,

Lorsque le soir emplit de frissons et d’haleines
Les pâles ténèbres des bois,
Quand le boeuf rentre avec sa clochette sonore
Pareil au vieux poëte, accablé, triste et beau,
Dont la pensée au fond de l’ombre tinte encore
Devant la porte du tombeau,
Si tu veux, nous irons errer dans les vallées,
Nous marcherons dans l’herbe à pas silencieux,
Et nous regarderons les voûtes étoilées.
C’est dans les champs qu’on voit les cieux!
Nous nous promènerons dans les campagnes vertes;
Nous pencherons, pleurant ce qui s’évanouit,
Nos âmes ici-bas par le malheur ouvertes,
Sur les fleurs qui s’ouvrent la nuit!
Nous parlerons tout bas des choses infinies.
Tout est grand, tout est doux, quoique tout soit obscur!
Nous ouvrirons nos coeurs aux sombres harmonies
Qui tombent du profond azur!
C’est l’heure où l’astre brille, où rayonnent les femmes!
Ta beauté vague et pâle éblouira mes yeux.
Rêveurs, nous mêlerons le trouble de nos âmes
A la sérénité des cieux!
La calme et sombre nuit ne fait qu’une prière
De toutes les rumeurs de la nuit et du jour,
Nous, de tous les tourments de cette vie amère
Nous ne ferons que de l’amour!

À l’Assemblée: 15 juin 1849

V Une tempête

Une tempête
Approchait, et je vis, en relevant la tête,
Un grand nuage obscur posé sur l’horizon;
Aucun tonnerre encor ne grondait; le gazon
Frissonnait près de moi; les branches tremblaient toutes,
Et des passants lointains se hâtaient sur les routes.
Cependant le nuage au flanc vitreux et roux
Grandissait, comme un mont qui marcherait vers nous.
On voyait dans des prés s’effarer les cavales,
Et les troupeaux bêlants fuyaient. Par intervalles,
Terreur des bois profonds, des champs silencieux,
Emplissant tout à coup tout un côté des cieux,
Une lueur sinistre, effrayante, inconnue;
D’un sourd reflet de cuivre illuminait la nue,
Et passait, -comme si, sous le souffle de Dieu,
De grands poissons de flamme aux écailles de feu,
Vastes formes dans l’ombre au hasard remuées,
En ce sombre océan de brume et de nuées
Nageaient, et dans les flots du lourd nuage noir
Se laissaient par instants vaguement entrevoir!

VI Nous marchons;

Nous marchons; il a plu toute la nuit; le vent
Pleure dans les sapins; pas de soleil levant;
Tout frissonne; le ciel, de teinte grise et mate,
Nous verse tristement un jour de casemate.
Tout à coup, au détour du sentier recourbé,
Apparaît un nuage entre deux monts tombé.
Il est dans le vallon comme en un vase énorme,
C’est un mur de brouillard, sans couleur et sans forme.
Rien au delà. Tout cesse. On n’entend aucun son;
On voit le dernier arbre et le dernier buisson.
La brume, chaos morne, impénétrable et vide,
Où flotte affreusement une lueur livide,
Emplit l’angle hideux du ravin de granit.
On croirait que c’est là que le.monde finit
Et que va commencer la nuée éternelle.
Borne où l’âme et l’oiseau sentent faiblir leur aile,
Abîme où le penseur se penche avec effroi,
Puits de l’ombre infinie, oh! disais-je, est-ce toi?
Alors je m’enfonçai dans ma pensée obscure,
Laissant mes compagnons errer à l’aventure.

Pyrénées, 28 août.

VII Le matin,

Le matin, les vapeurs, en blanches mousselines,
Montent en même temps; à travers les grands bois,

De tous les ravins noirs, de toutes les collines,
De tous les sommets à la fois!

Un jour douteux ternit l’horizon; l’aube est pâle;
Le ciel voilé n’a plus l’azur que nous aimons,
Tant une brume épaisse à longs flocons s’exhale
Du flanc ruisselant des vieux monts.

On croit les voir bondir comme au temps du prophète,
Et l’on se dit, de crainte et de stupeur saisi:
O chevaux monstrueux! quelle course ont-ils faite,
Que leurs croupes fument ainsi?

Cauterets, 27 août.

VIII Seigneur,

Seigneur, j’ai médité dans les heures nocturnes,
Et je me suis assis, pensif comme un aïeul,
Sur les sommets déserts, dans les lieux taciturnes
Où l’homme ne vient pas, où l’on vous trouve seul;

J’ai de l’oiseau sinistre écouté les huées;
J’ai vu la pâle fleur trembler dans le gazon,
Et l’arbre en pleurs sortir du crêpe des nuées,
Et l’aube frissonner, livide, à l’horizon;

J’ai vu, le soir, flotter les apparences noires
Qui rampent dans la plaine et se traînent sans bruit;
J’ai regardé du haut des mornes promontoires
Les sombres tremblements de la mer dans la nuit;

J’ai vu dans les sapins passer la lune horrible,
Et j’ai cru par moments, muet, épouvanté,
Surprendre l’attitude effarée et terrible
De la création devant l’éternité.

Cauterets, 28 août.

IX ÉGLOGUE

Un journal! Donnez-moi du papier, que j'écrive
Une lettre, et voyez si le facteur arrive.
Il semblé que la poste aujourd'hui tarde un ,peu.
Vent, brouillard, pluie. On est en juin; faites du feu.
Comme ces champs ont l'air bougon et réfractaire! -
Un gros nuage noir est tout près de la terre;
Le jour a le front bas, et les cieux sont étroits;
Et l'on voit dans la rue, en file, trois par trois,
Serrés dans leurs boutons et droits dans leurs agrafes,
Passer des titotlers grisés par des carafes;
Ils sont jeunes, plusieurs ont vingt ans; et pendant
Que, regardant la vie avec un oeil. pédant,
Ils laissent se transir Betsy, Goton et Lise,
L'eau qu'ils boivent leur sort du nez en chants d'église.
Jadis c'était le temps du beau printemps divin;
Silène était dans Vautré et ronflait plein de vin;
Mai frissonnait d'aurore, et des flûtes magiques
Se répondaient dans l'ombre au fond des géorgiques;
L'eau courait, l'air jouait; de son râle étranglé
La couleuvre amoureuse épouvantait Eglé;
Les paons dans la lumière ouvraient leurs larges queues;
Et, lueurs dans l'azur, les neuf déesses bleues
Flottaient entre la terre et le ciel dans le soir,
Et chantaient, et, laissant à travers elles voir
Les étoiles, ces yeux du vague crépuscule,
Elles mêlaient Virgile assis au Janicule,
Moschus dans Syracuse, et les sources en pleurs,
Les troupeaux, les sommeils sous les arbres, les fleurs,
Les bois, Amaryllis, Mnasyle et Phyllodoce,
A leur mystérieux et sombre sacerdoce.
29 mai 1856.

X Le soir calme et profond

Le soir calme et profond se répand sur la plaine.
Ma fille, asseyons-nous. Le couchant jette à peine
Une vague lueur sous l’arche du vieux pont.

Une forge lointaine à l’angélus répond.

Le Seigneur sur la cloche et l’homme sur l’enclume
Forgent la même chose, et l’étoile s’allume
Là-haut en même temps qu’ici-bas le foyer.
Notre destin, vois-tu, mon ange, est tout entier
Dans ces deux bruits qui sont deux voix, deux voix austères;
Tous deux conseillent l’homme au milieu des mystères,
Et lui montrent le but, le port, le gouvernail.
La cloche dit: prière! et l’enclume: travail!

15 septembre 1849

XI On devient attentif et rêveur

On devient attentif et rêveur, on s’attend
— A voir passer là-haut quelque groupe éclatant,
Des choeurs éblouissants, des fêtes idéales,
Des archanges menant des pompes triomphales,
Des âmes dans la. gloire et dans l’azur, le soir,
Quand le vent, dans le ciel mystérieux et noir,
Sur l’horizon, chargé de vapeurs remuées,
Bâtit confusément des portes de nuées.

15 août 1847. -Assomption.

XII David, le marbre est saint,

David, le marbre est saint, le bronze est vénérable.
Sous le bois, où grandit le tilleul et l’érable,
Où le chêne tressaille, où les germes vivants,
Comme une bouche ouverts, boivent l’onde et les vents,
Sous le fleuve moiré qui, roulant ses eaux vives,
Décompose en ses flots les ombres de ses rives,
Sous le mont colossal, sous l’énorme plateau
Que Jéhovah tailla de son divin marteau,
Sous les vallons charmants, sous la fraîche prairie,
Ce globe laisse voir à notre rêverie
Et cache en même temps à nos yeux trop charnels
Des métaux glorieux, des granits éternels
Veinés de noirs filons et de zébrures blanches
Comme le sol marbré par les ombres des branches,
Blocs où filtre la sève, où l’eau monte et descend,
Que le fleuve connaît, que la montagne sent,
Et que l’âpre forêt sous sa racine austère
Presse et fait sourdement remuer dans la terre!
Car la chose aime l’être et tout dans tout se fond.
Un esprit bienveillant, intelligent, profond,
Circule dans les. champs, dans l’air, dans l’eau sonore;
Et la création sait ce que l’homme ignore!

XIII Je me fais paysan comme eux.

Je me fais paysan comme eux. Cela te fâche “?
Non. Le cercle où chacun se courbe sur sa tâche,
L’homme tissant la paille et la femme le fil,
Où le travail fait grave et doux chaque profil,
Le soir, près du foyer aux lueurs assoupies,
A l’heure où l’on n’entend que le vol noir des pies,
Et de rares sabots courant dans les sentiers,
Les mains sur les genoux, j’écoute volontiers
Le racontage vrai des amours de village:
Comme Pierre et Toinon s’adoraient avant l’âge
Comme Anne était hardie à douze ans, d’envier
Sa soeur Marthe embrassant maître Yvon le bouvier;
Récit réel d’où sort une odeur de feuillées,
Et qui, soudain, au souffle effaré des veillées,
S’envole, comme au vent la bulle de savon
Nuance d’arc-en-ciel, Marthe embrassant Yvon,
Perd toute forme humaine, enfle, et se dégingande,
En conte où Puck badine avec la fée Urgande.

XIV AUX CHAMPS

Ce ne sont qu’horizons calmes et pacifiques;
On voit sur les coteaux des chasses magnifiques;
Le reste du pays, sous le ciel gris ou bleu,
Est une plaine avec une église au milieu.
Un lierre monstrueux à tige arborescente
Qui sort de l’herbe, ainsi qu’une griffe puissante,
Comme un des mille bras de Cybèle au front vert,
Semble, en ce champ aride et de ronces couvert,
Avoir un-jour saisi l’église solitaire,
Et la tirer d’en bas lentement dans la terre..
Tour, arcs-boutants, chevet, portail aux larges fûts,
Il cache et ronge tout sous ses rameaux touffus.
Sans doute que dans l’ombre il parle à ces murailles
Et qu’il leur dit: Jadis vous-dormiez aux entrailles
Des collines d’où l’homme arrache incessamment
Le marbre, le granit, l’argile et le ciment.
O pierres, vous devez être lasses d’entendre
Les hommes bourdonner, les orages s’épandre,

Et les cloches d’airain gémir dans les clochers.
Redevenez cailloux, galets, débris, rochers!
Dans la terre au flanc noir retombez pêle-mêle!
Rentrez au sein profond de l’aïeule éternelle!

Bondouf , 5 novembre 1846.

XV Nature!

Nature! âme, ombre, vie! ô figure voilée!
O sphère toujours noire et toujours étoilée!
O mystère aux feuillets d'airain!
Texte écrit dans la nue ainsi que dans les marbres!
Bible faite de flots, de montagnes et d'arbres,
De nuit sombre et d'azur serein!

Souvent, quand minuit sonne aux clochers de la côte,
Tandis que sur la mer, au loin sinistre et haute,
Fuit le navire, ce coursier,
Et qu'au-dessus des mâts penchant au poids des toiles,
Le nuage en passant se déchire aux étoiles
Comme un voile à des clous d'acier;

À cette heure où l'Atlas s'ouvre au tigre qui rentre,
Où le lion rugit dans la fraîcheur de l'antre,
Tandis que l'eau des sources luit,
Et que sur les débris des bas-reliefs de Thèbe
La vieille ombre Ténare et le vieux spectre Érèbe
Entr'ouvrent leurs yeux pleins de nuit;

Pendant qu'Ormuz endort les parsis et les guèbres,
Et que les sphinx camus, laissant dans les ténèbres
Hurler l'hyène et le chacal,
Lisent, dans le désert allongeant leurs deux griffes,
Les constellations, sombres hiéroglyphes
Du noir fronton zodiacal;

Pendant que le penseur, scrutant la nuit sublime,
Et cherchant à savoir ce que lui veut l'abîme,
Ombre d'où nul n'est revenu,
Questionne le bruit, le souffle,. l'apparence,
Et sonde tour à tour la crainte et l'espérance,
Ces deux faces de l'inconnu;

À cet instant profond où l'âme erre éperdue,
Où je ne sais quelle hydre au fond de l'étendue
Semble ramper et se tapir,
Moment religieux où la nature penche,
Phase obscure où. le ciel dans un souffle s'épanche
Et la terre dans un soupir;

À cette heure sacrée et trouble, où l'âme humaine,
Jalouse, avare, impure, avide, lâche, vaine,
Menteuse comme l'histrion,
Étale, abject semeur de ses propres désastres,
Ses sept vices hideux, et le ciel les sept astres
De l'éternel septentrion;
Quand la profonde nuit fait du monde une geôle,
Quand la vague, roulant d'un pôle à l'autre pôle,
Se creuse en ténébreux vallons,
Quand la mer monstrueuse et pleine de huées
Regarde en frissonnant voler dans les nuées
Les sombres aigles aquilons;

Ou plus tard, quand le jour, vague ébauche, commence.
O plaine qui frémit! bruit du matin immense!
Tout est morne et lugubre encor.
L'horizon noir paraît plein des douleurs divines;
Le cercle des monts fait la couronne d'épines,
L'aube fait l'auréole d'or!

Moi, pendant que tout rêve à ces spectacles sombres,
Soit que la nuit, pareille aux temples en décombres,
Obscurcisse l'azur bruni,
Soit que l'aube, apparue au fond des cieux sincères,
Farouche et tout en pleurs, semble sur nos misères
L'oeil effaré de l'infini;

Je songe au bord des eaux, triste; -alors les pensées
Qui sortent de la mer, d'un vent confus poussées,

Filles de l’onde, essaim fuyant,
Que l’âpre écume apporte à travers ses fumées,
M’entourent en silence, et de leurs mains palmées
M’entr’ouvrent le livre effrayant

XVI Un monument romain

Un monument romain dans ce vieux pré normand
Est tombé. Les enfants qui font un bruit charmant
Vont jouer là, vers l’heure où le soleil se montre,
Et quand on va du Havre à Dieppe on le rencontre.

Quelque pâtre accroupi sur le bord du chemin
Vous y mène, ou vous suit en vous tendant la main.
Le hameau voisin mêle aux branches ses fumées,
Et l’on entend les coqs chanter dans les ramées.
C’est là, vous dit le pâtre, et vous ne voyez rien.
Des pierres, des buissons. -Mais, en regardant bien,
Si l’on se penche un peu, l’on distingue, dans l’herbe
Où prairial rayonne en sa gaîté superbe,
D’anciens frontons sculptés, bas-reliefs triomphaux,
Monstres chargés de tours et chars ornés de faulx,
Des soldats, qui, sans nuire au vol des hirondelles,
Assiègent sous les fleurs de vagues citadelles;
Et l’on voit, sous les joncs comme sous un linceul,
Le grand César rêvant dans la nuit, triste et seul,
Les daces, noirs profils pleins d’injure et de haine,
L’ombre, et je ne sais quoi qui fut l’aigle romaine.

16 avril 1847.

XVII Les paupières des fleurs,

Les paupières des fleurs, de larmes toujours pleines,
Ces visages brumeux qui, le soir, sur les plaines
De’ssinent-.les vapeurs qui vont se déformant,
Ces profils dont l’ébauche apparaît dans le marbre,
Ces yeux mystérieux ouverts sur les troncs d’arbre,
Les prunelles de l’ombre et du noir firmament
Qui rayonnent partout et qu’aucun mot ne nomme,
Sont les regards de Dieu, toujours surveillant l’homme,
Par le sombre penseur entrevus vaguement.

XVIII L’ÉTÉ À COUTANCES

Ah! l’équinoxe cherche noise
Au solstice, et ce juin charmant
Nous offre une bise sournoise;
L’été de Neustrie est normand!

Notre été chicane et querelle;
Son sourire aime à nous leurrer;
Il se, rétracte; il tonne, il grêle;
Il pleut, manière de pleurer.

Mais qu’importe! entre deux orages,
Ses rayons glissent, fiers vainqueurs,
Et la pourpre est dans les nuages,
Et le triomphe est dans les coeurs.

Cette grande herbe est mon empire.
Je suis l’amant mystérieux
De l’âme obscure qui soupire
Au fond des bois, au fond des cieux!

Je suis roi chez les fleurs vermeilles.
Quelle extase d’être mêlé
Aux oiseaux, aux vents, aux abeilles,
Au vague essor du monde ailé!

L’arbre creux vous offre une chaise;
L’iris vous suit de son oeil bleu;
On contemple; il semble qu’on baise
Le bord de la robe de Dieu.

XIX À GUERNESEY

Ces rocs de l’océan ont tout, terreur et grâce,
Cieux, mers, escarpement devant tout ce qui passe,
Bruit sombre qui parfois semble un hymne béni,
Patience à porter le poids de l’infini;
Et, dans ces fiers déserts qu’un ordre effrayant règle,
On se sent croître une aile; et l’âme y devient aigle.

XX GROS TEMPS LA NUIT

Le vent hurle; la rafale
Sort, ruisselante cavale,
Du gouffre obscur,

Et, hennissant sur l’eau bleue,
Des crins épars de sa queue
Fouette l’azur.

L’horizon, que, l’onde encombre,
Serpent, au bas du ciel sombre
Court tortueux;
Toute la mer est difforme;
L’eau s’emplit d’un bruit énorme
Et monstrueux.

Le flot vient, s’enfuit, s’approche,
Et bondit comme la cloche
Dans le clocher,
Puis tombe, et bondit encore;
La vague immense et sonore
Bat le rocher.
L’océan frappe la terre.
Oh! le forgeron Mystère,
Au noir manteau,
Que forge-t-il dans la brume,
Pour battre une telle enclume
D’un tel marteau?

L’Hydre écaillée à l’oeil glauque
Se roule sur le flot rauque
Sans frein ni mors;
La tempête maniaque
Remue au fond du cloaque
Les os des morts.

La mer chante un chant barbare.
Les marins sont à la barre,
Tout ruisselants;
L’éclair sur les promontoires
Éblouit les vagues noires
De ses yeux blancs.

Les marins qui sont au large
Jettent tout ce qui les charge,
Canons, ballots;
Mais le flot gronde et blasphème:
Ce que je veux, c’est vous-même,
O matelots!

Le ciel et la mer font rage.
C’est la saison, c’est l’orage,
C’est le climat.
L’ombre aveugle le pilote.
La voile en haillons grelotte
Au bout du mât.

Tout se plaint, l’ancre à la proue,
La vergue au câble, la roue
Au cabestan.
On croit voir dans l’eau qui gronde,
Comme un mont roulant sous l’onde,
Léviathan.

Tout prend un hideux langage;
Le roulis parle au tangage,
La hune au foc;
L’un dit: -L’eau sombre se lève.
L’autre dit: -Le hameau rêve
Au chant du coq.

C’est un vent de l’autre monde
Qui tourmente l’eau profonde

De tout côté,
Et qui rugit dans l’averse;
L’éternité bouleverse L’immensité.

C’est fini. La cale est pleine.
Adieu, maison, verte plaine,
Âtre empourpré!
L’homme crie: ô Providence!
La mort aux dents blanches danse
Sur le beaupré.

Et dans la sombre mêlée,
Quelque fée échevelée,
Urgel, Morgan,
À travers le vent qui souffle,
Jette en riant sa pantoufle
À l’ouragan.

2 février 1854.

XXI DANS MA STALLE

Ô vieil antre, devant le sourcil, que tu fronces,
Parmi les joncs sifflants, les épines, les ronces,
Et les chardons, broutés par l’âne positif,
Sous la protection d’un grand chêne attentif
Qui battait la mesure avec sa tête énorme,
Poussait le coude au frêne et faisait signe à l’orme,
Au fond du hallier sombre, où, dans l’arbre entr’ouvert,
La fée, à des coussins de mousse en velours vert,
S’accoude, -une linotte, encor toute petite,
Débutait. Dans le lierre et dans la clématite,
Une fauvette dit: Pas mal! puis fredonna;
Et, rêveur, j’écoutais cette prima donna.

15 octobre 1854.

XXII C’est l’heure

C’est l’heure où le sépulcre appelle la chouette.
On voit sur l’horizon l’étrange silhouette
D’un bras énorme ayant des courbes de serpent;
On dirait qu’il protège, on dirait qu’il répand
On ne sait quel amour terrible dans cette ombre.
C’est Arimane. O ciel, sous les astres sans nombre,
Dans l’air, dans la nuée où volent les griffons,
Dans le chaos confus des branchages profonds,
Dans les prés, dans les monts, dans la grande mer verte,
Dans l’immensité bleue aux “aurores ouverte,
Qu’est-ce donc que l’esprit de haine peut aimer?
Lui qui veut tout flétrir, que fait-il donc germer?
Qu’est-ce que dans l’azur son doigt noir peut écrire?
Sur qui donc fixe-t-il son effrayant sourire?
Que regarde-t-il donc avec paternité?
Fait-il croître un hiver tel qu’on n’ait plus d’été?
Pour les dards dans la nuit fait-il luire les cibles?
Il semble heureux. Il parle aux choses invisibles;
Il leur parle si bas, si doucement, qu’on peut
Entendre le rayon de lune qui se meut
Et la vague rumeur des ruches endormies;
Son fantôme agrandit les ténèbres blêmies;
On ne sait ce qu’il fait, on ne sait ce qu’il dit;
Les loups dressent émus leur tête de bandit;
Iblis parle; et la stryge affreuse, la lémure,
Ainsi qu’une promesse accueillent ce murmure;
Rien n’est plus caressant que cette obscure voix;
Comme un nid d’oiseaux chante et jase dans les bois,
Et comme un sein de vierge au fond d’une humble alcôve
S’enfle et s’abaisse, ainsi chuchote l’esprit fauve,
Celui que. Mahomet nomme le sombre émir;
Et cependant, on voit toute -l’ombre frémir, -
Et la mère en son flanc sent l’enfant qui va naître
S’épouvanter, car l’âme humaine craint peut-être,

Quand une main immense apparaît au zénith,
Moins un dieu qui maudit qu’un démon qui bénit.

V. H. 28 avril 1872.

XXIII SOIR

Septentrion, delta de soleils dans les cieux,
Écrit du nom divin la sombre majuscule;
Vénus, pâle, éblouit le blême crépuscule;
Traînant quelque branchage obscur et convulsif,
Le bûcheron contemple en son esprit pensif
La marmite chauffant au feu son large ventre,
Rit, et presse le pas; l’oiseau dort, le boeuf rentre,
Les ânes chevelus passent, portant leurs bâts;
Puis tout bruit vivant cesse; et l’on entend tout bas
Parler la, folle avoine et le pied-d’alouette.
Tandis que l’horizon se change en silhouette,
Et que les halliers noirs au souffle de la nuit
Tressaillent, par endroits l’eau dans l’ombre reluit,
Et les blancs nénuphars, fleurs où vivent des fées,
Les bleus myosotis, les iris, les nymphées,
Penchés et frissonnants, mirent leurs sombres yeux
Dans de vagues miroirs, clairs et mystérieux.

XXIV Nuit,

Nuit, tu me fais l’effet ce soir, ô nuit glacée,
D’avoir quelque mauvaise et lugubre pensée;
Tu t’avances sans lune, et sans souffle, et sans bruit;
Est-ce donc que tu veux trahir, ô sombre nuit,
Et saisir brusquement dans l’ombre, et, toi qui lâches
Tous les êtres méchants et tous les êtres lâches,
Livrer à quelqùe bec noir; sinistre, enflammé,
L’oiseau qui dort, et qui, confiant, l’oeil fermé,
Son aile recouvrant sa tête délicate,
Tient le tremblant rameau du bon Dieu dans sa patte?

23 mai 1855.

XXV QUAND NOUS QUITTIONS AVRANCHES

Ami, vous souvient-il? quand nous quittions Avranches,
Un beau soleil couchant rayonnait dans les branches.
Notre roue en passant froissait les buissons verts.
Nous regardions tous trois les cieux, les champs, les mers,
Et l’extase un môment fit nos bouches muettes,
Car elle, vous et moi, nous étions trois poëtes.

Doux instants, où le coeur jusqu’aux bords est rempli.
Puis la route tourna, le terrain fit un pli,
L’océan disparut derrière une chaumière.
Cependant tout encore était plein de lumière;
Le soleil grandissait les ombres des passants,
Et faisant briller l’eau des lointains frémissants
Allumait des miroirs sous les rameaux des saules.
Un pont, fait par César quand il vint dans les Gaules,
Montrait à l’horizon son vieux profil romain.
De beaux enfants, pieds nus, couraient dans le chemin;
Nous semions dans leurs mains toute notre monnaie;
Eux, dépouillant le pré, la broussaille et la haie,
Nous lançaient des bouquets aux riantes couleurs;
Nous leur faisions l’aumône, ils nous jetaient des fleurs.
Nous emportions ainsi, tous, notre douce proie,
Eux, un morceau de pain, et nous un peu de joie.

Bientôt tout se voila du crêpe obscur des soirs.
Nous passions au galop dans les villages noirs.
Des formes s’agitaient sur les vitres rougeâtres;
Des visages pourprés riaient autour des âtres.
Cependant, à travers ces visions-de nuit,
Nos quatre ardents chevaux, dans la poudre et le bruit,
Couraient en secouant leurs sonnettes de cuivre,
Et les chiens aboyants s’essoufflaient à les suivre.

Quand le matin des cieux vint bleuir le plafond,

A l’heure où le regard voit, dans l’éther profond,
Pencher vers l’horizon les sept astres du pôle,- Elle laissa tomber son front-sur mon épaule,
Et s’endormit; et nous, nous parlions; nous disions
Que, si la Poésie, aux yeux pleins de rayons,
Comme la-Foi sa soeur, règne sur l’âme humaine,
La Sculpture; payenne, a la chair pour domaine;
Car du génie ancien cet art a le secret;
Et, comme Phidias, Jean Goujon adorait
Diane, la déesse aux longs cheveux d’ébène,
Dont les flèches, troublant la montagne thébaine,
Chassent le daim fuyard qui saute le fossé
Et guette, sur ses pieds de derrière dressé.

Juin 1830

XXVI

Voici le printemps, mars, avril au doux sourire,
Mai fleuri, juin brûlant, tous les beaux mois amis;
Les peupliers, au bord des fleuves endormis,
Se courbent mollement comme de grandes palmes;
L’oiseau palpite au fond des bois tièdes et calmes;
Il semble que tout:rit, et que les arbres verts
Sont joyeux d’être ensemble et se disent des vers.
Le jour naît couronné d’une aube fraîche et tendre,
Le soir est plein d’amour, la nuit, on croit entendre,
A travers l’ombre immense et sous le ciel béni,
Quelque chose d’heureux chanter dans l’infini.

XXVII JARDINS DE LA MARGRAVE SIBYLLE

Le jardin était plein de bonne: compagnie.
Thérèse dans un coin, avec quelque ironie,
Tenait sa cour, menant du bout de l’éventail
Des ducs, des financiers, des prélats, son bétail;
Les terrasses étaient tout en charmille, et mainte
Rhadamire y jasait avec quelque Aramynthe;

Dans l’ombre au fond d’un antre un vieux faune courbé
Faisait du bel esprit avec un jeune abbé;
Deux philosophes gris, se prodiguant le geste,
Disputaient, et mêlaient le Phédon au Digeste;
L’un répondait Quia quand l’autre disait Cur;
Les grottes rayonnaient, et, dans le clair-obscur,
On. voyait les bras nus et les gorges de marbre
Des déesses riant parmi les branches d’arbre,
Pendant que des marquis en manteaux espagnols
Leur lisaient des sonnets sifflés des rossignols.

XXVIII Seul dans tes grands bois

Seul dans tes grands bois, seul dans tes grandes pensées,
Tu marches, et les vents, les feuilles balancées,
Les sources, les oiseaux t’approchent sans effroi,
Les vieux arbres pensifs dont l’ombre emplit la cime,
Chantent autour de toi le même hymne sublime
Que ton âme, ô rêveur, chante au dedans de toi!

XXIX CE QUE C’EST QUE DE SORTIR EN EMPORTANT UN NUMÉRO DU CONSTITUTIONNEL

Il fait beau, l’air est pur; le ciel est d’un bleu tendre;
A bas l’hiver. Géronte, adieu; bonjour, Clitandre,
Je ne me le fais pas dire deux fois, l’été
Nous appelle, et l’idylle est mise en liberté;
Ah! je profiterai, certes, de l’ouverture
Des portes, puisque avril nous livre la nature,
Et puisque le printemps nous invite à venir
Entendre les chevaux de l’aurore hennir.
Mon programme est ceci: là-haut des voix divines;
Les fleurs prendront des airs penchés dans les ravines;
Lalagé se mettra des roses sur le front,
Et rira; les rayons des deux sexes pourront
Se mêler; le gazon sera sans pruderie;
Les bois murmureront Ici l’on se marie;
Et l’arbre aura tant d’ombre-et les coeurs tant de feu
Qu’on ne trouvera pas un seul défaut à Dieu;
Pan nous laissera voir sa grande âme attendrie;
La nature sera pleine de rêverie;
Rien ne se gênerà pour vivre et pour aimer;
Par des, chuchotements on s’entendra nommer,
Et l’on croira qu’au fond les oiseaux nous connaissent;
Les cieux,-les eaux; les prés où les églogues naissent,
Seront presque aussi beaux qu’un décor d’opéra
Les papillons feront tout ce qui leur plaira;
Les nids échangeront-tout bas et sous les branches
De libres questions et des réponses franches,
Et je respirerai l’odeur-des liserons,
Et l’ombre sera tiède, et nous mépriserons
Ensemble au fond des bois, ô nymphes de Sicile, Barbey d’Aurevilly; l’effroyable imbécile.

8 mai.

XXX Seul au fond d’un désert,

Seul au fond d’un désert, avez-vous quelquefois
Entendit des éclats de rire dans les bois?
Avez-vous fui, baigné d’une sueur glacée?
Et, plongeant à demi l’oeil de votre pensée
Dans ce monde inconnu d’où sort la vision,
Avez-vous médité sur la création
Pleine, en ses profondeurs étranges et terribles,
Du noir fourmillement des choses invisibles

7 juillet 1846.

XXXI Cette création,

Cette création, t’a semblée immortelle,
Meurt; mais comment naît-elle? et comment finit-elle?
Oh! quel-oeil sombre a vu des mondes expirer?
Vers le cloaque noir qui doit les engouffrer
Ils voguent presque éteints, ils descendent; ils roulent;
Des flots d’éternité sur leurs orbes s’écroulent;
Et l’agonie affreuse en ses exhalaisons
Engloutit lentement leurs vagues horizons;
Ils passent effrayants dans des lueurs livides;
Ils semblent, dans l’horreur des immensités vides,
Des coques de vaisseaux monstrueux dérivant
Sous on ne sait quel fauve et lamentable vent,
Des crânes de géants, des têtes foudroyées;
Leurs-sinistres rondeurs flottent, demi-noyées;
L’impulsion qui prend ce qui n’est plus vivant
Et qui chasse la larve et la cendre en avant,
Pousse vers le néant ces tragiques masures;
Ils perdent, comme on perd le sang par ses blessures,
Les éléments de l’être en dissolution;
La mort blême sur eux plane, sombre alcyon;
Et, dans l’obscurité qui, sous l’immense brume,
Les couvre de sa noire et formidable écume,
Comme des naufragés qui de l’esquif profond,
Pâles, l’un après l’autre, à la nage s’en vont,
Le temps, le jour, l’espace, et la forme, et le nombre,
Quittent lugubrement ces épaves de l’ombre.

XXXII Ne vous croyez ni grand,

Ne vous croyez ni grand, ni petit! Contemplez.
Asseyez-vous le soir sous les cieux étoilés,
Sur le penchant d’un mont, près de la mer profonde.
Voyez s’évanouir les écumes sur l’onde;
Voyez sortir des flots les constellations;
Regardez trembler l’algue et fuir les alcyons;
Écoutez les bruits sourds qu’on entend dans cette ombre;

De vos ans écoulés rappelez-vous le nombre;
Laissez votre âme, en deuil de la fuite des jours,
Se fondre au souvenir de vos jeunes amours;

Pleurez, tandis que l’eau murmure sur la grève;
Et puis, songez à Dieu, qui regarde et qui rêve,
Toujours clément, toujours penché, toujours veillant,

À Dieu qui du même oeil égal et bienveillant
Voit la comète ouvrant sa flamboyante queue,
Et l’humble oiseau perdu dans l’immensité bleue.

28 juillet 1846.

XXXIII Dans les ravins

Dans les ravins la route oblique
Fuit   -Il voit luire au-dessus d’eux
Le ciel sinistre et métallique
A travers des arbres hideux.

Des êtres rôdent sur les rives;
Le nénuphar nocturne éclôt;
Des agitations furtives
Troublent l’herbe, rident le flot.

Les larges estompes de l’ombre,
Mêlant les lueurs et les eaux,
Ébauchent dans la plaine sombre
L’aspect monstrueux du chaos.

Voici que les spectres se dressent.
D’où sortent-ils? que veulent-ils?
Dieu! de toutes parts apparaissent
Toutes sortes d’affreux profils!

Il marche. Les heures sont lentes.
Il voit là-haut tout en marchant
S’allumer ces pourpres sanglantes,
Splendeurs lugubr`es du couchant.

Au loin, une cloche, une enclume,
Jettent-dans l’air leurs faibles coups.
A ses pieds flotte. dans la brume
Le paysage immense et doux.

Tout s’éteint. L’horizon recule.
Il regarde en ce lointain noir
Se former dans le crépuscule
Les vagues ,figures du soir.

La plaine, qu’une brise effleure,
Ajoute, ouverte au. vent des nuits,
A la solennité de l’heure
L’apaisement de tous les bruits. -

À peine, ténébreux murmures,
Entend-on, dans l’espace mort,
Les palpitations obscures
De ce qui veillé quand tout dort.

Les broussailles, les grès, les ormes,
Le vieux saule, le pan de mur,

Deviennent les contours difformes
De je ne sais quel monde obscur.

L’insecte aux nocturnes élytres
Imite le cri des sabbats.
Les étangs sont comme des vitres
Par où l’on voit le ciel d’en bas.

Par degrés, monts, forêts, cieux, terre,
Tout prend l’aspect terrible et grand
D’un monde entrant dans un mystère,
D’un navire dans l’ombre entrant.

XXXIV NUIT

Le ciel d’étain au ciel de cuivre
Succède. La nuit fait un pas.
Les choses de l’ombre vont vivre.
Les arbres se parlent tout bas.

Le vent, soufflant des empyrées,
Fait frissonner dans l’onde où luit
Le drap d’or des claires soirées,
Les sombres moires de la nuit.

Puis la nuit fait un pas encore.
Tout à l’heure, tout écoutait.
Maintenant nul bruit n’ose éclore;
Tout s’enfuit, se cache et se tait.

Tout ce qui vit, existe ou pense,
Regarde avec anxiété
S’avancer ce sombre silence
Dans cette sombre immensité.

C’est l’heure où toute créature
Sent distinctement dans les cieux,
Dans la grande étendue obscure
Le grand Être mystérieux!

II

Dans ses réflexions profondes,
Ce Dieu qui détruit en créant,
Que pense-t-il de tous ces mondes
Qui vont du chaos au néant?

Est-ce à nous qu’il prête l’oreille?
Est-ce aux anges? Est-ce aux démons?

A quoi songe-t-il, lui qui veille
A l’heure trouble où nous dormons?

Que de soleils, spectres sublimes,
Que d’astres à l’orbe éclatant,
Que de mondes dans ces abîmes
Dont peut-être il n’est pas content!

Ainsi que des monstres énormes
Dans l’océan illimité,
Que de créations difformes
Roulent dans cette obscurité!

L’univers, où sa, sève coule,
Mérite-t-il de le fixer?
Ne va-t-il pas briser ce moule,
Tout jeter, et recommencer?

III

Nul asile que la prière!
Cette heure sombre nous fait voir
La création tout entière
Comme un grand édifice noir!

Quand flottent les ombres glacées,
Quand l’azur s’éclipse à nos yeux,
Ce sont d’effrayantes pensées
Que celles qui viennent des cieux!

Oh! la nuit muette et livide
Fait vibrer quelque chose en nous!
Pourquoi cherche-t-on dans le vide?
Pourquoi tombe-t-on à genoux?

Quelle est cette secrète fibre?
D’où vient que, sous ce. morne effroi,

Le moineau ne se sent plus libre,
Le lion ne se sent plus roi?

Questions dans l’ombre enfouies!
Au fond du ciel de deuil couvert,
Dans ces profondeurs inouïes
Où l’âme plonge, où l’oeil se perd,

Que se passe-t-il de terrible
Qui fait que l’homme, esprit banni,
A peur de votre calme horrible,
O ténèbres de l’infini?

20 mars 1846.

XXXV L’aube est moins claire,

L’aube est moins claire, l’air moins chaud, le ciel moins pur;
Le soir brumeux ternit les astres de l’azur.
Les longs jours sont passés; les mois charmants finissent.
Hélas! voici déjà les arbres qui jaunissent!
Comme le temps s’en va d’un pas précipité!
Il semble que nos yeux, qu’éblouissait l’été,
Ont à peine eu le temps de voir les feuilles vertes.

Pour qui vit comme moi les fenêtres ouvertes,
L’automne est triste avec sa bise et son brouillard,
Et l’été qui s’enfuit est un ami qui part.
Adieu, dit cette voix qui dans notre âme pleure,
Adieu, ciel bleu! beau ciel qu’un souffle tiède effleure!
Voluptés du grand air, bruit d’ailes dans les bois,
Promenades, ravins pleins de lointaines voix,
Fleurs, bonheur innocent des âmes apaisées,
Adieu, rayonnements! aubes! chansons! rosées!

Puis tout bas on ajoute: ô jours bénis et doux!
Hélas! vous reviendrez! me retrouverez-vous?

XXXVI L’espace est noir

L’espace est noir, l’onde est sombre;
Là-bas, sur le gouffre obscur,
Brillent le phare dans l’ombre
Et l’étoile dans l’azur.
La nuit pose, pour la voile
Qu’emportent les vents d’avril,
Dans l’espoir sans fin l’étoile,
Le fanal sur le péril.

Deux flambeaux! doublé mystère,
Triste ou providentiel!
L’un avertit de la terre,
Et l’autre avertit du ciel.

15 janvier 1855.

XXXVIIÔ poète!

Ô poète! pourquoi tes stances favorites”
Marchent-elles toujours cueillant des marguerites,
Toujours des liserons et toujours des bleuets,
Et vont-elles s’asseoir au fond des bois muets
Laissant sur leurs pieds nus, lavés par les eaux pures,
Ruisseler les. cressons comme des chevelures?
Pourquoi toujours les champs et jamais les jardins?
D’où te viennent, rêveur, ces étranges dédains?
Loin dés buis rehaussant le sable des allées,
Loin du riant parterre aux touffes étoilées,
Bordé d’oeillets en foule empressés à s’ouvrir,
Pourquoi fuir, et pourquoi ne pas faire fleurir
Dans tes vers, où sourit l’heureux printemps qui t’aime,
Le blanc camélia, le jaune chrysanthème?

Et le poète dit: Nous y viendrons un jour.
Versez dans vos jardins plus de joie et d’amour.
La rêverie a peur des portes et des grilles.
La Liberté, parmi les socs et les faucilles,
Chante dans les prés-verts et rit sous le ciel bleu.
L’homme fait le jardin, les champs sont faits par Dieu.

19 juin 1839.

XXXVIII Dans cette ville où rien ne rit

Dans cette ville où rien ne rit et ne palpite,
Comme dans une femme aujourd’hui décrépite,
On sent que quelque chose, hélas! a disparu!
Les maisons ont un air fâché, rogue et bourru;
Les fenêtres, luisant d’un luisant de limace,
Semblent cligner des yeux et faire la grimace,
Et de chaque escalier et de chaque pignon,
Il sort je ne sais quoi de triste et de grognon.
Des portes à claveaux du temps de Loùis treize,
Des bonshommes de pierre avec pourpoint et fraise,
Des cours avec arceaux en anses de panier,
Force carreaux cassés, maint immonde grenier,
Des tours, de grands toits bleus sur des façades rouges,
Ce serait des palais si ce n’était des bouges.
Voilà ce qu’on rencontre à chaque pas, et puis
D’affreux enfants tout nus jouant au bord des puits.
Quelques arbres malsains, tout couverts de verrues,
Percent le long des murs le pavé dans les rues.
Les écriteaux sont pleins d’un gothique alphabet;
Les poteaux à lanterne ont un air de gibet;
Les vastes murs, les toits aigus, les girouettes,
Font sur le ciel brumeux de mornes silhouettes.
C’est surtout effrayant et lugubre le soir.
Le jour, les habitants sont rares. On croit voir
Partout le même vieux avec la même vieille.
Dans ces réduits vitrés en verres de bouteille,
Dans ces trous où jamais le, soleil n’arriva,
On entend bougonner le siècle qui s’en va.

XXXIX À DOS D’ÉLÉPHANT

Supposez Goliath mené par Myrmidon.
Le cornac est tout jeune et la bête est énorme.
Le palanquin tremblant par instant se déforme
Et vous cahote au point de vous estropier
Sous ses rideaux de cuir et son toit de papier.
Un monstre n’a pas moins de roulis qu’un navire;
Comme un vaisseau chancelle un éléphant chavire,
Et vous avez le mal de mer sur Béhémoth.
Le cornac, nain pensif, conseille à demi-mot
Le colosse, et le monstre écoute et ne se trompe
Sur rien, ni sur le gué qu’il sonde avec sa trompe,
Ni sur la route à suivre, et jamais l’éléphant
N’a peur, pourvu qu’il soit conduit par un enfant.

XL SOIR

Ciel! un fourmillement emplit l’espace noir;
On entend l’invisible errer et se mouvoir;
Près de l’homme endormi tout vit dans les ténèbres.
Le crépuscule, plein de figures funèbres,
Soupire; au fond des bois le daim passe en rêvant;
A quelque être,ignoré qui flotte dans le ,vent
La pervenche. murmure, à voix basse: je t’aime!
La clochette bourdonne auprès du chrysanthème
Et lui dit: paysan, qu’as-tu donc à dormir?
Toute la plaine semble adorer et frémir.
L’élégant peuplier vers le saule difforme
S’incline; le buisson caresse l’antre; l’orme
Au sarment frissonnant tend ses-bras convulsifs;
Les nymphæas, pour plaire aux nénuphars pensifs,
Dressent hors du flot noir leurs blanches silhouettes;
Et voici que partout, pêle-mêle, muettes,
S’éveillent, au milieu des joncs ét des roseaux,
Regardant leur ,front pâle au bleu miroir des eaux,
Courbant leur tige, ouvrant leurs yeux, penchant leurs urnes,
Les roses des étangs, ces coquettes nocturnes 51
Des fleurs déesses font des lueurs dans, la nuit,
Et dans les prés, dans l’herbe où rampe un faible bruit,
Dans l’eau, dans. la, ruine informe et décrépite,
Tout un monde charmant et. sinistre palpite.
C’est que là-haut, au fond du ciel mystérieux,
Dans le.soir vaguement splendide et glorieux,
Vénus rayonne, pure, ineffable et sacrée,
Et, vision, remplit. d’amour l’ombre effarée.

6 mars 1854.

XLI UN DESSIN D’ALBERT-DORER

MINUIT

Le frêle esquif’sur la mer sombre
Sombre;
La foudre perce d’un éclair
L’air.

C’est minuit. L’eau gémit, le tremble
Tremble,
Et tout bruit dans le manoir
Noir;

Sur la tour inhospitalière;
Lierre,
Dans les fossés du haut donjon,
Jonc;

Dans les cours, dans les colossales
Salles,
Et dans les cloîtres du couvent,
Vent.

La cloche, de son aile attèinte;
Tinte;
Et son bruit -tremble en s’envolant,
Lent.

Le son qui dans l’air se disperse
Perce
La tombe où le mort inconnu,
Nu,

Épélant quelque obscur problème Blême,

Tandis qu’au loin -le vent mugit;
Gît.

Tous se répandent dans les ombres,
Sombres,
Rois, reines, clercs; soudàrds, nonnains,
Nains.

La voix qu’ils élèvent ensemble
Semble
Le dernier soupir qu’un mourant
Rend.

Les ombres vont au clair de lune,
L’une
En mitre, et l’autre en chaperon
Rond.

Celle-ci qui roule un rosaire
Serre
Dans ses bras un. enfant tremblant,
Blanc.

Celle-là, voilée. et touchante,
Chante
Au bord d’un gouffre où le serpent Pend.

D’autres, qui dans Pair.se promènent,
Mènent
Par. monts et vaux des palefrois,
Froids.

L’enfant mort, à la pâle joue,
Joue;
Le gnome grimace, et l’Esprit
Rit:

On dirait que le beffroi pleure;
L’heure
Semble dire en traînant son glas:
Las!

Enfant! retourne dans ta tombe!
Tombe
Sous le, pavé des corridors,
Dors!

L’enfer souillerait ta faiblesse.
Laisse
Ses banquets à tes envieux, Vieux.

C’est aller -au sabbat trop jeune!
Jeûne,
Garde-toi de leurs jeux hideux,
D’eux!

Vois-tu dans la. sainte phalange
L’ange
Qui vient t’ouvrir le paradis,
,.Dis?

Ains la mort nous chasse et nous foule,
Foule
De héros petits et d’étroits Rois.

Attilas, Césars, Cléopâtres,
Pâtres,
Vieillards narquois et jouvenceaux,
Sots,

Bons évêquesà charge d’âmes,

Dames,
Saints docteurs, lansquenets fougueux,
Gueux,
Nous serons un jour, barons, prêtres,
Reîtres,
Avec nos voeux et nos remords
Morts.
Pour moi, quand l’ange qui réclame
L’âme
Se viendra sur ma couche un soir
Seoir;

Alors, quand sous la pierre froide,
Roide;
Je ferai le somme de plomb,
Long;

Ô toi, qui dans mes fautes mêmes,
M’aimes,
Viens vite, si tu te souviens,
Viens
T’étendre à ma droite, endormie,
Mie;
Car on a froid dans le linceul,
Seul.

26 décembre 1827.

XLII Qui donc mêle au néant de l’homme vicieux

Qui donc mêle au néant de l’homme vicieux
Des vertus de la terre et des lueurs des cieux?
Flambant la nuit plein de ramée,
Ton âtre te ressemble, homme, énigme sans mot;
Les étincelles sont dans sa cendre, et, là-haut,
Les étoiles dans sa fumée.

XLIII O RUS?

Laissons.les hommes noirs bâcler dans leur étable.
Des lois qui vont nous faire un bien épouvantable;
Allons-nous-en aux bois;
Allons-nous-en chez Dieu, dans les prés où l’on aime,
Près des lacs où l’on rêve, et ne sachons pas même
Si des gens. font des lois!

Oh! quand on.peut s’enfuir aux champs, dans le grand songe,
Dans les fleurs, sous les cieux, les hommes de mensonge,
Prêtres, despotes, rois,
Comme c’est peu de chose, et comme ces: maroufles
Sont des fantômes vite effacés dans les souffles,
Les rayons et les voix!

Laissons-les s’acharner à leur folle aventure.
Enfants, allons-nous-en là-haut, dans la nature.
Mai dore le ravin,
Tout rit, les papillons et leur douce poursuite
Passent, l’arbre est en fleur, venez, prenons la fuite
Dans cet oubli divin.
L’évanouissement des soucis de la terre
Est là; les champs. sont purs; là souriait Voltaire, Là songeait Diderot;
On se sent rassuré par les parfums;.les roses
Nous consolent, étant ignorantes des choses
Que l’homme connaît trop.

Là, rien ne s’interrompt, rien ne finit’d’éclore;
Le rosier respiré par Eve embaume encore
Nos deuils et nos amours; -
Et la pervenche est plus éternelle que Rome;
Car ce qui dure peu, monts-et forêts, c’est l’homme;
Les fleurs durent toujours.
La Pyramide après trois mille ans est ,ridée,

Le lys n’a pas un pli. -Ni la fleur, ni l’idée,
Ni le vrai, ni le beau,
N’expirent; Dieu refait sans cesse leur jeunesse;
La mort c’est l’aube, et c’est afin que tout renaisse
Que Dieu fit le tombeau.

Ô splendeur! ô douceur! l’étendue infinie
Est un balancement d’amour et d’harmonie;

Contemplons à genoux;
Une voix sort du ciel et dans nos fibres passe;
De là nos chants profonds; le rythme est dans l’espace
Et la lyre est en nous.
Venez, tous mes enfants, tous mes amis! les plaines,
Les lacs, les bois n’ont point de perfides haleines
Et de haineux reflux;
Venez; soyons un groupe errant dans la prairie,
Qui va dans l’ombre avec des mots de rêverie
Et ne sait même plus,

Tant il sent vivre en lui la nature immortelle,
Si la Chambre a quitté Pantin pour Bagatelle,
Versailles pour Saint-Cloud,
Et si le pape enfin daigne rougir la jupe
Du prêtre dont le nom commence comme dupe
Et finit comme loup.

27 mai 1875.

XLIV C’est l’hiver.

C’est l’hiver. Ô villes folles,
Dansez! Dans le bal béant
Tourbillonnent les paroles
De la joie et du néant.

L’homme flotte dans la voie
Où l’homme errant se perdit;
En bas le plaisir flamboie,
En haut l’amour resplendit.

Le plaisir, clarté hagarde
Du faux rire et des faux biens,
Dit au noir passant: Prends garde!
L’amour rayonne et dit: Viens! -

Ces deux lueurs, sur la lame
Guidant l’hydre et l’alcyon,
Nous éclairent; toute l’âme
Vogue à ce double rayon.

Mer!j’ai fui loin des Sodomes;
Je cherche tes grands tableaux;
Mais ne voit-on pas les hommes
Quand on regarde les flots?

Les spectacles de l’abîme
Ressemblent à ceux du cour;
Le vent est le fou sublime,
Le jonc est le-nain moqueur.

Comme un ami l’onde croule;
Sitôt que le jour s’enfuit
La mer n’est plus qu’une foule
Qui querellé dans la nuit;

Le désert de l’eau qui souffre
Est plein de cris et de voix,
Et parle dans tout le gouffre
A toute l’ombre à la fois.
Où donc est la clarté? Cieux, où donc est, la flamme?
Où. donc est 1a lumière éternelle de l’âme?.
Où donc est. le regard. joyeux..qui voit toujours?
Depuis qu’en proie aux deuils, aux luttes, aux amours,
Plaignant parfois l’heureux plus que le misérable,
Je traverse, pensif, la vie impénétrable,
J’ai sans cesse vu l’heure, en tournant pas à pas,
Teindre d’ébène et d’or les branches du compas.
Penché sur la nature, immense apocalypse,
Cherchant cette lueur qui. jamais ne s’éclipse,
Chaque fois que mon oeil s’ouvre après le sommeil,
Hélas! j’ai toujours vu, riant, vainqueur, vermeil,
De derrière la cime et les pentes sans nombre
Et les blêmes versants de la montagne. d’ombre,
Le bleu matin surgir, -disant: Aimez! vivez!
Et rouler devant lui de ,ses deux bras levés -
L’obscurité, bloc triste aux épaisseurs funèbres;
Et, le soir,. j’ai ,toujours, sous le roc des ténèbres,
Tas monstrueux de brume où nul regard ne luit,
Vu retomber le jour, Sisyphe de la nuit. -

7 janvier 1855.
Que dit-il? Dieu seul recueille
Ce blasphème ou ce sanglot;
Dieu seul répond à la feuille,
Et Dieu seul réplique au flot.

XLVI UNITÉ

Veux-tu te figurer le monde?
Coupe un tronc d’arbre dans -les bois.
L’aubier sur sa surface ronde
Offre cent sphères à la fois.
L’oeil peut retrouver chaque orbite
Que la planète d’or habite
Dans les cercles du bois vermeil;
La sève erre en leur zone obscure
Comme Mars, Vénus et Mercure;
Le noeud du centre est le soleil.

XLVII Ô champs mystérieux!

Ô champs mystérieux! Vallons! Eden visible!
Je suis doux comme vous et comme vous paisible!
Oiseaux! j’ai quelque peine à rappeler parfois
Mes strophes qui s’en vont avec vous dans les bois!
Nature! de vos chants ma chanson se compose,
Et je suis votre écho si je suis quelque chose.
Car j’inonde mon âme et mon vers attristé
De votre rêverie et de votre beauté,
J’admire, -et m’emplissant de vos douéeurs secrètes
Je fais ce que je suis avec ce que vous êtes!

XLVIII ARRIVÉE

On arrête. Un falot flambe aux pieds d'une Vierge.
C'est là. -Le voyageur aspire à des draps blancs;
Le cocher cogne, et jure, et crie: Hé, dans l'auberge!
Et le silencé noir s'emplit de chiens hurlants.

L'hôte arrive en chemise avec une pantoufle;
La porte ouvre un battant et l'hôtesse ouvre un oeil;
La chandelle frissonne, et, dans le vent qui souffle,
La servante aux yeux ronds s'effare sur le seuil.

XLIX Chacun choisit un homme,

Chacun choisit un homme, et moi j’ai choisi Dieu!
Oui, j’ai, pour l’expliquer à la foule muette,
Pris le plus grand poème et le plus grand poète!
Je ne lis pas du grec ni du latin; je lis
Les horizons brumeux, les soirs doux et pâlis,
Le ciel bleu, le lac sombre où l’étoile se mire;
Je déchiffre le cœur de l’homme, le sourire,
Le soupir, le regard, la voix que nous aimons,
Puis et toujours, les champs, les forêts et les monts,
Et dans mon œuvre grave et parfois solennelle,
Je traduis la nature, épopée éternelle.

I EFFETS DE RÉVEIL

On ouvre les yeux; rien ne remue; on entend
Au chevet de son lit la montre palpitant;
La fenêtre livide. aux spectres est pareille;
On est gisant ainsi qu'un mort. On se réveille,
Pourquoi? parce qu'on s'est la veille réveillé
Au même instant. Ainsi qu'un rouage rouillé
Et vieilli, mais exact, l'âme a ses habitudes.
Oh! la nuit, c'est la plus sombre des solitudes.
L'heure apparaît, entrant, sortant, comme un passeur
D'ombres, et notre esprit voit tout dans la noirceur;
Des pas saris but, des deuils sans fin, des maux sans nombre.
Le rêve qu'on avait et qui tremblait dans-l'ombre; .
S'ajuste à la pensée indistincte qu'on a.
Tous les gouffres au bord desquels nous amèna
Ce fantôme appelé le Hasard, reparaissent;
Les mêmes visions redoutables s'y dressent;
Ici le précipice, ici l'écroulement,
Ici la chute, ici ce qui fuit, ce qui ment,
Ce qui tue, et là-bas, dans l'âpre transparence,
Les vagues bras levés de la pâle espérance.
Comme on est triste! on sent l'inexprimable effroi;
On croit avoir le mur du tombeau devant soi; .
On médite, effaré par les. choses possibles;
Toute rive s'efface. On voit les invisibles,.
Les absents, les manquants, cette morte, ce mort,
On leur tend les mains.. Ombre et songe! On se rendort...

Homme, debout! voici le jour, l'aube ravie,
L'azur; et qu'est-ce donc qui rentre? C'est la vie,

C'est le cri du travail, c'est le chant des oiseaux,
C'est le rayonnement des champs, des airs, des eaux;
La nuit traîne un linceul, l'aurore agite un lange;
Tout ce qu'on vient de voir spectre, on le revoit ange;

Du père qu’on vit mort on voit l’enfant vivant;
Le monde reparaît, clair comme auparavant;
On ne reconnaît plus son âme; elle était noire,
Elle est blanche; elle espère et se remet à croire,
A sourire, à vouloir; on a devant les yeux
Un éblouissement doré, chantant, joyeux,
On ne sait quel fouillis charmant de lueurs roses;
Et tout l’homme est changé parce qu’on voit les choses,
Les hommes, Dieu, les cœurs, les amours, le destin,
A travers le vitrail splendide du matin.

V. H. 14 septembre 1872.

II Quand l’enfant nous regarde,

Quand l’enfant nous regarde, on sent Dieu nous sonder.
Quand il pleure, j’entends le tonnerre gronder;
Car penser c’est entendre; et le visionnaire
Est souvent averti par un vague tonnerre.
Quand ce petit être, humble et pliant les genoux,
Attache doucement sa prunelle sur nous,
Je ne sais pas pourquoi je tremble; quand cette âme,
Qui n’est pas homme encore et n’est, pas encor femme,
En qui rien ne s’admire et rien ne se repent,
Sans sexe, sans passé derrière elle rampant,
Verse, à travers les cils de sa rose paupière,
Sa clarté dans laquelle on sent de la prière,
Sur nous les combattants, les vaincus, les vainqueurs,
Quand ce pur esprit semble, interroger nos coeurs,
Quand cet ignorant, plein d’un jour que rien n’efface,
A l’air de regarder notre science en face,
Et jette, dans cette ombre où passe Adam banni,
On ne sait quel rayon de rêve et d’infini,
On dirait, tant l’enfance est ressemblante au temple;
Que la lumière, chose étrange, nous contemple;
Toute la profondeur du ciel est dans cet oeil.
Fût-on Christ ou Socrate, eût-on droit à l’orgueil,
On dit: laissez venir à moi cette auréole!
Comme on sent qu’il était hier l’esprit qui vole!
Comme on sent manquer l’aile à ce petit pied blanc!
Oh! comme c’est débile et frêle et chancelant!
Comme on devine aux cris de cette bouche, un songe
De paradis qui jusqu’en enfer se prolonge,
Et que le doux enfant ne veut pas voir finir!
L’homme, ayant un passé, craint pour cet avenir.;
Que la vie apparaît fatale! Comme on pense
A tant de peine avec si peu de récompense!
Oh! ,comme on s’attendrit sur ce nouveau venu!
Lui cependant, qu’est-il, ô vivants? l’inconnu.

Qu’a-t-il en lui? l’énigme. Et que porte-t-il? , l’âme.
Il vit à peine; il est si chétif qu’il, réclame
Du brin d’herbe ondoyant aux vents, un point d’appui;
Parfois, lorsqu’il se tait, on le croit presque enfui,
Car on a peur que tout ici-bas ne le blesse.
Lui, que fait-il? Il rit. Fait d’ombre et de faiblesse Et de tout ce qui tremble, il ne craint rien. Il est
Parmi nous le seul être encor vierge et complet;
L’ange devient l’enfant lorsqu’il se rapetisse;
Si toute pureté contient toute justice,
On ne rencontre -pas l’enfant sans quelque effroi;
On sent qu’on est devant un plus juste que soi;
C’est l’atome, le nain souriant, le pygmée;
Et quand il passe, honneur, gloire, éclat, renommée,
Méditent; on se dit tout bas: Si je priais?
On rêve; et les plus grands sont les plus inquiets;
Sa haute exception dans notre obscure sphère,
C’est que n’ayant rien fait, lui seul n’a pu mal faire.;
Le monde est un mystère inondé de clarté;
L’enfant. est sous l’énigme adorable abrité.;
Toutes les vérités couronnent, condensées
Ce doux front qui n’a pas encore. de pensées;
On comprend que l’enfant, ange de nos douleurs,
Si petit ici-bas, doit être grand ailleurs;
Il se traîne, il trébuche.; il n’a dans l’attitude,
Dans la voix, dans le geste, aucune certitude;
Un souffle à qui la fleur résiste fait ployer
Cet être à qui fait peur le grillon du foyer;
L’oeil hésite pendant que la lèvre bégaie;
Dans ce naïf regard que l’ignorance égaie
L’étonnement avec la grâce se confond,
Et l’immense lueur étoilée est au fond:

Juin 1874.

III LA FEMME

Je l’ai dit quelque part, les penseurs d’autrefois, Épiant l’inconnu dans ses plus noires lois,
Ont tous étudié la formation d’Ève.
L’un en fit son problème et l’autre en fit son rêve.
L’horreur sacrée étant dans tout, se pourrait-il
Que la femme, cet être obscur, puissant, subtil,
Fût double, et, tout ensemble ignorée et charnelle,
Fît hors d’elle l’aurore, ayant la nuit en elle?
Le hibou serait-il caché dans l’alcyon?
Qui dira le secret de la création?
Les germes, les aimants, les instincts, les effluves!
Qui peut connaître à fond toutes ces sombrès cuves?
Est-ce que le Vésuve et l’Etna, les reflux
Des forces s’épuisant en efforts superflus,
Le vaste tremblement des feuilles remuées,
Les ouragans, les fleurs, les torrents,. les nuées,
Ne peuvent pas finir par faire une vapeur.
Qui se condense en femme et dont le sage a peur?
Tout fait Tout, et le même insondable cratère
Crée à Thulé la lave et la rose à Cythère.
Rien ne sort des volcans qui n’entre dans lès coeurs.
Les oiseaux dans les bois ont des rires moqueurs
Et tristes, au-dessus de l’amoureux crédule.
N’est-ce pas le serpent qui vaguement ondule
Dans la souple beauté des vierges aux seins nus?
Les grands sages étaient d’immenses ingénus;
Ils ne connaissaient pas la forme de ce globe,
Mais, pâles, ils sentaient traîner sur eux la robe
De la sombre passante, Isis au voile noir;
Tout devient le soupçon quand Rien est lè savoir;
Pour Lucrèce, le dieu, pour Job, le kéroubime
Mentaient; on soupçonnait de trahison l’abîme;
On croyait le chaos càpable d’engendrer
La femme, pour nous plaire et pour nous enivrer,

Et pour faire monter jusqu’à nous sa fumée;
La Sicile, la Grèce étrange, l’Idumée,
L’Iran, l’Egypte et l’Inde, étaient des lieux profonds;
Qui sait ce que les, vents, les brumes, les typhons
Peuvent apporter d’ombre à l’âme féminine?
Les tragiques forêts de la chaîne Apennine,
La farouche fontaine épandue à longs flots
Sous l’Olympe, à travers les pins et les bouleaux,
L’antre de Béotie où dans l’ombre diffuse
On sent on ne sait quoi qui s’offre et se refuse,
Chypre et tous ses parfums, Delphe et tous ses rayons,
Lé lys que nous cueillons, l’azur que nous voyons,
Tout cela, c’est auguste, et c’est peut-être infâme.
Tout, à leurs yeux, était sphinx, et quand une femme
Venait vers eux, parlant avec sa douce voix,
Qui sait? peut-être Hermès et Dédale, les bois,
Les nuages, les eaux, l’effrayante Cybèle,
Toute l’énigme était mêlée à cette belle.

L’univers aboutit à ce monstre charmant.
La ménade est -déjà presque un commencement
De la femmè-chimère, et d’antiques annales
Disent qu’avril était le temps des bacchanales,
Et que la liberté de ces fêtes s’accrut
Des fauves impudeurs de la nature en rut;
La nature partout donne. l’exemple énorme
De l’accouplement sombre où l’âme étreint la forme;
La rose est une fille; et ce qu’un papillon
Fait à la plante, est fait au grain par le sillon.
La végétation terrible est ignorée.
L’horreur des bois unit Flore avec Briarée,
Et marie une fleur avec l’arbre aux cent bras.
Toi qui sous le talon d’Apollon te cabras,
O cheval orageux du Pinde, tes narines
Frémissaient quand passaient les nymphes vipérines,
Et, sentant là de l’ombre hostile à ta clarté,
Tu t’enfuyais devant la sinistre Astarté.

Et Terpandre le vit, et Platon le raconte.

La femme est une. gloire et peut être une honte
Pour l’ouvrier divin et suspect qui la fit.
A tout le bien, à tout le mal, elle suffit.
Haine, amour, fange, esprit, fièvre, élIe participe
Du gouffre, et la matière aveugle est son principe.
Elle est le mois de mai fait chair, vivant, chantant.
Qu’est-ce que le printemps? une orgie. A l’instant,
Où la femme naquit, est morte l’innocence.
Les vieux songeurs ont vu la fleur qui nous encense
Devenir femme à l’heure où l’astre éclôt au ciel,
Et, pour Orphée ainsi que pour Ézéchiel,
La nature n’étant qu’un vaste hymen, l’ébauche
D’un être tentateur rit dans cette débauche;
C’est la femme. Elle est spectre et masque, et notré sort
Est traversé par elle; elle entre, flotte et sort.
Que nous veut-elle? A-t-elle un but? Par quelle issue
Cette apparition vaguement aperçue
S’est-elle dérobée? Est-ce un souffle de nuit
Qui semble une âme errante et qui s’évanouit?
Les sombres hommes sont une forêt, et l’ombre
Couvre leurs pas, leurs voix, leurs yeux, leur bruit, leur nombre;
Le genre humain, mêlé sous les hauts firmaments,
Est plein de carrefours et d’entre-croisements,
Et la femme est assez blanche pour qu’on la voie
A travers cette morne et blême claire-voie.
Cette vision passe; et l’on reste effaré.
Aux chênes de Dodone, aux cèdres de Membré,
L’hiérophante ému comme le patriarche
Regarde ce fantôme. inquiétant qui marche.
Non, rien ne nous dira ce que peut être au fond Cet être en qui Satan avec Dieu se confond:
Elle résume l’ombre énorme en son essence.
Les vieux payens croyaient à la toute-puissance
De l’abîme, du lit sans fond, de l’élément;
Ils épiaient la mer dans son enfantement;

Pour eux, ce qui sortait de la tempête immense,
De toute l'onde en proie aux souffles en démence
Et du vaste flot vert à jamais tourmenté,
C'était le divin sphinx féminin, la Beauté,
Toute nue, infernale et céleste, insondable, -
Ô gouffre! et que peut-on voir de plus formidable,
Sous les cieux les plus noirs et les plus inconnus,
Que l'océan ayant pour écume Vénus!
Aucune aile ici-bas n'est pour longtemps posée.
Quand elle était petite, elle avait un oiseau;
Elle le nourrissait de pain et de rosée,
Et veillait sur son nid comme sur un berceau.
Un soir il s'échappa.Que de plaintes amères!
Dans mes bras en pleurant je la vis accourir... -
Jeunes filles, laissez, laissez, ô jeunes mères,
Les oiseaux s'envoler et les enfants mourir!

C'est une loi d'en haut qui veut. que tout nous quitte.
Le secret du Seigneur, nous le saurons un jour.
Elle grandit. La vie, hélas! marche si vite!
Elle eut un doux enfant, un bel ange, un amour.
Une nuit, triste sort des choses éphémères!
Cet enfant s'éteignit, sans pleurer, sans souffrir... -
Jeunes filles, laissez, laissez, ô jeunes mères,
Les oiseaux s'envoler et les enfants mourir!

22 juin 1842.

— Ô femmes! chastetés augustes! .fiertés saintes!
Pudeur, crainte sacrée entre toutes les craintes!

8 avril 1874.

V Farouche austérité

Farouche austérité du front pensif et doux!
O vous à qui je veux ne parler qu’à genoux,
Dont la forme est si noble en notre chaos sombre,
Qu’on ne se souvient plus, en la voyant dans l’ombre,
De rien que de divin et de mystérieux,
Sorte d’oubli tombé sur la terre des cieux,
Etres charmants créés pour la plus haute sphère;
O femmés, parmi nous que venez-vous donc faire? -
Alors questionnant l’inconnu,-l’inouï,
Aux voix qui disent non tâchant d’arracher oui
J’écoute, et je regarde, et, plein de rêveries,
Je vais au Luxembourg, je vais aux Tuileries,
Parlant à tout ce qui va, vient, passe, et cherchant
La réponse à ce cri vague et pur comme un chant;
Et toujours, et. partout, et de toutes les femmes,.
De celles-ci, les coeurs, de celles-là,; les âmes,
Du brun regard, de l’oeil voilé de blonds cheveux,
Sort un sourire immense aux enfants, ces aveux.

17 novembre 1879.

VI Si le sort t’a fait riche,

Si le sort t’a fait riche, aie au bien l’âme prompte.
Sois pensif, humble et doux; rachète en t’abaissant
Ta trop haute stature, et songe que Dieu monte Vers celui qui descend.

Ne réveille jamais brusquement ton esclave;
Laisse dormir le boeuf qui creuse le sillon.;
Sénateur, plains le pauvre, et que ton laticlave
Ait pitié du haillon.

Sers celui qui te sert, car il te vaut peut-être;
Pense qu’il a son droit comme toi ton devoir;
Ménage les petits, les faibles. Sois le maître
Que tu voudrais avoir.

VII À CEUX QUI FONT DE PETITES FAUTES

Sois avare du moindre écart d’honnêteté. - Sois juste en détail. Voir des deuils, rire à côté,

4 juin.

Mentir pour un plaisir, tricher pour un centime,
Cela ne te fait rien perdre en ta propre estime,
Eh bien, prends garde. Tout finit par s’amasser;
Des choses que tu fais presque sans y penser,.
Vagues improbités parfois inaperçues
De toi-même, te font tomber, sont des issues
Sur le mal, et par là tu descends dans la nuit.
Un lourd câble est de fils misérables construit;
Qu’est-ce que l’océan? une onde après une onde;
Un ver creuse un abîme, un pou construit un monde;
C’est brin à brin que l’aigle énorme fait son nid;
Un tas de petits faits peu scrupuleux finit
Par faire le total d’une action mauvaise.
Et d’atome en atome on empire, et l’on pèse,
Souvent, quand vient le jour du compte solennel,
En n’étant qu’imprudent, le poids d’un criminel.
Homme, la conscience est une minutie.
L’âme est plus aisément que l’hermine, noircie.
Le vrai sans s’amoindrir toujours partout entra.
Ne crois pas que jamais, parce qu’on les mettra
Dans les moindres recoins de l’âme, on rapetisse
La probité, l’honneur, le droit et la justice.
Devant les. cieux qu’emplit un vague aspect d’effroi,
Sur tout, sans savoir qui, sans demander pourquoi,
Le philosophe pleure, aime, intercède, prie.
Il pense; il sonde avec sa prunelle attendrie
Le mystère, et comprend que quelqu’un gémit là.
Il parle à l’infini comme Jean lui parla;
Il y penche son âme et par cette. ouverture

Répand un sombre amour sur la vaste nature;
Il bénit à voix basse en marchant devant lui
Toutes les profondeurs de l’ombre et de l’ennui, L’antre, l’herbe, les monts glacés, les arbres torses,
Les courants, les aimants, l’hydre aveugle des forces,
Les joncs tremblants, les bois tristes, les rochers nus,
L’air, l’onde, et le troupeau des monstres inconnus;
Il console, incliné; ce qui vit, ce qui souffre,
Et, tous les noirs captifs invisibles du gouffre,
Epars dans l’Être horrible aux effrayants halliers,
Enchaînés aux carcans ou tirant des colliers.
Il perçoit les soupirs des visions funèbres;
Il console et secourt plus bas que l’animal;
Tendre, il fait du bien, même à ce qui fait du mal;
Sans distinguer sur qui tombent ses pleurs, lui-même
N’étant qu’une lueur flottant dans le problème,
Il prie, argile, chair, larve; et semble un rayon
Aux sombres yeux ouverts dans l’expiation.

L’ardeur d’apaiser tout est sa sublime fièvre;
Il va! prophète ou non, qu’importe que sa lèvre
Ait ou n’ait pas le feu du céleste charbon!
Il sait bien qu’on l’entend, qu’il suffit d’être bon,
Et que les exilés rêvent la délivrance;
Il passe en murmurant Espérance! espérance!
Et. toute la souffrance est un appel confus
A son coeur d’où jamais il ne sort un refus.

VIII Tandis qu’on ne sait quoi d’étrange

Tandis qu’on ne sait quoi d’étrange et de farouche
Surgit dans des berceaux, dans les tombeaux se couche,
Tandis que l’ouragan souffle, et que par moment
La vie universelle est un rugissement,
Et qu’à d’autres moments tout n’est plus qu’une face
De silence où le cri de l’abîme s’efface,
Tandis, que le flot roule à l’engloutissement,
Que la livide mort court sous le firmament
Distribuant le monde aux fléaux ses ministres;
Que les astres hagards ont des levers sinistres,
Et qué tout semble craindre un lugubre abandon,
Lui, tranquille, il dit: .Paix, harmonie et pardon!
Il jette sa pitié dans la sourde étendue,
Dans l’ombre formidable à jamais éperdue,
Dans le deuil, dans l’énigme affreuse, dans l’horreur;
Il marche, et, sans rien voir, perdu, quoique éclaireur,
Sous la brume éternelle à flots noirs épanchée,
Sent dans la nuit sa main par des langues léchée.

IX Quant à l’obscurité

Quant à l’obscurité que tu dis éternelle,
Qu’en sais-tu? l’univers tient-il dans ta prunelle?
L’ombré est la forme énorme et triste dé l’ennui;
Mais qu’y vois-tu? Sais-tu ce que c’est qu’Aujourd’hui?
As-tu bien une. idée exacte de la phase
Où tu passes, tremblant d’épouvante ou d’extase.?
Qui te dit que le monde, étant un noir vivant,
N’a pas comme toi-même, homme jouet du vent,
Son moment de sommeil où la brume le couvre,
Après quoi son oeil sombre et vertigineux s’ouvre!
Cet instant fugitif où le sort a jeté
Les vagues siècles noirs de ton humanité,
Peut-être est-ce la nuit du monde? Sais-tu l’heure?
Sais-tu si tu n’es pas un être vain qui pleure
Et se déforme, et n’est, en attendant la mort,
Qu’un rêve sur le front de l’infini qui dort.

X L’homme est faible;

L’homme est faible; il n’a pas encor trouvé sa loi.
Aussi le prêtre dit: -Il lui faut une foi;
Il lui faut un appui qui ne soit pas la terre.
— Et, comme, en vérité, l’homme, au bien réfractaire,
Se livre, bon, au mal, et, petit, à l’orgueil;
Comme nous sentons, nous, gardiens de votre seuil,
Satari dans le meilleur et Titan dans le moindre,
On voit de toutes parts. les religions poindre.
Mais sont-ce les lueurs vagues de l’horizon?
Est-ce Dieu qui se. montre à l’humaine raison?
Pourquoi ces visions s’offrent-elles à l’âme,
L’une couleur de sang, l’autre couleur de flamme?
Qu’ont-elles de réel ou de faux? questions!
Et de l’esprit humain les noirs amphictyons,
Les douteurs, les Pyrrhons, les Voltaires, les Hobbes,
Regardent effarés toutes ces sombres aubes.

XI Voilà l’homme.

Voilà l’homme. Qui donc a dit: l’homme est sublime!
Qui donc s’est écrié: l’homme est un spectre infime!
Il est grand, il est vil; il est tout à la fois.
Et, comme tout se meut suivant de sombres lois,
Comme dans l’univers rien n’est stationnaire,
Pour l’homme, quoi qu’il fasse ou rêve,-qu’il vénère
Ou blasphème, qu’il sème ou l’amour ou l’effroi,
Vivre, c’est travailler sans trêve, ayant en soi
L’archange qui rayonne et l’âne qui se vautre,
A diminuer l’un en agrandissant l’autre.
Le méchant grandit l’âne et rétrécit l’esprit
Le bon, le juste, en qui la brute dépérit,
En qui l’ange fleurit, c’est celui:qui, sans cesse,
Augmentant sa lumière, amoindrit sa bassesse.

Ô passant! toi qui vas, tâchant d’ouvrir la nuit,
Pâle, inquiet, semblable à-celui qui poursuit,
Rêvant l’être quadruple, esprit, force, amour, joie,
Qui résume ce monde où sa. lueur: flamboie,
Tâtant les quatre-coins du “firmament, touchant
Le nord après le sud, l’aube après le couchant,
T’efforçant de voir Dieu, cherchant la quadrature
De ce cercle effrayant qu’on nomme la nature,
Toi qui, boiteux, ailé, par essors inégaux,
Voudrais monter, monter jusqu’au Demiourgos,
Comme Jacob le pâtre ou Baruch le prophète,
Quitte cette entreprise, et, je te le répète,
Explique, si tu peux, ce lugubre inconnu,
Ce soleil dans un. peu de fange contenu,
Cet être monstrueux, prodigieux et-triste,
L’homme. Amer, ignorant dans quel monde il existe,
Faisant, comme ce globe horrible dont il sort,;
Dans le jour et -la nuit; dans la vie et la mort;”
Dans la bête et l’esprit, ses deux sombres demeures,

Sa révolution toutes les vingt-quatre heures,
Mur du cloaque affreux, cloison des cieux bénis,
Et séparation de deux-noirs infinis,
Il vole dans l’aurore et dans l’égout il trempe;
Et le Voilà. qui plane et le voici qui. rampe
Ver de terre et rayon, confinant d’un côté
A l’azur, on ne sait par quelle pureté,
De l’autre à la matière, on ne sait pour quels crimes.
Songeur! qu’est-ce que l’homme? Uri entre-deux d’abîmes.

Que d’escarpements! L’esprit songe,
Au bord des problèmes venu.
Partout des puits noirs où l’oeil plonge:
Le ciel; la terre, l’inconnu;
Le mystère, embûche sublime;
Le mal, abîme; l’âme, abîme;
Le tombeau, précipice; Dieu.
Profondeur tellement étrange
Que le tonnerre, l’astre et l’ange
S’y perdent dans de-l’ombre-en feu!

Oh! l’immensité, quelle Bible!
L’homme tremble et se sent puni:
La contemplation terrible
De l’absolu, de l’infini,
Nous démontre notre poussière,
Et fait écrouler pierre à pierre
Dans les gouffres de l’horizon,
Comme des murs dans des tranchées,
Ces deux énormes tours penchées,
Notre orgueil et notre raison!

XIII Ah! la philosophie est vorace!

Ah! la philosophie est vorace! il lui faut
L’idée avec le fait, la chose avec le mot,
Le connu, l’inconnu, le réel, l’impossible.
Elle ne peut marcher sans tout ce combustible.
C’est en épuisant tout que ce lourd cachalot
Nage, vogue, navigue, et se maintient à flot:

Regarde. On est en route. On fuit le long des grèves.
Toute la Grèce rit comme un palais des rêves.
L’ardent vaisseau qui traîne à travers le flot bleu
Ses nôirs poumons de houille et son souffle de feu,
Voit défiler les caps, les îlots, les calangues.
Il va. Les passagers, parlant toutes les langues, Contemplent, attroupés sur le pont du steamer,
Le matin, quelque port serein, le soir, la mer
Par le soleil couchant chauffée au rouge sombre,
L’Archipel où l’eau gronde et que l’écueil encombre,
Le cône refroidi du volcan de Lemnos,
Et la Crète, et ses monts qui semblent des créneaux,
Et Corinthe, et Mycène, et Nauplie, et les restes
Du temple d’Erechthée, et la tour des Cyrrhestes,
Et, tout au fond, le mont Othrys, le mont Cnémis,
Noirs géants dans la nuit homérique endormis.
Le paquebot va, court, roule pale sur pale;
Et la vague est de nacre et la côte est d’opale,
Et les grands horizons passent,. ayant sur eux
Ou le nuage rose ou l’éclair sulfureux;
Après une île enfuie on voit une île éclore.
Et pendant ce temps-là la machine dévore
Des monceaux de. Newcastle et des tas de Cardiff.
Ainsi l’esprit humain, glouton quoique tardif,
Dans son voyage autour des systèmes, consomme
L’éternité, le temps, la mort, la vie et l’homme.

Et tout cela pourquoi? pour ne pas arriver.
Pas de pilote; pas de boussole; rêver
Dans tout lointain nuage une rive abordable,
Percer l’impénétrable et sonder l’insondable,
Tel est l’effort humain quand il fouille le ciel.
Là philosophie erre au noir gouffre éternel;
Atteindre à Diêu! comment? Elle ignore.les. passes;
Et souvent elle -va, dans les sombres espaces
Jetant sa cargaison, faux et vrai, mal et bien,
Se heurter à -l’écueil infranchissable Rien,.
Roche obscure où, battu du doute aux flots, sans nombre,
L’énorme Spinoza râle, échoué dàns l’ombre

XIV Parce que tu ne sais,

Parce que tu ne sais, toi l'homme, ce que font
Les choses en travail dans l'univers profond,
Ténèbres et chaos que traversent des gloires;
Parce que tu ne sais où vont les forces noires,
Les effluves, les gaz, les foudres; les aimants,
Les principes cachés au fond des éléments;
Parce qu'en même temps, suivant ta propre trace,
Bâtissant pas à pas le progrès de ta race,
Mettant pierre sur pierre, aujourd'hui sur demain,
Tu vois distinctement ton petit but humain;
Tu prends l'impénétrable en pitié, tu confrontes
Cette obscurité, sourde à tes œuvres si promptes;
Tu t'admires, tu dis: -j'entreprends; mais, du moins,
Je veux, j'achève, et j'ai mes travaux pour témoins;
Je ne perds pas l'haleine et l'effort! - Et tu railles
L'infini, l'invisible, effrayantes murailles;
Et, noircissant les cieux avec ton vil charbon;
Ta main hautaine écrit sur l'abîme: à quoi bon?
Tu couvres l'Inconnu de ton dédain immense.
— Ô nature, à quoi bon toute cette démence,
Ces ondes, ces courants, ce trouble aérien,
Et la matière en proie aux tourmentes - pour rien?
A quoi bon tes vieux monts, Alpes et Cordillères?
Quel temple as-tu construit avec ces tas de pierres?
Ton torrent ne vaut pas mon moindre portefaix;
Compare ton nuage aux dômes que je fais,
Compare ta fumée à ma colonne torse;
Pourquoi cette dépense inutile de force?
Que sert la cataracte? à quoi bon le volcan?
Et ton soufflet de forge insulte l'ouragan.

XV Qui donc passe au-dessus de nous

Qui donc passe au-dessus de nous, ô Dieu de l’ombre,
Pendant que, nus,-gisants, pêle-mêle, sans nombre,
Nous élevons les yeux du fond du noir cachot,
Sans pouvoir distinguer ce qui marche là-haut,
Et que nous frémissons, foule toujours décrue,
Et que, sous la rondeur des cieux, l’aube apparue
L’un après l’autre éclaire avec son front qui luit
Les jours, arches d’azur sous le pont de la nuit?

8 avril 1854.

XVI Rends-tu de temps en temps des services à Dieu?

Rends-tu de temps en temps des services à Dieu?
S’en remet-il sur toi, dans le funèbre lieu,
Du soin d’acheminer les ombres dans l’abîme?
Est-ce toi qui, selon le mérite ou le crime,
Ouvre aux chutes le gouffre et l’azur aux essors?
Est-ce toi qui dis: entre? est-ce toi qui dis: sors?
Dieu trouve-t-il tes yeux assez grands,. assez calmes,
Pour qu’il ait dans tes mains mis la gerbe des palmes
Ou la sinistre clef dés ténèbres sanS bords.?
L’aides-tu dans la fosse au classement des morts?
Lés lendemains de cirque et de fête dans Rome,
Quand les gladiateurs ont rougi l’hippodrome,
Les jours d’autodafé, de Saint-Barthélemy,
Quand, sanglant, dans la mort un massacre â vomi,
Quand un champ de bataille, effroyable. hécàtombe,
Se vide un soir d’été tout entier dans la tombe,
Quand, après une peste, un naufrage, un combat,
S’ouvre l’éternité, rive obscure où s’abat
Ce vol-d’âmes, jetant des murrimurés’sauvages,
Es-tu là, surveillant -ces sombres arrivages?

XVII Ceux par qui le malheur

Ceux par qui le malheur sur les innocents tombe,
Et qui n’ont pas de repentir,
Voudront après la mort voler hors de la tombe,
Dieu juste, et n’en pourront sortir.
Glaives, sceptres, gibets! L’homme.aux cieux est contraire;
C’est toujours l’homme du passé!
Il s’aime dans lui-même et se hait dans son frère,
Coeur-sombre où la ronce a poussé! .
Hélas! on se regarde avec des yeux, funèbres,
Grands et petits, jeunes et vieux,
Et le riche orgueilleux se sent dans les ténèbres
Mordu par le pauvre envieux.

On crache sur Caton, on bave sur Socrate;
Le fort lest bon; le faible a tort;
Le déshérité rampe, et la terre est ingrate;
Il pleut, c’est la nuit, l’enfant dort,

— Enfant, debout! Va-t’en à ton travail! C’est l’heure. - Triste, il part; nul ne le défend,
Et le ciel effrayant qui sanglote et qui pleure
Glace de ses larmes l’enfant.

Les femmes sont aux fers dans les lois: inégales;
L’homme entend leurs cris de courroux,.
Sans plus s’en émouvoir que du chant des. cigales
Dans les chaumes des sillons roux.

Le cadavre d’un peuple, Europe, est à ta porte;
Quoi, tous périssent pour un seul! .
O czar! .ô fossoyeur! la Pologne est la morte,
La Sibérie est le linceul.

Des beautés sans pudeur, à leurs festins venues,

Disent aux oppresseurs merci!
On frémit en voyant ces Vénus toutes nues,
L'âme étant toute nue aussi.

Peuple, libre, est-ce bien sous ton ciel que nous -sommes?
Ecoutez ces hideux abois:
Le nègre fuit les chiens monstrueux, et les hommes
Chassent aux hommes dans les bois.

Partout vont gémissant les opprimés sans nombre
Dans les cités et dans les champs... -
File, ô ver du sépulcre, et fais ta toile sombre
Où se prend l'âme des méchants!

16 juillet.

XVIII L’espoir

L’espoir mène à des portes closes.
Cette terre est pleine de choses
Dont nous ne voyons qu’un côté.
Le sort de tous nos voeux se joue;
Et la vie est comme la roue:
D’un char dans la poudre emporté!

XIX Y pensez-vous.?

Y pensez-vous.? l’état à l’église. mêlé!
Mais par où vit l’état, l’autel est ébranlé!
Mais de ce que l’un fait l’autre se scandalise!
Ou dans l’état froissé vous installez l’église,
Ou bien vous déformez, par un autre attentat,
L’église en y faisant de force entrer: l’état.
Alors tout se confond. L’intrigue dit la messe.
Alors de ses péchés au crime on se confesse.
Alors je ne sais quoi de triste et de petit
Entre le prêtre et Dieu sur l’autel se blottit.
C’est l’état: -C’est-à-dire un immonde mélange
De mille objets honteux; un tas d’or et de fange;
L’intérêt, nain hideux; la brigue, impur démon
Qui met des sens cachés dans les plis d’un sermon.
Alors c’est le boudoir qui se fait sacristie,
C’est un festin coupable où l’on mange l’hostie.
C’est un. ensemble vil, morne, déshonoré,
Où le profane vit guindé sur le sacré
C’est le manteau du roi que le prêtre s’agrafe.
C’est l’église prêtant sa tour au télégraphe.

XX Ce que vous appelez

Ce que vous appelez dans votre obscur jargon:
Civilisation du Gange à l’Orégon,
Des Andes au Thibet, du Nil aux Cordillères,
Comment l’entendez-vous, ô noires fourmilières?
De toute votre terre interrogez l’écho.
Voyez Lima, Cuba, Sydney, San-Francisco,
Melbourne. Vous croyez civiliser un monde,
Lorsque vous l’enfiévrez de quelque fièvre immonde,
Quand vous troublez ses lacs, miroirs d’un dieu secret,
Lorsque vous violez sa vierge, la forêt;
Quand vous chassez du bois, de l’antre, du rivage
Votre frère aux yeux pleins de lueurs , le sauvage,
Cet enfant du soleil peint de mille couleurs,
Espèce d’insensé des branches et des fleurs,
Et quand, jetant dehors cet Adam inutile,
Vous peuplez le désert d’un homme plus reptile,
Vautré dans la matière et la cupidité,
Dur, cynique, étalant une autre nudité,
Idolâtre du dieu dollar, fou qui palpite,
Non plus pour un soleil, mais pour une pépite,
Qui se dit libre, et montre au monde épouvanté
L’esclavage étonné servant la liberté!

Oui, vous dites: Voyez, nous remplaçons ces brutes;
Nos monceaux de palais chassent leurs tas de huttes;
Dans la pleine lumière humaine nous voguons;
Voyez nos docks, nos ports, nos steamers, nos wagons,
Nos théatres, nos parcs, nos hôtels, nos carrosses! -
Et vous vous contentez d’être autrement féroces!
Vous criez: - Contemplez le progrès! admirez!
Lorsque vous remplissez ces champs, ces monts sacrés,
Cette vieille nature âpre, hautaine, intègre,
D’âmes cherchant de l’or, de chiens chassant au nègre,
Quand à l’homme lion succède l’homme ver,

Et quand le tomahawk fait place au revolver!

Note:

1. ↑ Une variante donne: Votre frère naîf et sombre. (note Wikisource)

XXI Jeunes gens,

Jeunes gens, prenez garde aux choses que vous dites.
Tout peut sortir d’un mot qu’en passant vous perdîtes.
Tout, la haine et le deuil! -Et ne m’objectez pas
Que vos amis sont sûrs et que vous parlez bas... - Écoutez bien ceci:

Tête-à-tête, en pantoufle,
Portes closes, chez vous, sans un témoin qui souffle,
Vous dites à l’oreille au plus mystérieux
De vos amis de cœur, ou, si vous l’aimez mieux,
Vous murmurez tout seul, croyant presque vous taire,
Dans le fond d’une cave à trente pieds sous terre,
Un mot désagréable à quelque individu;
Ce mot que vous croyez qu’on n’a pas entendu,

Que vous disiez si bas dans un lieu sourd et sombre,
Court à peine lâché, part, bondit, sort de l’ombre!
Tenez, il est dehors! Il connaît son chemin.
Il marche, il a deux pieds, un bâton à la main,
De bons souliers ferrés, un passeport en règle;
— Au besoin, il prendrait des ailes comme l’aigle! -
Il vous échappe, il fuit, rien ne l’arrêtera.
Il suit le quai, franchit la place, et cætera,
Passe l’eau sans bateau dans la saison des crues,
Et va, tout à travers un dédale de rues,
Droit chez l’individu dont vous avez parlé.
Il sait le numéro, l’étage; il a la clé,
Il monte l’escalier, ouvre la porte, passe,
Entre, arrive, et, railleur, regardant l’homme en face,
Dit: -Me voilà! je sors de la bouché d’un tel.
Et c’est fait. Vous avez un ennemi mortel.

XXII ÉPITAPHES D'ENFANTS

Enfant, que je te porte envie!
Ta barque neuve échoue au port.
Qu'as-tu donc fait pour que ta vie
Ait sitôt mérité la mort?

II

Entre au ciel. La porte est la tombe.
Le sombre avenir des humains,
Comme un jouet trop lourd qui tombe,
Échappe à tes petites mains.

III

Qu'est devenu l'enfant? La mère
Pleure, et l'oiseau rit, chantre ailé.
La mère croit qu'il est sous terre,
L'oiseau sait qu'il s'est envolé.

XXIII LA GUERRE QUI EST DANS L’AVENIR IMPORTUNE LES DEVINS

Les, prophètes pensifs sgnt loin dés mûltitudes,
Loin des villes qu’emplit lé tumulte et lé bruit.
On sait qu’ils sont là-bas dans leurs sombres études.
Ils n’ont autour d’eux, nus au fond des solitudes,
Le jour que le soleil et que l’ombre la nuit.

Nul vivant ne les suit. Que le vent souffle ou dorme,
Jamais leur toit de joncs n’attire un pas humain.
Du désert morne et grand leur esprit prend la forme.
Le lion, qui parfois montre sa tête énorme,
Les voit de loin rêver et passe son chemin.

Et cependant, voici-ce qu’ont dit les prophètes.
Dont l’oeil voit l’avenir et brille aux lieux sacrés:
Jusques à quand, troublés au fond de nos retraites,
Entendrons-nous des cris et le bruit des trompettes,
Et verrons-nous s’enfuir des hommes effarés.

14 juillet.

XXIV Ah! prenez garde

Ah! prenez garde à ceux que vous jetez ati bagne!
La colère devient leur sinistre compagne.
Cet homme était né bon, et le voilà méchant.
Dans ce cerveau pensif qui va se desséchant,
La consciehce’meurt comme expire une lampe.
L’innocence est un feu redoutable qui rampe
Et couve sous la peine injuste, et lentement
Emplit un coeur de fiel et de ressentiment;
On sent en -soi grandir une fournaise infâme
Faite de ce qu’on a de plus noble dans l’âme.
Quel spectre: qu’un forçat sans tache, en qui se tord
Une rage à laquelle on ne peut donner tort!
Lui, l’honnête homme, il est dans le gouffre de honte!
Vous tous, s’il peut jamais vous. en demander compte,
Oh! comme. il châtiera votre-exécrable erreur!
Plus il eut de vertu, plus il a de fureur,
Noircissement étrange et terrible du cygne!
N’espérez pas qu’au bagne inique on se résigne.

On attise sa haine avec tous ses amours;
Vengeance! on songe aux coeurs adorés, aux beaux jours,
A cet azur charmant de. la vie innocente,
A la mère, à la soeur, à la femme, à l’absente,
Aux chansons, au travail probe, libre, assidu,
A tout ce paradis doré qu’on a perdu,
Aux doux petits enfants qu’avec furie on nomme,
Aux anges, et ce ciel creuse un enfer dans l’homme.

12 janvier.

XXV Un homme est innocent;

Un homme est innocent; son voisin le dénonce.
Gisquet dont le sourcil facilement se fronce,
Ou n’importe quel autre Anglès ou Valentin,
Fait saisir l’homme au saut du lit un beau matin;
L’homme résiste et veut s’enfuir; mauvaises notes;
On l’insulte, il réplique; on lui met les menottes;
Il dit: Je n’ai rien fait! C’est vrai; mais il a tort De crier le plus haut n’étant pas le plus fort;
On le lui fait sentir en serrant les poucettes.
Coupable, vous cédez; mais innocent, vous êtes
Idiot; vous luttez, vous ruez, vous avez
La rage, quand le sang coule entre les pavés,
De croire que le juge examine et diffère,
Et que, n’ayant rien fait, on ne doit rien vous faire.
Le juge, examiner! différer! à quoi bon?
On entre jeune au bagne et l’on en sort barbon,
Prenez garde, c’est là le sort du réfractaire.

Vous avez ce devoir, souffrir, ce droit, vous taire;
Être rebelle est grave, être innocent est vain;
Sachez que la justice est la justice, enfin,
Et vous êtes un gueux, puisqu’on vous brutalise!
La police ressemble au sable où l’on s’enlise;
Plus on se débat, plus on enfonce. Jamais
Les grands et les heureux qui sont sur les sommets
Ne se penchent vers ceux qu’engloutit la justice.
Tombez dans l’eau, soyez pris sous une bâtisse
Qui s’effondre, ou plongé dans quelque horrible puits,
De partout il vous vient des amis, des appuis,
Jeune, vieux, riche, pauvre, et tout sexe et tout âge,
Chacun va s’employer pour votre sauvetage,
Vous êtes secouru, servi, plaint, assisté;
Mais ne naufragez pas sous la société!
L’état saigne pourtant s’il perd un membre utile,

Et dans un homme, c’est le peuple qu’on mutile;
Ce misérable était honnête, bon et doux;
Savez-vous qu’il avait une famille, vous?
Bah! Qu’importe! On le jette en une casemate.
D’un mécanisme horrible il devient l’automate;
La chiourme le manie en ses rudes ressorts.
Debout! réveille-toi! Travaille! Rentre! Sors!
Tout à coup on l’embarque, on l’envoie à Cayenne.
Cette bête aux regards de sphinx, aux cris d’hyène,
La mer, le prend, rugit, hurle, et va le cacher
Derrière l’horizon; là-bas, sur un rocher,
Dans une ombre où le bruit de l’homme arrive à peine.
Là, tout est brume, oubli, gouffre; un souffle de haine
Vient du ciel, et les flots semblent des ennemis.
Là, l’espèce de crime inconscient commis
Par nous tous sur ce pauvre inconnu, se consomme.
La nuit spectre enchaîné, le jour bête de somme,
Il est un chiffre; il n’a pas droit même à son nom;
Il vit dans un carcan, il dort sous le canon;
Ses froids bourreaux sont là dès l’aube, et leur complice,
L’aurore, en se levant travaille à son supplice,
Et les captifs s’en vont labourer deux à deux
Quelque affreux champ brûlé sous le soleil hideux;
En faisant des forçats la loi fait des fantômes;
Les nuages, l’azur, les cieux, tous ces grands dômes,
Leur semblent le plafond d’airain de leur malheur.

Lui, qui n’est pas faussaire; assassin ni voleur,
Sous l’écrasant fardeau qu’il traîne, triste atome,
Vaincu, stupide, il bâille; et l’on verse pour baume
Goutte à goutte l’affront sur” son tragique ennui;
Une plaie effroyable et sinistre est en lui,
On la lui lave avec de l’acide nitrique.
Le Code, cette hache, a pour manche une trique,
Et ce glaive hautain s’achève en vil bâton;
Si parfois s’accoudant, le poing sous le menton,
Fiévreux,. malade, il rêve, un gourdin le réveille;

Il a. toujours un bruit de chaînes dans l’oreille,
Il est on ne sait quoi d’abject et de battu,
Un chien le flaire et gronde, un mouchard lui dit tu,
Quel sort! labeur sans fin, pain noir, paille pourrie! ...

Un jour, un bruit profond se fait dans la. patrie,
La Marseillaise ailée arrive dans le vent,
Et l’on dit à ce mort: Lève-toi! ..Sois vivant.
La mer courbe ses flots, la France ouvre sa porte,
Il revient. Il avait une femme,. elle est morte;

Un fils, on ne sait pas ce qu’il est devenu;
Une petite fille, ange à l’oeil ingénu,
Était sa joie; il voit dans la rue une femme
Qui rit, bras nus, seins nus, fleurs au front, gaie, infâme;

C’est elle. Et maintenant la ville est en rumeur;
La Révolution, formidable semeur,
Disperse aux quatre coins des cieux l’âpre colère;
Alors dans ce coeur sombre et funeste, il éclaire,
Il tonne dans cette âme, et cet homme n’est plus
Qu’ une sorte de gouffre en proie aux noirs reflux;
Dans cet infortuné le deuil immense écume.
Où donc. est la mitraille? Où donc est le bitume?
C’est son tour d’être horrible, il l’est. Il grince, il mord;
Pas de pitié! Ce juge, à bas! ce prêtre, à mort!
Il tue, il pille, il brûle, il massacre, il égorge.
Un innocent qu’on frappe est un bandit qu’on forge.

Paris, 28. novembre.

XXVI Oh.! que l’homme n’est rien

Oh.! que l’homme n’est rien et que vous êtes tout, Seigneur! O Dieu vivant, toi seul restes debout
Dans la tranquillité des choses éternelles.
Le sombre aigle Infini, quand il ouvre ses ailes,
Plonge l’une en ton ombre et l’autre en ta clarté.
L’homme est Baal, Moloch, Arimane, Astarté;
L’abjection habite avec la bête humaine.
Le néant, de la fange à la cendre nous mène.
Ame aveuglée, esprit éteint, coeur en lambeau,
L’homme est mort bien avant qu’il descende au tombeau;
Toute corruption de son vivant le ronge,
L’avarice; l’orgueil, la haine, le mensonge,
L’amour vénal, l’erreur folle, l’instinct bâtard;
De sorte qu’on ne sait ce qui pourrit plus tard.

Fourmilière du mal, insectes de l’abîme,
Sur nos entassements de folie et de crime,
Sur nos monceaux d’horreurs, d’échafauds, de pavois,
Nous nous dressons pendant qu’énorme, tu nous vois.
Tu regardes nos cris, nos bruits, notre démence.
Le grand ciel est le bleu de ta prunelle immense.
De notre vie obscure usant les vils chaînons,
Sous cet oeil formidable et doux nous nous traînons;
Nos splendeurs sont un-feu rampant dans l’herbe noire;
Et dans ces sombres nuits qu’on nomme âges de gloire,
Temps d’Alcide, d’Hermès, d’Achille, d’Amadis,
Siècle de Périclès, siècle de« Léon dix,
Sur ces tas de fumier, les Athènes, les Romes,
Passent ces vers luisants qu’on appelle grands hommes.

19 août 1851.

XXVII À PAUL M.

Paul, je connais si bien l’autre côté des choses
Que toujours je regarde en mes apothéoses
La hauteur du rocher d’où je devrai tomber;
Le sort change, -je l’ai subi sans Me courber,
Une femme en squelette, un palais en masure;
Et c’est pourquoi, passant fraternel, je mesure,
Souriant et pensif, sans retirer ma main,
A l’amour d’aujourd’hui la haine de demain.
Aux éblouissements de l’aube je calcule
La morne hostilité qu’aura le crépuscule;
Qui ne fut point haï n’a vécu qu’à demi;
Et, tâchant d’être bon, je laisse, ô mon ami,
Passer l’un. après l’autre, en cette ombre où nous sommes,
Tous les faux lendemains de la terre et des hommes,
Sûr de ce lendémain immense du ciel bleu
Qu’on appelle la mort et que j’appelle Dieu.

XXVIII Vous êtes, ô jeune homme,

Vous êtes, ô jeune homme, une noble nature,
Un esprit riche et grave, une âme tendre et pure;
Nul instinct généreux chez vous n'est endormi.
— Vous devez bien souffrir de trahir votre ami!
Lui, dont l'âme apaisée est un trésor d'excuses,
Il vous aime; il connaît le démon et ses ruses;
Mais, trop grand pour se plaindre et dire: c'est assez,
Il souffre aussi de voir que vous le trahissez.

5 novembre 1839.
2 septembre 1872.

XXIX À mesure qu’au loin s’éclipse

À mesure qu’au loin s’éclipse
La plaine effacée au regard,
Toute une sombre apocalypse
Apparaît à l’homme hagard.

Tous ces fantômes que, sans nombre,
Produit le soir qui s’assombrit,
L’entourent, et, sortant de l’ombre,
Entrent en foule en son esprit.

Noir cerveau sur qui Dieu surplombe,
Il rêve ce que Jean rêva,
Le jour qui fuit, la nuit qui tombe,
La mort qui vient, l’homme qui va...

Devant sa paupière enflammée,
Sur un fond morne. et sans rayons,
Comme les flots d’une fumée,
Passent les lentes visions.

La destinée à lui se montre.
Il croit entrevoir, en fuyant
Les pâles spectres qu’il rencontre,
Quelque paysage effrayant.

Il songe effaré! -Tout se lève,
Tout retombe, tout a flotté.
Il ne sait plus si c’est lé rêve
Ou si c’est la réalité. -

Puis tout prend forme, tout se range
Comme en un enfer douloureux,
Et tout dans cette brume étrange
Devient distinct, et reste affreux.

Il voit les fortunes humaines
Comme un taillis vertigineux
Où resplendit l’oeil des sirènes
Sous des branchages épineux:

Il plonge son regard qui brille
 Dans ce gouffre aux aspects mouvants,
Dàns ces ténèbres où fourmille
L’aveugle foule des vivants.

À travers l’ombre et ses embûches,
Il entend bruire leurs voix
Comme des essaims dans les ruches,
Comme des oiseaux dans les bois.

Chacun travaille, -loi tracée
Par Dieu même à l’homme maudit!
L’un son champ, l’autre sa pensée.
L’un creuse, l’autre approfondit.

Tous vont cherchant, aucun ne trouve.
Le ciel semble à leur désespoir
Noir comme l’antre d’une louve,
Au fond d’un bois, l’hiver, le soir.

Où vont-ils? . vers la mêrne porte.
Que sont-ils? les flots-d’ùn torrent.
Que disent-ils? la nuit l’emporte.
Que font-ils? la tombe le prend.

Un vent, comme le jonc flexible;
Les courbe tons; jeunes et vieux.
Oh! de quelle bouche invisible
Souffle ce vent mystérieux!

XXX NUIT

Toute la nature vivante
Travaille, à l’heure-où le jour fuit,
Sous je ne sais quelle épouvante
Qui tombe des astres la nuit.

Livrée aux -mystères sans nombre,
Morne, elle voit en frémissant
S’ouvrir sur elle dans cette ombre
L’oeil-de l’Inconnu tout-puissant.

Oh! quel effroi! se reconnaître,
Sans durée et sans-liberté,
A la discrétion de l’être.

Qui se meut dans, l’éternité!

Noire énigme où tout se rassemble
Pour cacher. le but et le, mot mot!
On sent en bas quelqu’un qui tremble;
On, sent quelqu’un qui rêve en haut.

28 avril 1846.

XXXI L’homme croit avoir fait un pas

L’homme croit avoir fait un pas dans l’inconnu
Quand il met sur l’autel quelque faune cornu,
Quelque dragon rampant sur des membres hybrides,
Ou quelque affreux Brahma dont il dore les rides;
Il croit s’être avancé bien loin dans l’idéal
Lorsqu’il a complété Zeus par Bélial,
Ou lorsqu’il a choisi pour s’en faire une idole
Quelque apparition du sommeil, sombre et folle,
Et qu’il s’est prosterné devant ses cauchemars
En les nommant Mithra, Neptune, Irmensul, Mars!
Est-il du moins l’auteur de ces larves? Non. L’être,
En se décomposant dans l’ombre, les fait naître;
Et tous ces dieux, Moloch, Jupiter, Astarté,
Thor, masques de démence ou de difformité,
Chacun portant son thyrse, ou sa foudre, ou sa bible,
Sont des types de nuit flottant dans l’invisible.

Quoiqu’ils soient vils, méchants, obscènes, odieux,
Homme, tu n’as pas même enfanté tes faux dieux.
O passant misérable, ô chercheur éphémère,
Tu ne peux rien créer, pas même une chimère!
L’Ombre qui t’enveloppe, ô pauvre être banni,
La Profondeur, qui semble un mur de l’infini,
L’effrayant fond brumeux d’où les visions pleuvent,
Sur qui confusément les atomes se meuvent,
Où l’on distingue à peine et la vie et la mort,
Et les linéaments mystérieux du sort,
L’immense obscurité, pleine de vagues porches
Où de tous les autels, tremblent toutes les torches,
Où des souffles, suivis d’effacements soudains,
Dessinent des enfers, des pindes, des édens,
Deucalion, Pluton, Satan, Eve et sa pomme,
Triste, n’accepte pas des dieux sortis de l’homme.
Crois-tu donc imposer tes. rêves à la nuit?

Cette grande songeuse envoie en ton réduit
Ses blêmes légions d’ombres battant de l’aile;
C’est elle qui les fait, et tu les reçois d’elle.
Et quand un prêtre dit tout bas dans son orgueil:
J’invente des démons qui mettent l’homme en deuil;
Je suis le créateur suprême et solitaire
D’un tas de spectres, honte ou frayeur de la terre;
Et le monde, stupide et morne, est sous le faix
De tous les dieux impurs ou sanglants que je fais,
Fô, Dagon, Teutatès, Vénus aux yeux funèbres! -
La nuit, qui les créa d’un pan de ses ténèbres,
Rit, et de leur noirceur a peu d’étonnement.
Le formidable ciel sait que le prêtre ment.

XXXII Les écrivains

Les écrivains sont tous plus ou moins des démons.
Ils veulent nous ôter le Dieu que nous aimons!
Prenez garde à l’enfer! Défiez-vous des livres!
Ainsi parlent, avec des gestes de gens ivres,
De pauvres hommes noirs, vaguement égarés,
Qui sont fakirs dans l’Inde et parmi nous curés.
Comme ils sont ignorants, ces chers énergumènes!
Plaignons-les: Leur colère aux phrases inhumaines
S’agite dans de l’ombre, et fait. le triste bruit
Du torrent dans la chute et du vent dans la nuit.
Un jour, terrifiant le pâtre et la vachère,
Un de ces bonzes-là pérorait dans sa chaire; ,
Le bon bavard farouche aux longs bras, au sommet
De son bahut, orné d’un pigeon, écumait;
Ce rustre sèmbre; avec l’éloquence patoise
Qui ferait rire Athène et fait trembler Pontoise,
Secouait sur Satan, Voltaire et le bon sens
Toutes sortes de coups de foudre paysans.
C’était de quoi frémir. Nonotte, plus de Maistre.
C’était la foi sans fin, le dogme à grand orchestre,
Un Sauveur menaçant qui grinçait et suait,
Et Jocrisse venant secourir Bossuet.
Autour de ce hurleur formidable, les branches
Offraient leur ombre amie aux vagues ailes blanches,
Les halliers étaient pleins de la douceur des nids
D’où sortait le rayon des bonheurs infinis;
Les plaines étalaient la vaste paix champêtre;
Ce Dieu, que dans l’église obscurcissait le prêtre
A force de credos et de confiteors,
Le soleil le prouvait tranquillement dehors.
Mon père, doux passant qui m’a conté la chose,
Était là. Laissez-moi, car ce nom me repose,
Vous dire que mon père était un sage pur,
Un de ces penseurs vrais qui, dans le monde obscur,

Montrent un front serein même à l’épreuve austère,
Qui cherchent. le. côté rassurant du mystère,
Et se font expliquer, l’énigme du destin:
Par le splendide chant des oiseaux le matin.
Il était souriant toujours, jamais sceptique.
Aucune Bible, aucune illusion d’optique,
Ne troublaient son regard fixé.sur le réel.
Il était confiant dans la beauté du ciel.

Donc le digne curé faisait rage. Et les chênes,
Les ormes, qui sans peur tremblent, grondent sans haines,
Continuaient leur grand murmure dans les bois;
Une confusion de rumeurs et d’abois
S’éteignait dans les champs-et venait de la ville,
Auguste apaisement des clameurs dans l’idylle
Cette conviction que donne aux coeurs l’azur,
Sorte de point d’appui mystérieux et. sûr,
Était partout sensible, et les molles prairies
Exhalaient ces parfums qu’on nomme rêveries;
La clémence éternelle était, visible aux yeux;
Le bon curé semblait d’autant plus furieux;
La foudre au poing, voyant dans Vaugirard Sodome,
Sinistre, il accablait du poids du bon Dieu l’homme;
Il damnait tout, sans choix, sans trêve, sans répit.

Tout à coup un Gros-Jean quelconque interrompit,
Raillant le prêtre; ainsi parfois Pyrrhon poignarde Patouillet à travers la blouse campagnarde:
— Si Dieu n’existait-pas? répondez à cela! ,

— Il faudrait l’inventer, dit mon père. Voilà,
S’écria le curé, j’en prends à témoin Rome
Et-le Saint-Père, un cri de l’âme! Et le bonhomme
Sut gré du cri de l’âme à mon père, lequel
L’avait pris dans le diable, édition de Kehl.

3 mars 1877.

XXXIII EN SORTANT D’UNE ÉGLISE

Ce prêtre a dit au peuple:

— Enfants, baissez les Yeux.
Dieu n’est point l’âme vague éparse au fond des cieux.
La nature vous trompe et l’univers vous leurre.
Qui n’est point avec nous à -jamais souffre et pleure.
Ne cherchez jamais Dieu hors du texte divin!
Ainsi l’immensité chante un cantique vain!
Quoi donc! je dois, avant de voir Dieu tel que l’âme
L’aperçoit, flamboyant d’une bonté de flamme,
Avant de l’adorer tel que me le font voir
Toutes les profondeurs de l’aurore et du soir;
L’étoile dans l’azur, la perle dans la nacre,
Faire rectifier l’Éternel par un diacre!
Il faut sous un missel. prosterner notre foi!
L’aube enseigne l’amour et la Bible l’effroi
Le curé crie: enfer! l’astre crie: espérance!
C’est le curé qu’il faut croire de préférence!
Je dois subordonner, dans mon coeur qui bondit,
Ce que dit l’univers à ce qu’un prêtre dit!
Ce n’est pas l’infini, c’est l’homme qu’il faut suivre.
Quoi! la création n’est-elle, donc qu’un. livre
Dont les religions rédigent l’erratum!
Quoi! les lys de Sâron, les roses, de Poestum,
La foudre, le soleil dorant-la solitude,
N’ont pas dans leur lumière autant de certitude
Qu’un symbole en latin ou qu’un dogme en hébreu!
Tout bien considéré, nous destituons Dieu!

XXXIV Quand l’honneur est tombé

Quand l’honneur est tombé, rien ne reste debout.
On s’avilit, qu’importe! on s’accoutume à tout,
Aux lâches actions comme aux paroles louches.
On laisse aller son nom au hasard dans les bouches.
On descend chaque jour, sans remords, sans appuis,
Plus bas, un peu plus bas, toujours plus bas, et puis
On ne s’aperçoit plus qu’on monte ou qu’on descende.
Il arrive un moment où la honte est si grande
Qu’on ne fait même pas d’efforts pour en sortir.
C’est le dernier degré de ne la plus sentir.
Quand on ne rougit plus et lorsqu’on rit sans cesse,
C’est que l’on a touché le fond de la bassesse;
C’est qu’on se trouvé là comme sur un plancher,
Et qu’on est satisfait d’y vivre et d’y marcher. -
Alors tout est fini. Plus d’espoir, plus de crainte.
La dernière lueur des âmes est éteinte.
On est naïvement un monstrueux gredin. -
L’opprobre; le dégoût, le mépris, le dédain, -
Devient si naturel aux hommes comme aux femmes
Qu’ils en sont à ne plus savoir qu’ils sont infâmes!

XXXV CONTEMPLATION, CONSOLATION

Que la douleur est courte et vite évanouie!
Hélas! sitôt qu’une ombre en terre est enfouie,
Vers cet être éclipsé qui jadis rayonna,
Nul ne se tourne plus. Le premier soin qu’on a
C’est de se délivrer de la mémoire chère.
Dehors ce mendiant! L’un rit, fait bonne chère,
Et dit: Buvons, mangeons, vivons! c’est le réel.
L’autre endort son regret en regardant le ciel,
Admire et songe, esprit flottant à l’aventure,
Et fait évaporer ses pleurs dans la nature.
L’homme, que le chagrin ne peut longtemps plier,
Passe; tout nous est bon, hélas! pour oublier;
La contemplation bercé, apaise et console;
Le coeur laisse, emporté par l’aile qui l’isole,
Tomber les souvenirs en montant dans l’azur;
Le tombeau le plus cher n’est plus qu’un point obscur.
Ceux qui vivent chantant, riant sans fin ni trêve,
Ont bien vite enterré leurs morts; celui qui rêve
N’est pas un meilleur vase à conserver le deuil;
La nature emplit l’âme en éblouissant l’oeil;
Et l’araignée oublie, quand elle tend sa toile,
D’un bout l’attache à l’homme et de l’autre à l’étoile.

18 mai 1854.

XXXVI Là-haut,

Là-haut, soeur du forfait et soeur de l’innocence,
Pâle, joignant les, mains, suppliant, en présence
Des anges du ciel bleu,
La justice au front pur, l’effrayante boiteuse,
La pitié se dresse, humble, en pleurs, triste, honteuse,
Auguste, aux pieds de Dieu.

Penchant sur les maudits sa couronne étoilée,
Les aimant, acceptant de leur être mêlée,
Cachant la nudité,
Baisant l’ulcère infect, ne trouvant, l’immortelle,
Rien de trop misérable et de trop vil pour elle
Dans sa sublimité,
Prenant sa part du crime et sa part du supplice,
Priant pour les méchants, couvrant de son cilice
Bourreaux, tyrans, soldats,
Pour tous les réprouvés criant miséricorde,
Elle apparaît pieds nus, ayant au cou la corde
Où se pendit Judas.

XXXVII Une nuit je rêvais,

Une nuit je rêvais, et je vis dans mon rêve
Une plaine sans bords pareille aux flots sans grève, Ouverte à tous les vents comme les vastes mers.
C’était un de. ces lieux inquiets et déserts
Où flotte encor le bruit confus des multitudes,
Où l’on sent à travers les mornes solitudes,
Aux palpitations dont frémit l’air troublé,
Quelque peuple inconnu, comme une onde écoulé.
Cette plaine était rousse, immense, triste et nue,
Sans une goutte d’eau pour refléter la nue.
Pas un champ labouré, pas un toit. Nul témoin,
Nul passant. Seulement on y voyait au loin
De grands lions de pierre, étranges et superbes,
De distance en distance isolés dans les herbes.
Immobiles, debout sur des granits sculptés
Qu’étreignaient les buissons par le vent agités,
Tous ayant quelque fière et terrible posture,
Ils semblaient, au milieu de la sombre nature
Qui rayonnait dans l’ombre à mon oeil ébloui,
Ecouter la rumeur d’un monde évanoui.

Qu’est-ce que ces lions faisaient dans cette plaine?
Peut-être y gardaient-ils quelque mémoire vaine,
Quelque grand souvenir dans l’ombre descendu,
Comme des chiens pensifs dont le maître est perdu?
Etaient-ce des rochers? Etaient-ce des fantômes?
Peut-être avaient-ils vu tomber bien des royaumes.
Qui sait? avant ces temps obscurs, profonds, lointains,
Où l’histoire à tâtons perd ses flambeaux éteints,
Où la tradition indistincte s’émousse,
Peut-être étaient-ils là, déjà rongés de mousse?
Peut-être l’ouvrier n’avait-il rien d’humain
Qui lés avait sculptés de sa puissante main?
Qui donc les avait mis seuls dans ce vaste espace

Pour entendre à jamais pleurer le vent qui passe,
Siffler l’herbe et glisser le lézard dans les grès?
Sans oser faire un pas, je les considérais

Avec l’effroi qu’on a devant les choses sombres.
Nul vestige autour d’eux, ni sentiers, ni décombres;
Rien que la ronce obscure et le buisson noirci.

Or, tout à coup, pendant que je rêvais ainsi,
Il apparut, -c’était l’heure où le jour recule, -
Dans le ciel sépulcral et froid du crépuscule,
L’aile ouverte et planant sur cet horizon noir,
Un oiseau monstrueux, vaste, effroyable à voir,
D’une forme inconnue à la nature entière,
Si fauve et si hideux que les lions de pierre
S’enfuirent en poussant de longs rugissements.

Ô Dieu, vous qui penché sur les esprits dormants,
Leur envoyez la nuit le Moloch ou l’Archange,
Que vouliez-vous me dire avec ce songe étrange?
Serait-ce, après nos jours sans joie et sans honneur,
La figure des temps où nous entrons, Seigneur?

XXXVIII Je rêve une nature innocente

Je rêve une nature innocente et meilleure;
Je ne comprends pas bien pourquoi le renard pleure;
Et comment il se peut que de l’oeil effare
Sorte une larme après qu’un rayon est entré;
Où la lumière vient doit demeurer la joie;
Dans ce frais paradis idéal où j’emploie
Mes songes, ou je mets le possible divin,
On chantera; chanter n’est pas stérile et vain,
Chanter est le doux bruit des esprits sur les cimes;
En jetant l’harmonie aux profondeurs sublimes,
Aux vents, aux océans, aux sillons, aux prés verts,
Une chanson travaille à l’immense univers;
La mélodie utile et sainte est une haleine;
Une femme qui passe en chantant dans la plaine
Mêle une vague lyre au rhythme universel;
De là, plus d’âme aux fleurs et plus d’azur au ciel;
De là je ne sais quelle indulgence sereine.

On n’aura pas besoin de se donner de peine
Pour se sentir aimé là-haut dans l’infini;
Le nid sera sacré, l’épi sera béni;
Tout germe engendrera son fruit, toute promesse
Tiendra parole, et sàns église ni sans messe,
Sans prêtres, tant sera transparent le ciel bleu,
La sôlf verra la source et lame verra: Dieu.

10 janvier 1876.

XXXIX DANS LE CIMETIÈRE DE ...

Je priais, recueilli dans ma pensée. intime.
Le cimetière est doux au deuil silencieux
A cette heure où le soir ineffable et sublime
Vient à la paix des morts mêler la paix des cieux.

J’entendis qu’on marchait, je levai les paupières;
Le vent remuait l’herbe autour des crucifix,
Et je vis à pas lents venir parmi les pierres
Un aïeul par la main menant son petit-fils.

Ému, j’interrompis mes funèbres extases,
Pour les suivre des yeux et tout bas les bénir.
Un vieillard! un enfant! ô mystérieux vases!
L’un rempli du passé, l’autre de. l’avenir!

Cette petite main dans cette main débile
Me rappelait des jours enfuis, des jours meilleurs!
Le vieillard, par moments s’arrêtant immobile,
Regardait les tombeaux; l’enfant cherchait des fleurs.

Le vieillard regardait les sépulcres dans l’ombre,
Comme si, morne et blême et baigné de sueur,
A force d’y fixer son oeil profond et sombre,
Il en faisait sortir quelque étrange lueur!

15 août 1846.

XL Un jour que je songeais,

Un jour que je songeais, à Dieu, j’ai reconnu
Que l’homme ici vient nu pour s’en retourner nu,
Que la tombe et la crèche ont des rapports étranges,
Qu’on naît dans un linceul et qu’on meurt dans des langes,
Et, qu’eût-on été grand, superbe et triomphant,
A force de vieillesse on redevient enfant.
Amour, pouvoir, richesse, honneurs, apothéoses,
Tous les biens d’ici-bas passent comme les choses
Qu’aperçoit dans la plaine un voyageur de nuit.
Voir un peu de lumière, entendre un peu de bruit,
C’est là toute la vie. On marche; on fait sa route;
L’un consulte la foi; l’autre écoute le doute;

La clarté qui nous luit nous conduit-elle au port?
On ne sait. On se dit, à l’heure de la mort:
Ai-je suivi la vraie? ai-je suivi la fausse?
Puis on est au hasard jeté dans une fosse;
Ou l’on s’en va, chargé du poids d’un monument,
Attendre le clairon du dernier jugement,
Couché de tout son long sans ouvrir la paupière,
Seul dans l’intérieur d’une chambre de pierre.

Nuit du 18 au 19 juillet 1843. En malle-poste.

XLI Oh dis!

Oh dis! pourquoi toujours regarder sous la terre,
Interroger la tombe et chercher dans la nuit?
Et toujours écouter, penché sur une pierre,
Comme espérant un bruit?

T’imagines-tu donc qué ceux que nous pleurâmes
Sont là couchés sous l’herbe attentifs à nos pas?
Crois-tu donc que c’est là qu’on retrouve les âmes?
Songeur, ne sais-tu pas

Que Dieu n’a pas voulu, lui qui règne et dispose,
Que la flamme restât quand s’éteint le flambeau,
Et que l’homme jamais pût mettre quelque chose,
Hélas! dans le tombeau!

Ne sais-tu pas que, l’âme une fois délivrée,
Les fosses, dévorant les morts qu’on enfouit,
Se remplissent d’une ombre effrayante et sacrée
Où tout s’évanouit!

Tu te courbes en vain, dans ta douleur amère,
Sur le sépulcre noir plein des jours révolus,
Redemandant ta fille, et ton père, et ta mère,
Et ceux qui ne sont plus!

Tu te courbes en vain. Ainsi que sous la vague
Un plongeur se fatigue à chercher des trésors,
Tu tâches d’entrevoir quelque figure vague
De ce que font les morts.

Rien ne brille pour toi, sombre tête baissée;
La tombe est morne, et close au regard curieux;
Tu n’as plus un rayon qui luise en ta pensée.
Songeur, lève les yeux!

Lève les yeux! renonce à sonder: la poussière;
Fais envoler ton âme en ce firmament bleu,
Regarde dans l'azur, cherche dans la lumière,
Et surtout crois en Dieu!

Crois en celui dont tout répète les louanges!
Crois en l'éternité qui nous ouvre les bras!
Appelle le Seigneur, demande-lui. tes anges,
Et tu les reverras!

Oui, mêmedèsce monde où pleure ta misèré,
En élevant toujours tôn coeur rempli d'espoir,
Sans t'en aller d'ici; sans qu'il soit Nécessaire
Dè mourir pour les voir,

Parce qu'en mëditant la l'Or s'accroît sans cesse,
Parce qu'à l'oeil croyant le ciel s'ouvre éclairci,
Un jour tu t'écrieras-tout à coup, plein d'ivresse
O mon Dieu! les voici!

Et tu retrouveras, ô, pauvre âme ravie!
Une ombre du bonheur de ton passé joyeux
D'ans ces fantômes chers, qui charmèrent ta vie
Et qui sont dans les cieux!

Comme à l'heure où la plaine au loin se décolore,
Quand le soif àssôà brit le jour pâle et décru,
Là-haut, dans la nuée, on peut revoir encore
Le soleil disparu.

27 octobre 1846.

XLII INSCRIPTION DE SÉPULCRE

Je nais. Qui suis je? Ô deuil, j’ai peur, j’ai froid, je pleure;
Je souffre, je suis homme, hélas!
Il faudra que je vive, il faudra que je meure.
Avant de marcher, je suis las

Je suis le frais jeune homme, altier comme un génie,
J’aime une femme au pur regard,
Et voici les douleurs, les larmes, l’insomnie.
On aime, on pleure. Hélas, plus tard,

L’âme de souvenirs doucement remuée,
On crie: O beaux jours! temps joyeux!
Car nos amours s’en vont ainsi que la nuée,
Pluie à nos fronts, pourpre à nos yeux.

Je saigne; tous les coeurs sont ingrats; je travaille,
La terre est plus ingrate encor;
Mon maître prend l’épi, mon lit garde la paille;
J’ai faim, devant la gerbe d’or!

Voici l’âpre vieillesse, et je me sens décroître;
Mes. amours, mon coeur en lambeaux,
Gisent en moi; mes jours sont les arches d’un cloître
Jetant leur ombre à des tombeaux.

Ma vie est un suaire et j’en suis le squelette.
Les ans, des maux accompagnés,
Me garrottent; chaque heure est une bandelette
Sur mes ossements décharnés.

Suis-je une âme? est-ce un Dieu qui m’attend? Rien ne semble L’explication à mes yeux;
Et ce double inconnu, sous mon grabat qui tremble,
Croise ses X mystérieux.

La blême horreur du gouffre effare mes prunelles:
Mon jour s’éteint, pâle et terni.
Azur! azur! azur! Dieu vivant! j’ai des ailes!
Ô bleu profond de l’infini!

26 juillet 1854.

XLIII Sombres aboyeurs des ténèbres,

Sombres aboyeurs des ténèbres,
Abîmes, que me voulez-vous?
Que demandez-vous, nuits funèbres?
Pourquoi soufflez-vous, vents jaloux?
Pourquoi, mêlant brumes, nuées,
Tourbillons, flots pleins de huées,
Multiplier autour de moi,
Devant mes prunelles obscures,
Dans toutes ces vagues figures
Les attitudes de l’effroi?
Je suis une âme ombres farouches,
Je vous échappe; mon flambeau
Ne peut être éteint par vos bouches,
Gouffres de l’énorme tombeau!
Je ne vous dois rien que ma cendre,
Que ma chair qui doit redescendre,
Vaine argile qui dure peu,
Poussière, d’où l’esprit s’élance.
Je vous la donnerai. Silence.!
Et laissez-moi songer à Dieu.

XLIV Nous sommes deux familles d’hommes

Nous sommes deux familles d’hommes:
Savants et voyants; les uns fils
Des Paris, des Londres, des Romes,
Les autres, d’Ur et de Memphis;
Nous, faits pour l’ombre, humbles apôtres,
Qui tâchons de savoir; les autres,
Prophètes pleins d’Adonaï,
Ames d’extase ou de colère
Qu’à travers les siècles éclaire
Le flamboiement du Sinaï.
Penchés à la même fenêtre,
Ils regardent nous écoutons.
Un esprit différent pénètre
Les Moïses et les Newtons;
C’était ainsi, même à l’aurore,
Lorsqu’aux mages parlait encore
La Muse aux lèvres de corail,
Aux temps où ces rêveurs sauvages
Voyaient descendre des nùages
Le centaure au double poitrail.

Nous que la science accompagne,
Eux que le bleu rayon conduit,
Nous montons la même montagne;
Pour nous tout meurt, pour eux tout luit;
Tous ensemble, par la prière,
Ou par l’idée, âpre ouvrière,
Fouillant le sol, cueillant le fruit,
Nous sondons l’âme et la matière,
Eux sur le versant de lumière,
Nous sur le versant de la nuit.

XLV UMBRA

Obscurité! le songe lève
Son front dans la réalité:
Que serait l’être sans le rêve,
Et la face, le voile ôté?
L’âme est de l’ombre qui sanglote.
Moi l’atome, j’erre et je flotte.
J’allais, ô pleurs! j’aimais, ô deuil!
Mon seuil s’ouvre sur le naufrage.
Ma maison, quand la mer fait rage,
Sonne la nuit comme un écueil.

Que dites-vous à l’âme humaine,
Que bégayez-vous pour mon coeur,
Monde; vision, phénomène,
Eau lugubre, aquilon moqueur?
A qûoi, sous la neige ou les laves,
Pensent les monts, ces vieux esclaves,
Fouettés de tous les fouets de l’air,
Ces patients du grand supplice,
Vêtus d’ombre, et sous leur cilice
Marqués du fer chaud de l’éclair?

N’est-il pas lugubre de dire
Que la porte sombre est sans clé,
Que la terre où l’homme respire
Est comme un manuscrit roulé?
Il semble que toutes les forces
Se donnent pour but les divorces,
Et que la nature ait pour voeu
D’ôter l’aube du cimetière,
D’épaissir l’horreur, la matière
Et l’énigme entre l’homme et Dieu!

Est-ce donc qu’ils sont nécessaires

Tous ces fléaux dont nous souffrons?
Pourquoi cet arbre des misères
Croisant ses branches sur nos fronts?
Le mal nous tient. Où sont les causes?
On dirait que le but des’choses
Est de cacher Dieu qui nous fuit,
Que le prodige obscur nous raille,
Et que le. monde entier travaille
A la croissance de la nuit.
Que regarde dans les bois fauves
Le grand cerf à l’oeil égaré?
Vénus, qui luis sur les monts chauves,
D’où te vient ton rayon sacré?
Qu’est-ce que ton anneau, Saturne?
Est-ce que quelque être nocturne,
Quelque vaste archange puni,
Quelque Satan -dont le front plie,
Fait tourner sûr cette poulie
La chaîne, du puits infini?

Que tu menaces ou promettes,
Dis-nous le secret de tes pleurs;
Aube? Et vous, qu’êtes-vous, comètes,
Faces aux horribles pâleurs?
Êtes,-vous, dans l’éther qui roule,
Des étoiles dont le sang coule,
Faisant des mares de clarté?
Venez-vous des noirs ossuaires?
Êtes-vous, traînant vos suaires,
Les mortes de l’immensité?

Ô profondeurs épouvantables,
Qu’est-ce donc que vous me voulez?
Que dois-je lire sur vos tables,
Cieux, temples, porches étoilés?
Ta rougeur de naphte et de soufre;
Ta clarté qui m’aveugle, ô gouffre,

Est-ce la vérité qui luit?
Le vent souffle-t-il sur mon doute
Quand, -penché sur l’ombre, j’écouté
Ce que dit ce crieur de nuit? -

Par moments, dressé sur ma couche,
Sombre, et peut-être blasphémant,
Je suis prêt à crier, farouche:
Allons! laisse-moi, firmament!
Par moments, je suis prêt à dire:
Vous dont je sens l’or dans ma lyre,
Le flamboiement dans mon courroux,
L’air dans mes strophes hérissées,
Et les rayons dans mes pensées,.
Astres, de quoi vous mêlez-vous? ,

En vain j’essaie et je m’élance.
Le gouffre effare le flambeau.
Rien dans le. ciel que le silence,
Rien que l’ombre dans le tombeau!

Oh! de quelle fosse entr’ouverte,
Sentons-nous le souffle, herbe verte?
Quels chevaux entend-on hennir?
Quel fantôme erre en nos décombres?
Quels yeux voit-on par tes, trous sombres,
Masque. effrayant de l’avenir?

La vie et la mort! qu’est-ce, abîme?
Où va l’homme pâle et troublé?
Est-il l’autel, bu la victime?
Est-il le soc? est-il lé blé?
Oh! ces vents que rien ne fait taire!
Que font-ils de nous sur la terre,
Tous ces souffles prodigieux?
Quel mystère en nous se consomme?
Qu’apportent-ils de l’ombre à l’homme?

Qu’emportent-ils de l’homme aux cieux?

Énigme! Où je dis: pourriture;
Le vautour vient et dit: festin!
Qu’est-ce que c’est que la nature?
Qu’est-ce que c’est que le destin?
Marchons-nous dans des routes sûres?
Dépend-il des forces obscures
De tordre là-bas mon chemin?
Peux-tu, sort fatal qui nous pousses,
Dans l’ombre, à force de secousses,
Changer la forme de demain?

Toutes ces lois qu’un faux jour perce,
Vie et sort, textes décevants
Dont le sens confus se disperse
Dans l’âpre dispute des vents,
Ce monde où chaque élément jette
Son mot à l’âme qui végète,
Cette nature aux fatals noeuds,
Ce destin hagard qui nous brise,
N’est-ce qu’une sombre méprise,
Malentendu vertigineux!

L’ancre est un poids qui rompt le-câble.
Tout est promis, rien n’est tenu.
Serait-ce donc que l’implacable
Est un des noms de l’inconnu?
Quel est donc ce maître farouche
Qui pour la toile fait la mouche,
L’orageux cheval pour le mors,
Tous les escaliers pour descendre,
Oui pour non, le feu pour la cendre,
La mémoire pour le remords?
D’où viennent les soirs, les aurores,
Les flots enflés, les flots décrus,
Les déluges, les météores,

Ces apparus, ces disparus!
Pourquoi le miracle Nature
Contient-il l’effroi, la torture,
Le mal, sur l’homme se courbant?
Le mal a-t-il le bien pour tige?
Ou serait-ce que le prodige
Tombe, et devient monstre en tombant?
Quand dans les forêts forcenées
Court l’ouragan,. ce furieux
Arrache-t-il à nos années
Quelque lambeau mystérieux?
L’arbre, qui -sort d’une fêlùre,
A-t-il en bas sa chevelure
Qui plonge au globe rajeuni?
Penseurs, têtes du ciel voisines,
Vos cheveux sont-ils les racines
Par où vous puisez l’infini?

Est-ce l’effroi des cieux horribles
Que je sens, en moi palpiter.
A de certains moments, terribles,
Où le monde semble hésiter?
Aux heures où la terre tremble,
Quand la nuit s’accroît, quand il semble
Qu’on voit le flot noir se gonfler,
Quand la lune s’évade et. rampe,
Quand l’éclipse sur cette lampe,
Masque. sinistre, vient souffler! .
Si vous attendez quelque chose,
Rochers pensifs, dites-le-moi!
Dites-moi de quoi se. compose
Le bien, le mal, le sort, la:loi,
O récifs! pièges! araignées!
Foudre qui jettes à poignées
Tes cheveux de flamme aux enfers,
Secouant sur les flots sauvages
Dans l’âpre forêt des nuages

Le hideux buisson des éclairs!
Et toi, la: grande vagabonde,
L’hydre verte au dos tortueux,
Que dis-tu, mer. où l’ombre abonde,
Bouleversement monstrueux?
O flots! ô, coupe d’amertume!

Quel symbole êtes-vous, écume,
Bave d’en bas jetée au jour,
Fange insultant l’aube sereine,
Éternel crachat de la haine
A l’éternel front de l’amour!

Laissons les flots battre la plage!
Laissons la mer lugubre en paix!
Et laissons. l’orageux feuillage
Frissonner dans les bois épais!
Ne troublons pas les harmonies
Rauques, étranges, infinies,
Des océans et des typhons!
Laissons les vents à leurs démences!
Et laissons dans les cieux immenses
S’envoler les aigles profonds!

Je vais, j’avance, je recule,
Je marche où plus d’un se perdit;
Par moments dans ce crépuscule
Une voix lugubre me dit:
— Que cherches-tu? tout fuit, tout passe.
La terre n’est rien. Et l’espace,
Que contient-il? Est-ce réel?
Tu ne peux qu’entrevoir, atome,
La création, ce fantôme,
Derrière ce linceul, le ciel.

Où vas-tu, pauvre âme étonnée?
Monade, connais-tu l’aimant?

Que sais-tu de la destinée,
Et que sais-tu du firmament?
Connais-tu le vrai, le possible,
Tous les réseaux de l’invisible,
Ce qui t’attend, ce qui te suit?
Connais-tu les lois éternelles?
Entends-tu les tremblements d’ailes
Dans les grands filets de la nuit?

Sens-tu parfois, dans l’ombre infâme
Qu’agite un vent farouche et lourd,.
Une toile où se prend ton âme
Et sur laquelle un monstre court?
Sens-tu parfois, fils de la terre,
S’ouvrir sous tes pieds le mystère,
Et se mêler, ô passant nu,
A tes cheveux que l’hiver mouille,
Les fils de la sombre quenouille,
Les cheveux du front inconnu?

Certaines planètes fatales,
Certains mirages de l’éther,
Certains groupes d’étoiles pâles
Ont un -rayonnement éclair.
Que sais-tu sur tes mornes grèves?
Es-tu sûr, au fond de tes rêves,
Que ce que l’ombre aux murs de fer
Couvre comme une épaisse grillé,
Soit le ciel, et que ce qui brille,
O songeur, ne soit pas l’enfer?

Les constellations tragiques,
Ouvrant siir vous leurs fauves yeux,
Passent, grandes larves magiques,
Sur vos destins mystérieux.
Insensé qui croit les cieux vides!
Quelques-unes, les plus livides,

Apparurent, ô sombre esprit,
En chiffres noirs dans les ténèbres
Sur les dés des jdueurs funèbres
Qui jouaient la robe du Christ.

Mais insensé qui s’imagine
Connaître tous les horizons,
La tombe, la fin, l’origine,
Se dévoue et crie: Avançons!
Insensé ce Jésus lui-même
Qui s’immole parce qu’il aime!
Insensés les audacieux
Qui se jettent dans le cratère,
Rêvant le progrès sur la terre
Ou le paradis dans les cieux!

Quand tu vois rire le squelette,
Es-tu sûr que ce noir rictus
Où le jour d’en -bas se reflète
N’est pas, pour les bons abattus,
Pour les justes sur qui tout pèse,
Pour les martyrs dans la fournaise,
Pour l’esprit croyant et créant,
Pour l’âme espérant sa patrie,
L’épouvantable moquerie
Du tombeau, qui sait le néant?

Non! il ne se peut, ô nature,
Que tu sois sur l’homme au cachot,
Sur l’esprit, sur la créature,
De la haine tombant -d’en haut!

Il ne se peut pas que ces forces
Mêlent à tous leurs noirs divorces
L’homme, atome en leurs poings tordu,
Lui montrent l’horreur souveraine,
Et fassent, sans qu’il les comprenne,

Des menaces à l’éperdu!

Il ne se peut que l’édifice
Soit fait d’ombre et de surdité;
Il ne se peut que sacrifice,
Héroïsme, effort, volonté,
Il ne se peut que la sagesse,
Que l’aube, éternelle largesse,
La rose qui s’épanouit,
Le droit, la raison, la justice,
Tout, la foi, l’amour, aboutisse
Au ricanement de la nuit!

Il ne se peut pas que j’invente
Ce que Dieu n’aurait pas créé!
Quoi! pas de but! quoi! l’épouvante!
Le vide! le tombeau troué!
Non! l’être ébauché, Dieu l’achève!
Il ne se peut pas que mon rêve
Ait plus d’azur que le ciel bleu,
Que l’infini soit un repaire,
Que je sois meilleur que le Père,
Que l’homme soit plus grand que Dieu!

Quoi! je le supposerais juste
Ce Dieu qui serait malfaisant!
C’est moi qui serais l’être auguste,
Et ce serait lui l’impuissant!
L’homme aurait trouvé dans son âme
L’amour, le paradis, la flamme,
La lumière sur la hauteur,
Le bonheur incommensurable...
Dieu ne serait qu’un misérable,
L’homme serait le créateur!

Oui, comme après tout, c’est un songe
Qu’un monde formé de néant,

Qui fit le mal fit le mensonge;
C’est moi qui reste le géant!
Que ce Dieu vienne et se mesure!
Qu’il sorte donc de sa masure!
Il fit le mal, j’ai cru le bien;
J’ai contre lui, si je me lève,
Toute la gloire de mon rêve,
Toute l’abjection du sien!
Non! non! la fleur. qui vient d’éclore
Me démontre le firmament.
Il ne se peut pas que l’aurore
Sourie à l’homme faussement,
Et que, dans la tombe profonde,
L’âme ait droit de. dire à ce monde
D’où l’espoir toujours est sorti,
A ces sphères, de Dieu vassales,
Affirmations colossales:
Étoiles! vous avez menti! .

Ce qui ment, c’est toi, doute! envie!
Il ne se peut que lé rayon;
Que l’espérance, que la vie
Soit une infâme illusion!
Que tout soit faux, hors le blasphème!
Et que ce Dieu ne soit lui-même,
Dans’sonvain temple aérien,
Que l’immense spectre Ironie
Regardânt; dans l’ombre infinie,
L’univers accoudé sur Rien 1.

Un Dieu qui rirait de son oeuvre,
Qui rirait des justes déçus,
Et du cygne et de la couleuvre,
Et de Satan et de Jésus,
Un tel Dieu serait si terrible
Que, devant cette face horrible,
L’âme humaine se débattrait

Comme si, par ses ailes blanches,
Elle était, prise. sous les branches -
De. quèlque, sinistre forêt!

Que Rabelais, rieur énorme,
Railleur de, l'horizon humain,
Borné par le nombre et la fdrnie,
Hue aujourd'hui, sans voir demain;
Qu'il joue, étant jouet lûi-même,
Avec la vie et le problème,
Qu'importe! il passe, il meurt, il fuit;
Il n'est ni le fond, ni la-cime;
Mais un Rabelais de l'abîme
Ferait horreur, même à la nuit!

Que les éclairs soient les augures,
Que le vrai sorte du plaintif,
Que les fléaux, sombres figures,
Disent le mot définitif,
Je ne le crois pas! Vents farouches,
Nuits, flots, hivers, enflez vos bouches,

Tordez ma robe dans mes pas,
Étendez vos mains sur moi, faites
Tous vos serments dans les tempêtes,
Ténèbres, je ne vous crois pas!

Je crois à toi, jour! clarté! joie!
Toi qui seras ayant été,
A toi, mon aigle, à toi, ma proie,
Force, raison, splendeur, bonté!
Je crois à toi, toute puissance!
Je crois à toi, tôute innocence!
Encore à toi, toujours à toi!
Je prends mon être pierre à pierre;
La première est de la lumière,
Et la dernière est de la foi!

Dieu! sommet! aube foudrôyante!
Précipice serein! lueur!
Fascination effrayante
Qui tient l’homme et le rend meilleur!
De toutes parts il s’ouvre, abîme.
Quand on est sur ce mont sublime,
Faîte où l’orgueil toujours s’est tu,
Cime où.vos instincts vous entraînent,
Tous les vertiges qui vous prennent
Vous font tomber dans la vertu.

Donc laissez-vous choir dans ce gouffre,
Vivants! grands, petits, sages, fous,
Celui qui rit, celui qui souffre,
Vous tous! vous tous! vous tous! vous tous!
Tombez dans Dieu, foule effarée!
Tombez, tombez’! roulez, marée!
Et sois stupéfait, peuple obscur,
Du néant des songes sans nombre,
Et d’avoir traversé tant d’ombre
Pour arriver à tant d’azur!

Oh! croire, c’est la récompense
Du penseur aimant, quel qu’il soit;
C’est en se confiant qu’on pense,
Et c’est en espérant qu’on voit!
Chante, ô mon coeur, l’éternel psaume!
Dieu vivant, dans ma nuit d’atome,
Si je parviens, si loin du jour,
A comprendre, moi grain de sable,
Ton immensité formidable,
C’est en croyant à ton amour!

XLVI DIEU SUIT SA VOIE

Quand dans le coeur d’un peuple il a disposé tout,
Un rien suffit pour faire éclater tout à coup
Ces révolutions fatales et divines
Qui jettent des clartés et qui font des ruines.
En des jours, comme ceux que le sort nous a, faits,
La plus petite cause. a les pires effets.
Dans ce siècle où le mal; comme le bien, est libre,
Où l’égalité mine et sape l’équilibre,
Tout est en question. Que voyons-nous souvent?
De grands coups de hasard et de grands coups de vent.
Veillons donc. Nous vivons dans un temps où nul homme
N’est petit, où chacun est redoutable, en somme.
Le bois nourrit la flamme, et la haine nourrit
Tous les mauvais instincts de l’homme. Crains l’esprit, Crains le coeur où dans l’ombre abonde et s’amoncelle
La haine qui s’enflamme à la moindre étincelle.
Parfois, un mendiant qui vous suit pas à pas,
Un rêveur en haillons que vous ne voyez pas,
Dans le fond de son âme inconnue et hautaine,
A toute une forêt de colère et de haine
Qui n’attend que le choc d’un caillou, qu’un moment,
Pour remplir l’horizon d’un vaste embrasement!

XLVII Qui sait

Qui sait si tout n’est pas un pourrissoir immense?
Qui sait si ce qu’on croit gloire, vie et semence,
N’est pas horreur et deuil?
Contemplateur sur qui le rayon des nuits. tombe,
Qui sait si ce n’est pas de néant et de tombe
Que tu remplis ton oeil? .

Qui sait, espaces noirs, éthers, vagues lumières,
Si le fourmillement mystérieux des sphères
Ne ronge pas le ciel?
Et si l’aube n’est pas la rougeur d’une torche
Qui passe, et que quelqu’un promène sous le porche
Du sépulcre éternel?

Peut-être que l’abîme est un vaste ossuaire,
Que la comète rampe aux plis d’un noir suaire,
O vivants pleins de bruit,
Peut-être que la Mort, colossale et hagarde,
Est sous le firmament penchée, et vous regarde
Ayant pour front la nuit!

Peut-être que le monde est une chose morte;
Peut-être que le ciel où la saison apporte-
Tant de rayons divers,
O mortels, est soumis à la loi qui vous navre,
Et que de cet énorme et splendide cadavre
Les astres sont les vers!

XLVIII Tu veux comprendre Dieu,

Tu veux comprendre Dieu, mais d’abord comprends l’homme;
Je t’en défie.
Allons! définis, classe, nomme,
Sonde, explique, suivant n’importe quelle loi;
L’être mystérieux que tu portes en toi.
Scrute avec ton regard, flaire avec ta narine;
Fouille-toi; tire-toi l’homme de la poitrine,
Et mets-le sur ta table, et penche-toi pour, voir
Ce que c’est que ce monstre, éblouissant et noir!
Qu’en dis-tu? Te plaît-il que nous parlions de l’homme?
Es-tu flamme et génie? es-tu bête de somme?
Dis, parle. Oh! quel spectacle étrange que ceci:
Un dieu monstre, un esprit par la chair obscurci,
Vivant, comme debout sur le tranchant d’un glaive,
Entre l’ombre qui monte et l’aube qui se lève,
Du ciel dans le fumier toujours précipité,
Et d’une extrémité dans l’autre extrémité,
Et ramené sans cesse au point dont il dévie
Par l’oscillation lugubre. de la vie!
Songes-tu quelquefois à ce mystère affreux,
La chair? Ce corps abject, douloureux, ténébreux,
Cette vie où l’enfer dans l’azur se reflète,
Mariage effrayant d’une. âme et d’un squelette,
Cette aile intérieure et qu’un cachot meurtrit,
Cette cage des os qui renferme un esprit,
En sondes-tu la nuit et le prodige, ô sage?
En comprends-tu l’horreur? Sens-tu sous ton visage
Cette tête de mort sur laquelle tu ris?
Entends-tu de ton âme en toi les sombres cris?
Parle. As-tu peur de l’homme? As-tu peur de cet ange
Que tu sens remuer vaguement dans ta fange? -
Dis, le jour où tu vins au. monde, as-tu compris? .
O ver de terre aveugle, ombre entre les esprits;
Espèce de fantôme en suspens sur deux mondes,

Sortant des lumineux pour aller aux immondes,
Tantôt Trimalcion, tantôt Ithuriel,
O zénith; ô nadir, souffle immatériel
Qui te fais par la chair rendre d’impurs services,
Et dans le sac du corps vas portant tous les vices,
De. toi-même ébloui, de toi-même effrayé,
Plus souillé que le bât d’un onagre rayé,
Et que le vert-de-gris des plus viles monnaies,
Ce qui n’empêche point, par instants, que tu n’aies;
Dans tes heures d’orgueil et de rébellion,
Des couchers de soleil, des réveils de lion,
Rôdeur qui veux quitter ta sphère pour les nôtres,
Trouve donc ton énigme avant d’en chercher d’autres!

N’as-tu donc point assez de ton gouffre? réponds.
Comment rejoindras-tu l’homme à l’homme? quels ponts
Pourront jamais unir, à travers la nuit noire, -
Un de ses bords à l’autre, et sa honte à sa gloire?

Sois un pasteur d’esprits, un guide des vivants,
Un fier tribun du peuple aux, discours émouvants,
Dont la mort est plus tard pour la terre un désastre;
Sois grand et fort avec une lumière d’astre;
Sois Colomb, et découvre un monde; sois Schiller,
L’aigle du coeur plus grand que les aigles. de l’air;
Sois Mirabeau, Shakspeare et Platon tout ensemble;
Si profond, si puissant, si sublime qu’il semble
Qu’on ne va plus te voir que derrière le ciel,
Avec une figure: au delà du réel;
Sois Christ, le fils aîné de la clarté divine,
En qui l’homme s’efface, en qui Dieu se devine,
Le grand Christ arrachant, calme et le bras tendu,
Aux faits épouvantés. le miracle éperdu;
Passe ton jour entier, être à haute stature,
A modeler en toi l’humanité future,
Du matin jusqu’au soir roule dans ton cerveau
Le système insondable et l’univers nouveau,

Où tout aura ta forme, arts, lois, dogmes, doctrines;
Et, maintenant, forçat, c’est ton heure. Aux latrines!

Ô génie accablé d’un viscère! destin
Traversé par l’abject et lugubre intestin!

Oh! quelle ombre après tant de clarté! tout à l’heure,
Tu semblais l’ange, roi de l’éther qu’il effleure;
Socrate sur le Pnyx ou Moïse au Galgal,
Tu planais; tu parlais à Dieu comme un égal;
Tu semblais de l’énigme être le grand ministre;
A présent te voilà nu, frissonnant, sinistre,
Misérable au niveau du bourbier, et réduit
Aux accroupissements des bêtes dans la nuit!
Et tu fais tous les jours cette chute, prophète,
Roi, mage, osant revoir l’azur quand tu l’as faite!
Tous les jours, l’homme allant aux astres ses pareils,
Vole avec les esprits au-dessus des soleils,
Luit, resplendit, flamboie, et tous les jours retombe
De plus haut que le ciel dans plus bas que la tombé!

L’homme a beau. sous son front sentir les cieux frémir,
Être un génie; il faut manger, il faut dormir!
Il se heurte aux besoins. Les besoins sont les bornes.
C’est le rappel brutal aux réalités mornes;
L’éternelle cuisson du stigmate de feu;
C’est le coup de bâton de la matière au dieu.

Oui, médite. C’est là ton sort. Nuit, crépuscule, Maladie et famine, hiver et canicule,
Ton âme endure tout; elle est esclave enfin.
Ton esprit, à travers ta chair, a soif, a faim,
A la fièvre, maigrit, engraisse, brûle, gèle.
Chacun de tes besoins en, passant te flagelle.
Et ces besoins sont vils,! Si hideux, si honteux
Que tu te sens coupable et puni devant eux,
Et que, sentant peser sur ta tête inféconde

Le poids antérieur d'un mystérieux monde,
Tu dis: qu'ai-je donc fait ailleurs pour être ici?
Mais tu reprends ton vol, le jour s'est éclairci,
La science t'appelle, homme, l'art te relève,
Tu fuis dans la clarté bleue et vague du rêve,
Tu t'évades aux cieux; te voilà libre! ... -Non.
Redescends dans ton corps, rentre en ton cabanon;
Avec ton sombre esprit la fange est familière;
Ton sang est ton bourreau, ta chair est ta geôlière;
De l'infâme prison tes sens sont les. habits;
Tu ne peux les quitter, et, courbé; tu subis,
Toujours, toujours, le jour, la nuit, et sans relâche,
La fustigation inexplicable et lâche.
Au moment où l'azur t'ouvre son pur chemin,
Où tu te vois auguste, et splendide, une main,
Qui que tu sois, beau, juste, illustre, innocent, vierge,
Te prend, et, frémissant, tu sens le coup de verge.
L'horreur crie: .es-tu là? Ta fange répond: oui.
Et rien ne te soustrait à ce joug inouï.

Il est une heure sainte, inexprimable, altière,
Où tout ce qui. n'est pas joie, orgueil et lumière,
Semble s'évanouir dans. ton coeur transporté; .
C'est quand tu vois la femme, aube, blancheur, beauté,
Qui met sous son pied nu tes résistances vaines,
Et qui fait ruisseler du, soleil dans tes veines.
Telle que dans l'Éden jadis elle brilla,
Elle apparaît, charmante; homme, en ce moment-là,
Tu méprises la bête, infecte créature,
Fier, superbe, oubliant ta propre pourriture;
Bien! prends ton Ève blonde; Emporte-la. Le jour
La donne à ta nuit... -Ah! tu frissonnes d'amour,
La volupté t'enivre.!,Ah! l'extase te gagne!
Tu ne te souviens plus de la chaîne du bagne,
Tu te crois ange... -Allons! , réveille-toi, fouetté
Jusque dans ton plaisir, par ta fétidité!

XLIX La haine,

La haine, tantôt fière, effrontée, ingénue,.
Aspire à s’étaler au soleil toute nue,
La calomnie aux dents, rit d’un sage ou d’un roi,
Lève sa jupe infâme et dit admirez-moi!
Tantôt, se souvenant qu’elle a mêlé peut-être
Jadis à vos amis son sourire humble et traître,
Elle arme sa fureur d’un regard innocent,
Emmielle son poison, et glisse en gémissant
Sa morsure plus lâche, et plus âcre et meilleure
Sous un. masque éraillé d’ancien ami qui pleure!
«Ce pauvre ami, dit-elle, oh! comme il est changé!
«Dans cette voie, hélas! pourquoi s’être engagé!
«Disons-lui qu’il se perd par amour pour la gloire...”
O vile hypocrisie! envie. épaisse et noire
Qui s’attache à l’esprit comme -la rouille au fer!
Louches regards! , pleurs, faux, qui font rire l’enfer!
Prends-tu l’humanité pour la cause finale?
Crois-tu que cette sombre aïeule virginale,
Toute jeune et portant les siècles sur son front,
Qui fait tomber l’encens des fleurs, les fruits du tronc,
Des feuilles la fraîcheur, de l’écorce la gomme,
La nature sacrée est servante chez l’homme,
Qu’elle l’adore, prend ses ordres, suit ses pas,
Fait les quatre saisons pour ses quatre repas,
Et n’a pour fonction, toute à ce maître étrange,
Que de bercer le lit de cette âme qui mange,
De ce coeur compliqué d’un ventre, et le hamac
De cet esprit sublime orné d’un estomac,
Qui suce et boit du sang en rêvant des doctrines,
Et qui s’emplit à l’auge et se vide aux latrines?
Crois-tu que l’ache verte en poussant ait pour but
De préserver ta bouche et tes dents du scorbut?
Crois-tu que la montagne, où Dieu laissa ses traces,
N’a d’autre utilité que d’être, quand tu chasses,

L’écho des voix; des cris, des cors et des abois?
Crois-tu que lé, croissant, lampe oblique des bois,
Qui lorsque le bandit sent le sbire à ses trousses,
Se cache à point derrière un tas de branches rousses,
Egarant la patrouille avec le caporal,
Soit du rôdeur de nuit le complice moral?
Crois-tu que l’aquilon soit le garçon de salle
Qui vient te balayer l’azur quand il est sale?
Que l’eau pense à l’usine en courant au ravin?
Penses-tu que ce soit pour te sucrer ton vin
Que la comète va chez toi, sombre évadée?
Dis-tu, quand tes pavés sont lavés par l’ondée:
Bien, bon Dieu! la besogne est faite ce matin!
Crois-tu que dans un ciel perdu, gouffre lointain
Qui sent; au froid rayon-du soleil qui l’éclaire,
Se mêler l’effrayante attraction stellaire,
Dans un ciel où jamais un ange ne vola,
Une planète morne, et fatale, au delà
D’Uranus qui lui-même est plus loin que Saturne,
Se traîne, obscure; sourde, âpre, à jamais nocturne,
Traçant dans l’être, au fônd d’un blême tourbillon,
Presque hors de la vie un lugubre sillon;
Et que cette planète épouvantable râle,
Et que ce monde triste autour du soleil pâle
Qu’à travers la distance il peut à péine voir,
Accomplisse, tournant comme un chariot noir,
Une sinistre année, égale à cent des vôtres;
Et que, monstre, géant des globes, loin des autres,
Il traverse à jamais, seul dans un sombre bruit,
Un ouragan d’hiver, d’épouvante et de nuit,
Et soit énorme, et soit funeste, et soit horrible,
Et montre à l’ombre immense une face terrible,
Pour faire, en votre bouge et dans votre terrier,
Donner la croix d’honneur à monsieur Leverrier?

LI À CEUX QUI SONT PETITS

Est-ce ma faute à moi si vous n’êtes pas grands?
Vous aimez les hiboux, les fouines, les tyrans,
Le mistral, le simoun, l’écueil, la lune rousse,
Vous êtes Myrmidon que son néant courrouce;
Hélas! l’envie en vous creuse son puits sans fond;
Et je vous plains. Le plomb de votre style fond Et coule sur les noms que dore un peu de gloire,
Et tout en répandant sa triste lave noire,
Tâche d’être cuisant et ne peut qu’être lourd;
Tortueux, vous rampez après tout ce qui court;
Votre oeil furieux suit les grands aigles véloces;
Vous reprochez leur taille et leur ombre aux colosses;
On dit de vous: -Pygmée essaya, mais ne put. -
Qui haïra Chéops si ce n’est Lilliput?
Le Parthénon vous blessè avec ses fiers pilastres;
Vous êtes malheureux de la beauté des astres;
Vous trouvez l’Océan trop clair, trop noir, trop bleu;
Vous détestez le ciel parce qu’il montre Dieu;
Vous êtes mécontents que tout soit quelque chose;
Hélas, vous n’êtes rien. Vous souffrez de la rose,
Du cygne, du printemps pas assez pluvieux,
Et ce qui rit vous mord. Vous êtes envieux
De voir voler la mouche et de voir le ver luire.
Dans votre jalousie acharnée à détruire,
Vous comprenez quiconque aime, quiconque a foi,
Et même vous avez de la place pour moi.
Un brin d’herbe volis fait grincer s’il vous dépasse;
Vous avez pour le monde auguste, pôur Pespace,
Pour tout ce qu’on voit croître, éclairer, réchauffer,
L’infâme embrassement qui voudrait étouffer.
Vous avez juste autant de pitié que le glaive.
En regardant un-champ vous maudissez la sève;
L’arbre vous plaît à l’heure où la hache le fend;
Vous avez quelque chose en vous qui vous défend

D’être bons, et la rage est votre rêverie.
Votre âme a froid par où la nôtre est attendrie;
Vous avez la nausée où nous sentons l’aimant;
Vous êtes monstrueux tout naturellement;
Vous grondez quand l’oiseau chante sous les grands ormes;
Quand la fleur, près de vous qui vous sentez difformes,
Est belle, vous croyez qu’elle le fait exprès.
Quel souffle vous auriez si l’étoile’était près!
Vous croyez qu’en brillant la lumière vous blâme;
Vous vous imaginez, en voyant une femme,

Que c’est pour vous narguer qu’elle prend un amant,
Et que le mois de mai vous verse méchamment
Son urne de rayons et d’encens sur la tête;
Il vous semble qu’alors que les bois sont en fête,
Que l’herbe est embaumée et que les prés sont doux,
Heureux, frais, parfumés, charmants, c’est contre vous.
Vous criez au secours quand le soleil se lève.
Vous exécrez sans but, sans choix, sans fin, sans trève,
Sans effort, par instinct, pour mentir, pour trahir;
Ce n’est pas un travail pour vous de tout haïr.
Fourmis, vous abhorrez-l’immensité sans peine.
C’est votre joie impie, âcre, cynique, obscène;
Et vous souffrez. Car rien, hélas, n’est châtié
Autant que l’avorton, géant d’inimitié!
Si l’oeil pouvait plonger sous la voûte chétive
De votre crâne étroit qu’un instinct vil captive,
On y verrait l’énorme horizon de la nuit;
Vous êtes ce qui bave, ignore, insulte, et nuit;
La montagne du mal est dans votre âme naine.
Plus le coeur est petit, plus il y tient de haine.

9 décembre.

LII Ô gloire,

Ô gloire, les héros, les esprits souverains,
Les poëtes profonds, lumineux et sereins,
Les grands législateurs et les grands capitaines, -
Font sur tes clairs sommets leurs demeures hautaines.
Hôtes du palais bleu sans porte et sans chemin,
Au-dessus du tumulte et du chaos humain,
Ils brillent comme l’astre ou planent comme l’aigle.
Car toute âme a son but, son champ, sa loi, sa règle,
Et, selon qu’un instinct bon ou mauvais nous luit,
Quand l’un vole à l’azur, l’autre court à la nuit.
O sombre Ignominie au front bas, aux yeux ternes,
Les gredins monstrueux habitent tes cavernes.
Ils sont tous là, cachés, ces éternels filous!
Loups à visage humain, gueux au profil de loups,
Ceux-ci, vils fainéants qui rôdent pleins de haine,
Traînant leur lâche coeur comme on traîne une chaîne,
Sans toit, sans. pain, sans Dieu; ceux-là, riches oisifs,
Sceptiques par fatigue et par ennui lascifs,
Tous. sans foi, sans élan, sans courage, sans flamme,
Envieux d’un gros sou comme d’une grande âme,
Rampants, hideux, exclus, damnés, grinçant des dents,
Ils regardent la vie avec des yeux ardents.

LIII LE CHOEUR

Les hommes sont à l’oeuvre en leur antre profond,
La grande cité sombre ils font tout ce qu’ils font
Avec de la noirceur et de la petitesse;
Leurs puissants chefs, qu’on nomme empereur, sire, altesse,
Sont chétifs les passants vont et viennent autour
Du soldat dans sa tente et du roi: dans sa tour
La foule rôde et guette, agitée et diffuse;
Et le maître a la force et l’esclave a la ruse;
Des chars roulent, on bat l’enclume, la rumeur
Passe et disperse au loin des noms comme un semeur;
La haine est dans les coeurs, le fiel est dans les bouches,
Et les événements sortent de là, farouches:
Le bien, se forge avec le mal tout est mêlé
Une porte, dont nul ici-bas n’a la clé,
Ferme la destinée, enceinte ténébreuse;
Et tous y sont murés; on fouille, on sonde, on creuse,
On cherche; et-le penseur, rêve devant l’effort
Et le grand brùit qué font ces condamnés à mort.

8 février 1875.

LIV LE MAL

L’optique.
N’a-t-il pas ses aspects et ses illusions?
Et d’ailleurs pense donc, songeur, aux visions...
Que dans l’ombre à travers le verre des lunettes,
Peuvent en s’approchant se donner deux planètes?
Tu, rencontres le mal. Qui te dit qu’il te suit?
Est-ce que par hasard deux mondes dans la nuit
Ne peuvent point passer l’un à côté de l’autre
Sans troubler l’astronome et dérouter l’apôtre?

Le grand Un, le grand Tout, l’être où Thalès plongeait, Entrecroise le monde esprit au monde objet,
Et mêle, en l’unité de ses lois inflexibles;
Des orbites moraux aux orbites visibles;
Dans l’idéal ainsi que dans le lumineux
Les phénomènes, noirs ou brillants, font des noeuds;
Il n’est qu’un tisserand, qui ne fait qu’une toile;
La vérité n’est pas moins astre que l’étoile;
Un soleil n’est pas plus centre qu’une vertu.

Donc, représente-toi, songeur des vents battu,
Des ensembles de faits moraux, sombres problèmes
Ayant leur raison d’être et l’ayant en eux-mêmes,
Dans un système au cours des planètes pareil,
Tdurnant autour de Dieu comme autour d’un soleil.
Ô songeur, je dis Dieu; je pourrais dire Centre.
Ils vont, viennent; l’un sort, l’autre accourt, l’autre rentre,
Et l’un pour l’autre ils sont des apparitions.
Tel fait qui sert de base à vos convictions
Et qui chez vous émeut le savant et le sage,
N’est sôuvent qu’un aspect, un fantôme, un passage.

Maintenant, connais-tu la révolution,
Homme, du fait idée et du fait passion?

Connais-tu les réels? connais-tu les possibles?
Toutes les fonctions te sont-elles visibles?
Sais-tu, triste passant dans cette ombre venu,
Tout ce qui tourne autour du pivot inconnu,
Et la totalité de l’ordre planétaire?
Parce qu’en décrivant son orbe, ton mystère
Arrive à côtoyer dans le cercle fatal
L’autre mystère obscur que tu nommes le mal,
Faut-il pas t’expliquer cette coïncidence?

L’essor plus ou moins lourd dans l’air plus ou moins dense,
L’aigle fait pour l’éther, l’esprit fait pour l’amour,
Ces équilibres-là t’apparaîtront un jour.

Comment de l’idéal le réel est capable;
Comment ce qui vous est caché nous est palpable,
Comment votre visible est invisible à nous;
Comment il est un monde abstrait, terrible et doux,
Que vous ne voyez pas et qui se mêle au vôtre
Ainsi que, branche à branche, un arbre entre dans l’autre;
Comment l’univers lie, en un ordre éternel,
L’engrenage moral au rouage charnel;
Comment aux-faits”vivants qui pleurent, chantent, grondent,
D’autres faitsdans l’idée et l’esprit correspondent;
Comment, sur l’axe unique où tout l’être est construit,
Avèc lé zodiaque éclatant de la nuit,
Tourne le zodiaque effrayant du mystère;
Comment, tout en parlant, l’ombre semble se taire;
Ces faits, tu les pourras peut-être concevoir
Quand tes yeux, agrandis par la mort; pourront voir,
Comme tu vois l’azur aux millions de flammes;
La constellation formidable des. âmes.
Ô douceur, sainte esclave! ô bonté, sainte reine!
Que la bête ait en l’homme un maître respecté!
Que, partout où. la vie est en proie à la peine,
La douceur porte la bonté!
Synthèse, dit le ciel... L’homme dit: Analyse.!

Vous dites: -.« Tout végète ou se minéralise.
«Nos pères s’égaraient à force de rêver.” -
C’est en déchiquetant que vous croyez trouver.
La foudre, dont tremblaient le mage et le druide,
Ô savants, à cette heure est pour vous un fluide
Forcé d’être vitreux s’il n’est pas résineux;
L’âme est un gaz; certains animaux l’ont, en eux.
Hommes, vous disséquez le miracle; vous faites
De la chimie avec le songe des prophètes;
Vous sacrez le creuset Principium et fous;
Acharnés, vous coupez les prodiges profonds,
Insaisissables, sourds, entiers, incorruptibles,
En un tas de petits morceaux imperceptibles;
Pour vous rien n’est réel que le moment. présent;
Science, ton scalpel n’apprend’’qu’en détruisant!
Si tu n’étais science; on te croirait envie.
De la nature, pourpre auguste de la vie,
Vous faites un haillon, ô vivants, un lambeau,
Une loque, un néant; et le ver du tombeau
Nomme cela manger; vous l’appelez connaître.
Toi, savoir! tu ne peux que décomposer l’être!

Apprenez donc ceci puisque vous apprenez:
Les fluides, d’un souffle invisible entraînés,
Ne savent pas où sont les pôles de la pile.
Qui ne sait pas un mot d’optique? la pupille.
Le chiffre ne sait pas l’algèbre; l’élément
Ne sait pas la science; et l’être est un aimant
Attirant tout à lui sans connaître les formes;
Toutes les forces sont des aveugles énormes;
L’absolu, c’est le fait immobile et total;
L’absolu ne sait pas, nains, votre piédestal,
Larves, vos visions, vos bruits, marionnettes,
Votre fourmillement d’yeux, d’esprits, de lunettes,
Votre oscillation, votre onde, votre flot;
Il ne sait pas si c’est cinq minutes qu’il faut
A la lumière, au fond des obscurités bleues,

Pour franchir trente-cinq millions de vos lieues,
Et venir du soleil, braise de l’infini,
A la terre, affreux globe, impur, lépreux, banni,
Roulant dans votre amas d’ombres inférieures,
Ô vivants, et si c’est quinze jours et seize heures
Qu’il faut à l’escargot pour faire un mille anglais.
Le gnomon dont l’ombre erre au front de vos palais,
L’horloge, de vos jours ténébreuse sourdine,
Qui, dans votre néant, stupide, se dandine,
L’aiguille du cadran, lourd cheval hébété,
Qui tourne, puisant l’heure au puits éternité,
Et qui la vide en bruit sur vos têtes fragiles,
Vos éclairs, vos longueurs, vos bronzes, vos argiles,
Le rythme de vos voix et l’écart de vos pas,
Vos espaces, vos temps, il ne les connaît pas!

Si le plaisir qui dure agonise en souffrance;
Si le nom de Shakspeare, allant de Londre en France,
A mis cent cinquante. ans à-passer le détroit;
Si l’équateur a chaud et si le pôle a froid;
Si quelque Alizuber, lieutenant du prophète,
Traversant les combats comme une sombre fête,
N’en est jamais sorti, sanglant, poudreux, fumant,
Sans recueillir, le soir, sur son noir vêtement,
Cette poussière afin de la mettre. en sa tombe;
Si le Crédit foncier vaut -mieux que le Grand’Combe;
Si Louis, dit le grand, en Flandre a réussi
Par le conseil d’Harcourt ou l’avis de Torcy;
Si Tibère César en sa galère vogue
Et songe; et ce qu’en dit le vent, ce démagogue;
Si; arien;
L’absolu n’en voit rien, l’absolu n’en sait rien,
L’absolu ne sait point qui je suis, qui vous êtes.
Seul, ni bon, ni méchant, au-dessus de nos têtes,
Il a, nous laissant dire assez, peu, trop, beaucoup,
L’impartialité terrible d’être tout.
L’âme, il l’a; l’invisible, il le voit; l’impossible,

Il l’est; ce qu’il comprend, c’est l’incompréhensible.

Si l’absolu pouvait, dans le gouffré où je suis,
Se pencher sous le porche insondable des nuits
Où se meuvent, selon la loi de ces grands antres,
Les globes himineux que vous croyez des centres,
S’il voyait cela, lui, l’oeil providentiel,
Sa stupeur, ce serait ce pauvre petit ciel,
Ce firmament chétif qu’à peine un rayon dore,
Cette bave de feu que vous nommez l’aurore,
Ce soleil clignotant que l’oeil perd dans l’azur
Tant il flotte enfoui sous un brouillard obscur,
Cette ombre, et la lenteur de l’escargot lumière.

LVII Souffrance,

Souffrance, es-tu la loi du monde?
L’homme vient triste et s’en va nu;
Il naît débile et meurt immonde;
Es-tu le fond de l’inconnu?

Les grêles, les foudres, les trombes;
Les marteaux meurtrissant les clous;
Le grain dans le bec des colombes,
L’agneau dans la gueule des loups;

Le tigre ayant l’horreur secrète
De sa propre férocité;
Le lion, fauve anachorète
Qui hurle dans l’immensité;

L’enfant qui meurt, âme qui sombre;
Le lys qu’on fauche, à peine éclos;
Les marins qu’engloutit dans l’ombre
La bave sinistre des flots;

Partout les embûches funèbres,
Le glaive, la griffe, la dent;
Des yeux fixés dans, les ténèbres;
Le crime guettant et rôdant

L’abeille que chasse la guêpe;
La guerre battant du tambour;

Un horizon voilé d’un crêpe,
Où croît l’ombre, où décroît l’amour;

Les discordes qui se répandent;
Caïn, Nemrod, Néron, Macbeth;
Tous les coeurs des hommes qui pendent

A la haine, ce grand gibet;

Le doute qui sort de la tombe,
Et, du haut du ciel sans clarté,
Semble un soir éternel gui tombe
Sur la lugubre humamte;

Toutes ces douleurs, est-ce l’ordre?
L’air du sépulcre emplit les cieux,
Et sur l’abîme on voit se tordre,
La nuit, des bras mystérieux.

Et toutes ces choses farouches
Disent cette plainte à la fois,
Et de toutes ces sombres bouches
On entend sortir cette voix:

— Dieu! qu’a donc fait la créature,
Et pourquoi l’être est-il puni? -
C’est le grand cri de la nature
Dans le grand deuil de l’infini.

27 juillet 1854.

LVIII Ne laissez rien partir

Ne laissez rien partir sans adieu que la tombe
Emporte consolés, hélas! ceux qu’elle atteint.
Accordez un soupir à la rose qui tombe!
Accordez un regard à l’astre qui s’éteint!

La femme veut qu’on l’aime. Et l’oiseau ne réclame
Qu’une oreille écoutant son chant plaintif et beau.
Que le dernier amour trouve une dernière âme!
Et que le dernier chant trouve un dernier écho!

Vous que le croyant voit, vous que les penseurs rêvent,
Seigneur, prenez pitié de l’humaine clameur.
Vers vous de toutes parts, nos bras tendus se lèvent.
Apaisez ce qui vit; consolez ce qui meurt.

18 janvier 1843.

LIX Homme, les avatars

Homme, les avatars et les métempsychoses
Dans l’immobilité formidable des choses;
La rougeur qui s’allume au sommet des Thabors;
Le destin; gouffre où Job cherche à saisir les bords,
Où Platon s’épouvante, où Christ même redoute
Les flux et les reflux de la vague du doute;
L’aube en fleur; les tombeaux, intérieurs-vermeils;
La petitesse obscure et morne des soleils,- L’énormité, sondée en vain, du grain de sable;
Les rayons inouïs de l’incommensurable;
Le monde immédiat, hideux pour les voyants,
Les buissons, lès forêts, lés rochers effrayants,
La surdité plus sombre encor que le silence,
La mer triste, oscillant ainsi qu’une balance,
L’écueil sanglant, le flot démesuré, bavant
Dans les gémissements lamentables du vent,
L’orage, des éclairs secouant la crinière,
Ne s’interrogent point de la même manière,
Dans l’horreur des chaos vaguement apparus,
Que l’évêque panade ou le moine Pyrrhus a.

LX Qu’est-ce que ta sagesse

Qu’est-ce que ta sagesse et que ton jugement?
Homme, en ta conscience as-tu, quelque mesure
Pour peser, pour compter, pour régler, qui soit sûre?
Toi-même, n’es-tu pas ton propre étonnement?
Ce que le genre humain fait misérablement
T’effraie, et tu ne sais ce que tu dois en croire.
L’homme pour l’homme est nuit. Devant ta propre histoire
Entends-tu clairement l’évidence crier?

Voyons. Explique-toi. Quel est le meurtrier:
Brutus tuant César, ou César tuant Rome?
Quand. même l’âpre Dante et cet autre qu’on nomme
Tacite, et celui-là qu’on nomme Juvénal
Siégeraient dans ton âme ainsi qu’un tribunal,
L’un Minos, l’autre Éaque, et l’autre Rhadamante,
Tu ne sentirais pas que la lumière augmente,
Et que plus de justice avec plus de raison
Se lève dans ton coeur et sur ton horizon.

Voici la bête fauve et la bête de somme,
D’un côté l’empereur, de l’autre côté l’homme,
Claude et le genre humain, Tibère et l’univers;
L’un est-il plus abject que l’autre n’est pervers?

Tiens, vois: -comme le soir les nuages s’amassent,
Les sombres légions rentrent; les soldats passent,
Aigle et bannière au vent, sous les arcs triomphaux;
Le peuple bat des mains du haut des échafauds;
Ils mêlent aux clairons quelque strophe sauvage:
«-Nous sommes compagnons de gloire et de ravage,
«O Commode, empereur égal à Jupiter!
«Qui donc pourrait compter les vagues de la mer,
«Les rois que tu domptas, les murs que nous rompîmes?”
Ils. passent, rapportant les dépouilles opimes;

A leur têté est le maître immense, le vainqueur;
Toute Rome à ses pieds n'est plus qu'un vaste choeur;
Il marche précédé de la fanfare altière;
Et le cirque frémit; dans le noir bestiaire
De grands tigres ouvrant leurs pattes sont debout,
Et, pour voir passer l'homme à qui Dieu livre tout,
Le César adoré du globe qu'il saccage,
Collent leur ventre fauve aux barreaux de leur cage.
Et maintenant, César, content du bon accueil,
César, dont la lumière est faite avec le deuil
Des nations sur qui pèse l'ombre profonde,
L'empereur effrayant de cette nuit du monde,
En rendant grâce aux dieux, donne au peuple romain
Un banquet où l'on va boire du sang humain,
Où la brute des bois et Rome souveraine,
Joyeuses, rugiront ensemble dans l'arène,
Où l'encens fumera parmi les cris plaintifs,
Un festin de chrétiens, de martyrs, de captifs,
D'esclaves ramenés de l'Etixin ou du Tage,
Et le peuple s'attable, et le tigre partage.
Qui, du tigre ou de l'homme, est le monstre? réponds.

Et plus tard, quand des voix diront là-haut: frappons!
Quand l'histoire verra, dans la nuit prête ànaître,
Les vieux démons de l'homme, horribles, reparaître,
Et s'écriera, les bras levés au ciel: Voilà
Caïn dans Constantin, Nemrod dans Attila!
Quand Rome penchera, c'est-à-dire le monde;
Quand, pour tout engloutir, viendront dans la même onde
La Barbarie affreuse et le Christ radieux;
Quand tout se défera, les lois, les moeurs, les dieux,
Quand la ville éternelle, esclave reine, en proie
Aux eunuques, joyeux d'on ne sait quelle joie,
Fera remplir sa coupe avec un rire impur
En entendant le pas d'Alaric sous son mur,
Quand Rome n'aura plus que l'immonde énergie
D'attendre le viol, les coudes dans l'orgie,

Lorsque le sort fera cet éclat d’enivrer
Cette prostituée avant de la livrer;
Quand la fatalité donnera le scandale
Du visigoth, du hun stupide, du vandale,
Qu’est-ce que tu feras, qu’est-ce que tu diras?
Quand les fléaux seront comme des magistrats,
Quand l’aube et le tombeau seront mêlés ensemble,
Quand tout sera si juste et si cruel qu’il semble
Que Dieu soit le faucheur, que Satan soit la faulx,
Quel sage d’entre vous distinguera le faux
Du vrai, le oui du non, le rayon de la foudre,
Ce qu’il faut condamner de ce qu’il faut absoudre,
Le héros du bandit, l’ange. de l’animal,
L’affreux débordement du déluge normal,
Et du mal et du bien pourra faire la somme
Dans cet épouvantable écroulement de l’homme?

LXI L’homme étreint dans ses bras

L’homme étreint dans ses bras, l’obstacle, comme Hercule.
La peste disparaît et la brute recule;
Le serpent fuit; le loup s’en va; l’arbre épineux,
Rentre sa griffe ét tord moins méchamment ses noeuds.
La vie a cessé d’être une sombre aventure.
L’homme, autrefois mordu par la, fauve nature,
Met une muselière à la création.
La mer cède, la terre obéit; l’alcyon
Chante un hymne d’espoir à sa sueur la colombe.
L’étang n’exhale plus le soufflé de la tombe.
La forêt, qui frissonne à la bouche de. Pan,
S’emplit de fleurs; le lac rit dans les monts; le paon
Traîne la gerbe d’yeux qui frémit sur sa queue.
Eden vague et lointain montre sa porte bleue.
Adam n’est plus sinistre et glacé de sueur.
Dans l’ombre par degrés se lève une lueur;
La pensée, aube pure, à travers la matière
Luit et s’épanouit dans la nature entière;
Et dans l’âpre univers, jadis horrible et noir,
Qui se mouvait, pareil aux visions, du soir,
Et que semblait emplir une hydre aux yeux de flamme,
L’homme sent chaque jour moins de monstre et plus d’âme.

IO février 1854.

LXII Quelle idée as-tu donc de la mort,

Quelle idée as-tu donc de la mort, vain penseur?
Devant l’obscurité, le doute, la noirceur,
La tombe au fond du sort et la mort infaillible,
Tu frémis; car ce monde est un temple terrible.
L’affreux fourmillement des fosses te fait peur;
A travers sa malsaine et fétide vapeur,
Le tombeau, s’il fallait que tu l’approfondisses,
T’apparaîtrait ainsi qu’un gouffre d’immondices,
Plein d’êtres, beaux jadis, lugubres maintenant,
Au lieu de la prunelle et de l’oeil, rayonnant
N’ayant sous leur sourcil qu’un horrible cratère,
D’où-sortent leurs regards devenus vers de terre.
Non. Le cercueil n’est pas, homme, ce que tu crois.
La mort, sous le plafond des tombeaux noirs et froids,
C’est la mystérieuse et lumineuse offrande.
Ce n’est pas seulement pour l’âme qu’elle est grande,
Mais pour la chair, poids vil sur la terre gisant.
La tombe, astre central vers qui tout redescend,
Jetant un rayon double à la double frontière,
Transfigure l’esprit, transforme la matière;
La mort, qui n’est pour toi qu’un spectre monstrueux,
Saisit l’être et le tord entre ses doigts noueux,
Et comme une laveuse agenouillée au fleuve,
Blanchit les os, le corps, la chair de l’esprit veuve,
La guenille animale et le haillon humain,
Dans un ruissellément de lumière sans fin.
C’est dans de la splendeur que tout se décompose.
La mort, c’est l’unité qui reprend toute chose.
Oh! cetté obscure mort dont Dieu sait le secret,
Quel éblouissement, elle te jetterait
Si, comme nous, dont l’oeil voit l’aspect véritable,
Tu pouvais, dans l’espace étrange et redoutable,
Voir, partout à la fois, à toute heure, en tous lieux,
En roses sur la terre, en phosphores aux cieux,

En fleurs, en fruits, en sève, en pàrfum, en aurore,
La pourriture énorme et magnifique éclore!

LXIII Les anges du Seigneur

Les anges du Seigneur passent de temps en temps;
Leurs robes dans l’azur font des plis Mâtants;
Leurs ailes, qui d’en haut éblouissent nos âmes,
Sont des ruissellements de rayons et de flammes;
Ils planent en parlant sur nos fronts-ténébreux;
Les âmes justes vont pensives derrière eux
Ramassarif ce qui tombe, ainsi que des glaneuses;
Ils disent dans la nuit des choses lumineuses;
Leur lèvre pure, où chante et luit l’éternité,
Laisse échapper sans fin un verbe de clarté,
Si bien que, lorsqu’ils sont dans nos ombres farouches,
A la lueur des mots on peut suivre leurs bouches.

LXIV Homme, pourquoi nier

Homme, pourquoi nier ce que tu ne vois point?
En deux égales parts, qu’un sort commun rejoint,
L’invisible au visible est mêlé dans un être
Qu’appesantit l’argile et que l’esprit pénètre;
Cet être, composé de l’une et l’autre loi,
Mange et pense; et veux-tu le voir, regarde-toi.
Homme, tu ne vois pas le céleste; et c’est triste;
Il se voile à tes yeux de chair; mais il existe.
Cet univers, abîme autant qu’ascension,
Ce monde au double aspect, cette création
Dont la moitié splendide échappe à ta prunelle,
N’a pas, étant la sphère une, vraie, éternelle,
Le côté du démon sans le côté de Dieu
Le singe prouve l’ange, et l’homme est le milieu.

LXV Au nom de ce qui vit,

Au nom de ce qui vit, paix à ce qui n’est, plus!
Paix aux vieux codes morts! . aux siècles vermoulus!
Paix aux religions, quelle que soit l’église!
Paix à ce qui s’en va, que le fantôme lise
Dans les missels latins ou les Talmuds hébreux!
Paix au passé! pitié pour le soir ténébreux!
Morne, il hait l’avenir qu’il ne doit pas atteindre.
Laissez ce qui s’éteint tranquillement s’éteindre,
Et ne regardez pas de ce côté. Plus d’air,
Plus de soleil, hélas! le couchant triste et clair
Sur tout le fond du ciel tendu comme un suaire,
Jette dans la masure un reflet mortuaire,
Dessine en noir, au bord du blême soupirail,
La toile d’araignée. enèadrée au vitrail,

Et fait lugubrement trembler dans les charpentes
Des haillons de houx sombre et de ronces grimpantes;
Le crépuscule passe entre les lourds piliers,
Et blanchit vaguement des dessous d’escaliers;
Dans l’ombre un rouet file; à des lueurs de lampe éclairant quelque étrange ét tortueuse rampe,
Sous des enfoncements de portes, des vieillards
Rêvent, ayant leurs ans autour d’eux en brouillards.

LXVI Vous dont la part est la meilleure,

Vous dont la part est la meilleure,
Oh! méditez!
Soyez comme celui, qui pleure,
Vous qui chantez;

Vous dont une femme a pris l'âme,
Soyez toujours
Comme si vous étiez sans femme
Et sans amours;

Vous qui gouvernez un royaume,
Soyez, ô rois,
Comme ceux qui sont sous le chaume
Au fond des bois;

Vous qui vivez parmi les roses,
Les sens en feu,
Dans la splendeur de toutes choses
Sous le ciel bleu,

Soyez comme en la nuit profonde
Où rien ne luit
Car la figure de ce mondé S'évanouit.

1 juin 1846.

LXVII Le calcul, c’est l’abîme.

Le calcul, c’est l’abîme. Ah’! tu sors de ta sphère,
Eh bien, tu seras seùl. Homme, tâche de faire
Entrer dans l’infini quelque être que ce soit
De ceux que ta main touche et que ton regard voit;
Nul ne le peut. La vie expire en perdant terre.
Chaque être a son milieu; hors du bois la panthère
Meurt, et l’on voit tomber, sans essor, sans éclair,
Hors du feu l’étincelle et l’oiseau hors de l’air;
Nulle forme ne vit loin du réel traînée;
La vision terrestre à la terre est bornée;
Le nuage lui-même, errant, volant, planant,
Allant d’un continent à l’autre continent,
S’il voyait l’absolu, serait pris de vertige;
Sortir de l’horizon n’est permis qu’au prodige;
L’homme le peut, étant le monstre en qui s’unit
Le miasme du nadir au rayon du zénith.
Entre donc dans l’abstrait, dans l’obscur, dans l’énorme;
Renonce à la couleur et renonce à la forme;
Soit; mais pour soulever le voile, le linceul,
La robe de la pâle Isis, te voilà seul.
Tout est noir: C’est en vain que ta voix crie et nomme.
La nature, ce chien qui, fidèle, suit l’homme,
S’est arrêtée au seuil du gouffre avec effroi.
Regarde. La science exacte est devant toi,
Nue et blême et terrible, et disant: qu’oh remporte
L’aube et la vie! ayant l’obscurité pour porte,
Pour signes, l’alphabet mystérieux qu’écrit
Son doigt blanc hors du jour dans l’ombre de l’esprit,
Pour tableau noir le fond immense de la tombe.
Ici, dans un brouillard qui de toutes parts tombe,
Dans des limbes où tout semble, en gestes. confus,
Jeter au monde, au ciel, au soleil, un refus,
Dans un vide immobile où rien ne se déplace,
Dans un froid où l’esprit respire de la glace,

Où Fahrenheit avorte ainsi que Réaumur,
Monte dans l’absolu le nombre, horrible mur,
Incolore, impalpable, informe, impénétrable;
Les chiffres, ces flocons de l’incommensurable,
Flottent dans cette brume où se perdent tes yeux,
Et, pour escalader le mur mystérieux,
Ces spectres, muets, sourds, sur leur aile funèbre
Apportent au songeur cette échelle, l’algèbre,
Echelle faite d’ombre et dont les échelons
De Dédale et-d’Hermès ont usé les talons.

Géométrie! algèbre! arithmétique! zone
Où l’invisible plan coupe le vague cône,
Où l’asymptote cherche, où l’hyperbole fuit!
Cristallisation des prismes de la nuit;

Mer dont le polyèdre est l’affreux madrépore;
Nuée où l’univers en calculs s’évapore,
Où le fluide vaste et sombre épars dans tout
N’est plus qu’une hypothèse, et tremble, et se dissout;
Nuit faite d’un amas de sombres évidences,
Où les forces, les gaz, confuses abondances,
Les éléments grondants que l’épouvante suit,
Perdent leur noir vertige et leur flamme et leur bruit;
Caverne où le tonnerre entre sans qu’on l’entende,
Où toute lampe fait l’obscurité plus grande,
Où l’unité de l’être apparaît mise à nu!
Stalactites du chiffre au fond de l’inconnu!
Cryptes de la science!

On ne sait quoi d’atone
Et d’informe, qui vit, qui creuse et qui tâtonne!
Vision de l’abstrait que l’oeil ne saurait voir!
Est-ce un firmament blême? est-ce un océan noir?
En dehors des objets sur qui le. jour se lève,
En dehors des vivants du sang ou de la sève,
En dehors de tout être errant, pensant, aimant,

Et de toute parole et de tout mouvement,
Dans l’étendue où rien ne palpite et ne vibre,
Espèce de squelette obscur de l’équilibre,
L’énorme mécanique idéale construit
Ses figures qui font de l’ombre sur la nuit.
Là, pèse un crépuscule affreux, inexorable.
Au fond, presque indistincts, l’absolu, l’innombrable,
L’inconnu, rocs hideux que rongent des varechs
D’A plus B ténébreux mêlés d’X et d’Y grecs;
Sommes, solutions, calculs où Won voit pendre
L’addition qui rampe, informe scolopendre!
Signes terrifiants vaguement aperçus!
Triangles sans Brahma! croix où manque Jésus!
Réduction du monde et de l’être en atomes!
Sombre enchevêtrement de formules fantômes!
Ces hydres qui chacune ont leur secret fatal,
S’accroupissent sur l’ombre, inerte piédestal,
Ou se traînent, ainsi qu’échappés de l’Erèbe
Les monstres de l’énigme erraient autour de Thèbe;
Le philosophe à qui. l’abeille offrait son miel,
Les poètes, Moïse ainsi qu’Ezéchiel,
Et Platon comme Homère expirent sous les griffes
De ces sphinx tatoués de noirs hiéroglyphes;
Point d’aile ici; l’idée avorte ou s’épaissit;
La poésie y meurt, la lumière y noircit;
Loin de se dilater, tout esprit se contracte
Dans les immensités de la science exacte,
Et les aigles portant la foudre aux Jupiters
N’ont rien à faire avec ces sinistres éthers;

Cette sphère éteint l’art comme erï son âpre touffe
La ciguë assoupit une fleur qu’elle étouffe.
Toutefois. la chimère y peut vivre portant
D’une main la cornue et de l’autre l’octant,
Faisant l’algèbre même à ses rêves sujette,
Dans un coin monstrueux la magie y végète;
Et la science roule en ses flux et reflux

Flamel sous Lavoisier, Herschel sur Thrasyllus:
Qui pour le nécromant et pour la mandragore
Chante abracadabra? l’abac de Pythagore;
Car d’un côté l’on monte et de l’autre on descend,
Et de l’homme jamais le songe n’est absent.

La pensée ici perd, aride et dépouillée,
Ses splendeurs, comme l’arbre en janvier sa feuillée,
Et c’est ici l’hiver funèbre de l’esprit.
Le monde extérieur s’y transforme ou périt;
Tout être n’est qu’un nombre englouti dans la somme;
Prise àvec ses rayons dans lés doigts noirs de l’homme,
Elle-même, en son gouffre où le calcul l’éteint,
La constellation; que l’astronome atteint,
Devient chiffre, et, lugubre, entre dans la formule.
L’amas des sphères d’or en zéros s’accumule.
Tout se démontre ici. Le chiffre, dur scalpel,
Comme un ventre effrayant ouvré et fouille le ciel.
Dans cette atmosphère âpre, impitoyable, épaisse,
La preuve règne. Calme, elle compte, dépèce,
Dissèque; étreint, mesure, examine, et ne sait
Rien hors de la balance et rien hors du creuset;
Elle enrégistre l’ombre et l’ouragan, cadastre
L’azur, le tourbillon, le météore et l’astre,
Prend les dimensions de l’énigme en dehors,.
Ne sent rien frissonner dans le linceul des morts,
Annule l’invisible, ignore ce que pèse
Le grand Moi de l’abîme; inutile hypothèse,
Et met du plomb aux pieds des lugubres sondeurs.
A l’appel qu’elle jette aux mornes profondeurs,
Le flambeau monte après avoir éteint sa flamme;
La loi vient sans l’esprit, le fait surgit sans l’âme;
Quand l’infini paraît, Dieu s’est évanoui:

Ô science! absolu qui proscrit l’inouï!
L’exact pris pour le vrai! la plus grande méprise
De l’homme, atome en qui l’immensité se brise;

Et qui croit, dans sa main que le néant conduit,
Tenir de la clarté quand il tient de la nuit!

Ô. néant! de là vient que le penseur -promène
Souvent son désespoir sur la science humaine,

Et que ce cri funèbre est parfois entendu:
— Savants, puisque votre oeuvre est un effort perdu,
Puisque, même avec vous, nul chercheur ne pénètre
Dans le problème unique, et n'arrive à connaître;
Que, même en vous suivant dans tant d'obscurité,
Hélas! on ne sait rien de la réalité,
Rien du sort, rien de l'aube ou de l'ombre éternelle,
Rien du gouffre où l'espoir ouvre en tremblant son aile;
Puisqu'il faut qu'après vous encor nous discutions;
Puisque vous ne pouvez répondre aux questions:
Le monde a-t-il un Dieu? la vie a-t-elle une âme?
Puisque la même nuit qui nous tient, vous réclame,
Pourquoi votre science et votre vanité?
A quoi bon de calculs ronger l'immensité,
Et creuser l'impossible, et faire, ô songeurs sombres,
Ramper sur l'infini la vermine des. nombres? -

N'importe! si jamais l'homme s'est approché
De la mystérieusé et fatale Psyché,
Si jamais, lui poussière, il a fait un abîme,
C'est ici. La science est le vide sublime.

Dans ce firmament gris qu'on nomme abstraction,
Gouffre dont l'hypothèse est le vague alcyon,
Tout est l'indéfini, tout est l'insaisissable.
Le calcul, sablier dont le chiffre est le sable,
Depuis que dans son urne un premier nombre est né,
N'a pas été par l'homme une fois retourné.;
Et les premiers zéros envoyés par Monime
Et Méron pour trouver les derniers dans l'abîme
Depuis quatre mille ans ne sont pas revenus;

Les pâtres de Chaldée, effrayants, ingénus,
Rêvent là, frémissants, comptant sur leurs doigts l’être;
On y voit Aristote errer et disparaître;
Là flottent des esprits, Geber, Euclide, Euler,
Comme autrefois,:hagards dans les souffles de l’air,
Les prophètes planaient sous le céleste dôme;
Comme Elie a son char, Newton a son binôme;
Qu’est-ce donc qu’ils font là,. tous ces magiciens,
Laplace et les nouveaux, Hipside et les anciens?
Ils ramènent au chiffre inflexible l’espace.
Halley saisit la loi de l’infini qui passe;
Copernic, par moments, biffant des mondes nuls,
Puise une goutte d’encre au fond des noirs calculs,
Et fait une rature à la voûte étoilée;
Hicétas tressaillant appelle Galilée;
La terre sous leurs pieds fuit dans l’azur vermeil,
Et tous les deux d’un signe arrêtent le soleil;
Et tout au fond du gouffre et dans une fumée,
On distingue, accoudé, l’immense Ptolémée.

Tous ces titans, captifs dans un-seul horizon,
Cyclopes du savoir, n’ont qu’un oeil, la raison;
On entend dans ces nuits de vagues bruits d’enclumes;
Qu’y forge-t-on? le doute et l’ombre. Dans ces brumes
Tout est-il cécité, trouble; incertitude? Oui.
Pourtant, par cet excès d’ombre même ébloui,.
Parfois, pâle, éperdu, frissonnant, hors d’haleine,
Comme au fanal nocturne arrive le phalène,
On arrive, à travers ces gouffres infinis,.
À la lueur Thalès, à la lueur Leibniz,
Et l’on voit resplendir, après d’affreux passages;
La lampe aux sept flambeaux qu’on nomme les sept sages;
Et la science entière apparaît comme un ciel
Lugubre, sans matière et pourtant sans réel,
N’acceptant point l’azur et rejetant la terre,
Ayant pour clef le fait, le nombre pour mystère;
L’algèbre y luit ainsi qu’une sombre. Vénus.;

Et de ces absolus et de ces inconnus,:
De ces obscurités terribles, de ces-vides,
Les logarithmes sont les pléiades livides;
Et Franklin pâle y jette une clarté d’éclair,
Et la comète y passe, et se nomme Kepler.
Il est deux nuits, deux puits d’aveuglement, deux tables
D’obscurité, sans fin, sans forme, épouvantables,
L’algèbre, nuit de l’homme, et le ciel, nuit de Dieu;
Les siècles s’useraient à compter, hors du lieu,
De l’espace, du temps, de ton monde et du nôtre,
Les astres dans une ombre et les chiffres dans l’autre!

Mathématiques! chute au fond du vrai tombeau
Où descend l’idéal qui rejette le beau!
Abstrait! cher-aux songeurs comme l’étoile, aux guèbres!
Mur de bronze et de brume! ô fresque des ténèbres
Sur la nuit! torsion de l’idée en dehors
Des êtres, des aspects, des rayons et des corps!
Création rampant sur la chose en décombres!
O chapelle Sixtine effrayante des nombres
Où ces damnés, perdus dans le labeur quils font, S’écroulent à jamais dans le calcul sans fond!
Précipice inouï, quel est ton Michel-Ange?
Quel penseur, quel rêveur, quel-créateur étrange,
Quel mage, a mis ce gouffre au fond le plus hagard
De la pensée humaine et mortelle, én regard
De-l’autre gouffre, vie et monde, qu’on devine
Au fond de la pensée éternelle et divine!

LXVIII Collabore avec Dieu;

Collabore avec Dieu; prévois, pourvois; prends soin
De l'univers; veille, aide; et répare au besoin;
Prends dans ta main, savant, prends dans ta main, druide,
La gravitation, la chaleur, le fluide,
Ces aimants où l'on sent comme une volonté,
Ces flux et ces reflux d'intime affinité,
Tout ce vaste filet de lois impérieuses,
De fécondes clartés, d'ombres mystérieuses,
Freins que l'élément ronge, enchaînements, réseaux
Où l'on entend souffler d'invisibles naseaux;
Mets ton tablier, homme, et fourbis-moi ces boucles
De soleils, de rayons, d'étoiles, d'escarboucles,
Ces noeuds de l'Inconnu que toi seul tu connais;
Sois le palefrenier de ce sombre harnais
De forces, de courants, d'attraction profonde,
Qui bride et qui contient l'effrayant cheval Monde;
Et s'il veut, dérobant sa bouche horrible au mors,
Briser ces lois, qui font même obéir les morts,
Interviens,, et rajuste avec ton bras énorme
Le noir caparaçon sur sa croupe difforme.

LXIX Des sages?

Des sages?
En veux-tu voir, songeur? Vois ces frais, écoliers
Qui s’échappent des bancs et courent aux halliers,
Et vont aux champs, légers, libres, de jeunesse ivres,
Poussant des cris, cueillant des fleurs, jetant les livres,
Et qui se laissent vivre et de joie inonder,
Et s’emplissent l’esprit de jour, sans demander
A l’aurore des cieux comment elle s’appelle!
Vois ces deux amoureux qui cherchent la chapelle
De l’azur, des taillis profonds, des bruits d’oiseaux,
Et qui laissent leur coeur fuir, avec les ruisseaux,
Jaser avec les nids, avec le soleil luire,
Sans vouloir, sans tenter, sans creuser, sans construire
Autre chose qu’un rêve ineffable et réel!
Ils s’inquiètent peu de l’inutile ciel;
Ils n’en ont pas besoin puisqu’ils disent: je t’aime!
Qu’en feraient-ils; étant le paradis eux-même?
Ils portent l’un et l’autre un songe sur leur front;
Ils sont heureux; pour aube et pour azur ils ont,

Lui, qu’elle soit si belle, elle, qu’il soit si tendre!
Le rossignol suspend son chant pour les entendre.
Ils vont, doux insensés du coeur, couple enivré
De la voix amoureuse et du regard sacré;
Ils vont, ils sont! La main par la main est pressée;
Ils vivent lèvre à lèvre et pensée à pensée;
Si bien que tout leur être est un frisson joyeux,
Et que, près des rayons que prodiguent leurs yeux,
Le matin est avare et l’astre est économe;
Et que la jeune fille aime, et que le jeune homme
Adore, et qu’autour d’eux le bois frémit! si bien
Qu’ils ne savent plus rien, qu’ils ne veulent plus rien,
Que pour ces éblouis la plaine est une fête,
Et que tous les passants tournent vers eux la tête,

Et que les jeunes sont jaloux, et que les vieux
Tristes de n’être plus jaloux, sont envieux!
Ce beau couple est penché sur l’eau qui désaltère.

Songeur! songeur! il est deux sages sur la terre;
Le premier est l’enfant, le second est l’amant.

LXX MATÉRIALISME ET SPIRITUALISME

PYRRHON
Je mourrai tout entier.

SOCRATE
Moi, j’espère en la mort.

PYRRHON
Je vous dis que je suis une bête.

SOCRATE
D’accord.

8 juillet 1875

I Autrefois,

Autrefois, dans les temps de la lumière pure,
L’antique poésie à l’antique nature parlait; le vers ailé, fier, sublime, ingénu,
Était comme un oiseau, des autres reconnu,
Auquel l’aigle disait: c’est toi! dans les nuées;
Les cimes des forêts gravement remuées,
Les antres; les rochers, les lys, les flots marins
Dialoguaient avec Orphée aux yeux sereins;
Les choses comprenaient le chant profond des hommes;
La tige offrait ses fleurs, la branche offrait ses pommes
Au doux mage Linus par la muse enivré
Quand Homère chantait, le mendiant sacré,
Le dieu Terme attendri se tournait sur les bornes;
Et la chèvre, l’agneau, le boeuf aux larges cornes,
La vache au pis gonflé broutant les verts gazons,
Rêveurs, levaient la tête au-dessus des buissons,
Et, les yeux éblouis d’une lueur divine,
Venaient pour regarder passer dans la ravine,
Plein de rires, de chants, de masques et d’épis,
Le vieux. chariot fou que promenait Thespis.

5 novembre 1853. Jersey.

II Deux beaux enfants,

Deux beaux enfants, Chromis et le berger Mnasyle
Ont vu Silène au fond d’une grotte endormi,

Seul, et comme toujours, ivre plus qu’à demi.
Ses bandelettes d’or se déroulaient dans l’antre;
Sa cruche était cassée et gisait sur le ventre.
Tous deux pour le saisir ont profité du lieu;
Avec la bandelette ils ont lié le dieu,
Vieux chanteur qui souvent leur manqua de parole.
Eglé, la belle nymphe, Eglé, la belle folle,
Survient, les encourage, et redouble les noeuds;
Et, quoique le vieillard rouvre déjà les yeux,
Elle lui peint la face au milieu des risées
Avec le sang vermeil des mûres écrasées.
Lui s’éveille et sourit.
— Laissez-moi libre, amis,
Et vous aurez les chants que je vous ai promis;
Acceptez la rançon qu’ici je vous propose;
J’ai pour vous des chansons et pour elle autre chose. -
Puis il commence et chante.
Alors, à cette voix,
On vit les daims, les loups et les bêtes des bois
Se mêler aux sylvains dans une étrange danse,
Et les chênes pensifs agiter en cadence
Leur front d’où l’ombre au loin tombe sur le vallon.
Le rocher du Parnasse est moins fier d’Apollon,
Et Rhodope et l’Ismare écoutent moins Orphée.

III Sur la coupe

Sur la coupe où le vin mousse et se précipite,
Le centaure au flanc roux lutte avec le Lapithe;
L’artiste ingénieux cisela sur l’étain,
O leçon! ce combat qui naquit d’un festin;
La mêlée est affreuse; au milieu des huées,
Un des géants, enfant orageux des nuées,
Se voyant désarmé dans ce banquet d’enfer,
Rit, et prend pour massue un chandelier de fer

Cauterets, 22 août 1843.

IV Toujours l’esprit avance

Toujours l’esprit avance et l’art se renouvelle:
Pour refaire sans cesse avec de la clarté
Une dot de chéfs-d’oeuvre à l’homme épouvanté,
Les grànds hommes sont là Comme de grands prodigues.
Nous avons beau forger des lois, creuser des digues,
Le génie engloutit tout ce que nous faisons
Sous un splendide amas d’immenses floraisons:
Rien n’arrête le pas du genre humain; il marche;
II fait Rome après Thèbe et le dôme après l’arche;
Il fait le Colisée après le Parthénon.
Homère meurt, laissant comme un astre son nom,
Eschyle suit; la France éclôt quand Rome expire;
Puis Rabelais surgit, Cervantes naît, Shakspeare
Luit, et ces hommes sont comme des océans.
Le colosse qui vient fait peur aux vieux géants;
Dante épouvante Amos; Michel-Ange intimide,
Rien qu’en dressant le front,. la grande, Pyramide,
Et, de l’Apollon grec au Sphinx, égyptien,
Fait devant l’art nouveau frissonner l’art ancien”
Homère, sous le poids du destin sombre, expire;
Virgile dit: Heureux qui sait la fin! Shakspeare
Crie: Etre ou n’être pas; telle est la question.
Eschyle, dont le vers fait une fonction,
Pindare,, front battu du sombre essaim de l’ode,
David, Ezéchiel, Stésichore, Hésiode,
Bruissent comme au vent de ténébreux rameaux;
Idithun, Salomon, Jean, Isaïe, Amos,
Les paumes de leurs mains sur les, pages. des. Bibles,
Vont comme enveloppés de:tourbillons terribles;
L’éclair emporte Dante et la brume Ossian;
Et l’esprit humain tremble ainsi qu’un océan
Quand ces problèmes noirs qui soufflent les délires
Déchaînent dans sa nuit la tempête des lyres.

VI L’expiation triste

L’expiation triste et le sort, noeud de fer,
La douleur, la matière odieuse, la chair,

Enferment l’homme, esprit captif, âme asservie,
Et sont la grille noire et dure de la vie;
Mais qu’on entende en haut ce cri: paix au pécheur!
Que du côté. des cieux il vienne une blancheur,
Et tout à coup, la chair, dont la lourdeur accable,
L’âpre expiation, la matière implacable,
Le destin, la douleur, se mettront à chanter,
Et, vibrant dans cette ombre où l’aube va monter,
Devant le soupirail où l’homme cherche à lire,
Ces barreaux deviendront les cordes d’une lyre “.

VII Quand le poète est las,

Quand le poète est las, ce grand esprit banni,
De battre avec son aile immense l’infini,
Quand il sent le besoin d’interrompre sa course
Entre la mort, fin sombre, et Dieu, fatale source,
Ne pouvant plus planer, mais voguer seulement,
Sidéral et superbe, il se pose un moment
Sur quelque passion courante et populaire;
Pareil à l’aigle blanc, chasseur du ciel polaire,
Qui s’abat de fatigue aux vergues d’un vaisseau.

VIII Quand tout un continent tremble

Quand tout un continent tremble au souffle électrique,
Quand de la triste Europe ou de l’âpre Amérique
On voit l’étincelle jaillir,
Que l’humanité crie en son angoisse amère,
Et qu’on entend, pareille au ventre de la mère,
La sombre terre tressaillir,

Sachez, blêmes passants dont je vois la figure,
Que l’aigle Poésie à la vaste envergure
Craint peu cette convulsion;
Il n’est jamais plus fier qu’au choc des catastrophes,
Alors qu’il fait crouler l’avalanche des strophes
Du vieux mont Révolution.

Il couve les Jean Huss comme il couve les Dantes.
Sachez que, dans la trombe et sur les mers grondantes,
Ce grand oiseau toujours plana,
Et qu’il irait, sans même en sentir les secousses,
Faire son nid et tordre avec son bec des mousses
Dans le cratère de l’Etna.

Calme, il prend l’ouragan dans sa serre, et le dompte;
Il est l’esprit humain il. vole, il plane, il monte,
Dans la foudre et dans la clarté,
Étendant tour à, tour sur l’énorme fournaise
L’aile quatrevingt-neuf, l’aile quatrevingt-treize,
Immense dans l’immensité.

IX Aux heures où le ciel est noir,

Aux heures où le ciel est noir, où l’astre est clair,
Lorsque les visions de, nuit flottent dans l’air”
Comme ces tourbillons qui “vont le long des grèves,
Quand les hommes sont lourds dans leur lit plein de rêves,
Dieu leur ouvre, l’oreille et leur parle. tout. bas.
Il leur dit ce qu’il faut qu’ils sachent de quel pas
Le juste doit marcher dans l’ombre de la vie.;
Grand, éviter l’orgueil, et petit, fuir l’envie.
Oh! tressaillez, vous, tous, qu’avertit cette. voix!.
Écoutez-la bien! Dieu ne,parle qu’une fois ,
Et ne répète point les choses qu’il a dites.

C’est la voix que jadis,”tremblants, vous entendîtes,
O prophètes! esprits qui songiez au désert!

Et c’est tantôt la foudre, et tantôt un concert.
Oh! tandis que! le roi, brisant murs et palais,
Bat cette pauvre ville avec ses noirs boulets,
Dresse en ce. sombre. camp, plein de splendeurs vulgaires,
Ta tente, intëlligence! et rêve au bruit des guerres,
Et-.songe; toi que Dante eût pris pour compagnon,
Quel engin il faudrait, et quel fameux canon,
Et quelle armée énorme à tes pieds amassée;
Pour jeter bas la tour bâtie en ta pensée!

XI Quand tu marches,

Quand tu marches, distrait, dans la ville où tout passe,
Où lutte une cohue âprè, aveugle et rapace,
Tu livres ta pensée aux calmes visions!
Tu sembles écouter, belle âme qu’on envie,
Au delà de la foule, au delà de la vie,
De vagues acclamations!

Oui, la postérité que ton grand nom éveille,
Et qui dès à présent murmure à ton oreille,
O grand homme! ô songeur! sait déjà que tu vis!
Elle voit tous tes vers poindre à leur origine!
Tout ce que ton esprit rêve, apprête, imagine,
Est visible à ses yeux ravis!

Ô poète profond qu’on suit et qu’on révère,
L’oeuvre est encor cachée en ton esprit sévère,
Dérobant dans la nuit ses traits graves et beaux,
Que la gloire déjà la distingue dans l’ombre!
La gloire! astre tardif, lune sereine et sombre
Qui sé lève sur les tombeaux!

La gloire voit ton rêve!! et sa clarté nocturne,
Comme jadis Phoebé dans le.bois taciturne
Baisait Endymion de son rayon ami,
Du fond de l’avenir caresse avec mystère,
A travers les rameaux de ta pensée austère,
Le chef-d’oeuvre encore endormi!

29 décembre 1841.

XII Honte au vain philosophe,

Honte au vain philosophe, à l'artiste inutile
Qui ne met pas son sang et son coeur dans son style!
Honte au sophiste assis sur le seuil des vertus
Qui commente Platon sans méditer Brutus!
Honte à ceux qui, bruyants, adorent la patrie,
En font une publique et chaude idolâtrie,
Et qui, quand l'heure vient du gouffre et du péril,
Ne l'aiment pas jusqu'à lui préférer l'exil!
Honte au tribun qui crie au peùple de le suivre,
Et qui se sent à l'âme un lâche amour de vivre!

Honte au rhéteur.qui dit: Progrès, humanité,
Avenir! sans vouloir le calvaire à côté.!
Ils peuvent un moment charmer Athène ou Rome,
Tromper Sparte; l'antique honnêteté de l'homme,
Qui marchande la gloire aux lutteurs peu meurtris,
Gronde et. n'est pas leur dupe, et montre leurs écrits
Cloués sur son comptoir comme fausse monnaie;
Et ce vieux peseur d'or, le temps, qui;juge et paie,
Qui dit à l'un: toujours! qui dit à l'autre: assez!
Refuse à son guichet leurs noms vertdegrisés.

17 novembre.

XIII À UN GRAND COMÉDIEN

Va, sois le messager des poètes sublimes!
Emporte l’âme humaine à leurs augustes cimes.
Marche comme celui qui vient du Cythéron!
Fais éclater leur voix sur la foule pressée;
Prends leur pensée
Comme un clairon!

Sois Othello, Macbeth, Titan, Oreste, Achille:
Sois l’apparition de Shakspeare et. d’Eschyle!,
L’ombre que ces-penseurs font sortir dé l’enfer,
La création sombre où resplendit leur flamme!
Ils en sont l’âme,
Sois-en la chair.

Prends les dieux corps à corps! Conquiers ces vastes rôles
Qui font plier le faible aux chétives épaules.
Transforme-toi. -Grandis dans nos émotions!
Sois le géant! sois l’aigle à l’immense. envergure!
Sois la figure
Des visions!

Rôde avec Yorick près des fosses ouvertes.
Cherche avec Caliban les solitudes vertes.
Sois chevalier, valet, prêtre, empereur, -bourreau.
Partout, en haut, en bas, qu’un esprit t’accompagne!
Sois Charlemagne
Et Figaro!

Invente en traduisant! Lutte avec les. idées
Des poètes, semeurs des âmes fécondées.!
Lutte avec leurs beautés qui nous viennent ravir!
Saisis-les, dompte-les, ces beautés souveraines!
Et par ces reines
Fais-toi servir!

Sur le vers frémissant, plein de tragiques haines,
Qui se tord au seuil noir des passions humaines,
Composé d’idéal et pétri de limon,
Dresse-toi formidable, éblouissant, étrange,
Comme l’archange
Sur le démon!

Prêtre des dieux de l’art! emplis de leur génie
Le peuple aux mille échos qui les raille et les nie!
Répands ton âme à flots sur l’homme qui sourit,
Car, toujours dépensée, elle est toujours entière.
Sur la matière
Verse l’esprit!

28 juillet 1849.

XIV Lorsque j’étais enfant,

Lorsque j’étais enfant, sortant de rhétorique,
J’envoÿais aux journaux de la prose lyrique
En l’honneur des géants du sombre esprit humain;
J’essayais d’expliquer. leur but et leur chemin,
De quel pas ils marchaient et vers quélle lumière;
Ce qu’ils faisaient; pourquoi la Bible est la première,
Et plus bas l’Iliade; et je disais pourquoi
Molière demi-dieu passe Corneille roi;
Ce qu’est Milton; pourquoi; je n’étais pas athée
Au génie; et pourquoi j’admirais Prométhée;
Pourquoi je contemplais les esprits éclatants,
Poètes, orateurs, sages; -puis, par instants,
Je m’écriais, brisant mes plumes inquiètes:
— A quoi bon célébrer en prose les poètes?
Louer l’immensité, l’azur, la profondeur!
Peut-on dorer la flamme et grandir la grandeur?
Chanter Homère en style à trente sous la page!
Coudre un vain feuilleton, inutile tapage,
Accrocher ma louange en verres de couleur
Au roi Priam, géant de l’antique douleur,
A Job, à Jérémie, à Dante, à toi, Shakspeare,
Au vieil Eschyle en qui le vieux Titan respire!
Dire au génie, au bas du journal: sois béni!

Vanter ces écrivains du grand livre infini
Dont la foule ne sait pas même l’orthographe!
Pendre une girandole en bouchons de carafe
A l’anneau de Saturne énorme et flamboyant!

Et tout bas une voix me disait: -Ô. croyant,
Le ciel t’a mis dans l’âme une lyre ingénue,
Non, ne t’arrête pas! tu fais bien. Continue.
Admire. C’est ainsi qu’on vole au firmament.
Comprendre le génie est le commencement.

L’esprit religieux, dans ce monde où nous sommes,
Ébauche l’hymne à Dieu par un hymne aux grands hommes.
Les grands hommes, enfant, sont les lueurs de Dieu.
Ils sont l’ardente roue autour du sombre essieu.,
Ils jettent, des hauteurs de leùr brûlant solstice,
L’un de la vérité, l’autre de la justice,
L’autre de la sagesse, et tous de l’infini.
Le penseur qui, d’en bas à leur splendeur uni,
Tente l’ascension de leur sommet austère,
Voit dans tous ces esprits les degrés du mystère;
Il sent dans chacun d’eux l’être inconnu, qui vit,
Il va de l’immortel à l’éternel, gravit
Du poète au prophète et du sage à l’apôtre,
Et, montant pas à pas d’une clarté sur l’autre,
Épelant le saint nom sur chaque front vermeil,
Fait avec les rayons une échelle au soleil.

XV L’hexamètre,

L’hexamètre, pourvu qu’en rompant la césure,
Il montre la pensée et garde la mesure,
Vole et marche; il sé tord, il rampe, il est debout.
Le vers coupé contient tous les tons, et dit tout.
C’est ce qui fait qu’Horace est si charmant à lire.
Son doigt souple à la fois touche à toute la lyre.

XVI Doux poètes, chantez!

Doux poètes, chantez! Dans vos nids, sous la feuille,
Même au déclin des ans,

1 février 1855.

L’aube vous rit; soyez les seuls dont l’amour veuille
Dorer les cheveux blancs!

Le poète est un chant qui vole à nos oreilles;
Il vit dans un rayon;
Enfant, il est Platon baisé par les abeilles,
Et, vieux, Anacréon.

Ô poètes! vivez, aimez, battez de l’aile,
Radieux et cachés!
Le bonheur vous convie à sa fête éternelle!
Mais si vous approchez

Des révolutions énormes et sévères,
Fier chaos, gouffre obscur
Où les sommets ont tous des formes de calvaires,
Renoncez à l’azur!

Renoncez à l’amour, renoncez à la fête!
Faites-vous de grands coeurs
Qui, dans plus de souffrance et dans plus de tempête,
Se sentent plus vainqueurs.

Le genre humain, depuis six mille ans à la chaîne,
Levant soudain le front,
S’est enfin révolté contre la vieille peine,
Contre le vieil affront;

Il faut être puissant et grave quand on entre

Dans ces rébellions.
Soyez oiseaux; alors ne volez pas dans l’antre;
Ou devenez lions.

18 avril 1854.

XVII CHANSON

Écoutez la. voix touchante
De l’oiseau de l’air qui chante,
Du poète qui sourit;
Écoutez ces voix fidèles,
Car les oiseaux ont des ailes,
Et le poète a l’esprit.

Pendant que.le vin t’enivre;
Pendant que tu lis le livre
Choisi par ta vanité;
Ou que tu te prostitues
A ces trois froides statues,
Richesse, orgueil, volupté;

Pendant que, face ridée,.
Tu vas traînant ton idée,
Creusant ta vie ou ton champ;
Pendant que ton instinct mène
Dans la grande ornière humaine
Quelque chariot penchant;

Tandis que, gais ou moroses,
Vous faites cent tristes choses
Qui vous font baisser les yeux,
Vous avez tous sur vos têtes
Les oiseaux et les poètes,
Pêle-mêle dans les cieux.

21 juin 1843.

XVIII Pour nous, nouveaux venus,

Pour nous, nouveaux venus, qui voyons l’astre éclore,
Fils d’une époque où tout a des lueurs d’aurore,
Pour nous, gens d’aujourd’hui, qui sortons du brouillard,
Qui n’échafaudons point pêle-mêle dans l’art
Près d’un spectre de bronze une poupée en cire,
Tancrède près d’Oreste et près d’Electre Alzire,
Et né confondons point l’antique avec le vieux,
Le ciel où Boiléaù plane est un ciel pluvieux;
La muse’à lui baiser la bouche nous convie;
Nous nous sentons, devant le grand siècle, une envie
Parricide, d’en être un peu les ravageurs,
Et dé dire: Aristote, hé! nous sommes majeurs.
L’art n’est plus le salon de Madame dù Maine,
Une odeur de moisi sort du bon Théramène,
La tragédie est froide et sent le renfermé.
Oui, pour quiconque a vu, marché, souffert, aimé,
Les règles d’autrefois sont une cave humide;
Tout, même le génie, y baisse un front timide,
Et Calliope y tousse; et dans l’ombre on peut voir
Voler en clignotant sous ce grand plafond noir

Une chauve-souris qu’on nomme l’âme humaine.
De l’air! de l’air! qu’au vrai l’idéal nous ramène!
Quand Racine blêmi n’est plus que Campistron,
Quand l’art languit, avec Brossette pour patron,
Honteux d’être sous clef quand l’aigle est dans la nue,
C’est l’honnête devoir de toute âme ingénue
D’entrer là, de tirer largement les rideaux,
D’épousseter sonnets, idylles et rondeaux,
Dût-on à leurs vieux vers faire des déchirures,
D’être désagréable aux verrous, aux serrures,
Aux volets, barricade aveugle du logis,
D’assainir les recoins brusquement élargis,
Et d’ouvrir à grand bruit la fenêtre, indignée

D’avoir chassé l’aurore et logé l’araignée.

15 novembre 1854.

XIX BONHEUR D’ADMIRER

Femmes belles entre les femmes,
Fiers poètes, grands coeurs ouverts,
Qui traînez après vous les âmes
Ivres d’un sourire ou d’un vers,

Qui que vous soyez, ô génies,
Fronts divins, gloire, et toi, beauté,
Vous qui, vivantes harmonies,
Venez à nous dans la, clarté,

Quand je mêle aux bravos sans nombre
Mon obscure acclamation,
Ne vous retournez pas vers l’ombre
Et ne demandez pas mon nom.

Qu’importe mon nom, or ou cuivre,
Perle ou goutte d’eau dans la mer!
Je suis de la foule pour suivre
Et de l’élite pour aimer.”

19 février 1849.

XX À PROPOS D'UNE GRILLE DE BON GOÛT

Le bon goût, c'est une grille.
Gare à ce vieux bon goût-là!
De tout temps, sous son étrille,
Pan, le bouc sacré, bêla.

Le goût classe, isole, trie,.
Et, dé crainte des ébats,
Met de la serrurerie
Autour de tout, ici-bas.
Il cloître, et dit: j'émancipe:
Il coupe, et dit: j'ai créé.
Être sobre est son principe,
Des malades agréé. ,

Il est cousin de l'envie.
Il est membre des sénats.
Il donne au coeur, à la vie,
La forme d'un cadenas.

Sur un Pinde jaune d'ocre,
A mi-côte, en l'art petit,
Il satisfait, médiocre,
Son absence d'appétit.

Devant le grand il recule.
Soit! ce n'est point sans dégâts
Qu'on est touché par Hercule
Ou pris par Micromégas.
Contre toutes les. folies,
Les chefs-d'oeuvre, les rayons
Et les femmes trop jolies,
Il prend ses précautions:

Pour lui, l'idéal, le style,

L’homme, les bois, les oiseaux,
Ont pour but de rendre utile
Une paire de ciseaux.

Il fait les âmes jésuites,
Il fait les esprits pédants,
Et, tranquille sur les suites,
Dit: Prenez le mors aux dents!

Cul-de-jatte, sois lyrique!
Lièvre, deviens effréné!
Couvre-toi de roses, trique!
Macette, sois Evadné!
Taupe, allume le tonnerre.
Dompte, oison, les flots marins.
Ça, porte-moi, poitrinaire,
Deux cents kilos sur tes reins.

Crétin, lâche ton génie.
Glaçon, tâche d’avoir chaud.
Étreins ferme Polymnie
Entre tes deux bras, manchot.

S’abrutir est le précepte
Le plus clair du rituel.
C’est à force d’être inepte
Qu’on devient spirituel.

C’est là tout l’Art Poétique.
Galoper très bien, beaucoup,
Avec ce point pleurétique
Qu’on appelle le bon goût.

Le goût nous donne licence,
Fais tout ce que tu voudras.
Avec cette réticence
Que nous serons des castrats.

L’effet de son beau désordre
Rate, si nous oublions
Qu’une défense de mordre
Est intimée aux lions.
Définitions: Mesdames
Et messieurs, l’ancien bon goût,
C’est l’âne ayant charge d’âmes,
C’est Rien, grand-prêtre de Tout.

C’est bête sans être fauve,
C’est prêcher sans enseigner,
C’est Phoebus devenu chauve,
Qui tâche de se peigner.

L’échevelé l’exaspère.
Que lui veut cette toison
Désagréable et prospère
Du grand art, jeune à foison?

Le goût, tondu; n’aime aucune
Chevelure en liberté.
Car un crâne a la rancune
D’un amoureux déserté.
Crânes nus, hommes sans flammes,
Souffrent, et sont indignés.
De ces cheveux, de ces femmes
Qui les ont abandonnés.

XXI Shakspeare alors,

Shakspeare alors, nourri d’affronts et de huées,
Surgit, front orageux, de l’ombre des nuées.
Ce noir poète, fit une oeuvre, en vérité,
Si rude et si superbe en son énormité,
Si pleine de splendeurs, de vertiges, d’abîmes,
Et de rayonnements s’épandant sur les cimes,
Si sombre et si féconde en gouffres. inouïs,
Que depuis trois cents ans les penseurs éblouis
.La contemplent, surpris que tout les y ramène,
Ainsi qu’une montagne au fond dè l’âme, humaine.

XXII Les instruments sont pleins de la voix

Les instruments sont pleins de la voix chi mystère.
J’aime le cor profond dans, le bois solitaire
J’aime l’orgue, tonnerre et lyre, éclair et nuit,
Bronze et frémissement, forge énorme de bruit,
Fournaise d’harmonie. aux noires cheminées.;
J’aime la contrebasse aux plaintes obstinées,
Et sous l’archet tremblant l’effrayant violon
Qui, mêlant le hautbois, la forêt, l’aquilon ,.
Et l’aile de la mouche et le fifre et le sistre,
Verse dans l’âme sombre un clair-obscur sinistre.

12 octobre 1854.

XXIII ÉCRIT SUR UN VIRGILE

Veux-tu guérir tes maux et blanchir tes noirceurs?
Lis les poètes saints. Rêve au pied de leur trône.
L’esprit humain mendie au seuil des grands penseurs.
Un vers est un secours; totit livre est une aumône.

Verse donc en ton sein, passant triste ou moqueur,
Leur poésie où filtre et se répand le inonde;
La méditation fait l’homme bon; le coeur
Devient d’autant plus doux que l’âme est plus profonde.

18 mai 1847.

XXIV Dans le monde meilleur

Dans le monde meilleur que rêve mon caprice,
Tout chantera; le chant du travail est l’ami;
Et, malgré La Fontaine et grâce à Paul Meurice ,
La cigale dira son fait à la fourmi.

Un jour, tout finira par être l’harmonie;
Chante en attendant, Jeanne. Au zénith, au nadir,
Dieu collabore avec une lyre infinie
Un passereau qui chante aide un chêne à grandir.

Quiconque chante émeut la nature ravie;
La mùsique est la soeur des rayons réchauffants;
Une chanson éparse est utile à la vie;
Chantez, petits oiseaux; chantez, petits enfants.

Le soir, à l’heure où l’ombre endort les nids qui rêvent,
Quand tout s’éteint, un astre apparaît au couchant,
Quand tout se tait, les voix de l’infini s’élèvent,
La nuit veut une étoile et le silence un chant.

16 janvier 1876.
Le Maître d’école, drame de Paul MEURICE.

XXV J’étais petit

J’étais petit avec le désir d’être grand;
C’était dans l’ancien temps où Paris, tel que Rome
Qui fut reine du monde et l’esclave d’un homme,
Voyait tomber César, frappé par vingt bourreaux,
Et pleurait. son tyran autant que son héros;
Les Bourbons revenaient, famille paternelle;
Le Luxembourg, Pizzo, la plaine de Grenelle
Avaient part à la fête, et Trestaillon régnait;
On massacrait Ney, Brune et Mouton-Duvernet,
Et Murat, parodiste éblouissant d’Achille.

Je savais mal le grec; je voùlus lire Eschyle;
J’étais jeune, ignorant, innocent, ingénu;
Je pris chez le premier bouquiniste venu
Un Eschyle en français, car, pour être sincère,
Une traduction m’était fort nécessaire... -
Savarin devant qui s’envole un mets friand,
L’ange à qui le démon vole une âme en riant,
Une fille qui laisse échapper une puce,
Colomb qui voit son monde escroqué par Vespuce,
N’ont pas plus de stupeur et de fureur que moi
Croyant trouver Eschyle et rencontrant Brumoy.

XXVI LE RIRE

L’avenir seul peut rire et. seul peut bafouer.
Avec le puissant rire il ne faut pas jouer.
Jupiter qui foudroie, ou Jupiter qui raille,
Je crains plus le, dernier. Le rire est la mitraille.
L’éclat de rire humain poursuit le noir passé,
Taquine les pédants bornés à l’A B C,
Et manque de respect aux oreilles de l’âne;
Il nargue ce qui. boite au nom de ce qui plane;
Rois vermoulus, faux dieux gâtés, codes pourris,
Ressemblances de prêtre et de chauve-souris,
Terrible, il frappe tout; il augmente à mesure
Que le jour croît, plus clair sur la terre plus sûre;
Il dénonce l’autel ef les dogmes pieux
Qui vont en rampe douce aux budgets copieux;

Il veut que l’art plus fier à de grands buts nous mène;
Il ne se laisse rien conter par Théramène;
Si l’ennui se présente, il refuse l’impôt;
Quand, tout émerveillé du fusil Chassepot,
Tartuffe, sabre aux dents, prend un air de victoire,
I1 crie à la chienlit derrière cette gloire;
Il voit l’erreur qu’on chasse, assiste sans regrets
A cette fuite sombre au grand vent du progrès,
Et se prodigue, altier, rude, aux tristes figures,
Au juge, faux, au prince en retraite, aux augures,
Qui ne se peuvent plus regarder sans pleurer;
Il redouble en voyant tout se transfigurer;
Il fait balle; il est feu, projectile, étincelle;
Il crible la routine en retard; il harcèle
Tous ces traînards qu’on voit préférer, engourdis,
Au bel enfant Demain le bonhomme Jadis,
Et, du wagon traîné par l’éclair, il ricoche
Sur la rosse poussive attelée au vieux coche.

22 novembre 1867.

== XXVII Autant j’aime un livre,

Autant j’aime un livre, autant je hais
Ce que le bourgeois nomme une bibliothèque.
Du patagon au turc et du guèbre à l’aztèque,
L’homme délire. Soit. Ses erreurs. sont nos deuils.
C’est bien. Mais pourquoi faire à grands frais des recueils
Et des collections, qui n’amusent personne,
De toutes les façons dont ce fou déraisonne?
O bahuts solennels, vénérables amas
Des diverses erreurs dans les divers formats,
Rayons qu’emplit la nuit pédagogique, alcôves.
Des bouquins vermoulus chers aux bonshommes chauves;
Cloisons, armoires, trous, compartiments, châssis
Où tous les vieux néants montrent leurs dos moisis,
Dans vos flancs ténébreux, sous la brume des vitres,
Je distingue le tas difforme des bélîtres!
Oh! ceux qu’on ne lit pas et ceux qu’on ne lit plus,
Laharpe et Lebatteux se faisant des saluts
Des deux côtés d’un cippe ou du haut d’un balustre!
Tuet et Patouillet se donnant de l’illustre!
Les adorations de ces cuistres entre eux!
Oh! les socles ventrus sous lés bustes goitreux!
Rapin louant Bouhours! Oh! le bon voisinage
De Saumaise grattant l’échine de Ménage!

L’ombre amoureusement étreint sous le tasseau
Lipse avec Moreri, Brossette avec Crasso;
L’oie admire la dinde et l’on se congratule;
La patte cordiale empoigne la spatule;
Zéro met gravement Nihil sur le pavois.
Bouffissure du vide! ombre! Quand je vous vois,
Sombres in-folio classiques, je me sauve!
L’ennui des siècles dort sur votre vélin chauve;
Le bâillement vous garde, affreux, montrant les dents.

O noirs livres flairés du profil des pédants,
Je crois voir, à travers vos pages diaphanes,
Des grouins de pourceaux baisant des mufles d’ânes!

XXVIII La nature, éternelle mère,

La nature, éternelle mère,
Vous versa ,ses chastes faveurs,
Vieil Hésiode, vieil Homère,
O poètes, géants rêveurs!

Chantres des socs et des épées, -
A travers les temps, noir brouillard,
Vous montrez dans. vos épopées
L'homme enfant à-l'homme vieillard.

On voit en vous, comme une aurore,
Briller ce beau passé doré
Que la Grèce contemple encore
Avec un sourire effaré.

Comme l'ourse et les dioscures
Percent les branchages touffus,
On voit dans vos lueurs obscures
Remuer-un monde confus.

On voit, moins divins que vous-mêmes,
Resplendir, calmes et tonnants,
Dans la nuit de vos vieux poèmes -
Les olympiens rayonnants!

Votre cime touche les nues;
Dans votre ombre où luit l'orient
Les héros, les déesses nues
Vont et viennent en souriant.

Les.dieux, qui pour. nous sont des marbres,
Vivent dans vos livres jumeaux.
Comme des oiseaux dans les arbres,
Ils volent dans vos grands rameaux!

29 mars 1847.

XXIX Thiers raille Mazzini;

Thiers raille Mazzini; Pitt raille Washington;
Juvénal à Nisard semble de mauvais ton,
Shakspeare fait hausser à Planche les épaules;
Avant que la vapeur eût conquis les deux pôles,
Les savants bafouaient Fulton; monsieur Pouillet,
Qui naguère au zénith de l'Institut brillait,
Niait le télégraphe électrique, folie!
L'esprit noué déteste.un esprit qui délie
Celui qui voit de près et bas méprise un peu
L'Himalaya; le ciel, ce précipice bleu,
Ce noir puits des éclairs, déplaît à ces bonshommes
Qui ne savent jamais au juste où nous en sommes,
Et qui, fort dédaigneux: d'Euler et de Newton,
Ne marchent qu'en tâtant le chemin-du bâton;
Essayez donc de faire admirer aux myopes
Le regard. étoilé des sombres Calliopes
Assises sur le Pinde et sondant l'infini!
Eschyle; ce proscrit, et Dante, ce banni,
Radotent, et leur -vué est par l'exil faussée;
L'âme de Job paraît à Prudhomme insensée,
Car c'est aux envieux et c'est aux impuissants
Qu'appartient cette chose auguste, le bon sens;
L'époux que se choisit la foule, c'est l'eunuque;
Le chef incontesté sous qui.courbent la nuque
Tous les traîneurs de sabre et les porte-rabats,
C'est un Midas à qui Zoïle parle bas.
Quand il rôde au milieu des villes, Isaïe
Sent par les noirs vivants sa grande âme haïe,
Et marche sans trouver un coeur qui le comprend;
Les blêmes insulteurs suivent Corneille errant;
Derrière. Milton gronde une meute livide.
Quiconque a le talent d'être lourd étant vide
Est sûr d'être admiré des fats et des jaloux,
Ces chiens qui pour les grands et les forts sont des loups;

Voyez-les se jeter sur les talons d’Homère!
Voyez-les vénérer le crétin éphémère,

Le zéro solennel qui, pour l’instant, prévaut -
Chez-la gent soldatesque ou dans le clan dévot!
Un idiot étant-l’étui d’un personnage,
Il suffit qu’un grimaud soit plus vieux que son âge
Et qu’il se taise’avec’l’air d’un niais profond
Pour qu’on l’estime; et ceux qui font et qui défont
Tous -les noms de hasard mêlés à nos orages,
L’acclament de leur voix enrouée aux outrages,
Sachant qu’on ne peut mieux compléter les assauts
Aux grands hommes raillés qu’en admirant les sots.
Si vous faites le bien on vous fera la guerre,
Et, sans.savoir pourquoi, le stupide vulgaire
Est furieux autour du prophète pensif.

Voir le gouffre de haut, voir de loin le récif,
C’est un-tort. Etre grand, c’est être ridicule.
Pygmée est fier, étant pygmée; il toise Hercule;
Myrmidon ne prend pas Titan au sérieux.
Tous ces géants qui sont debout sur les hauts lieux
Font rire Lilliput, fourmilière féroce.

Le nain se sent un poids sur le dos, et sa bosse
Dont il est satisfait, bien qu’en-somme un peu las,
Lui fait le même effet qu’à toi le monde, Atlas!

Il te vaut. Qu’a-t-il donc. de moins que toi? Tu portes
Ton-fardeau comme lui le sien.
Barrez vos portes
Et fermez vos volets, de peur que la raison
Et que la -vérité n’entrent dans la maison,
O bourgeois! Homme. docte, homme grave, mollusque,
Qui que tu sois, prends garde à l’irruption brusque
Des clartés, des penseurs, des esprits, dans le trou
Où la nuit sombre a mis ton coeur sous le. verrou.

Tu végètes; -prends garde à ce grand -danger, vivre.
L’huître doit se, fermer dès que s’ouvre le livre
Car il suffit d’un mot dans une âme jeté
Pour. y creuser un gouffre et l’emplir de clarté.
De la stupidité l’ignorance est l’asile.
Ne lis rien, si tu tiens à rester imbécile.
Comme il sied.
L’oison glousse et boite, radieux;
Semblable au paon, l’orgueil, bien qu’il ait beaucoup d’yeux,
Ne s’en sert pas pour voir, mais pour être superbe;
Le faux sage a sa queue épanouie en gerbe

Qui le suit, vit par lui, l’aime, le croit divin,
Et le rend plus inepte en le rendant plus vain;
C’est le public des sots qui fait cortège au cuistre;
Le pédant idiot, arrogant et sinistre,
Qu’il soit homme d’église ou bien homme d’état,
Ignore tout, sait tout, et tient pour attentat
Le génie, et Guizot ne veut pas. de Voltaire.
Silence, Mirabeau! Danton, veux-tu te taire!
Ce Galilée est-il assez impertinent
Avec son soleil fixe et sa terre tournant!
Peut-on se, figurer rien de plus chimérique
Que ce Colomb faisant ce. rêve, l’Amérique!
Contre ces fiers croyants on prend à témoin Dieu.
Les églises, les rois qui sont grands de si peu,
Ces lourdes légions tardigrades, s’indignent
Contre ceux qui vont vite, et qui ne se résignent
Jamais à cè qui ment, jamais à ce qui nuit.
Ces hommes parlent haut et font peur.à la nuit.
A bas ces amoureux terribles de l’aurore!

Les grands penseurs sacrés qu’une flamme dévore,
Les poëtes, les forts esprits, les fiers rêveurs
Savent que l’infini ne fait pas de faveurs -
Mais ne fait pas non plus d’injustices; ils songent,
Méditant les destins d’en bas qui se prolongent

Dans le profond destin d'en haut, abîme obscur;
C'est pourquoi leur regard ne quitte point l'azur,
Et s'emplit, dans l'espace où flotte la science,
D'un éblouissement d'où naît la clairvoyance.

Sitôt que, se levant sur notre monde noir,
L'astre dieu de:l'aurore apparaît, faisant voir
A l'immense chaos l'énormité de l'âme,
Dès que ce monstre d'ombre à crinière de flamme,
Dès que cet inconnu splendide, le soleil,
Effrayant, rassurant, masqué d'éclairs, vermeil,
Surgit, égalisant sous sa lueur superbe
Les grands monts, la rondeur de. la mer, le brin d'herbe,
Et l'horreur des forêts d'où. sort un vague chant,
Dès que, fertilisant, achevant, ébauchant,
Vie et mystère, énigme expliquant les problèmes,
Faisant les gouffres clairs, faisant les ,astres blêmes,
Aidant le coeur à croire et l'esprit à prier,
Il s'est mis au travail comme un bon ouvrier,
Dès qu'il a commencé sa tâche de lumière,
Dès que, lié lui-même à la cause première,
Il a blanchi les-cieux, profonde vision,

Et jeté dans la nuit ce plongeur, le rayon,
Prompt comme le tonnerre et droit comme la règle,
La taupe lui dénonce un aveugle, c'est l'aigle.

28 avril 1876.

XXX Quand ce charmant petit poète gracieux

Quand ce charmant petit poète gracieux
Qui se perd dans les fleurs ne pouvant fuir aux cieux,
S’en vient étourdiment t’attaquer, ô génie,
Et, moqueur, se hasarde en ton ombre infinie,
Tu ne t’émeus point: Dante aperçoit peu Gresset.
L’espèce de bruit faible et confus qu’il faisait
Le premier jour qu’il vint t’insulter, géant triste,
N’est pas pour toi de ceux qui prouvent qu’on existe,
Et tu n’as pas même eu le vague mouvement
D’un colosse distrait de son rêve un moment.
Tu laisses cela vivre et bourdonner. Le gîte
De l’écureuil, pour peu qu’un vent souffle, s’agite,
Non l’antre du lion; et, sans chercher d’abri,
L’aigle reçoit le coup de bec du colibri.
Tu laisses fuir cette aile inutile et dorée.
Depuis quand l’astre est-il troublé dans l’empyrée
Parce qu’un follet saute et danse au fond des bois;
Depuis quand, le tonnerre énorme dont la voix
Émeut le mont qui tremble et la mer qui chancelle,
Allume-t-il l’éclair pour punir l’étincelle?

XXXI Oui, le Génie a ses athées.

Oui, le Génie a ses athées.
Devant l’envie à l’oeil hagard
Les grandes âmes insultées
Baissent leur pudique regard.
L’envieux s’accouple à l’impie,
L’âme bassement accroupie,
Tous deux se tiennent par la main,
Mentant, et de leur lèvre impure
Niant Dieu, l’un dans la nature,
L’autre dans le génie humain!

Mais la justice sort des choses;
Ils souffrent, ils sont malheureux;
Ils cachent sous leurs fronts moroses
Un ennui louche et ténébreux.
L’éternelle équité qui juge
Quiconque a l’ombre pour refuge,
L’erreur pour but, le mal pour voeu,
Condamne à la tristesse noire
Ceux qui font douter de la gloire
Et ceux qui font douter de Dieu.

XXXII C’est une loi: Veuillot existe,

C’est une loi: Veuillot existe, ce maroufle;
Planche est réel, Barbet 10° respire, Nisard souffle;
Rolle vit; Fréron mord Voltaire, on ne sait qui Pique Milton; Cecco, qu’on nomme aussi Cecchi,
Met sur Dante indigné sa patte familière;
Green rampe sur Shakspeare et Visé sur Molière;
Les grands hommes qu’au fond de l’azur nous voyons
Passer sous leur couronne immense de rayons,
Splendides, par la mort faits plus vivants encore,
A jamais envolés dans la superbe aurore
Et pour l’éternité. dé la gloire partis,
Sont rongés et couverts d’infiniment petits;
Doric l’éblouissement n’exclut, pas la ,vermine;
La gloire a son insecte et l’acarus la mine;
L’Océan sent la pieuvre errer dans son flot bleu.;
Zoïle est sur Homère et Satan èst sur Dieu;
Le sublime n’est pas dispensé de l’immonde;
Et je ne serais pas surpris le moins du monde
Quand un ange viendrait nous révéler à tous
Que dans le ciel profond les astres ont des poux.

Paris, 20 septembre 1874.

XXXIII À UN POËTE

Ô rêveur, ne va pas sur les cimes, j’en viens;
C’est terrible. Les sourds autans diluviens
Sont là qui passent et repassent;

Là, flotte et disparaît tout ce que nous songions;
Là, dans ces grands tombeaux nommés Religions,
Des corbeaux inconnus croassent.
Crains les hauts lieux hantés par les spectres; les jeux
De l’abîme ne sont jamais plus orageux
Que sur les sommets formidables;
Là, le réel avec l’ignoré se confond,
Et les échelons noirs des visions sans fond Sont lugubrement abordables.

Là, rayonne un soleil que la brume élargit;
Là, sont les fauves dieux, Néméos qui rugit,
Python qui siffle, Apis qui beugle
Sombre éblouissement dont ces. grands ingénus,
Les sages, sortent fous, et d’où sont revenus
Tasse insensé, Milton aveugle.

Ne va pas dans les bois sacrés, ni sur les monts
Où Pythagore a vu la face des démons,
Où sont toutes ces formes blanches
Dont les mages profonds ne savent que penser,
Et qu’ils guettent, n’osant rien de plus que passer
Leurs têtes à travers les branches.

Crains l’inspiration farouche du désert;
Le désert est tin lieu d’effroi dont Dieu se sert,
Et n’est point fait pour tes études:
Les gouffres ont parfois dévoré les plongeurs;
Ne baigne pas ton front aux immenses rougeurs
Du couchant dans les solitudes.

Crains de rencontrer là ce qu’il ne faut pas voir.
Crains les ascensions vers le haut sommet noir.
Les ombres n’ont rien à te dire.
Cueille ta poésie aux champs parmi les fleurs,
Et ne va pas chercher de l’épouvante ailleurs
Puisque mai consent à sourire.

Crains les rudes coups d’aile et les becs flamboyants.
Crains ces halliers où sont dés êtres effrayants
Qui méditent sans lois ni règles.
Si tu cherchais à prendre au vol dans. ces forêts
Quelque strophe. sauvage et sombre, tu courrais
Des périls de dénicheur d’aigles.

23 août 1874.

XXXIV LE DEVOIR

Et toi, qui que tu sois, génie,
Toi qui sens ta force et qùi vis,
Et dans la gloire ou l'ironie,
De ta grande âme t'assouvis!
Toi qui n'as, sévère nature,
Que toi-même pour nourriture
Et que toi-même pour rayon!
Toi, tout ensemble hymne et huée,
Astre en même temps que nuée,
A la fois caverne et lion!

Quel que soit ton siècle, ombre, orage,
Abandon, peur, haillon, linceul,
Va! que rien ne te décourage!
Marche! Homère est nu. Dante est seul.
Laisse s'amonceler les houles!
Laisse s'évanouir les foules!
Va, toi qui n'as pas de remords,
Accepte tes superbes tâches.
Sois l'intrépide chez les lâches,
Et sois le vivant chez les morts!

Quelquefois l'âme humaine lasse
Semble prise d'accablement;
Le grelottant baise la glace,
L'aveugle aime l'aveuglement.
Décroissances, inexorables!
Les choses se font misérables
Et les hommes se font petits.
Tout meurt. Il semble que commence L'abâtardissement immense
Des coeurs devenus appétits.

Hélas! parfois un peuple -ô Grèce,

Tu l’as. vu! Rome, tu le sais! -
Sent une honteuse paresse
D’être grand, et dit: C’est assez!
Assez d’Ajax! Assez d’Achilles!
De Brutus, de Solons, d’Eschyles!
Assez de héros au front pur!
Assez de ces arches de gloire
Qui font de toute notre histoire
Un pont de géants dans l’azur!

Assez de hautains. Propylées,
De Panthéons, de Parthénons!
Assez de têtes étoilées!
Assez de grands hommes! Dînons.
Toute l’histoire n’est qu’un songe.
Gloire au festin qui se prolonge!
Gloire aux crimes inexpiés!
Que la fémme soit de la fête,
Nue avec des fleurs sur la tête,
Des bagues d’or aux doigts des pieds!

Qu’un esprit nouveau nous visite!
Soyons ceux ,qu’on n’a jamais vus!,
Qu’Athènes s’appelle Thersite!
Que Rome s’appelle Davus!
Des vieilles conquêtes vivantes,
Ô peuple, faisons nos servantes.
Vivre est la’seule ambition.
Cuisons, joyeuse foule athée, `
Avec le feu de Prométhée
Le souper de Trimalcion!

Alors les pâles multitudes
Qu’attend je sépulcre béant,
Prennent toutes les attitudes
De la fumée et du néant. -
Une horrible;nuit acharnée

Couvre l’âme, la destinée, -
Les pas, les fronts, les coeurs, les yeux;
La foule dort,-boit, mange, ignore,.
Rampe, chante et rit’; et l’aurore
Refuse de monter aux cieux.

Voyant qué l’homme n’a plus d’aile,
La femme pleure son affront,-
Et pour le fils qui naîtra d’elle
Se sent de la rougeur au front.
Alors, penseur, c’est l’heure trouble,
Lutte! que ton effort redouble,
Montre l’idée et le ciel bleu
A l’homme qui, n’osant plus croire,
Voit l’avenir vide de, gloire -
Et l’univers vide de Dieu.

Quand ton siècle aux basses prudences,
Décroît, toi, marche à pas plus francs!
Surgis! c’est dans les décadences
Que les grands.hommes sont plus grands.

C’est surtout parmi les décombres
Qué les hautes colonnes sombres,
Dépassant tout; dominant tout,
Belles dans les débris difformes,
Gisantes, paraissent énormes,:
Et semblent sublimes, debout!

V. H. IO juin 1870.

XXXV POURQUOI LES GRANDS HOMMES SONT MALHEUREUX

Une nuit, j’écoutais, seul, parmi des décombres;
Et j’entendis parler les Évènements sombres:

Nous sommes les forgeurs; et les grands hommes sont
Les enclumes que Dieu met dans l’antre profond, Prêtes au dur travail de créer d’autres races.
Car les hommes sont vils, méchants, lâches, voraces,
Monstrueux, et-le temps est venu de changer.
C’est à force de coups qu’on parvient à forger.
Donc les hommes, sans frein, sans loi, sans coeur, sans flamme,
Sans joie, avaient besoin qu’on leur fit une autre âme,
Et que quelqu’un de grand sur eux étincelât.
Il fallait faire à l’Homme une âme ayant l’éclat,
Le rayon, la puissance et la douceur, une âme
Paternelle à l’enfant, fraternelle à la femme,
Une âme juste. -Un jour, Dieu nous dit: Forgez-leur
Cette âme, et nous donna pour marteau le malheur;
Les grands hommes pensifs étant là, nous conclûmes
Que nous pouvions frapper sur ces sombres enclumes.

15 août 1874. Paris.

XXXVI À THÉOPHILE GAUTIER

Ami, poète, esprit, tu fuis notre nuit noire.
Tu sors de nos rumeurs pour entrer dans la gloire;
Et désormais ton nom rayonne aux purs sommets.
Moi qui t’ai connu jeune et beau, moi qui t’aimais,
Moi qui, plus d’une fois, dans nos altiers coups d’aile,
Éperdu, m’appuyais sur ton âme fidèle,
Moi, blanchi par les jours sur ma tête neigeant,
Je me souviens des temps écoulés, et songeant
A ce jeune passé qui vit nos deux aurores,
A la lutte, à l’orage, aux arènes sonores,
A l’art nouveau qui s’offre, au peuple criant oui,
J’écoute ce grand vent sublime évanoui.

Fils de la Grèce antique et de la jeune France,
Ton fier respèct des morts fut rempli d’espérance;
Jamais tu ne fermas les yeux à l’avenir.
Mage à Thèbes, druide au pied du noir menhir,
Flamine aux bords du Tibre et brahme aux bords du Gange,
Mettant sur l’arc du dieu la flèche de l’archange,
D’Achille et de Roland hantant les deux chevets,
Forgeur mystérieux et puissant, tu savais
Tordre tous les rayons dans une seule flamme;
Le couchant rencontrait l’aurore dans ton âmè;
Hier croisait demain-dans ton fécond cerveau;
Tu sacrais le vieil art aïeul de l’art nouveau;
Tu comprenais qu’il faut, lorsqu’une âme inconnue
Parle au peuple, envolée en éclairs dans la nue,
L’écouter, l’accepter;. l’aimer, ouvrir Ies cceurs;
Calme, tu dédaignais. l’effort vil des moqueurs
Écumant sur Eschyle et, bavant sur Shakspeare;
Tu savais que, ce siècle a son air qu’il respire,
Et que, l’art ne marchant qu’en se transfigurant,
C’est embellir le beau que d’y joindre le grand.
Et l’on t’a vu pousser d’illustres cris de joie

Quand le Drame a saisi Paris comme une proie,
Quand l’antique hiver fut chassé par Floréal,
Quand l’astre inattendu du moderne idéal
Est venu tout à côup, dans le ciel qui s’embrase
Luire, et quand l’Hippogriffe a relayé Pégase!

Je te salue au seuil sévère du tombeau.
Va chercher le vrai, toi qui sus trouver le beau.
Monte l’âpre escalier. Du haut des sombres marches,
Du noir pont de l’abîme on entrevoit les arches;
Va! meurs! la dernière heure est le dernier degré.
Pars, aigle, tu vas voir des gouffres à ton gré;
Tu vas voir l’absolu, le réel, le sublime.
Tu vas sentir le vent sinistre de la cime
Et l’éblouissement du prodige éternel.
Ton olympe, tu vas le voir du haut du ciel,
Tu vas du haut du vrai voir l’humaine chimère,
Même celle de Job, même celle d’Homère,
Ame, et du haut de Dieu tu vas voir Jéhovah.
Monte, esprit! Grandis, plane, ouvre tes ailes, va!

Lorsqu’un vivant nous quitte, ému, je le contemple;
Car entrer dans la mort, c’est entrer dans le temple
Et quand un homme meurt, je vois distinctement
Dans son ascension mon propre avènement.
Ami, je sens du sort la sombre plénitude;
J’ai commencé la mort par de la solitude,
Je vois mon profond soir vaguement s’étoiler;
Voici l’heure où je vais, aussi moi, m’en aller.
Mon fil trop long frissonne et touche presque au glaive;
Le vent qui t’emporta doucement me soulève,
Et je vais suivre ceux qui m’aimaient, moi, banni.
Leur oeil fixe m’attire au fond de l’infini.
J’y cours. Ne fermez pas la porte funéraire.

Passons; car c’est la loi; nul ne peut s’y soustraire;
Tout penche; et ce grand siècle avec tous ses rayons

Entre en cette ombre immense où pâles nous fuyons.
Oh! quel farouche bruit font dans le crépuscule
Les chênes qu’on abat pour le bûcher d’Hercule!
Les chevaux de la mort se mettent à hennir,
Et sont joyeux, car l’âge éclatant va finir;
Ce siècle altier qui sut,dompter le vent contraire,
Expire 0 Gautier! toi, leur égal et.leur frère,
Tu pars après Dumas, Lamartine et Musset.
L’onde antique, est tarie où l’on rajeunissait;
Comme il. n’est plus de Styx il n’est plus de Jouvence.
Le dur faucheur avec sa large lame avance
Pensif et pas à pas vers le reste du blé;
C’est mon tour; et la nuit emplit mon oeil troublé
Qui, devinant, hélas, l’avenir des colombes,
Pleure sur des berceaux et sourit à des tombes.

V. H. 2 novembre 1872. Jour des Morts.

I À LOUIS B.

Non, je n’ai point changé. Tu te plains à tort, frère.
Hélas! quoique le ciel parfois nous soit, contraire,
Quoique nous n’ayons rien. ici qui soit à nous,
Quoique dans nos travaux, rudes et pourtant doux,
Le sort jaloux souvent vienne et nous interrompe,
Non, je n’ai point changé, Louis ton coeur se trompe.
Je suis l’homme pensif que j’ai toujours été.
Contemplant la nature, adorant la beauté,
Fait d’admiration, d’étude-et de prière;
Prosterné devant l’ombre ét devant la lumière,
J’ai, créé pour souffrir et vivre par l’amour,
Deux musiques en moi qui chantent tour à tour:
Dans la tête un orchestre et dans l’âme une lyre.
Cette création que je, tâche de lire,
Avec ses univers, ses lueurs, ses splendeurs,
Remuant mon cerveau jusqu’en ses profondeurs,
En fait en même temps vibrer toutes les fibres.
Je veux les peuples grands, je veux les hommes libres;
Je rêve pour la femme un avenir meilleur;
Incliné sur le pauvre et sur le travailleur,
Je leur suis fraternel du fond de ma pensée;
Comment guider la foule orageuse et pressée,
Comment donner au droit plus-de base et d’ampleur,
Comment faire ici-bas décroître la douleur,
La faim, le dur labeur, le mal et la misère,
Toutes ces questions me tiennent dans leur serre;
Et puis, quoique songeur, aisément réjoui,
Je me sens tout à coup le coeur épanoui
Si, dans mon cercle étroit, j’ai, par une parole,
Par quelque fantaisie inattendue et folle,

Fait naître autour de moi, le soir au coin du feu,
Ce rire des enfants qui fait sourire Dieu.

Ainsi tu m’as connu. Je suis toujours le même.
Aujourd’hui seulement, attristant ceux que j’aime,
Le deuil monte parfois à mon front douloureux,
Je reste moins longtemps au milieu des heureux,
Et dans mes yeux, souvent fixés hors de ce monde,
Le sourire est plus pâle et l’ombre est plus profonde.

11 octobre 1846.

II Admire, enfant!

— Admire, enfant! souvent aux marins de Messine
Un pauvre feu de pâtre au loin montre et dessine
Charybde ou bien Scylla.
Il conduit le nocher dans sa route prospère!...
— Mais, répondit l’enfant, l’étoile aussi, mon père,
Peut servir à cela.. -

Q mon fils, ô mon fils! tu l’as dit! Parle encore!
O front pur qui vers moi montes comme une aurore,
Mon enfant bien-aimé!
Tout est grand! Tout est bon! tu l’as dit de ta bouche
Qui versa tant de fois sur mon esprit farouche
Son souffle parfumé!

Tu l’as dit! un seul mot de ta« pure innocence
— Vaut mieux que ma sagesse et plus que ma science,
Enfant religieux!
Pour un regard d’enfant le ciel n’a pas de voiles.
Où pourrait-on trouver le secret des étoiles
Si ce n’est dans tes yeux?

III À UNE RELIGIEUSE

Dans vos dévotions que comprend ma pensée,
Ne vous détournez pas comme une âme blessée,
Sainte fille du ciel, oh non! je n’ai pas ri.
Mon coeur d’un Dieu rêveur de tout temps fut l’abri.
Et ce que je vénère avant tout dans ce monde
C’est l’homme, raison calme et passion profonde,

Qui fait la part de tout, à toute heure, en tout lieu,
Debout devant le sort; à genoux devant Dieu.
Voyez-vous, je suis. né sous des regards austères;
Et ma joie ingénue en de graves mystères
A souvent regardé sans, risée et-sans peur.
La belle enfance, ainsi qu’une blanche vapeur,
Toujours dans notre esprit reparaît et surnage;
Et moi, je m’en souviens,. jouant dans mon jeune âge
Avec mon frère Eugène, avec mon frère Abel,
Mêlant ma voix aux leurs, innocente Babel,
Tout petit, j’ai rempli de chansons enfantines
Le saint. cloître où. jadis priaient “ les Feuillantines.

25 juin 1837

IV À cette heure indécise

À cette heure indécise où le jour va mourir,
Où tout s’endort, le coeur oubliant de souffrir,
Les oiseaux de chanter et les troupeaux de paître,
Que de fois sous mes yeux un chariot champêtre,
Groupe vivant de.bruit, de chevaux.et-de voix,
A gravi sur le flanc du coteau dans les bois
Quelque route creusée entre les ocres jaunes,
Tandis que près d’une eau qui fuyait sous les aulnes,
Seul, j’écoutais gémir dans les brumes du soir
Une cloche enrouée au fond d’un vallon noir!
Que de fois épiant la rumeur des chaumières,
Le brin d’herbe moqueur qui siffle entre deux pierres,
Le cri plaintif du soc, gémissant et traîné,
Le nid qui jase au fond du cloître ruiné
D’où l’ombre se répand sur les tombes des moines,
Le champ doré par l’aube où causent les avoines
Qui pour vous voir passer, comme un peuple ravi,
Au bord du chemin creux se penchent à l’envi,
L’abeille qui tout bas chante et parle à la rose,
Parmi tous ces’. objets. dont l’être se compose,
Que de fois j’ai rêvé, triste et parfois heureux,
Tâchant de m’expliquer ce qu’ils disaient entre eux!

V La France, ô mes enfants,

La France, ô mes enfants, reine aux tours fleuronnées,
Posait, sous l’empereur que votre aïeul servait,

Le bras droit sur le Rhin, le gauche aux Pyrénées,
Et ses pieds et sa tête avaient, ô destinées!
L’Océan pour lion, les Alpes pour chevet.

Austerlitz, Iéna, Friedland, météores,
Rayonnaient. Un seul homme enflammait tous les yeux;
Sa gloire, grandissant à toutes les aurores,
Se composait du bruit des trompettes sonores
Et des tambours joyeux.

Et l’Europe voyait briller, vaincue et fière,
Dans ce camp, d’où sortaient la guerre et ses terreurs,
Autour de cette France en tous lieux la première,
Comme des moucherons autour d’une lumière,
Un groupe humilié de rois et d’empereurs.

Ces choses se passaient quand mon âme innocente
S’ouvrait, comme la vôtre, au soleil réchauffant;
Le léopard anglais rôdait, gueule béante,
César était debout, la France était géante,
Lorsque j’étais enfant;

Lorsque j’étais enfant, envié par les mères,
Libre dans le jardin et libre dans les bois,
Et que. je m’amusais, errant près des chaumières,
A prendre des bourdons dans les roses trémières
En fermant brusquement la fleur avec mes doigts.

Bois d’Andernach-sur-le-Rhin.

12 septembre 1840.

VI L’autre jour,

L’autre jour, ami cher, ami de vingt années,
Tandis qu’en vos pensers, rêvant des jours meilleurs,
Vous sondiez de l’état les hautes destinées,
Je regardais jouer vos enfants dans les fleurs.

Inégales par l’âge, également aimées,
L’aînée à la dernière avec amour sourit.
Trois filles! êtres purs! âmes au bien formées
Que pénètre un rayon de votre grand esprit!

La rosée inondait les fleurs à peine écloses;
Elles jouaient, riant de leur rire sans fiel.
Deux choses ici-bas vont bien avec les roses,
Le rire des enfants et les larmes du ciel.
Beaux fronts où tout est joie et qui n’ont rien de sombre!
Oh! je les contemplais, le coeur de pleurs gonflé,
Moi qui vis désormais l’oeil fixé sur une ombre,
Moi qui cherche partout mon doux ange envolé!
Devant votre bonheur j’oubliais ma souffrance,
Je priais, d’un esprit paisible et raffermi;
Mon deuil recommandait à Dieu votre espérance,
Et du fond de mon coeur je vous disais: = Ami!
Soyez toujours heureux dans bes têtes si chères!
Que chaque jour qui passe ajoute à leur beauté!
Voyez sur votre seuil, en proie aux soins austères,
S’épanouir leur grâce et leur sérénité!
Dieu vous doit ce bonheur!, car dans notre nuit noire,
Ces êtres si charmants nous consolent parfois!
Car vous vous détournez du bruit de votre gloire
Pour écouter, pensif, l’heureux bruit de leur voix!
Aimé dans vos foyers, admiré de la foule,
Esprit profond, lutteur aux discours triomphants,
Passant du juste au vrai, votre destin s’écoule
Entre les grands travaux et les petits enfants!

Oh! quand de noirs soucis vos heures sont ternies,
Regardez! regardez cet avenir si doux,
Ces trois fronts rayonnants, ces trois aubes bénies
Qui se lèvent dans l’ombre, ô père, autour de vous!

24 septembre 1844.

VII Vous êtes bien des fois venus

Vous êtes bien des fois venus dans ma demeure
En m’appelant ami!
Vous avez dans vos bras bercé l’enfant qui pleure
Et l’enfant endormi.
Et tandis qu’ils dormaient, beaux fronts où semble luire
Tout un monde meilleur,
Vous paraissiez, penchés avec un pur sourire,
Vague reflet du leur;

Tenir vos coeurs ouverts aux sereines pensées;
Aux songes réchauffants,
Qui sortent doucement, pour nos âmes blessées,
Du sommeil des enfants.

VIII À OL

Tu vivais autrefois penché sur la nature,
O rêveur! ton esprit, sans changer de posture,
Se penche maintenant sur les événements.
Déjà des temps futurs les noirs linéaments
Pour ta prunelle fixe et claire sont visibles.
Souriant vaguement aux rencontres possibles,
Tu marches devant toi dans la nuit. Crainte, espoir,
Que t'importe? tu vas où tu vois le devoir.
Si l'on creuse à tes pas des pièges, tu l'ignores.
Parmi ces hommes fous et vainement sonores,
Grave, triste, et rempli: de l'avenir lointain,
Tu caches ou tu dis les choses du destin;
Car le ciel rayonnant te fit naître, ô poète,
De l'Apollon chanteur et de l'Isis muette.

27 novembre.

IX Vénus rit toute nue

Vénus rit toute nue au-dessus de mon lit
Qu’un damas écarlate à glands dorés plafonne.
Des singes sur mon mur, bande agreste et bouffonne,
Font cent choses avec ces rires furieux
Qui ravissent Molière et choquent Andrieux.
Près d’eux songent, l’oeil plein d’une douce chimère,
Ma bisaïeule belle et jeune et ma grand’mère
Toute petite, avec une fleur dans sa main.
Partout, autour de moi, sur maint vieux parchemin,
Sur le satin fleuri, sur les pots, sur les laques,
Vivent confusément les djinns, les brucolaques,
Les mandarins à l’air vénérable et sournois,
Les dragons, les magots, et ces démons chinois
Fort laids, mais pétillants de malice et de flamme,
Qui doivent ressembler aux rêves d’une femme
Amoureuse de vous, ô mon ami Crémieux!
Mon esprit dans ce monde étrange songe mieux;
Comme un oiseau tenté par de lointaines grèves,
Il ouvre lentement les ailes dans ces rêves,
Il part du chimérique et monte à l’idéal.

X A cette heure de nuit

A cette heure de nuit où l’homme vague et trouble,
Chair, âme, entre la terre et le ciel se sent double,
Quelquefois, à l’instant où. je vais m’endormir,
Où tous les flots de l’ombre en moi viennent frémir,
Une idée apparaît à mon esprit, et passe;
Ou quelque vers profond serpente dans l’espace,
Espèce de poisson ondoyant du sommeil;
Un moment je l’admire, étrange, obscur, vermeil,
Et, si je veux le prendre, il fuit, se mêle aux ombres,
Et s’enfonce à jamais dans les profondeurs sombres.

9 mars 1856.

Après avoir perdu cette nuit. Un vers que je regrette.

XI Le couchant flamboyait

Le couchant flamboyait à travers les bruines
Comme le fronton d’or d’un vieux temple en ruines.
— L’arbre avait un frisson.
La mer au loin semblait, en ondes recourbée,
Une colonne torse en marbre vert, tombée
Sur l’énorme horizon.

La vague, roue errante, et l’écume, çavale,
S’enfuyaient; je voyais luire par intervalle
Les cieux pleins de regards;
Les flots allaient, venaient, couraient; sans fin,-sans nombre,
Et j’écoutais, penché sur ce cirque de l’ombre,
Le bruit de tous ces chars.

Lugubre immensité! profondeurs redoutées!
Tous sont là, les Satans comme les Prométhéen.
Ténébreux océans!
Cièux, vous êtes l’abîme où tombent les génies.
Oh! combien l’oeil, au fond des brumes infinies,
Aperçoit de géants!

Ô vie, énigme, sphinx, nuit, sois la bienvenue!
Car je me sens d’accord avec l’Ame inconnue.
Je souffre, mais je crois.
J’habite l’absolu, patrie obscure et sombre,
Pas plus intimidé dans tous ces gouffres d’ombre
Que l’oiseau dans les bois.

Je songe, l’oeil fixé sur l’incompréhensible.
Le zénith est fermé. Les justes sont la cible
Du mensonge effronté;
Le bien, qui semble aveugle, a le mal pour ministre,
Mais, rassuré, je vois sous la porte sinistre
La fente de clarté.

11 avril 1870.

XII Virgile, en ce beau mois

Virgile, en ce beau mois, je sens moins les douleurs;
Par la nature et toi mon âme dort bercée;
J’ai devant ma fenêtre un jardin plein de fleurs,
Et ton doux livre ouvert sous l’oeil de ma pensée.

22 mai 1847.

XIII Le bien germe parfois

Le bien germe parfois dans les ronces du mal.
Souvent, dans l’éden bleu de l’étrange idéal,
Que, frissonnant, sentant à peine que j’existe,
J’aperçois à travers mon humanité triste,
Comme par les barreaux d’un blême cabanon,
Je vois éclore, au fond d’une lueur sans nom,
De monstrueuses fleurs et d’effrayantes roses:

Je sens que par devoir j’écris toutes ces choses
Qui semblent, sur le fauve et tremblant parchemin, Naître sinistrement de l’ombre de ma main.
Est-ce que par hasard, grande haleine insensée
Des prophètes, c’est toi qui troubles ma pensée?
Où donc m’entraîne-t-on dans ce nocturne azur?
Est-ce un ciel que je vois? Est-ce le rêve obscur
Dont j’aperçois la porte ouverte toute grande?
Est-ce que j’obéis? est-ce que je commande?
Ténèbres, suis-je en fuite? est-ce moi qui poursuis?
Tout croule; je ne sais par moments si je suis
Le cavalier terrible ou le cheval farouche;
J’ai le sceptre à la main et le mors dans la bouche;
Ouvrez-vous que je passe, abîmes, gouffre bleu,
Gouffre noir! Tais-toi, foudre! Où me mènes-tu, Dieu?
Je suis la volonté, mais je suis le délire.
O vol dans l’infini! J’ai beau par instants dire
Comme Jésus criant Lamma Sabacthani
Le chemin est-il long encore? est ce fini,
Seigneur? permettrez-vous bientôt que je m’endorme?
L’Esprit fait ce qu’il veut. Je sens le souffle énorme
Que sentit Élisée et qui le souleva;
Et j’entends dans la nuit quelqu’un qui me dit: Va!

XIV Mon âme était en deuil;

Mon âme était en deuil; c’était l’heure de l’ombre.
L’air mêlait les aspects sans forme aux voix sans nombre;
Un chant de mort semblait sortir de tous ces bruits;
L’ombre était comme un temple immense aux triples voiles;
Et`je voyais au fond scihtiller les étoiles,
Cierges mystérieux sur le drap noir des nuits.

l janvier 1846

XV JE TRAVAILLE

Amis, je me remets à travailler; j’ai pris
Du papier sur ma table, une plume, et j’écris;
J’écris des vers, j’écris de la prose; je songe.
Je fais ce que je puis pour m’ôter du mensonge,
Du mal, de l’égoïsme et de l’erreur; j’entends
Bruire en moi le gouffre obscur des mots flottants;
Je travaille. Ce mot, plus profond qu’aucun autre,
Est dit par l’ouvrier et redit par l’apôtre;
Le, travail est-devoir et droit, et sa beauté
C’est d’être l’esclavage étant la liberté.
Le forçat du devoir et du travail, est libre.
Mais quoi! penseur, tu vas remettre en équilibre
Au fond de ton esprit, qu’occupaient d’autres soins,
L’idée avec le mot, le plus avec le moins!
De la prose! pourquoi? des vers! pourquoi? des rimes!
Des phrases! A quoi bon? A quoi bon les abîmes,
Les mystères, la vie et la mort, les secrets
De la croissance étrànge et sombre des forêts
Et des peuples, et l’ombre où croulent les empires,
Et toute cette énigme humaine où les Shakspeares
Plongeaient, et que fouillaient, les yeux tout grands ouverts,

Tacite avec sa prose et Dante avec son vers!
A quoi bon la beauté, l’art, la forme, le style?
Lucrèce et le spondée, Horace et le dactyle,
Et tous ces arrangeurs de rhythmes et de mots,
Pindare, Eschyle, Job, Plaute, Isaïe, Amos!
A quoi bon ce qui fait l’homme grand sur la terre?
Ceux qui parlent ainsi feraient mieux de se taire;
Je connais dès longtemps leur vaine objection.
L’art est la roue immense et j’en suis l’Ixion.
Je travaille. À quoi? Mais à tout; car la pensée
Est une vaste porte à chaque instant poussée
Par ces passants qu’on nomme Honneur, Devoir, Raison,

Deuil, et qui tous ont droit d’entrer dans la maison.
Je regarde là-haut le jour éternel poindre.
A qui voit plus de ciel la terre semble moindre;
J’offre aux morts, dans mon âme èn proie au choc des vents,
Leur souvenir accru de l’oubli des vivants.
Oui, je travaille, amis! oui, j’écris! oui, je pense!
L’apaisement superbe étant la récompense
De l’homme qui, saignant et calme néanmoins,
Tâche de songer plus afin de souffrir moins.
Le souffle universel m’enveloppe et me gagne.
Le lointain avenir, lueur de la montagne,
M’apparaît, par-dessus tous les noirs horizons.
C’est par ces rêves-là que nous nous redressons.
O frisson du songeur qui redevient prophète!
Le travail, cette chose inexprimable; faite
De vertige, d’effort, de joug, de volonté,
Vient quand nous l’appelons, nous jette une clarté
Subite, et verse en nous tous les généreux zèles,
Et, docile, ardent, fier, ouvrant de brusques ailes;
Écartant les douleurs ainsi que des rameaux,
Nous emporte à travers l’infini, loin des maux,
Loin de la terre, loin du malheur, loin du vice,
Comme un aigle qu’on a dans l’ombre à son service.

12 janvier 1874.

XVI Tu me dis Finis

Tu me dis Finis. donc ton livre des Misères.

Ami, pour achever ce vaste manuscrit,
Il me faut avant tout ma liberté d’esprit.
Quand un monde se meut dans le cerveau d’un homme,
Il ne peut pas songer aux affaires de Rome,
A monsieur Bonaparte, à Faucher, à Molé.
Rends-moi l’espace immense et le ciel étoilé!
Rends-moi la solitude et la forêt muette!
Hélas! on ne peut être en même temps poète
Qui s’envole, et tribun coudoyant Changarnier,
Aigle dans l’idéal et vautour au charnier.

Octobre 1851.

XVII Quand je marelle à mon but,

Quand je marelle à mon but, auguste
Ce qui menacé me sourit.
Ô Dieu! ce que je veux, est juste
Et je le veux d’un ferme esprit.

Ni juin. formidable et farouche;
Ni les cris, ni le rire amer;
Ni Changarnier au regard. louche,
Ni le vent soufflant sur là mer,

Ni la haine où jè suis en butte,
Rien ne me fera chanceler.
Si le monde croulait,. sa chute
M’écraserait sans m’ébranler.

XVIII Ô toi qui m’as maudit

Ô toi qui m’as maudit dans tes souffrances sombres,
Un jour,. ceux qui vivront quand nous serons des ombres,
Les passants qu’après nous agitera le vent,
Surpris, viendront au champ des morts, et, soulevant
La pierre du tombeau sur ma bière muette,
Ils me demanderont: pourquoi donc, ô poète,
Quelqu’un t’a-t-il maudit, toi qui saignas pour tous?
Et moi je répondrai, spectre farouche et doux,
Faisant signe à la pierre afin qu’elle retombe:
— Silence! laissez-moi songer seul dans ma tombe.
Laissez-moi savourer-la sombre-volupté
De me dire: il eut tort, ce grand çceur irrité.

Bruxelles. 1 janvier 1852

XIX À UN ENFANT

Quoique je sois de ceux qui se sont autrefois
Penchés sur ton berceau plein de ta jeune voix,
Tu commences, enfant, à ne plus me connaître.
Je ne suis rien pour toi qu'un étranger, un être
Évanoui, perdu dans de noirs lendemains,
Un voyageur dont l'ombre est sur d'autres chemins,
Quelqu'un qu'on vit jadis, avant les jours funèbres,
Lorsqu'on était petit, passer dans les ténèbres;
Tu ne songes pas plus à moi qu'au moucheron
Qui volait tout à l'heure en sonnant du clairon,
A ta balle perdue, à ta lampe soufflée;
Pas plus qu'à-ce parfum d'herbe et de giroflée
Qu'avril mêle à l'aurore et qui dure un moment;
Tu m'as laissé tomber de ton esprit gaîment
Comme un càhier fini tout noirci de grimoire.
Tu fais bien. Nous avons, hélas, plus de mémoire,
Enfants, nous qui, vivant pendant que vous naissez,
Lisons vos avenirs écrits dans nos passés;
Votre sort noùs émeut, et bien souvent nous sommes
Rêveurs, nous grands enfants, devant vous, petits hommes.
Aussi, vois-tu, du fond des mornes horizons,
Je viens à toi, jeune âme, et je te dis: causons.

Pose un moment ta plume et ferme ta grammaire.
Ecoute. Te voilà grandissant, et ta mère
Est debout près de toi comme un gardien des cieux.
Seule et veuve, et livrée aux vents capricieux,
En proie aux souffles noirs qui n'épargnent personne,
Elle étend sur ton front son aile qui frissonne,
Et veille; la colombe a peur pour le roseau.
Car le sort menaçant nous tient dès le berceau;
Qu'on soit un petit prince ou bien un petit pâtre,
Nul n'échappé au destin; son ongle opiniâtre
Se mêle à nos cheveux et nous traîne effarés.

Oh! fixe ton regard sur ses yeux adorés!
Ici-bas c’est ta mère, et là-haut c’est ton ange.
Cette femme a subi plus d’une épreuve étrange,
Enfant, c’est toi qui dois l’en consoler. Retiens
Que, touchante à nos yeux, elle est sacrée aux tiens.
La nature là fit reine; et le sort martyre.
Qui la voit pleurer sent un charme qui l’attire.
Hélas! l’ombre d’hier assombrit aujourd’hui.
Elle accepte, stoïque et simple, l’âpre ennui,
L’isolement, l’affront dont un sot nous lapide,

La haine des méchants, cette meule stupide
Qui broie un diamant ainsi qu’un grain de mil,
Et toutes les douleurs, contre-coups de l’exil.

Oh! l’exil! il est triste, il s’en va, grave et morne,
Traînant un deuil-sans fin dans l’espace sans borne,
Et, sur le dur chemin qui vers l’ombre descend,
Hélas! on voit tomber goutte à goutte le sang
Des racines du coeur qui pendent arrachées!

Le malheur, c’est le feu dans les branches séchées.
Il dévore, joyeux, nos jours évanouis.

Naguère elle brillait aux regards éblouis,
Pareille au mois de mai qu’un zéphyr tiède effleure;
Naguère elle brillait; maintenant elle pleure.
Ce rayon n’a duré que le temps d’un éclair.

Mais la pensée auguste habite son oeil fier;
Mais le malheur, qui, même en nous frappant, nous venge,
A mis des ailes d’aigle à ses épaules d’ange.
Dieu, caché dans la nuit de cet être souffrant,
Brille et fait resplendir son-sourcil transparent,
L’albâtre laisse voir la lumière immortelle,
Son front luit!

Toi, son fils, tressaille devant elle
Comme Gracchus enfant quand-sa mère venait;
Car elle est la clarté de ton aube qui naît.

Qu’importe que la foule ignore ou méconnaisse
J’ai vu; moi, quand l’angoisse étreignait sa jeunesse,
Comment elle a souffert, comment elle a lutté,
Et j’ai dit dans mon coeur: Cette femme eût été Archidamie à Sparte ou Cornélie à Rome.

Enfant, ressemble-lui si tu veux être un homme;
Car elle est brave; car à l’abîme, au péril,
Son doux oeil féminin jette un regard viril;
Car c’est un ,ferme esprit! car c’est un vrai courage!
Jamais, sous le ciel bleu, jamais, devant l’orage,
Jamais, retiens cela, quoique tu sois petit,
Dans un plus noble séin plus grand coeur né battit!

Elle est femme pourtant, et ses maux sont sans nombre.
Mais un profond azur emplit son âme sombre.
Elle marche à travers la vie, âpre forêt,
Et regarde au-delà des rameaux; on dirait
Qu’elle cherche le mot d’une énigme dans l’ombre;
Et puis elle s’incline ainsi qu’un mât qui sombre;

Elle dit à l’espoir: va-t’en! au souvenir:
Silence! au jour qui meurt: hâte-toi de finir!
Car, conscience pure, elle est un esprit triste.
Même en rêvant longtemps sa tristesse persiste.
Hélas! le doute injuste est au fond de son coeur
Comme au fond d’un beau vase une amère. liqueur.
C’est qu’elle a tant gémi dans ,ces lugubres. voies
Où Dieu nous pousse avec nos douleurs et nos joies!
Une larme éternelle erre au bord de ses yeux...
Oh! courbons-nous devant ces fronts mystérieux
Qui, faibles et ployés, dans l’ombre où Dieu nous jette,

Semblent faits pour porter la souffrance muette,
Que le destin poursuit, ce bourreau jamais las,
Que tous les maux sur terre et tous les deuils, hélas!
Couvrent de leur cilice, accablent de leurs voiles,
Et qu'attendent aux cieux des couronnes d'étoiles!

Aime-la! porte-lui ton coeur chaque matin,
Ris! Réjouis cette âme à ton rire enfantin.
Sois le flot pur qui porte et caresse le cygne.
Quand elle parle, adore; obéis sur un, signe.
Sois son consolateur et sois son défenseur.
Que le mensonge vil, trompé dans sa noirceur,
Vienne apportant l'affront, te voie, et le remporte.
Qu'on te sente déjà veillant devant. sa porte.
Si le sort m'eût donné, sainte et charmante loi,
Ce grand devoir de fils qu'il te confie à toi,
Oh! comme elle eût dormi sous ma garde fidèle,
Et, lion pour autrui, j'eusse été chien pour elle!

Sois bon, spis doux, sois tendre. Écarte de ta main,
Sous ses pieds délicats, les pierres du chemin.

Pour elle, ô pauvre enfant, tu donnerais, écoute,
Ton âme souffle à souffle et ton sang goutte à goutte,
De sa robe à genoux tu baiserais les plis,
Tu la contemplerais comme on contemple un lys,
Comme on contemple un ciel où se lève l'aurore,
Mains jointes,l'oeil en pleurs, ce ne serait encore,
Pour cet être au front pur à qui tu dois le jour,
Pas assez de respect et pas, assez d'amour!

Grave en ton jeune esprit, fils d' une noble femme,
Ces paroles qui sont comme l'adieu d'une âme;
Enfant, écoute-moi, pendant que je suis là.
Car l'oeil qui luit s'éteint, la bouche qui parla
Se ferme; nous vivons le temps de disparaître.
Enfant, je te le dis, je suis de ceux peut-être

Qu’on ne reverra plus, tant ils sont dans la nuit.
Ils vont enveloppés d’un tourbillon de bruit,
Meurtris, blessés, les yeux pleins de clartés sereines.
L’ouragan monstrtieux des fureurs et des haines,
Souffle qui vient d’en bas, courbe leur front pensif.
Leur âme vole, oiseau, de récif en récif.
Ils traversent le choc des diverses fortunes,
Et leur main se cramponne au marbre des tribunes,
Aux lois, à la patrie, aux colonnes du droit.
Plus le péril grandit,. plus leur devoir s’accroît;
Du flot toujours plus noir leur foi sort plus robuste.
Ils luttent pour le bien, pour l’honneur, pour le juste,
Pour le beau, pour le vrai, laissant saigner leurs coeurs.
On dit: Où s’en vont-ils? reviendront-ils vainqueurs?
Est-ce l’adversité qui sera la plus forte?
Et cependant le vent sinistre les emporte;
Puis on les perd de vue; et, bien longtemps après,
On lit au bord des mers leur nom sous un cyprès.

22 décembre 1853.

XX Je marchais;

Je marchais; j’entendais, comme tombait la nuit,
Des amants se parler dans l’ombre à petit bruit;
Des lèvres se cherchaient dans l’obscure feuillée;
Maint couple était assis dans l’herbe un peu mouillée;
Et moi, j’adorais Dieu qui, dans les bois charmants,
Pour le poète errant au milieu des amants,
Mêle à ce doux mystère entrevu sous des voiles
Le spectacle splendide et profond des étoiles.

30 octobre 1846.

XXI J’ai mené parfois dure vie,

J’ai mené parfois dure vie,
Proscrit, errant de lieux en lieux,
Triste et jétant un oeil d’envie
Au sépulcre mystérieux.

J’ai fait à pied de longues routes;
Marchant la nuit, craignant les voix,
Plus rempli d’ombres et de doutes
Que la bête fauve des bois.

Ô vaincus des luttes civiles,
Malheur à vous! rien ne vous sert.
J’ai le soir traversé des villes
Comme on traverse le désert.
Seul, comptant mon chétif pécule,
Loin de tous mes amis absents,
Je regardais, au crépuscule,
Aller et venir les passants.

L’eau des chemins mouillait mes guêtres.
Las, je tombais sur de vieux bancs.
Je regardais par les fenêtres
La gaîté des âtres flambants.
J’entendais rire sous le chaume
Les paysans à leur repas;
Un étranger est un fantôme;
Les murs ne le connaissent pas.

Comme Tullius fuyant Rome,
J’allais, ignorant où j’étais,
Accueilli par ceux que je nomme,
Repoussé par ceux que je tais.

La bise sifflait sur ma tête.

Je fuyais sans. savoir comment,
Enveloppé de la tempête
Comme d’un sombre vêtement;

En guerre avec l’ombre où nous sommes,
Avec l’onde et le vent marin,
Avec le ciel, avec les hommes,
En paix avec mon coeur serein!
Mon âme ouvrait ses yeux funèbres;
Tout était noir, plus de ciel bleu;
Mais je voyais dans ces ténèbres
La lointaine blancheur de Dieu.

Je me disais dans ma souffrance:
— Pleurer est bon, mourir est beau.
Car la porte de l’espérance
S’ouvre avec la clef du tombeau.

Autour de moi, troupes ailées,
Les strophes dont l’essaim me suit.
Tourbillonnaient échevelées
Dans les souffles noirs. de la nuit.

J’étais sûr, à travers mes peines,
Que j’étais un juste aux abois,
Et quelles-rochers et les chênes
Ne pouvaient point haïr ma voix.

Je parlais -aux astres de flamme;
Se taire ne sied qu’au maudit;.
Et je faisais chanter mon âme
Pour que la nature entendît.

Je ne sais pas quelles réponses ,
Les vents faisaient à mes chansons.
J’ai mangé les mûres des ronces
Et j’ai dormi sous les buissons.

14 octobre 1853. Jersey.

XXII À DEUX ENNEMIS AMIS

Du bord-des mers sans fond qui jamais ne pardonnent,
Du milieu des éclairs ét des vents qui me donnent
Le spectacle effrayant de l’éternel courroux,.
Je vous le crie: Amis! réconciliez-vous.
Vous n’avez pas le droit de ne pas être frères:...
Moi, qui sais les fureurs du sort, les vents contraires,
Les chocs. inattendus, les luttes, sans pitié;
Je vous dis: Aimez-vous! la solide amitié
Ceint d’un-cercle d’acier l’homme, vase fragile.
Virgile aimait Horace, Horace aimait Virgile
Au point qu’en cette Rome, où l’oeil va les chercher,
On ne distinguait plus, en voyant se toucher
Leurs têtes. dans la gloire intime et familière,
D’où venait le laurier et d’où venait.le lierre.

Toi, n’es-tu pas celui qui, songeant, écrivant,
Cerveau monde où sè meut tout un peuple vivant,
T’éclairant à ton gré du -jour que. tu préfères,
Du drame et-.du roman,fais tes deux hémisphères?
Toi, n’es-tu pas celui qui va, monte, descend,
Ne tiens-tu pas ta plume, au vol éblouissant,
Qui touche à tous les temps, qui perce tous les voiles,
Et jette sur Paris un-tourbillon d’étoiles?
Vous êtes deux noms chers qu’au monde nous offrons.
Les acclamations abondent sur vos fronts

Comme sur les palais s’abattent les colombes.
Dieu qui, pour vous créer ouvrit deux grandes tombes,
Pour allumer vos coeurs fit jaillir un éclair
Sur l’un, de Diderot, sur l’autre, de Schiller;
Et maintenant chacun de vous, dans son domaine,
Eclaire un des côtés de la grande âme humaine.
Puisque vous êtes forts, amis, vous êtes doux.
Vous êtes à vous deux la lumière; aimez-vous!

Vos bouches sur les coeurs, sur les foules conquises,
Dévident l’écheveau des paroles exquises;
Liez-vous l’un à l’autre avec ces chaînes d’or.
L’éloquence est richesse et l’amitié trésor.
Le flot s’apaise, ému, dès qu’il voit l’aube luire.
Voyez-vous seulement le temps de vous sourire,
Et vous vous comprendrez; vous le devez, étant
Ceux qui domptent le siècle, en régnant sur l’instant.
Revenons, tout le reste étant deuil ou chimère,
Aux cordialités titaniques d’Homère;
Apprenez à la foule, à qui manquent les dieux,
Et qui, dans son brouillard morne et fastidieux,
S’attriste et ne voit plus d’Olympe qu’où vous êtes,
Ce que c’est que le rire éclatant des poëtes.
Sur le char lumineux soyez le couple ardent.
Oui, vous vous comprendrez, rien qu’en vous regardant.
Si tout se comprenait, tout serait harmonie;
Tout serait gloire, azur, splendeur, joie infinie,
Amour; et le chaos n’est qu’un malentendu.

Dans ma nuit orageuse où je me sens mordu
Tantôt par la vipère et tantôt par l’hyène,
Laissez-moi me débattre avec la sombre haine.
C’est mon destin. Avant que mon front se courbât, J’ai commencé tout jeune, hélas! ce noir combat.
Jacob lutte avec l’Ange, et je lutte avec l’Ombre.
Ah! je prends pour moi seul les maux, les deuils sans nombre!
Que je sois seul saignant, tous étant radieux!
Votre accord charmera mon coeur gonflé d’adieux,
Mon âme que le sort brise et qui reste entière,
Et peut-être fera couler la larme altière
Qui pend depuis trois ans suspendue à mon cil.
Donnez-moi ce bonheur au fond de mon exil,
Donnez-moi cette joie au fond de ma tempête
De voir que rien ne manque à votre double fête,
De me dire: ils sont 1à dans le rayonnement,
Lui, l’athlète invaincu, lui, le vainqueur charmant!

De m’éblouir de loin, moi l’homme des ténèbres,
De vos enchantements chaque jour plus célèbres,
D’entendre les échos sans cesse vous grandir,
Et, par tous applaudis, vos deux noms s’applaudir!

Aimez-vous pour celui qui tous les deux vous aime.
Aimez-vous! que l’envie ,en devienne plus blême.
Jumeaux, redevenez frères à tous les yeux.
Et montrez.que le jour, superbe,, heureux, joyeux,
N’est pas sourd à la voix qui sort de la nuit sombre,
Montrez que les rayons veulent consoler l’ombre,
Vous quetout couronna, vous à qui tout sourit,
En mettant vos deux mains dans la main du proscrit.

21 décembre 1854.

XXIII D.G.D.G.

I

Elle s’est donc en allée,
Et se tait.
Ô noire voûte étoilée,
Rends-nous la grande âme ailée
Qui chantait!

Elle était de. ceux qu’attire
a maison.
L’autre année elle y vint luire,
Et m’éclaira d’un sourire L’horizon.

Paix à vous, bon coeur utile,
‘Beaux yeux clos,
Esprit splendide et fertile!
Elle aimait ma petite île,
Mes grands flots,

Ces champs de trèfle et de seigle,
Ce doux sol,
L’océan que l’astre règle,
Et mon noir rocher ou l’aigle
Prend son vol.

II

La vie à ces âmes fières
Ne plaît pas;
Car les vivants sont des pierres
Sur leurs fronts et des-poussières
Sous leurs pas.

Dieu, c’est la nuit que tu sèmes
En créant
Les hommes, ces noirs problèmes;
Nous sommes les masques blêmes
Du néant.

Nous sommes l’algue et la houle,
O semeur!
Nous flottons, le vent nous roule;
Toute notre oeuvre s’écroule
En rumeur.

Le mal tient les foules viles
Dans ses noeuds;
Multitudes puériles,
Nous faisons des bruits stériles
Ou haineux.

Nains errant sur des décombres,
Embryons,
Ébauches, fantômes, ombres,
Dans tes immensités sombres,
Nous crions.

Dieu! les hommes, têtes basses,
Yeux charnels,
Raillent l’abîme. où tu passes,
Tes profondeurs, tes.espaces Éternels!

Ils crachent sur le grand voile
Du ciel bleu;
Blâment tout, mer, barque et voile;
Insultent l’ombre et l’étoile,
L’âme et Dieu!

Ils insultent l’aube pure,

L’air vital,
Le beau, le vrai, la nature,
Et cette sombre ouverture:
L’idéal!

Ils insultent l’invisible,
Le cyprès,
Le sort dont ils sont la cible,
L’onde, et le frisson terrible
Des forêts.

Ils insultent le pontife,
La lueur,

L’être, saint hiéroglyphe,
Et l’énigme sous ta griffe,
Sphinx rêveur!

Leurs voix sont prostituées,
Jéhovah!
Quand l’aigle entend leurs huées,
Il regarde les nuées
Et s’en va!

III

Ô grande âme prisonnière,
Coeur martyr,
C’est l’aigle de ma tanière
Qui t’a montré la manière
De partir.

Pendant qu’assis sous les branches,
Nous pleurons,
Ame, tu souris, tu penches
Tes deux grandes ailes blanches
Sur nos fronts.

Et, du fond de nos abîmes,
Soucieux,
Nous te voyons sur les cimes,
Levant tes deux bras sublimes
Vers les cieux.

IV

Destin! gouffre aux vents contraires,
Aux flots sourds!
Oh! que d'urnes funéraires!
Ma fille, amis, parents, frères,
Joie, amours!

On luit, on brille, un beau rêve
Vous dit: viens!
Et voilà qu'un vent s'élève;
Le temps d'un flux sur la grève;
Et plus rien!

La bise éteint, brise, emporte
Le flambeau,
Et souffle, toujours plus forte,
Par-dessous la noire porte
Du tombeau.

Notre bonheur est livide,
Et vit peu.
Hélas! je me tourne avide
Vers le sépulcre, ce vide
Plein de Dieu.
Dieu, là, dans ce sombre monde
Met l'amour,
Et tous les ports dans cette onde,
Et dans cette ombre profonde
Tout le jour.

Ô vivants qui dans la brume,
Dans le deuil,
Passez comme un flot.qui fume,
Et n’êtes que de l’écume
Sur l’écueil,
Vivez dans les clartés fausses,
Expiez!
Moi, Dieu bon qui nous exauces!
Je sens remuer les fosses
Sous mes pieds.

Il est temps que je m’en aille
Loin du bruit,
Sous la ronce et la broussaille,
Retrouver ce qui tressaille
Dans la nuit.

Tous mes noeuds dans le mystère
Sont dissous.
L’ombre est ma patrie austère.
J’ai moins d’amis sur la terre Que dessous.

16 juillet 1855

XXIV UN SOIR

Parmi les étoiles sans nombre,
Mon esprit s’évanouissait;
Je vis une blancheur dans l’ombre.
C’était un ange qui passait.

Elle posa ses mains divines
Sur mon front sombre et soucieux...
O champs! ô vallons! ô collines!
O sereine beauté des cieux!’
Et ma bouche ardente et pâmée
Murmura: Viens! adorons-nous!
Vivons! et cette bien-aimée,
Pâle, tomba sur me’s genoux.
Que de fois j’ai dit sur les grèves:
O flots! vous êtes une voix.!
Que de fois j’ai rempli de rêves
L’étrange profondeur des bois!

Avril 1851.

XXV LETTRE DE L’EXILÉ ARRIVANT DANS LE DÉSERT

Tu me dis: Que fais-tu? Rien. Je suis seul. Je rêve.
Je vais voir si quelqu’un me connaît sur la grève.
Je cherche à rencontrer dans ces rudes forêts,
Dans ces monts, quelque ami tragique que j’aurais,
Quelque bon vieil écueil bien. battu de l’abîme,
Quelque sapin cassé d’une façon sublime;
Un roc ayant le deuil et n’ayant pas l’effroi.
Je parle à l’océan, et je lui dis: C’est moi.
Alors nous nous mettons àcauser, lui plein d’ombre,
Mêlant un conseil grave à ses rumeurs sans nombre,
Et redisant toujours dans l’écume et les vents
La même phrase: Aimez, car vous souffrez, vivants!
Moi, songeur et distrait par la barque qui vogue.
Le tonnerre souvent prend part au dialogue;
Cette interjection, l’éclair, tombe du ciel.

La mer me plaît; on sent sa vertu dans son fiel.
Elle assainit la terre à force d’amertume.
Je l’aime. Aussi l’aller trouver est ma coutume
Quand je sens dans mon coeur monter sous le ciel bleu
L’âpre indignation qui questionne Dieu.
Elle me calme avec son souffle de nuée.
Ma douleur dans ses flots s’endort diminuée.

On médite en voyant des prodiges entiers.
Je fraternise avec le gouffre volontiers..
Les proscrits sont des gens qui content leurs affaires
Aux vagues dans l’orage et dans la nuit aux sphères;
Nous ouvrons nos coeurs fiers et forts, quoique mouvants,
A ces premiers venus farouches, tous les vents;
Et l’on finit par prendre une altière habitude
De tutoiement avec la sombre solitude.

De là l’apaisement. O vastes cieux vainqueurs!
L’autan passe, arrachant l’écume de nos coeurs;
Et quand sur notre haine et sur notre colère
S’est d’en haut répandu l’immense bruit polaire,
Quand la foudre nous a regardés dans les yeux,
Que reste-t-il d’un homme honnête et furieux?
Un sage. On sonde mieux le mystère où nous sommes
Devant ces grands flots noirs, moins troubles que les hommes;
On sent qu’en ce chaos un monde est à l’essai;
On confronte, attentif, le faux gouffre et le vrai,
La trahison dé l’homme et l’embûche de l’onde;
On contemple les plis de l’eau rauque et profonde,
On s’ouvre à la candeur comme eux à l’alcyon,
Et l’on devient pensif dans la proportion
Du prodige, et l’on sent que le courroux s’efface
Sous ce flot calme au fond et fauve à la surface.
On croit voir dans son âme obscure le lever
D’un astre; et c’est cela qui vient de m’arriver.

J’ai vu tant de néants, tant d’hommes et de choses,
Tant d’immobilités, tant de métamorphoses,
Que je suis las. Après tous ces chiens, tous ces loups,
Dupin, Montalembert, Veuillot, Proudhon, Falloux,
Après l’oison qui glousse, après le chat qui grince,
Après ce reître, après ce juge, après ce prince,
Après ces nains, ces fous, ces gueux, ces intrigants,
J’ai le goût des éclairs, j’aime les ouragans,
J’entre dans cette énorme et formidable fête,
L’onde, et je me repose, ami, dans la tempête.

26 août 1852.

XXVI Ô doux êtres!

Ô doux êtres! ma joie et mon amour sacré!
Que ce jour sera triste où je vous quitterai!
Ce sera comme un soir qui tombe:
Pendant que je dirai, la sueur sur le front:
Que vont-ils devenir sur-la terre? ils diront:
Que deviendra-t-il dans la tombe?

XXVII À l’heure où

À l’heure où le soleil se couche,
Quand j’erre au fond des bois, les soirs,
Seul, songeant, souriant, farouche,
Effaré sous les arbres noirs;

Ou quand, près du foyer qui flambe,.
Laissant mes livres cent fois lus,
Croisant ma jambe sur ma jambe,
Je regarde et n’écoute plus;

Vous dites: Qu’a-t-il donc? Il rêve!
Oui. Je rêve! -C’est que je voi
L’ombre où l’astre idéal se leve
Croître et monter autour de moi!

C’est. qu’en. cette. nuit où s’efface ,
La clarté faite pour nos yeux,
Je sens approcher de ma face
Dès visages mystérieux!.

C’est qu’il me vient des apparences,
Dés formes, des voix, des soupirs,.
Du monde où sont cès espérances ,
Que nous-appelons souvenirs!

C’est que des espaces funèbres
S’oùvrent à mes sens convulsifs;
C’est q`ue je sens dans ces ténèbres
Môn pere et ma mère pensifs!

C’est que je sens passer un ange,
Toi, ma fille, âme au front charmant,
A je ne sais quel souffle étrange
Dont je frissonne doucement!

C’est que, sous nos plafonds paisibles
Comme dans nos bols pleins d’effroi,
Les morts présents, mais invisibles,
Fixent leurs yeux profonds sur moi!

6 janvier 1850.

XXVIII J’aspire à m’enfouir sous les arbres

J’aspire à m’enfouir sous les arbres. Je suis
Comme ces animaux sauvages que des hommes

Ont pris, saisis, traînés dans la ville où nous sommes,
Et qui, dans une cage enfermés tristement,
Voyant la face humaine avec étonnement,
Font tous les mouvements d’un serpent qui se sauve,
A travers les barreaux passent leur museau fauve,
Et sombres, effarés, pensifs, cherchent à voir
Quelque taillis épais, quelque buisson bien noir,
Un trou profond caché dans un fouillis champêtre,
Où tout a coup dans l’ombre ils puissent disparaître

XXIX À JEANNE

Je suis triste; le sort est dur; tout meurt, tout passe;
Les êtres innocents marchent dans de la nuit;
Tu n'en sais rien; tu ris d'écouter dans l'espace
Ce qui chante, et de voir ce qui s'épanouit;
Toi, tu ne connais pas le destin; tu chuchotes
On ne sait quoi devant l'Ignoré; tu souris
Devant l'effarement des sombres don Quichottes
Et devant la sueur des pâles Jésus-Christs.
Tu ne sais pas pourquoi je songe, pourquoi tombe
Kesler à Guernesey, Ribeyrolle au Brésil;
Jeanne, tu ne sais pas ce que c'est que la tombe,
Jeanne, tu ne sais pas ce que c'est que l'exil.
Certes, si je pensais que j'assombris ton âme,
Je ne te dirais point toutes ces choses-là;
Mais, vois-tu, bien qu'avril dore à sa pure flamme
Ton front, que Dieu pour moi tout exprès étoila, Quoique le ciel ait l'aube et mon coeur ton sourire,
Jeanne, la vie est morne, et l'on gémit parfois;
Puisque tu n'as qu'un an, je puis bien tout te dire,
Tu comprends seulement la douceur de ma voix.

16 août 1870

XXX Si dans ce grand Paris,

Si dans ce grand Paris, ô charmante infirmière
Qui jetez dans notre ombre un regard de lumière,

Quelque-mitraille ou quelque obus, présent de roi,
Me fait l’insigne honneur de s’abattre sur moi,
Ou si quelque hulan m’octroie un coup de lancé,
Je ne me ferai pas porter à l’ambulance
Où votre pitié douce accueille le blessé,
Où sur tant de douleurs votre oeil tendre est baissé;
Je n’irai point, de peur, infirmière adorable,
En m’en allant guéri, de sortir incurable.

XXXI CALOMNIÉ

Un trop lourd projectile a peine à s’élever;
Trop d’intervalle empêche un caillou d’arriver;
Une sphère, lapide, en vain, une autre sphère.
Sachez que le premier grimaud venu peut faire
Des mensonges abjects qui jusqu’au soir vivront,
Mais qu’il est malaisé de jeter un affront,
Assez haut pour qu’il aille atteindre un honnête homme.
Un gueux se fait payer, il empoche la somme;
Puis calomnie. Eh bien, nul effet. Voyez-vous,
Celui qui se sent juste, et qui, sévère, est doux,
Qui n’a jamais fait m’al qu’au mal, qui fut fidèle
A l’honneur comme l’est à son nid l’hirondelle,
Qui pour combattre et puis faire grâce, a vécu,
Qui n’a jamais dit Non à l’ennemi vaincu,
Qui veut tous les devoirs et ne veut aucun rôle,
Peut défier la haine; et c’est pourquoi tel drôle,
Vil, fait pour les bas-fonds et non pour les sommets,
Qui m’insulte toujours, ne m’offense jamais:

XXXII SOUFFREZ, ô PRÉCURSEURS!

Malheur dans les bas-fonds, malheur sur les hauteurs,
A vous, penseurs, esprits, marcheurs, libérateurs!
L’ignorance ne sait que jeter de la haine;
L’esclave mord la main qui vient briser sa chaîne;
L’enfer punit quiconque a rêvé paradis.
Nous étions les proscrits, nous étions les maudits;

Et cinq ans, et dix ans, et vingt ans nous vécûmes
D’outrages, de fureurs, de cris, d’affronts, d’écumes;
Tous; ceux-ci dans l’exil, ceux-là sous les barreaux.
Le progrès est un char que fouettent lès bourreaux,
Qui pour ornière a l’ombre et le sang, et pour roue
Le martyre. Qu’un homme aux hommes se dévoile,
Hélas, c’est la première énigme qu’ici-bas
L’homme ne comprend pas et ne devine pas;
C’est ce qui fait grandir les épines aiguës,
C’est ce qui fait pousser dans l’ombre les ciguës.

XXXIII L’aquilon change,

L’aquilon change, et met la poupe où fut la proue;
Il ne faut pas beaucoup de temps pour qu’une roue
Tourne, et pour que le bas soit en haut, et souvent
Ce qui semble tombé riposte en se levant:
Nous reprendrons nos droits,-nos terres, nos provinces;
Et le vent qu’il fera ce jour-là, rois et princes,
Allez le demander au moulin de Valmy!
Oh! je le vois, ce jour splendide! on a dormi,
On s’éveille; la France est là, redevenue
Déesse; et son front rit, et son épée est nue;
Cette fumée en fuite au loin, c’est l’ennemi.
Le firmament, car Dieu ne fait rien à demi,
Pose son arc-en-cièl profond sur nos deux villes.
Non, je ne pense pas que les rois soient tranquilles.
Je n’ai plus qu’une joie au monde, leur souci.
Je dis presque aux bourreaux de mon pays.: merci!
Et puisque d’un enfer peut naître une genèse,
Je ne suis pas fâché d’être dans la fournaise;
Purification du feu, je te bénis!
Les phénix lumineux ont les brasiers pour nids;
L’âme s’augmente et luit dans la flamme; est esclave
Tout ce qui ne sort pas vivant du bain de lave,
Et je trouve l’épreuve utile Croîs, lion.
J’attends.

Rois, consommez votre rébellion.

XXXIV AVE, DEA; MORITURUS TE SALUTAT

La mort et la beauté sont deux choses profondes
Qui contiennent tant d’ombre et d’azur qu’on dirait
Deux soeurs également terribles et fécondes
Ayant la même énigme et le même secret;

Ô femmes, voix, regards, cheveux noirs, tresses blondes,
Brillez, je meurs! ayez l’éclat, l’amour, l’attrait,
Ô perles que la mer mêle à ses grandes ondes,
O lumineux oiseaux de la sombre forêt!

Judith, nos deux destins sont plus près l’un de l’autre
Qu’on ne croirait, à voir mon visage et le vôtre;
Tout le divin abîme apparaît dans vos Yeux,

Et moi, je sens le gouffre étoilé dans mon âme;
Nous sommes tous les deux voisins du ciel, madame,
Puisque vous êtes belle et puisque je suis vieux.

XXXV ENVOI

Tu sais; ami rêveur qui vois ma destinée,
Quelle meute envieuse, âpre, immonde, acharnée,
Jappe après mes talons, et m’insulte, et me mord,
Comme si j’étais grand, comme si j’étais fort!
Mets sous clef ce poéme, et n’en parle à personne.
Cette meute surgit dès que mon clairon sonne,
Et rentre dans sa nuit sitôt qu’il a cessé.
Je. veux la condamner au silence forcé. -
Pour quelque temps du moins. -Cet oubli qui lui pèse
— Me plaît, et je me tais afin qu’elle se taise.

25 août 1843. Cauterets.

XXXVI Pygmée et Myrmidon,

Pygmée et Myrmidon, c’est haine et calomnie.
Avoir l’envie au coeur, aux lèvres l’ironie,

12 juillet.

Poète, c’est un peu l’habitude d’en bas.
Après tant de travaux, après tant de combats,
L’affront Vassiègé; ils sont toute une multitude
T’insultant dans ton deuil et dans ta solitude;
Mais toi que le destin absorbe, tu n’as point
Le temps de voir ces gens qui te montrent le poing.
Les tumultes ont beau t’entourer, tu médites.
Toutes tes oeuvres sont par Zoïle maudites;
Le fauve acharnement de la haine est sur toi.
Toi qui jadis planais archange, et qu’une loi
Met sur la terre, au fond des visions funèbres,
Prisonnier dans la cage énorme des ténèbres,
Toi, l’aigle échevelé de l’ombre, le banni
Tombé d’un infini dans un autre infini,
Du zénith dans l’abîme et du ciel dans ton âme,
Éclairé, mais brûlé par ta profonde flamme,
Rongé du noir regret du firmament vermeil,
Toi dont l’oeil fixe fait un reproche au soleil
Et semble demander. de quel droit l’on t’exile,
Toi qui n’as plus que toi pour cime et pour asile,
Tu ne te distrais point de ton rêve éternel;
Et, pendant qu’émus comme autour d’un criminel,
Les passants te voudraient tuer, et qu’on te hue,
Et qu’à tes pieds, grondant et grinçant, la cohue
Bourdonne avec le bruit d’orage d’un essaim,
Et t’appelle idiot, traître, avare, assassin,
Incendiaire, esprit méchant, âme mauvaise,
Voleur et meurtrier, clameur que rien n’apaise
Comme si la fureur sans cesse grossissait,

Pensif, tu ne sais pas au juste ce que c’est.

24 mai 1874.

== XXXVII Je la revois, après vingt ans,==

Je la revois, après vingt ans, l’île où Décembre
Me jeta, pâle naufragé.
La voilà! c’est bien elle. Elle est comme une chambre
Où rien encor n’est dérangé.

Oui, c’était bien ainsi qu’elle était; il me semble
Qu’elle rit, et que j’aperçois
Le même oiseau qui fuit, la même fleur qui tremble,
La même aurore dans les bois;

Il me semble revoir, comme au fond d’un mirage,
Les champs, les vergers, les fruits mûrs,
Et dans le firmament profond; le même orage,
Et la même herbe au pied des murs,

Et le même toit blanc qui m’attend et qui m’aime,
Et, par delà le flot grondeur,
La même vision d’un éden, dans la même
Éblouissante profondeur.

Oui, je la reconnais cette grève enchantée,
Comme alors elle m’apparut,
Rive heureuse où l’on. cherche Acis et Galatée,
Où l’on trouve Booz et Ruth;

Car il n’est pas de plage, ou de montagne, ou d’île,
Parmi les abîmes amers,
Mieux faite pour cacher les roses de l’idylle
Sous là tragique horreur des mers.

Ciel l’ océan! c’était cette même nature,

Gouffre de silence et de bruit,
Ayant on ne sait quelle insondable ouverture
Sur la lumière et sur la nuit.

Oui, c’étaient ces hameaux, oui, c’étaient ces rivages;
C’était ce même aspect mouvant,
La même âcre senteur des bruyères sauvages,
Les mêmes tumultes du vent;

C’était la même vague arrachant aux décombres
Les mêmes dentelles d’argent;
C’étaient les mêmes blocs jetant les mêmes ombres
Au même éternel flot changeant;

C’étaient les mêmes caps que l’onde ignore et ronge,
Car l’âpre mer, pleine de deuils,
Ne s’inquiète pas, dans son effrayant songe,
De la figure des écueils;

C’était la même fuite immense des nuées;
Sur ces monts, où Dieu vient tonner,
Les mêmes cimes d’arbre, en foule remuées,
N’ont pas fini de frissonner;

C’était le même souffle ondoyant dans les seigles;
Je crois revoir sur l’humble pré
Les mêmes papillons avec les mêmes aigles
Sur l’océan démesuré;

C’était le même flux couvrant l’île d’écume,
Comme un cheval blanchit le mors;

C’était le même azur, c’était la même brume,
Et combien vivaient, qui sont morts!

8 août 1872.

En arrivant à Jersey.

XXXVIII Je ne m’arrête pas,

Je ne m’arrête pas, jamais je ne séjourne;
Quand le flot, mon témoin,
Tremble, je crie au vent: Marchons! quand le vent tourne,
Je dis au flot: Plus loin!

Et j’avance, et toujours plus d’ouragan m’emporte...
Homme! aime tes amours,
Assieds-toi sur le banc de pierre de ta porte,
Et laisse fuir les jours!

Heureux celui qui vit stupide en sa demeure,
Et qui, chaque soir, voit
Le même oiseau de nuit sortir à la même heure
Du même angle du toit!

13 août 1872.

XXXIX Je vais dans la fureur du gouffre,

Je vais dans la fureur du gouffre, dans l’écume,
Pâle, écoutant les mots
Que disent, pleins d’horreur, la sibylle dans Cume
Et l’apôtre à Pathmos.

Quand je passe en cette ombre, où, fuyant la tempête,
Nul encor n’a passé,
L’abîme est sous mes pieds, la foudre est sur ma tête,
On dit: C’est l’insensé!

Tandis que l’ouragan qui parfois semble rire,
Puis éclate en sanglots,
Joue avec les agrès comme avec une lyre,
Un chant noir sort des flots.

Et moi sur qui le deuil, la haine, la vieillesse,
L’onde et le vent trompeur,
S’acharnent, je poursuis mon chemin, et je laisse
Les autres avoir peur.
Pourtant vous ne pouvez empêcher que je songe,
Las du sort par moments,
Et de l’ombre que laisse aux âmes le mensonge
De tant d’événements.

Le destin m’a jeté de tempête en tempête,
De récif en récif;
Jamais mon coeur saignant n’a fait courber ma tête;
Mon courroux est pensif.

J’ai traversé les pleurs, les haines, les veuvages,
Ce qui mord, ce qui nuit.
Noir nocher, j’ai connu tous les âpres rivages
Du deuil et de la-nuit.

J’ai lutté; j’ai subi la sinistre merveille
Des abîmes mouvants;
Et jamais on ne vit dispersion pareille
D’une âme à tous les vents:

Je suis presque prophète et je suis presque apôtre;
Je dis: C’est bien! Allons!
Mais je ne voudrais pas de ce sort pour un autre,
O fauves aquilons!

V. H. 13 août 1872.

XL Omnia vidit

Omnia vidit Eversa.
(JUVÉNAL)

Un vieillard est souvent puni de sa vieillesse
Par le peu de clarté que le destin lui laisse.
Survivre est un regret poignant, presque un remords.
Voir sa ville brûlée-et tous, ses enfants morts
Est un malheur possible, et.l’aïeul solitaire
Tremble et pleure de s’être attardé sur la terre.
Que te sert, ô Priam, d’avoir vécu si vieux?
Hélas! tu vois tomber la foudre sur tes dieux.

XLI Vous demandez à quoi je rêve?

Vous demandez à quoi je rêve?
Je me souviens qu'un jour, jadis,
A l'heure où l'aube qui se lève
Ouvre ses yeux de paradis,

Je passais, parmi des colombes,
Dans un cimetière, jardin
Qui, couvrant de roses les tombes,
Cache le néant sous l'éden.

J'errais dans cette ombre insalubre
Où les croix noires sont debout...
Une grande pierre lugubre
Se mit à vivre tout à coup.

C'était, dans l'herbe et les pervenches,
Un sépulcre sombre et hautain
Qu'effleura soudain sous les branches
Un furtif éclair du matin;

II était là sous une yeuse,
Triste, et comme pour l'apaiser,
La jeune aube mystérieuse
Donnait à ce spectre un baiser.

Et cela rendit, ô merveille,
La vie au sépulcre hagard.
Ce sourd-muet ouvrit l'oreille
Et cet aveugle eut un regard.

En voyant venir la lumière,
Comme au désert le noir Sina,
Ce sinistre linceul de pierre
Où pleure une âme, rayonna.

Et je le vis, dans ,1e bois sombre,
Dans le champ pestilentiel,
Comme transfiguré dans l'ombre
Par cette dorure du ciel.

Ce n'était plus la dalle affreuse,
Qui se dresse hors de tout bruit,
Sous laquelle un gouffre se creuse,
Plein d'étoiles, mais plein de nuit;

— Ce n'était plus la tombe où rêve
Un vague fantôme banni,
Abîme où le fini s'achève,
Borne où-commence l'infini.

Grâce à l'aube, au pied du vieil arbre,
Dans la ronce et dans le genêt,
Le froid granit, l'orgueilleux marbre
Que le ver de terre connaît,

Illuminait ces bois funèbres,
Craints de l'homme, aimés du corbeau,
Et, calme, avait dans les ténèbres
On ne sait quel air de flambeau.

Il cessa d'être le fantôme.
Le liseron fut ébloui,
Et l'oeillet lui jeta son baume;
Les fleurs n'eurent plus peur de lui.

Les roses que nos yeux admirent
Baisèrent son socle détruit,
Et les petits oiseaux se mirent
A chanter autour de sa nuit.

Noble femme aux vaincus fidèle,
Votre sourire frais et beau,

Quand il luit sur moi, rappelle
Cette aurore sur ce tombeau.

V. H. 5 septembre.

XLII Vous qui, vainqueurs,

Vous qui, vainqueurs, avez mis, depuis vingt-cinq ans,
Maîtres sanglants qui rendrez compte,
Votre nuit sur la France en deuil, et sur les camps
Votre gloire qui leur fait honte,

Toi, prêtre, toi, soldat, chef des sombres exploits,
Que suit des yeux l'histôire triste;
Toi, juge escamoteur, qui du fourreau des lois
Tiras le poignard du sophiste,

Quand vous couvrez d'affronts haineux, de cris amers,
Et d'un tumulte de huées,

Cet homme qui longtemps, pensif au bord des mers,
Vécut le front dans les nuées,

Et qui, dans la candeur de ses calmes desseins,
Veut la justice égale et grande,
Avant de l'appeler défenseur d'assassins,
Attendez donc qu'il vous défende!
Tu nous regardes, Nuit, grande passante noire;
Tu ne dois pas beaucoup comprendre notre histoire,
Car elle est bien souvent plus sombre encor que toi.
Soyez homme d'honneur, de probité, de foi,
Vous serez l'ennemi public; dans la tempête
Risquez pour une idée auguste votre tête,
Et vous serez traité de la même façon
Que la poltronnerie et que la trahison;
Cet homme ose invoquer la pitié vénérable,
Il offre asile au faible, à bas le misérable!
Quoi donc! il s'interpose entre le meurtre et nous!
Il s'émeut en voyant des femmes à genoux,
Il s'indigne des morts que nous jetons aux fleuves,
Il plaint lés orphelins, il ne fait pas de veuves,

Il ose prononcer l'horrible mot Pardon!
A cette heure où chacun fait à tous l'abandon
De ces vieux préjugés: droit, liberté, clémence,
Où l'on sent que le monde antique recommence,
Lorsqu'on voit qu'un grand pas en arrière est sensé,
Et quand pour avenir on reprend le passé,
Il s'obstine, il soutient les vaincus sans relâche,
Il les défend, dût-on l'assassiner, le lâche! -

C'est ainsi qu'on raisonne à de certains moments.
Un joûr, voyant passer d'affreux événements, Voyant qu'au grand Paris on creusait une, fisse,
Ne croyant pas Dieu mort et la vérité fausse,
Ne. me figurant pas que tuer fût un droit,
Je me dressai, je dis: Le jour meurt, l'ombre croît,
Prenez garde! Au-dessus de vos fauves mêlées,
O noirs lutteurs, il est des choses étoilées,
La raison, le progrès, la patrie et l'honneur.
Le vainqueur est souvent son propre empoisonneur.
Arrêtez. L'amnistie est une fin sereine.
Soyez cléments.
Alors j'eus sur moi tant de haine,
Tant d'exécration, d'épouvante et d'horreur
Que je fus presque, ô Nuit, l'égal d'un empereur!

18 décembre 1874.

XLIV Ah! vous faites du froid

Ah! vous faites du froid devoir vôtre bonheur!
Ah! vous ne buvez pas l’oubli de votre honneur,
Et l’impudeur, l’orgie, et la honte,-à plein verre!
Ah! vous êtes prudent, économe, sévère,
Pour marcher le front haut, et c’est votre souci!
Vous ne voulez pas être un jour à la merci
Des gens qui font métier de tarifer une âme,
Et d’acheter tantôt l’homme, et tantôt la femme!
Ah! vous ayez présent à l’esprit l’affreux sort
De ceux que la faim sombre a, sous peine de mort,
Forcés d’être-valets et de se vendre au maître,
Et vous ne jetez pas l’argent par la fenêtre,
Eh bien! vous êtes pingre, avare, grigou,-rat,
Pire qu’un misérable et presque un scélérat!
Ladre! dit la catin. Pleutre! ajoute le prêtre.
La vertu vous est vice, et ne voulant pas être-
En ce temps de coeurs plats parlant un vil jargon, Arétin ou Dangeau, vous êtes Harpagon!

12 avril 1874.

XLV La haute honnêteté,

La haute honnêteté, c’est là toute ma gloire.
0 peuple, après ma mort tu mettras ma mémoire
Sur cet âpre sommet, le devoir accompli.
Et quand je serai là, quelqu’un contre l’oubli
Me défendra, quelqu’un de farouche, la haine.
Elle accourra, poussant des cris, sinistre et vaine,.
Avec le rauque essaim des affronts ténébreux;
Et tous ces monstres noirs se querellant entre eux,
Jour et nuit, calomnie, impudence, bassesse,
Tâcheront de me mordre-et grinceront sans cesse.
Dans l’Inde, quand d’affreux vautours sont aperçus

Le soir, planant en cercle et dans l’ombre au-dessus
De quelque cime sombre, on dit dans la campagne:
C’est parce qu’on a mis un mort sur la montagne.

15 décembre 1874.

XLVI L’enfant est très petit

L’enfant est très petit et l’aïeul est très vieux.
L’insulteur ne craint rien. Comme un ciel pluvieux
Verse l’ondée aux bois que l’orage secoue,
Cette main de vieillard a sur plus d’une joue
Autrefois élargi les sonores soufflets.
Mais à présent-les longs exils, le ciel anglais,
Et soixante-treize ans ont refroidi cet homme;
Calme, il dédaigne. A peine il sait comment se nomme
L’insulteur, pour avoir, lorsque juillet brilla,
Jadis aidé quelqu’un qui portait ce nom-là’26.
Rien de plus. Et qu’importe un jéune drôle immonde?
Qu’est-ce que cela fait qu’un laquais soit aù monde?
Qu’est-ce qu’un jappement de plus dans le chenil?
Qu’importe au sphinx rêveur dans les roseaux du Nil
Le glissemént sinistre et vague d’un reptile?
Les gueux peuvent sans peur faire aboyer leur style.
Voir passer un vieillard que le deuil accabla,
La bravoure du lâche est faite de cela.
Nul damer. Le gredin est à son aise infâme;
Il se répete, afin d’encourager son âme
Où beaucoup de prudence a l’audace aboutit,
Que l’aïeul est bien vieux et l’enfant bien petit.

31 mars 1875.

XLVII Je suis enragé.

Je suis enragé. J’aime et je suis un vieux fou.

— Grand-père? -Quoi? -Je veux m’en aller. -Aller où?
— Où je voudrai. -C’est bien. -Je veux sortir, grand-père.
— Sortons. -Grand-père? -Quoi? -Pleuvra-t-il? -Non, j’espère.
— Je veux qu’il pleuve, moi. -Pourquoi? -Pour faire un peu
Pousser mon haricot dans mon jardin.. -C’est Dieu
Qui fait la pluie. -Eh bien, je veux que Dieu la fasse.
— Tu veux! tu veux! -Grand-père? -Eh bien quoi? Si je casse

Mon joujou, le bon Dieu ne peut pas m’empêcher.
C’est donc moi le plus fort. -Parlons sans nous fâcher.
— Je ne me fâche pas. Je veux qu’il pleuve. -Ecoute,
Je te donne raison. -Il va pleuvoir? -Sans doute.
Viens, prenons l’arrosoir du jardinier Jacquot,
Et nous ferons pleuvoir. Où? -Sur ton haricot.

XLVIII ÉCHAPPÉ À L’ERREUR

Gouffres, m’entendez-vous? Me voyez-vous, écumes?
Je surnage. Longtemps, doux enfants, nous vécûmes,
Mes deux frères et moi, dans cet A B C D
D’imposture et d’erreur, dont l’homme a fait sa bible;
Mais c’est fini, j’en sors et je lutte, terrible
Et joyeux comme un évadé.

Nous sommes quelques-uns nageant dans l’ombre immense,
Éperdus; tout est piège, ignorance, inclémence;,
La mer n’a, pas un pli qui ne soit triste et noir;
L’écueil gémit; le vent pleure, la vague tremble;
La brume, c’est le doute; et par moments, il semble
Que l’abîme est au désespoir.

L’océan, ce despote, a l’autan pour ministre.
Je regarde au delà de l’horizon sinistre,
Je résiste à l’horreur du gouffre illimité;
Je vois plus loin que l’ombre et la haine et la guerre.
Comme Colomb criait à ses compagnons: Terre!
Je crie aux hommes: Vérité!

Et je vois Pythagore, Eschyle, esprits sublimes,
Job, Dante, âmes ayant l’habitude des cimes,
Thalès, Milton, planer dans l’obscur firmament.
Ainsi, malgré les chocs de l’onde et ses huées,
Une dispersion d’aigles ,dans les nuées
Tourbillonne superbement.

Prêtres, vous.n’avez pu m’engloutir dans vos songes;
Dieu ne m’a pas laissé noyer par vos mensonges,
J’avance, et je fais signe aux pâles matelots;
Je rapporte des mers la perle qu’on y trouve,
Je vis!L’évasion du naufrage se prouve
Par la tête au-dessus des flots.

4 mai 1878.

XLIX APRÈS L’HIVER

N’attendez pas de moi que je vais vous donner
Des raisons contre Dieu que je vois rayonner;
La nuit meurt, l’hiver fuit; maintenant la lumière,
Dans les champs, dans les bois, est partout la première.
Je suis par le printemps vaguement attendri.
Avril est un enfant, frêle, charmant, fleuri;
Je sens devant l’enfance et devant le zéphyre
Je ne sais quel bèsoin de pleurer et de rire;
Mai complète ma joie et s’ajoute à mes pleurs.
Jeanne, George, accourez, puisque voilà des fleurs.
Accourez, la forêt chante, l’azur se dore,
Vous n’avez pas le.droit d’être absents de l’aurore.
Je suis un vieux songeur et j’ai besoin de vous,
Venez! je veux aimer, être juste, être doux,
Croire, remercier confusément les choses,
Vivre sans reprocher les épines aux roses,
Ètre enfin un bonhomme acceptant le bon Dieu.
O printemps! bois sacrés! ciel profondément bleu!
On sent un ,souffle d’air vivant qui vous pénètre,
Et l’ouverture au loin d’une blanche fenêtre;
On mêle sa pensée au clair-obscur des eaux;
On a le doux bonheur d’être avec les oiseaux,.
Et de voir, sous l’abri des branches printanières,
Ces messieurs faire avec ces dames des. manières

26 juin 1878.

L Qu’es-tu, pèlerin?
— Qu’es-tu, pèlerin? -Je me nomme
Celui qui pleure. -En vérité,
Viens avec nous. -Je suis un homme
Par une main d’ombre arrêté.

— Viens! -Non. -Les ans t’ont fait débile.
Pourquoi, l’oeil ouvert à demi,
Restes-tu dans l’ombre, immobile?
— Une pierre me tient, ami.

— Ton âme de nuit est vêtue.
Seul, debout, n’as-tu pas l’effroi

D’un lent changement en statue?
— La terre sombre monte en moi.
— Que fais-tu là? Viens. Le soir tombe,
Le vent souffle en tes cheveux gris.
— J’attends que se rouvre une tombe
Où le bas de ma robe est pris.
26 août. Route d’Aix-la-Chapelle à Düren.

LI Le vieillard

Le vieillard chaque jour dans plus d'ombre s'éveille.
A chaque aube il est mort un peu plus que la veille.
La vie humaine, ce noeud vil,
Se défait lentement rongé par l'âme ailée;
Ce sombre oiseau lié veut prendre sa volée
Et casse chaque jour un fil.

Ô front blanc qu'envahit la grande nuit tombante,
Meurs! -Tour à tour sa voix, sa force succombante,
Son oeil où décroît l'horizon
S'éteignent, -ce sera mon destin et le vôtre! -
Comme on voit se fermer le soir l'une après l'autre
Les fenêtres d'une maison.

LII Tu rentreras comme Voltaire

Tu rentreras comme Voltaire
Chargé d’ans, en ton grand Paris;
Des Jeux, des Grâces et des Ris
Tu seras l’hôte involontaire;

Tu seras le mourant aimé;
On murmurera dès l’aurore,
A ton seuil à demi fermé,
Déjà! mêlé de: Pas encore!

Tu seras marmot et barbon;
Tu goûteras la joie honnête
D’être si bon qu’on te croit bête
Et si bête qu’on te croit bon.

I Lorsque ma main frémit

Lorsque ma main frémit si la tienne l'effleure,
Quand tu me vois pâlir, femme aux cheveux dorés,
Comme le premier jour, comme la première heure,
Rien qu'en touchant ta robe et ses plis adorés;
Quand tu vois, que les mots me manquent pour te dire
Tout ce dont tu remplis mon sein tumultueux;
Lorsqu'en me regardant tu sens que ton sourire
M'enivre par degrés et fait briller mes yeux;
Quand ma voix, sous le feu de ta douce prunelle,
Tremble en ma bouche émue, impuissante à parler,
Comme un craintif oiseau, tout à coup pris par l'aile,
Qui frissonne éperdu, sans pouvoir s'envoler;
Ô bel ange créé pour des sphères meilleures,
Dis, après tant de deuils, de désespoirs, d'ennuis,
Et tant d'amers chagrins et tant de tristes heures
Qui souvent font tes jours plus mornes que des nuits;
Oh, dis! ne sens-tu pas se lever dans ton âme
L'amour vrai, l'amour pur, adorable lueur,
L'amour, flambeau de l'homme, étoile de la femme,
Mystérieux soleil du monde intérieur!
Ne sens-tu point, dis-moi, passer sur ta paupière
Le souffle du matin, des ténèbres vainqueur?
Ne vient-il.pas des voix tout bas te dire:espère!
N'entends-tu pas un chant dans l'ombre de ton coeur?

Oh! recueille ce chant, âme blessée et fière!
Cette aube qui se lève en toi, c'est le vrai jour.
Ne crains plus rien! Dieu fit tes yeux pour la lumière,
Ton âme pour le ciel et ton coeur pour l'amour!

Regarde rayonner sur ton destin moins sombre
Ce soleil de l'amour qui pour jamais te luit,
Qui, même après la mort brille, sorti de l'ombre,
Qui n'a pas de couchant et n'aura pas de nuit!

9 novembre 1845.

II Oh! si vous existez, mon ange,

Oh! si vous existez, mon ange, mon génie,
Qui m’emplissez le coeur d’amour et d’harmonie,
Esprit qui m’inspirez, sylphe pur qu’en rêvant
J’écoute me parler à l’oreille souvent!
Avec vos ailes d’or volez à la nuit close
Dans l’alcôve qu’embaume une senteur de rose
Vers cet être charmant que je sers à genoux
Et qui, puisqu’il est femme, est plus ange que vous!
Dites-lui, bon génie, avec votré voix douce,
A cét être si cher qui parfois me repousse,
Que, tandis que la foule a le regard sur lui,
Que son sourire émeut le théâtre ébloui,
Que tous les coeurs charmés ne sont, tant on l’admire,
Qu’un orchestre confus qui sous ses pieds soupire,
Tandis que par moments le peuple transporté
Se lève tout debout et rit à sa beauté,
Il est ailleurs une âme, éperdue, enivrée,
Qui, pour mieux recueillir son image adorée,
Se cache dans la nuit comme dans un linceul,
Et qu’admiré de tous, il est aimé d’un seul!

Février 1833

III Vois-tu, mon ange,

Vois-tu, mon ange, il faut accepter nos douleurs.
L’amour est comme la rosée
Qui luit de mille feux et de mille couleurs
Dans l’’ombre où l’aube l’a posée.
Rien n’est plus radieux sous le haut firmament;
De cette goutte d’eau qui. rayonne un moment
N’approchez pas vos yeux que tant de splendeur charme;
De loin, c’était un. diamant,
De près, ce n’est plus qu’une larme.

Souffrons, puisqu’il le faut. Aimons et louons Dieu!
L’amour, c’est presque toute l’âme.
Le Seigneur aime à voir brûler sous le-ciel bleu
Deux coeurs, mêlant.leur double flamme.
Il fixe sur-nous tous son oeil calme et clément,
Mais parmi ces vivants qu’il voit incessamment
Marcher, lutter, courir, récolter ce qu’ils sèment,
Dieu regarde plus doucement
Ceux qui pleurent parce qu’ils aiment!

I0 janvier 1835.

IV Ce qu’en vous voyant si belle

Ce qu’en vous voyant si belle
Je sens d’extase et d’orgueil,
Respectueux et fidèle,
Je le dis à votre seuil.

Ce qu’en ma pensée éveille
Votre oeil si fier et si doux,
.Votre bouche-si vermeille,
Je le dis à vos genoux.

Ce que tu mets dans mon. âme,
Où toujours tu régneras,
D’amour,. d’ivresse et de flamme,
Je veux le dire en tes bras.

Décembre 1844.

V Vous m’avez éprouvé

Vous m’avez éprouvé par toutes les épreuves,
Seigneur. J’ai bien souffert. Je suis pareil aux veuves
Qui travaillent la nuit et songent tristement;
Je n’ai point fait le mal, et j’ai le châtiment;
Mon oeuvre est difficile et ma vie est amère.
Les choses que je fais sont comme une chimère.

Après le dur travail et la dure saison,
J’ai vu mes ennemis marcher sur ma moisson.
Le mensonge et la haine et l’injure avec joie
Ont mâché dans leurs dents mon nom comme une proie.
J’ai tout rêvé. Le doute a lassé ma raison.
L’ardente jalousie, âcre et fatal poison,
A dans mon coeur profond, qui brûle et se déchire,
Tué la confiance et le joyeux sourire.
J’ai vu, pâle et des yeux cherchant votre horizon,
Des cercueils adorés sortir de ma maison.
J’ai pleuré comme fils, j’ai pleuré comme père,
Et je tremble souvent par où tout autre espère.

Mais je ne me plains pas, et je tombe à genoux,
Et je vous remercie, ô maître amer et doux,
Car vous avez, Dieu bon, Dieu des âmes sincères,
Mis toutes les douleurs et toutes les misères
Sur moi, sur mon coeur sombre en vos mains comprimé,
Excepté celle-là, d’aimer sans être aimé!

23 juin 1843.

VI Sais-tu ce que Dieu dit

Sais-tu ce que Dieu dit à l’enfant qui va naître?
Quand cet humble regard s’entr’ouvre à notre jour,
Il lui dit: Va souffrir, va penser; va connaître;
Ame, perds l’innocence et rapporte l’amour! -

Oui, c’est là le secret. Oui, c’est là le mystère.
Quoi qu’on fasse, il n’est rien qu’on ne puisse blâmer,
On tombe à chaque pas qu’on fait sur cette terre,
Tout est rempli d’erreur, mais il suffit d’aimer.

Colombe, c’est l’amour qu’il faut que tu rapportes!
Après ce dur voyage, obscur, long, hasardeux,
Le ciel d’où nous venons peut nous rouvrir ses portes.
On en est sorti seul, il faut y rentrer deux.

19 juillet 1850.

VII Certe,

Certe, elle n’était pas femme et charmante en vain;
Mais le terrestre en elle avait un air divin;
Des flammes frissonnaient sur mes lèvres hardies;
Elle acceptait l’amour et tous ses incendies,
Rêvait au tutoiement, se risquait pas à pas,
Ne se refusait point et ne se livrait pas;
Sa tendre obéissance était haute et sereine;
Elle savait se faire esclave et rester reine,
Suprême grâce! et quoi de plus inattendu
Que d’avoir tout donné sans avoir rien perdu!
Elle était nue avec un abandon sublime
Et, couchée en un lit, semblait sur une cime.
À mesure qu’en elle entrait l’amour vainqueur,
On eût dit que le ciel lui jaillissait du coeur; -
Elle vous caressait avec de la lumière;
La nudité des pieds fait la marche plus fière
Chez ces êtres pétris d’idéale beauté;
Il lui venait dans l’ombre au front une clarté
Pareille à la nocturne auréole des pôles;
À travers les baisers, de ses blanches épaules
On croyait voir sortir deux ailes lentement;
Son regard était bleu d’un bleu de firmament;
Et c’était la grandeur de cette femme étrange
Qu’en cessant d’être vierge, elle devenait ange.

VIII ROMAN EN TROIS SONNETS

I

Fille de mon portier! l’Érymanthe sonore,
Devant vous, sentirait tressaillir ses pins verts;
L’Horeb, dont le sommet étonne l’univers,
Inclinerait son cèdre altier qu’un. peuple adore;.

Les docteurs juifs, quittant les talmuds entr’ouverts,
Songeraient; et les grecs, dans le temple d’Aglaure
Le long duquel Platon marche en lisant des vers, Diraient en vous voyant: Salut, déesse Aurore!

Ainsi palpiteraient les grecs et les hébreux,
Quand vous passez, les yeux baissés sous votre mante;
Ainsi frissonneraient sur l’Horeb ténébreux

Les cèdres, et les pins sur l’auguste Érymanthe;
Je ne vous cache pas que vous êtes charmante,
Je ne vous cache pas que je suis amoureux.

3 décembre.

II

Je ne vous cache pas que je suis amoureux,
Je ne vous cache pas que vous êtes charmante;
Soit; mais vous comprenez chue ce qui me tourmente,
C’est, ayant le coeur plein, d’avoir le gousset creux.
On fuit le pauvre ainsi qu’on fuyait le lépreux;
Pour Tircis sans le sou Philis est peu clemente,
Et l’amant dédoré n’éblouit point l’amante;
Il sied d’être Rothschild avant d’être Saint-Preux.

N’importe, je m’obstine; et j’ai l’audace étrange

D’être pauvre et d’aimer, et je vous veux, bel ange;
Car l’ange n’est complet que lorsqu’il est déchu;
Et je vous offre, Églé, &iletière étonnée,
Tout ce qu’une âme, helas, vers l’infini tournée,
Mêle de rêverie aux rondeurs d’un fichu.

9 décembre.

III

Une étoile du ciel me parlait; cette vierge
Disait: -« O descendant crotté des Colletets,
J’ai ri de tes sonnets d’hier où tu montais
Jusqu’à la blonde Eglé, fille de ton concierge.

«Églé fait -j’en pourrais jaser, mais je me tais -
Des rêves de velours sous ses rideaux de serge.
Tu perds ton temps. Maigris, fais des vers, brûle un cierge,
Chante-la; ce sera comme si tu chantais.

Un galant sans argent est un oiseau sans aile.
Elle est trop haut pour toi. Les poètes sont fous.
Jamais tu n’atteindras jusqu’à cette donzelle.” -

Et je dis à l’étoile, à.l’étoile aux yeux doux:
— Mais vous avez cent fois raison, mademoiselle!
Et je ferais bien mieux d’être amoureux de vous.

IO décembre.

IX CHANSON

Il suffit de bien peu de chose
Pour troubler l’ordre des saisons

Et cet azur dont se compose
La splendeur de nos horizons;

Ma bien-aimée,,il peut suffire,
Selon des lois que Dieu connaît,
Pour perdre ou sauver un empire,
D’un enfant qui meurt ou qui naît;

Il ne faut, au milieu de Rome
Et d’un peuple qui suit un char,
Qu’un peu de fer aux mains d’un homme
Pour ôter le monde à César.

Les petites causes sans peine
Produisent des effets bien grands;
Mais le plus hardi capitaine,
Mais le plus hautain des tyrans,

Mît-il en flamme Europe, Asie,
Troublât-il la terre et la mer,
N’ôtera pas sa fantaisie
Au doux rêveur qui veut aimer!.

17 mai 1846.

X HERMINA

J’atteignais l’âge austère où l’on est fort en thème,
Où l’on cherche, enivré d’on ne sait quel parfum,
Afin de pouvoir dire éperdument: Je t’aime!
Quelqu’un.

J’entrais dans ma treizième année. Ô féuilles vertes!
Jardins! croissance obscùre et douce du printemps!
Et j’aimais Hermina, dans l’ombre. Elle avait, certes, Huit ans.

Parfois, bien qu’elle fût à jouer occupée,
J’allais, muet, m’asseoir près d’elle, avec ferveur
Et je la regardais regarder sa poupée,
Rêveur.

Il est une heure étrange où l’on sent l’âme naître.
Un jour, j’eus comme un chant d’aurore au fond du coeur.
Soit, pensai-je! Avançons, parlons, c’est l’instant d’être Vainqueur.

Je pris un air profond, et jelui dis: -Minette, Unissons nos destins. Je demande ta main. - Elle me répondit par cette pichenette:
— Gamin!

22 juin 1878.

XI Oh! la femme et l’amour!

Oh! la femme et l’amour! inventions maudites!
Il n’est de gens heureux que les hermaphrodites!
Que nous dit-on que Dieu doit nous punir un jour?
Le diable, c’est la femme, et l’enfer, c’est l’amour!
O rage! être jaloux! surveiller une belle,
L’épier, et toujours laisser pendre sur elle
L’heure où l’on ne vient pas, mais où l’on peut venir!
Se rider par le front, par le coeur rajeunir!
Compter ses cheveux gris! faire mille sots rôles!
Voir reluire autour d’elle un tas de jeunes drôles!
N’oser rien accorder, n’oser rien refuser!
Être heureux pour un signe et fou pour un baiser!
Porter les éventails durant les promenades!
La suivre en se cachant entre les colonnades!
Oh! que l’homme amoureux est un triste animal!
Puis la rupture, hélas! qui se ressoude mal,
Le raccommodement, la querelle, la brouille,
Sur l’amour qui vieillit épaississent leur rouille!
Ou, si l’on aime encor, le soir, pour son péché,
Mordu de jalousie, errant, effarouché,
On va grincer des dents parmi les sérénades;
Ou bien on la conduit, parée, aux pasquinades
Pour la faire manger par les regards d’autrui!
Puis les petites voix: -Vous êtes aujourd’hui
Biên maussade! -(On enrage!) -Oh non! ma souveraine!
— Conduisez-moi ce soir au jardin de la reine!
Et puis un doux sourire, et puis la trahison!
Je n’en veux plus! adieu l’amour! j’ai ma raison!
C’est vil! c’est dégradant! c’est affreux! c’est infâme!
Je ne veux de ma vie approcher d’une femme!

Que diriez-vous si Pierre en ces mots vous parlait:
— C’est un malheur de voir, car le monde est fort laid.
Les lunettes parfois grossissent fort les choses.

Les yeux craignent le froid, le chaud, les amauroses,
Les fraîcheurs, les amours trop vifs ou trop rassis,
Sans compter l’ophtalmie et la trichiasis.
Si quelqu’un, dans un duel pour des filles qu’on lorgne,
Vous crève un oeil, cela suffit pour qu’on soit borgne.
L’oignon vous fait pleurer, et quand il fait du vent,
La poussière dans l’oeil vous éntre fort souvent;
Pour peu qu’on boive un coup, on s’expose à voir double.
Un trop grand jour vous blesse, un trop faible vous trouble;
Voir clair est un péril étrange et sérieux.
Fort bien: je vais me faire arracher les deux yeux!

XII J’étais le songeur qui pense

J’étais le songeur qui pense,
Elle était l’oiseau qui fuit
Je l’adorais en silence,
Elle m’aimait à grand bruit.
Quand dans quelque haute sphère
Je croyais planer ,vainqueur,
Je l’entendais en bas faire
Du vacarme dans mon coeur.

Mais je reprenais mon songe
Et je l’adorais toujours,
Crédule au divin mensonge
Des roses et des amours.

Les profondeurs constellées,
L’aube, la lune qui naît,
Amour, me semblaient mêlées
Aux rubans de son bonnet.

Dieu pour moi; sont-ce des fables?
Avait mis dans sa beauté
Tous les frissons ineffables
De l’abîme volupté. -’

Je rêvais un ciel étrange
Pour notre éternel hymen.
— Qu’êtes-vous? criais-je; un ange?
Moi! disait-elle, un gamin.

Je sentais, ame saisie
Dans les cieux par un pinson,
S’effeuiller ma poésie
Que becquetait sa chanson.

Elle me disait: -Écoute,
C’est mal, tu me dis vous! fi! -
Et la main se donnait toute
Quand le gant m’aurait suffi.

Me casser pour elle un membre,
C’était mon désir parfois.
Un jour je vins dans sa chambre,
Nous devions aller au bois,

Je comptais la voir bien mise,
Chaste comme l’orient;
Elle m’ouvrit en chemise,
Moi tout rouge,-elle riant.

Je ne savais que lui dire,
Et je fus contraint d’oser;
Je ne voulais qu’un sourire,
Il fallut prendre un baiser.

Et ma passion discrète
S’évanouit sans retour;
C’est ainsi que l’amourette
Mit à la porte l’amour.

12 avril 1855.

XIII L’AMOUR VIENT EN LISANT CHANSON

Madeleine
Et moi, lisions près du feu
Cette histoire: « En Aquitaine,
«Un page aimait une reine...
«Le père était duc, d’Athène, «Cordon bleu. -»

— Sois ma. femme!. - Lui disais-je. Oh! charmant jeu!
Amour! dans mon coeur, madame,
Votre céil voyait une flamme;
Moi, je voyais dans votre âme
Le ciel bleu.

Doux mystère!
Mots furtifs! timide aveu!
Le livre aidant, j’osai plaire.
Mais le bonhomme de père
S’écria plein de colère:
Ventrebleu!

Ce tapage
Effraya la belle un peu.
Mais nous tournâmes la page;
Malgré son mince équipage,
La reine épousa le page;
Conte bleu.

L’hirondelle
Nous dit bonjour, puis adieu.
Hélas! l’amour vient comme elle,
Et comme elle, à tire d’ailé,
Il s’enfuit, l’amour fidèle,
Oiseau bleu.

22 novembre 1853.

XIV Elle vit

Elle vit que j’étais en train de lire Homère.
Mes yeux étaient remplis de l’immense chimère
D’Achille, et des combats que j’entendais, hennir.
— Qu’est-ce que tu fais là,? Veux-tu-bien t’en venir!
Dit-elle; mais tu n’es qu’une bête! et la preuve,
C’est que tu ne vois pas que j’ai ma robe neuve.
Nous allons à Verrière, et nous y mangerons
De ces fraises qu’on trouve avec les liserons.
Vous serez sage. Ah çà! pas, de vilaines choses.
Figure-toi qu’on dit que c’est tout plein de roses!
Tu choisis bien ton temps pour lire un vieux bouquin! -

Je me levai, je mis ma veste de nankin; ,
Et Suzon m’emmena, foulant sous sa bottine
Lemnos, Egialée et la roche Erythine.

13 août 1859.

XV Vous ne la fuyez pas, oiseaux,

Vous ne la fuyez pas, oiseaux, petits farouches,
Car elle est votre soeur dans ce monde âpre et vain,

Elle a pour ce qui sort des âmes et des. bouches
Votre dégoût divin.

Elle semble un rayon qui ploierait sous de l’ombre.
On se dit en voyant ce nimbe, ce parfum,
Cette grâce au milieu de nos laideurs sans nombre:
Peut-elle aimer quelqu’un?

Oh! comme parmi vous elle marche, l’altière!
Elle dédaigne, esprit ailé, le ver qui fuit,
Et, lyre, la rumeur, et, souffle, la matière,
Et, lumière, la nuit.

Quand, seuls, au fond des bois nous nous perdons ensemble,
Je lui dis: j’aime! avec mon regard le plus doux,
Elle répond: je hais. Et, voyant que je tremble, Elle ajoute: Pas vous.

2 juillet.

XVI COMMENCEMENT D’UNE ILLUSION

Il pleut; la brume est épaissie;
Voici novembre et ses rougeurs,
Et l’hiver, effroyable scie
Que Dieu nous fait, à nous songeurs.

L’abeille errait, l’aube était large,
L’oiseau jetait de petits cris,
Les moucherons sonnaient la charge
À l’assaut des rosiers fleuris.

C’était charmant. Adieu ces fêtes,
Adieu la joie, adieu l’été!
Adieu le tumulte des têtes
Dans le rire et dans la clarté!

Adieu les bois où le vent lutte,
Où Jean, dénicheur de moineaux,
Jouait aussi bien de la flûte
Qu’un grec de l’île de Tinos!

Il faut rentrer dans la grand’ville
Qu’Alceste laissait à Henri;
Où la foule encor serait vile
Si Voltaire n’avait pas ri.

Noir Paris! tas de pierres morne
Qui, sans Molière et Rabelais,
Ne serait encor qu’une borne
Portant la chaîne des palais!

Il faut rentrer au labyrinthe
Des pas, des carrefours, des moeurs,
Où l’on sent une sombre crainte
Dans l’immensité des rumeurs.

Je regarderai ma voisine
Puisque je n’ai plus d’autre fleur!
Sa vitre vague où se dessine
Son profil, divin de pâleur,

Son réchaud où s’enfle la crème,
Sa voix qui dit encor maman,
Gare! c’est le seuil d’un poème,
C’est presque le bord d’un roman.

Ma voisine est une ouvrière,
Au front de neige, aux dents d’émail,
Qu’on voit tous les soirs en prière
Et tous les matins au travail.

Cet ange ignore que j’existe,
Et, laissant errer son oeil noir,
Sans le savoir me rend très triste
Et très joyeux sans le vouloir.

Elle est propre, douce, fidèle,
Et tient de Dieu, qui la bénit,
Des simplicités d’hirondelle
Qui ne sait que bâtir son nid.

4 novembre.

XVII TRUMEAU

Ô bonheur d’être aimé! Félicité suprême!
Berger, rends grâce aux Dieux! on te désiré! on t’aime!
O berger! Vesper luit, ce bel astre éclatant.
Ta maîtresse est là-bas qui brûle et qui t’attend.
Traverse la forêt, traverse la clairière,

Cours et chante à grand bruit ta chanson la plus fière,
Chante et passe gaîment, et laisse au fond des bois
La triste nymphe Écho se plaindre à demi-voix.

16 juillet 1840.

XVIII TOUTE LA VIE D’UN COEUR

1817 ADOLESCENCE

J’allais au Luxembourg rêver, ô temps lointain,
Dès l’aurore, et j’étais moi-même le matin:
Les nids dialoguaient tout bas, et les allées,
Désertes, étaient d’ombre et de soleil mêlées;
J’étais pensif, j’étais profond, j’étais niais,
Comme je regardais et comme j’épiais!
Qui? La Vénus, l’Hébé, la nymphe chasseresse.
Je sentais du printemps l’invisible caresse.
Je guettais l’inconnu. J’errais. Quel curieux
Que Chérubin en qui s’éveille Des Grieux!
O femme! mystère!”être ignoré qu’on encense!
Parfois j’étais obscène à force d’innocence.
Mon regard violait la vague nudité
Des déesses, debout sous les feuilles l’été;
Je contemplais de loin ces rondeurs peu vêtues,
Et j’étais amoureux de toutes les statues;
Et j’en ai mis plus d’une en colère, je crois.
Les audaces dans l’ombre égalent les effrois,
Et, hardi comme un page et tremblant comme un lièvre,
Oubliant latin, grec, algèbre, ayant la fièvre
Qui résiste aux Bezouts et brave les Restauts,
Je restais là stupide au bas des piédestaux,
Comme si j’attendais que le vent sous quelque arbre
Soulevât les jupons d’une Diane en marbre.

10 septembre 1873.

Sur l’impériale d’un omnibus.

1820

Printemps. Mai le décrète, et c’est officiel.

L’amour, cet enfer bleu très ressemblant au ciel,
Emplit l’azur, les champs, les prés, les fleurs, les herbes;
Dans les hautes forêts lascives et superbes

L’innocente nature épanouit son coeur
Simple, immense, insulté. par le merle moqueur.
La volonté d’aimer régné, surnaturelle,
Partout. -Comme on s’adore et comme on se querelle!
Les papillons,. lâchés dans le bois ingénu,
Font avec le premier bouton de fleur venu
Des infidélités aux roses, leurs amantes;
On entend murmurer les colères charmantes,
Et tous les grands courroux des belles s’apaiser
Dans le chuchotement auguste du baiser.
O but profond des cieux, la vie universelle!
Comme, afin que tout soit solide, tout chancelle!
Comme tout cède afin que tout dure! ô rayons!
L’idylle en souriant dit au gouffre: Essayons!
Et’le gouffre obéit; et la mer sombre adore.
Le germe éclot, le nid chante, l’azur se dore;
L’éternelle indulgence au fond du firmament
Rêve; et les doux fichus s’envolént vaguement.

10 avril 1875.

1833 A J...

Puisque le gai printemps revient danser et rire,
Puisque le doux Horace et que le, doux Zéphyre
M’attendent au milieu des prés et des buissons,
L’un avec des parfums, l’autre avec des chansons,
Puisque la terre en fleurs semble un tapis de Perse,
Puisque le vent murmure et dans l’azur disperse
La brume -et la nuée en flottants archipels,
Il me plaît de répondre à ces profonds appels,
Il me plaît de rôder dans les molles prairies,
Entraînant avec moi l’essaim des rêveries

Et la strophe qui vole au-dessus de mon front;
Tant que sous le ciel bleu les âmes aimeront,
Tant qu'avril, ce brodeur, avec l'herbe et les roses
Et les feuilles, créera toutes sortes de choses
Charmantes, et que Dieu, des monts, des airs, des eaux,
Fera de grands palais pour les petits oiseaux,
Tant que l'aube éclora dans cette ombre où nous sommes,
Les songes tourneront sur la tête des hommes,
Et les penseurs seront attendris dans les bois.
Les frais halliers sont pleins de pudeurs aux abois,
Femmes, oiseaux, tout cède et les baisers se mêlent,
Les adorations vaguement se querellent,
L'eau soupire, le lys s'ouvre, le firmament
Rayonne, et, si tu veux, je serai ton amant.

4 mai. 1835

PROMENADE

Je t'adore. Soyons deux heureux. Viens t'asseoir
Dans une ombre qui soit un peu semblable au soir.
Marchons bien doucement. Sois pensive. Sois lasse.
Profitons du moment où personne ne passe;
Entrons dans le hallier, cachés par les blés mûrs.

Que ne puis-je élever brusquement quatre murs
Ici, dans ce coin chaste, et d'un coup de baguette!
La nature est un oeil invisible qui guette;
Glissons-nous; le silence entend; défions-nous
Du bruit que fait-une âme embrassant deux genoux,
Car, moi, je ne suis pas autre chose qu'une âme;
Mais une âme peut prendre en sa serre une femme,
Et l'emporter, et. faire un bruit mystérieux
Delionne-sur terre ou d'aigle dans les cieux.

Tu grondes. -Un baiser! -Jamais! -Je le dérobe.
Tu dis c'est mal! -Et j'ôte une épingle à ta robe;

L’amour aime les yeux fâchés de la pudeur,
Et rien n’est plus charmant qu’un paradis boudeur.
C’est vrai, belle, depuis que, les blanches épaules Dé Galatée ont pris la fuite sous les saules,
Et que Marot a vu, sans être trop puni,
Un doux sourire faire éclore un doux nenni,
Une gloire ineffable est à l’amour mêlée.
La femme est. de son trop de puissance accablée;
Vaincue, elle se sait maîtresse; elle nous plaît;
Comme c’est ravissant d’avoir ce qu’on voulait,
Et de sentir beaucoup de reproches se taire!
Comme une rougeur vague après l’heureux mystère
Enivre, et comme on sent le prix d’une faveur
Que veut presque, reprendre un silence rêveur!
Reprendré? Non; pourquoi? Donner encor?’Peut-être.

Cachons-nous. Une branche a remué. C’est traître.
On devinait qu’Eschyle avait, un rendez-vous
Avec Mégaryllis, la farouche aux yeux doux,
Et qu’elle se laissait dire de tendres choses,
Quand les feuilles tremblaient au bois des lauriers-roses.

12 juillet 1874-1840

MAI

Je ne laisserai pas se faner les pervenches
Sans aller écouter ce qu’on dit sous les branches,

Et sans guetter, parmi les rameaux infinis,
La conversation des feuilles et des nids;
Il n’est qu’un dieu, l’amour; avril est son prophète;
Je me supposerai convive de la fête
Que le pinson chanteur donne au pluvier doré;
Je fuirai de la ville et je m’envolerai,
Car l’âme du poëte est une vagabondé,
Dans les ravins où mai plein de roses abonde;

Là les papillons blancs et les papillons bleus,
Ainsi que le divin se mêle au fabuleux,
Vont et viennent, croisant leurs essors, joyeux, lestes,
Si bien qu'on les prendrait pour des lueurs célestes;
Là jasent les oiseaux, se cherchant, s'évitant;
Là Margot vient quand c'est Glycère qu'on attend;
L'idéal démasqué montre ses pieds d'argile;
On trouve Rabelais ,où l'on cherchait Virgile.
O jeunesse! ô seins nus des femmes dans les bois!
Oh! quelle vaste idylle et que de sombres voix!
Comme tout le hallier, plein d'invisibles mondes,
Rit dans le clair-obscur des églogues profondes!
J'aime la vision de ces réalités;
La vie aux yeux sereins luit de tous les côtés;
La chanson des forêts est d'-une douceur telle
Que, si Phébus l'entend, quand, rêveur, il dételle
Ses chevaux las. souvent au point de haleter,
Il s'arrête, et fait signe aux Muses d'écouter.

6 mai 1847

Tu vols un homme ayant un projet sous les cieux,
Mes voeux n'ont plus de frein, je suis ambitieux,
J'ai résolu d'avoir un dimanche superbe,
Et mon plan, c'est d'aller nous étendre sur l'herbe.
Je couve ce dessein, je fais cet opéra.
Et nous serons autant de couples qu'on voudra.
Nous chercherons un lieu désert, une chapelle,
Un burg ne sachant plus le nom dont il s'appelle,
N'ayant plus pour baron que le merle siffleur,
Qui soit tout en ruine et qui soit tout en fleur,
D'affreux murs, noirs dans l'ombre, absolument farouches;
Là les bouches auront des bontés pour les bouches;
C'est mon programme. Il est un arbuste gourmand
Dont la feuille est d'un tour si frais et si charmant
Qu'on en faisait jadis une couronne aux verres;
Il orne les vieux murs d'alcôves peu sévères;

C’est par lui qu’un logis qui s’écroule est complet;
Belle, ce tapissier des masures me plaît.
Viens, nous serons heureux, et pour auxiliaires,

Ô belle, nous aurons les dieux, les chants, les lierres.
Le mois de mai fera son devoir; Dieu clément
Le veut; on entendra chuchoter vaguement
Des profondeurs d’oiseaux sous des épaisseurs d’arbres;
On se parlera bas; les seins seront des marbres,
Non les coeurs; on aura quelque ami pour témoin,
Sans empêcher pourtant qu’il aille un peu plus loin.

26 mai.

XIX L’amour n’est plus

L’amour n’est plus l’antique et menteur Cupido,
L’enfant débile et nu qu’aveuglait un bandeau.;
C’est un fier cavalier, la visière baissée,
Qui brise et foule aux pieds la Haine terrassée;
C’est le vainqueur armé du sort sombre et jaloux.
Madame, il est puissant quand il combat pour vous,
Au-dessus de son front quand il vous voit sans voiles
Planer, belle âme ailée, au milieu des étoiles,
O rayonnant esprit! rayonnante beauté!
Il est fort; il abat, d’un bras plus irrité,
L’envie, impur démon qui jusqu’à vous se traîne;
Il triomphe; et, rempli d’une fierté sereine,
Tour à tour il regarde, avec un oeil joyeux,
Le monstre sous ses pieds, et l’ange dans les cieux.

29 décembre 1843.

XX Or nous cueillions ensemble

Or nous cueillions ensemble la pervenche.

Je soupirais, je crois qu'elle rêvait.
Ma joue à peine avait un blond duvet.
Elle avait mis son jupon du dimanche;
Je le baissais chaque fois qu'une branche
Le relevait.

Et nous cueillions ensemble la pervenche.

Le diable est fin, mais nous sommes bien sots.
Elle s'assit sous de charmants berceaux

Près d'un. ruisseau qui dans l'herbe s'épanche;
Et vous chantiez dans votre gaîté franche, - Petits oiseaux.

Et nous cueillions ensemble la pervenche.

Le paradis pourtant m'était échu.
En ce moment, un bouc au pied fourchu
Passe et me dit: Penche-toi. Je me penche.
Anges du ciel! je vis sa gorge blanche
Sous son fichu!

Et nous cueillions ensemble la pervenche.

J'étais bien jeune et j'avais peur d'oser.
Elle me dit: Viens donc te reposer
Sous mon ombrelle, et me donna du mariche
Un petit coup, et je pris ma revanche
Par un baiser.

Et nous cueillions ensemble la pervenche.

20 septembre 1854.

XXI Il était une fois un caporal

Il était une fois un caporal cipaye,
Pauvre diable; et n’ayant ni pitance, ni paye.
C’était à Jagrenat. Un soir il pénétra
Dans la grande pagode où la déesse Intra Reluit, monstre incrusté d’escarboucles sans nombre.
Il grimpa sur l’idole, et lui vola dans l’ombre
Un beau caillou brillant qui faisait l’oeil du front.
La nuit l’avait fait brave et la peur le fit prompt;
Il s’enfuit, emportant l’objet. Le triste hère
Attacha le caillou, ne sachant trop qu’en faire,
Au pommeau de son sabre avec un fil d’archal;
Puis il se pavanait, fier comme un maréchal.
Un jour enfin, étant ivre entre les plus ivres,
A je ne sais quel juif il le vendit six livres..

Voilà ce que c’était que ton premier amant.

Le caillou du soldat était un diamant;
L’hébreu qui l’achetait était un lapidaire.
0 Vénus de Milo, Phébus du Belvédère,

Vous n’étiez rien qu’un marbre informe, jusqu’au temps
Où le sculpteur vous prit sous ses doigts palpitants,
Et vous tira du bloc, nus, rayonnants, sans voiles,
Et vous mit dans l’Olympe au milieu des étoiles!
Ainsi, des noires mains du lapidaire obscur,
Avec mille éclairs d’or et de pourpre et d’azur,
Sortit le diamant, taillé, poli, splendide,
Magnifique, et si beau que son maître sordide
Le vendit à son tour quatre ou cinq millions.
C’était un de ces juifs, hideux tabellions,
Qui vendraient le printemps, la rosée et les astres,
Pour un mulet ployant sous sa charge de piastres.

Voilà ce que c’était que ton deuxième amant.

Aujourd’hui, contemplé par tous avidement,
Pur, superbé, admiré par la foule qui passe,
Et posé sur un front devant qui tout s’efface,
Le merveilleux caillou, rare et divin trésor,
Brille au plus haut fleuron d’une couronne d’or.
Son doux rayonnement dissipe l’ombre noire;
Et, le voyant reluire à ce sommet de gloire,
L’oeil croit voir resplendir l’éternel diamant,
L’éclatant Sirius dans le bleu firmament!
Léa! brille à jamais à ce sublime faîte!

Le troisième est un roi, c’est-à-dire un poète.

Le premier te vola, le second te vendit.
L’un fut un goujat vil, et l’autre un juif maudit.
Madame, le troisième, esprit noble, âme éprise,
Seul vous a méritée et seul vous a comprise.

1 février 1845.

XXII Un coup de vent passa,

Un coup de vent passa, souffle leste et charmant
Qui fit tourbillonner les jupes follement.
Je la savais ailée, étoilée, azurée,
Je l’adorais; mon âme allait dans l’empyrée
A sa suite. Oh! l’amour, c’est tout; le reste est vain.
Je ne supposais pas que cet être divin
Qui m’emportait rêveur si loin de la matière
Eût des jambes; soudain je vis sa jarretière;

Et cela me choqua: -Quoi! me dis-je, elle aussi!
Je la contemple, ému, tremblant,. brûlant, transi,
Et je vois de la chair où j’adorais une âme!
Soit. Le songe est fini. Ce n’est donc qu’une femme
Qui marche sur la terre, et se retrousse au vent!
Et je fus amoureux bien plus qu’auparavant.

XXIII QUINZE-VINGT

Noùs étions seuls dans l’ombre et l’extase suprême.
Elle disait: je t’aime! -et je disais je t’aime!
Elle disait: toujours!, et je disais: toujours!
Elle ajoutait: nos coeurs sont époux; nos amours
Vaincront la destinée, et rien ne me tourmente,
Étant, toi le plus fort et moi la plus aimante.
Et moi, je reprenais: la ville est sombre, vois.
La sagesse serait de vivre dans les bois.
Elle me répondait: vivons-y, soyons sages.

Si vous voulez savoir le chiffre de nos âges,
Elle quinze, et moi vingt: à nous deux nous faisions
Un aveugle, et nos Yeux étaient pleins de rayons

13 juin 1855.

XXIV J’ai toujours redouté

J’ai toujours redouté d’aborder une femme.
Risquer le coeur est grave autant que risquer l’âme.
La femme est le dessus de ce gouffre, l’amour.
Quel piège! et comment dire aux déesses: bonjour?
On salue, et la belle observe; on est nu-tête;
Rêve-t-elle? on a peur. Rit-elle? on a l’air bête.
On est Platon de peur de sembler Rabelais.
Donc je vous adorais, madame, et je tremblais.
C’est convenable, mais c’est inepte. Et, timide,
Soucieux de Circé, préoccupé d’Armide,
J’étais ambitieux, immobile et prudent,
Et j’avais l’air d’un arbre imbécile attendant

Qu’une étoile s’envole et vienne sur ses branches.
D’autres que moi pourtant, fats aux allures franches,
Hardis, vous saluaient, et, pleins d’enivrements,
Entraient en pourparlers avec vos yeux charmants,
Et leurs fronts s’inclinaient devant votre sourire;
J’étais comme un niais qui se laisse proscrire;
Si bien qu’un jour, tant pis, mon coeur se résolut,
Je me dis: il est temps de faire mon salut,
Et je vous abordai, chapeau bas...

XXV Qu’est-ce que cette année

Qu’est-ce que cette année emporte sur son aile?
Je ne suis pas moins tendre et tu n’es pas moins belle.
Nos dèux coeurs en dix ans n’ont pas vieilli d’un jour.
Va, ne fais pas au temps de plainte et de reproche.
A mesure qu’il fuit, du ciel il nous rapproche,
Sans nous éloigner de l’amour.

31 décembre 1842.

XXVI DANS UN VIEUX CLOÎTRE

Alors elle me dit: Pourquoi n'avez-vous pas Parlé plus tôt? Et moi je répondis tout bas:
— Mais que voulais-tu donc que je te demandasse! -
Tutoyer une étoile est une douce audace,
Même avec l'imparfait du subjonctif. Déjà
Elle avait fort rougi; ce qui fait qu'on songea,
Le désir dans mon âme et la peur dans la sienne,
A se réfugier dans cette église ancienne
Où nous voilà, priant tous deux, dans le saint lieu,
Elle Marie, un ange, et moi l'Amour, un dieu.

XXVII J’avais dans ma mansarde

J’avais dans ma mansarde un buste de Platon,
— Ou d’Euclide -un vieux marbre ayant barbe au menton,
Et dans l’oeil. un regard tout.blanc, fixe et morose;
Or ce buste devint amoureux d’une rose.
Qu’au temps où des amours je gazouillais l’argot,
J’avais gaîment cueillie au corset de Margot;
La rose auprès du buste ornait ma cheminée;
Et le buste disait: ô douce fleur fanée,
Si j’étais homme et toi femme, quels bons moments!
Et comme nous ferions une paire d’amants!
La rose répondait: ô le plus beau des marbres,
Si nous étions oiseaux, nous irions sous les arbres,
Et dans les verts rameaux tout pénétrés de jour,
Nous bâtirions un nid où chanterait l’amour!

Je tire de ceci deux maximes fort justes
Ne point s’exagérer la sagesse des bustes,
Eussent-ils l’oeil d’Euclide et le nez de Platon,
Et cueillir, quand. on peut, des fleurs sur Margoton.

Nuit du 13 au 14 janvier 1859.

XXVIII VIRGILE DANS L’OMBRE

Je chante Lycoris si Gallus le désire;
Je ferai faire un peigne en corail à Corcyre
Pour peigner les cheveux divins d’Amaryllis;
Cymodoce, ayant plus de roses et de lys.
Sur son sein que n’en a le printemps dans la plaine,
Chloé sachant comment s’y’prendre avec Silène
Pour lui faire chanter l’Olympe et le ciel bleu,
Et pour faire sortir de l’ivrogne le dieu,
Néera toute nue ayant dompté le faune,
Flore étant belle à mettre en fuite Tisiphone,
Je mettrai dans des vers que l’avenir lira
Cymodoce, Chloé, Flore, et vous, Nééra.

XXIX Oui, je suis le regard

Oui, je suis le regard et vous êtes l’étoile.
Je contemple. et vous rayonnez!
Je suis la barque errante et vous êtes la voile.
Je dérive et vous m’entraînez!

Près de vous qui brillez je marche triste et sombre,
Car le jour radieux touche aux nuits sans clarté,
Et comme après le corps vient l’ombre
L’amour pensif suit la beauté.

XXX N’est-ce pas, mon amour,

N’est-ce pas, mon amour, que la nuit est bien lente
Quand on est au lit seule et qu’on ne peut dormir?
On entend palpiter la pendule tremblante,
Et dehors les clochers d’heure en heure gémir.

L’esprit flotte éveillé dans les rêves sans nombre.
On n’a pas, dans cette ombre où manque tout soleil,
Le sommeil pour vous faire oublier la nuit sombre,
Ni l’amour pour vous faire oublier le sommeil.

8 septembre 1844.

XXXI Je ne viens pas vous voir

Je ne viens pas vous voir le jour; voici pourquoi:
C’est que toutes les nuits, madame, je vous voi.
Au réveil je me dis: elle est sévère et bonne,
Douce et rebelle tour à tour;
Prends garde; elle pourrait te refuser le jour
Ce que la nuit elle te donne.

XXXII L’heure sonne.

L’heure sonne. Un jour va naître.
Le nuage erre au zénith;
La barque est sous ta fenêtre;
L’hirondelle est dans son nid;
Dans ton âme qu’il féconde
L’amour veille nuit et jour... -
Laisse fuir la barque et l’onde!
Ne laisse pas fuir l’amour.

À nos coeurs qui se désolent
Les heures parlent parfois,
Quand dans l’ombre elles s’envolent
De quelque église des bois.
Les pires et les meilleures
Sur nous passent tour à tour... -
Ange! laisse fuir les heures!
Ne laisse pas fuir l’amour.

Est-il une chose au monde
Qui ne tremble à quelque vent?
Le nuage est comme l’onde,
Clair parfois, sombre souvent.
Il s’en va! triste voyage,
Sans but, sans port; sans retour...
Oh! laissé fuir le nuage!
Ne laisse pas fuir l’amour.

L’onde, la nuée et l’heure,
Tout passe, et nous. pleurons tous!
Qu’une chose en nous demeure
Quand tout change autour de nous!
L’oiseau quitte à tire-d’aile
Son doux nid, sa vieille tour...
Oh! laisse fuir l’hirondelle!

Ne laisse pas fuir l’amour.

28 juin 1844.

XXXIII À DEUX SOEURS

Belles, vous passez, pures toutes deux;
Que vous fait ce monde ingrat et hideux?
Vous êtes deux. soeurs, vous êtes deux vierges;
Comme sur l’autel s’allument les cierges,
Vos âmes ont mis leur flamme à vos fronts;
Belles, je voudrais voir sur vos bras ronds,
Sur votre poitrine et sur votre hanche,
S’entr’ouvrir les plis de la gaze blanche;
Belles, je voudrais voir votre sein nu,
Votre pied charmant, pudique, ingénu,
Et je voudrais voir vos épaules, belles,
Pour chercher la place où furent les ailes.

V. H., 17 mars 1873.

XXXIV UN JOUR QU’ELLE M’AVAIT DIT:

Oh! mes yeux sont à vous. Ils sont, je le proclame, Audacieux,
Car leur regard parfois monte jusqu’à votre âme
Ou jusqu’aux cieux!

Gardez-les. Je vous donne, ô grand coeur que j’admire
Dans vos douleurs,
Leur langage secret, leur flamme, et leur sourire
Avec leurs pleurs.

A vous tout droit sur eux! le droit doux et suprême
De les charmer,
Le droit de les ouvrir,, et, quand vous voudrez même,
De les fermer!

20 mars 1845.

XXXV NI VEA NON FRIGIDA

Elle prouve que la blancheur
N’ôte à la femme
Aucune ivresse, aucun bonheur,
Aucune flamme;

Qu’en avril les coeurs sont enclins
Aux tendres choses,
Et que les bois profonds sont pleins
D’apothéoses;

Qu’une belle fait en tout lieu
Son doux manège,
Et que l’on peut être de feu,
Étant de neige.

5 avril.

XXXVI À MADAME LA PRINCESSE SOPHIE GALITZINE

Mon vers se hâte et vole à celle qui l’appelle.
Elle fait de bien loin rêver mon coeur charmé.
Quand l’esprit est si grand, l’âme doit être belle.
Si c’est un tel bonheur d’être compris par elle,
Que serait-ce donc d’être aimé?

XXXVII À MADAME J.

Âme, statue, esprit, Vénus,
Belle des belles,
Celui qui. verrait vos pieds nus
Verrait des ailes.

À travers vos traits radieux
Luit l’espérance;
Déesse, vous. ayez des dieux
La transparence.

Comme eux, vous avez le front pur,
La blancheur fière,
Et dans le fond de votre azur
Une lumière.
Pas un de nous, fils de la nuit,
Qui ne vous sente
Dans l’ombre où tout s’évanouit, Éblouissante!

Vous ràyonnez sous la beauté;
C’est votre voile.
Vous êtes un marbre, habité
Par une étoile.

4 avril. Paris.

XXXVIII Je ne sais pas pourquoi

Je ne sais pas pourquoi les femmes
Font tant de façons pour montrer
Ce côté charmant de leurs âmes
Qui permet de les adorer.

Elles ont la honte divine
D’être belles, et d’entraîner
L’homme au but que leur coeur devine
Et refuse de deviner.

La beauté, céleste et sereine,
Sait tomber en restant debout,
Sait être esclave en restant reine,
Et sait tout prendre en donnant tout.

Au fond, elles sont peu méchantes.
L’amour est la chanson des nids;
Femme, en la commençant tu chantes,
Quitte à pleurer quand tu finis.

Car toute joie arrive aux larmes.
O toi que j’aime à deux genoux,
Qu’importe! Espérons! tu me charmes,
Et le printemps est avec nous.

Viens, ne crains rien; l’aube est vermeille,
Le ciel est bleu, les bois sont sourds.
Tout bas, au bon Dieu,. dans l’oreille,
Je raconterai nos amours.

28 mai.

XXXIX PENDANT QU’ELLE DORT

Je dirais à l’abeille: accours, mouche vermeille,
Viens, elle dort, bourdonne autour de son chevet!
Si l’abeille
Me suivait.

Je dirais à la rose: embaume quelque chose
Pour elle, pour ta soeur qui rêve et qui se tait!
Si la rose M’écoutait.

Je dirais à l’étoile: Astre, à travers son voile
Jette un rayon au coeur que mon coeur attendait!
Si l’étoile M’entendait.

Je dirais au ciel bleu: sur la terre tout change.
Cieux, laissez-nous entrer aux éternels palais!
Si, mon ange,
Tu voulais!

31 mai 1874.

XL LA FORÊT

De quoi parlait le vent? De quoi tremblaient les branches?
Etait-ce, en ce doux mois des nids et des pervenches,
Parce que les oiseaux couraient dans les glaïeuls,
Ou parce qu’elle et moi nous étions là tout seuls?
Elle hésitait. Pourquoi? Soleil, azur, rosées,
Aurore! Nous tâchions d’aller, pleins de pensées,
Elle vers la campagne et moi vers la forêt.
Chacun de son côté tirait l’autre, et, discret,
Je la suivais d’abord, puis, à son tour docile,
Elle venait, ainsi qu’autrefois en Sicile
Faisaient Flore et Moschus, Théocrite et Lydé.
Comme elle ne m’avait jamais rien accordé,
Je riais, car le mieux c’est de tâcher de rire
Lorsqu’on veut prendre une âme et qu’on ne sait que dire;
J’étais le plus heureux des hommes, je souffrais.
Que la mousse est épaisse au fond des antres frais!
Par instants un éclair jaillissait de notre âme;
Elle balbutiait: Monsieur... et moi: Madame.
Et nous restions pensifs, muets, vaincus, vainqueurs,
Après cette clarté faite dans nos deux coeurs.
Une source disait des choses sous un saule;
Je n’avais encor vu qu’un peu de son épaule,
Je ne sais plus comment et je ne sais plus où;
Oh! le profond printemps, comme cela rend fou!
L’audace des moineaux sous les feuilles obscures,
Les papillons, l’abeille en quête, les piqûres,
Les soupirs, ressemblaient à de vagues essais,
Et j’avais peur, sentant que je m’enhardissais.
Il est certain que c’est une action étrange
D’errer dans l’ombre au point de cesser d’être un ange,

Et que l’herbe était douce, et qu’il est fabuleux
D’oser presser le. bras d’une femme aux yeux bleus.
Nous nous sentions glisser vaguement sur la pente

De l’idylle où l’amour traître et divin serpente,
Et qui mène, à travers on ne sait quel jardin,
Souvent à l’enfer, mais en passant par l’éden.
Le printemps laisse faire, il permet, rien ne bouge.
Nous marchions, elle était rose, et devenait rouge,
Et je ne. savais rien, tremblant de mon succès,
Sinon qu’elle pensait à ce que je pensais.
Pâle, je prononçais des noms, Béatrix, Dante;
Sa guimpe s’entr’ouvrait, et ma prunelle ardente
Brillait, car l’amoureux contient un curieux.
Viens! dis-je... -Et pourquoi pas, ô bois mystérieux?

3 avril 1874.

XLI CHANSON

Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.
Sa femme sur la ville
Jette un oeil désolé.
Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.

Oh! dit-elle,
Hirondelle,
Qui t’en vas au pays, à mon pays chéri!
Tu diras à ma soeur, tu diras à ma tante,
Que dans ce pays-ci je ne suis pas contente,
Je n’ai plus mon soleil, je n’ai pas mon mari.

Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.
Sa femme sur la ville
Jette un oeil désolé.
Le prince de Joinville.
En mer s’en est allé.

Oh! dit-elle,
Hirondelle,
Tu diras que les bois sont morts et dépouillés,
Que Joinville aime trop la Méditerranée.

Je l’attends, je suis seule, il pleut toute l’année,
Et les murs des maisons sont toujours tout mouillés.
Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.
Sa femme sur’la ville
Jette un oeil désolé.
Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.

Oh! dit-elle,
Hirondellè,
Tu diras que j’ai froid, que les étés sont courts,
Que Paris est tout noir, et puis mille autres choses.
Le premier mai, ma soeur, au lieu de voir des roses,
Je vois des gens très laids qui font de longs discours.
Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.
Sa femme sur la ville
Jette un oeil désolé.
Le prince de Joinville
En mer s’en est allé.

XLII J’étais un lycéen honnête;

J’étais un lycéen honnête;
Denise avait l’oeil hasardeux;
Elle était belle et j’étais bête;
Nous faisions un conte à nous deux.

Ainsi que la belle Fosseuse,
Elle riait des imprudents;
L’huître en perles est connaisseuse,
C’est pourquoi j’admirais ses dents.

Un jour elle me dit: farouche!
Et m’offrit un baiser moqueur.
Je pris le baiser sur ma bouche
Et sentis la morsure au coeur.

9 avril 1855.

XLIII FURENS FOEMINA

— Oui, dit-elle, je suis jalouse de Flora!
Alors elle frappa du pied, gronda, pleura,
Eut des regards pareils au ciel quand il éclaire,
Fut terrible, et je vis une femme en colère;
Je n’avais pas eu d’elle encore un seul baiser,
J’espérai. Faut-il pas à la fin s’apaiser?
Il n’est point de courroux qui ne prenne la fuite.
Plus.le nuage est noir, plus l’azur revient vite.
Je l’admirais, couvant on ne sait quel dessein.
Elle ne voyait pas que je voyais son sein
Presque nu, la colère étant inattentive;
Les hommes sont friands de volupté furtive,
Nous sommes les voleurs des appas mal cachés;
L’hiatus d’un fichu sourit, plein de péchés;
Une belle irritée est encor notre proie;
Rêveurs, nous caressons celle qui nous foudroie;
Tout à coup elle vit mon regard. -Insolent!
Dit-elle. Et je repris: -Que votre bras est blanc!
— Non. -Vos yeux sont le ciel! ton sein est un prodige!
— Il me tutoie! -Hélas, je t’aime! répondis-je.
— Jamais! -Viens! -Oh! le monstre! -

Et ce que je conquis
Dans ce charmant accès de fureur, fut exquis.

21 juin 1878.

XLIV Cela la désennuie;

Cela la désennuie; elle vit toute seule;
Elle est pauvre et travaille; elle n’est pas bégueule;
Elle échange de loin, et pour se reposer,
Un regard, et parfois, de la main, un baiser,
Avec un voisin, seul aussi dans sa mansarde;
Et c’est étrange comme un baiser qu’on hasarde
Sait son chemin, et comme il a ce don vainqueur
De partir de la bouche et d’arriver au coeur.
Pourtant est-ce qu’elle aime? Elle n’en est pas sûre.
Un baiser qui gaîment visite une masure,
Cela dore toujours un peu l’humble plafond.
Les songes, quand ce sont les pauvres qui les font,

Sont riches, et remplis de choses ineffables.
Ovide et ses romans, La Fontaine et ses-fables,
Ne sont rien à côté d’un cerveau de vingt ans
Qui fermente, et le coeur d’une fille, au printemps,
Crée un ciel, trouve un monde, et dépasse en chimère
Le bon Pilpay, le bon Perrault, le bon Homère.

La chimère suffit, on s’attarde à rêver
Un dieu dans. ce jeune homme, on ne sait quel lever
D’étoile, en un grenier vaguement apparue,
Et l’on ne pense pas à traverser la rue;.
Elle n’est pas Agnès, et lui n’est pas Platon;
Et peut-être jamais ne se parlera-t-on.
Car l’amour ébauché quelquefois. se -prolonge
Dans la nuée au point de finir par un songe,
Et souvent, au moment où l’on croyait tenir
Une espérance, on voit que c’est un souvenir.

V. H. novembre 1872.

XLV CHANSON DE CELLE QUI N’A PAS PARLÉ

L’énigme ne dit pas son mot.
Les flèches d’or ont des piqûres
Dont on ne parle pas tout haut.
Souvent, sous les branches obscures,

Plus d’un tendre oiseau se perdit.
Vous m’avez souvent dit: je t’aime.!
Et je ne vous l’ai jamais dit.
Vous prodiguiez le cri suprême,

Je refusais l’aveu profond.
Le lac bleu sous la lune rêve
Et, muet, dans la nuit se fond;
L’eau se tait quand -l’astre se lève.

L’avez-vous donc trouvé mauvais?
En se taisant le coeur se creuse.
Et, quand vous étiez là, j’avais
Le doux tremblement d’être heureuse.

Vous parliez trop, moi pas assez.
L’amour commence par de l’ombre;

Les nids du grand jour sont blessés,
Les choses ont leur pudeur sombre.

Aujourd’hui -comme, au vent du soir,
L’arbre tristement se balance! -
Vous me quittez, n’ayant pu voir
Mon âme à travers mon silence.

Soit. Nous allons nous séparer.

— Oh! comme la forêt soupire! -
Demain qui me verra pleurer
Peut-être vous verra sourire.

Ce doux mot, qu'il faut effacer,
— Je t'aime -aujourd'hui me déchire;
Vous le disiez sans le penser,
Moi, je le pensais sans le dire.

26 septembre 1875.

XLVI Ô toi d’où me vient ma pensée

Ô toi d’où me vient ma pensée,
Sois fière devant le Seigneur!
Relève ta tête abaissée,
O toi d’où me vient mon bonheur!

Quand je traverse cette lieue
Qui nous sépare au sein des nuits,
Ta patrie étoilée et bleue
Rayonne à mes yeux éblouis!

C’est l’heure où cent lampes en flammes
Brillent aux célestes plafonds!
L’heure où les astres et les âmes
Échangent des regards profonds!

Je sonde alors ta destinée.
Je songe à toi, qui viens des cieux,
A toi, grande âme emprisonnée,
A toi, grand coeur mystérieux!

Noble femme, reine asservie,
Je rêve à ce sort envieux
Qui met tant d’ombre dans ta vie,
Tant de lumière dans tes yeux!

Moi, je te connais tout entière
Et je te contemple. à genoux;
Mais autour de tant de lumière,
Pourquoi tant d’ombre, ô sort jaloux?

Dieu lui donna tout, hors l’aumône
Qu’il fait à tous dans sa bonté;
Le ciel qui lui devait un trône
Lui refusa la liberté!

Oui,;ton aile que le bocage
Et l’air libre appellent en vain,
Se brise.aux barreaux d’une cage,
Pauvré grande âme, oiseau divin!

Bel ange, un joug te tient captive,
Cent préjugés sont ta prison,
Et ton attitude pensive,
Hélas, attriste ta maison.

Tu te sens prise par le monde
Qui t’épie, injuste et mauvais..
Dans ton amertume profonde

Souvent tu dis: si je pouvais!
Mais l’amour en secret te donne
Ce qu’il a de pur et de beau,
Et son invisible couronne,
Et son invisible flambeau!

Flambeau qui se cache à l’envie,
Qui luit, splendide et clandestin,
Et qui n’éclaire de la vie
Que l’intérieur du destin!

L’amour te donne, ô douce femme,
Ces plaisirs où rien n’est amer,
Et ces regards où toute l’âme
Apparaît dans un seul éclair!

Et le sourire! et la caresse!.
L’entretien furtif et charmant,
Et la mélancolique ivresse
D’un ineffable épanchement!

Et les traits chéris d’un visage,

Ombre qu’on aime et qui vous suit,
Qu’on voit le jour dans le nuage,
Qu’on voit dans les rêves la nuit!

L’amour, dont nos coeurs sont les urnes,
Te donne tous ses doux tourments,
Les longs adieux aux seuils nocturnes,
Les longs regrets des courts moments!
Et les extases solitaires
Quand tous deux nous nous asseyons
Sous les rameaux pleins de mystères
Au fond des bois pleins de rayons!
Purs transports que la foule ignore,
Et qui font qu’on a d’heureux jours
Tant qu’on peut espérer encore
Ce dont on se souvient toujours!
Va, sèche ton bel oeil qui pleure, -
Ton sort n’est pas déshérité.
Ta part est encor la meilleure,
Ne te plains pas, ô ma beauté!
Ce qui manque est bien peu de chose
Quand on est au printemps vermeil,
Et quand on vit comme la rose
De parfums; d’ombre et de soleil!
Laisse donc, ô ma douce muse,
Sans le regretter un seul jour,
Ce que le destin te refuse
Pour ce que te donne l’amour!

25 octobre 1844.

XLVII DANSE EN ROND

Fanny vint danser en rond
Le dimanche au buis béni.
— Les garçons en chasse vont;
Les filles disent nenni.
Elle a l’aube sur le front;
Le hâle m’a tout bruni.
— Les garçons en pêche vont;
Les filles disent nenni.

Je l’adore nuit et jour,
Et je n’ai jamais fini.
— Les garçons vont au labour;
Les filles disent nenni:

Un rossignol chante au fond
De mon vieux coeur rajeuni.
— Les garçons aux vignes vont;
Les filles disent nenni.
Grands arbres du bois profond,
Serai-je aimé de Fanny?
— Les garçons en guerre vont;
Les filles disent nenni:
J’ai deux ormeaux dans ma cour;
L’un dit: non, l’autre dit: si!
— Les garçons vont à l’amour;
Les filles, y vont aussi.

Guernesey, 17 juin 1857.

XLVIII Oh! dis, te souviens-tu

Oh! dis, te souviens-tu de cet heureux dimanche?
— Neuf juin! -Sur les rideaux de mousseline blanche
Le soleil dessinait l’ombre des vitres d’or.

Il te nommait son bien, sa beauté, son trésor.
Tu songeais dans ses bras. Heures trop tôt passées!
Oh! comme vous mêliez vos âmes, vos pensées!
Dehors tout rayonnait, tout rayonnait en vous,
Et vos ravissements faisaient le ciel jaloux.
Tes yeux rêveurs brillaient, pleins d’un vague sourire.
Aux instants où les coeurs se parlent sans rien dire,
Il voyait s’éclairer de pudeur et d’amour,
Comme une eau qui reflète un ciel d’ombre et de jour,
Ton visage pensif, tour à-tour pâle et rose;
Et souvent il sentait, ô la divine chose!
Dans ce doux abandon, des anges seul connu,
Se poser sur son pied ton pied charmant et nu.

25 juin 1844.

XLIX Garde à jamais

Garde à jamais dans ta mémoire,
Garde toujours
Le beau roman, la belle histoire
De nos amours!

Moi, je veux que rien ne s’émousse.
Pourquoi finir?
J’aime la joie amère et. douce
Du souvenir.

Oui, je vois tout dans ma pensee,
Tout à la fois!
La trace par ton pied laissée
Au fond des bois,

Les champs, les pelouses qui cachent
Nos verts sentiers,
Et ta robe blanche où s’attachent
Les églantiers,

Comme si ces fleurs amoureuses
Disaient tout bas:
— Te voilà! nous sommes heureuses.
Ne t’en va pas!

Je vois la profonde ramée
Du bois charmant
Où nous rêvions, toi, bien-aimée,
Moi, bien-aimant!

Donc puisqu’en moi j’ai cette flamme,
Il faut aussi
Que ton âme ait comme mon âme
Ce doux souci!

Rappelle-toi nos bois tranquilles,
Nos bois du roi!
Rappelle-toi nos frais. asiles!
Rappelle-toi

L’herbe épaisse, la roche austère,
L’antre ignoré,
Temple de joie et de mystère,
Sombre et sacré,

Où du refus tendre et farouche
J’étais vainqueur!
Où ma bouche cherchait ta bouche,
Ton coeur mon coeur!

Rappelle-toi, ma bien-aimée,
Nos doux combats,
Et les mots que. la voix pâmée
N’achevait pas!

Là, cachés au milieu des roses,
Dans un beau lieu,
Contemplés par toutes les choses
Qu’a faites Dieu,

Purs témoins qui sans haine et comme
S’y conformant,
Regardent le bonheur de l’homme
Paisiblement,

Nous aimions! tandis qu’onde pure,
Bois embaumés,
Grotte en fleurs, tout dans la nature
Disait: aimez!

Car c’est la loi! tout vit! tout aime!

Aime! il le faut!
Voilà ce qu’à tout moment sème
La main d’en haut!
Dieu dans la nature affaissée
A mis le jour,
Et plus qu’une grande pensée, -
Un grand amour!

Viens! la saison n’est pas finie.
L’été renaît.
Cherchons la grotte rajeunie,
Qui nous connaît!

Là, le soir, à l’heure où tout penche,
Où Dieu bénit,
Où la feuille baise la branche,
L’aile le nid,

Tous ces objets saints qui nous virent
Dans nos beaux jours
Et qui, tout palpitants, soupirent’
Dè nos amours,

Tous les hôtes de l’antre sombre
Pensifs et doux,

Avant de s’endormir, dans l’ombre,
Parlent de nous!

Là, le rouge-gorge et la grive,
D’herbe couverts,
Le liseron et dans l’eau vive
Les cressons verts,

La mouche aux ailes d’or qui passe,
L’onde et le vent,
Chuchotent sans cesse à voix basse

Ton nom charmant!

Jour et nuit, au soir, à l’aurore,
A tous moments,
Entre eux ils redisent encore
Nos doux serments!

Viens dans l’antre où nous les jurâmes
Nous reposer!
Viens! nous échangerons nos âmes
Dans un baiser!

5 juillet 1844.

L Ah çà mais! quelle idée as-tu,

— Ah çà mais! quelle idée as-tu, capricieuse,
De vouloir qu’à cette heure où, sous la verte yeuse,
L’herbe s’offre à nos pas dans le bois attiédi,
Je te parle d’Eylau, d’Essling et de Lodi!
Parlons de notre amour et non de la bataille.
Oui, nos aïeux régnaient par la guerre, et leur taille
Était haute, et mon père était un des géants;
Et nous, s’il faut demain braver les flots béants,
Et subir les cieux noirs après les jours prospères,
Nous, les fils, nous ferons comme faisaient nos pères;
Nous combattrons comme eux, dût-on être engloutis,
Avec un coeur égal et des bras plus petits;
Et le monde entendra notre clairon sonore;
Mais aujourd’hui je t’aime et tu m’aimes; l’aurore
Emplit les champs, emplit les cieux, emplit nos coeurs;
Les moineaux aisément sont d’Horace moqueurs
Lorsqu’il a près de lui Barine émue et rose
Et qu’il passe son temps à parler d’autre chose.

Vais-je donc étonner ces prés,ces bois, ces eaux,
Par un homme ayant moins d’esprit que les oiseaux?
C’est pour le jeune amour que les, forêts sont faites.
Belle, ne me rends pas ridicule aux fauvettes.
Sois clémente, et comprends qu’en de si charmants lieux
C’est plutôt aux enfants qu’on pense qu’aux aïeux.
Veux-tu fâcher les fleurs par nos façons moroses?
Veux-tu nous mettre mal avec toutes ces roses?
Si j’ai dit que je suis discret; je te trompais.
Belle, ici, tout est joie, accord, silence, paix;
Les champs et les vallons sont des choses calmées.
Vois ces grottes où rit l’ondine aux mains palmées,
Vois ces halliers qu’un dieu mystérieux bénit;
La branche n’a qu’un but, c’est de cacher un nid;
C’est l’amour qui ravit les rossignols, doux chantres;

Les poursuites” d’amants-aboutissent aux antres;
La nature n’est qu’une alcôve; et c’est Vénus
Dont on distingue au fond de l’ombre les seins nus;
Janvier part, floréal accourt; le dialogue
De l’hiver qui bougonne avec la vive églogue
Tourne en querelle, et l’air est plein d’un vague chant
Qui fait que la beauté n’a point le coeur méchant.
Les arbres ont besoin, belles, de-votre rire;
Une joie espiègle est mêlée au zéphyre;
La pomme d’Eve aux mains de Galatée atteint
Virgile; et tout serait manqué, maussade, éteint,
Si Chloé, que les nids couvrent de gais murmures,
Ne barbouillait le vieux Silène avec des mûres;
Et, si Phyllis entre eux n’était comme un démon, Ménalque ne saurait que dire à Palémon.
— Aime, et baigne en chantant tes pieds nus dans la source;
Les rires étouffés, belle, sont la ressource
Des taillis ténébreux et des coeurs palpitants.
O profondeur sauvage et fraîche du printemps!
On entend alterner des flûtes sous les chênes.
Quel est -le maître? Éros. Et quelles sont les chaînes?
Les rayons, les parfums, lés soupirs, les chansons,
Et l’entrelacement des fleurs dans les buissons.
Cette nature au flanc sacré n’est pas contente
Si vous êtes “chez elle et que rien ne vous tente.
Belle, vois cette idylle immense, l’horizon;
Vois la-fougère et l’herbe et ses bancs de gazon;
Crois-tu que de cette ombre; et de ce. paysage
Il sorte le conseil insensé d’être sage;;
D’être froid; de ne point s’approcher de trop près,
D’être sourd aux instincts, d’être aveugle aux attraits,
De refuser d’entrer dans l’amour, douce école,
Et de substituer Wagram, Jemmape, Arcole,
Les révolutions, la patrie en péril,

Et la rauque bataille, au tendre hymen d’avril?
Belle, ayons pour affaire unique l’arrivée

Du premier souffle tiède échauffant la couvée,
L’éclosion du lys des étangs, les rameaux
Où le nid et le vent jasent à demi-mots,
La pénétration du soleil dans les feuilles,
Le clair-obscur des eaux, le bouquet que tu cueilles,
Le parfum qui te plaît, la clarté que tu vois,
L’herbe et l’ombre, et l’amour, mélodie à deux voix.
Ici, Pan cherche Astrée et Faune guette Flore.
Ne mêlons pas la guerre à toute cette aurore,
A moins que ce ne soit la guerre des baisers.
Soyons des coeurs ardents l’un par l’autre apaisés.
Aimons. Le. mois de mai, c’est la saison lucide.
Kléber pas plus qu’Ajax, Marceau pas plus qu’Alcide,
N’ont que faire en ces champs pleins de molles faveurs
Où le printemps chuchote au fond des bois rêveurs;
Car Homère ne peut qu’effarer Théocrite;
Moschus craint l’épopée avec le glaive écrite,
Et le groupe dansant et chantant des bergers
Fuit devant le divin Achille aux pieds légers. - Alors elle me dit dans la saison des roses:

— Ami, ne croyez pas que j’écoute ces choses;
Je ne vous en veux pas; je sais que c’est ainsi
Qu’on parle à sa maîtresse, à son esclave aussi;
Oui, l’aube au fond des bois ébauche un frais sourire,
Le doux avril accourt avec un bruit de lyre;
Les oiseaux sur qui rien ne pèse sont contents;
Oui, ce qui doit emplir nos coeurs, c’est le printemps,
C’est l’idylle, c’est Flore et Maïa, c’est Astrée,
C’est l’éden; c’est aussi la tristesse sacrée.
Toutes les fleurs ont beau me fêter à l’envi,
Je songe au noir clocher de Strasbourg asservi,
Et je vois à travers l’églogue pleine d’ombre
Au fond de l’horizon la grande flèche sombre.
Ah! parlez-moi de guerre! Où sont les fiers défis?
Penser à ses aïeux, c’est penser à ses fils.
C’est pour faire un héros qu’il est beau d’être femme;

Tâchons de repriser aux cieux quelque vieille âme;
Scellons un grand hymen! Je vous aime pourtant;
Mais, dans cet obscur bois farouche et palpitant,
C’est l’indignation, non l’amour, qui me dompte;
On n’a pas de pudeur quand on a de la honte;
Je le dis, mon pays est ma seule rougeur,
Je ne veux d’un baiser que s’il crée un vengeur!

LI À UNE IMMORTELLE

Quoi! vous, gloire, auréole, éblouissement, grâce,
Vous qui ne passez pas, vous craignez ce qui passe?
Comment! vous la beauté céleste, vous craignez,
Déesse, la beauté d’en bas! Vous qui régnez,
Vous redoutez l’éclat éphémère de celles
Qu’avril jette et qui sont comme ses étincelles,
Qui, comme la verveine ét la sauge et le thym,
Naissent dans la lueur fuyante du matin,
Embaument un moment les prés et les charmilles,
Et qui durent autant que l’aube, étant ses filles?
Vous, jalouse! de qui? vous, troublée! -et pourquoi?
Le jour sans nuit, c’est vous; l’amour sans fin, c’est toi.
Qui peut-elle envier, celle que tout envie?
Qui donc détrônerait du trône de la vie
La beauté? Qui pourrait saisir ce diamant,
Vénus, et l’arracher du front du firmament?
Sois calme en ton azur. Que t’importe, à toi, flamme,
Clarté, splendeur, toujours présente. comme une âme,
A toi l’enchantement. de l’abîme vermeil;
Faite pour le baiser éternel du soleil,
Qu’un rayon en passant sur une fleur se pose?
L’étoile au fond des cieux n’a pas peur de la rose.

Champs-Élysées, 7 juillet 1874.

LII Horace,

Horace, et toi, vieux La Fontaine,
Vous avez dit: Il est un jour
Où le coeur qui palpite à peine
Sent comme une chanson lointaine -
Mourir la -joie et fuir l’amour. -

Ô poètes, l’amour réclame
Quand vous dites: Nous n’aimons plus,
Nous pleurons, nous n’avons plus d’âme,
Nous cachons dans nôs coeurs, sans flamme
Cupidon goutteux et perclus. -

Le temps d’aimer jamais rie passe,
Non, jamais le coeur n’est fermé.

Hélas! vieux Jean, ce qui s’efface,
Ce qui s’en va, mon doux Horace,
C’est le temps où l’on est aimé.

8 mars 1849.

LIII CHANSON

LE PÈRE
Bon empereur, vous êtes maître
Du grenadier et du sapeur,
Et quand vous regardez leur guêtre
Les soldats d’Austerlitz ont peur.

Bon empereur, vous êtes l’homme
Qu’on appelle Napoléon.
Vous êtes un César pour Rome,
Un héros pour le Panthéon.

Tout vous cède; la renommée
Est partout votre avant-coureur.
Vous êtes général d’armée!
Je viens à vous, bon empereur.

Ma fille au vieux Thibaut préfère
Le plus jeune de mes neveux.
Vous qui pouvez tout, daignez faire
Qu’elle aime celui que je veux.

L’EMPEREUR
Ami, j’ai gagné cent batailles,
J’ai pris cent villes. Tout me sert!
J’ai constellé de mes mitrailles
Les pyramides du désert.

J’ai brisé des rois centenaires
Et j’ai fait rois mes compagnons.
Le Dieu d’en haut a ses tonnerres,
Moi, Dieu d’en bas, j’ai mes canons.

Je puis rajeunir et refondre
L’Europe, vieux monde épuisé.

Un de ces jours je prendrai Londre.
Tout cela. n’est pas malaisé.

Mais la difficulté suprême;
Plus haute que remparts et tours,
C’est de faire qu’une fille aime
Autre chose que ses amours.

22 mai 1846.

LIV À force de rêver

À force de rêver et de voir dans la plaine
Une fille aux yeux bleus aller à la fontaine,
Gad s’aperçut un jour qu’il était amourëux.
Plus de sommeil. Où fuir ce souci douloureux?
Il voulut. s’en guérir, mais tout fut inutile.
Triste, il alla s’asseoir aux portes de la ville,
Et, voyant un vieillard qui passait, il lui dit:
— A mon aide, seigneur! -Le vieillard l’entendit,
Et vint. C’était un homme à longue barbe grise.
Les palmiers frissonnaient au souffle de la brise;
Le soleil se couchait dans le désert poudreux.
— Qu’as-tu? dit le vieillard. -Je suis très malheureux, Dit Gad, puis il reprit: -Hélas! j’aime une femme.

— J’avais, dit le vieillard, ce mal cuisant dans` l’âme
Quand j’étais un jeune homme aux yeux clairs et brillants
Comme toi. Maintenant mes cheveux sont tout blancs,
Mon front tremble, mon ceil s’éteint, l’âge me glace;
Et pour moi tout est sombre, et chaque jour qui passe
Est de la nuit qui tombe, et, sans air, sans soutien,
Je souffre, et c’est mon mal de n’avoir plus le tien.

14 août 1846.

LV LES PÉRIPÉTIES DE L’IDYLLE

Vous voulez bien venir avec moi dans les bois
Cueillir des fleurs, chercher l’ombre, écouter des voix,
Méditer, des lueurs épier le passage,

À la condition que je serai très sage.
Et je vous obéis. Pourtant dans ce hallier
Le vent me semble avec les branches familier,
Le papillon souhaite un calice et le trouve,
La rose est nue, et l’herbe est tendre, et le lys prouve
Qu’on montre sa blancheur sans perdre sa vertu,
Et les petits oiseaux tout bas se disent tu.
Faisons comme eux. Veux-tu? Non. Voulez-vous, Madame?
Tu souris.

Le printemps est un épithalame;
La feuille est un rideau, la source est un soupir;
Cupidon vient dans l’herbe agreste se tapir
Et rit de voir les fous le chercher dans les villes.
Les alcôves de pourpre et d’or sont laides, viles
Et pauvres à côté du lit profond des fleurs.
Comme ils riraient de moi, les gais merles siffleurs,
Si je n’abusais pas un peu des solitudes!
Essayons. Ah! tu prends de graves attitudes.
J’ai tort; pardonne-moi. Ces bois sont pleins d’ébats Mystérieux. Veux-tu nous adorer tout bas?
Veux-tu que ma caresse inquiète ne fasse
Pas plus de bruit qu’un pli d’une onde qui s’efface,
Et que je sois heureux prudemment, de façon
Que ces bois, en sentant passer. ce doux frisson,
Pensent, sans devenir pour cela plus farouches,
Que ce sont deux baisers envolés de deux bouches,
Perdus par des amants au hasard-dans les prés,
Qui se sont en flottant dans l’azur rencontrés,
Et, que ces deux baisers, sans maître, espèces d’âmes,

Courent, libres, joyeux, dansants, comme deux flammes,
L’un après l’autre, et font l’amour au fond des bois?
Veux-tu l’idylle ainsi? Non. Eh bien, fais ton choix.
Que veux-tu? Tu réponds: Manger, j’ai faim.

Tu règnes.
Je te sers. Le repas est frugal. Des châtaignes,
Du miel, et quelques fruits sur des feuilles posés,
Suffisent à l’amour, vorace de baisers.
Cette voracité te déplaît, On regarde,
Me dis-tu, des passants écoutent! Prenez garde,
Monsieur, aux paysans rusés et curieux.
Soyez un amoureux du genre sérieux.
Est-ce que vous croyez que les dieux de l’Olympe Chiffonnaient un jupon, taquinaient une guimpe?
— Oui, d’abord. -Qu’ils manquaient aux déesses? -Un peu.
Ensuite, je suis homme et je ne suis pas dieu.
— Taisez-vous. -Je me tais. Mais voilà que tu chantes!
Ah! -que les femmes sônt charmantes et méchantes!
Pour me faire tenir tranquille, tu te mets
A rire comme rit l’aube sur les sommets,
Et tu jettes au vent ta belle voix sonore.
Tu dis: soyons muets, il faut qu’on nous ignore,
Qu’on ne soupçonne pas quelqu’un dans ce ravin...
Et te voilà faisant un vacarme divin!
Tu fais sortir là-bas des gens de leur chaumière;
Je veux de l’ombre, toi, tu veux de la lumière;
Je voulais des soupirs, toi, tu veux des chansons.
Belle, un baiser! -Jamais. Paix, Monsieur. Finissons.

J’obéis.

Mais pourquoi m’entraînes-tu toi-même
Dans plus d’ombre, et pourquoi murmures-tu: Je t’aime!
O femmes!

Résister et céder, c’est la loi.

Peut-on du mois de mai faire un meilleur emploi
Que de s’aimer, et l’ombre a-t-elle une autre affaire
Que l’hymen de celûi que la beauté préfère
Avec celle que l’âme a choisie? O forêts!
Tu chuchotes encor: Sois sage! Tu voudrais,
Mais tu n’oses. Vivons! Sois Bacchante! Sois Grâce!
Tu t’appelles Barine et je m’appelle Horace.
Quand Catulle avait bu son petit vin sabin
Il ne se gênait pas pour voir Glycère au bain.
Je suis classique. Il faut suivre les doux exemples.
Faire de tous les lieux où tu passes des temples,
C’est ta puissance, amour! je suis-transfiguré.
Ajouter un baiser, c’est monter un degré;
Le ciel, en même temps que la bouche, s’approche.
L’attendrissement gagne et pénètre la roche,
Le granit, l’azur noir des chastes lacs dormants,
Les nuages, les champs, les monts, quand deux amants
Sont là, mêlés, perdus, comme en avril les roses,
Dans le céleste oubli des hommes et des choses.

Moment de calme. Arrêt. Nous voici retombés
En pleine rêverie, et là-bas, deux abbés
Qui passent, livre en main, marmottant des prières,
Ont cru que nous lisions aussi nos bréviaires,
Tant tu sembles un ange et tant j’ai l’air d’un sot.
On prend de deux façons le paradis d’assaut;

Un des côtés, c’est Dieu l’autre côté, c’est Eve;
C’est pourquoi le serpent se glisse dans mon rêve;
Or jamais les baisers ne sont bien assoupis;
S’éveiller est leur droit. Tu te fâches. Tant pis!
Tant mieux!’ne crains donc pas ces branches qui tressaillent.
Quoi! pour que Lycoris et Virgile s’en aillent,
Quoi! pour chasser d’auprès d’Horace Lalagé,
Il suffit qu’un vieil arbre imbécile ait bougé!
Non, non. Je brave tout. Je me livre au pillage,
Sans me troubler d’un souffle errant dans le feuillage,

Et sans m’inquiéter si l’écart du fichu
Fait dans l’ombre loucher le faune au pied fourchu.

28 juillet.

LVI Je pressais ton bras

Je pressais ton bras qui tremble;
Nous marchions tous deux ensemble,
Tous deux heureux et vainqueurs.
La nuit était calme et pure.
Dieu remplissait la nature,
L'amour emplissait nos coeurs.

Tendre extase! saint mystère!
Entre le ciel et la terre
Nos deux esprits se parlaient.
A travers l'ombre et ses voiles,
Tu regardais les étoiles,
Les astres te contemplaient.

Et sentant jusqu'à ton âme
Pénétrer la douce flamme
De tous ces mondes vermeils,
Tu disais: Dieu de l'abîme!
Seigneur! vous êtes sublime.
Vous avez fait les soleils.

Et les astres à voix basse
Disaient au Dieu de l'espace,
Au Dieu de l'éternité:
Seigneur, c'est par vous qu'on aime.
Vous êtes grand, Dieu suprême.
Vous avez fait la beauté!

30 mars 1844.

LVII AU BAL

Elle se rapprochait, car il parlait tout bas.
Il lui disait: On a, dans ces bruyants ébats,
Une liberté plus entière.
C’est la foule, on est seul en ces salons dorés.
Le bal joyeux nous cache aux regards effarés
Dans un tourbillon de lumière.
Les quadrilles ardents, follement entraînés,
Bondissent. Nous rêvons, l’un sur l’autre inclinés,
Un rêve peut-être impossible.
Sans voir ces fleurs, sans voir ces fronts épanouis,
Nous passons dans ce bal rayonnant, éblouis
Par une autre fête invisible.
Ils sont aux voluptés, nous sommes à l’amour.
Nos coeurs émus sont pleins d’un mystérieux jour;
Un feu passager les embrase.
Ce que nous contemplons, ils ne peuvent le voir.
Notre âme est un obscur et céleste miroir.
Ils ont l’ivresse, et nous l’extase.
Tandis que dans leurs. yeux le plaisir brûle et luit,
Nous voudrions, troublés par la joie et le bruit,
Nous enfuir sous de chastes voiles.
La foule rit. notre âme est plus ravie encor.
Pour eux, à ces plafonds; brillent les lustres d’or,
Et pour nous, plus haut, les étoiles!

2 mars.

LVIII Nous étions, elle et moi,

Nous étions, elle et moi, dans cet avril charmant
De l’amour qui commence ,en éblouissement.
O souvenirs! ô temps’! heures évanouies!
Nous allions, le. coeur plein d’extases inouïes,
Ensemble dans les bois, et la main dans la main.
Pour prendre le sentier nous quittions le chemin,
Nous quittions le sentier pour. marcher, dans les herbes.
Le ciel resplendissait dans ses regards superbes;

Elle disait: Je t’aime et je me sentais dieu.
Parfois, près d’une source, on s’asseyait un peu.
Que de fois j’ai montré sa gorge aux branches d’arbre!
Rougissante et pareille aux naïades de marbre,
Tu baignais tes pieds nus et blancs comme le lait.
Puis nous nous en allions rêveurs. Il me semblait,
En regardant autour de nous les pâquerettes,
Les boutons d’or joyeux, les pervenches secrètes,
Et les frais liserons d’une eau pure arrosés,
Que ces petites fleurs étaient tous les baisers
Tombés dans le trajet de ma bouche à ta bouche
Pendant que nous marchions; et la grotte farouche,
Et la ronce sauvage et le roc chauve et noir,
Envieux, murmuraient: Que va dirè ce soir
Diane aux chastes yeux, la déesse étoilée,
En voyant toute l’herbe au fond du bois foulée?

3 avril. Jersey.

LIX Aujourd’hui Galatée

Aujourd’hui Galatée aux lascives épaules
Qui voulait être vue et fuyait sous les saules,
Et jetait en courant des pommes aux garçons,
Cymodoce aux doux yeux qui chantait des chansons
Et lavait aux ruisseaux ses belles jambes nues,
Seraient des Pamélas jouant les ingénues
Chez Bobino, prenant un banquier pour sultan,
Sous l’ombrage sacré d’une mère en tartan.

LX DANGER D’ALLER DANS LES BOIS

Ne te figure pas, ma belle,
Que les bois soient pleins d’innocents.
La feuille s’émeut comme l’aile
Dans les noirs taillis frémissants;

L’innocence que tu supposes
Aux chers petits oiseaux bénis

N’empêche pas les douces choses
Que Dieu veut et que font les nids.

Les imiter serait mon rêve;
Je baise en songe ton bras blanc;
Commence! dit l’Aurore. -..Achève!
Dit l’étoile. Et je suis tremblant.

Toutes les mauvaises pensées,
Les oiseaux les ont,. je les ai,
Et par les forêts insensées
Notre coeur n’est point apaisé.

Quand je dis mauvaises pensées.
Tu souris -L’ombre est pleine d’yeux,
Vois, les fleurs semblent caressées
Par quelqu’un dans les bois joyeux.

Viens! l’heure passe. Aimons-nous vite!
Ton coeur, à qui l’amour fait peur,.
Ne sait s’il cherche ou s’il évite
Ce démon dupe, ange trompeur.

En attendant, viens au bois sombre.
Soit. N’accorde aucune faveur.
Derrière toi, marchant dans l’ombre,

Le poète sera rêveur;

Et le faune, qui se dérobe,
Regàrdera du fond des eàux
Quand tu relèveras ta robe
Pour enjamber les clairs ruisseàux.

2 juin.

LXI Tous deux

Tous deux -est-ce à Tibur? est-ce à Ville-d’Avray?
Nous errions, et sa voix me disait: -L’amour vrai
Craint le rapprochement vertigineux des bouches.
Respecte mes peurs. L’âme a des bonheurs farouches;

Elle veut voir s’ouvrir l’éden, et refuser.
C’est assez d’un soupir et c’est trop d’un baiser.
La pudeur, c’est de l’ombre, et l’amour s’en augmente.
Ce que perd la maîtresse est gagné par l’amante;
Oublions cette chair que tu nommes beauté.
L’amour devient le ciel sitôt le corps ôté.
Tu m’aimes, je t’adore. Eh bien! soyons fidèles,
Purs, et contentons-nous d’un frémissement d’ailes.
Mon coeur en plein mystère et ma vie en plein jour,
Je fais ce chaste rêve. Oh! laisse mon amour
Se dresser dans mon âme avec un front d’étoile!
Il faut au coeur un songe, il faut au temple un voile.
Respecte-moi. Soyons des parfums, des rayons!
Dans ce frais mois de mai qu’est-ce que nous voyons?
La promiscuité des âmes et des roses.
Anges, nous nous mêlons à ces apothéoses.
Une honte sacrée est un divin flambeau.
Je t’aime. Un coeur sauvage et tendre est aussi beau
Qu’un ciel sombre éclairé de lueurs boréales.

Pendant qu’elle disait ces choses idéales,
Dans le plus ténébreux du bois je regardais,
Sous un chêne étendant son ombre comme un dais,
Non pas quélque déesse, une Vénus de marbre,
Mais un bonhomme en bois taillé dans un tronc d’arbre,
Un antique magot riant à nos ébats,
Satyre aux yeux de bouc qui me parlait tout bas
Avec sa large bouche effroyable et vorace,
Comme si j’eusse été ce doux flâneur d’Horace:

«Jadis, j’étais un tronc de figuier, bon à rien.
«-Oui-dà, dit un sculpteur persan ou dorien,
«De ceux dont le génie au cabaret trébuche,
«Ferai-je un banc, ferai-je un dieu, de cette bûche?
«Il lui plut que je fusse un dieu. C’est bien. Je fus «Priape, et jè rêvai sous les arbres touffus.”

8 mai. (Pendant le plébiscite.)

LXII L’OUTRAGE PEUT ÊTRE AUSSI DANS LA CARESSE

Hélas, les rayons sont des crimes.
Les vils chardons aux lys sublimes
Disent dans l’ombre: c’est assez.
O Dieu, qui seul savez les sources et les causes,
Qu’est-ce donc que les belles choses
Ont fait, que vous les punissez!
Expiation jamais lasse!
Les flots sont une populace
Qui jette.aux caps l’affront amer;
Les rocs sentent sur eux cracher ces mille bouches;
Ils ont sur leurs. faces farouches
L’âcre salive de la mer.

La fleur radieuse est dans l’herbe;
C’est un malheur qu’être superbe;
Sa splendeur déplaît à quelqu’un;
La limace tyran monte à la rose. esclave,
La baise et la souille, et la bave
Est le châtiment du parfum.

Pourgtioi, tempête, sans relâche,
Frappes-tu de ton éclair lâche
Le mont dressé dans le brouillard?
De quel droit, dans l’Eden imitant les chenilles,
Viens-tu-toucher aux jeunes filles,
Lèvre difforme du vieillard?

Le grand bourreau se nomme Envie,
La longue injure de la vie
S’accomplit à tous les moments.
Dieu, qui n’épargne rien, fait tomber de son aire
Sur les fronts puissants le tonnerre,

Le baiser sur les fronts charmants.

26 juillet 1854.

LXIII Son chien est couché

GABONUS, seul.

Son chien est couché à ses pieds.
La belle s’appelait mademoiselle Amable.
Elle était combustible et j’étais inflammable.
Un treize, je la vis passer sur le Pont-Nuit;
Les Grâces étaient trois, les Muses étaient neuf;
Et c’est là ce qui fait sacré le nombre douze,
Et treize fatal. Donc, un treize, une andalouse
De Pantin, telles sont les rencontres qu’on a,
Amable, d’un regard charmant, m’assassina.
Duel, duo. Sous l’oeil paternel des édiles,..
Il naît sur le Pont-Neuf beaucoup de ces idylles.

Je la qualifiai d’ange, un mois à peu près.
Bref, je me demandais un jour si je romprais,
Quand, par un doux soleil d’avril, entre deux pluies,
Je reçus ce billet de l’ange: « Tu m’ennuies.
Bonsoir.” -Ce qui me fit furieux. D’autant plus Que c’est elle, parbleu, qui m’ennuyait le plus

Ensuite, éperdument, à je ne sais plus quelle
Déesse qu’entourait une étrange séquelle,
Des poètes, des gueux, des grecs, des chambellans
De l’atout, noir démon qui hante les brelans,
Gens qui s’enrichissaient dans l’aventure épique
Du roi de coeur floué par la dame de pique,
Disant de l’amour: fi! disant de l’honneur: peuh!
Mais trichant. -J’adorai cette drôlesse un peu.
Puis je fus planté là pour un prince valaque.
Je fis la connaissance après d’un chef de claque
Qui me fit pénétrer dans les arts, et j’obtins
Par lui d’être admis presque au rang des cabotins,
Et l’honneur d’approcher parfois les cabotines

En qualité d’esclave adorant leurs bottines;
Une, Lise, accepta mon coeur sous ses talons;
Le temps qu’un perroquet grimpe trois échelons,
Je fus vainqueur, je fus heureux, et je fus bête;
Trois progrès. Mais, hélas! la fémme est la tempête.
Lise en colère un jour chassa tous ses laquais;

(Dont moi.)

Comme un roman déchiré sur les quais,
J’avais déjà perdu plus d’un de mes chapitres;
J’étais sorti des grecs, j’étais sorti des pitres,
Mes amantes n’étaient qu’un vague souvenir;
Tout à coup je sentis en moi tout rajeunir
Comme si le soleil empourprait ma fenêtre,
Et mes illusions les plus roses renaître
En voyant une fille au confessionnal;
Le gamin Cupidon dans mon vieux coeur banal
Fit sa rentrée avec trompettes et fanfares.
Ah! quand donc mettra-t-on sur la femme des phares!
Dans l’église où du mal meurt la contagion,
Chez les prêtres; au coin de la religion,
Entre deux saints de pierre, un apôtre, un prophète,
Apercevant dans l’ombre une fille parfaite,
Je fis cette sottise énorme de l’aimer;
Elle m’incendia sans pourtant s’allumer;
J’eus l’âpre enivrement des flammes méprisées;
Elle me permettait d’errer sous ses croisées;
Rien de plus. Je perdis gaîté, raison, humour;
Je fus toute une année imbécile d’amour.
Ah! lorsqu’elle émiettait sa prière, autour d’elle,
Certes, comme un essaim d’oiseaux, à tire-d’aile,
Les chérubins venaient, et lui disaient: ma soeur!
Quand elle s’enfermait avec son confesseur,
Je me la figurais penchant sur le calvaire
Ses mains jointes, ses yeux vierges, son front sévère,
Son profil chaste, fait pour Greuze ou pour Lancret.

Un beau jour, par un trou de serrure indiscret,
Au lieu du Golgotha je contemplai l'Olympe;
Moi qui n'eusse du doigt osé. toucher sa guimpe,
Je la vis toute nue aux bras de son abbé.
Marie était Vénus, Agnès était Hébé.
Ceci me mit en fuite, et j'en fus longtemps blême.

Pourtant j'avais toujours dans l'esprit ce problème:
Trouver un coeur qui fût le compagnon du mien.
Je me fis voyageur, chercheur, bohémien,
Nomade, et j'explorai les mers, les flots, les îles.

Un jour je débarquai dans un pays sans villes,
Sans hommes presque, un lieu charmant; et j'eus l'émoi,
Comme j'étais rêveur, que soudain vînt à moi,
Dans l'état de nature, une femme inconnue.
Je m'écriai, voyant qu'elle était toute nue:.
Ah! celle-ci du moins avoue! -Et, très flatté:
De quel puits sortez-vous, lui dis-je, ô Vérité?
Elle vint, puis s'enfuit, puis. revint, et Végèce.
Eût moins bien manoeuvré que cette sauvagesse,
Si bien qu'à la façon dont elle m'aborda,
Je vis qu'Otaïti ressemblait à Bréda.
Je la civilisai. Mais, ciel bleu! que de choses
Il fallut lui donner! jupons blancs, chapeaux roses,
Robes, manteaux, satins, velours, bijoux de prix!
La sauvage, au rebours des femmes de Paris,
Commence toute nue et finit fort vêtue.
L'homme fait la poupée et Dieu fit la statue;
Toute la femme tient dans ces quelques mots-là.
La chair sert de prétexte à notre falbala.
L'île était un éden tiède et toujours en fête;
J'étais Adam, mon Eve était belle et bien faite;
Or ce chef-d'oeuvre avait un singe pour amant;
J'étais de temps en temps regardé fixement,
A travers les rameaux en fleurs, par un gorille.
Sept pieds de haut, des dents de tigre, un oeil qui brille,

Peste! je m’évadai du paradis. -Depuis,
Cherchant les amours, comme un lierre les appuis,
J’ai fait tous les essais possibles je rature
Une aventure en moi par une autre aventure;
J’aimai,-me figurant qu’aimer n’a jamais nui,
Celle-ci par plaisir, celle-là par ennui,
L’une pour sa chanson, l’autre pour sa richesse,
L’autre parce qu’étant vieille, elle était duchesse,
L’autre pour ses amants, l’autre pour son mari;
J’adorai Berthe, Anna, Mousqueton, Colibri,
Jeannette, Olympia. -Donc j’ai connu les femmes,
J’en ai connu les coeurs, j’en ai connu les âmes,
Le haut, le bas, le vrai, le faux, le mal, le bien;
Et la conclusion; la voici: Viens, mon chien!

20 décembre.

LXIV Quand deux cœurs en s’aimant

Quand deux coeurs en s’aimant ont doucement vieilli,
Oh! quel bonheur profond, intime, recueilli!
Amour! hymen d’en haut! ô pur lien des âmes!
II garde ses rayons même en perdant ses flammes.
Ces deux coeurs qu’il a pris jadis n’en font plus qu’un.
Il fait, des souvenirs de leur passé commun,
L’impossibilité de vivre l’un sans l’autre.
— (Juliette, n’est-ce pas? cette vie est la nôtre!)
Il a la paix du soir avec l’éclat du jour,
Et devient l’amitié tout en restant l’amour!

22 septembre 1854.

I LA BLANCHE AMINTE

— Çà, dit-il, que t’en semble
Écoute, Écho, faisons une chanson ensemble.

Sitôt qu’Aminte fut venue
Nue,
Devant le dey qui lui semblait
Laid,

Plus blanche qu’un bloc de Carrare
Rare,
Elle défit ses cheveux blonds,
Longs.

Alors, ô tête de l’eunuque,
Nuque
Du Bostangi, tu te courbas
Bas.

Le bassa, dont l’amour enflamme
L’âme,
À ses pieds laissa son mouchoir
Choir,

En disant: -Ne sois pas rebelle,
Belle,
Tes pieds blancs et tes blonds cheveux
Veux.

Or c’était le bassa d’Épire
Pire
Qu’un vrai moine et plus qu’un manchot
Chaud,

Faisant turques et circassiennes

Siennes,
Et pour soi seul en nourrissant Cent.

Donc, à sa parole exigeante
Gente
Aminte ne dit au vaurien
Rien.
Elle inclina son cou de cygne,
Signe
Qu’elle trouvait le vieux corbeau
Beau.

Quand ses femmes virent Aminte,
Mainte
Jalouse idée à plus de vingt
Vint.

Longtemps le sérail infidèle
D’elle
Parla, puis de ses cheveux blonds
Longs,

Les blanches qu’à Chypre on rencontre
Contre,
Et les noires de Visapour
Pour.

3 janvier 1829.

II LE PRINCE FAINÉANT

Il n’est trésor que de vivre à son aise.

VILLON.
Guy, mon père,
N’use point,
A rien faire
Son pourpoint.
Pas de fête
Qu’il n’apprête,
Casque en tête,
Dague au poing.

Mon grand-père,
Navarrois,
Fit la guerre
Pour la croix,
Sous Alonze
Coeur-de-bronze,
En l’an onze
Cent vingt-trois.

Jean de Mesme
Son aïeul
Qui dort blême
Au linceul,
Dans Toulouse
La jalouse,
Contre douze
Luttait seul.

Mes ancêtres
Fort vantés,
Portaient, maîtres
Des comtés,

Sur la marge
D’un dos large Une charge
De cités.

L’un d’eux, Eudes
De Montfort,
Fut des leudes
Le plus fort,
Son épaule
Jusqu’au pôle
Portait. Dôle,
Sans effort.

Le grand-père
De ceux-là,
Noir sicaire
D’Attila,
Vieille lame,
Eut dans l’âme
Plus de flamme
Que l’Hékla.

Moi, leur mince Suppléant,
Suis le prince Fainéant.

Mon bras casse,
S’il déplace
Leur cuirasse
De géant.

Car d’entailles
Moins friand,
Des batailles
Souriant,

Tout me lasse,
Fêtes, chasse,
Dire: grâce,
En priant!

Même aux belles
J’ai mépris,
Et loin d’elles
Mon coeur pris
Laisse, en somme,
Faire un somme
Aux cerfs, comme
Aux maris.

30 juin juillet 1828.

III CE QUE GEMMA PENSE D’EMMA

Que fait l’orfèvre? Il achève Quelque anneau mystérieux.
Sa boutique semble un rêve
Qu’emplissent de vagues yeux;

L’opale est une prunelle,
La turquoise est un regard;
La flamme tremble éternelle
Dans l’œil du rubis hagard.

L’émeraude en sa facette
Cache une ondine au front clair;
La vicomtesse de Cette
Avait les yeux verts de mer.

Le diamant sous son voile
Rêve, des cieux ébloui;
Il regarde tant l’étoile
Que l’étoile entre dans lui.

L’ambre est une larme austère;
Le saphir au chaste feu
Est devenu bleu sous terre
Tant il a contemplé Dieu!

Une femme chez l’orfèvre
Entre, sourire éclatant;
Les paroles sur sa lèvre
Battent de l’aile en chantant.

Elle porte un châle à palmes,
Un chapeau rose charmant;
Autour de ses grands yeux calmes
Tout frissonne doucement.

Elle brille et jase, et semble
Lueur, parfum, colibri;
Si belle que le cœur tremble,
S’étonne, et cherche un abri.

Où va-t-elle? d’où sort-elle?
D’où sort l’aube? où va le jour?
Elle est la joie, étincelle
De cette flamme, l’amour.

Le peuple à la vitre admire,
D’un œil. tendre et transporté,
Les femmes le cachemire
Et les hommes la beauté.

Tous l’appellent fée ou reine,
Astre, ange des cieux venu,
Et se sentent pleins de haine
Pour son amant inconnu.

Elle est blanche, aimable, exquise,
Folle et gaie; et, sans combats,
Toute la foule est conquise;
Chacun soupire tout bas:

Je voudrais être!... -et se nomme
Quelque idéal triomphant.
— Son ami! dit un jeune homme.
— Son mari! dit un enfant.

Qu’est-ce cloné que cette femme?
C’est une femme. Cela,

Quand Dieu fit la première âme,
Naquit et l’ensorcela.
Elle choisit chez l’orfèvre

Tous les beaux joyaux tremblants;
Et l’or semble avoir la fièvre
Entre ses petits doigts blancs.

Elle prend tout, la pirate,
L’aigue, soeur des gouttes d’eau,
Les agates de Surate
Et les émaux du Lido,

Et la parure complète
De sardoine et de béryl;
Elle éclate à chaque emplette
D’un doux rire puéril.

La perle voit cette belle.
Pourquoi fuir, perle au doux front?
— J’aime mieux la mer, dit-elle;
C’est moins sombre et moins profond.

5 avril 1855.

IV VASE DE CHINE À LA PETITE CHINOISE Y-HANG-TSEI

Vierge chi pays du thé,
Dans ton beau rêve enchanté,
Le ciel est une cité
Dont la Chine est la banlieue.

Dans notre Paris obscur,
Tu cherches, fille au front pur,
Tes jardins d’or et d’azur
Où le paon ouvre sa queue;

Et tu souris à nos cieux;
A ton âge un nain joyeux
Sur la faïence des yeux
Peint l’innocence, fleur bleue.

1er décembre 1851.

V MAUVAISES LANGUES

Un pigeon aime une pigeonne.
Grand scandale dans le hallier
Que tous les ans mai badigeonne.
Une ramière aimé un ramier.

Leur histoire emplit les charmilles.
Par les leurs ils sont compromis.
Cela se voit dans les familles
Qu’on est entouré d’ennemis.

Espionnage et commérage.
Rien ne donne plus d’âcreté,
De haine, de vertu, de rage
Et de fiel, qu’un bonheur guetté.
Que de fureur sur cette églogue!
L’essaim volant aux mille voix
Parle, et mêle à , son dialogue
Toutes les épines des bois.

L’ara blanc, là mésange bleue,
Jettent des car, des si, des mais,
Où, les gestes des hoche-queue.
Semblent semer des guillemets:

«-J’en sais long sur la paresseuse,
Dit un corbeau, juge à mortier.
— Moi, je connais sa blanchisseuse.
— Et moi, je connais son portier.

— Certe, elle n’est point sauvagesse.
— Est-on sûr qu’ifs sont mariés?
— Voilà, pour le prix de sagesse,
Deux pigeons bien avariés.”

Le geai dit: Leurs baisers blasphèment.
Le pinson chante: Ça ira.
La linotte fredonne: Ils s’aiment.
La pie ajoûte: Et cætera.

On lit que vers elle il se glisse
Le soir, avec de petits cris,
Dans le rapport à la police
Fait par une chauve-souris.

Le peuple ailé s’indigne, tance,
Fulmine un verdict, lance un bill.
Tel est le monde. Une sentence,
Redoutable, sort du babil.

Cachez-vous, Rosa. Fuyez vite
Loin du bavardage acharné.
L’amourette qu’on ébruite
Est un rosier déraciné.

Tout ce conte, ô belle ineffable,
Doit par vous être médité.
Prenez garde, c’est une fable,
C’est-à-dire une vérité.

9 août 1865.

VI Danseuse, écoute-moi.

Danseuse, écoute-moi. Le Dieu du firmament
Qui créa l'aube pure et fit ton front charmant,
A tout ce qui contient le bonheur, jeune, fille,
Attache de sa main quelque chose qui brille
D'un éclat à la fois chimérique et réel,
La paillette à ta jupe et l'étoile à son ciel.

8 août 1839.

VII LE PORCHE DE SAINT-LUC

Le porche de Saint-Luc, sur un vieux fût de pierre
S’appuie, et porche et fût ne sont plus qu’herbe et lierre.
Au noir pilier s’adosse un homme singulier,
Plus grave et mieux assis au rebord du pilier
Qu’un archevêque en chaire ou qu’un juge en grand’chambre;
Vieillard morne et hideux comme le mois Décembre
Et dont vous auriez peur, madame, je le crois,
Plus que d’un beau bandit rencontré, dans un bois.
On frémit d’un serpent moins que d’une chenille.
C’est un mendiant roux, vêtu d’une guenille,

Qui se confond, ridé, sordide et chevelu,
Avec la borne grise et le mur vermoulu.
Sur ce vieillard narquois vont pleuvant les monnaies.
Le pilier n’est que. lèpre et l’homme n’est que plaies.
Par Hercule! on est prêt à jurer que ce vieux
Un beau matin -gèrma dans ce bloc chassieux,
Et, pareil au gui noir qui sur le chêne pousse,
Couvert de barbe àinsi que la pierre de mousse,
Sortit, comme une fleur qui s’ouvre aux papillons,
Des fentes dù granit avec tous ses haillons;
Si bien que, maintenant,, grimaçant sur la rue,
Il est du vieux pilier la vivante verrue.

Homme étrange entre tous, qui vous ferait affront,
Qui, sans trop s’émouvoir, verrait votre beau front,
Vos longs cheveux, dorés comme les cheveux d’Eve,
Votre bouche qui rit, votre regard qui rêve,
Et leur préférerait -est-il sage? est-il fou? -
Le profil d’un vieux roi gravé sur un gros sou!

3 octobre 1842.

VIII CHANSON

L’hiver gronde et fait cent querelles,
^ vieilles gens, ô vieilles gens,
Aux girouettes, des tourelles;
Pendant qu’elles grincent entre elles,
Courez aux tripots indulgents,
O jeunes gens,ô jeunes gens.

L’araignée au mur fait sa trame,
^ vieilles gens, ô vieilles gens.
L’archet frémit, le gaz s’enflamme,
L’aile du beau papillon femme
Étale ses reflets changeants,
O jeunes gens, ô jeunes gens.

Cachez de l’or dans vos paillasses,
^ vieilles gens, ô vieilles gens.
Buvez du punch, prenez des glaces,
Les rires narguent les grimaces,
Les masques raillent les sergents,
O jeunes gens, ô jeunes gens.

La mort tient tout dans ses doigts grêles,
O vieilles gens, ô vieilles gens.
Volis serez dupés par les belles,
Et vous fuirez hors de chez elles,
Nus comme de petits Saint-Jeans,
O jeunes gens, ô jeunes gens.
La mort vide vos escarcelles,
O vieilles gens, ô vieilles gens.
Les tourtereaux aux molles ailes
Sont plumés par les tourterelles;
Bouches roses et becs rongeants;
O jeunes gens, ô jeunes gens.

27 novembre 1853.

IX Oui, fût-on Homère,

Oui, fût-on Homère, il faut rire;
Il faut rire, fût-on Caton.
Le bois nous offre Déjanire,
Le pré nous donne Margoton.
Le rire vient des dieux. À Rome
Comme à Pantin, il règne, il est.
Le rire est l’attribut de l’homme,
César riait, Brutus riait.
Jésus souriait. Mais en somme,
Sourire, c’est bien rire un peu.
Et c’est pour cela qu’il est homme,
Et c’est pour cela qu’il est Dieu.

Le bois nous offre Déjanire,
Le pré nous donne Margoton.
Oui, fût-on Homère, il faut rire,
Il faut rire, mon cher Caton.

X EN AFRIQUE

J’allai faire visite au roi. Les avenues
De son palais étaient pleines de femmes nues,
  Espèce de sérail épars comme un troupeau.
Quand j’entrai, le roi vint, coiffé d’un grand chapeau,
En habit noir; pieds nus, et complètêment ivre;
Il s’assit sur un trône en cuir à clous-de cuivre,
Et dit: Homme, sais-tu que je suis petit-fils
Du mage Zoroastre, ancien roi de Memphis?
Parle. -Et je répondis -au fils de Zoroastre i.
 — Oui, sire. -Et je lui mis dans la main une piastre.
Il fut content, m’offrit à boire, et s’en alla:

XI Quiconque est amoureux

Quiconque est amoureux est esclave et s’abdique.
L’amour n’est pas l’amour; il s’appelle Ananké.
Si l’on ne veut pas être à la porte flanqué,
Dès qu’on aime une belle, on s’observe, on se scrute;
On met le naturel de côté; bête brute,
On se fait ange; on est le nain Micromégas;
Surtout on ne fait point chez elle de dégâts;
On se tait, on attend; jamais on ne s’ennuie,
On trouve bon le givre, et la bise et la pluie,
On n’a ni faim, ni soif, on.est de droit transi;
Un coup de dent de trop vous perd. Oyez ceci:
Un brave ogre des bois, natif de Moscovie,
Était fort amoureux d’une fée, et l’envie.
Qu’il avait d’épouser cette. dame s’accrut
Au point de rendre fou ce pauvre cœur tout brut;
L’ogre un beau jour d’hiver peigne sa peau velue,
Se présente au palais de la fée, et salue,
Et s’annonce à l’huissier comme prince Ogrousky.
La fée avait un fils, on ne sait pas de qui.
Elle était ce jour-là sortie, et quant au mioche,
Bel enfant blond nourri de crème et de brioche,
Don fait par quelque Ulysse à cette Calypso,
Il était sous la porte et jouait au cerceau.
On laissa l’ogre et -lui tout seuls dans l’antichambre.
Comment passer le temps quand il neige en décembre,
Et quand on n’a personne avec qui dire un mot?
L’ogre se mit alors à croquer le marmot.
C’est très simple. Pourtant c’est aller un peu vite,
Même lorsqu’on est ogre et qu’on est moscovite,
Que de gober ainsi les mioches du prochain.
Le bâillement d’un ogre est frère de la faim.

Quand la dame rentra, plus d’enfant. On s’informe.
La fée avise l’ogre avec sa bouche énorme.

As-tu vu, cria-t-elle, un bel enfant que j’ai?
Le bon ogre naïf lui dit: Je l’ai mangé.
Or, c’était maladroit. Vous qui cherchez à plaire,
Jugez ce que devint l’ogre devant la mère
Furieuse qu’il eût soupé de son dauphin.
Que l’exemple vous serve; aimez, mais soyez fin;
Adorez votre belle, et soyez plein d’astuce;
N’allez pas lui manger, comme cet ogre russe,
Son enfant, ou marcher sur la patte à son chien.

XII À l’âge des bergeries,

À l’âge des bergeries,
Quand les lèvres sont fleuries,
Nous errions loin des prairies,
Lise et moi, dans le hallier;
Lise, au vent livrant sa tresse,
Moi, tremblant d’une caresse;
La maîtresse,
L’écolier.

Voyant la nuit prête à naître,
J’osai ne plus me connaître,
Je pris un baiser peut-être;
Un vieux frêne soupira;
La république des bêtes
Chantait, moineaux et fauvettes,
Sur nos têtes,
Ça ira!

Le soir répandait ses brumes.
Doux amoùr, tu nous consumes!
Tout à coup nous aperçûmes
(Était-ce un bouc? je le crois)
Dans la sauge et la joubarbe,
O conteur du roi de Garbe!
Une barbe
Dans le bois!

Moi qui connais mon Tityre
Et qu’Horace aux champs attire,
Je criai: C’est un satyre!
Lise dit: C’est un sapeur!
Sans plus nous en rendre compte,
Nous fuîmes; elle moins prompte;
Elle eut honte,

Et j’eus peur.

L’âpre forêt taciturne
A dans son ombre nocturne
Tous les fantômes, Saturne,
Faune, Irmensul, Urian;
D’une vague horreur couverte,
La grande Dryade verte Déconcerte.
Florian.

8 février 1855.

XIII BRUIT DE GUITARE

La même belle nous dompte,
Hélas! depuis l’an passé;
Le choisi, c’est toi, vicomte;
Moi, je suis le méprisé.

À nous deux de cette fée
Nous composons l’entretien.;
Et, de ton amour coiffée,
Elle se chausse du.mien.

D’où nous vient ce double rôle?
Elle ne sait pas pourquoi.
Je lui fais l’effet d’un drôle.
Tu lui fais l’effet d’un roi.

Mais son cceur pour. rien rie-compte
Dans ta joie et dans mon deuil;
Je suis son dédain, vicomte,
Et tu n’es que son orgueil.

Viendra quelque gueux, moins bête,
Qu’elle aimera, c’est la loi,
Lui faisant comme à toi fête,
Le méprisant comme moi.

16 janvier 1855.

XIV LA LUNE

L’Olympe a dans l’azur des degrés inconnus;
Un jour, en descendant cet escalier, Vénus
Tomba, se fit des bleus ailleurs que sur la face,
Et les hommes en bas rirent; l’effroi. s’efface
Quand on peut voir les dieux par leur autre côté.
— Soit, dit alors Vénus, pour leur rire effronté,
Les hommes, ayant eu cette bonne fortune,
Ne verront plus de moi que cela.
C’est la lune.

3 juin.

XV Le marquis de Bade a deux cornes

Le marquis de Bade a deux cornes;
Il en décore son blason.
Je désire peu que tu m’ornes
De cette parure, ô Suzon.

Belle, tu n’as point d’armoiries,
Mais ton doux rire est enchanteur;
Bois aux sources, jamais taries,
Et crois au ciel, jamais menteur.

Ces princes, que l’ombre enveloppe,
Avaient toujours l’épée en main;
Ils conquéraient souvent l’Europe,
Et quelquefois le grand chemin.

Guerre au dehors, guerre civile,
Tout plaisait à ces hasardeux;
Calmes, ils laissaient dans leur ville
Leur femme, avec un page ou deux.

Ces fiers badois au piéd allègre
Firent la guerre aux fils d’Orcan,
Au négus, magot chrétien nègre,
Au grand Knez, cousin du grand Khan,

Aux pays de neige et de sable,
A Vienne, où régnait le dauphin,
A Chypre, à Zante, à Rome, au diable;
Ils voyagèrent tant qu’enfin

Ces marquis, sujets aux absences,
Jaloux des cornes du bison,
Ajoutèrent ces excroissances
A la grandeur de leur maison.

Bade, 10 septembre 1865

XVI Veux-tu vivre,

Veux-tu vivre, être admiré,
Et de graisse rembourré,
Et centenaire enterré?
Crains le pourpoint trop serré,
Les gens en bonnet carré,.
L’encre et le papier timbré.;
Fais usage modéré
Cibo, Baccho, Venere;
Laisse aux manants le. poiré,
Le. champignon dans le pré,
Et ta servante au curé..
Le seizième eut Turlupin.
Le dix-septième eut Scapin.
Le dix-huitième eut Crispin.
Le dix-neuvième a Dupin.

XVIII Il avait le front bas,

Il avait le front bas, le rire d’un pirate;
Le poil noir, l’œil chinois, la mine scélérate;
Un turban le coiffait comme un Nostradamus;

Et, se rejoignant présque à son gros nez camus,
Moustaches et sourcils d’une énorme envergure
Lui dessinaient un X à travers la figure.

XIX Messeigneurs,

(Trianon, sur son tréteau, annonçant le spectacle.)

Messeigneurs, nous aurons pour lustre la grande Ourse.
Vous entendrez, chacun payant selon sa bourse,
Irus pour un liard, Crésus pour un sequin,
A demi-voix, au bord du manteau d'arlequin,
Jaser la folle avoine avec le brin de vigne.
Un lac, où vous verrez vaguement fuir un cygne,
Servira de miroir, parmi l'herbe et le thym,
Aux fleurs se recoiffant dans l'ombre le matin.
Les bois seront ornés d'une biche effrayée.
La scène au premier plan sera tout égayée
D'aveugles, de pieds-bots défaisant leurs chaussons,
De lépreux se raclant avec de vieux tessons,
Et de voleurs auxquels on lira leur sentence.
Au fond monsieur Haillon et madame Potence
Se feront des saluts respectueux. Enfin,
Gueux, les dents de la Mort et les dents de la Faim
Riront au dénoûment de la pièce, et la Gale
Epousera l'auteur dans un feu de Bengale;
Ils s'en iront chantant et bras dessus dessous,
Et le diable au bon Dieu jettera des gros sous.

XX Fils, je veux dans ce conte,

Fils, je veux dans ce conte, où vont venir les fées,
Bâtir un temple avec des fleurs et des trophées,
Heurter les Arlequins contre les Amyntas,
Et vous montrer les jeux et les amours d’un tas
De rayons d’or prenant leurs ébats dans la brune,
Et mêler le grand jour avec le clair de lune;
Vous verrez à minuit apparaître midi;
Je prétends marier Piastre à Maravédi,
Le pied de Cendrillon aux bottes de sept lieues,
Et faire en plein soleil danser les âmes bleues.

XXI QUAI DE LA FERRAILLE

CHOEUR DES RACOLEURS

Nous sommes les sergents recruteurs. Pour la gloire,
Pour l’empire, pour être illustre dans l’histoire,
Il faut des meurtriers au roi; nous en cherchons.
Pour faire nos drapeaux noùs prenons des torchons;
Pour faire des héros nous prenons des canailles.
Nous.rions en ouvrant dans l’ombré nos tenailles;
Qui se fie au sourire est pincé par l’étau.
Le froid, la faim, la soif, sônt des coups de marteau
Qui donnent une forme obscure-aux misérables;
Mais pourvu qu’il leur reste un œil fier,. de bons râbles,
Des vices, de la rage et des instincts fougueux,
Ils sont notre gibier; nous épluchons les gueux;
Nous trions les gredins; nous passons à nos cribles
Toutes sortes de gens sauvages et terribles;
Les méchants sont les bons; les sanglants sont les beaux.
Ils deviendront vautours, ayant -été corbeaux.
A nous tout ce qui traîne! à nous tout-ce qui passe!
Sa Majesté nous dit: Sergents, faites main basse.
Elle nous livre en bloc le tas des mendiants;
Nous lui rendons des Cids et des Esplandians.
Nous avons carte blanche et pleins pouvoirs pour faire
L’armée horrible ainsi que le roi la préfère; -
Nous enrôlons des loups, des ours, des juifs de choix
Et de bons allemands qui pattent les pourchois;
Nous prenons tin coquin,-faux boiteux, faux aveugle,
Nous l’offrons gentiment à Bellone qui beugle,
Et plus tard il aura, rampant sur les pavés,
La jambe de bois vraie et de vrais yeux crevés.
Nous montrons à qui veut les voir nos -tours fort drôles,
Nos trucs, nos fleurs de lys, parfois sur nos épaules,
Nos façons de tricher aux cartes, nos galons,
Nos plumets, notre sabre. et jamais nds talons. -

Nous régnons; nous dressons nos fières silhouettes,
Étant tous très voleurs et même un peu poëtes.
On nous suit. Si ce n’est de force, c’est de gré.
Que c’est beau, l’épaulette et le colback tigré!
Qui veut de l’or? Venez, manants. Notre escarcelle
S.offre, brille, éblouit le pauvre, et le harcèle.
Quand nous voyons passer des moines, nous louchons
Du côté de ces gars masqués de capuchons;
En fait de va-nu-pieds, nous préférons les carmes;

Pour les guerres, les camps, les clairons, les vacarmes,
Les sacs et les viols, on prend des assassins
Et des larrons, à moins qu’on n’ait des capucins;
Les abbés défroqués sont d’admirables reîtres
Et nos meilleurs bandits sont faits avec des prêtres;
Un casque sied au prêtre aussi bien qu’un turban.

(Une pause.)

Beau sexe, attention! Tambours, battez un ban.
En pêchant ces messieurs les héros en eau trouble,
On sert Mars et Vénus, et nous faisons coup double.
Les dames, grâce à nous, ne manquent point d’amants
Vu que nous fournissons l’état de garnements.
L’enfant Amour, crieur public, annonce et braille
Le départ pour Cythère au quai de la Ferraille;
Cypris, étant déesse et toute nue, aurait
Grand tort de ne point suivre Ajax au cabaret;
Achille a pour Catau des façons très civiles.
Les grenadiers -battez tambours! -ça prend les villes
Et les mentons; c’est gai, féroce et tapageur.
Babet devant Fanfan sent une humble rougeur;
Les belles ont le goût des héros, et le mufle
Hagard d’un scélérat superbe sous le buffle
Fait bâiller tendrement l’hiatus des fichus;
Quand passe un tourbillon de drôles moustachus,
Hurlant, criant, affreux, éclatants, orgiaques,

Un doux soupir émeut les seins élégiaques.
Quels beaux hommes! housard ou pandour, le sabreur
Effroyable, traînant après lui tant d’horreur
Qu’il ferait reculer presque la sombre Hécate,
Charme la plus timide et la plus délicate.
Rose, qui ne voudrait toucher qu’avec son gant
Un honnête homme, prend la griffe d’un brigand,
Et la baise; telle est la femme. Elle décerne
Avec emportement son âme à la caserne;
Elle garde aux bourgeois son petit air bougon.
Toujours la sensitive adora le dragon.
Sur ce, battez, tambours! Ce qui plaît à la bouche
De la blonde aux doux Yeux, c’est le baiser farouche;
La femme se fait faire avec joie un enfant
Par l’homme qui tua, sinistre et triomphant;
Et c’est la volupté de toutes ces colombes
D’ouvrir leurs lits à ceux qui font ouvrir des tombes.

31 mars 1870.

XXII Un salon.

I LA MARQUISE ANTOINETTE

Un salon.
ANTOINETTE, marquise ayant épousé un vieux. Autrefois grisette. Trente ans.
ADOLPHE, bon état. Dix-huit ans.

ADOLPHE, à part.
Elle est seule.

LA MARQUISE ANTOINETTE, à part.
C’est lui.

ADOLPHE, à part.
Profitons du moment.
Il s’arrête et l’admire.
Qu’elle est belle!

ANTOINETTE, sans se déranger de son attitude.
Bonjour, Adolphe.
A part.
Il est charmant.

ADOLPHE, à part.
C’est l’étoile Vénus!
I1 salue.
Madame la marquise...
A part.
Comme elle est adorable et comme elle est exquise
Avec son bras ainsi ployé sous le menton!

ANTOINETTE
Que dit-on de nouveau?

ADOLPHE,
L’amiral Codrington

Vient de battre les turcs à Navarin.

ANTOINETTE
Adôlphe,
Qu’est-ce que c’est que ça, Navarin?

ADOLPHE
C’est un golfe.

ANTOINETTE
En France?

ADOLPHE
Non. En Grèce.

ANTOINETTE
Ah! bien.

ADOLPHE
Au fond, Pylos,
Au premier plan, la baie avec quelques îlots,
Voa Navarin. Or...
A part.
Quel regard, quelle taille!
Balbutiant.
Madame...

ANTOINETTE
Nous parlions, je crois, de la bataille...

ADOLPHE
De Codringtôn. Non pas, Navarin!
A part.
Je suis fou.
Je patauge.
Haut.
On était dans les eaux de Corfou;

On savait que les turcs, non sans quelque mystère,
Avaient quitté Cythère...

ANTOINETTE
Ah! qu’est-ce que Cythère?

ADOLPHE
C’est une île. Cythère, autrement Cérigo.
On y peut cultiver le poivre et l’indigo.
Cette île sert aux turcs de poste et de caverne.
Sinan Cigale dit: Cythère est la lanterne
De l’Archipel.

ANTOINETTE, distraite.
Ainsi -l’amiral...

ADOLPHE
Codrington.

ANTOINETTE
Après?

ADOLPHE
Le vingt octobre, au point du jour, dit-on,
Les flottes ont quitté le mouillage de Zante.
La marine ottomane était molle et pesante,
Le système des turcs était de refuser...

ANTOINETTE
Un baiser! je crois bien.

ADOLPHE
Ce n’est pas un baiser,
C’est le combat.

ANTOINETTE
C’est vrai. Vous disiez? le système

Des turcs...

ADOLPHE
Je ne sais plus où j’en étais...

LE DIABLE, dans le trou du souffleur.
Je t’aime!

ADOLPHE
Je t’aime!

ANTOINETTE, à part.
Allons donc!

Haut.
Ciel! monsieur, que faites-vous?
Si vous ne lâchez pas sur-le-champ mes genoux,
Ce que vous faites là, monsieur, n’est pas honnête!
Je vais sonner, monsieur!

LE DIABLE, à part.
J’ai cassé la sonnette.

ADOLPHE
Je t’aime!

ANTOINETTE
Taisez-vous!

ADOLPHE
Je meurs d’amour!

ANTOINETTE
Tais-toi!

ADOLPHE
Madame, ayez pitié! J’ai le coeur plein d’effroi!

Laissez-vous adorer ainsi qu’une madone!
Si tu savais! je sens ma tête en feu. Pardonne!
Oh! laisse-moi mourir à tes pieds!

ANTOINETTE
Dans mes bras!

LE DIABLE
J’ai cru que le crétin ne s’en tirerait pas.
Il ne savait d’abord pas un mot de son rôle.
On entend un bruit de baiser.
Rêvant et riant.
Sans nous le monde est bête, avec nous il est drôle.

II IDYLLE

Un bois.

LISE
Puisque votre regard m’apparaît dans l’aurore,

ALBERT
Puisqu’en vos yeux je crois voir une étoile éclore,

LISE
Puisque je veux rester et fuir quand je vous vois,

ALBERT
Puisqu’une lyre est moins douce que votre voix,

LISE
Puisqu’à vos pieds les coeurs font des battements d’ailes,

ALBERT
Puisque vous êtes belle entre toutes les belles,

LISE
Puisque l’oiseau ne peut chanter sans vous nommer,

ALBERT
Puisque je ne puis faire autrement que t’aimer,

LISE
Je dis que l’air est frais,

ALBERT
Je dis que l’onde est pure,

LISE
Je vois un grand sourire au fond de la nature,

ALBERT
Je te prends et t’épouse,

LISE
Et de toi je fais choix,

ALBERT
Et je dis que je veux m’en aller dans les bois.
Moment de rêverie.
Viens.
Est-ce pour jamais?

ALBERT
Oui. Donne ta main blanche.
Ils s’enfoncent dans la forêt.

ÉROS

LISE
Coeur, aie un seul amour!

PAN
Arbre, une seule branche?
C’est malaisé.

LE DIABLE, dans l’ombre.
Léandre aime à cette heure Héro.
Lise aime Albert. La suite au prochain numéro.

25 mars 1874.

III COCARDE ET LOUCHON

LOUCHON
Paul est roux.

COCARDE
Jean est laid.

LOUCHON,
Paul me bat.

COCARDE
Jean me rosse.

LOUCHON
Paul, s'il n'était bandit, serait bête féroce.

COCARDE
Tout l'hiver Jean se grise.

LOUCHON
Et Paul boit tout l'été.

COCARDE
Jean a mis mes effets au mont-de-piété.

LOUCHON
Lorsqu'il tonne et qu'il pleut chez moi, c'est Paul qui souffle.

COCARDE
Jean est un chenapan.

LOUCHON
Et Paul est un maroufle.

COCARDE

Je le déclare ici, ce drôle est mon vainqueur.

LOUCHON.
J’aime cette canaille au fin fond de mon coeur.

IV AU LUXEMBOURG

Un banc. Deux astronomes.

PREMIER ASTRONOME
L'équinoxe ravage affreusement nos côtes.

DEUXIÈME ASTRONOME
Le vent est vicieux. Il fait beaucoup de fautes.

PREMIER ASTRONOME
L'homme se met en route et se trompe souvent.

DEUXIÈME ASTRONOME
Notre vie est de l'eau conduite par du vent.

Sur un autre banc. Des invalides causent.

UN INVALIDE
Tout est en feu.

UN AUTRE
Depuis Berlin jusqu'en Sicile!

UN AUTRE
Faire rentrer Bellone en cage est difficile.

UN AUTRE
Il faut faire la paix avec cet animal
De roi de Prusse.

UN AUTRE
À bas la guerre!

UN AUTRE
Tout va mal.

UN AUTRE
L’empereur ne sait plus où donner de la tête.

UN RÊVEUR, passant.
Les rois lâchent la guerre et c’est Dieu qui l’arrête.
Sur un autre banc. Deux étudiants.

LE PREMIER ÉTUDIANT
Que lis-tu? Cujas?

LE DEUXIÈME
Non. Je lis Dante et Lucain:
Mon père est royaliste et moi républicain.
C’est sa faute. Il m’envoie à Paris. Je m’y forme.
J’y grandis. Je m’emplis de la lumière énorme,
Et j’étais paysan et je suis citoyen.

Sur un autre banc. Deux prêtres.

L’ABBÉ CARON
Fils, le but, c’est l’église, et Dieu c’est le moyen;
Cela n’empêche pas Dieu d’être Dieu; mais; prêtres,
Nous sommes serviteurs avant d’être les maîtres;
Le prêtre est roi, depuis Moïse et Salomon;
Ce qu’on nomme l’esprit humain, é’est le démôn;
La raison est un mot que le dogme rature;
Et c’est pourquoi souvent, corrigeant la nature,
Ce que le ciel permet, le prêtre le défend;
Quand on entend parler le diable dans l’enfant,
Il faut sévir, il faut lui dire de se taire.

L’ABBÉ DE LAMENNAIS
Et c’est ainsi qu’étant Porée, on fait Voltaire.

Sur un autre banc.

UN VIEILLARD
Vous donnez une charte au peuple; qui se perd,
Pour qu'il soit sage. Eh bien, c'est terrible, il s'en sert...

UN AUTRE VIEILLARD
Pour être libre.

Sous les arbres.

UNE JEUNE FILLE
Non!

UN JEUNE HOMME
Que le sein soit de marbre,
C'est bien, mais pas le coeur.

LA JEUNE FILLE
Laissez-moi!

LE JEUNE HOMME
Sous un arbre
On s'embrasse.

LA JEUNE FILLE
Embrassez. -Mais pas comme cela.

LE JEUNE HOMME
LA JEUNE FILLE
Non!

Dans une allée.

UN ENFANT, à une boule qu'il fait rouler.
Je ne veux pas que vous alliez par là!

25 juin 1876.

V LE MENDIANT

Devant la vitre éclairée de la chambre où un jeune homme s’habille pour le bal masqué.

Fort bien. Habillez-vous. -Tiens, c’est le mardi gras!
Rions. Ne soyons point à la jeunesse ingrats.
Il faut se divertir et que le temps se passe.
Vous avez su tirer d’un vieil oncle rapace
Si!

Vingt écus; vous allez les boire en une nuit.
Habillez-vous, jeune homme! à grands cris, à grand bruit!
Sonnez tous vos laquais et vos valets de chambre!
— Bourguignon, mon pourpoint! Picard, ma boîte d’ambre!
Chaussez-moi! rasez-moi! peignez-moi! -C’est cela.
Que vous êtes galant sous l’habit que voilà!
Cambrez la taille un peu. Mettez-vous une mouche,
Comme fait Jeanneton, sur le coin de la bouche.
Le flot de rubans. -Bien. -Et l’air impertinent.
Cela sied. -Le manteau, les gants, et maintenant
L’épée avec sa pomme à mettre des pistaches. -
Que de coeurs suspendus au croc de vos moustaches!
Que de femmes vont dire:. Adorable seigneur!
Vous avez tout, jeunesse, et richesse, et bonheur;
Tout est pour vous, bosquets fleuris, tendres trophées,
C’est bien. On vous dirait habillé par les fées,
Et vous êtes toujours au bal un des premiers
Riez. -Un jour les ans viendront, lourds costumiers;
Maladie et vieillesse, habilleuses sinistres,
Éteindront vos regards sous d’affreux cercles bistres,
Vous ôteront la grâce, et vous mettront,, ô deuil!
Un dôme sur le dos, une loupe sur l’œil,
Une bouche sans dents qui dira: soyons sage!.
Un gros nez, un gros ventre, et sur ce frais visage,
Doux, superbe, adoré de toutes nos houris,

Un vieux masque obstrué d’un buisson de poils gris.
Alors, désespéré, tordant vos mains fiévreuses,
Fuyant les miroirs pleins de visions affreuses,
Aussi lugubre à voir que vous étiez charmant,
Sans pouvoir arracher votre déguisement,
Domino ridicule et chassé des quadrilles,
Voyant les beaux garçons sourire aux belles filles,
Vous irez, trouble fête, errer au milieu d’eux,
Jusqu’à ce que ce spectre, autre masque hideux,
Sans nez, sans yeux, montrant toutes ses dents sans rire,
Qui vient nous chercher tous et par le bras nous tire,
Vous jette un soir, d’un coup de sa fourche de fer,
Dans ce noir carnaval qu’on appelle l’enfer!

Elle, c’est le printemps; pluie et soleil; je l’aime;
Je m’y suis fait.
Un jour, elle me dit:
— Quand même
On est tout seul, les bois sont doux. Les belles eaux!
La campagne me plaît à cause des oiseaux.

Ecoutons-les chanter.
Moi, l’âme épanouie,
J’écoutais. -
— Les oiseaux, dit-elle, ça m’ennuie.
Jouons.
— Aux cartes?
— Non.
— A quoi?
— Je hais le jeu.
Causons. Le jaune est laid, je préfère le bleu.
— Je suis de ton avis.
— Toujours dans les extrêmes!
— Le bleu, dis-je, c’est beau.
— Pourquoi?
— D’abord, tu l’aimes.
Ensuite, c’est le ciel.

Mais le jaune; `c’est l’or:
— Va pour le jaune.
— Il est de mon avis encor!
C’est assommant!
— Faisons la paix.
— Je te pardonne.
Un autre jour:
— Ami, viens, je me sens très bonne,
Le temps est beau, sortons à pied. -
Comme j’offrais
Mon landau:
— Non, dit-elle, il faut, par ce vent frais,
Marcher, rôder, courir au bois à l’aventure. -
On s’habille, on descend.
— Où donc est la voiture?
— Mais tu voulais sortir à pied.
— A pied, jamais!
Marcher par ce vent froid! fi donc! -
Je me soumets.
On attelle.
— Voici le landau.
— Pourquoi faire?
— Mais, pour sortir.
— Tords-moi le cou, je le préfère.
Ah çà! tu veux sortir par cet horrible temps! -
Un autre jour:
— Nos coeurs, dit-elle, sont contents.
Ami, j’ignore tout, mais je suis ta servante.
Puisque je sais aimer, je suis assez savante.
Je t’adore. Mon dieu, c’est toi. -
Le lendemain,
Un grand soufflet sortit de sa petite main,
Et tomba sur ma joue.
— Hé! dis-je.
— Bagatelle!

Viens m’embrasser. Comment me trouves-tu? dit-elle.

— Charmante! -
Et c’est ainsi que je m’accoutumai
Aux inégalités d’humeur du mois de mai.

24 juillet 186...

VII IDYLLE DE LA RUE N.D. DE LORETTE

— Six amants! -Cela fait crier?
— A la fois? -Pourquoi pas? Coquette, Pourquoi Psaphon? -C’est un poète.
— Pourquoi Dimas? -C’est un banquier.
— Et Grib, l’affreux casse-noisette
Plus noirci que son encrier?
— Diable! il écrit dans la gazette.
— Pourquoi Senex, le maltôtier?
— Avoir un vieux, c’est mon système.
— Et Mars? -C’est un beau grenadier.
— Et moi, madame? -Ah! toi! je t’aime.

Avril 1849.

VIII Une rue

(Une rue, la nuit.)

MILLION
Vois-je point là dans l'ombre un homme titubant?

CROQUEFER
Quel est ce gredin triste accroupi sur un banc?

MILLION
Qui vive?

CROQUEFER
Qui va là, sans lanterne, à la brune?

MILLION
Empereur de la Chiner.

CROQUEFER
Empereur de, la luné!
Ils se reconnaissent:

MILLION
C'est toi, drôle?

CROQUEFER
C'est toi, canaille! -touche là.
Ils se serrent la main.

MILLION
Que viens-tu faire ici?

CROQUEFER
J'allais comme cela
Devant moi, trébuchant dans l'obscurité grande.

Dieu! quelle sombre nuit! Cartouche avec sa bande
A passé par ici. N’ayant pas, le coquin;
Trouvé de pauvre diable à qui prendre un sequin,
Ayant aux carrefours en vain tendu ses toiles,
Il a pillé le ciel et volé les étoiles.
— Toi, que faisais-tu là?

MILLION
— Je rêvais.

CROQUEFER
O vertus!
Sais-tu, mortel rêveur, que nous sommes vêtus
Comme d’affreux laquais payés à coups de gaules, Et qu’on voit des haillons flotter sur nos épaules?

MILLION
Vicomte, je le sais.

CROQUEFER
Tu le sais, et c’est tout!
Et rien dans ton cerveau ne s’indigne et ne bout!
Ô vrai sage! ô poëte! ô le plus grand des hommes!
Gueux, et -tout bonnement rêveur!

MILLION
Mon cher, nous sommes
Riches. Oui, nous avons le ciel bleu, le grand air,
La forêt où l’oiseau chante, et, par Jupiter!
La fierté qu’on éprouve à marcher dans les plaines
Librement! -Nous avons l’été, les nuits sereines,
La lune se mirant dans le fleuve argenté...

CROQUEFER
J’aimerais mieux dix sous.

MILLION

Tu n’es pas dégoûté!

IX SUSURRANT VOCES

LA CHEMINÉE
Du bois! j’ai froid.

LA VITRE
Je gèle, et la bise est bourrue.

UN COMMANDEMENT D’HUISSIER
Songe à la providence!

LA MONTRE
Elle demeure rue
Paradis, au Marais, et se nomme...

UN VIEUX CLOU ROUILLÉ DANS LA CLOISON
Le clou.

UN VOLUME D’ANDRÉ CHÉNIER OUVERT SUR LA TABLE
Voix du ciel, bruits divins, chantez!

LISETTE, frappant à la porte.
Pan! pan!

Chut!

UNE BOUTEILLE
LE BONHEUR
LA PORTE
Glou glou.
Je bâille.

LE COFFRE
LE TROU DE LA SERRURE
Je regarde.

LE MUR
J’écoute.

LE LIT
Je m’appelle l’amour.

L’OREILLER
Je m’appelle le doute.

LA CHANDELLE
Le soleil a beaucoup de taches.

LA TRANCHE DE JAMBON
Le laurier
Fut créé pour le porc.

LA TABLE
Je porte l’encrier,
Ce nid tout noir d’où sort l’idée aux ailes blanches.

LE PUPITRE
Le trône et le cercueil sont faits de quatre planches.

UN TOME DÉPAREILLÉ DE BOSSUET
Disparaissez, Vishnou, Bel, Jupiter, Mithra!
Saint-Pierre seul gouverne et règne...
Je ris.

LA PANTOUFLE
Et cætera.
Gloire au pied nu d’Anna!

LA SAVATE
Le pied se change en patte.

UN BUSTE SUR LA CHEMINÉE
Tout commence à pantoufle et finit à savate.

9 décembre 1853.

X Sylvia

SYLVIA
On prétend, Sylvio, que toujours je vous aime.

SYLVIO
On conte, Sylvia, que partout je vous suis.

SYLVIA
Je vous donne mes jours!

SYLVIO
Ô ma beauté suprême!
Gardez les jours, donnez les nuits!

XI André et Lise

ANDRÉ
Je te jure un amour-éternel!

LISE, souriant.
Calme-toi!
Parlons net. Et soyons fripons de bonne foi.

ANDRÉ
Lise!

LISE, caressante.
Dispense-toi, cher amant, de poursuivre.
André, pour de l'or faux je donne du vrai cuivre;
Des serments d'un menteur mon cœur est peu friand;
Je suis franchement fourbe, et je paye en riant
Tes écoute-s'il-pleut, d'un va-t'en-voir-s'ils-viennent.
Fous qui font des serments et niais qui les tiennent!
Tu me feras des traits et je te les rendrai.
André brûle pour Lise et Lise adore André,
Mais Lise berne André comme André trompe Lise.
Amour est notre autel, Caprice est notre église;
On se suit aujourd'hui pour se quitter demain;
D'ailleurs, être autrement, c'est n'avoir rien d'humain;
La passion finit par une pirouette;
Homme veut dire vent et femme girouette.
Aimons-nous, puisque c'est la meilleure façon
D'unir ta perfidie avec ma trahison,
Mais ne nous gênons point et ne soyons point dupes.
Pas de glu sur ta plume et de plomb à mes jupes.
André, soyons heureux; de plus soyons joyeux.
Quel bête de bandeau l'Amour a sur les yeux!
Ôtons-le-lui, veux-tu? Voyons clair dans nos âmes.
Il faut pour faire un feu toutes sortes de flammes,
Et pour faire un destin toutes sortes d'amours.

Les cœurs toujours constants sont aveugles et sourds.
L’œil qui n’a plus d’éclair, l’esprit qui n’a plus d’aile,
Meurt, et c’est être infirme enfin qu’être fidèle.
Gaîment on se retrouve après qu’on se perdit.
Hein? Soyons bonne femme et bon homme. Est-ce dit?
La douce main d’amour n’est point une tenaille.
Aimons-nous. Trompons-nous.

ANDRÉ
J’y consens.

LISE, furieuse.
Ah! canaille!

XII ENTRE LE ZIST ET LE ZEST

LE MARQUIS GRUCCIA. -BARACCA, jolie femme (Zist).
STRUBBLE (Zest).

BARACCA
Qu’est Strubble?

GRUCCIA
Mon ami.

BARACCA
Moi, je suis ton amante.
Parbleu.
Strubble est laid.

BARACCA
GRUCCIA
Certe!

BARACCA
Et moi je suis...

GRUCCIA, avec un baiser.
Charmante!

BARACCA
Strubble est chauve, et moi j’ai des cheveux.
Elle laisse tomber sa chevelure blonde sur ses épaules nues.

GRUCCIA
Apollo
N’est pas plus coiffé d’or alors qu’il sort de l’eau.
Tes cheveux sur ton front sont comme un flot d’aurore.

BARACCA

Il ressemble à Midas.

GRUCCIA
Tu ressembles à Flore.

Il est bête.
À peu près:

BARACCA
GRUCCIA
BARACCA
J’ai de l’esprit.

GRUCCIA
Tout plein.

BARACCA
Il a le ton sec.

GRUCCIA
Dur.

BARACCA
J’ai le parler...

GRUCCIA
Câlin.

BARACCA
Son odeur!

GRUCCIA
On le flaire, et, toi, l’on te devine.
Galamment.
Ainsi, quand Vénus marche, elle apparaît divine.

BARACCA

Il est mal fait.

GRUCCIA
Bossu.

BARACCA
Triste!...
Elle rii.
Et vois-ma gaîté!

GRUCCIA
Il se nomme laideur, tu t’appelles beauté!

BARACCA
C’est un homme épineux, piquant, pointu, morose, Désagréable. Il est le chardon!

GRUCCIA
Toi la rose.

BARACCA
M’aimes-tu?

GRUCCIA
BARACCA
Eh bien, rien à demi.
Choisis de ta maîtresse ou bien de ton ami.
Strubble ou moi. L’un des deux est de trop. Et c’est l’heure
Qu’il faut que l’un s’en aille et que l’autre demeure.
Entre la belle fille et l’affreux vieux garçon,
Décide. Strubble ou moi quitterons la maison.
Choisis. Moi d’un côté, de l’autre cette brute.

GRUCCIA
Mais je n’hésite pas, mon ange, une minute.
Je te flanque à la porte.
Baracca se lève indignée et sort sans le regarder.

Il reste seul.

XXIII CHANSONS

J’adore Suzette,
Mais j’aime Suzon.
Suzette en toilette,
Suzon sans façon.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!
Je t’adore.

Rimons pour Suzette,
Rimons pour Suzon,
L’une est ma musette,
L’autre est ma chanson.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

La main de Suzette,
La jambe à Suzon,
Quelle main bien faite!
Quel petit chausson!
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

Je rêve à Suzette,
J’embrasse Suzon,
L’une est bien coquette,
L’autre est bon garçon.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!-

Tapis pour Suzette,
Jardin pour Suzon,
Foin de la moquette,
Vive le gazon!
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!

Suzette, Suzon!

Au bal va Suzétte,
Aù bois va Suzon,
J’épie et je guette
L’ombre et le buisson.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

Jaloux de Suzette`!
Jaloux de Suzon!
La bergeronnette
Fait damner l’oison.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

Si jamais Suzette
Rit comme Suzon,
Au diable je jette
Toute ma raison.
ison.
Ah! Suzon,-Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

Si comme Suzette
Souriait Suzon,
Cette humble amourette
Serait mon poison.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

S’il faut fuir Suzette
Ou quitter Suzon,
Et que je n’en mette
Qu’une en ma maison,
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

Je quitte Suzette,
Je garde Suzon,
L’une me rend bête,
L’autre me rend bon.
Ah! Suzon, Suzette!
Suzette, Suzon!

II Il était une fois

Il était une fois
Un jardin, et j’y vis madame Rosemonde;
L’air était plein d’oiseaux les plus charmants du monde;
Quelle ombre dans les bois!

Il était une fois
Une source, et j’y vins boire avec Rosemonde;
Des naïades passaient, et je voyais sous l’onde
Des perles à leurs doigts.

Il était une fois
Un baiser, qu’en tremblant je pris à Rosemonde.
— Tiens, regarde, ils sont deux, dit une nymphe blonde.
— Non, dit l’autre, ils sont trois.

Il était une fois
Une fleur, qui sortit du coeur de Rosemonde;
C’est mon âme. Et je brûle, et dans la nuit profonde J’entends chanter des voix.

Schiedam, 3 août 1861.

III Je suis Jean

Je suis Jean qui guette,
Chanteur et siffleur,
Qui serait poète
S’il n’était voleur,

Et qui serait morne
S’il ne trouvait pas
Au coin de la borne
Ses quatre repas.

J’ai la mine haute
Et le nez en fleur
De la Pentecôte
A la Chandeleur.

Je rôde, je marche;
J’ai pour toit le ciel,
Pour alcôve une arche
Du pont Saint-Michel.

Ah! c’est toi, vieux singe!
Disent les cathos
Qui battent leur linge
Au bord des bateaux,

Drôlesses ingambes,
Et que j’aime à voir
Se laver les jambes
En chantant le soir.

J’ai près d’une belle Respect et bon ton;
Je lui dis mamselle;
Ça flatte Goton.

Quand j’ai d’aventure
Fait quelque bon coup,
J’en mène en voiture
Quelqu’une à Saint-Cloud.

J’invite à ma table,
Pour un fin soupé,
La plus respectable,
Une franche p.

Les sergents de ville,
Valets du plus fort,
Ont l’âme si vile
Qu’ils me font du tort.

Sous la raison basse
Que j’ai pris parfois
Leur bourse qui passe
A d’affreux bourgeois,

On vient, on saccage
Mon lit de roseau,
On me met en cage
Comme un pauvre oiseau.

J’échappe, et m’en tire;
Mais c’est ennuyeux,
Pour moi qui respire
Tout le vent des cieux!

Cela me dérange.
Des fois j’ai logé
Sous le pont-au-change;
J’ai déménagé.

J’ai plus d’une issue.

Ma vie est ainsi
Toute décousue,
Ma culotte aussi.

Ah! les temps sont rudes!
Souvent on a faim,
Les filles sont prudes,
La jeunesse enfin

N’a plus, que c’est bête!
Le moindre oripeau,
Ni joie en la tête,
Ni plume au chapeau.

Je suis, pour tout dire,
Un garçon railleur,
Moins mauvais qu’un pire,
Moins bon qu’un meilleur.

Je ris comme un coffre,
Je bois comme un trou.
Q Satan! je m’offre
A toi pour un sou!

22 avril 1847.

IV L’oiseau passe

L’oiseau passe
Dans l’espace
Où l’amour vient l’enflammer;
Si les roses
Sont des choses
Faites exprès pour charmer,
Le ciel est fait pour aimer.

L’oiseau vole,
Et console
Le désert et la maison,
Et les plaines
Et les chênes
Écoutent, quand sa chanson
Va de buisson en buisson.

Hymne et flamme,
Il est l’âme
Du bois, du pré, de l’étang,
Des charmilles,
Et des filles
Que dès l’aurore on entend
Ouvrir leur porte en chantant.

5 septembre 1861, Guernesey.

V CANCION

J’avais une bague, une , bague d’or
Et je l’ai perdue hier dans la ville;
Je suis pandériste et toréador,
Guitare à Grenade, épée à Séville.

Mon anneau luit plus que l’astre vermeil;
Le diable, caché dans l’oeil de ma brune,
Pourrait seul produire un bijou pareil
S’il faisait un jour un trou dans la lune.

Si vous retrouvez l’anneau n’importe où,
Rapportez-le-moi. C’est Gil qu’on me nomme.
Certes, je vaux peu; je ne suis qu’un sou,
Mais près d’un liard je suis gentilhomme.

Je n’ai que mon chant comme le moineau.
Rendez-moi ma bague, et que Dieu vous paie!
Vous connaissez Jeanne? Eh bien, cet anneau,
C’est, avec son coeur, le seul or que j’aie.

20 décembre 1854.

VI CHANSON DE MAGLIA

Vous êtes bien belle et je suis bien laid.
A vous la splendeur de rayons baignée;
A moi la poussière, à moi l’araignée.
Vous êtes bien belle et je suis bien laid;
Soyez la fenêtre et moi le volet.

Nous réglerons tout dans notre réduit.
Je protégerai ta vitre qui tremble;
Nous serons heureux, nous serons ensemble;
Nous réglerons tout dans notre réduit;
Tu feras le jour, je ferai la nuit.

VII CHANSON EN CANOT

Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs,
Et vivent les femmes bien faites,
La Seine et les grandes chaleurs!

Je m’amuse et je me promène.
Amis, ayons congé! Versons
Le dimanche sur la semaine,
Et sur tous les jours des chansons.
Les bois sont pleins de pâquerettes,
De geais et de merles siffleurs. -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

Vacances sans trêve! Est-il sage
De s’ennuyer six jours sur sept?
Victoire m’attend au passage
Avec une fleur au corset.
Donc, amis, Victoire et conquêtes!
Les hommes jôyeux sont meilleurs. -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont, des fleurs.
Le bon Dieu n’ôte pas leurs ailes
Aux papillons passé midi;
Les roses sont tout aussi belles
Le mercredi que le jeudi,
Et les dimanches et les fêtes
N’ajoutent rien à leurs couleurs. -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

Ô prêtre, en quelle erreur tu tombes!
Est-ce qu’on voit, à certains jours,
Cypris dételer ses colombes

Du char stupéfait de l’amour?
Les nids sont-ils dans leurs retraites
Moins tendres et moins querelleurs? -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

Papas et maris, vieux bonshommes,
Je ne m’occupe pas de vous;
Donc ne venez point où nous sommes
Troubler la fête des yeux doux.
Je ne veux savoir où vous êtes
Qu’afin de tâcher d’être ailleurs. -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de. loup sont des fleurs.

Marthe, il faut qu’on s’enrégimente
Dans le régiment de Vénus,
Et que chacun ait une amante,
Et je veux baiser tes pieds nus.
Ça, mesdames, êtes-vous prêtes?
Les amours sont les racoleurs. -
Les gueules de loup. sont -des. bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

Marthe apparaît à sa lucarne.
Lise m’appelle et me répond.
Choisissez: la Seine, ou la Marne?
Asnière, ou Joinville-le-Pont?
Partons, l’aurore est sur nos têtes,
Gais bateliers, gais bateleurs! -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

Parfois, en rêve, je me sauve
Vers l’océan bouleversé,
Trop étroit pour ma chanson fauve,
Chantant son refrain insensé!

Mais Lise, à travers les tempêtes,
Me fait des pieds de nez railleurs. -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

Marthe et Lise, amis, sont gentilles.
Embrassons-les à tout moment.
Prendre un baiser aux belles filles,
C’est les traiter honnêtement.
Il sied d’être toujours honnêtes,
Donc il faut être un peu voleurs. -
Les gueules de loup sont des bêtes,
Les gueules de loup sont des fleurs.

27 septembre 1862.

VIII LA CHANSON DU SPECTRE

Qui donc êtes-vous, la belle?
Comment vous appelez-vous?
Une vierge était chez nous;
Ses yeux étaient ses bijoux.
Je suis la vierge, dit-elle.
Cueillez la branche de houx.

Vous êtes en blanc, la belle;
Comment vous appelez-vous?
En gardant les grands boeufs roux,
Claude lui fit les yeux doux.
Je suis la fille, dit-elle.
Cueillez la branche de houx.

Vous portez des fleurs, la belle;
Comment vous appelez-vous?
Les vents et les coeurs sont fous,
Un baiser les fit époux.
Je suis l’amante, dit-elle.
Cueillez la branche de houx.

Vous avez pleuré, la belle;
Comment vous appelez-vous?
Elle eut un fils, prions tous,
Dieu le prit sur ses genoux.
Je suis la mère, dit-elle.
Cueillez la branche de houx.

Vous êtes pâle, la belle;
Comment vous appelez-vous?
Elle s’enfuit dans les trous,
Sinistre, avec les hiboux.
Je suis la folle, dit-elle.
Cueillez la branche de houx.

Vous avez bien froid, la belle;
Comment vous appelez-vous?
Les amours et les yeux doux
De nos cercueils sont les clous.
Je suis la morte, dit-elle.
Cueillez la branche de houx.

13 avril 1855.

IX MARGOT

Je signais d’un grand paraphe
Un billet doux bien écrit;
J’avais toute l’orthographe,
Margot avait tout l’esprit.

Sa bouche,, où quelque-ironie
Avait l’air de dire: osez,
Était la Californie
Des rires et des baisers.

Que je fusse un imbécile,
C’était probable; et pourtant
La belle trouvait facile
De m’adorer en chantant,

Jusqu’au jour où, pour la mode
Changeant d’amours et de ton,
Margot trouverait commode
De devenir Margoton.

Nous étions quelques artistes,
Des poètes, des savants,
Qui jetions nos songes tristes
Et nos jeunesses aux vents.

Nous étions les capitaines
De la fanfare et des chants,
Des parisiens d’Athènes,
Athéniens de Longchamps.

Moi, j’étais, parmi ces sages,
Le rêveur qui parle argot,
Met son coeur dans les nuages
Et son âme dans -Margot.

Gais canotiers de Nanterre,
Nous voguions sur le flot pur;
Margot lorgnait un notaire
Quand je contemplais l’azur.

Elle trouvait l’eau trop fraîche,
Et préférait l’Ambigu,
Et s’écriait: Quand je pêche,
C’est avec l’accent aigu.

Le sort déchira ses voiles;
Elle s’enfuit, j’échappai;
Je montai dans les etoiles
Et Margot dans un coupé.

X Rien

Rien n’est comme il devrait être.
Le maître
Plus que le valet,
Est laid.
Je hais ton jargon, Zémire.
J’admire,
Malgré son argot,
Margot.

Souvent d’une pauvre fille
Qui brille,
Les pieds en sabots
Sont beaux.

Ici, la guerre âpre et noire;
Bruit, gloire,
Lauriers triomphaux,
Or faux.

Ici la bête de somme;
C’est l’homme;
Et là les héros
Zéros.

Ici le nécessaire, aigre
Et maigre;
Là le superflu
Joufflu.
Dans l’église et la guinguette
Qu’il guette,
Le diable survient;
Il tient
Par sa guimpe et son air prude
Gertrude,

Et par son chignon
Ninon.
Le destin, ce dieu sans tête
Et bête,
A fait l’animal
Fort mal.
Il fit d’une fange immonde
Le monde,
Et d’un fiel amer
La mer.

Tout se tient par une chaîne
De haine;
On voit dans les fleurs
Des pleurs. ,

Tout ici-bas, homme, femme,
Vie, âme,
Est par Ananké
Manqué.

Aussi, lorsque l’homme achève
Son rêve,
Quel triste avorton
Voit-on!

Homme, mon frère, nous sommes
Deux hommes
Et, pleins de venins,
Deux nains.

Ton désir secret concerte
Ma perte,
Et mon noir souhait
Te hait;

Car ce globe où la mer tremble

Nous semble
Pour notre appétit
Petit.

Nous manquons, sur sa surface,
De place
Pour notre néant
Géant.

XI Tourne-toi

MAGLIA, accordant sa guitare.
Il chante.

Tourne-toi vers celle qui t’aime.
Ne regarde point au delà.
L’amour récolte ce qu’il sème.
Toutes les filles de Bohême,
Toutes les belles d’Alcala,
Atala, Léila, Lola,
Olympe avec son diadème,
Suzon avec son falbala,
Tralalala, tralalala,
Ne valent pas celle qui t’aime.
Trala
La la.

Tourne-toi vers celle qui rêve
Et qui voudrait quetu sois là.
Toutes les autres filles d’Eve,
Celles qui dansent sur la grève,
Celles qui-font cercle au gala,
Carmen qui toujours-s’envola,
Luz dont la jupe se soulève,
Fanchon dont l’oeil dit: me voilà!
Tralalala, tralalala,
Ne valent pas celle qui rêve.
Trala
La la.

XII CHANSON DE BORD

Marin, l’onde est une femme.
Crains le sable, crains la lame,
Crains le rocher.
C’est vers Pluton que tu vogues.
Les flots sont -les bouledogues -
Du noir boucher.

La Bourrasque, pâle et nue,
Traîne un linceul dans la nue,
Disent les vieux.
La place des yeux est vide
Sous son grand crâne livide
Et pluvieux.

Dès qu’on est dans cette écume,
On a comme un bruit d’enclume
Dans le tympan
La vague saute sur l’homme;
Le vent se comporte comme
Un chenapan.

Qui s’en tire gagne un quine..
La mer est une coquine,
Disent les vieux.
La mer est une sauvage.
Le flot toujours du rivage
Est envieux.

Toute la terre fleurie
Ne serait qu’une prairie
Et qu’un gazon
Sans cette mer de ténèbres
Qui gonfle ses plis funèbres
A l’horizon.

Malheur à qui lève l’ancre!
Elle est la bouteille d’encre
Qu’un jour trouva
Satan que l’envie enivre,
Et qu’il vida sur le livre
De Jéhova.

XIII DANS LA FORÊT

UN PASSANT, chantant.
La duchesse et la paysanne
Se valent sur le vert gazon;
Jérusalem offre Suzanne,
Mais la Cou’rtille offre Suzon;
Cupidon nous donne Inézille
Et les perles de sa résille,
Ou Javotte au bonnet cauchois.

L’ÉCHO
Au choix.

AUTRE PASSANT
Quel doux tyran qu’un regard tendre!
O vierge, donne-moi ton coeur;
Je l’ai dit, se donner, c’est prendre;
Ton prisonnier c’est ton vainqueur;
VII, 23 CHANSONS -XIV 493
On devient reine en étant femme;
Si ton baiser prenait mon âme,
Quand crois-tu que j’échapperais?

L’ÉCHO
Après.

AUTRE PASSANT
Je te le jure par l’aurore,
Je te le jure par la nuit,
Je t’épouserai! Je t’adore.
Viens! ton pur regard me séduit,
L’amour à tes pieds n’a plus d’aile,
Je serai ton mari fidèle,
Et toute la forêt m’entend...

L’ÉCHO
«Mentant.

25 mai 1876.

XIV RONDE POUR LES ENFANTS

Fillettes, les fleurs sont écloses,
Dansez, courons,
Je suis ébloui par les roses
Et par vos fronts.

Chez les fleurs vous êtes les reines;
Nous le dirons
Aux bois, aux prés, aux marjolaines,
Aux liserons.

Avec l’oiselle l’oiseau cause,
Et s’interrompt
Pour la quereller d’un bec rose,
Aux baisers prompt.

Donnez-nous, gaîtés éphémères,
Futurs tendrons,
Beaucoup de baisers. -A vos mères
Nous les rendrons.

XV JEAN, JEANNE, JEANNOT

La forêt grelotte;
La nuit tombe; il pleut;
J’entends la roulotte
De Braine-l’Alleud.
Un beau jour un ange,
Nommé le Baiser,
Vint dans une grange,
Pour se reposer.

La forêt grelotte;
La nuit tombe; il pleut;
J’entends la roulotte
De Braine-l’Alleud.

Il y trouva Jeanne,
Il y trouva Jean;
Jean n’était qu’un âne;
L’ange dit: hi-han!

La forêt grelotte;
La nuit tombe; il pleut;
J’entends la roulotte
De Braine-l’Alleud.

L’âne comprit l’ange.
Regardez plutôt
La miche que mange
Le petit Jeannot.

La forêt grelotte;
La nuit tombe; il pleut;
J’entends la roulotte
De Braine-l’Alleud.

1865.

XVI LE CHANT DU VIEUX BERGER

Je suis vieux, mais, ô lauriers-roses,
Ô lys, cela n’empêche pas
Toutes sortes de tendres choses,
Toutes sortes de frais appas,

De s’épouser, rayons, haleines,
Dans les champs pleins de douces voix,
Et l’aube de dorer les plaines,
Et l’oiseau de chanter au bois.

Les fleurs écoutent la promesse
Du papillon; la tiendra-t-il.?
Est-ce une orgie, est-ce une messe
Que ce radieux mois d’avril?

Un vieux de plus dans la:nature,
Ce n’est que quelqu’un qui s’en va;
Toùjours, à la Sombre ouverture,
Chérubin lui-même arriva.

Je suis vieux; mais pourvu que j’aime,
Je n’ai rien à me reprocher
Et l’abeille ira tout dè même
Cajoler la fleur du pêcher.

Le vent fredonne, l’eau miroite,
Le gai lapin sort du terrier;
La rose se tient toute droite
Comme. une fille à marier.

Des couples dans l’ombre s’effacent,
Les grands chênes chassent le jour;
Que voulez-vous que les, bois fassent
Si ce n’est de cacher l’amour?

Les nids ont, l’arbre pour complice;
L’amour prend les coeurs à sa glu;
Il faut. bien que tout s’accomplisse
Comme le bon Dieu l’a voulu.

Les feuilles sont les soeurs des ailes;
Un bosquet c’est une cloison;
Les bois sont complaisants aux belles,
Et je trouve qu’ils ont raison.

Aimons! c’est ce qu’avril préfère.
Avec tous ses chiens sans colliers
Diane indignée a beau faire
Un bruit fauve au fond des halliers,

Cette grande vierge, farouche.
Perd son temps contre les amants;
L’amour c’est la bouche, et la bouche,
C’est l’éclair qui fait des serments;

Qu’importe Diane et ses dogues!
Chloé trouve Atys éloquent.
Les bois aiment ces dialogues
Que ponctue un baiser fréquent.

La nature est l’immense alcôve;
Et c’est ainsi que tout se perd,
Et c’est ainsi que tout se sauve;
Cupidon, c’est. l’enfant expert;

Il est subtil, il est superbe;
Vaste hymen providentiel!
Les daims font l’idylle dans l’herbe,
L’aigle fait l’épopée au ciel.

On entend des murmures d’âmes;

Toute l’ombre est un grand frisson;
Et je sais encor l’air, mesdames,
Si je ne sais plus la chanson.

9 octobre.

XVII CHANT DES SONGES

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

Les hommes agitent les glaives,
Le fouet, la chaîne, l’encensoir;
Nous, nous courons le long des grèves
Et nous sommes les oiseaux rêves.

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

Qu’on s’enferme! qu’on se séquestre!
Fermez la ville, et venez voir.
Nous sommes dans la salle équestre
Assis au fauteuil du bourgmestre!

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

Le sergent fait le pied de grue.
— Qui va là? -Vieux, fais ton devoir.
Autour de sa tête bourrue
Nous tourbillonnons dans la rue.

Hurrah! hurrah!

Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!
La nuit sème ses perles d’ambre.
Fermez le bouge et le manoir,
A double tour! c’est en décembre.
Bon! nous voilà dans votre chambre!

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

Blondes filles et vieillards chauves,
Fermez vos rideaux, c’est le soir,
Et maintenant, dans vos alcôves,
Regardez luire nos yeux fauves!

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

Fermez vos yeux, dormez, profanes.
Soyez votre propre éteignoir.
Nos chauves-souris diaphanes
Battent de l’aile sous vos crânes!

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

Nous soufflons la cendre et les flammes,
L’amour, le deuil, la peur, l’espoir;
Fermez vos coeurs, hommes et femmes,
Nous parlons dans l’ombre à vos âmes!

Hurrah! hurrah!
Toutes les portes sont ouvertes,
Hurrah! Smarra!
Pour nous qui sortons des eaux vertes
Et qui venons du hallier noir!

17 mars 1854.

XVIII Lamour f- le camp

HACQUOIL (Le Marin).
Chantant.

L’amour f- le camp comme un b -
Filant dix noeuds dans un bon lougre
En pleine mer.
La beauté passe -sarabande!
Comme passe la contrebande
A Saint-Omèr.

Mon grand-père était un grand drôle.
Tu n’irais pas à son épaule,
Tambour-major.
Et ma grand’mère -farandole! -
Etait belle comme une idole Dorée en or:

La dame, point avariée,
Etait duchesse et mariée
A de l’argent.
Et mon grand-père -la bourrée! -
Lui dit. un. soir Mon adorée,
Je suis sergent.

Et mon grand-père à ma grand’mère
Proposa de faire mon. père
En s’échauffant;
Mais ma grand’mère -la gavotte!
Mais ma grand’mère était dévote,
Et fit l’enfant.

16 février.

XIX AIR DE LA PRINCESSE D’ORANGE

Viens, ô toi que j’adore.
Ton pas est plus joyeux
Que le vent des cieux;
Viens, les yeux de l’aurore
Sont divins, mais tes yeux — Me regardent mieux.

Avril, c’est la jeunesse.
Viens, sortons, la maison,
L’enclos, la prison,
Le foyer, la sagesse,
N’ont jamais eu raison
Contre la saison.

Pour peu que tu le veuilles,
Nous serons heureux; vois,
L’aube est sur les toits,
Et l’eau court sous les feuilles,
Et l’oh entend des voix
Du ciel dans les bois.

Toutes les douces choses,
L’hirondelle au retour
Dans la vieille tour,
Les chansons et les roses
Et la clarté du jour,
Sont faites d’amour.

Aimer, c’est lâ première
Des lois du Dieu clément;
Le bois est charmant;
Et c’est de la lumière;
Et c’est du firmament
Qu’on fait en aimant.

Belle, à la mort tout change;
Le ciel s'ouvre, embaumé,
Superbe, enflammé,
Et nous dit: viens! sois ange!
Mais qui n'a pas aimé
Le trouve fermé.

28 mai 1857. Guernesey.

II

Mai dans les bois recèle
Les amours innocents;
Les amours innocents,
L'homme en est l'étincelle;
Les amours innocents,
La femme en est l'encens.

Couchez-vous sur la mousse
Dans le beau mois de mai;
Dans le beau mois de mai
La chose la plus douce,
Dans le beau mois de mai,
C'est quand on est aimé.

Parcourez les charmilles,
Les sources, les buissons!
Les sources, les buissons,
Autour des jeunes filles,
Les sources, les buissons
Chanteront des chansons.

Sitôt qu'une femme aime,
Au fond de son esprit,-
Au fond de son esprit
Brille l'aube elle-même;

Au fond de son esprit
Une rose fleurit.

On s’embaume, on s’éclaire
Quand deux coeurs ne font qu’un;
Quand deux coeurs ne font qu’un,
L’amour est leur lumière;
Quand deux coeurs ne font qu’un,
L’amour est leur parfum.

Si vous voulez des flammes,
Si vous voulez des fleurs,
Si vous voulez des fleurs,
‘Cherchez-en dans les âmes;
Si vous voulez des fleurs,
Cherchez-en dans les coeurs.

27 mai 1857.

Guernesey, Route de Fermain-Bay.

XX CHANT DU BOL DE PUNCH

Je suis la flamme bleue.
J’habite la banlieue,
Le vallon, le coteau.
Sous l’if et le mélèze,
J’erre au Père-Lachaise,
J’erre au Campo-Santo.

L’eau brille au crépuscule,
Le passant sur sa mule
Fait un signe de croix,
Son chien baisse la queue;
Je suis la flamme bleue
Qui danse au fond des bois.
La nuit étend son aile;
De Profundis se mêle
A Traderidera;
Les morts ouvrent leur bière.
Spectres, au cimetière!
Masques, à l’Opéra!

— Garçon, du punch! -J’arrive.
Je suis le bleu convive,
L’esprit des lacs blafards,
Le nain des joncs moroses;
Je viens baiser les roses
Après les nénuphars.

Buvez, fils et donzelles.
D’autres ont été belles,
D’autres ont été beaux.

Riez, joyeuses troupes.
Pour danser sur vos coupes
Je sors de leurs tombeaux.

Monte à ta chambre, apporte
Ton charbon, clos ta porte,
Allume; c’est le soir.
Regarde dans ton bouge,
Comme un masque à l’oeil rouge,
Flamber ton réchaud noir.

D’autres boivent dans l’ombre,
Toi, tu meurs; ton oeil sombre
S’éteint, ton front pâlit;
Je suis là, je t’éclaire,
Et j’ai quitté leur verre
Pour danser sur ton lit.
Le bol s’éteint.

XXI SÉRÉNADE

MAGLIA, chantant.
Quand les heures de paix et d’ombre sont venues,
Les belles sur leur lit s’endorment toutes nues,
Laissant la lune errer dans le ciel argenté,
Et la fenêtre ouverte à cause de l’été.

XXII LE CHÂTEAU DE L’ARBRELLES

DANSE EN ROND

Va cueillir, villageoise,
La fraise et la framboise
Dans les champs, aux beaux jours.

À huit milles d’Amboise,
A deux milles de Tours,
Le château de l’Arbrelles,
Ràì de ces alentours,
Se dresse avec ses tours,
Ses tours et ses tourelles.
Va cueillir aux beaux jours
La fraise et la framboise,
A huit milles, d’Amboise,
A deux milles de Tours,
C’est là que sont les tours,
Les tours et les tourelles
Du château de l’Arbrelles
Bien connu des vautours.
II
Cueillez, Jeanne et Thérèse,
La framboise et la fraise,
Rions, dansons, aimons,
Le ciel en est bien aise,
Moquons-nous des sermons.
Le château de l’Arbrelles,
Qu’en chantant nous nommons,
Dresse sur les vieux monts
Ses tours et ses tourelles.
Rions, dansons, aimons,
Cueillez, Jeanne et Thérèse,
La framboise et la fraise,
Moquons-nous des sermons.

Là-bas, sur les vieux monts
Se dressent les tourelles
Du château de l’Arbrelles
Bien connu des démons.
III
Cueillez, filles d’Amboise,
La fraise et la framboise.
Les démons, les vautours,
Ont changé de figure
Depuis les anciens jours.
Tours de sinistre augure,
L’herbe croît dans vos cours,
Croulez, vilaines tours!
Le ciel en est bien aise.
Aimons, les ans sont courts,
Cueillez, Jeanne et Thérèse,
La framboise et la fraise.
Ô belles, nos amours,
Pour piller vos atours,
Pour vous emplir de flammes,
Les démons sont nos âmes,
Nos coeurs sont les vautours.

7 octobre 1876.

XXIII Le joli page

Le joli page imberbe
Soupire, elle s’émeut.
— Sous un arbre, s’il pleut,
Et s’il fait beau, dans l’herbe.

De sa jupe superbe.
Elle défit le noeud.
— Sous un arbre, s’il pleut,
Et s’il fait beau, dans l’herbe.

Le bleuet vaut la gerbe;
Plaire! un page le peut.
— Sous un arbre, s’il pleut,
Et s’il fait beau, dans l’hérbe.

Conjuguons le doux verbe;
Aimons-nous! Dieu le veut.
— Sous un arbre, s’il pleut,
Et s’il fait beau, dans l’herbe.

25 avril 1873.

XXIV CHANSONS DE GAVROCHE

I

Ran tan plan!
Tape, tambour, tape encore.
Pan pan pan,
Pif paf boum, ran plan tan plan,
Gai l’aurore! ,

On fait de la peine aux rois,
Viens à leur secours, bourgeois,
Avec ton enthousiasme,
Ton parapluie et ton asthme.

Tape encor, tape, tambour.
Gai le jour!

Faut-il des rois sur les têtes
Des peuples changés en bêtes?
Tu dis oui, toi le canon.
Moi le pavé, je dis non.

Tape, tambour, tape encore.
Ran tan plan,
Pan pan pan,
Pif paf boum, ran plan tan plan,
Gai l’aurore!

Et toi, mon vieux chiffonnier,
Prends ton croc et ton panier,
Car il est temps que tu pinces
Tous les rois et tous les princes.

Tape encor, tape tambour.
Gai le jour!

Ce tas de trônes cahote.
Flanque-les tous dans ta hotte,
Depuis le roi Dagobert
Jusqu’à l’empereur Gobert.

Tape, tambour, tape encore.
Ran tan plan,
Pan pan pan,
Pif paf boum, ran plan tan plan,
Gai l’aurore!
Quand Dalila, Paméla, Atala, Stella,
Lola,
Trouveront pour leurs filets
Les-mylords anglais
Trop laids,

Quands les avocats plaidants,
Quand les noirs pédants
Grondants,
Quand les harangueurs des cours,
Feront des discours
Trop courts,

Quand les peuples lèveront
Plus haut que l’affront
Leur front,
Et n’auront plus sur les bras
Tout ce tas d’ingrats
Trop gras,

On ne verra plus Gamin
Tendre, nain romain,
La main,
Et marcher sur les. talons
De ses pantalons

Trop longs.
III
La bourgeoisie est un veau
Qui s’enrhume du cerveau
Au moindre vent frais qui souffle;
Le bourgeois c’est la pantoufle
Qu’un roi met sous ses talons
Pour marcher à reculons.

Je fais la chansonnette,
Faites le rigodon.
Ramponneau Ramponnetté, don!
Ramponneau Ramponnette!

Le bourgeois est un grimaud
Qui prend sa pendule au mot
Chaque fois qu’elle retarde.
Il contresigne en bâtarde
Coups d’état, décrets, traités,
Et toutes les lâchetés.

Je fais la chansonnette,
Faites le rigodon.
Ramponneau Ramponnette, don!
Ramponneau Ramponnette!

Il enseigne à ses marmots
Comment on rit de nos maux;
Pour lui, le peuple et la France,
La liberté, l’espérance,
L’homme et Dieu, sont au-dessous
D’une pièce de cent sous.

Je fais la chansonnette,
Faites le rigodon.
Ramponneau Ramponnette, don!
Ramponneau Ramponnette!

Le bourgeois a des regrets;
Il pleure sur le progrès,
Sur ses loyers qu’on effleure,
Sur les rois, fiacres à l’heure,
Sur sa caisse, et sur la fin
Du monde où l’on avait faim.

Je fais la chansonnette,
Faites le rigodon.
Ramponneau Ramponnette, don!
Ramponneau Ramponnette!

18 octobre 1861.

LA CORDE D’AIRAIN

Et j’ajoute à ma lyre une corde d’airain.
Les Feuilles d’Automne.

À LA FRANCE DE 1872

Ô France, un ,de tes fils devant toi s’agenouille.
L’humble prêtre de l’art divin que rien ne souille
T’apporte sa tristesse et son austère amour.
Quand toutes les grandeurs d’un pays tour à tour,
Sous l’acharnement vil du sort opiniâtre,
S’écroulent, dans les jours ténébreux, le théâtre,
Qui jadis, riant, grave, orageux ou serein,
Parlait aux nations par deux masques d’airain,
Doit, quand saigne la plaie horrible des frontières,
Ne dire au peuple ému que des choses altières.
,Quand la Patrie en deuil baisse les yeux devant
Sa vieille histoire en cendre, à terre, éparse au vent,
Quand le fier Capitole a fait place au Calvaire,
Nous avons pour devoir le souvenir sévère;,
Et l’homme est par les chants de la muse avili,
S’il y puise une ivresse allant jusqu’à l’oubli.
Désormais, après tant d’angoisse, après les fuites,
Les camps cernés, les murs vendus, les tours détruites,
Et la captivité des sombres légions,
Quand l’Europe nous hait, nous qui la protégions,
Ces hymnes qu’on appelle Ode, Drame, Epopée,
Devront ressembler tous à des fourreaux d’épée;
Si le tigre en ses dents emporte la brebis,
Des resplendissements furieux et subits
Sortiront tout à coup de ces puissants poèmes;
Leurs vers seront grondants, menaçants et suprêmes;
On y sentira sourdre un souffle de combat,
On y verra la gloire en pleurs sur son grabat,
Et ces grandes clameurs auront des voix hautaines
Remuant l’âpre honte au coeur des capitaines
Et leur donnant la rage et la soif de plonger
Leur honneur dans ce flot sublime, le danger;
Et c’est ainsi qu’on sauve un peuple, et que l’on fonde
Dans toi, Paris, dans toi; Rome, une âme profonde.

Ne venez pas ici chercher d’autre plaisir
Que d’entrevoir un glaive et de le ressaisir;
L’art ne doit aux esprits que des fêtes viriles;
Ayons d’affreux jours, soit, mais pas d’instants stériles.
Plus le bonheur décroît, plus le coeur doit grandir;
L’astre accepte la nuit pour y mieux resplendir.
L’étoile, dédaigneuse au fond des cieux funèbres,
A l’augmentation de l’ombre et des ténèbres
Répond par la croissance auguste des rayons.
C’est pourquoi tous ici, tous, qui que nous soyons,
Fils de ceux qui de près virent Berlin et Vienne,
Ne trouvant pas qu’il soit juste et qu’il nous convienne
D’avoir de tels aïeux et de n’y point songer,
Et de laisser leur gloire en gage à l’étranger,
Ayant le sombre ennui d’hommes sur qui l’on marche,
Nous souvenant que c’est à nous de porter l’arche
Et d’être à l’avant-garde altière du progrès,
Nous pensons qu’il est bon d’aiguiser nos regrets,
Et qu’avec un fer rouge il faut toucher nos plaies;
Et que, puisque déjà reverdissent les haies,
Puisque voici venir le mois de mai charmant,
Nous devons regarder le sacré firmament,
Les bois, les champs, le lys, la rose, la pervenche,
Avec cette pensée au coeur: notre revanche!
Si nous nous laissions mettre aux fers par le destin,
Si, tournés vers le soir et non vers le matin,
Nous pouvions, prisonniers, continuer de vivre,
Si nous ne rêvions pas, l’âme de colère ivre,
Chacun de nous ayant sur le front la rougeur
De n’être pas celui qu’on attend, le vengeur;
Ah! si nous n’étions pas pensifs devant tout homme
Qui flétrit son bourreau, se redresse et se nomme,
Et lui prend son épée afin de le tuer,
Si nous pouvions nous taire et nous habituer
A l’opprobre, et montrer, transformation vile,
Qu’on peut être Thersite après qu’on fut Achille,
Si nous donnions raison aux rois riant entre eux,

Si nous découvrions en nous des coeurs affreux
Prêts aux consentements infâmes de la chute,
Si devant le vainqueur criant: Cessons la lutte,
Paix! et restons-en là! nous disions: J'y pensais!
Ah! tout serait fini! de sa tête, ô français,
La France arracherait, sous ses mains indignées,
Ses lauriers, et, parmi ses cheveux, des poignées
D'étoiles, qui s'iraient éteindre dans la nuit!
Non, nous ne serons pas ce qui s'évanouit;
Non, nous ne serons pas le fils qui dégénère,
Et nous saurons hâter le réveil du tonnerre.
Non, nous n'acceptons pas notre honneur obscurci.
Car ce qui fait un peuple illustre, le voici:
C'est le théâtre, c'est la tribune, c'est l'âme
De tout homme allumée à toute pure flamme,
C'est l'essor pour l'esprit, le travail pour le corps,
C'est l'art, c'est la pensée'-et l'ennemi-dehors.

Tant qu'ils sont èn Alsace et qu'ils sont en Lorraine,
Ils sont chez nous. Sur toi, France, leur sabre traîne.
Ils t'ont pris ton bien, France? Eh bien, on le reprend.
Ah! même le plus grand des siècles n'est pas grand
Si quelque ombre-de honte est mêlée à sa gloire.
Avec une aile blanche avoir une aile noire,
Non, France, non! jamais ainsi tu n'as vécu.
Et la paix n'est la paix qu'après qu'on a vaincu.

Ô Grèce! ô Périclès! jours fiers! âge splendide!
Pindare d'un côté, de l'autre Thucydide;
L'idéal du réel devenait le vrai nom,
Et Phidias sculptait le mur du Parthénon;
Hippocrate tâtait le pouls de Démosthènes;
Les peuples s'abreuvaient. de lumière aux fontaines
Qu'on nomme Apollodore, Euripide, Platon;
Le dur Solon, levant sur Thespis son-bâton,
Était mort, et Socrate ôtait les dieux à l'homme;
Athènes vaguement semblait éveiller Rome

Qui répondait dù fond de l’ombre à son appel, -
Et les perses étaient chassés de l’Archipel!
Qui donc a dit: La France tombe!
Demain, on verra tout à coup
La grande pierre de sa tombe
Se lever lentement debout.

Oui, demain, oui, l’heure est prochaine.
Voyez. Elle se dresse, ayant
Dans ses deux poings où pend sa chaîne,
Un tronçon d’épée effrayant.

Oui, l’avenir nous le ramene,
Ce puissant glaive où Dieu clément
A remplacé la lame humaine
Par le céleste flamboiement.
Oh! souhaitons la bienvenue
A ce glaive prodigieux!
Qu’il nous fasse voir dans la nue
Le groupe étoilé des aïeux!
Que son éclair montre à notre âme
Toutes ces faces de géants,
Martel qui terrasse Abdérame,
Jeanne qui délivre Orléans;
Et ces preux, beaux dans leur croyance,
Bayard qui ne plia jamais,
Marceau qui mourut sous Mayence,
Hoche qui fut mort devant Metz!
Qu’on écoute leurs voix bruire,
Et qu’on ne puisse deviner
Si c’est Kléber qu’on entend rire,
Ou le ciel qu’on entend tonner!
Que ce fier glaive de la France
Soit le glaive du genre humain;
Qu’il abolisse la souffrance,
Epée aujourd’hui, soc demain;
Qu’il soit pour tous la délivrance,

Qu’il perce le nuage obscur,
Et qu’il nous rende l’espérance
Ici-bas, et là-haut l’azur!
Que ce glaive crée et foudroie,
Qu’il sème à coups d’éclairs le jour,
Et qu’il en sorte de la joie,
Et qu’il en sorte de l’amour.
Sur toute la terre ravie,
Qu’il allume avec sa clarté
Un sublime orage de vie,
De victoire et de liberté!
Qu’il fauche, le mal comme l’herbe;
Qu’on dise: il a fondé nos droits;
Et qu’il soit à jamais superbe
Par l’immense fuite des rois!

Paris, 19 février 1872.

I APRÈS SEDAN

C’est bien. Essuyez-vous. France; Prusse, lavez
Toi, ton opprobre; toi, ta gloire. Vous avez
Chacune une rougeur au front; la honte épaisse
Sur toi, France; et sur toi, la Prusse, ton espèce
De victoire. César, quel pourboire veux-tu?
Cinq milliards. C’est fait. Empoche. Honneur, vertu,
Pudeur, fraternité, probité, passez, ombres!

L’avenir curieux viendra voir ces décombres
Qu’on appelait jadis justice, droit, raison.
Comme la ronce croît! `Comme la trahison,
La conquête, le vol, le meurtre et les rapines
Prospèrent vite, et sont fécondes en épines,
En nuit noire, en horreur, sur le temple abattu!
Comme un roi; d’or, de pourpre et dé haine vêtu,
Ploie et courbe à son gré la race la plus fière,
Et comme il est facile aux empereurs ,de faire
D’un peuple leur esclave et d’un lion leur chien!
Soyez russe, borusse, anglais, autrichien, -
Soyez lè coq, soyez l’aigle, soyez le cygne,
Votre maître vous tient, et n’a qu’à faire, un signe
Pour qu’il ne reste plus de vous, peuple détruit,
Que des oiseaux de proie et des oiseaux de nuit!
Vous étiez l’Allemagne et vous êtes la Prusse!
Hélas!

S’il existait, pour que j’y comparusse,
Un tribunal de rois, fier, auguste, hideux,
Présidé par ton spectre, ô noir Philippe-deux,
Un sombre. aréopage où siégerait Tibère,
Je dirais: Est-ce là que Satan délibère?
Et j’entrerais. Pourquoi? Pour leur dire: ceci:

— Je ne suis qu’un passant, moi qui.vous parle ici,

Mais regardez-moi bien, vous tous, césars de Rome,
Maîtres du monde, rois, papes, je suis un homme.
Ce que je veux, je viens-vous le crier: Je veux
La paix -pour nous, pour vous, pour nos derniers neveux;
Je veux le vrai, le beau, la fraternité, l’âme
De-Dieu même, l’Amour, ce rayon, cette flamme

Formidable, éclairant le bien, brûlant le mal,
Éblouissant tout, l’homme ainsi que l’animal,
Versant la vérité, la douceur, la clémence,
Et visible au plus haut des cieux dans l’ombre immense!
Je veux rouvrir l’éden à tous les grands souhaits;
Je veux la vérité, la justice, et je hais
Les fourbes, les tyrans, les traîtres, les transfuges,
Et c’est moi l’accusé, puisque c’est vous les juges.

II À DES RÉGIMENTS DÉCOURAGÉS

Ô nos pauvres soldats, oui, vous avez fléchi.
Avant que ce Paris sacré soit affranchi,
Avant que notre France auguste soit sauvée,
Avant que l’aigle ait mis à l’abri sa couvée,
Vous avez dit: A bas la guerre, citoyens!
Et nous, qui, sous la bombe et sous les biscayens,
Luttions comme vous, prêts aux plus terribles tâches,
Indignés, nous avons crié: Taisez-vous, lâches!

Eh bien, nous eûmes tort, vous êtes des vaillants.
Hélas! pour généraux avoir des chambellans,
Et pour chefs des valets et pour maîtres des cuistres,
C’est trop, et vous avez subi les jours sinistres.
Au-devant de l’affront vous fûtes envoyés;
Vous avez combattu pour être foudroyés;
Vous vîtes comment croule une gloire détruite,
Et vous avez appris le chemin de la fuite,
O douleur! vous les fils de ceux par qui tonna
Austerlitz, et par qui resplendit Iéna!
Ah! sombres coeurs brisés et qu’emplit l’amertume!
Espérez, ô vaincus! ce n’est pas la coutume
De la France d’avoir longtemps le front courbé.
Après Blenheim, après Rosbach, on est tombé,
Mais on s’est relevé par Ulm et par Arcole.
Subissez le malheur comme on subit l’école;
Couvez l’âpre courroux des coeurs humiliés.
Soit. Pour un instant, fils de France, vous pliez,
Hélas, et vous avez fait un pas en arrière;
Mais vous n’en rentrerez que d’une âme plus fière
Dans notre antique gloire et dans nos vieux chemins.

Ils défaillaient aussi, les grands soldats romains;
Et quand César passait, ces mécontents épiques
Lui demandaient la paix en abaissant les piques;

Ce qui n’empêchait pas, pourtant nous l’oublions,
Ces hommes de se battre ainsi que des lions,
Et les peuples d’avoir pources légionnaires
Le culte épouvanté qu’on a pour les tonnerres.
Oui, parfois, quand l’élan romain s’interrompit,
Les barbares avaient un moment -de répit,
Et l’on riait de voir s’en retourner aux villes
Les vieux hastati las et blancs et les pupilles
Dont le visage à peine avait un blond duvet.;
Mais bientôt cette armée en qui Rome vivait
Rebouclait sa cuirasse, et rentrait en campagne;
Et partout, en Dacie, en Phrygie, -en Espagne,
Les rois se remettaient à trembler, quand le vent
Leur apportait le bruit de sa marche en avant.

Paris, 8 janvier 1871.

III DESTRUCTION DE LA COLONNE

ACCEPTATION DU TRAITE PRUSSIEN

Quand la géante fut tombée, on approcha.

Si quelque bey d’Égypte, un khédive, un pacha,
Renversait le pilastre impur de Cléopâtre,
Bon à faire un peu d’ombre à midi pour le pâtre,
On dirait Barbarié et l’on aurait raison.
Or ce trophée était sublime à l’horizon;
Il avait l’air d’un phare éclairant une rive
Les villes du prodige et du rêve, Ninive,
Memphis que fit Menès, Sarde où régna Cyrus,
Sarepta, qu’emplissaient tant d’hommes disparus,
Jéricho, Palenquè, Sofala, Babylone,
N’avaient rien de plus beau que cette âpre colonne;
Ce cippe triomphal qu’un siècle respecta,
Effaçait l’obélisque altier d’Eléphanta,
La borne de Byzance au fond de l’Hippodrome,
Et le pilier de Thèbe et le pilier de Rome.

Cette colonne était toute pleine de voix,
Étant forgée avec des canons pris aux rois;
On entendait le peuple en ce bronze, bruire;

Et nous n’avions pas, nous, le droit de la détruire,
Car nos pères l’avaient construite pour nos fils.
Elle représentait, bravant tous les défis,
La révolution de l’Europe, ébauchée
Par leur vertigineuse et vaste chevauchée,
Et l’esprit de Fleurus planant sur Austerlitz,
Et nos drapeaux ayant des rayons dans leurs plis.
En voyant sur la place auguste la spirale
De toute cette gloire énorme et sidérale,
Et ce noir tourbillon de fantômes, tordu,

Fixe et pétrifié sous le vent éperdu,
On songeait. Il semblait que la haute fumée
Sortie en tournoyant de cette fière armée,
N’avait pas, sous le ciel orageux ou serein,
Voulu se dissiper, et. s’était faite airain.

Semblable au moissonneur foulant des gerbes mûres,
Cette colonne avait pour socle un tas d’armures.
Elle offensait les rois et non les nations.
Afin qu’on pût juger les pas que nous faisions,
Elle fixait le point d’où nos pères partirent;
Elle indiquait le lieu d’où les flots se retirent,
Et rattachait. aux jours nouveaux les jours anciens;
Après les grands soldats place aux grands citoyens!
Elle était, dans Paris que le soleil inonde,
Comme un style au milieu de ce cadran du monde,
Et son ombre y: marquait les heures du progrès.

Les rois n’osaient venir la regarder de près.

Hier elle tomba, la grande solitaire.
On a pu mesurer, quand on l’a vue à terre,
Tout ce qu’on peut ôter d’orgueil en un instant
Au siècle le plus sombre et le plus éclatant.

Ceux qui sur ce débris collèrent leur oreille
Entendirent dans l’ombre une rumeur pareille
A l’océan qui parle et se plaint sous les cieux.

Voici ce que disait ce bruit mystérieux:

Vous vous êtes trompés comme se trompait Rome.
Ce que vous avez pris pour la gloire d’un homme,
C’est la gloire d’un peuple, et c’est la vôtre, hélas!
Peuple, quels sont mes torts? les trônes en éclats,
L’Europe labourée en tous sens par: la France,
La bataille achevée en vaste délivrance,

Le moyen-âge mort, les préjugés proscrits.
Que me reprochez-vous? le sang, les pleurs, les cris,
Les deuils, et les trop grands coups d'aile des victoires;
D'être une cime où luit l'éclair dans les nuits noires,
De vivre, et d'attester que vos pères ont mis
Leur âme dans l'airain des canons ennemis.
Mon crime, c'est la lutte altière des épées,
Le choc des escadrons, les cuirasses frappées,
Les échelles au mur, les clairons, les assauts.
Les lions sont haïs par vous les lionceaux;
Votre enfance n'a pu supporter ma vieillesse. -
Soit. Je pars avec Ulm et Wagram.; je vous laisse Avec Sedan. Adieu. Je gêne. Je m'en. vais.
J'aime encor mieux ma. guerre, hélas, que votre paix.

IV La grande République

La grande République a des griffes fatales.
Gare à ceux qui voudraient, sans être les vrais mâles,
Sans être les époux réels et sérieux,
Faire, accepter au fond des bois mystérieux
Leur virilité fausse à la rude femelle!
Pallas demanderait de quoi Davus se mêle;
La géante serait peu tendre au myrmidon
S’il osait essayer un instant d’abandon,
L’ongle altier pourrait bien maltraiter cette nuque;
Ce n’est pas sans danger parfois qu’une perruque,
Eût-elle un aspect fauve et d’âpres épaisseurs,
Prend des airs de crinière aux yeux des connaisseurs;
Je ne conseille pas au sieur Scapiglionè
De faire le lion auprès de la lionne.

Paris, 16 octobre 1871.

V APRÈS L’ÉCROULEMENT DE L’HOMME

Pour venger le passé, pour sauver l’avenir,
O peuple, j’ai senti que je devais punir
Un homme, et qu’il fallait châtier une tête;

Et moi, qui dans ma serre ai porté la tempête,
Quand la Justice au front redoutable et sacré
M’a dit: Foudroie, ami! j’ai dit Je le ferai.
Soit. Car ce ne sont pas les aigles, d’ordinaire,
Qui refusent de prendre en leur griffe un tonnerre.
Et j’ai lutté. Ce maître était là sous son dais;
Et je le combattais, et je le regardais;
Il avait tout pour lui, du Volga jusqu’au Tibre,
Tout, l’Allemagne esclave et l’Angleterre libre;
Je lui faisais la guerre à travers cette paix;
Et la foule, à ses pieds, tandis que je frappais,
S’étonnait que quelqu’un osât rester honnête;
L’ignominie était devenue une fête;
Moi, seul au bord des mers, banni, haï de tous,
D’autant plus indigné qu’il était plus absous,
O Guernesey, debout sur tes fières collines,
Je lui jetais d’en haut des feuilles sibyllines;
Les vents les lui portaient, ombre, nuage, affront;
Et lorsqu’elles passaient au-dessus de son front,
Il en sortait un vers ressemblant à la foudre.
Mais maintenant que l’homme infâme est dans la poudre,
Qu’il est à terre, affreux, gisant, et que je vois
Son nom faire partout frémir toutes les voix,
Et les passants marcher sur César misérable,
Fais place, âpre justice, au pardon vénérable,
Ou du moins, si c’est trop de pardonner, permets
Que ma colère en feu reste sur les sommets,
Et ne descende. pas à frapper ce cadavre.
Laisse-moi me tourner vers tout ce qui me navre,
Vers ceux qui maintenant sont puissants, et qui font

Pencher la France au bord de la chute sans fond.
Je lutte, ô Vérité, mais jamais je n’accable.
Le coeur persévérant n’est point l’âme implacable.
L’écrasement de qui n’est plus est puéril.
Le tort ne suffit pas, il me faut le péril.
Pour ceux-là seulement mon courroux est tenace
Qui dans la main ont l’arme et dans l’oeil la menace,
Et dans mon dédain calme et pensif j’engloutis
Les monstres, s’ils sont morts, ou bien s’ils sont petits.
La foudre veut un but, et se trouve inutile
Sur l’hydre inanimée ou l’acarus reptile,
Et le noir justicier, sur les cimes frappant,
Laisse vivre le ver et pourrir le serpent.

VI L’ORGIE DES MEURTRES

Ah çà, je. mets les points sur les i. Soit. J’admets
La guerre, à la rigueur; l’assassinat, jamais.
Avouez qu’il serait étrange que j’aimasse
La tuerie en détail, moi qui l’exècre en masse,
Ou que, la réprouvant en détail, j’eusse un goût
Pour le sang, quand ses flots font déborder l’égout.
Oui, les cadavres sont voilés parles décombres;
Mais l’histoire plus tard saura des choses sombres.
Tu veux en vain couvrir, tablier du boucher,
La Saint-Barthélemy malaisée à cacher;
Les éponges dés gens agenouillés sont vaines
Pour laver le ravin sinistre des Cévennes,
Et toujours il en suinte, un long ruisseau de sang.

L’assassinat a beau prendre un air innocent,
Prouver ce qui n’est pas, nier ce qu’on démontre;
Expliquer ses raisons, dire son Pour et Contre;
Que, si l’on ne mettait personne hors la loi,
Veuillot serait sans tâche et Carrier sans emploi, (Tâche, n’oubliez pas cet accent circonflexe, Imprimeurs), qu’on ne peut tenir compte du sexe,
De l’âge, et cetera, car on est fort pressé,
Et la chaux vive est là qui bout dans le fossé,
Que c’est une besogne après tout peu commode,
Qu’il faut se défier du pathos à la mode,
Qu’on voudrait vous y voir, messieurs les mécontents,
Que désormais voilà de l’ordre pour longtemps,
Qu’il faut tout extirper pour que rien ne menace,
Le meurtre a beau jurer ses grands dieux, saint-Ignace,
Fouquier-Tinville, Hébert, de Maistre, Jacques-deux,
C’est en vain qu’il ébauche un sourire hideux,
Il est le crime, issu du peuple et de la Bible,
Et, même pour le bon motif, il est horrible;
Qu’il se nomme Albe, Omar, Cromwell, Bellart, Marat,

Il est-toujours stupide et toujours scélérat.
Quel que soit le parti qui dans l’horreur se vautre,
Malheur au meurtre autant d’un côté Mie de l’autre!
Je trouve Atrée affreux, même tuant Caïn.
Qui que tu sois qui fus bourreau, cache ta main.
.Sache que tu ne peux à, ceci -te soustraire
Qu’un crime n’est jamais commis que sur un; frère,
Et que tôute victime-est soeur du meurtrier.
On distingue entre erreur et forfait, mais trier

Parmi les massacreurs, voir la neige ou le sable
Teints de sang, et plaider pour le tigre excusable,
Jamais. Nous n’aurons point pour le meurtre hébété
Ce pardon qui ressemble à la complicité.

Ah! que de Niobés, d’Hécubes et d’Électres!
Hélas! j’entends parler à voix basse les spectres,
Et jusqu’à mon oreille un sourd chuchotement
Des morts, à travers l’ombre, arrive vaguement.
Moi qui ne suis qu’un homme ayant pour loi de plaindre,
De lutter, de ne rien tuer, de ne rien craindre,
Qui vainqueur “m’agenouille et vaincu suis debout,
Ma résolution est d’aller jusqu’au bout.
Je sens en moi la force énorme, l’innocence.
N’avoir pour aucun crime aucune complaisance,
C’est ma loi. Je dis donc à tous la vérité.
A toi Rigault, à toi Galliffet. Probité,
Sincérité, devoir, c’est là toute-mon âme.
Les tueurs rouges ont au front le signe infame,
Mais je hais, comme étant aux rouges ressemblants,
Les fratricides noirs et les assassins blancs.
Je suis le balayeur impartial qui passe
Et jette aux quatre vents farouches de l’espace
Tout ce qui sàuille l’homme ou le peuple ou la loi,
L’assassin de Duval, l’assassin de Darboy,
L’erreur, point d’appui sombre où le crime s’attache,
Haynau, Cissey, Jourdan-coupe-tête et sa hache,

Le prêtre et son missel, le reître et son cimier.
Quelque tas monstrueux que fasse le fumier,
Ne vous figurez pas, messieurs, que je recule.
Je rencontre Augias et j’ai l’humeur d’Hercule.

16 septembre.

VII Oui, l’on a sauvé l’ordre et l’état

Oui, l’on a sauvé l’ordre et l’état, et je crois
Que c’est pour la cinquième ou’la sixième fois;
Le steamer pourvoyeur du bagne est dans nos havres;
On a pendant huit jours enjambé des cadavres,
Des fosses, des mourants; on s’est habitué;
On a très vite fait justice; on a tué
Hommes, femmes, enfants, tout un peu pêle-mêle;
Maintenant sont forçats, mangeant à la-gamelle
Et vêtus des habits de la chiourme, plusieurs
Qui de “la tyrannie étaient les fossoyeurs,
Et dont nous avions vu, du Volga jusqu’à l’Ebre
Et du Tage au Niémen, voler le nom célèbre;
Victoire! On n’a point fait les choses à demi.
Pour sauver la patrie et devant l’ennemi
Paris avait cinq mois eu la rumeur immense
Des forêts que le vent semble mettre en déence;
Il ressemblait au sombre ouragan libyen;
Il a fallu le faire un peu taire; c’est bien.
Nous voilà soulagés; car c’est une souffrance
Qu’une ville acharnée. à délivrer la France;
L’Allemagne nous dit à demi-voix: Merci.
Les cafés sont rouverts, les églises aussi;
La paix sanglante sort de la guerre civile.
Nous avons de plus l’ordre et de moins cette ville.
Des gens auraient aimé peut-être moins de morts;
Mais qu’un cheval ait trop d’écume sur le mors
Quand il a bien couru, n’est-ce pas ordinaire?
La bombe n’y voit pas plus clair que le tonnerre;
Les faux coups sont permis, en de si durs combats
Au Jupiter d’en haut comme aux Jupins d’en bas.
Bref, nous sommes sauvés. De tous les coeurs s’élance
Ce cri d’enthousiasme et de bonheur: Silence.!
Que personne ne pense et qu’on ne parle plus!
Il est temps que la. mer montante ait son reflux,

Et que l’utile vent du tombeau décourage
Toutes ces libertés qui font un bruit d’orage.
Ce siècle a trop d’éclairs, de foudre et. de rayons;
Il est bon, et c’est là ce qu’enfin nouS voyons,
Qu’un poing sauveur, sorti des ténèbres, l’étreigne;
La société veut, la religion règne;
C’est dans le droit divin, c’est dans le syllabus
Qu’est le salut, le peuple étant presque un abus.
De là ce grand succès: l’ombre dans la fournaise;
Quatrevingt-neuf puni de son quatrevingt-treize;
Plus de licence, plus de tumulte, plus rien.
De la butte Montmartre au mont Valérien,
Ce Paris,. bouillonnant comme le flot dans l’urne,
Se tait, et nous avons l’apaisement nocturne;
Le peuple est sous le sabre, heureux, content, muet;
On recommencerait si quelqu’un remuait.
Ces, choses, j’,en conviens, ont de quoi satisfaire;
Chacun, en attendant le maître qu’il préfère,
Voit la police faite, et c’est toujours cela;
Et, certe, on n’a pas trop payé cette paix-là
Au prix d’un peu de sang qui sous nos pieds rougeoie;
Pourtant je n’en suis pas devenu. fou de joie.

6 juin.

VIII En Belgique

En Belgique (et peut-être, hélas! ailleurs encor!)
La justice, le droit, la loi, c’est un décor;
Pour le peuple il en sort un bras armé d’un glaive;
Mais que quelqu’un d’en haut passe, cela s’enlève;
Le juge est un châssis, Thémis est en carton,
La magistrature âpre et sombre est. un mouton
Sur roulette, et le code est une bergerie;
Pour faire évanouir la fantasmagorie
Il suffit de ce coup de sifflet réussi
Qu’on entend au théâtre, et dans les bois aussi.
Exemple: des gandins avec leurs gourgandines,
Ô Brillat-Savarin, de la cave où tu dînes,
Sortent, et, gais soupeurs, veulent avec raison
Servir l’ordre en mettant à sac une maison;
S’ils ont bu de bon vin, si cette populace
Se compose de gens titrés, d’hommes en place,
De barons, de marquis, de princes, de laquais,
Gueux bien mis, assassins du genre freluquets,
Si ce sont des bandits à la dernière mode,
Incapables de prendre un sou dans ma commode,
Faisant la bouche en coeur, fredonnant un couplet,
Désirant seulement tuer qui leur déplaît,
Nul magistrat ne doit troubler ce badinage.
Si le principal drôle est presque un personnage,
S’ils ont pris le soin d’être en nombre suffisant,
Armés, et contre un seul cinquante, au besoin cent,
S’ils sont prudents, s’ils n’ont à craindre en ce repaire
Que deux petits enfants gardés par un grand-père,
S’il s’agit d’un français quelconque, d’un quidam,
Monsieur Anspach devient bourgmestre de Saardam,
Pas un sergent ne vient, pas un exempt ne bouge;
Çà, croit-on que Kerwin va se fâcher tout rouge
Contre son fils qui fait dans l’ombre un tour charmant?
La policé se change en Belle au bois dormant.

Comme au fond la justice est une simagrée,
Étant admis l'État à qui la chose agrée
Et qui transforme en cippe, en terme, en borne, en pion,
Ce dogue, le gendarme, et ce lynx, l'espion,
Tout se passe le mieux du monde; on laisse faire.
Anspach boit ce vacarme ainsi qu'un somnifère.
Dérange-t-on les géns pour ces misères-là?
Un assaut! tout au plus un meurtre! qu'est cela?
Après tout, c'est bien fait. Amuse-toi, jeunesse.
Dormez, monsieur Berden, ronflez, monsieur Cornesse.
Nous sommes par des lois complaisantes régis.
Crocheter une porte, assiéger un logis!
Bravo'! ces Franquillons ne sont que des bélîtres.
Va-t-on pas ennuyer de gais-casseurs-de vitres
Pour une pierre ayant pu tuer un enfant.?
Garder l'homme attaqué! Non, celui qu'on défend,
C'est l'agresseur.

Alors luit dans l'ombre livide
Une métamorphose où se plairait Ovide,
Et la mythologie aimable reparaît.
Toute une capitale est changée en forêt;
La patrouille enchantée imite l'écrevisse;
Chez Argus souriant Morphée est de service.

Bruxelles, 30 mai 1871.

IX À UN ROI DE TROISIÈME ORDRE

Roi, tu m’as expulsé, me dit-on. Peu m’importe.
De plus, un acarus, dans un journal cloporte,
M’outrage de ta part et de la part du ciel;
Affront royal qui bave en style officiel.
Je ne te réponds pas. J’ai cette impolitesse.
Vois-tu, roi, ce n’est pas grand’chose qu’une altesse.
Ton journaliste et toi, je vous ignore, étant
Fort occupé des fleurs que Dieu dans cet instant
Nous prodigue, et voulant fêter le mois des roses.
D’ailleurs, je ne crois pas que les grands sphinx moroses,
Ni que le sombre écueil hanté par l’alcyon,
Fassent dans l’infini beaucoup d’attention
Les uns au grain de sable et l’autre au jet d’écume.
Qu’un courtisan insulte et qu’un lampion fume,
C’est tout simple; un rêveur n’en est point irrité;
C’est pourquoi je suis calme envers ta majesté.
Tu peux tranquillement décorer ton bourgmestre.
Par la grâce du Dieu que protège de Maistre,
Tu règnes, et ton scribe écrit. Vivez en paix.

J’erre, fauve chasseur, dans les halliers épais;
J’écoute l’aboiement d’une meute idéale;
Je tiens à la grandeur de la bête royale;
Et j’aime à rencontrer de fiers êtres méchants
Afin de rassurer le monde avec mes chants;

Je ne suis pas fâché quand des lions m’attaquent;
Des monstres, légions rugissantes, me traquent,
C’est bien, je les attends, songeant sous des cyprès.
Je leur montre les dents quand ils viennent trop près;
J’en. fais, quand il le faut,,. un exemple efficace;
Et l’on peut voir dans l’ombre à mes pieds la carcasse
De l’un d’eux qui, je crois, était un empereur.
Mais j’ai fort peu le temps de me mettre en fureur,

Et j’aime mieux rester tranquille. Je médite
Sur la terre, bénie au fond des cieux, maudite
Au fond des temples noirs par le fakir sanglant;
J’aime dans l’oeuf l’oiseau, le chêne dans le gland,
Dans l’enfant l’avenir, et sitôt que l’aurore.
Commence à nous verser du jour, je dis: Encore!
Et je demande au ciel pour nous, humanité,
Un élargissement immense de clarté;
Les injures qu’on peut me faire sont couvertes
Par l’azur, par le doux frisson des branches vertes,
Par le divin babil des nids mélodieux;
Cette nature a tant d’oreilles et tant d’yeux,
Elle regarde avec tant. de majesté l’homme,
Elle est si bien prodigue et si bien économe
De sa force que tout reçoit, que rien ne perd,
Elle mêle un tel verbe à son puissant concert,
Que je sens le besoin d’être un songeur utile;
Dieu surveille le vent, je surveille mon style,
Car l’orage et le vers seraient de vils moqueurs
Si l’un troublait les flots, si l’autre ouvrait les coeurs
. Sans règle, et s’ils n’avaient pour but, dans l’ombre infâme,
L’un d’assainir la mer, l’autre d’agrandir l’âme;
L’ombre, c’est l’ennemi, je la combats; je veux.
Aux énigmes du sort arracher des aveux,
Leur ôter notre coeur qu’elles ont dans leur serre,
Dissiper l’ignorance, abolir la misère;
Je suis l’esprit sévère, inquiet, froid, hautain,
Et le contradicteur de l’énorme destin;
Je marche sous l’horreur des branchages superbes,
Dans les profondes fleurs et dans les hautes herbes,
Ignorant les pays. interdits à mes pas,
Insulté de si loin que. je ne le sais pas;
J’aime tous les soleils et toutes les patries;
Je suis le combattant des grandes rêveries,
Le songe est mon ami, l’utopie est ma soeur;
Je n’aide haine en moi qu’à force de douceur;
J’écoute, comme un bruit de vagues débordées,

Le murmure confus des futures. idées,
Et je prépare un à ce torrent qui vient;
Je sais que. Dieu promet, ce que. l’avenir tient,
Et j’apprête au progrès sa route dans l’espace;
Je défends les berceaux et les tombeaux, je passe,
Ayant le vrai, le bien, le beau, pour appétits,
Inattentif aux rois quand ils sont trop-petits.

12 juin.

X ALSACE ET LORRAINE

Ô le rêve insensé que font ces misérables!
De qui parlez-vous là? Des rois. Jours exécrables!
Jours que de noirs essaims d’Euménides suivront!
Terre et cieux! que mon nom, synonyme d’affront,
Soit maudit, que ma main se sèche et se flétrisse
Si jamais se taisait ma voix accusatrice!”
Temps hideux! voilà donc comment ces meurtriers,
Eclaboussés de sang du casque aux étriers,
Ivres d’orgueil, de bruit, de clairons, de bannières,
Traitent les nations, leurs pâles prisonnières!.
César brille, une flamme affreuse l’empourprant.
On coupe par morceaux les peuples. On en prend
Ce qu’on veut, ce qui plaît, le bras, le coeur, la tête.
On est un tas d’oiseaux de proie et de tempête
Se ruant sur l’auguste et sombre genre humain.
On est les chefs de l’ombre et l’on a dans la main
Les rênes des chevaux du sépulcre, on excite
De la voix tous les chiens monstrueux du Cocyte,
Grant, Bismarck et Gladstone et Bancroft l’aboyeur;
Cette prostituée inepte, la frayeur,
Mère des lâchetés, vous aide épouvantée;
Et pour tuer Paris,-ô tentative athée!
Comme jadis Xercès contre Léonidas,
On pousse la marée horrible des soldats,
On gonfle le flot noir des légions sinistres
On est les dieux ayant les démons pour ministres;
Et quand on a commis tous ces crimes, on va
Remercier ce spectre idiot, Jéhovah!,
Puis on chante et l’on rit, sans voir que Cette fête
Où manque le vrai Dieu, déplaît au vrai prophète,
Et que le justicier, Juvénal, d’Aubigné,
Tacite, est là qui rêve et regarde indigné.
On enterre l’argent pillé, les deux provinces,.
Les morts; on a la joie effroyable des princes;

On se visite, on s’offre un régiment, on est
Plus souriant que n’est épineux le genêt;
On traîne aux bals charmants ses royales paresses,
Et l’on se fait de tigre à tigre des caresses.
. Quant au sang, laissez-le couler, c’est un torrent.
Et cependant, on a des sophistes, dorant
Ces gloires, ces traités haineux, cette infamie.
Une belle captive est une belle amie
Pourvu qu’elle comprenne et se calme; fermons
L’antre des vents soufflant sur les mers et les monts;
Que du drame sanglant sorte l’idylle agreste;
Paix! quand on a tout pris, on peut laisser le reste.
Bonheur! concorde! Plus de courroux! Plus d’effroi!
Et l’on dit à la France: Allons, apaise-toi,
C’est fini, France. -Eh quoi, de ma mémoire amère,
J’effacerais Strasbourg et Metz! dit cette mère
Ah! j’oublierais plutôt mes deux seins arrachés!

Non, nous n’oublierons pas! Rois, ce que vous cherchez,
Le butin, puis la paix dans la forêt déserte,
Ce que, vous attendez, vous ne l’aurez pas, certe;
Mais ce que vous aurez, vous ne l’attendez pas:
C’est le. gouffre. Avancez ,dans l’ombre pas à pas.
Allez, marchez. Toujours derrière la victoire L’avenir, livre obscur, réserve pour l’histoire
.Un feuillet, noir ou blanc, qu’on nomme le revers.
Les naufrages profonds devant vous sont ouverts.
Allez, hommes de nuit. Ah! vous êtes superbes,
Vous régnez! ô faucheurs, vous pliez sous vos gerbes
De cadavres, de fleurs, de cyprès, de lauriers,
Conquérants dont seraient jaloux les usuriers!
Mais vous comptez en vain, voleurs de ma Lorraine,
Sur mon peu de mémoire et sur mon peu de haine,
Je suis un, je suis Tous, et ce que je vous dis
Tous les coeurs furieux vous le disent, bandits!
Non, nous n’oublierons pas! Lorraine, Alsace, ô villes,

O chers français, pays sacrés, soyez tranquilles.
Nous ne tarderons point. Le glaive est prêt déjà Que Judith pâle au flanc d’Holopherne plongea.
Eternel souvenir! Guerre! guerre! Revanche!

Ah! ton peuple vivra, mais ton empire penche,
Allemagne. 0 ,révolte au Tond du tombeau sourd!
O. tocsin formidable au clocher de Strasbourg!
Ossements remués-!’dressement de fantômes!
Czars, princes, empereurs, maîtres du monde, atomes,
Comme ces grands néants s’envolent dans la nuit!
Comme l’éternité des rois s’évanouit!
Des hommes, jeunes, vieux, hurlant, des paysannes,
Des paysans, ayant des faulx pour pertuisanes,
Ah! le jour de la lutte, il en viendra plus d’un!
Metz imitera Lille et Strasbourg Châteaudun;
Vos canons contre vous retourneront leurs gueules,
Les pierres se mettront en marche toutes seules
Et feront des remparts contre vous, et les tours
Vous chasseront, hiboux, milans, corbeaux, vautours!
On verra fourmiller le gouffre des épées;
Alors revivra, fière, au vent des épopées,
La. Révolution debout, le sabre au poing;.
Et, pâles, vous de qui l’avenir ne veut point,
Vous verrez reparaître, ô rois, cette gorgone
A travers le branchage effrayant de l’Argonne;
La France embrassera l’Alsace, embrassera
La Lorraine, ô triomphe! et l’Europe sera!
Et les vengeurs, avec des chants et des huées,- Plus abondants que l’ombre au puits noir des nuées,
Plus pressés que l’averse en un ciel pluvieux,
Viendront, et je verrai cela, moi qui suis. vieux!

Vous riez. N’est-ce pas que l’heure est mal choisie,
Rois, pour tant d’espérance et tant de frénésie,
Quand on vide nos sacs d’écus, quand nous avons
Le même sort qu’ont eu jadis les esclavons,

Quand tout notre sang fuit par notre veine ouverte,
Quand vos fusils joyeux ont tous leur branche verte,
Quand tout est gloire, orgueil, force! -Eh bien, vous verrez.
Soit. Les songes ne sont pas encor dédorés
Mais, princes, cette chose étrange, la justice;
Existe; et, quel que soit le château qu’on bâtisse,
Fût-il de marbre, il est d’argile, et son ciment
Périra, s’il n’a pas le droit pour fondement;
Son mur est vain s’il n’est gardé que par le nombre,
Et sa porte de bronze est faite avec de l’ombre.
Vos peuples sont déjà repentants de vous voir
Tant d’ivresse, un tel sceptre aux mains, tant de pouvoir;
Ils vous ont couronnés, ne sachant pas qu’un Louvre
Abrite la rapine et le vol, dès qu’on l’ouvre;
Ils frémissent de voir que vous avez tout pris.
C’est de leur flanc que l’arbre immense du mépris
Sortira comme un chêne horrible sort de terre.

Vous croyez, tout-puissants stupides, qu’on fait taire
L’éternelle clameur des hommes opprimés!
Vous pesez sur les gonds de la nuit, vous fermez
La porte. par où doit venir la grande aurore!
Vous tentez d’étouffer l’aube-auguste et sonore!:

Ah! vous vous attaquez au sinistre avenir!
Il vient ressusciter, sauver, aimer, punir!
Tremblez! vous violez la rive inabordable.
Savez-vous les secrets de la nuit formidable?
C’est nous que le matin mystérieux connaît;
Ce qui germe, ce qui s’avance, ce qui naît,
Ce qui pense, est à nous. Donc tremblez, ô despotes.
Tout ce que tu fais, Krupp, tout ce que tu tripotes,
Bismarck, tous les fourneaux, flamboyants entonnoirs,
Où l’âpre forge, souffle avec ses poumons noirs,
Fabriquant des canons, des mortiers, des bombardes,
Tout ce qu’un faux triomphe inspire à de faux bardes,
Rois, je vous le redis, ce décor d’opéra

Pâlira, passera, fuira, s’écroulera

Oui, nous sommes tombés et vaincus, et le Xanthe
Frémissant ne vit pas Ilion plus gisante;
Oui, nous sommés à terre, à bas, brisés, battus
Oui, mais Quatrevingt-douze et ses sombres vertus
Crôissent dans nos enfants, et notre ciel se dore
De ce vieil astre, éclos dans cette jeune aurore;
Leurs fraîches voix sont là chantant les grands défis,
Nous voyons nos aïeux renaître dans nos fils;
Oui, vous l’emportez; mais nul ne trompe et n’évite
L’oeil invisible; et bien qu’un larron marche vite,
Le châtiment boiteux le suit et le rejoint;
Mais mon pays n’est pas assez mort pour ne point
Entendre votre éclat de rire dans sa tombe,
Et cela te réveille, ô France, ô ma colombe,
O ma douce patrie, ô grand aigle effrayant!
Oui, vous croyez que tout finit en balayant,
Et que lorsqu’on a mis dans un coin les décombres,
On peut sur les tombeaux laisser rôder les ombres.
Eh bien non. Car une ombre est une âme. Oui, tyrans,
Nous sommes accablés, dépouillés, expirants,
Nous n’avons plus d’amis, plus d’argent, plus d’armée,
Plus de frontières, mais nous avons la fumée
De nos hameaux brûlés qui vous dénonce tous,
Et qui noircit le ciel contre vous, et pour nous!
Mais l’étoile survit quand. le navire sombre;
Mais quand l’assassiné saigne dans le bois sombre,
Une blême lueur sort du cadavre nu.
Mais le destin pensif s’est toujours souvenu
De la nécessité de punir les coupables;
Mais l’invincible essaim des forces impalpables
Qu’on nomme vérité, devoir, progrès, raison,
Vient vers nous et remplit de rumeur l’horizon;
Mais nous sommes aidés par toute l’âme humaine;
Mais le monde a besoin d’un flambeau qui le mène,
Et vous vous appelez Ténèbres; mais le jour,

Le saint travail, la paix, la liberté, l’amour,
Tout cela conduit l’homme et tient dans le mot France!
Oui, nous sommes le deuil, la chute, la souffrance,
Nul peuple de si bas encor n’est revenu;
Mais nous avons pour nous ce quelqu’un d’inconnu
Dont on voit par moments passer l’ombre sublime
Par-dessus là muraille énorme de l’abîme!

9 novembre 1872

XI LA LIBÉRATION DU TERRITOIRE

Je ne me trouve pas délivré. Non, j'ai-beau
Me dresser, je me heurte au plafond du, tombeau,
J'étouffe, j'ai sur moi l'énormité terrible.
Si quelque soupirail blanchit la nuit visible,
J'aperçois là-bas Metz, là-bas Strasbourg, là-bas
Notre honneur; et l'approche obscure des combats,
Et les beaux enfants blonds, bercés dans les chimères,
Souriants, et je songe à vous, ô pauvres mères.
Je consens, si l'on veut, à regarder, je vois
Ceux-ci rire, ceux-là chanter à pleine voix,
La moisson d'or, l'été, les fleurs, et la Patrie
Sinistre, une bataille étant sa rêverie.
Avant peu l'Archer noir embouchera le cor;
Je calcule combien il faut de temps encor;
Je pense à la mêlée affreuse des épées.
Quand des frontières sont par la force usurpées,
Quand un peuple gisant se voit le flanc ouvert,
Avril peut rayonner, le bois peut être vert,
L'arbre peut être plein de nids et de bruits d'ailes;
Mais les tas de boulets, noirs dans les citadelles,
Ont l'air de faire un songe et de frémir parfois,
— Mais les canons muets écoutent une voix
Leur parler bas dans l'ombre, et l'avenir tragique
Souffle à tout cet airain farouche sa logique.

Quoi! vous n'entendez pas, tandis que vous chantez,
Mes frères, le sanglot profond des. deux cités!
Quoi! vous ne voyez pas, foule aisément sereine,
L'Alsace en frissonnant regarder la Lorraine!
— O soeur, on nous oublie! on est content sans nous! -
Non! nous n'oublions pas! nous sommes à genoux

Devant votre supplice, ô villes! Quoi! nous croire Affranchis, lorsqu'on met au bagne notre gloire,

Quand on coupe à la France un pari de son manteau,
Quand l'Alsace au carcan, la Lorraine au poteau,
Pleurent, tordent leurs bras sacrés, et nous appellent,
Quand nos frais écoliers, ivres de rage, épellent
Quatrevingt-douze, afin d'apprendre quel éclair
Jaillit du coeur de Hoche et du front de Kléber,
Et de quelle façon, dans ce siècle où nous sommes,
On fait la guerre aux rois d'où sort la paix des hommes!
Non, remparts, non, clochers superbes, non jamais
Je n'oublierai Strasbourg et je n'oublierai Metz.
L'horrible aigle des nuits nous étreint dans ses serres,
Villes! nous ne pouvons, nous français, nous vos frères,
Nous qui vivons par vous, nous par qui vous vivez,
Etre que par Strasbourg et par Metz délivrés!
Toute autre délivrance est un leurre; et la honte,
Tache qui croît sans cesse, ombre qui toujours monte,
Reste au front rougissant de notre histoire en deuil,
Peuple, et nous avons tous un pied dans le cercueil,
Et pas une cité n'est entière, et j'estime
Que Verdun est aux fers, que Belfort est victime,
Et que Paris se traîne, humble, amoindri, plaintif,
Tant que Strasbourg est pris et que Metz est captif.
Rien ne nous fait le coeur plus rude et plus sauvage
Que de voir cette voûte infâme, l'esclavage,
S'étendre et remplacer au-dessus de nos yeux
Le soleil, les oiseaux chantants, les vastes cieux!
Non, je ne suis pas libre. O tremblements de terre!
J'entrevois sur ma tête un nuage, un cratère,
Et l'âpre éruption des peuples, fleuve ardent;
Je râle sous le poids de l'avenir grondant,
J'écoute bouillonner la lave sous-marine,
Et je me sens toujours l'Etna sur la poitrine!

Et puisque vous voulez que je vous dise tout,
Je dis qu'on n'est point grand tant qu'on n'est pas debout,
Et qu'on n'est pas debout tant qu'on traîne une chaîne;
J'envie aux vieux romains leurs couronnes de chêne;

Je veux qu’on soit modeste et hautain; quant à moi,
Je déclare qu’après tant d’opprobre et d’effroi,
Lorsqu’à peine nôs murs chancelants se soutiennent,
Sans me préoccuper si des rois. vont et viennent,
S’ils arrivent du Caire ou bien de Téhéran,
Si l’un est un bourreau, si l’autre est un tyran,
Si ces curieux sont des monstres, s’ils demeurent
Dans une ombre hideuse où des nations meurent,
Si c’est au diable ou bien à Dieu qu’ils sont dévots,
S’ils ont des diamants aux crins de leurs chevaux,
Je dis que, les laissant se corrompre ou s’instruire,
Tant que je ne pourrais faire au soleil reluire
Que des guidons qu’agite un lugubre frisson,
Et des clairons sortis à peine de prison,
Tant que je n’aurais pas, rugissant de colère,
Lavé dans un immense Austerlitz populaire
Sedan, Forbach, nos deuils, nos drapeaux frémissants,
Je ne montrerais point notre armée aux passants!

Ô peuple, toi qui fus si beau, toi qui naguère
Ouvrais si largement tes ailes dans la guerre,
Toi de qui l’envergure effrayante couvrit
Berlin, Rome, Memphis, Vienne, Moscou, Madrid,
Toi qui soufflas le vent des tempêtes sur l’onde
Et qui fis du chaos naître l’aurore blonde,
Toi qui seul eus l’honneur de tenir dans ta main
Et de pouvoir lâcher ce grand oiseau, Demain,
Toi qui balayas tout, l’azur, les étendues,
Les espaces, chasseur des fuites éperdues,
Toi qui fus le meilleur, toi qui fus le premier,.
O peuple, maintenant, assis sur ton fumier,
Racle avec un tesson le pus de tes ulcères,
Et songe.

La défaite a des conseils sincères;
La beauté du malheur farouche, c’est d’avoir
Une fraternité sombre avec le devoir;

Le devoir aujourd’hui, c’est de se laisser croître,
Sans bruit, et d’enfermer, comme une vierge au cloître,
Sa haine, et de nourrir les noirs ressentiments.
A quoi bon étaler déjà nos régiments?
A quoi bon galoper devant l’Europe hostile?
Ne point faire envoler de poussière inutile
Est sage; un jour viendra d’éclore et d’éclater;
Et je crois qu’il vaut mieux ne pas tant se hâter.

Car il faut, lorsqu’on voit les soldats de la France,
Qu’on dise: -C’est la gloire et c’est la délivrance!
C’est Jemmapes, l’Argonne, Ulm, Iéna, Fleurus!
C’est un tas de lauriers, au soleil apparus!
Regardez. Ils ont fait les choses impossibles.
Ce sont les bienfaisants, ce sont les invincibles.
Ils ont pour murs les monts et le Rhin pour fossé. -
En les voyant, il faut qu’on dise: -Ils ont chassé
Les rois du nord, les rois du sud, les rois de l’ombre;
Cette armée est le roc vainqueur des flots sans nombre,
Et leur nom resplendit du zénith au nadir! -
Il faut que les tyrans tremblent, loin d’applaudir:

Il faut qu’on dise: -Ils sont les amis vénérables
Des pauvres, des damnés, des serfs, des misérables,
Les grands spoliateurs des trônes, arrachant
Sceptre, glaive et puissance à quiconque est méchant;
Ils sont les bienvenus partout où quelqu’un souffre.
Ils ont l’aile de flamme habituée au gouffre.
Ils sont l’essaim d’éclairs qui traverse la nuit.
Ils vont, même quand c’est la mort qui les conduit.
Ils sont beaux, souriants, joyeux, pleins de lumière;
Athène en serait folle et Sparte en serait fière. -
Il faut qu’on dise: -Ils sont d’accord avec les cieux!
Et que l’homme, adorant leur pas audacieux,
Croie entendre, au-dessus de ces légionnaires
Qui roulent leurs canons, Dieu rouler ses tonnerres!

C’est pôurquoi j’attendrai.

Qu’attends-tu? -Je réponds:
J’attends l’aube, j’attends que tous disent: -Frappons!
Levons-nous! et donnons à Sedan pour réplique
L’Europe en liberté! -J’attends la république,
J’attends l’emportement de tout le genre humain!
Tant qu’à ce siècle auguste on barre le chemin,
Tant que la Prusse tient prisonnière la France,
Penser est un affront, vivre est une souffrance,
Je sens, comme Isaïe insurgé pour Sion,
Gronder le profond vers de l’indignation,
Et la colère en moi n’est pas plus épuisable
Que le flot dans la mer immense, et que le sable
Dans l’orageux désert remué par les vents.

Ce que j’attends? J’attends que les os soient vivants!
Je suis spectre, et je rêve, et la cendre me couvre,
Et j’écoute; et j’attends que le sépulcre’s’ouvre.
J’attends que dans les coeurs il s’élève des voix,
Que sous les conquérants s’écroulent les pavois,
Et qu’à l’extrémité du malheur, du désastre,
De l’ombre et de la honte, on voie un lever d’astre!

Jusqu’à cet instant-là, gardons superbement,
Ô peuple, la fureur de notre abaissement, -
Et que tout l’alimente et que tout l’exaspère.
Étant petit, j’ai vu quelqu’un de grand, mon père.
Je m’en souviens; c’était un soldat, rien de plus;
Mais il avait mêlé son âme aux fiers reflux,
Aux revanches, aux cris de guerre, aux nobles fêtes,
Et l’éclair de son sabre était dans nos tempêtes.
Oh! je ne-vous veux pas dissimuler l’ennui,
A vous; fameux hier, d’êtré obscurs aujourd’hui,
O nos soldats, lutteurs infortunés, phalange
Qu’illumina jadis la gloire sans mélange,
L’étranger à cette heure, hélas! héros trahis,

Marche-sur votre histoire et sur votre pays.;
Oui, vous avez laissé ces reîtres aux mains viles
Voler nos-champs,-voler nos murs, voler nos villes,
Et compléter leur gloire avec nos sacs d’écus;
Oui, vous fûtes captifs, oui, vous êtes vaincus;
Vous êtes dans le puits des chutes insondables;
Mais c’est votre destin d’en sortir formidables,
Mais vous vous dresserez, mais vous vous lèverez,
Mais vous serez ainsi que la faulx dans les prés;
L’hercule celte en vous, la hache sur l’épaule,
Revivra, vous rendrez sa frontière à la Gaule,
Vous foulerez aux pieds Fritz, Guillaume, Attila,
Schinderhanne et Bismarck, et j’attends ce jour-là!

Oui, les hommes d’Eylau vous diront: Camarades!

Et jusque-là, soyez pensifs loin des parades,
Loin des vaines rumeurs, loin des faux cliquetis,
Et regardez grandir nos fils encor petits.

Je vis désormais, l’oeil fixé sur nos deux villes.

Non, je ne pense pas que les rois soient tranquilles;
Je n’ai plus qu’une joie au monde, leur souci.
Rois, vous avez vaincu, vous avez réussi,
Vous bâtissez, avec toutes sortes de crimes,
Un édifice infâme au haut des monts sublimes.
Vous avez entre l’homme et vous construit un mur,
Soit. Un palais énorme, éblouissant, obscur,
D’où sort l’éclair, où pas une lumière n’entre,
Et c’est un temple, à moins que ce ne soit un antre.

Pourtant, eût-on pour soi l’armée et le sénat,
Ne point laisser de trace après l’assassinat,
Rajuster son exploit, bien laver la victoire,
Nettoyer le côté malpropre de la gloire,
Est prudent. Le sort a des retours tortueux,

Songez-y. J’en conviens, vous êtes monstrueux;
Vous et vos chanceliers, vous et vos connétables,
Vous êtes satisfaits, vous êtes redoutables;
Vous-avez, joyeux, forts, servis par ce qui nuit,
Entrepris le recul du monde vers la nuit;

Vous faites chaque jour faire un progrès à l’ombre;
Vous avez, sous le ciel d’heure en heure plus sombre,
Princes, de tels succès à nous faire envier
Que vous pouvez railler le vingt-et-un janvier,
Le quatorze juillet, le dix août, ces journées
Tragiques, d’où sortaient les grandes destinées,
Que vous pouvez penser que le Rhin, ce ruisseau,
Suffit Tour arrêter Jourdan, Brune et Marceau,
Et que vous pouvez rire en vos banquets sonores
De tous nos ouragans, de toutes nôs aurores,
Et des vastes efforts des titans endormis.
Tout est bien; vous vivez, vous êtes bons amis,
Rois, et vous n’êtes point de notre or économes;
Vous en êtes venus à vous donner les hommes
Vous vous faites cadeau d’un peuple, après souper;
L’aigle est fait pour planer et l’homme pour ramper;
L’Europe est le reptile et vous êtes les aigles;
Vos caprices, voilà nos lois, nos droits, nos règles;
La terre encor n’a vu sous le bleu firmament
Rien qui puisse égaler votre assouvissement;
Et le Destin pour vous s’épuise en politesses;
Devant vos majestés et devant vos altesses,
Les prêtres mettent Dieu stupéfait à genoux;
Jamais rien n’a semblé plus éternel que vous;
Votre toute-puissance aujourd’hui seule existe;
Mais, rois, tout cela tremble, et votre gloire triste
Devine le refus profond de l’avenir;
Car sur tous les bonheurs que vous croyez tenir,
Sur vos arcs triomphaux, sur vos splendeurs hautaines,
Sur tout ce qui compose, ô rois, ô capitaines,
L’amas prodigieux de vos prospérités,

Sur ce que vous rêvez, sur ce que vous tentez,
Sur votre ambition et sur votre espérance,
On voit la grande main sanglante de la France.

29 août 1873. Villa M.

XII Le lionceau songeait

;il était tout petit,
Caché muet, pareil au chat qui se blottit,
Loin du soleil, dans l’ombre où les rayons s’émoussent.

Combien faut-il de temps pour que ses ongles poussent?
Il songeait.

Laissez-moi vous dire qùe les rois,
Lugubres, font le mal; foulent aux pieds les dràits,
Les vérités, l’honneur, la vertu, la justice -
Ils font venir le prêtre afin qu’on rebâtisse
L’enfer dans l’âme humaine où Dieu mit la raison;
Et leurs prospérités sont faites de façon
Que la gloire d’un peuple est la honte de l’autre;
Leur grandeur dans les tas d’immondices se vautre,
Leurs sceptres aux plaisirs obscènes sont mêlés,
La bauge aux pourceaux plaît à ces paons étoilés;
Hier, ils souffletaient lés nations meurtries;
Gais, ils jouaient aux dés les robes des patries;
A celui-ci le Nil, à celui-là le Rhin;
Quand.ils. ont sur leur front. mis leur cimier d’airain,
Rien ne peut modérer leurs fureurs, peu calmées
Par des chansons d’église et des. danses d’almées;
Ils ont on ne sait quel appétit monstrueux
D’être horribles; ils sont, les dragons tortueux,
Les hydres, les passants sinistres de l’histoire;
Ils ont pour-eux le deuil, l’échafaud, la victoire,
Tout ce qui rampe et tremble; et les rires hautains;
La famine du peuple assiste à leurs festins;
L’aurore est leur palais, l’ombre est leur forteresse,
Leur faux pouvoir devant l’éternel Dieu se dresse
Dans toute l’impudeur de sa rébellion;
ils,sont dorés, ils sont fangeux.

Grandis, lion!

9 octobre 1873. Paris.

XIII Ô royauté!

Ô royauté! tàs d’ombre! amas d’horreur, d’effroi;
De crime, formidable au peuple, puis au roi,
Aveuglant les yeux qui le voient,
Plein de spectres, semblable aux visions d’Endos!
On n’y distingue rien qu’une couronne d’or
Dont les vagues fleurons flamboient.

Tempête d’ignorance, et de haine, et de nuit,
Où se heurtent chevaux, hommes, glaive qui luit,
Canon grondant, clairon sonore! -
Brume affreuse, pareille aux faces du tombeaù,
Qui fait, comme une bouche éteignant un flambeau,
Souffler l’ouragan sur l’aurore!

Lourd nuage, épandu sur les siècles tremblants,
D’où, quand il a pesé sur l’homme deux mille ans,
Et sur le peuple, flot qui roule,
On voit, après le bruit que fait un tombereau,
Sortir soudain le poing sinistre du bourreau
Montrant une tété à la foule!

XIV Quoi donc!

Quoi donc! avoir pour but cette lâcheté, plaire!
Se donner cet emploi noble, auguste, exemplaire,
La flatterie! avoir pour maîtres les passants!
Obéir au vent noir soufflant dans tous les sens!
Être contre, être pour, suivant le baromètre!
Blâmer, puis approuver, défendre, puis permettre,
Non selon le devoir, mais selon le succès!
Parce qu’il est des fous risqûant tous les essais,
Qui violent nos droits au nom de nos principes,
. Laisser faire! Laisser dénaturer les types
De l’honneur, du progrès, du droit, de l’équité!
Vouloir le talion! souffrir, ô Liberté,
Qu’un trousseau de clés pende et sonne à ta ceinture!
Quand dans une ombre énorme et triste on aventure
Toutes les vérités en deuil, dire: C’est bon!
Nier l’astre, admirer la blancheur du charbon,
Déclarer vrai le faux, et l’injustice juste,
Louer Carrier après avoir flétri Procuste!
Vêtir sa conscience au gré de la saison!
Se mettre à la fenêtre et guetter l’horizon,
Regarder se gonfler telle ou telle bannière,
Pour savoir à quelle heure et de quelle manière
On pourrait être vil le plus utilement!
Quoi!.ce principe hier sincère, aujourd’hui ment!
Quoi! toute vérité qui gêne n’est plus vraie!
Si c’est mon intérêt, le cygne est une orfraie,
Peuple, et de ce lion, le droit, je fais mon chien!
Il suffit, pour changer soudain le mal en bien,
Que ce soit un tyran. qui règne, au lieu d’un autre,
C’est un roi, l’on combat; c’est la foule, on se vautre.

Quoi! le penseur aura tonné superbement
Si c’est un empereur qui se sert du supplice,
Si c’est la multitude, il en sera complice!

— Et cet homme indigné sera l'homme ébloui!
O ciel! Après avoir dit non, bégayer oui!
Et, devant l'échafaud, dès que la foule en use,
Mettre un lâche sourire au masque de Méduse!
Voilà donc où la soif de plaire conduirait!
Non! Non! Non! Déserter, pour un sombre intérêt,
Ces vérités que nous français, nous établîmes,
Au peuple honnête et bon et plein d'instincts sublimes,
Mais préférant parfois les bas-fonds aux sommets,
Dire qu'il a raison quand il a tort,: jamais"!
Ah! plutôt qu'accepter de telles servitudes;
L'hoinnie qui parle ici fuirait aux solitudes,
Subirait tout, le froid, la faim; l'exil amer,
L'ennui, la surdité sauvage de la mer,
Tout, loin de la patrie et loin de la lumière,
Et le soir, bûcheron rentrant dans sa chaumière,
Las, pieds nus, à travers les ronces, traînerait
Derrière lui le bois coupé dans la forêt!...

27 avril 1871.

XV Un grand sabre

Un grand sabre serait d’utilité publique:
Est-ce qu’il n’est pas temps d’exterminer la clique
Des songeurs, des rêveurs, des penseurs, des savants,
Et de tous ces semeurs jetant leur graine aux vents,
Et de mettre au pavois celui qui nous fait taire,
Et de souffler sur l’aube, et d’éteindre Voltaire!
Qu’attendez-vous? Oh! comme il serait beau de voir
Quelque bon vieux tyran faire enfin son devoir,
Couper, tailler, trancher et mettre à vos Molières,
A vos Dantes, à vos Miltons, des muselières!
Nous en avons assez de tous ces bavards-là.
Le mal des hommes vient du premier qui parla.
0n va criant: Progrès! Fraternité! Couragè!
Quel besoin avons-nous de tous ces mots d’orage?
Jadis tout allait bien pourvu qu’on,se tînt coi.
On veut être à présent libre et maître. Pourquoi?
Liberté, c’est tempête. Il faut qu’un bon pilote
Ramène au port, la barque et le peuple à ,l’ilote.
Il faut qu’un belluaire ou qu’un homme d’état
Bride, ce peuple osant commettre l’attentat
De naître, et s’égarant jusqu’à la convoitise
Que montre au lys l’abeille et la chèvre au cytise.
Les révolutions continueront, le bruit
Et le vacarme iront grossissant dans la nuit,

Tant que nous n’aurons pas trouvé ce politique.
Reprenons l’ancien temple et l’ancienne boutique;
Revivre le passé nous suffit. Que veut-on?
A quoi sert Diderot? à quoi rime Danton?
Pourquoi Garibaldi trouble-t-il la Sicile?
Votre progrès n’est rien que fatigue imbécile!
Quelle rage avez-vous de marcher en avant?
Trop de tumulte sort de l’homme trop vivant.
L’esprit humain; longtemps calme et sombre, s’agite;

Ne serait-il pas bon qu’on fît rentrer au gîte
Et qu’on remît sous clefs et qu’on paralysât
Ce monstre, secouant sa chaîne de forçat?
Quoi! la.mouche, autrefois loyale et résignée,
Manque au respect qu’on doit aux toiles d’araignée!
Elle tente d’y faire un trou pour s’échapper!
La plèbe ose exister, gouverner, usurper!
Quoi! la vérité sort! la raison l’accompagne!
Vite! Rejetons l’une au puits, et l’autre au bagne!
Pour quiconque ose aller, venir, briser l’écrou,
L’enfer est un cachot avec Dieu pour verrou.
Qu’on y rentre. O révolte affreuse! Quel désordre
Que tous ces ouragans lâchés, tâchant de mordre,
Se ruant sur l’autel, sur la loi, sur le roi!
Oh! quel déplacement tragique de l’effroi!
L’inexorable pleure et les terribles tremblent;
Les vautours effarés aux passereaux ressemblent.
Deuil! horreur! regarder surgir de tous côtés
Un tas de vérités et de réalités,
Voir leur flamme, et songer que peut-être chacune
Apporte on ne sait quelle effrayante rancune,
Et, rayonnante, vient au monde reprocher
Le sceptre, l’échafaud, le glaive et le bûçher!
Oh! tant qu’on n’aura pas mis hors d’état de nuire
Tout ce qui veut créer, chauffer, féconder, luire,
Tant que le vieux bon ordre encourra le péril
De voir brusquement naître un formidable avril,
Tant qu’il sera permis aux folles plumes ivres
De porter les oiseaux et d’écrire les livres,
Tant qu’un homme qui dit j’ai faim! pâle, priant,
Pensif, fera blanchir vaguement l’orient;
Tant que le ciel complice aura la transparence
Qui laisse distinguer aux pauvres l’espérance,
Tant que le va-mi-pieds se croira citoyen,
Je suis de votre avis, bourgeois, aucun moyen
De dormir en repos, et nul coin de navire
Où l’on puisse être seul sauvé quand tout chavire.

Quoi! pas un prêtre, pas un juge, pas un roi,
Qui, tandis que frémit le livre de la loi,
S’il regarde la nuit le ciel noir, ne se sente
Troublé par la lueur du zénith grandissante!
Ceci, c’est. l’utopie, et ceci, le calcul,
Ceci, c’est le progrès sans terme et sans recul,
Voici le beau, le vrai, l’idéal qui prend. forme,
Et le juste, et voici la conscience énorme!
Qui donc pourrait, parmi les enfants de Japhet,
Conjurer le mystère inquiétant qui fait
Que nous voyons tomber dans l’ombre pêle-mêle
Tant de gouttes de lait de l’immense mamelle?
O terreur! tout s’éclaire! il est temps d’en-finir.
Qui sauvera le monde en péril d’avenir?
Caïn pleure, Judas gémit, Phalaris souffre.
Oh! qu’il serait urgent d’arrêter net le’gouffre
En pleine éruption de lumière; et la paix,
Le progrès, s’évadant des nuages épais,
La science, et, montant là-haut vers le solstice,
L’âme, et cette blancheur céleste, la justice;
Et comme on ferait bien de mettre à la raison
Les astres se levant en foulé à l’horizon!

25 août 1872. H. H.

XVI AUX HISTORIENS

Soyez juges. Soyez apôtres. Soyez prêtres.
Dites le vrai. Surtout n’expliquez pas les traîtres!
Car l’explication finit-par ressembler
A l’indulgence affreuse; et cela fait trembler.
Ne me racontez pas un opprobre notoire
Comme on raconterait n’importe quelle histoire.
Quelle est la quantité d’assassinat permis,
Jusqu’où peut-on s’entendre avec les ennemis,
Jusqu’où peut-on couper la gorge à la patrie,
L’épaule de Rague est-elle trop flétrie,
Dupont mérite-t-il tout ce qui l’accabla,
Non, non, je ne veux point de ces recherchés-là!
Je frémis, la rougeur au visage me monte.
Voilà tout. Je veux être un ignorant de honte.
Je veux rester stupide et furieux devant
Les coups du sort, les coups de mer, les coups de vent,
Auxquels vient s’ajouter le guet-apens d’un lâche.
Je prends le crime en bloc. Qui me calme, me fâche.
Non, l’histoire n’est point un lavage d’égout.
Historiens, ayez les traîtres en dégoût.

Ne rôdez point avec vos lampes dans leur cave;
Ne dites pas: Pourtant ce lâche était un brave;
Ne cherchez pas comment leur forfait se construit
Et s’éclaircit, laissez ces monstres à la nuit.
Où donc en serions-nous si l’on s’expliquait l’homme
Qui tel jour a livré Paris ou trahi Rome!
Discuter, c’est déjà l’absoudre vaguement.
Quoi! vous alléguerez ceci, cela, comment
Il se fait qu’on devient ce misérable étrange!
Quoi! vous m’expliquerez le pourquoi de la fange!
Vous me ferez toucher du doigt que ce soldat,
Ayant le fier devoir de mourir pour mandat,
A pu vendre le peuple et la France et l’armée,

Qu'il a pu devenir, souillant sa renommée,
Transfuge, sans nausée et sans rébellion,
Et qu'un renard était dans la peau du lion!
Vous aurez pour ces faits, dont l'effroi me pénètre,
Des prétextes, qui sait? et des motifs peut-être!
Non! je n'ai pas l'humeur d'écouter vos discours
Quand notre vieil honneur m'appelle à son secours,
Quand le malheur public sous ma fenêtre passe.
Quand l'abject trahisseur vient me demander grâce,
Je suis d'airain, je suis sourd, aveugle et muet;
J'aurais horreur de moi si mon coeur remuait.

Il ne me convient pas, sachez-le, de comprendre
Qu'un homme, ayant l'épée en main, ait pu la rendre;
Je ne veux pas savoir si ce gueux se méprit;
Il ne me convient pas de mettre en mon esprit
L'itinéraire affreux que suit le parricide;
Je ne veux pas qu'un grave écrivain m'élucide,
Avec faits à l'appui, groupés et variés,
Le cerveau de Clouet, le coeur de Dumouriez.
Ma strophe est l'euménide et je poursuis Oreste.
Meurtrier, c'est assez. Ce mot dit tout. Le reste
Est inutile et peut être nuisible. Il faut
Que Juvénal arrive et dresse l'échafaud,
Et qu'Eschyle, dieu noir, justicier olympique,
Frappe le traître avec le plat du glaive épique!
Lorsqu'un fourbe exécré du peuple qu'il perdit,
Un marchand de patrie et d'honneur, un bandit,
Vous prend pour avocats, ô penseurs, lorsqu'il ose
Vous porter son dossier, vous charger de sa cause,
Je suis content de vous si votre plaidoyer,
Justes historiens, consiste à foudroyer.

Toute explication d'un monstre l'atténue;
Je veux la perfidie immonde toute nue.
Le scélérat montré sans voile à tous les, yeux.
Donne un frisson meilleur et m'épouvante mieux.

Pour de certains forfaits clémence est connivence.
Quand dans l’intérieur d’un grand crime j’avance,
Quand dans l’ombre un cadavre auguste est découvert,
Quand il s’agit du flanc de ma mère entr’ouvert,
Quand l’impur ouvrier-.d’une exécrable trame,
Monk livrant un pays, Deutz livrant. une femme,
Coriolan, Leclerc, Pichegru,, m’apparaît,
Quand j’entre dans cette âme et dans cette forêt,
Je tremble, et je veux être, à cette approche noire,
Averti,par le cri terrible de l’histoiré.

Devant l’affront, devant, le traître à son puys,
O deuil! devant les champs paternels envahis,
Devant le râle affreux des cités violées,
Devant le sang versé pour rien dans les mêlées,
Si facile qu’on soit au pardon, non! jamais!
Il faut punir! Devant Baylen, devant Metz,
C’est pour la France en pleurs que notre cceur se serre,
La, lapidation publique est nécessaire;
Aux pavés, tous! frappons! et que l’écrasement
Du bandit soit sous l’ombre et les pierres fumant!
Pas de grâce! il faut être ou vèngeur ou complice;
Et quiconque n’est pas du crime est du suppliée.
Hélas!
Ce que je veux tuer, ce n’est pas lui,
C’est, son crime. Cet homme a failli, s’est enfui,.
Pour l’âme épouvantable et vile,
Pour celui qui livra la porte de la. ville,
Qui donna ses soldats, comme on donne un troupeau,
Qui poignarda la gloire et vendit le drapeau,
Pour cet homme de deuil, de mensonge et de ruse,
Les sombres firmaments n’admettent pas d’excuse.
Après que dans un siècle, où tout semble effacé,
Un si lâche assassin de l’honneur a passé,
On ne tient plus à vivre, on ne sait plus que croire;
Et la vertu, la foi, la probité, l’histoire,,
Sont comme des rayons dans la mer engloutis.

Si l’on voulait mêler-cet homme à ses petits,
La tigresse serait indignée et confuse;
La fauve honnêteté des-antres le refuse
Et ne lui donne point dans les bois frémissants
Place parmi les loups hideux, mais innocents;
A tout perdu!

Et toute la nature, étant une patrie,
Abhorre, en sa sauvage et fière rêverie,
Le fourbe autour duquel Satan vient chuchoter
L’astre des cieux n’est pas d’avis qu’on puisse ôter
Sa honte à ce damné dont Caïn est l’ancêtre,
Et veut lé voir infâme après l’avoir vu traître.
Ne faisons point douter les hommes; laissons-leur
L’horreur du meurtrier, du menteur, du voleur,
Ne troublons pas en eux la notion du juste;
Faisons luire à leurs yeux la certitude auguste,
L’héroïsme est un ciel, l’honneur est un azur;
Si vous livrez le peuple au scepticisme obscur,
Il ne sait plus quelle est la lueur qui le mène;
Alors tout flotte; alors la conscience humaine
A des blêmissements pires que la noirceur.

L’esquif dans l’eau diffuse a son avertisseur,
La boussole; il navigue et les hommes ont l’âme.
Laissez-leur ce conseil, laissez-leur cette flamme;
La droiture est leur pôle et le devoir leur nord;
La flotte en pleine mer et le peuple en plein sort,
La vie étant brumeuse et l’ombre étant profonde,
Ont besoin, dans la vaste obscurité de l’onde,
L’une de voir l’étoile et l’autre de voir Dieu.
Dieu, c’est la vérité rayonnant au milieu
Des ténèbres, du doute et de l’idolâtrie;
Et, quand les ennemis sont là, c’est la patrie.

Pour qui vend son pays, ciel noir, pas de pitié!

Ah! ne partageons point le crime par moitié
Entre le hasard louche et l'homme misérable.
Pas de grâce. Imitons l'abîme vénérable
Qui ne se laisse pas détourner de. son but;
Tout forfait doit payer au châtiment tribut;
La justice est la foi de fer que rien ne touche;
La peine a pour épée une flamme farouche;,
Le glaive de cet ange horrible est sans fourreau.
Pas plus que le hibou ne devient passereau,
Pas plus qùe le corbeau ne se change en colombe,
Un perfide ne peut être un juste; et la tombe
Pose et ferme à jamais son couvercle sur lui.
Les peuples, dont l'honneur est le seul point d'appui,
Veulent que le destin sur ce monstre exemplaire
Jette une catastrophe égale à leur colère;
Il convient que Judas ait Judas pour bourreau;
J'approuve le boulet qui terrassa Moreau
Et qui fut ce jour-là ressemblant au tonnerre.

Tout cet inattendù formidable où l'on erré,
Qu'on nomme histoire, où l'ombre a le ciel pour reflet,
C'est l'océan, tremblant, terrible, et, bien qu'il ait
De vagues mouvements de berceau, c'est le gouffre.
L'homme en ces profondeurs travaille, cherche, souffre,
Et l'espérance vole en avant, doux oiseau:
O pilote démon qui trahit le vaisseau!
Malheur au matelot monstrueux qui se traîne
Et fait avec sa vrille un trou dans la carène
Quand lé navire lutte en proie aux aquilons!

Historien, soyez implacable aux félons..
Je me sens inclément quand la patrie expire
Je ne hais point la mort, trouvant la honte, pire
Je ne suis. pas sévère et terrible à demi
Lorsqu'il s'agit de mettre en fuite l'ennemi;
J'exige la fureur, l'effort, la réussite!
Vous tenez le stylet tragique de-Tacite.

Eh bien soyez farouche et dur. Il me déplaît
Que le narrateur fasse un détail trop complet
De la difficulté de combattre, et calcule,
Complaisamment, le lieu, l’heure, le crépuscule,
La distance, le temps de marcher au cànon,
Si les soldats étaient bien disposés ou non,
S’il n’était point venu d’ordre contradictoire;
Je n’aime pas entendre ainsi parler l’histoire.
Et ce tas d’arguments, de motifs, de raisons,
C’est l’encouragement sinistre aux trahisons.
La plaidoirie est sombre et l’excuse est malsaine.
Ah! vous semez Grouchy! vous récoltez Bazaine.

15 janvier 1875

XVII VICTOIRES ET CONQUÊTES DE LA RELIGION

Garaste a triomphé de l’encyclopédie.
Tartufe est grand. L’église avait la maladie;
Elle est en traitement chez le docteur Véron.
Sbrigani joint les mains; Crispin rentre au `giron;
Pasquin est parfumé de myrrhe et de cinname.
Robert Macaire vieux s’est senti dans son âme
Pris de l’ambition d’une honorable fin;
Au paradis Veuillot il s’est fait séraphin.
Il s’y rend fort utile; il ouvre la boutique;

Il sait l’art d’ajuster le libelle au cantique;
Et tout bas, il murmure à travers son Credo:
Quand je serai curé, Bertrand sera bedeau.
Ayant, en qualité de regardeur oblique,
Un peu l’inspection de la chose publique,
Il surveille aujourd’hui l’esprit de nouveauté;
Pour lui la presse libre est une obscénité,
Et la. philosophie un tapage nocturne;
Dans l’église le cloître et dans l’art le cothurne,
Dans l’état le sergent de ville; tout est là.
Rien avant Hildebrand, rien après Loyola.
Scapin l’aide. Il déclame: Enfer! crime! hérésies!
Tremblez, âmes déjà plus qu’à moitié roussies!
Honnêtes gens, c’est moi qui vous passe au tamis.
Ayez foi seulement dans le bon Dieu permis.
Songez que je suis là! -Mascarille dit: Gare!
La conscience humaine étant une bagarre,
Il s’en fait conducteur; il sait le droit chemin;
Il veut qu’après l’émeute et les grands coups de main,
Le peuple se repente, ait l’âme d’ennui pleine,
Pleure, et de la Bastille aille à la Madeleine.
Toute la vérité tient dans le Syllabus.

La pensée en dehôrs d’Ignace est un abus,
Et tout ce qui survient n’est qu’erreurs et tumultes;
Debout au marchepied de l’omnibus des cultes,
Barrant la porte, il crie à tout venant: Complet!
Falstaff, dont le menton si gaîment se triplait,
Est dévot. Que sert-il? la messe. Il s’associe
Au dogme, et ses hoquets sentent l’orthodoxie;
Il coud un psaume au bout de son ancien couplet;
Une âme libre ouvrant ses ailes lui déplaît;
Montant la garde autour du missel, ce gros homme
Prêche, et son ventre prend fait et cause pour Rome;
Il dit qu’il ne faut pas laisser sans examen
L’homme communiquer avec l’esprit humain,
Qu’il est bon de tout craindre, et, de peur d’aventure,
De garder l’Éternel derrière une clôture;
Il croit; son estomac s’accouple au sacré-coeur;
Au seuil noir du mystère il s’installe vainqueur,
Prêt à barricader le gouffre avec sa table;
Il consacre au seul culte auguste et véritable
Ce qui reste à ses pieds des bons vins qu’il a bus;
Il emploie à servir les Jéhovahs fourbus
Et les religions mortes ou corrompues,
Tout l’arsenal cassé de ses franches repues;
Il n’entend pas qu’on aille à travers le ciel bleu,
L’ombre immense, en dehors du pape, chercher Dieu;
Il refuse aux penseurs l’air, l’horizon, l’espace,
Plantant, pour empêcher que l’esprit humain passe
Au-delà de la bulle In Caena Domini,
Tous ses culs de bouteille au mur de l’infini.

24 juin 1870.

XVIII Ô sombre femme,

Ô sombre femme, un jour, n’ayant plus de royaume,
Spectre, tu paraîtras devant le grand fantôme;
Et lui, l’être idéal, le seul. être vivant,
Il te dira: -Qu’es-tu?

Tremblante, comme au vent
La branche morte, hélas, tu diras: -J’étais reine.

— Étais-tu femme?

— Ô Dieu, ma jeunesse sereine
Fut belle et douce aux bras d’un mari triomphant;
J’eus la puissance avec le bonheur; tout enfant,
Je portais un grand sceptre antique et noir de rouille.

— Le sceptre importe peu. Que faisait ta quenouille
Pendant que tout un peuple’à tes pieds se courbait?
Réponds. Qu’as-tu filé?

— La corde du gibet.

24 novembre 1867.

Hier ont été pendus à Manchester les trois fenians Larkin, Alton et Gould.

XIX LA QUESTION SOCIALE

Non, non, non. Ce n’est point par la ruse, vous dis-je,
Que vous aurez raison du gouffre et du prodige;
Les ouragans ne sont en rien déconcertés
Par nos expédients et nos habiletés;
Non, je ne pense pas que l’aquilon s’apaise
Par égard pour Blondin flottant dans son trapèze,
Ni qu’un homme d’état fasse peur à l’éclair.
A force de danser sur une corde en l’air;

Le tonnerre n’est pas un chien hargneux qui boite
Et que nos coups de fouet font rentrer dans-sa boîte.
Jésus-Christ, tel qu’il est, dans saint-Luc et saint-Marc,
Voyait la politique autrement que Bismarck
Et voyait la justice autrement que Delangle;
A l’homme qu’on assomme, à l’homme qu’on étrangle,
Il prodiguait les soins du bon samaritain;
Si des vaincus tâchaient d’échapper au destin,
Son temple offrait l’asile à leur fuite tragique;
Si bien qu’on l’aurait, certe, expulsé de Belgique.

Ô mer, à ton niveau fatal tu monteras.
Il n’est pas d’empereurs et pas de magistrats,
II n’est pas de trident, gouffre, il n’est pas de conque,
Qui puissent à ton flot faire un effet quelconque;
L’abîme est la demeure orageuse de Dieu;
On ne calmera pas cet effrayant milieu
Quand même on enverrait des nymphes ingénues
Rire, et jusqu’au nombril s’y montrer toutes nues;
Ce profond océan, le genre humain, connaît
L’instant où le jour meurt, l’heure où l’étoile naît;
Il a sa loi, le flux et le reflux, l’espace,
Il voit le fond de l’ombre où Léviathan passe;
Il croît sur une plage et. sur l’autre il décroît;
Son équateur bouillonne et ses pôles ont froid;

Mais il n’écoute pas monsieur Rouher; il reste
Le vaste flot, tantôt joyeux, tantôt funeste, Âpre, énorme, impossible à dompter, y mît-on Bonaparte en Neptune et Devienne en Triton.

Peuple, en ton chaos, noir parfois d’écume immonde,
Le douteur ne voit rien, le penseur trouve un monde.
Tu montes, tu descends, tu remontes; tu n’as
Ni portes, ni verrous, ni clefs, ni cadenas;
Tu vas dans l’infini, liberté formidable!
Dieu te fait navigable et te laisse insondable;
Le sceptique te jette en vain son fil à plomb;
Mer fermée à Pyrrhon, tu t’ouvres à Colomb!

Vianden, 19 juin 1871.

XX Crois-tu donc qu’on sera César sans l’expier

Crois-tu donc qu’on sera César sans l’expier?
Qui donc t’a dit qu’on puisse être, sans récompense,
Epictète qui saigne en même temps qu’il pense?

Rêves-tu que toujours les uns seront en haut,
Rois que le trône fait exempts de l’échafaud,
Prêtres grands par le mal, soldats forts par le crime,
Et les autres en bas, subissant tout l’abîme?
Vois-tu le ciel pencher et crouler quelque part?
Tout a son contrepoids. Comptes-tu, par hasard,
Sans la grande équité qui se révèle et vibre
Et luit de tous côtés dans l’immense équilibre?
Dis, crois-tu que les uns seront mal, d’autres bien,
Que les uns auront tout, les autres n’ayant rien,
Ceux-ci sans pain, ceux-là couvrant de mets leurs tables,
Et qu’il ne viendra point des reflux redoutables?
Attends le dénoûment. La fin mettra le sceau.
Compte sur les retours. Crois-tu que le pourceau,
Formidable mangeur de toute pourriture,
De vos vomissements fera sa nourriture,
Hélas! et souffrira ce tourment sous le ciel
D’ouvrir la bouche au fond de l’égout’éternel,
Et d’être l’être infect souillé par l’être horrible;
Et qu’il ne viendra pas un jour, un jour terrible,
Où le monstre, penché sur tous, resplendissant
De la sombre lueur du monde finissant,
Éclaboussant quiconque a vécu dans l’ordure,
Ceux dont le coeur fut noir, ceux dont l’âme fut dure,
Les prêtres sur l’autel, les rois sous leur cimier,
Dans un hoquet vengeur leur rendra leur fumier!

XXI Jeunes hommes

Jeunes hommes éclos sous l’empire rapace,
Frais, roses et glacés, vous dites quand je passe:
«-Ah çà! qu’est-ce que c’est que cet homme? il est fou.
Les vieux ont pour devoir d’être vieux. Un hibou N’a pas le droit d’aimer le soleil. A son âge,
Il devrait de l’hiver faire le personnage,
Et ne point se répandre en élans-insensés.

Quoi donc! il dit Encor! quand, nous disons Assez!
Un falot nous suffit; il lui faut l’aube immense.
Il va, criant: Progrès! Fraternité! Clémence!
Enfantillage. Il est à ce point puéril
D’accepter un devoir qui contient un péril.
Il veut la liberté quand il a la vieillesse;
Qu’en fera-t-il? Aïeul, quitte ce qui te laisse,
Quand auras-tu fini d’avoir vingt ans,vieillard?
Il veut le plein midi, nous aimons le brouillard;

Au sac d’or qui nous charme, il préfère une idée.
Quand l’homme est vieux, il sied que l’âme soit ridée.
Il veut des droits pour nous qui voulons des écus.
Il pense qu’on a tort d’écraser les vaincus;
Il ne voit pas qu’Octave est couvert par Auguste;
Il en est à ne pas comprendre qu’il est juste
De faire arquebuser par monsieur Galliffet
Les gens dont on a peur, quand même ils n’ont rien fait;
Qu’il faut de bons bourreaux dans la guerre civile;
Et qu’on ne doit pas plus plaindre un peuple, une ville,
Pour quelques va-nu-pieds qu’on a pris, mis sous clé,
Ou tués,qu’on ne plaint un champ qu’on a sarclé.
Cet homme est la démence et nous sommes les sages.
Ah! comme c’était bon, les antiques usages!
Quand verra-t-on les fous, les brouillons, les bavards,
Pendre aux arbres gaîment le long des boulevards?

Quoi! nés d’hier, c’est nous dont la raison éduque
Cette caboche dure, ingénue et caduque!
Il est plein de chimère et plein de vision.
Comme le rossignol et comme l’alcyon,
Il chante dans la nuit et court à la tempête.
Cetté vieille âme semble au combat toujours prête;
Il recommencerait l’exil, s’il le fallait;
II est stupide. Çà, bonhomme, apprends qu’il est
Deux enfances, et sache, Argan; qu’on y retombe;
L’une est près du berceau, l’autre est près de la tombe.
Les pierres, les sifilets, voilà ce qu’on te doit.
Ce n’est pas sans raison qu’on te montre du doigt,
Qu’un bébé fait ta joie, et que ta tête blanche,
Comme vers tes pareils, vers les enfants se penche.
Trop de jeunesse est grave à ton âge; il est bon
De n’être point marmot alors qu’on est barbon;
Chérubin dans la peau de Géronte fait rire.
Nous te le répétons, il faut savoir proscrire,
Frapper, amputer; vaincre, et le bien sort des maux.
Rêveur, laissons un peu de côté les grands mots,
Ne déclamons pas. Vois le fond réel des choses.
Nous acceptons les faits sans en chercher les causes,
Disons la vérité crûment; l’homme est complet
Lorsqu’il est le plus fort; on est riche, on s’y plaît;
Est-ce que ce n’est pas tout simple? On a des rentes,
Elles ne nous sont pas du tout indifférentes;
Plus de champagne à boire et de truffe à manger,
Nous l’avouons tout net, c’est poùr nous un danger;
Donc nous nous défendons, c’est juste. Diogène,
Rageant de voir dîner Trimalcion, le gêne.
La politique est l’art utile d’émonder.
Supprimer, c’est créer; châtrer, c’est féconder.
Quand la sève au printemps déborde et surabonde,
Une serpe a raison de cette vagabonde;
Couper le rameau fou qui fait tort au voisin,
Est sage; un jardinier est-il un assassin?
L’arbre étant surchargé d’un feuillage inutile

Et farouche, on le sauve alors qu’on le mutile;
Qui donc est de trop? nous, gens d’esprit, qui brillons?
Non! mais. les malvenus, les grabats, les haillons,
Les misères, les gueux, ceux que tu recommandes,
Pleutre, et les meurt-de-faim sont les branches gourmandes.
Qu’on les retranche. On a Cayenne pour cela.
Toujours un. peu de sang sur l’ordre ruissela;
Ce n’est pas. notre faute, et sot qui s’apitoie.
Un ouragan balaye, un carnage nettoie.
L’homme d’état réel prend son temps; celui-là,
Adroit, sait être Monck, et, fort, être Sylla.
Quoi donc! ton âge ignore et le nôtre t’enseigne!
Le peuple est un fiévreux qu’il faut:parfois qu’on saigne;
L’homme est habile et grand parmi les souverains
Qui lui lace un gilet de force sur les reins.
Le peuple est ton pégase, il est notre bourrique.
Sans doute il faut savoir user de rhétorique,
Jurer qu’on est du siècle, et qu’on respectera
La liberté, les droits de l’homme, et cætera;
Cela sonne bien; mais toute âme un peu maligne
Finit par s’appuyer sur la troupe de ligne;
On couronne des plans sûrs,-et dans l’ombre prêts,
Par un massacre heureux qu’on fait bénir après.
Le scrupule commence où finit la victoire;
Tels sont les temps, tels sont les coeurs, telle est l’histoire.
N’es-tu donc pas honteux. qu’on t’appelle innocent?
Nous estimons, retiens ceci, le trois pour cent,
Un grand sabre, et Bismarck; le reste, on le méprise.”

Soit, imberbes docteurs, raillez ma barbe grise
Qui pourtant, ne devrait pas faire d’envieux
Oui, c’est vrai, je suis jeune, et vous, vous êtes vieux.

19 août.

XXII RENTRÉE DANS LA SOLITUDE

Ô ses amis d’hier, pas d’aujourd’hui, qu’il trouve
La prudence pour vous bonne, et qu’il vous approuve,
Cela doit vous suffire. Il dit: Reniez-moi,
Et sourit. Il poursuit sa route sans émoi;

Il faut bien que le coeur des hommes se révèle.
Croyez-vous que ce soit une chose nouvelle
Pour lui qui reste droit lorsqu’on est à genoux,
De tenir tête aux sots, aux furieux, à vous?
Quand Bonaparte était le maître de la terre,
Devant ce tout-puissant il fut le solitaire.
Braver, lutter, souffrir, ne sont-ce pas ses moeurs?
N’a-t-il pas l’habitude ancienne des clameurs?
N’a-t-il pas; du sommet d’un roc dans les nuées,
Vu vingt ans à ses pieds écumer les huées?
Vingt ans, couronne au front, l’empire n’a-t-il point
A cet homme pensif, d’en bas montré le poing?
Il avait l’oeil hagard des antiques prophètes.
Alors comme aujourd’hui c’était un fou. Donc, faites.
Adieu. Ce qu’il promit, il le tient maintenant,
Et c’est trop fort, il est fidèle, il est gênant.
Reniez-le. Tournez du côté de l’injure;
Tout doit finir. La vie est-elle une gageure?
L’entêtement d’un seul est un reproche à tous.
Le devoir des lions est de vieillir toutous;
Les vents époumonés ont dégonflé leur outre.
Pourquoi s’obstine-t-il, cet homme? Passons outre.
C’est bien. Il reste seul. L’ombre est devant ses pas,
Il connaît le désert et ne s’en émeut pas.
Il s’évanouira de nouveau dans l’abîme.
Soit. Mais, toutes les fois que pour commettre un crimè
Les ennemis publics se feront signe entre eux,
Peuple, toutes les fois qu’un homme désastreux
Dressera contre toi quelque embûche à sa guise,

Toutes les fôis qu’un bruit de couteau qu’on aiguise
Se mêlera sinistre au tumulte confus
Des noirs événements pareils aux bois touffus,
Chaque fôis qu’un vaisseau partira pour Cayenne,
Chaque fois que Paris, la ville citoyenne,
Sera livrée au sabre, et que la liberté
Sentira quelque pointe infâme à son côté,
Chaque fois que des pas tortueux et funèbres
Marcheront vers un but obscur dans les ténèbres,
Alors, dans la nuit lâche où s’éclipsent les lois,
On entendra gronder une lointaine voix,
On verra tout à coup un fantôme apparaître,
Et les hommes distraits reconnaîtront peut-être
Cette ombre à sa tristesse au fond du firmament,
Et cette conscience à son rugissement.

Vianden, juin 1871.

XXIII Ô princes insensés!

Ô princes insensés! quoi! ne tremblent-ils pas
D’ouvrir la porte eux-même aux colères d’en bas!
De donner quelque chose à briser à la foule!
D’ébranler, de leurs mains, la maison qui s’écroule!
Et d’appeler en aide à leurs iniquités,
D’appeler au secours de leurs lâchés traités,
De leur pouvoir caduc, de leurs lois menacées,
Le morne paysan plein d’obscures pensées!
Ils ont pu, sans pâlir, voir à leur folle voix,
Sortir des lieux profonds, des masures, des bois,
Pour se répandre en hâte au loin sur des décombres,
Le noir fourmillement des multitudes sombres!

Ô princes insensés! Dieu juste! enseigne-leur
Ta loi, ton but sacré, ta justice!

Ah! malheur!
Malheur dans les hameaux et malheur dans les villes,
Quand parmi nos débats et nos luttes civiles,
Parmi nos passions, nous voyons, ô terreur!
Apparaître soudain la faulx du laboureur,
Qui, terrible et fatale à tous tant que nous sommes,
Quitte les champs de blés et vient faucher les hommes!

Effroyable moisson! calamités! forfaits!
Faulx, d’où la gerbe d’or, l’abondance et la paix
Devaient sortir, hélas, et d’où sort le ravage!
Outil rustique et saint! arme horrible et sauvage!
O croissant, d’où jaillit un large et sombre éclair,
Faulx! symbole du temps, de la mort, de l’enfer,
De tout bras qui moissonne implacable servante,
Dieu! comment n’ont-ils pas frissonné d’épouvante,
Ces rois! quand ils ont vu soudain, au milieu d’eux,
Ton resplendissement formidable et hideux!

Comment n’ont-ils pas eu, le prince et le ministre,
Quelque éblouissement de ta clarté sinistre,
Et n’ont-ils pas dans l’ombre entrevu ton chemin:
Les seigneurs aujourd’hui, les couronnes demain!

XXIV LE POËTE PREND LA PAROLE

J’ai pour muse, en ce monde où souffle un vent terrible
Sur l’homme et le destin, sur la graine et le crible,

Et sur les insensés livrés aux furieux,
Une sombre déesse au regard sérieux
Qui, lueur traversant l’ombre visionnaire,
Rôde dans la nuée, et, comme le’tonnerre,
Sent on ne sait quel noir besoin de châtier.
Car elle est juste. Eh quoi! voici le bénitier:
La bénédiction monstrueuse y surnage;
Voici le vrai, le faux, changeant de personnage,
Le mal joyeux; voici les pires qui sont rois,
Les démons sur le trône et les dieux sur la croix,
Voici le Te Deum valet de la bataille;
Voici le meurtre absous s’il est de haute taille
Et devenant vertu par son énormité;
Voici l’épouvantable et double nudité
Grelottant sous le chaume ou riant dans l’orgie;
Voici la plaie au flanc de la terre élargie,
L’exil, le deuil, les pleurs, les héros, les bouchers,
Et sur les paradis des reflets de bûchers;
Voici la sacristie et voilà la mosquée;
Voilà dans la forêt la vérité traquée
Que mordent.tous ces chiens hurlants, les appétits;
Voici’tout le fardeau du mal sur les petits,
Voici partout l’atroce engendré par l’immonde,
Et vous vous étonnez qu’en haut une voix gronde,
Et que parfois dans l’ombre on voie au fond des cieux
Un pâle éclair sortir d’un vers mystérieux!

26 août 1874.

XXV GRANDES OREILLES

C’est un bel attribut, la longueur de l’oreille.
L’oreille longue, au-fond de l’ombre, oscille, veille,
Songe, se couche à plat, se dresse tout debout,
Entend mal, comprend peu, s’épouvante, a du goût,
Frémit au moindre souffle agitant les ramées,
Se plaît dans les salons aux choses mal rimées,
S’émeut pour les tyrans sitôt qu’il en tombe un,
Fuit le poète, craint l’esprit, hait le tribun.
Ayez cette beauté, messieurs. La grande oreille
Avec le crâne altier et petit s’appareille;
En être orné, c’est presque avoir diplôme; on est
On a l’autorité de l’ignorance énorme;
On dit: -Shakspeare est creux, Dante n’a que la forme;
La Révolution est un phare trompeur
Qui mène au gouffre; il est utile d’avoir peur.
De l’effroi qu’on n’a plus on fait de la colère;
Pour glorifier l’ordre, on mêle à de l’eau claire
Des phrases qui du sang ont la vague saveur;
Dès que le progrès marche, on réclame un sauveur;
On vénère Haynau, Boileau, l’état, l’église,
Et la férule; et c’est ainsi qu’on réalise
Pour les Suins, les Dupins, les Cousins, les Parieux,
Les Nisards, l’idéal d’un homme sérieux,
Et qu’on a l’honneur d’être un bourgeois authentique,
Ane en littérature et lièvre en politique.

24 mai 1872.

XXVI À de certains moments,

À de certains moments, l’homme juste est risible.
Tous les archers moqueurs prennent l’honneur pour cible;
Les choses et les mots changent de sens; on est
Barbès, Garibaldi, Baudin, lisez: benêt;
Caton est le Sosie auguste de Jocrisse;
Prudence et dignité se nomment avarice;
Tout est défiguré, calomnié, noirci;
Un front de vierge n’est qu’un masque réussi.
Quoi! vous vous dites pur, vous me croyez donc bête.
Quel est votre motif secret pour être honnête?
Le bien suspect confine au mal; pas de vertu
Qui ne vienne d’un vice immonde qu’on ait eu;
Oh! s’il vivait, celui qu’on mena chez Pilate”
Sanglant, coiffé d’épine et vêtu d’écarlate,
Comme on reprocherait, en glosànt là-dessus,
La Madeleine au Christ et-saint-Jean à Jésus!
Comme on l’appellerait sacrilège, profane,
Fourbe! comme on rirait de ce dieu sur un âne!
Car on a tant d’esprit qu’on est inepte; on dit:
Monk est un paladin, Bayard est un bandit.
Un contresens hideux fausse les âmes viles.
O grandeurs des vieux temps, laissez-nous donc tranquilles!
La déroute, l’orgie, et la peur, sont nos soeurs;
Ceux qu’on nomme héros, nous les nommons poseurs;
Les invincibles sont suivis des incurables.
On entend un jongleur dire, -ô temps misérables! -
Que l’honneur est néant, que la gloire est zéro,

Et qu’il hait le martyr autant que le bourreau.
Quoi! Régulus! d’Assas! quoi! des vertus si hautes,
De tels dévoûments, c’est à se tenir les côtes!

Écoutez-les parler: Je dis, et je m’en tords
De rire, que Socrate au fond a tous les torts;

Bien vivre, et de laquais emplir son vestibule,
Cela vaut mieux que d’être Horace ou Thrasybule;
Je préfère, en dépit de Dante le rimeur,
Trimalcion qui soupe à Thraséas qui meurt;
Je contemple Aristide avec insouciance;
Je sens mon estomac plus que ma conscience;
Je ne tiens pas le moins du monde à rayonner,
Et plus qu’un grand exploit j’estime un bon dîner.
Ayons donc le bon sens d’être ce que nous sommes,
Des nains; délivrons-nous du fardeau des grands hommes.
A bas tous ces gens-là! l’orgueil les étouffait;
Votre Léonidas veut faire de l’effet;
Qu’est-ce que Winkelried? un crétin ineffable.
Quant à Guillaume Tell, messieurs, c’est une fable.
Le lion qui mangea Callisthène a bien fait.
Hoche, Marceau, Kléber? J’aime autant Galliffet.
Vivent ceux qui toujours plièrent et fléchirent! -

Et des sages, sortis de Lilliput, déchirent
Toute la vieille histoire où ces grands noms ont lui.
On se sent insulté par la gloire d’autrui.
On excuse Anitus et l’on comprend Zoïle.
Le vrai, le faux, cela se joue à croix ou pile.
On ébauche en l’honneur du tigre un vague chant;
Est-on sûr que Néron, après tout, fût méchant?
L’oiseau de basse-cour fête l’oiseau de proie.
On est abominable et stupide avec joie;
Décroître plaît; c’est. doux et bon d’être petit;
La multitude, ayant pour amour l’appétit,
Craint la contagion des âmes magnanimes;
Duperie et devoir deviennent synonymes;
L’infamie est utile et la probité nuit
Et c’est ainsi qu’on entre en raillant dans la nuit,
O douleur! et qu’on voit s’effacer au solstice
Tous ces astres, le droit, l’idéal, la justice,
C’est ainsi que notre âme abdique, c’est ainsi
Qu’un peuple est lentement par la honte saisi,

C’est ainsi qu’on est monstre après qu’on fut archange,
Que la Rome d’Émile et de Gracchus se change
En la Rome d’Ignace, et que le grand Paris
Tombe de plus que Sparte à moins que Sybaris.
16 août 1873. Auteuil. V. M.

XXVII À VOUS TOUS

Je ne vous cache pas que je pense à nos pères.
Durs au tigre,, ils mettaient le pied sur les vipères;
Ils affrontaient la griffe, ils bravaient les venins,
Et ne craignaient pas plus les géants que les nains.
Ils étaient confiants, ils faisaient de grands songes,
Et par toute l’Europe, au-dessus des mensonges,
Des crimes, des erreurs, ils faisaient sans repos
Flotter ces fiers chiffons qu’on appelle drapeaux;
Quand les rois accouraient vers nous, gueules ouvertes,
Quand, fauve, horrible, éparse en nos campagnes vertes,
Quelque armée arrivait, ils étaient là; souvent
Ils avaient dissipé comme un nuage au vent
Cette armée innombrable et terrible naguère,
Que les fleurs qu’ils mettaient à leur chapeau de guerre
N’avaient pas encore eu le temps de se faner.
Je sais que l’homme fort ne doit pas s’étonner,
Et qu’il est de bon goût d’envoyer des bouffées
De cigare à l’histoire, aux tombeaux, aux trophées;
Boire son vin vaut mieux que répandre son sang;
Je sais que le dédain sied aux coeurs d’à présent;
Et que des gens d’esprit et de bon sens qu’enivre
Ce but sublime, rire et digérer, bien vivre,
Sont grands, certe, et n’ont point le travers puéril
De vénérer ces vieux qui cherchaient le péril;
Les filles ont des droits, certes, et, je l’avoue,
C’est doux de contempler sur leur gorge et leur joue
Les roses et les lys, et la poudre de riz.
Quel ténor aura-t-on cette année à Paris?
Est-ce de damas rose ou bien de satin mauve
Qu’il faut vêtir sa belle et tendre son alcôve?
Quand passe, éblouissante et faite pour aimer,
Une femme au. front pur et charmant, s’informer
Si cet ange est à vendre et combien on l’achète;
Prier chez Dupanloup et souper chez Vachette;

Croire et jouir hanter des membres du Sénat;
Attendre dos au feu, le sourire incarnat
De l’aurore, attablés à des brelans féroces,
Pendant que nos cochers dorment sur nos carrosses;
Dormir, bâiller, railler, ignorer, être ainsi,
C’est beau, je le répète; et je comprends aussi
Qu’on évite un aïeul comme on fuit un reproche,
Et qu’on soit élégant, et qu’on n’ait dans sa poche,
Tandis que d’autres vont pieds nus sur le pavé,
Que de l’or dans de l’eau de Cologne lavé.
Je ne suis point ingrat pour l’air que je respire
Jusqu’à n’y pas sentir le parfum de l’empire,
Et le Napoléon troisième a fait nos coeurs
Tels qu’ils sont, gracieux, point fanfarons, moqueurs;
Toujours les Sybaris ont bafoué les Romes;
C’est bien. Màis il n’en est pas moins vrai que ces hommes
D’autrefois, peu frottés des savons de Guerlain, Entrèrent dans Moscou, dans Vienne et dans Berlin;
Qu’ils châtiaient les rois de leurs façons brutales,
Qù’ils étaient familiers avec les capitales;
Qu’ils se plaisaient parfois à d’étranges assauts,
Que leur cavalerie attaquait des vaisseaux,
Les prenait, et donnait aux flottes l’abordage;
Que chacun d’eux, vieillard, enfant, se sentait d’âge
Et d’humeur à servir la France, et qu’à Valmy,
A Jemmape, à Fleurus, ils chassaient l’ennemi
A coups de hache, à coups de sabre, à coups de lance;
Qu’on e’n voyait plus d’un sortir de l’ambulance,
Et, comme à l’Océan retourne l’alcyon,
Revenir au combat, sans faire attention
A la blessure encore ouverte qui suppure;
Qu’ils mangeaient du pain sec et buvaient de l’eau pure,
Qu’ils allaient, qu’ils marchaient, qu’ils ne trouvaient jamais
Les gouffres trop profonds ni trop hauts les sommets;
Qu’ils étaient fraternels aux races orphelines;
Et qu’ils disaient: -Que sont les Alpes? des collines.
Porter l’artillerie à bras sur les hauteurs

Est simple, et le passage est aisé, ces menteurs!
Il n’en est pas moins vrai que ces hommes-là rirent
De tout ce qui nous fait trembler, et qu’ils défirent
Ce que vingt siècles noirs et tristes avaient fait;
Qu’ils battirent Brunswick, Cobourg, Mélas, Clairfait;
Qu’ils dônnaient en spectacle à notre enfance blonde
L’évanouissement superbe du vieux monde,
Que la justice était à l’aise au milieu d’eux,
Qu’ils braquaient le canon sur le passé hideux
Qu’ils n’avaient point de sacs d’argent, ni d’or en piles,
Mais qu’ils faisaient l’Argonne égale aux Thermopyles,
Qù’ils enjambaient le Rhin dont nous nous éloignons,
Et que ce n’étaient pas de petits compagnons.
Sur l’impériale de l’omnibus.

7 septembre 1873.

Annexes

I Pièces de l’édition originale (1893) supprimées en 1897.
— II, 15 (« Venez nous voir dans l’asile...”): voir Les Années funestes, XXVIII.

— II, 28: pièce retirée de l’édition originale sans qu’on ait pris le temps de modifier la numérotation des poèmes ni la pagination. Le titre (« Horreur divine”) figure encore à la table des éditions ordinaires; il a été supprimé dans les exemplaires sur Chine (voir l’exemplaire de Paul Meurice à la Maison de Victor Hugo). Peut-être s’agit-il d’« Horreur sacrée” (Les Quatre Vents de l’Esprit, III, 55)?

— III, 8 (Quatre heures du matin): publié dans Les Quatre Vents de l’Esprit (III, 35).

— IV, 20 (Les Guides): publié dans L’Année terrible (« Mars. I”).

— V, 8 (« Le sommet est désert, noir, farouche, inclément...”): publié dans Les Quatre Vents de l’Esprit (III, 45).

— La Corde d’airain, I (Ecrit sur un exemplaire des « Châtiments”): voir Les Années funestes, VI.

II Dossier des «Chansons des rues et des bois»

Cécile Daubray a d’autre part écarté de son édition de Toute la lyre (1935) plusieurs poèmes de l’édition originale, rendus par elle au « Reliquat” des Chansons des rues et des bois (Imprimerie nationale, 1933). Nous les donnons ici dans le texte de l’édition originale:

DROIT DE REPRENDRE HALEINE

Certe, ô solitude,
Je suis l’homme rude,
Le songeur viril;
Mais puis-je répondre
De ce que fait fondre
Un rayon d’avril?

L’âme, ô lois obscures,
A des aventures.
Je vis absorbé,
Pensée irritée,
Comme Prométhée,
Comme Niobé;

L’aspect de l’abîme,
La haine du crime,
L’horreur, le dédain,
Mettent dans ma bouche
Un hymne farouche...
Mais parfois, soudain,

Une strophe passe
Emplissant l’espace
D’ébats ingénus,
Et m’arrive, ailée,
Fraîche dételée
Du char de Vénus.
L’exil sombre assiste
A mon hymne triste;
Et je suis amer
Dans ma rêverie,
Comme la patrie
Et comme la mer.

Le sceptre et le glaive
Règnent, je me lève
Pour les réprimer;
Mais suis-je coupable
D’être aussi capable
De rire et d’aimer?

Le barde est prophète;
Mais son âme est faite
De plusieurs clartés.
Dieu n’est Dieu, lui-même,
Que parce qu’il sème
De tous les côtés.

Est-ce donc ma faute ,
Si le soleil m’ôte
Mon deuil par instants?
Est-ce par faiblesse
Que l’âpre hiver. laisse
Entrer le printemps?

Je n’y puis que faire;
Némésis préfère
Certes ma fureur;
Je charme Erinnye
Quand mon vers manie
Un blême empereur;

Je plais à Tacite
Quand je ressuscite,
Emplissant ma voix
De chants populaires,
Toutes les colères
Contre tous les rois;

Sous les nuits tombantes
Les vieux corybantes

Mettaient en courroux
Au bruit de leur cistre
Dans le soir sinistre
Les grands aigles roûx;

Et je leur ressemble
Quand ma strophe tremble,
Sonne, parle aux cieux,
Punit, venge, insulte,
Et semble un tumulte
De cris furieux.

Mais l’esprit s’apaise.
Châtier lui pèse.
O forêts! ciel pur!
Ombre des grands chênès!
Au delà des haines,
Il cherche l’azur.

Comme l’hydre énorme,
Avant qu’elle dorme,
Veut sur l’onde errer,
Les penseurs funèbres
Hors de leurs ténèbres
Viennent respirer.

25 avril.

(II, 20)

VISIONS DE LYCÉEN

Quand on sort de rhétorique,
Du livre et de l’encrier,
On a l’âme chimérique
Et le coeur aventurier.

On a pour nid des murs bistres,
Des galetas fabuleux,
Que les rats ont faits sinistres,
Que l’illusion fait bleus.

On n’est pas très difficile
Aux divinités qu’on voit;
Et les nymphes de Sicile
S’accoudent au bord du toit.

Puisqu’il faut que j’en convienne,
C’est vrai, souvent nous prenons
Dans le passage Vivienne
Des Margots pour des Junons.

Toute la mythologie
Vient becqueter nos taudis;-
Nous y faisons une orgie,
De ciels et de paradis.

Je rêve. Oui, la vie est sombre
Et charmante; et des clins d’yeux
M’arrivent au fond de l’ombre
Qui m’ont mis au rang des dieux.

L’extase au cinquième habite,
L’amour fait multiplier
Les rêves du cénobite
Par le front de l’écolier.

Je suis naïf au point d’être
Par moments persuadé
Que Vénus, à sa fenêtre,
M’a fait signe à Saint-Mandé.

Mon oeil sous ma boîte osseuse
Est à de tels songes prêt
Qu’à travers ma blanchisseuse
Phyllodoce m’apparaît.

Une chemisière aimante
Vint hier dans mon grenier;
Elle portait, la charmante,
Des rayons dans son panier;

Ravi de cette descente,
Je crus que je voyais choir
Hébé, toute frémissante
D’aurore, sur mon perchoir.

Comment peindre l’air de fête
De deux yeux presque innocents?
Fraîche, elle avait sur la tête
Cette lumière, seize ans.

Et l’autre jour, plein d’Homère,
Je songeais je ne sais où
Je marchais dans la chimère,
Tout au bord, sans garde-fou;

Une muse au front suprême
Passa dans mon horizon.
— C’est Calliope elle-même!
Criai-je. C’était Suzon:

Je me risquai, dans l’échoppe

Dont un coffre est le sofa,
A chiffonner Calliope;
Calliope me griffa.

La modiste est la sirène.
J’attire Anne à mon foyer,
Lui donnant des noms de reine
Afin de la tutoyer.

Ainsi je vis, l’oeil en flammes,
Dans mes bouquins, loin du bruit, étoilant toutes les femmes,
Confusément, dans la nuit.

Je les fais déesses toutes,
Et sur leurs chiffons je mets
La lueur des sombres voûtes
Ou l’éclair des bleus sommets.

Je vois parfois la tunique
S’ébaucher sous le torchon
Et la Diane ionique
Sous le madras de Fanchon.

Je m’éblouis, solitaire;
Car il faut que nous usions
L’une après l’autre, sur terre,
Toutes les illusions.

Je guette et je me hasarde
A sonder d’un oeil ardent L’empyrée et la mansarde;
Et je contemple; et, pendant

Que rôde sur ma gouttière
Quelque gros chat moustachu,
Cypris met sa jarretière,

Pallas ôte son fichu.

(VI, 8)
La grecque et la parisienne
Font, parmi nos couples railleurs,
Comme à travers l’idylle ancienne,
La même course dans les fleurs.

Toutes deux sont l’amour, la joie,
Le coup d’oeil tendre ou hasardeux,
Le caprice, et pour qu’on les voie
Elles se cachent toutes deux.

Toutes deux montrant leurs épaules Pour dire oui prononcent non,
Et Galatée est sous les saules
Comme sous l’éventail Ninon.

Deux soeurs! à qui la préférence?
Pan hésite au fond des forêts
Entre l’Arcadie et la France,
Entre Théocrite et Segrais.

Romainville vaut le Taygète;
Et, ramassant sur tous ses pas
Les bouquets que le temps lui jette,
L’églogue ne donnerait pas,

Dans sa clairière, où la noisette
Ai sa place à côté des lys,
Li bas bien tiré de Frisette
Pour les pieds nus d’Amaryllis.

(VI12)

LA FIGLIOLA

Moins de vingt ans et plus de seize,
Voilà son âge; et maintenant
Dites tout bas son nom: Thérèse,
Et songez au ciel rayonnant.

Quel destin traversera-t-elle?
Quelle ivresse? quelle douleur?
Elle n’en sait rien; cette belle
Rit, et se coiffe d’une fleur.

Ses bras sont blancs; elle est châtaine;
Elle a de petits pieds joyeux,
Et la clarté d’une fontaine
Dans son regard mystérieux.

C’est le commencement d’une âme,
Un rien où tout saura tenir,
Coeur en projet, plan d’une femme,
Scénario d’un avenir.

Elle ignore; elle est gaie et franche;
Le dieu Hasard fut son parrain.
Elle s’évade le dimanche
Au bras d’un garnement serein.

Il est charmant, elle est bien faite,
Et Pantin voit, sans garde-fou,
Flâner cette Vénus grisette
Avec cet Apollon voyou.

Elle s’ébat comme les cygnes;
Et sa chevelure et sa voix
Et son sourire seraient dignes
De la fauve grandeur des bois.

Regardez-la, quand elle passe;
On dirait qu’elle aime Amadis
A la voir jeter dans l’espace -
Ses yeux célestes et hardis.

Ces blanches filles des mansardes
Aux tartans grossiers, âux traits fins,
Ont la liberte des poissardes
Et la grâce des séraphins.

Elles chantent des chants étranges
Mêlés de misère et -de jour,
Et leur indigence a pour franges
Toutes les poupres de l’amour.

(VI, 17)

Je suis naïf, toi cruelle;
Et j’ai la simplicité
De brûler au feu mon aile
Et mon âme à ta beauté.

Ta lumière m’est rebelle
Et je m’en sens dévorer;
Mais la chose sombre et belle
Et dont tu devrais pleurer,

C’est que, toute mutilée,
Voletant dans le tombeau,
La pauvre mouche brûlée
Chante un hymne au noir flambeau.

(VI, 20)

L’IDYLLE DE FLORIANE

I

La comtesse Floriane
S’éveilla comme les bois
Chantaient la vague diane
Des oiseaux, à demi-voix.

Quand elle fut habillée,
Comme pour Giulietta
Toute la sombre feuillée
Amoureuse palpita.

Et quand, blanche silhouette,
Sur le balcon du préau,
Elle apparut, l’alouette
Chercha des yeux Roméo.

J’accourus à tire d’ailes,
Car c’est mon bonheur de voir
Le matin lever les belles
Et les étoiles le soir.

II

À l’heure où, chassant le rêve,
L’aube ouvre les firmaments,
C’est le moment, filles d’Ève,
D’aller voir des diamants;
Toute une bijouterie
Brille à terre au jour serein;
L’herbe est une pierrerie,
Et l’ortie est un écrin;
Des rubis dans les nymphées,
Des perles dans les halliers;

Et l’on dirait que les fées
Ont égrené leurs colliers.

Et nous nous mîmes à faire
Un bouquet dans l’oasis;
Et la fleur qu’elle préfère
Est celle que je choisis.

III

Gaie, elle sautait dans l’herbe
Comme la belle Euryant,
Et, montrant le ciel superbe,
Soupirait en souriant.

— J’aimerais mieux, disait-elle,
Courir dans ce beau champ bleu,
Cueillant l’étoile immortelle,
Quitte à me brûler un peu;

Mais, vois, c’est inaccessible.
(Car elle me tutoyait.)
Puisque l’astre est impossible,
Contentons-nous de l’oeillet.

IV

Aucune délicatesse
N’est plus riante ici-bas
Que celle d’une comtesse
Mouillant dans l’herbe ses bas.

Au gré du vent qui la mène,
Dans les fleurs, dans le gazon,
La beauté de Célimène
Prend les grâces de Suzon.

Elle montrait aux pervenches,
Aux verveines, sous ses pas,
Ses deux belles jambes blanches,
Qu’elle ne me cachait pas.

On se tromperait de croire
Que les bois n’ont pas des yeux
Et, dans leur prunelle noire,
Plus d’un rayon très joyeux.

Souvent tout un bois s’occupe
A voir deux pieds nus au bain,
Ou ce frisson d’une jupe
Qui fait trembler Chérubin.

Les bleuets la trouvaient belle;
L’air vibrait; il est certain
Qu’on était fort épris d’elle
Dans le trèfle et dans le thym.

Quand ses légères bottines
Enjambaient le pré charmant,
Ce tas de fleurs libertines
Levait la tête gaîment.

Et je disais: Prenez garde,
Le muguet est indécent.
Et le liseron regarde
Sous votre robe en passant.
Ses pieds fuyaient... Quel délire
D’errer dans les bois chantants!
Oh! le frais et divin rire
Plein d’aurore et de printemps!

Une volupté suprême
Tombait des cieux entr’ouverts.
Je suivais ces pieds que j’aime;

Et, dans les quinconces verts,

Dans les vives cressonnières,
Moqueurs, ils fuyaient toujours;
Et ce sont là les manières
De la saison des amours.

J’admire, ô jour qui m’enivres,
Ô neuf soeurs, ô double mdnt!
Les savants qui font des livres
D’être les taupes qu’ils sont,

De fermer leur regard triste
A ce que nous contemplons,
Et, quand ils dressent la liste
Des oiseaux, des papillons,

Des mille choses ailées,
Moins près de nous que des cieux,
Qui volent dans les allées
Du grand parc mystérieux,

Dans les prés, sous les érables,
Au bord des eaux, clairs miroirs,
D’oublier, les misérables,
Ces petits brodequins noirs!

VI

Nous courions dans les ravines,
Le vent dans nos cheveux bruns,
Rançonnés par les épines,
Mais payés par les parfums.

Chaque fleur, chaque broussaille,
L’une après l’autre attirait
Son beau regard, où tressaille

La lueur de la forêt.

Elle secouait leurs gouttes;
Tendre, elle les respirait,
Et semblait savoir de toutes
La moitié de leur secret.

Un beau buisson plein de roses
Et tout frissonnant d'émoi
Se fit dire mille choses
Dont j'aurais voulu pour moi.

Ému, j'en perdais la tête.
Comment se rassasier
De cette adorable fête
D'une femme et d'un rosier!

Elle encourageait les branches,
Les fontaines, les étangs
Et les fleurs rouges ou, blanches,
A nous faire un beau printemps.

Comme elle était familière
Avec les bois d'ombre emplis!
— Pardieu, disait un vieux lierre,
Je l'ai vue autrefois lys!
VII

Quel bouquet nous composâmes!
Pour qu'il durât plus d'un jour,
Nous y mîmes de nos âmes;
La comtesse, tour à`toùr

M'offrant tout ce qui se cueille,
Jouait à me refuser
La rose ou le chèvrefeuille
Pour m'accorder le baiser.

Les ramiers et les mésanges
Nous enviaient. par moments;
Nous étions déjà des anges
Quoique pas encore amants.

Seulement, son coeur dans l'ombre
M'appelait vers son corset
Au fond de mon rêve sombre
Une alcôve frémissait.

Quoique plongés aux ivresses,
Quoique égarés et joyeux,
Quoique mêlant des caresses
Aux profonds souffles des cieux,

Nous avions ce bonheur calme
Qui fait que le séraphin
Trouve un peu, lourde sa palme,
Et voudrait être homme enfin.

Car là-haut même,. ô mystère,
Il faut, et je vous le dis,
Un peu de chair et de terre
Pour qu'un ciel soit paradis.

22 juin 1859.

(VI, 21)

À UN RAT

Ô rat de là-haut, tu grignottes
Dans le grenier, ton oasis,
Les Pontmartins et les Nonottes Moisis.

Tu vas, flairant de tes moustaches
Ces vieux volumes qu’ont ornés
De tant d’inexprimables taches
Les nez.

Rat, tu soupes et tu déjeunes
Avec des romans refroidis,
Des vers morts, et des quatrains jeunes
Jadis.

Ô rat, tu ronges et tu songes!
Tu mâches dans tôn galetas
Les vieux dogmes et les vieux soriges
En tas.

C’est pour toi qui gaîment les fêtes
Qu’écrivent les bons Patouillets;
C’est pour toi que les gens sont bêtes
Et laids.

Rat, c’est pour toi qui les dissèques
Que les sonnets et les sermons
Disent dans les bibliothèques:
Dormons!

Pour toi, croulent les noms postiches,
Tout à bien pourrir réussit,
La rime au bout des hémistiches
Rancit.

C’est pour toi qu’en ruine tombe
L’amas difforme des grimauds;
C’est pour toi que grouille la tombe
Des mots.

C’est pour toi, rat, dans ta mansarde,
Que Garasse se fait vieillot;
Et c’est pour toi que-se lézarde
Veuillot.

La postérité, peu sensible,
Traite ainsi l’oeuvre des pédants
La nuit dessus; toi, rat paisible, Dedans.

Le public incivil se sauve
Devant ces bouquins d’aujourd’hui
Où gît, comme au fond d’une alcôve,
L’ennui;

Toi, tu-n’as point de ces faiblesses.
On reconnaît, ô rat poli,
Au coup de dent que tu lui laisses
L’oubli.

C’est égal, je te plains; contemple
Là-bas, sous les cieux empourprés,
Le lapin dans l’immense temple
Des prés.

Il va, vient, boit l’encens, s’enivre
De rayons, de vie et d’azur,
Pendant que tu mords dans un livre
Trop mûr.

L’aurore est encore en chemise,

Que lui, debout, il se nourrit;
Sa nappe verte est toujours mise;
Il rit,

Il est le roi de la clairière;
Il contemple, point soucieux,
Tranquille, assis sur son derrière,
Les cieux.

Il fait toutes sortes de mines
A la prairie, à l'aube en feu,
Aux corolles, aux étamines,
A Dieu.

Télégraphe de l'herbe fraîche,
Ses deux pattes à chaque instant
Jettent au ciel cette dépêche:
Content!

En plein serpolet il patauge.
Vois, il est vorace et railleur.
Compare: il broute, lui, la sauge
En fleur,

L'anis, le parfum, la rosée,
Le trèfle, la menthe et le thym;
Toi, l'Ermite de la Chaussée D'Antin.

1859.

(VII, 6)

SOUS LES SAULES

LUI Farouche!

ELLE Moqueur!

LUI
Ta bouche!

ELLE
Ton coeur!

(VII, 10, 3)

III « Être aimé»

Manque également dans l’édition de Cécile Daubray un fragment de «comédie” (on y aurait vu un roi mal aimé retourner aux bas-fonds pour l’amour des gueux et des galériens; édition chronologique, t. XV-XVI/2, p. 294-299). Entre crochets droits, les passages supprimés dans l’édition originale

(1893): ÊTRE AIMÉ

Écoute-moi. Voici la chose nécessaire:
Etre aimé. Hors de là rien n’existe, entends-tu?
Etre aimé, c’est l’honneur, le devoir, la vertu,
C’est Dieu, c’est le démon, c’est tout. J’aime, et l’on m’aime.
Cela dit, tout est dit. Pour que je sois moi-même,
Fier, content, respirant l’air libre à pleins poumons,
Il faut que j’aie une ombre et qu’elle dise: Aimons!
Il faut que de mon âme une autre âme se double,
Il faut que, si je suis absent, quelqu’un se trouble,
Et, me cherchant des yeux, murmure: Où donc est-il?
Si personne ne dit cela, je sens l’exil,
L’anathème et l’hiver sur moi, je suis terrible,
Je suis maudit. Le grain que rejette le crible,
C’est l’homme sans foyer, sans but, épars au vent.
Ah! celui qui n’est pas aimé, n’est pas vivant.
Quoi, nul ne vous choisit! Quoi, rien ne vous préfère!
A quoi bon l’univers? l’âme qu’on a, qu’en faire?
Que faire d’un regard dont personne ne veut?
La vie attend l’amour, le fil cherche le noeud.
Flotter au hasard? Non! Le frisson vous pénètre;
L’avenir s’ouvre ainsi qu’une pâle fenêtre;
Où mettra-t-on sa vie et son rêve? On se croit Orphelin; l’azur semble ironique. On a froid;
Quoi! ne plaire à personne au monde! rien n’apaise
Cette honte sinistre; on languit, l’heure pèse,
Demain, qu’on sent venir triste, attriste aujourd’hui.

Où vivre? où fuir? On est seul dans l’immense ennui.
Une maîtresse, c’est quelqu’un dont on est maître;
Ayons cela. Soyons aimé, non par un être
Grand et puissant, déesse ou dieu. Ceci n’est pas
La question. Aimons! Cela suffit. Mes pas
Cessent d’être perdus si quelqu’un les regarde.
Ah! vil monde, passants vagues, foule hagarde,
Sombre table de jeu, caverne sans rayons!
Qu’est-ce que je viens faire à ce tripot, voyons?
J’y bâille. Si de moi personne ne s’occupe,
Le sort est un escroc, et je suis une dupe.
J’aspire à me brûler la cervelle. Ah! quel deuil!
Quoi! rien! pas un soupir pour vous, pas un coup d’oeil!
Que le fuseau des jours lentement se dévide!
Hélas! comme le coeur est lourd quand il est vide!
Comment porter ce poids énorme, le néant?
Toute l’ombre est un trou de ténèbres, béant;
Vous vous sentez tomber dans ce gouffre. Ah! quand Dante
Livre à l’affreuse bise implacable et grondante
Françoise échevelée, un baiser éternel
La console, et l’enfer alors devient le ciel.
Mais quoi! je vais, je viens, j’entre, je sors, je passe
Je meurs, sans faire rien remuer dans l’espace!
N’avoir pas un atome à soi dans l’infini!
Qu’est-ce donc que j’ai fait? De quoi suis-je puni?
Je ris, nul ne sourit; je souffre, nul ne pleure;
Cette chauve-souris de son aile m’effleure,
L’indifférence, blême habitante du soir.
Être aimé! sous ce ciel bleu -moins souvent que noir -
Je ne sais que cela qui vaille un peu la peine
De mêler son visage à la laideur humaine,
Et de vivre. Ah! pour ceux dont le coeur bat, pour ceux
Qui sentent un regard quelconque aller vers eux,
Pour ceux-là seulement, Dieu vit, et le jour brille!
Qu’on soit aimé d’un gueux, d’un voleur, d’une fille,
D’un forçat jaune et vert sur l’épaule imprimé,
Qu’on soit aimé d’un chien, pourvu qu’on soit aimé!

14 mars 1874. (VI,4)

DIEU

TABLE DES MATIERES

[I — Le Seuil du gouffre]
[L’Esprit humain]
[I. Une voix]
[II. Une autre voix]
[IV. Une autre voix]
[V. Une autre voix]
[VI. Une autre voix]
[VII. Une autre voix]
[X. Une autre voix]
[XI. Une autre voix]
[XII AUTRES VOIX]
[XIII. Une autre voix]
[II — L’Océan d’en haut]
[I]
[II]
[III]
[IV]
[VI]
[VII]
[VIII]
[IX]
[Fragments]
[III. Le Jour]

I — Le Seuil du gouffre

L’Esprit humain

Et je voyais au loin sur ma tête un point noir.
Comme on voit une mouche au plafond se mouvoir,
Ce point allait, venait; et l’ombre était sublime.

Et l’homme, quand il pense, étant ailé, l’abîme
M’attirant dans sa nuit toujours de plus en plus,
Comme une algue qu’entraîne un ténébreux reflux,
Vers ce point noir, planant dans la profondeur blême,
Je me sentais déjà m’envoler de moi-même
Quand je fus arrêté par quelqu’un qui me dit «Demeure.”
   En même temps une main s’étendit.
J’étais déjà très haut dans la nuée obscure.

Et je vis apparaître une étrange figure;
Un être tout semé de bouches, d’ailes, d’yeux;
Vivant, presque lugubre et presque radieux.
Vaste, il volait; plusieurs des ailes étaient chauves.
En s’agitant, les cils de ses prunelles fauves
Jetaient plus de rumeur qu’une troupe d’oiseaux
Et ses plumes faisaient un bruit de grandes eaux.
Cauchemar de la chair ou vision d’apôtre,
Selon qu’il se montrait d’une face ou de l’autre,

Il semblait une bête ou semblait un esprit.
Il paraissait, dans l’air où mon vol le surprit,
Faire de la lumière et faire des ténèbres.

Calme, il me regardait dans les brouillards funèbres.
Et je sentais en lui quelque chose d’humain.

Qu’es-tu donc, toi qui viens me barrer le chemin,
Être obscur, frissonnant au souffle de ces brumes?
Lui dis-je. Il répondit: — Je suis une des plumes

De la nuit, sombre oiseau de nue et de rayons,
Noir paon épanoui des constellations.

Je suis ce qui court, vole, erre, s'enfle, s'apaise;
Je suis en même temps ce qui retombe, pèse,
Saisit l'aile qui va, retient l'essor qui fuit,
Et descend; car le fond de mon être est la nuit.

— Ton nom? — dis-je.

Il reprit:
— Pour toi qui, loin des causes,
Vas flottant, et ne peux voir qu'un côté des choses,
Je suis l'Esprit Humain.
Mon nom est Légion,
Je suis, l'essaim des bruits et la contagion
Des mots vivants allant et venant d'âme en âme.
Je suis Souffle. Je suis cendre, fumée et flamme.
Tantôt l'instinct brutal, tantôt l'élan divin.
Je suis ce grand passant, vaste, invincible et vain,
Qu'on nomme vent; et j'ai l'étoile et l'étincelle
Dans ma parole, étant l'haleine universelle;
L'haleine et non la bouche; un zéphir me grandit
Et m'abat; et quand j'ai respiré, j'ai tout dit.
Je suis géant et nain, faux, vrai, sourd et sonore,
Populace dans l'ombre et peuple dans l'aurore;
Je dis moi, je dis nous; j'affirme, nous nions.
Je suis le flux des voix et des opinions,
Le fantôme de l'an, du mois, de la semaine,
Fait du groupe fuyant de la nuée humaine.
Homme, toujours en moi la contradiction
Tourne sa roue obscure et j'en suis l'Ixion.
Démos, c'est moi. C'est moi ce qui marche, attend, roule, Pleure et rit, nie et croit; je suis le démon Foule.
Je suis comme la trombe, ouragan et pilier.

En même temps je vis dans l'âtre familier.

Oui, j'arrache au tison la soudaine étincelle
Qui heurte un germe obscur que le crâne recèle,
Et qui, des fronts courbés perçant les épaisseurs,
Fait faire explosion à l'esprit des penseurs.
Je vis près d'eux, veilleur intime; je combine
Le vieux houblon de Flandre et la vigne sabine,
La franche joie attique et le rire gaulois;
L'antique insouciance avec ses douces lois,
Paix, liberté, gaîté, bon sens, est mon breuvage;
J'en grise Erasme et Sterne, et même mon sauvage,
Diderot; et j'en fais couler quelques filets
De la coupe d'Horace au broc de Rabelais.

Il poursuivit:

— Je crie à quiconque commence,
— Assez. — Finis. — Je suis le Médiocre immense.
Toutes les fois qu'on parle et qu'on dit: — Mitoyen,
Mode, médiateur, méridien, moyen,
Par chacun de ces mots on m'évoque, on m'adjure,
Et tantôt c'est louange, et tantôt c'est injure.

Je suis l'esprit Milieu; l'être neutre qui va
Bas sans trouver Iblis, haut sans voir Jéhovah;
Dans le nombre, je suis Multitude; dans l'être,
Borne. Je m'oppose, homme, à l'excès de connaître,
De chercher, de trouver, d'errer, d'aller au bout;
Je suis Tous, l'ennemi mystérieux de Tout.
Je suis la loi d'arrêt, d'enceinte, de ceinture
Et d'horizon, qui sort de toute la nature;
L'éther irrespirable et bleu sur la hauteur,
Dans le gouffre implacable et sourd, la pesanteur.
C'est moi qui dis: — Voici ta sphère. Attends. Arrête.
Tout être a sa frontière, homme ou pierre, ange ou bête,
Et doit, sans dilater sa forme d'aujourd'hui,
Subir le nœud des lois qui se croisent en lui.
Je me nomme Limite et je me nomme Centre.

Je garde tous les seuils de tous les mondes. Rentre.
Tout est par moi, saisi, pris, circonscrit, dompté.
Je me défie, ayant peur de l’extrémité,
De la folie un peu, beaucoup de la sagesse.
Je tiens l’enthousiasme et l’appétit en laisse;
Pour qu’il aille au réel sans s’écarter du bien,
J’attelle au genre humain ce lion et ce chien;
Et, comme je suis souffle et poids, nul ne m’évite,
Car tout, comme esprit, flotte, et, comme corps, gravite.

Et l’explication, je te l’ai dit, vivant,
C’est que je suis l’esprit matériel, le vent;
Et je suis la matière impalpable, la force.
Je contrains toute sève à rester sous l’écorce;
Et tout piège miroir par mon souffle est terni.
Contre l’enivrement du sinistre infini
Je garde les penseurs, ces pauvres mouches frêles.
Je tiens les pieds de ceux dont l’azur prend les ailes.
Je suis parfum, poison, bien, mal, silence, bruit.
Je suis en haut midi, je suis en bas minuit;
Je vais, je viens; je suis l’alternative sombre;
Je suis l’heure qui fait sortir en frappant l’ombre,
Douze apôtres le jour, la nuit douze césars.
Du beau donnant sa forme au grand, je fais les arts.
Dans les milieux humains, dans les brumes charnelles,
J’erre en voyant; je suis le troupeau des prunelles.
Je suis l’universel, je suis le partiel.
Je nais de la vapeur ainsi que l’eau du ciel,
Et j’éclos du rocher comme le saxifrage.
Je sors du sentier vert, du foyer, du naufrage,
Du pavé du chemin, de la borne du champ,
Des haillons du noyé sur la grève séchant,
Du flambeau qui s’éteint, de la fleur qui se fane
Je me suis appelé Pyrrhon, Aristophane,
Démocrite, Aristote, Esope, Lucien,
Diogène, Timon, Plaute, Pline l’ancien,
Cervantes, Bacon, Swift, Locke, Rousseau, Voltaire.

Je suis la résultante énorme de la terre.

La raison: J'étais là, pensif, troublé, muet;
Pendant que j'écoutais, l'être continuait:

— Homme, à nous le mystère est ouvert. Nous en sommes.
Pour l'abîme, je suis un spectre; pour vous, hommes,
Je suis la Voix qui dit: allez, mais sachez où.
J'erre près du néant le long du garde-fou.
J'avertis.

Il reprit:
— Écoute, esprit qui trembles;
Et qui ne peux pas même entrevoir les ensembles:
Hommes, vous m'ignorez, mais je vous connais tous;
Et je suis encor vous, même en dehors de vous.

Entre les brutes, foule, et les anges, élite,
Il est sur chaque terre et chaque satellite,
Un être à part; pensée et chair matière esprit;
Page mixte du livre où la nature écrit,
Dernier feuillet du Monstre et premier du Génie;
Créature où la fange et l'or font l'harmonie,
Dans la bête à moitié, dans l'idée à demi,
Flamme accouplée avec le corps son ennemi,
Double rayon tordu d'ombre et d'aube ravie,.
Mystère; ayant un pied, dans l'échelle de vie,
Sur une fin, un pied sur un commencement;
Cet être comparant, sentant, voyant, aimant,
C'est l'homme. Que la mort conserve, accroisse ou fauche
Cet à peu près sublime et ce chef-d'œuvre ébauche,
Qu'il ait ce qu'il appelle une âme, en ce moment
Je ne t'en parle pas, je te dis seulement
Que partout l'homme existe, étant un milieu d'êtres.
Il vit près des soleils, foyers, astres ancêtres.
Sur des terres qui sont plus ou moins loin du feu,
Il vit, domptant son globe; il est grand, il est peu;

Par la forme divers, mais un par sa nature;
Il a l’hydre animal et plante pour ceinture;
Il est sur le sommet de son visible à lui;
Et, larve ou deux lueurs se croisent, point d’appui
De tout un phénomène, identique à lui-même,
Marque partout le même étage du problème;
Entre l’aile, et le ventre il est l’être debout;
Il est partout le roi planétaire; partout
Il possède et régit l’astre — intermédiaire
Entre l’ombre et le grand soleil incendiaire.
Car tout globe qui tourne autour d’une clarté
Est planète de loin, de près humanité.
Or, — puisque jusqu’a moi ton œil plonge et pénètre,
C’est moi qui suis l’esprit collectif de cet être,
Partout; sous toute forme, et dans l’immensité.
Tu n’es qu’homme, ô passant; je suis humanité.
L’être effrayant, planant dans l’ombre inaccessible, Ajouta: .

— Nul ne doit sortir de son possible.
Nul ne doit transgresser son réel. Cependant
Je veux, puisque tu viens dans cette ombre, imprudent,
Faire une exception pour toi que je rencontre.
Quel que soit ton dessein, va! je n’irai pas contre;
Homme, je consens même à contenter tes vœux.
Etant de l’infini, je peux e que je veux;
Ma main peut ouvrir tout puisqu’elle peut tout clore;
Qui puise de, la nuit peut puiser de l’aurore,
Et ce que tu voudras, je te l’accorderai.
Que demandes-tu? parle.

Et dans l’effroi sacré
Je me taisais; roseau ployant, vil brin de chaume.

— Tu n’es pas jusqu’ici venu, dit le fantôme,
Pour ne pas demander quelque chose. Voyons,
Parle. Veux-tu des feux, des nimbes, des rayons?

Que veux-tu de ce gouffre où, lorsque je me penche,
La colombe nuée accourt, farouche et blanche?
Veux-tu savoir le fond du serpent, ou du ver?
Veux-tu que je t’emporte avec moi dans l’éther?
Je t’obéirai. Parle. Ou faut-il qu’on te montre
Comment l’aurore arrive, et vient à la rencontre
Du parfum de la fleur et du chant des oiseaux?
Veux-tu que nous prenions la tempête aux naseaux,
Et que nous nous roulions tous deux dans la tourmente,
Quand la meute du vent court sur l’onde écumante
Et quand l’archer tonnerre et le chasseur éclair
Percent de traits la peau d’écailles de la mer?
Veux-tu qu’à pleines mains, tous deux, dans l’invisible,
O passant, nous puisions l’illusion terrible?
Veux-tu que nous penchions nos yeux sur les secrets,
Et que nous regardions la nature de près
Pendant qu’elle produit dans l’immense pénombre?
Parle. Es-tu curieux de l’accouchement sombre?
Veux-tu voir dans le germe, et voir comment éclôt
Le songe ou le rocher, le sommeil ou le flot,
Et prendre sur le fait la création, mère
De la réalité comme-de la chimère?
Veux-tu d’une naissance entendre la rumeur,
Regarder un éden poindre, avoir la primeur
D’une sphère, d’un globe en fleur, d’une lumière?
Ou voir surgir l’idée, éblouissante, fière,
Cherchant l’époux Génie au fond du ciel lointain?
Dis, veux-tu dans la nuit, veux-tu dans le destin-
Voir quelque lever d’astre ou quelque lever d’âme?
Tu peux choisir. Demande, interroge, réclame;
Parle. J’attends. Faut-il ressaisir, je le puis,
Une étoile aux cheveux dans la fuite des nuits,
Et te la rapporter splendide et frémissante?
Que veux-tu? Veux-tu voir dix soleils, vingt, soixante,
Se lever à la fois dans soixante univers?
Veux-tu voir, sur le seuil des cieux tout grands ouverts,
Le matin dételant les sept chevaux de l’Ourse-?

Ou veux-tu que, dans l'ombre où le jour à sa source,
Homme, pour te donner le temps d'examiner,
Les mondes, qu'un prodige éternel fait tourner,
S'arrêtent un moment et reprennent haleine?
Parle.

L'esprit baissa ses ailes de phalène,
Et se tut. L'air tremblait sous mes pieds hasardeux.
Et l'âpre obscurité qui nous voyait tous deux

Et s'étoilait au loin de vagues auréoles,
Put entendre ce sombre échange de paroles.
Entre l'esprit étrange et moi, l'homme ébloui:
— Non, rien de tout cela — Que, demandes-tu? — LUI.

Tout sembla devant moi se fermer; et l'espèce
De clarté qui tremblait dans la nuée épaisse
Sombra dans l'air plus noir qu'un ciel cimmérien.
J'entendis un éclat de rire, et ne vis rien.
Hélas! n'étant qu'un homme, une chair misérable,
Dans cette obscurité fauve, âpre, inexorable,
Dans ces brumes sans jour; sans bords; sous ce linceul,
Je songeai qu'il était horrible d'être seul.
Puis mon esprit revint à son but: — voir, connaître,
Savoir; pendant que l'ombre informe, louche, traître,
Roulant dans ses échos l'affreux rire moqueur,
Grandissait dans l'espace ainsi que dans mon cœur.

Et je criai, ployant mes ailes déjà lasses
— Dites-moi seulement son nom, tristes espaces,
Pour que je le répète à jamais dans la nuit!.

Et je n'entendis rien que la bise qui fuit.
Alors il me sembla qu'en un sombre mirage,
Comme des tourbillons que chasse un vent d'orage,
Je voyais devant moi pêle-mêle passer
Et croître et frissonner et fuir et s'effacer

Ces cryptes du vertige et ces villes du rêve,
Rome sur ses frontons changeant en croix son glaive,
Thèbes, Jérusalem, Mecque, Médine, Hébron.;
Des figures tenant à la main un clairon,
Et des arbres, hagards, des cavernes, des baumes
Où priaient, barbe au vent, de lugubres Jérômes,
Et, parmi des Babels, des tours, des temples grecs,
D’horribles fronts d’écueils aux cheveux de varechs
Et tout cela, Ninive, Éphèse, Delphe, Abdère, .
Tombeau de saint Grégoire où veille un lampadaire,
Marches de Bénarès, pagodes de Ceylan, .
Monts d’où l’aigle de mer le soir prend son élan,
Minarets, parthénons, wigwams, temple d’Aglaure
Où l’on voit l’aube, fleur vertigineuse, éclore,
Et grotte de Calvin, et chambre de Luther,
Passages d’anges bleus dans le liquide éther,
Trépieds où flamboyaient, des âmes, yeux de braise.

De la chienne Scylla sur la mer calabraise,
Dodone, Horeb, rochers effarés, bois troublants,
Couvent d’Eschmiadzin aux quatre clochers blancs,

Noir cromlech de Bretagne, affreux cruach d’Irlande,
Poestum où les rosiers suspendent leur guirlande,
Temples des fils de Cham, temples des fils de Seth,
Tout lentement flottait et s’évanouissait
Dans une sorte d’âpre et vague perspective;
Et ce n’était; devant ma prunelle attentive,
Que de la vision qui ne fait pas de bruit,
Et de la forme obscure éparse dans la nuit.

Et, pâle, en moi, tout bas, je fis cet appel sombre,
Sans oser élever la voix, de peur de l’ombre:’

Êtres! lieux! choses! nuit! nuit froide qui te tais!
Cèdres de Salomon, chênes de Teutatès;
plongeurs de nuée, ô rapporteurs de tables;

Devins, mages, voyants, hommes épouvantables;
Thébaïdes, forêts, solitudes; Ombos
Où les docteurs, vivant dans des creux de tombeaux, S’emplissent d’inconnu comme d’eau les éponges;
   croisements obscurs des gouffres et des songes,
Sommeil, blanc soupirail des apparitions;
Germes, avatars, nuit des transformations
Où l’archange s’envole, où le monstre se vautre;
Mort, noir pont naturel entre une étoile et l’autre,
Communication entre l’homme et le ciel;
Colosse de Minerve aptère, aux pieds duquel
Le vent respectueux fait tomber ceux qui passent’;
Flots revenant toujours que les rocs toujours chassent;
Chauve Apollonius, vieux rêveur sidéral;
   scribes, qui, du bout du bâton augural
Tracez de l’alphabet les ténébreux jambages;
Époptes grecs fakirs, voghis, bonzes, eubages,
   tours d’où se jetaient les circumcellions;
Sanctuaires; trépieds, autels, fosse aux lions;
Vous qui voyez suer les fronts pâles des sages,
Cimetières, repos, asiles, noirs passages
Où viennent s’essuyer les penseurs, ces vaincus;
Monstrueux caveau peint du roi Psamméticus;
François d’Assises, Scot, Bruno, sainte Rhipsime marcheurs attirés aux clartés de la cime;
Sept sages qui parlez dans l’ombre à Cyrselus;
Du rêve et du-désert redoutables reclus’
Qui chuchotez avec les bouches invisibles;
Fronts courbés sous les cieux d’ou descendent les bibles;
Spectres; effarements de lampe et de flambeau;
Toi — qui vois Chanaan; montagne de, Nébo;
Moines du mont Athos, chantant de sombres proses’;
Libellules d’Asie errant dans les jamroses;
Isthme de Suez fermant l’Inde comme un verrou;

Ô voûtes d’Ellora, croupes du mont Mérou
D’où s’échappe le Gange aux grandes eaux sacrées;

Ombre, qui n’as pas l’air de savoir que tu crées;
vous qui criez: deuil! vous qui criez: espoir!
Spherus qui, toujours seul dans l’antre toujours noir,
Cherches Dieu — par les mille ouvertures funèbres,
Blanches, tristes, que font à l’âme les ténèbres;
Prêtres qu’en votre nuit suit le doute importun;
Vous, psalmistes, David, Éthan, grave Idithun;
Jean, interlocuteur de l’oiseau chéroubime;
Et vous, poetes; Dante, homme effrayant d’abîme,
Grand front tragique ombré de feuilles de laurier,
Qui t’en reviens, laissant l’obscurité crier,
Rapportant sous tes cils la lueur des avernes;
Dompteurs qui sans pâlir allez dans les cavernes
Chercher le hurlement jusque dans son chenil;
Pilotes nubiens qui remontez le Nil;
prodigieux cerf aux rameaux noirs qui brames
Dans la forêt des djinns, des pandits et des brames;
Hommes enterrés vifs, songeant dans vos cercueils;
pâtres accoudés; ô bruyères; écueils
Où rêve au crépuscule une forme sinistre;
Pythie assise au front du hideux cap Canistre;
Angles mystérieux où les songeurs entrés
Distinguent vaguement des satrapes mitrés;
Vous que la lune enivre et trouble, sélénites;
Vous, bénitiers sanglants des seules eaux bénites,
Yeux en pleurs des martyrs; vous, savants indécis;
Merlin, sous l’escarboucle inexprimable assis;
Toi, Job, qui te plains; toi, Basile, qui médites;
Est-ce qu’on ne peut pas voir un peu de jour, dites?

Et, sombre, j’attendis; puis je continuai:

— Quoi! l’homme tomberait, hagard, exténué,
Comme le moucheron qui bat la vitre blême!
Quoi! tout aboutirait à du néant suprême!
Tout l’effort des chercheurs frémissants se perdrait!
L’homme habiterait l’ombre et serait au secret!

Marcher serait errer! l’aile serait punie!
L’aurore, ô cieux profonds, serait une ironie!

Alors, tout haut; levant la voix, levant les bras,
Éperdu, je criai: — Cela ne se peut pas!
Grand inconnu! méchant ou bon! grand invisible!
Je te le dis en face, Être! c’est impossible!
On éclata de rire une seconde fois...

Et ce rire était plus un rictus qu’une voix;
Il remua longtemps l’ombre visionnaire,

Et, s’évanouissant, roula comme un tonnerre
Dans ce prodigieux silence où le néant
Semblait vivre, insondable, immobile et béant.

Ô méditations! oh! comme l’esprit souffre
Sous les porches hagards et difformes du gouffre!
Comme le souffle noir du vide vous poursuit,
Sinistre, en vous jetant du trouble et de la nuit!
Comme on sent que le rêve est un être qui vole
Et passe... — On m’adressait dans l’ombre la parole;
Et de funèbres voix que sur mon front j’avais
Comme les endormis en ont à leurs chevets,
Chuchotaient au-dessus de moi des choses sombres.
Je sentais la terreur muette des décombres
Et je me demandais: — Qui donc murmure ainsi?
C’était, dans le ciel morne et de brume épaissi,
Comme un nuage obscur de bouches sur ma téte;
Des faces me parlaient dans un vent de tempête;
Puis ces voix s’éteignaient comme le vague son
Qui n’est plus la parole et devient le frisson.
Noirs discours! l’ironie y grinçait dans le râle;
Des plaintes, sanglotant dans l’ombre sépulcrale
Comme entre les roseaux gémit le gavial,
S’achevaient en sarcasme amer et trivial;
Je croyais par moments qu’en ces vagues royaumes

J’assistais au concile effrayant des fantômes
Que nous nommons raison, logique, utilité,
Certitude, calcul, sagesse, vérité;
Il me semblait, parmi le grand murmure austère
De l’horreur, de la nuit, du tombeau, du mystère,
Entendre Aristophane; et voir, après les pleurs,
Toutes sortes d’éclairs cyniques et railleurs,
Moqueurs, étincelants, percer l’ombre ennemie,
Et Rabelais passer à travers Jérémie;
J’écoutais frémissant et par moments vaincu.
Était-ce des esprits d’hommes ayant vécu?
Était-ce les conseils qui flottent dans les nues
Pour quiconque s’égare aux routes inconnues?
Mon front sous l’infini ployait lugubrement.
L’espace affreux, éther, ténèbres, firmament,
Espèce de taillis sans branches étoilées,
Où les brouillards fuyaient en confuses mêlées,
Semblait d’une forêt le redoutable dais...
Qu’était-ce que ces voix? je ne sais. — J’entendais.
Et ma raison tremblait en moi, diminuée,
Dans des tressaillements d’orage et de nuée.

Cependant par degrés l’ombre devint visible;
Et l’être qui m’avait parlé précédemment

Reparut, mais grandi jusqu’à l’effarement;
Il remplissait du haut en bas le sombre dôme
Comme si l’infini dilatait ce fantôme;
De sorte que l’esprit effrayant n’offrait plus
Que des faces roulant par flux et par reflux,
Un sourd fourmillement d’hydres, d’hommes, de bêtes,
Et que le fond du ciel me semblait plein de têtes.
Ces têtes par moments semblaient se quereller.
Je voyais tous ces yeux dans l’ombre étinceler.
Le monstre grandissait en silence, sans cesse.
Et je ne savais plus ce que c’était. Était-ce
Une montagne, une hydre, un gouffre, une cité,

Un nuage, un amas d’ombre, l’immensité?
Je sentais tous ces yeux sur moi fixés ensemble.
Tout à coup, frissonnant comme un arbre qui tremble,
Le fantôme géant se répandit en voix,
Qui sous ses flancs confus murmuraient à la fois;
Et, comme d’un brasier tombent des étincelles,
Comme on voit des oiseaux épars, pigeons, sarcelles,
D’un grand essaim passant s’écarter quelquefois,
Comme un vert tourbillon de feuilles sort d’un bois,
Comme, dans les hauteurs par les vents remuées,
En avant d’un orage il vole des nuées,
Toutes ces voix, mêlant le cri, l’appel, le chant,
De l’immense être informe et noir se détachant,
Me montrant vaguement des masques et des bouches,
Vinrent sur moi bruire avec des bruits farouches,
Parfois en même temps et souvent tour à tour,
Comme des monts, à l’heure où se lève le jour,
L’un après l’autre, au fond de l’horizon s’éclairent
Et des formes, sortant du monstre, me parlèrent:

I. Une voix

Les rudes bûcherons sont venus dans le bois.
— Si tu ne vois pas nie et doute si tu vois,
A dit Cratès. — Zénon Gorgias, Pythagore,
Plaute et Sénèque ont dit: — Si tu vois, nie encore.
Bacon a dit — Voici l’objet, l’être, le corps,
Le fait. N’en sortez pas; car tout tremble dehors.
— Quel est ce monde? a dit Thalès. Apollodore
A dit: C’est de la nuit que de la cendre adore.

Et Démonax de Chypre, Epicharme de Cos,
Pyrrhon, le grand errant des monts et des échos,
Ont répondu: — Tout est fantôme. Pas de type.
Tout est larve. — Et fumée, a repris Aristippe.
— Rêve! a dit Sergius, le fatal syrien.
— Rencontre de l’atome et de l’atome, et rien.
Ces mots noirs ont été jetés par Démocrite.
Ésope a dit: — À bas, monde! masque hypocrite!
Épicure qui naît au mois Gamélion,
Et Job qui parle au ver, Dan qui parle au lion,
Amos et Jean troublés par les apocalypses,
Ont dit: — On ne le voit qu’à travers les éclipses.
— L’être est le premier texte et l’homme est le second.
Lisible dans la fleur et dans l’arbre fécond,
Et dans le calme éther des cieux que rien n’irrite,
La nature est dans l’homme obscure et mal transcrite.
Voilà ce qu’Alchindé l’Arabe a proclamé.
Cardan a dit: — Hélas! c’est fermé, c’est fermé!
Alcidamas a dit: — Miracle, autel, croyance,
Dogme, religion, fondent sous la science
Dieu sous l’esprit humain, tas de neige au dégel.
Et Goethe au vaste front, Montaigne, Fichte, Hégel,
Se sont penchés pendant que le grand rieur maître,
Rabelais, chuchotait sur l’abîme peut-être.
Diogène a crié: — Des flambeaux! des flambeaux!

Shakespeare a murmuré, courbé sur les tombeaux:
— Fossoyeur, combien Dieu pèse-t-il dans ta pelle?
Et Jean-Paul a repris: — Ce qu’ainsi l’homme appelle,
C’est la vague lueur qui tremble sur le sort;
C’est la phosphorescence impalpable qui sort
De l’incommensurable et lugubre matière;
Dieu, c’est le feu follet du monde cimetière.
Dante a levé les bras en s’écriant: Pourquoi?
— Ô nuit, j’attends que tout s’affirme et dise: moi.
Quel est le sens des mots: foi, conscience humaine,
Raison, devoir? a dit le pâle Anaximène.
Locke a dit: — On voit mal avec ces appareils.
Reuchlin a demandé: — Qu’est-ce que les soleils?
Sont-ce des piloris ou des apothéoses?
Lucrèce a dit: — Quelle est la nature des choses?
Il a dit: Tout est sourd, faux, muet, décevant.
Sous cette immense mort quelqu’un est-il vivant?
Sent-on une âme au fond de la substance, et l’être
N’est-il pas tout entier dans ce mot: apparaître?
L’ombre engendre la nuit. De quoi l’homme est-il sûr?
Et le ciel, le hasard, l’obscurité, l’azur,
Le mystère, et la vie, et la tombe indignée
Retentissent encor de ces coups de cognée.

Oui, les douteurs; les fiers incrédules, les forts,
Ont appelé Quelqu’un, quoique restés dehors;
Ils ont bravé l’odeur que le sépulcre exhale;
Le front haut, ils disaient à l’ombre colossale:
— Ose donc nous montrer ton Dieu, que nous voyions
Ce qu’il a de carreaux, ce qu’il a de rayons,
Gouffre horrible, et si c’est avec de la colère
Ou du pardon divin que son visage éclaire!
Et, prêts à tout subir, sans peur, prêts à tout voir,
Calmes, ils regardaient en face le ciel noir,
Et le sourd firmament que l’obscurité voile,
Farouches, attendant quelque chute d’étoile!
Certes, ces curieux, ces hardis ignorants,

Ces lutteurs, ces esprits, ces hommes étaient grands,
Et c’étaient des penseurs à l’âme fiers et fière
Qui jetaient à la nuit ce défi de lumière.

Chercheur, trouveras-tu ce qu’ils n’ont pas trouvé?
Songeur, rêveras-tu plus loin qu’ils n’ont rêvé?

II. Une autre voix

Ne nous demande pas, ô songeur, qui nous sommes.
S’ils nous entrevoyaient, nous ferions peur aux hommes.
Soit en bien, soit en mal, nous avons conseillé
Quiconque a médité, cherché, pensé, veillé, —
Tous les grands insensés, tous les sages célèbres:
Nous volons d’arbre en arbre aux forêts de ténèbres;
Tout ce que l’homme appelle Énigme, Doute, Mort,
Brume, Silence, Effroi, Hasard, Mystère, Sort,
Est pour nous, sous l’horreur des voûtes éternelles,
Comme un taillis obscur par où passent nos ailes;
Nous sommes les flottants de l’immense azur noir;
Si quelque mage osait essayer de nous voir,
De saisir un de nous, de compter notre nombre,
Nous nous dissiperions comme des oiseaux d’ombre.

C’est nous que vous nommez démons; homme, tu sens
Sous des souffles confus tes cheveux frémissants,
C’est nous. Nous versons l’ombre aux jours que tu consommes;
Nous jetons des lueurs dans ton-sommeil. Nous sommes
Pris dans l’obscurité comme vous dans la chair.
Nous, sommes les passants — sinistres de l’éclair,

Les méduses du rêve aux robes dénouées,
Les visages d’abîme épars dans les nuées.
Tout ce que vous voyez, nous ne le voyons pas.
Nous ne distinguons point votre terre, vos pas,
Vos faces, d’un soleil invisible inondées,
Mais dans votre cerveau nous voyons vos idées;
Votre pensée est nue à nos regards moqueurs;
Nous voyons le dedans vertigineux des cœurs.
L’haleine de la nuit nous chasse et nous oublie,
Et fait flotter le fil mystérieux qui lie
Vos sciences, vos plans, vos travaux, vos desseins,
Vos efforts, vos projets, vos vœux, à nos essaims.

Nous mêlons notre nuit avec votre ignorance;
Vous appelez cela savoir. La transparence
De l’Être parfois laisse apercevoir nos fronts.
Parfois jusqu’à vos cœurs, la nuit, nous pénétrons,
En rêve, et vous sentez comme une vague étreinte.
Sans cesse des courants d’espérance ou de crainte,
Des flux et des reflux de sentiments divers
Vont, dans les profondeurs de l’espace, à travers
Le vide, l’aquilon, le tombeau, le décombre,
De vous le peuple aveugle à nous le peuple sombre.
L’Inconnu nous tient tous dans ses mornes filets.
Nous sommes vos échos, vous êtes nos reflets;
Car tout est l’unité. Forme joyeuse ou triste,
Tout se confond dans Tout, et rien à part n’existe,
Ô vivant! Et sais-tu ce que dit l’abîme? UN.
Sans que vous le sachiez, nous pensons en commun;
Nous tremblons au-dessus de vous, livide armée;
Et de votre feu noir nous sommes la fumée.
Nos formes de la nuit sont le lugubre jeu
Nous allons, nous flottons. — Et toi, tu cherches Dieu?
Hélas!
Qui que tu sois, redoute, au gouffre où tu te plonges,
Le vague coudoiement des vains passants des songes.
— Fuyez d’ici, vivants, dont l’esprit, fléchissant
Sous l’incompréhensible et sous l’éblouissant,
Peut à peine porter le poids d’un évangile.
Ce n’est pas sans danger que des hommes d’argile,

Tremblants quand ils sont las, glacés quand ils sont nus,
Dialoguent dans l’ombre avec des inconnus.

À force de songer, ô pâle solitaire,
Tu sentiras de l’air sous toi; tu perdras terre...
Oh! les souffles! craignez les souffles de la nuit!
Où vous emportent-ils? Ceux qu’un rêve conduit Deviennent rêve eux-mêmes, et, sans être coupables,
Tombent dans l’essaim noir des faces impalpables.

C’est alors qu’éperdu, terrible, tu tendras
Les mains comme les morts sous leurs lugubres draps.

Mais à quoi bon? Tout fuit. Un vent qui vous pénètre
Vous roule dans l’espace à jamais... — O deuil! être
Des espèces d’esprits misérables chassés!
Oh! n’entendre jamais ce mot céleste: assez!
Un souffle vous apporte, un souffle vous remmène..
On a, sur ce qu’on garde encor de forme humaine,
D’obscurs attouchements et des passages froids;
Toute l’ombre n’est plus qu’une suite d’effrois;
On sent les longs frissons des roseaux de l’abîme.
Jamais le jour. — Jamais un rayon qui ranime.
Errer! errer! errer! errer! faire des nœuds
D’ombre, dans l’invisible et le vertigineux!
Monter, tomber, monter, retomber! sort terrible!
Être à jamais l’informe égaré dans l’horrible,
Le contraire du jour, de l’hymne et de l’encens!
Des témoins de l’énigme, à jamais frémissants
Devant le ténébreux, devant l’inabordable,
Et face à face avec un voile formidable!
Être, en dehors de l’être, en dehors du trépas,
Quelque chose d’affreux qui souffre et ne vit pas!
Être de la clameur dans l’infini semée,
Un vague tourbillon pleurant, une fumée
De larves, de regards, de masques, de rumeurs,
De voix ne pouvant pas même dire: je meurs,
Passant toujours, toujours, toujours, comme un flot sombre,
Sous les arches sans fin du hideux pont de l’ombre!

IV. Une autre voix

Malheur au curieux lugubre, — qui s’acharne
À la vertigineuse et sinistre lucarne!
Malheur aux imprudents penchés, sur l’absolu!

Pour avoir trop sondé, pour avoir trop voulu,
Pour s’être trop plongés dans l’abstraction triste
Où rien de saisissable et d’humain ne persiste,
C’est fini; les voilà sur les fatals sommets,
Égarés en dehors de l’homme désormais,
Sortis du bien, du mal, de l’orgueil, de l’envie,
De l’amour, de la haine, et plus grands que la vie!
Leur esprit, emporté loin de vous, ô vivants,
Prend, dans la vision des gouffres décevants,
Dans on ne sait quoi d’âpre et d’horrible et d’immense,
Cette divinité que vous nommez démence.
Ils ne sont plus jamais éveillés ni dormants.
Terrestre et claire encor dans ses commencements,
Leur pensée, obscurcie en grandissant, achève
D’ouvrir ses vagues yeux dans le monde du rêve.

Oh! monde redoutable! oh! ce que nous voyons!
Des échelles d’esprits dans de pâles rayons;
Les flamboiements, les feux, les cratères, les soufres,
Les éclairs, gouvernés par les anges des gouffres;
Des sons de voix qu’on a dans la joie entendus;
D’affreux escarpements dans des mondes perdus;
Des astres, dans des mains portés comme des lampes;
Et là-bas, dans la nue aux tortueuses rampes,
Errent ceux qui vivaient et ne sont plus; ils vont,
Tous ces crânes à l’œil monstrueux et profond,
Tous ces squelettes blancs venus des ossuaires;
Ils vont, tous ces linceuls, tous ces hideux suaires,
Tous ces draps frissonnants, foule effrayante à voir,
Et, chassant devant lui, dans l’affreux chemin noir,

Leur conscience nue et leur âme sans voiles,
L’ange fouette les morts avec son fouet d’étoiles.
Et l’on voit des lueurs, on entend des appels;
Les constellations, flamboyants archipels,
Brillent au zénith sombre, et le chaos conspue
Le ciel avec son eau sinistre et corrompue.

Et les désespérés passent. Qui donc sont-ils?
Sont-ce des esprits morts? Sont-ce des corps subtils?
Ils tombent on ne sait de quelle obscure cime,
Tantôt plus noirs, tantôt moins sombres que l’abîme;
Leur chute flotte au gré de l’air qui les poursuit;
Ils seraient les flocons, s’il neigeait de la nuit.
Qu’est-ce que ce nuage inconcevable d’êtres,
Phalènes se heurtant à de vagues fenêtres?
Les uns n’ont qu’un regard et sont comme les yeux
De l’infini glacé, sourd et silencieux;
D’autres vont droits et blancs dans la profondeur blême;
D’autres, plus effrayants que les ténèbres même,
Luttent contre la nuit dans les horreurs du vent,
Poussant des cris, mordant l’ombre, n’apercevant
Que la lividité des mornes étendues,
Ne distinguant qu’un flot de formes éperdues,
Et que ce qu’on peut voir de nuée et de cieux.
Dans des renversements de torses furieux.

Et ces larves s’en vont. Est-on sûr qu’elles soient?

Et les contemplateurs sont la. Tristes, ils voient.
Quoi? l’inconnu, muré dans sa muette loi.
Et qui dira jamais ce qu’expriment d’effroi
Ces profils ténébreux, ces postures fatales,
Ces yeux hagards noyés dans des aurores pâles?
Ils pensent, échoués dans l’immobilité;
La terreur sans espoir fait leur tranquillité;
Leur épaule fléchit comme s’ils portaient toute
La charpente du monde avec toute la voûte;

Et, comme en un caveau, goutte à goutte, la nuit
Filtre sous leur front blême où leur œil fixe luit.
Ils ont pour vision éternelle la Chose
Sans nom, sans jour, sans bruit, sans bord, sans fin, sans cause,
Jamais ne s'arrêtant, jamais ne s'achevant,
Terrible, avec des vols de spectres dans le vent.

Que viens-tu demander à ce monde nocturne?
Un Dieu! Pourquoi viens-tu plonger ta main dans l'Urne?
Job entire Satan et Mahomet Iblis.
Les gouffres ont-ils Dieu dans leurs profonds oublis?
Ce Dieu sert-il de centre à leurs circonférences?
Le voit-on à travers leurs sombres transparences?
Ou bien est-ce ce Tout, cette âpre immensité,
Ce ciel, que vous, prenez pour une volonté?
Sont-ce ces profondeurs, ces vents, ces fondrières,
Ces forêts de nuée aux livides clairières.

Ces éléments, ces nuits, ces mornes régions,
Que vous appelez Dieu dans vos religions?
Avez-vous pour mirage, ô fils du cimetière,
De voir la chose-Dieu sous la chose Matière?
Est-ce Dieu qui paraît quand s'enfuit l'alcyon;
Quand l'hydre de l'écume entre en convulsion;
Quand partout on entend dans la sombre nature
Comme un bruit d'ouragan brisant une mâture,
Quand le ciel lamentable éclate en tristes voix;
Quand le nuage accourt; quand les bêtes des bois
Tremblent; quand les lions, hagards, baissent la tête
Sous des écrasements d'éclairs et de tempête?

Est-ce lui que la mer appelle en sa clameur?
Homme, est-il quelque part un effrayant semeur
Qui jette dans l'azur des chiffres et des nombres,
De la graine d'abîme éclose en larves sombres,
Des vivants comme nous qui te semblent des morts,
Des esprits comme toi qui nous semblent des corps,

Et qui voit, dans le champ des espaces sonores,
Ondoyer des épis d’étoiles et d’aurores?
Qui peut répondre oui? qui peut répondre non?
Un geôlier rôde-t-il autour du cabanon?
Qu’importe! Vis. Tais-toi. Va-t’en. Aime ton père,
Ta mère et tes enfants. Qui cherche désespère.

V. Une autre voix

Ah! c’est l’obscurité, c’est la source profonde
Que ton œil veut scruter, que veut fouiller ta sonde,
Ô songeur dont la nuit hérisse les cheveux!
Ah! c’est l’énigme Dieu qui t’occupe! Tu veux
Aller au fond! tu veux voir clair dans la nuée!
Vider l’ombre! Il te faut, pauvre âme exténuée,
Cette science-là... — Voyons: tente; entreprends;
Avec les papyrus, les missels, les korans,
Les bibles que les sphynx portaient sur leurs poitrines,
Rebâtis la charpente informe des doctrines;
Des croyances de l’homme écrasé sous le faix,
Échafaude l’amas monstrueux, et refais
Un édifice avec ces poutres mal unies
Qu’on nomme vérités, dogmes, théogonies;
Restaure, démolis, fonde. Fais des essais.
Remets le vieux bahut debout sur ses vieux ais;
Crois comme Jean Climaque et Jean Catéchumène;
Ou taille un meuble neuf dans la science humaine
Pour y mettre sous clef l’ombre et l’éternité.
Questionne l’autel d’Isis ou d’Astarté,
Ou les temples payens, peu salués des sages,
Ayant de noirs corbeaux nichés dans leurs bossages,
Ou le blême Irmensul debout dans le menhir;
Creuse dans le passé, creuse dans l’avenir;
Regarde fixement le Temps noir qui feuillette
L’homme et la vie avec son pouce de squelette;
Épèle l’univers que le souffle créa,
Texte dont chaque monde est un alinéa;
Chiffre et déchiffre; éprouve, interprète, proclame;
Confronte ce que l’homme a d’ombre dans son âme
Avec ce que le ciel a d’âme dans sa nuit
Relance Olympe ermite au fond de son réduit;
Interroge le ver sur la toile qu’il file;
Montre et vois; fais la pâque ainsi que Théophile

Le quatorzième jour de la lune de mars;
Visite Ammon; tiens tête aux colosses camards
Conteste, affirme; nie, attends; dis ton rosaire;
Sens la terre trembler — sous toi comme Césaire;
Prêche avant d'être prêtre ainsi que Bellarmin;
Exprime en ton cerveau tout le savoir humain
Fais-toi de tout comprendre une étrange prouesse;
Vois venir au-devant l'un de l'autre Boèce
Et Saint-Denis, chacun sa tête dans sa main;
De la même façon fais le même chemin;
Hante les profondeurs dont Pythagore est pâle;
Commente nuphre, Adon, Glareanus de Bâle
Sois druide, fakir, bonze, magicien;
Installe, si tu veux, sur le modèle ancien,
Au-dessus des brouillards de l'erreur chimérique,
Une sagesse avec entablement dorique;
Sois le médiateur des aveugles Volta
Dément Clairaut; Cyrille au front du Golgotha
Voit dans l'Ombre une croix haute de quinze stades
Bossuet de Calvin tance les incartades;
L'évêque Archelaüs poursuit l'errant Manès;
Hildebrand dit: Moi SEUL. Luther dit: HERR OMNES
Ce qu'adore Pascal Diderot le diffame;
Reuchlin dit: — Vos trois rois! conte de bonne femme!
— D'où viennent-ils? demande Arouet à Calmet;
De l'Inde ou de l'Afrique? — Et Paracelse met
Trois pégases de flamme aux ordres des trois mages;
Salomon sculpte l'arche; Huss brise les images;
Pélage veut la lutte; Augustin veut la foi;
Interviens; crée un centre, une règle, une loi;
Trouve l'axe commun des doctrines contraires
À force de raison rends les raisonneurs frères;
Amalgame Épicure avec Ézéchiel;
Pour ceux-ci, l'univers n'a que l'enfer pour ciel;
C'est le cachot du mal dont vous êtes les proies;
Pour ceux-là, c'est le lieu des fêtes et des joies
Les uns vivent chantant: tout est plaisir et jeu!

D’autres lisent le livre à la lueur du feu.
Combine ce zénith et ce nadir des sages.
Fais pour ton œil, penché sur les faits, sur les âges,
Une lentille avec tout ce que l’homme apprit;
Cherche; dis-toi: — Je vais faire dans mon esprit

Converger la clarté pour la changer en flamme,
Condenser Dieu sur moi pour allumer mon âme.
Fouille Alcuin, saint-Thomas, Gorgias Léontin,
Le ménologe grec, le rituel latin;
Va de Thèbe Heptapyle à Thèbe Hécatonpyle;
Éblouis-toi d’énigme et d’effroi la pupile;
Écris et lis; sois gond du portail; sois flambeau,
Sois cardinal avec Sadolet et Bembo;
Va-t’en dans le désert manger des sauterelles
Comme Jean qui de l’ombre écoutait les querelles;
Fais une enquête; prends des informations
Près des vents, près des flots où sont les alcyons;
Cueille chaque chimère et chaque schisme; laisse
Novatus pour Eustathe, Arius pour Mélèce;
Va des juifs aux parsis, va des esprits aux corps,
De la ronde des dieux à la ronde des morts,
De la danse morphasme à la danse macabre.
Veille; allume ta lampe au sombre candélabre
Que tiennent, près du trône où Septentrion luit,
Persée et Sirius, ces nègres de la nuit.
Interpelle le germe et la cendre; rédige
Un interrogatoire en forme du prodige;
Écoute pétiller le feu dans l’encensoir;
Écoute le cri sourd de la foudre, et, le soir,
Dans le Campo Santo le bruit que fait la pioche;
Parle à Domnus premier, évêque d’Antioche,
Et sur l’irrémissible et sur le véniel,
Consulte Cassien, Scaliger, Torniel;
Sois le voyant! pareil aux tremblants aruspices,
Va regarder la nuit l’horreur des précipices;
Au fond de tout abîme aie un sinistre aimant;

Observe, spectateur des deux gouffres, comment
L’homme entre dans la mort et l’astre dans l’éclipse;
Donne aux vierges ta plume ainsi que Juste Lipse;
Attends dans l’infini, leur morne promenoir,
Zénon, le sage fou, Gerbert, le pape noir;
Prie, évoque, bénis, sacre, exorcise, adjure;
Accoude-toi sur l’être obscur; fais la gageure
De l’énigme, du sphinx, du gouffre, de demain,
D’hier, de l’avenir! jauge, la toise en main,
Le ciel par kilomètre ou bien par centiare;
Drape-toi d’un suaire ou coiffe une tiare;
Tâte dans le cercueil l’affreux nœud gordien;
Prends-toi pour unité; fais-toi méridien;
Ajoute ta raison, ton but; ta conjecture
Et ta pensée ainsi qu’un faîte à la nature;
Mets sur cette Chéops le pyramidion;
Sois un convertisseur comme Spiridion;
Sois un avertisseur comme le coq sonore;
Monte sur le cheval terrible de Lénore,
Ayant pour t’éclairer le feu de ses naseaux,
Et la lumière qu’ont les spectres sur leurs os;
Superpose et bâtis comme une tour solide
Wiclef, Leibnitz; le diacre Ambroise, Basilide, Swedenborg, Lyranus, Rupert, Abulensis,
Cardan, sous l’escarboucle inexprimable assis,
Photin, Cassiodore, Alcidamas, Eusèbe,
Potamon d’Héraclée et Paphnuce de Thèbe,
Tous les docteurs, vrais, faux, grands, petits, inconnus,
Connus, depuis Sophron jusqu’à Théotechnus,
Les devins, les savants, Paris, Rome, Épidaure,
Les poëtes sereins, ces frères de l’aurore
Faits de la même pourpre et dorés du même or,
La congrégation des pères de Saint Maur,
La grâce, le péché, l’oraison impétrante,
Les vingt-cinq sessions du concile de Trente,
Les feuillets sibyllins tombés on ne sait d’où,
Le livre turc, le livre hébreu, le livre hindou;

Passe les jours, les nuits; deviens blanc dans les rêves;
Sois Jérôme; oui, sois Jean rôdant le long des grèves;
Sois Dante pour penser et sois Newton pour voir;
Sois Origène, Euler, Platon! Veux-tu savoir
Ce que tu construiras sur Dieu? de la fumée.

Oui, combine, l’Égypte, et Delphe, et l’Idumée;
Cherche le sens des mots Zéus, Vichnou, Mithra;
Fouille le zodiaque obscur, de Denderah;
Espère où Nicomaque et Thalès désespèrent;
Reprends les chiffres noirs, où d’autres se trompèrent
Reprends-les tous, reprends ceux où tu te trompas;
Tous les cercles que peut contenir ton compas,
Trace-les; songe; parle aux arbres; fais-leur signe;
Compte, compte, recompte; additionne, aligne,
Devant l’impénétrable et devant le fatal,
Devant ce qui n’a pas de nombre et de total,
Tous tes zéros, anneaux du rideau de la tombe;
Le sépulcre, c’est là que toujours on retombe,
Se dresse devant toi, regarde tes travaux,
Bons, mauvais, inexacts, exacts, anciens, nouveaux,
Et ce tas de calculs que, ta pensée anime,
Et te jette ce cri, le seul mot de l’abîme
Qu’il sache, et le seul nom qu’il se connaisse: Après?

Question que se font dans l’ombre les cyprès.

VI. Une autre voix

Et d’abord, de quel Dieu veux-tu parler? Précise.
Quel est celui qui tient ta pensée indécise?
Dis, est-ce du Dieu peint en jaune, en rouge, en bleu;
Habitant d’un triangle où flambe un mot hébreu;
Face dorée au fond d’une nuée épaisse;
Portant couronne, étole, et glaive, et sceptre; espèce
D’empereur, habillé d’un habit de soleil,
Ayant au poing le globe et Satan sous l’orteil,
Assis dans une chaire, et dictant la sentence
D’Arius à Nicée et de Huss à Constance;
Niant le genre humain, concile universel;
Servant de majuscule aux pages du missel;
Dieu qui met Galilée en prison, et de Maistre
En sentinelle au seuil du paradis terrestre;
Dieu qu’une vieille en rêve, au bruit qu’en se choquant
Font dans l’immensité des foudres de clinquant,
Sous un grand dais d’azur que l’astre damasquine,
Aperçoit lui montrant les numéros d’un quine;
Dieu gothique, irritable, intolérant, tueur,
Noir vitrail effrayant qu’empourpre la lueur
Du bûcher qui flamboie et pétille derrière?
Est-ce du Dieu qui veut la chanson pour prière,
Qu’on invoque en trinquant, Dieu bon vivant, qui rit;
Comprend, sait que la chair est faible, a de l’esprit;
Dieu point fâcheux qui vit en bonne intelligence
Avec les passions de votre pauvre engeance,
Excusant le péché, l’expliquant au besoin,
Clignant de l’œil avec le diable dans un coin,
Flânant, regardant l’homme en sa fainéantise,
Mais jamais du côté qui fait une sottise,
Et pas très sûr au fond lui-même d’exister?
Est-ce du Dieu qu’on voit à Versailles monter
Aux carrosses du roi, bien né, suivant les modes,
Rendant aux Montespans les Bossuets commodes,

Dieu de cour, Dieu de ville, avec soin expurgé
De toute humeur brutale et de tout préjugé,
Complaisant; paternel aux morales mondaines;
Avec les Massillons émoussant les Bridaines;
Dieu qu’un fripon coudoie avec tranquillité;
Dieu par la politique et le siècle accepté;
Lâchant son ciel; disant: Paris vaut une messe;
Souple et doux, dispensant les rois de leur promesse,
Point janséniste, point pédant, point monacal;
Permettant à Sanchez d’effaroucher Pascal,

Au banquier d’encoffrer cent pour cent, à la femme,
Laide, d’être méchante, et, belle, d’être infâme;
Passant l’épice au juge, au marchand le faux poids;
Habile; à Notre-Dame accouplant Quincampoix;
Sévère seulement aux têtes raisonnantes,
Tuant un peu Ramus, biffant l’édit de Nantes,
Mais qui, pourvu qu’on soit, dans les grands jours, pilier
À l’église, et qu’on soit cousin d’un marguillier,
Et qu’on veuille que Rome en tout règne et s’accroisse,
Et qu’on rende le pain bénit à sa paroisse,
Vous prend en amitié, vous soutient chaudement,
Vous épouse, travaille à votre avancement,
Parle à son excellence et vous pousse, et procure
Un grade aux fils aînés, aux cadets une cure,
En attendant la mitre ou les canonicats;
Dieu facile, logeable, aimable, utile en-cas
Qui se contente, ayant d’indulgence boutique,
D’un peu d’hypocrisie et d’un peu de pratique;
Dogme et religion des dévôts positifs
Qui font de temps en temps des voyages furtifs,
Courts, dans l’éternité, l’abîme, le mystère,
Et l’insondable, avec ce Dieu pour pied-à-terre?
Est-ce du Dieu guerrier, militaire, sanglant,
Qui s’inquiète peu que vous mangiez du gland
Ou du pain, mais qui veut pour rites et pour cultes
Glaives, piques, corbeaux, scorpions, catapultes,

Grappin horrible où pend un vaisseau tout entier,
Tortue avec sa claie enduite de mortier,
Béliers fixes, heurtant les murs comme des proues,
Telenos enlevant des soldats, tours à roues
Recouvertes de mousse et de crin de cheval;
Plus tard, pierriers broyant quelque donjon-rival
Jusqu’à ce qu’il s’en aille en cendre et se dissoude,
Mangonneaux, fauconneaux, bat-murs, pièces à coude,
Renversant les cités dans leur fossé bourbeux;
Volcans grégeois traînés par trente jougs de bœufs,
Canons vénitiens, serpentines lombardes;
Dieu qui dit à Coglione: attelle les bombardes;
Qui rit, pauvre blessé, du grabat où tu geins,
Que la bataille enivre avec tous ses engins,
Chaudrons à poix bouillante et fours à boulets rouges,
Qui chasse les manants éperdus de leurs bouges;
Qui rêve Te Deum qui s’endort aux accents
De l’obusier Lancastre et du mortier Paixhans;
Qui prête, quand la mine est faite sous la brèche,
Son tonnerre du besoin pour allumer la mèche,
Et, quand la terre s’ouvre avec un large éclair,
S’épanouit de voir les gens sauter en l’air?
Vision du passé par votre âge subie!
Est-ce du Dieu jugeur? Oh! l’étrange lubie!
Dieu chancelier, portant perruque in-folio,
Vidant le procès Homme et l’Être imbroglio!
Dieu président, siégeant dans l’univers grand’chambre,
Jugeant l’âme, et bâillant, sous un ciel de décembre,
Entre l’avocat ange et l’avocat démon?
Dis, est-ce le dieu guèbre, est-ce le dieu mormon Qu’il te faut? Ou le Dieu qui fit rouer Labarre?
Vois. Choisis. Ou le Dieu qui donne au turc barbare
Des femmes plein la tombe et plein le firmament?
Ou bien est-ce le Dieu qui fait lugubrement
Chanter, quand l’heure vient de vêpre ou de matines,
L’homme qui n’est plus homme aux chapelles sixtines,
Et qui, lui créateur, se plaît à l’écouter?

Ou parles-tu du Dieu qu’il faudrait inventer,
Que dans l’ombre la peur concède au phénomène,
Par les sages bâti sur la sagesse humaine,
Utile à ton valet, bon pour ton cuisinier,
Modérateur des sauts de l’anse du panier,
Dieu de raison qu’au fond de son spectre solaire
Le bourgeois bienveillant raille, exile et tolère,
Dieu consenti par Locke et que Grimm refusa,
Très-Haut à qui d’Holbach a donné son visa,
Éternel maçonné par le vivant qui passe,
Entrecolonnement du temps et de l’espace,
Pièce d’architecture ajoutée après coup
À la vie, au destin, au bien, au mal, à tout,
Tour tremblante de vide et hors-d’œuvre de l’homme?
Tous ces dieux, quel que soit le nom dont on les nomme,
Sont tout, excepté Dieu.
 L’homme abject a besoin,
Étant méchant, d’un juge, et, hideux, d’un témoin;
Il veut un Dieu. C’est bien. L’homme prend de la brique,
De la pierre, du plomb, du bois, et le fabrique;
Chaque peuple a le sien; et la religion
A l’Unité pour masque et pour nom Légion.
Un temple voit la nuit où l’autre voit l’aurore;
Chéos adore Ammon que Jagrenat ignore;
Pour Delphe Odin n’est pas; la solimaniéh
Affirme Mahomet par le dolmen nié.
La terre crée un monstre et se met sous sa garde;
Et c’est avec stupeur que le grand ciel regarde
Croître sur vos fumiers ce misérable Dieu.
Nous ne nous mettons pas en peine de si peu,
Nous autres les esprits errant dans l’étendue;
Et, sans nous acharner à la lueur perdue,
Sans poursuivre l’obscure et pâle vision,
Sans exiger de l’ombre une solution,

Nous raillons dans la nuit votre Brahma fétiche,
Dieu qui mêle à à sa barbe un infini postiche,

Dieu singe pour le nègre et Dieu peste au Thibet;
Bourreau dressant sur l’homme un immense gibet,
Bœuf à Memphis, dragon à Tyr, hydre en Chaldée,
Chimère et non raison, idole et non idée.
Ton globe, vieil enfant, joue avec ce hochet.
Homme, esprit fou qu’en vain Diogène cherchait,
Homme, tu fais pitié même aux êtres du gouffre,
Même à l’obscurité qui frissonne et qui souffre;
Car ton monde étroit rêve un rêve limité;
Il se compose un Dieu de son infirmité;
Et, dans l’abjection de ses passions vaines,
Instinct, science, amour, colère, guerres, haines,
Il se fait de sa fange une divinité!
Il pétrit de la terre avec l’éternité!
Et quand dans sa furie, et quand dans sa débauche,
Inepte, il a forgé cette effroyable ébauche,
Ce géant muet, sourd, aveugle, dur, fatal,
Ce spectre d’ombre ayant l’horreur pour piédestal,
Il achève ce Dieu de laideur, d’imposture,
De nuit, avec la peur qu’il a de la nature.
Ô toi qui passes là, que veux-tu donc?

Et moi:
— Je veux le nom du vrai, criai-je plein d’effroi,
Pour que je le redise à la terre inquiète.

VII. Une autre voix

Est-ce que tu serais par hasard un poète?
Qui te rend si hardi? réponds, questionneur.
Viens-tu comme Shakespeare à la tour d’Elseneur?
Pour entrer dans la brume où s’éteint la science,
Pour tenter le mystère, aurais-tu confiance,
Homme dont l’ombre fuit les pas trop approchants,
Dans le pouvoir suave et sinistre des chants?
Oui, c’est vrai, le poète est puissant. Qui l’ignore?
L’esprit, force et clarté, sort de sa voix sonore.
Trophonius est seul dans son caveau divin;
L’homme lui dit: poète! et l’abîme: devin!

Amphion chante et met en mouvement les pierres;
Orphée errant du tigre éblouit les paupières;
Homère est dans la tombe, et son âme, à travers,
Pousse au Gange Alexandre enivré de ses vers;
Prenant forme au plus noir de l’antre, les fantômes
Blanchissent à l’appel des blêmes Chrysostômes
Isaïe en criant: Deuil! malheur! fait hennir
Le féroce Orient qui dit: je vais venir!
Euripide, Sophocle, Eschyle qu’un dieu mine,
Sont comme le trépied d’où jaillit Salamine;
Elle à son gré vide et lance au peuple hébreu
Les flèches de la pluie ou le carquois du feu;
L’âpre Archiloque avec le marteau de l’ïambe
Enfonce le clou sombre où se pendra Lycambe;
Dante dit, l’œil fixé sur un homme passant
— Je t’ai vu dans l’enfer! L’homme, pâle, y descend.
La Marseillaise énorme est un bruit de mêlée;
Tyrtée est une lyre effrayante; envolée
Au-devant des combats et des drapeaux mouvants,
Et traînant, après elle un peuple dans les vents.
Les poètes profonds, hommes de la stature
Des éléments, du bien, du mal, de la nature,

Vivaient jadis, géants, en familiarité
Avec le jour, la nuit, l’ombre et l’éternité;
Ils méditaient, ayant, dans l’horreur solennelle,
Toujours devant leur âme et devant leur prunelle
La contemplation; ce mur vertigineux;
Ils avaient la science et l’ignorance en eux;
Épars, ils blanchissaient le fond des solitudes;
Ils rêvaient; ils avaient diverses attitudes;
Les uns, calmes, restaient, leur menton dans leur main,
Du côté des vivants, sur le rivage humain;
Ils regardaient passer les foules pêle-mêle,
Homme, femme, vieillard, enfant à la mamelle,
Chocs de glaives, pavois; codes, mœurs, échafauds,
Les cintres pleins d’azur des grands arcs triomphaux,
Le trône avec son roi, le prêtre avec son livre;
Et devant tout ce flot, forcené, bruyant, ivre,
Triste, joyeux, confus, violent, inclément,
Sourd, ignorant la chute et l’âpre escarpement,
Ils contemplaient de loin la mort, sombre barrage.
Les autres se tenaient hors du terrestre orage,
Comme s’ils. étaient morts, et de l’autre côté;
Ils regardaient, roulant vers eux, l’humanité
S’engouffrer sous leurs pieds, race à race engloutie;
De ce faîte, ils étaient présents à la sortie
Des empires, des faits, des grands événements,
Des prines, de puissance et de guerre écumants,

Et voyaient peuples, rois; tout ce qu’en la, nuit noire
Dégorge le sépulcre; énorme vomitoire.
Ils rayonnaient; leurs yeux sereins étincelaient;
Ils devenaient eux-même ombre et souffle, et semblaient
Au genre humain, perdu dans ses mornes délires,
Des fantômes chantants, passant avec des lyres.
Quelques-uns, murés, sourds, n’avaient plus de regard
Que l’œil intérieur, lumineux et hagard,
Et ces hommes sacrés, semblables à des mânes,
Hors du monde, habitaient dans l’antre de leurs crânes;

D’autres vivaient aux bois, et leurs esprits songeaient,
Et, laissant là leurs corps, éblouis, voyageaient;
Ils erraient d’être en être et du fait à la cause;
Voyaient s’épanouir l’arbre en apothéose;
Ils allaient, pénétrant au-delà du réel,
Par la racine au gouffre et par la fleur au ciel,
Dans la création entraient le plus possible,
Tordaient l’insaisissable avec l’inaccessible,
Étudiaient comment se forment les métaux
Dans la forge invisible aux ténébreux marteaux,
Et la seve, et le feu des volcans, et les haltes
Des laves sous l’écorce affreuse des basaltes;
Le vent chantait pour eux un sublime paean;
Ils observaient l’hiver, l’Ouragan, l’océan,
L’avalanche, l’écueil, les grêles épaissies,
Les vagues, effarés de ces épilepsies;
Et, pensifs; saisissant, jusqu’aux plus hauts zéniths,
Les intersections de tous les infinis,
L’endroit où le bien nuit, l’endroit où le mal aine,
Ils tâchaient de trouver le point fatal, suprême,
Terrible, surprenant, caché sous le linceul,
Sombre, où tous les secrets se fondent en un seul!
Dans les grottes de l’Inde ou dans les rocs d’Eubée,
Lieux où l’on croit toujours être à la nuit tombée,
À Cartlane où la fleur mandragore chanta,
À Delphe, à Summum, dans l’île Éléphanta,
Ou dans la Bactriane ou dans la Sogdiane,
Ou dans les monts qu’emplit la sinistre Diane,
Dans les déserts où l’être a l’air de se mouvoir
En dégageant un sombre et lugubre pouvoir,
Les pâtres rencontraient un homme dont la face
Semblait une lueur étrange de l’espace,
Dont la bouche parlait, et dont l’égarement
Ramenait tout à lui comme un farouche aimant;
Le loup craignait cet homme, et les brutes fuyantes
S’en allaient de son ombre encor plus effrayantes;
Et toute chose douce à ses pieds triomphait,

L’agneau, l’aube; et c’était le poète en effet.
Et de quoi vivait-il? Nul ne le sait. Son âme
Aspirait l’inconnu comme un puissant dictame;
Sa chair s’oubliait l’homme était en lui dissous;
Du, splendide Univers il tâtait le dessous;
Livide, il assistait aux blancheurs idéales,
Aux détonations d’aurores boréales,
Aux déluges roulant dans leurs vastes limons
Des hydres qui semblaient des gouffres et des monts,
Aux chaos combattant la vie, aux héroïsmes -
Des globes traversant ces rudes cataclysmes,
Au miracle, à l’atome; et son regard voyait
Des naissances d’édens dans l’abîme inquiet,
Des jets d’étoiles d’or, des chutes de décombres,
Et des explosions de créations sombres.
Et pendant qu’il rêvait, immobile, voyant
L’inouï, — l’ignoré, le trouble, l’ondoyant,
Les visions, l’azur indicible, feux, nimbes,
Masques crispés d’enfants sanglotant dans les limbes,
Et la torche de l’astre allant mettre le feu
À des mondes perdus au fond du vide bleu,
Et la larve, à travers les brumes décuplantes,
Entre les doigts des pieds il lui poussait des plantes,
Et les feuilles, qui font leur ouvrage sans bruit,.
Couvraient cet homme ainsi qu’un chêne dans la nuit.

Et cette intimité formidable avec l’être
Faisait de e songeur farouche, plus: qu’un prêtre,
Plus qu’un augure, plus qu’un pontife; un esprit;
Un spectre à qui, la mort radieuse sourit.
Et c’est de là que vient cette auguste puissance
Faite d’immensité, d’épouvante, d’essence,
Qu’a le poète saint et, qu’on sent dans ses vers
Les prodiges au fond du mystère entr’ouverts
Mêlent leur rayon fauve à son âme élargie,
Presque jusqu’à l’horreur et jusqu’à la magie,
Et qui parfois Côtoie, ainsi qu’un noir plongeur;

Le cercle où de l’enfer commence la roûgeur:

Oui, le poète peut ce qu’il veut; le poète
Arrête en lui parlant l’immense gypaète;
Il domine la ville et le désert; il peut
Unir la terre au ciel; et, dans le même nœud,
L’idéal au réel, et tisser une-’toile
Avec des fils de chanvre et des rayons d’étoile;
Il dégage de tout, du fait, vaste ou petit,
De tout ce qu’on apprend, dé tout ce qu’on bâtit,
Du progrès, du tombeau,de la matière même,
Une grande Uranie azurée et suprême;
Il met sur la science un plafond sidéral;
Il fait tomber la haine et l’épine-et-le mal.

Ce nom déborde vaste, inouï, réfractaire,
Quelque être que ce soit, au ciel et sur la terre.
O passant, entends-tu bégayer à la fois
Par toutes les rumeurs et par toutes les voix
De la création ténébreuse et murée,
Par toute l’étendue et toute la durée,
Ce nom mystérieux, énorme, illimité?
Le printemps et l’automne et l’hiver et l’été
Sont quatre accents divers de ce grand nom qui gronde;
La syllabe du vent n’est pas elle de l’onde;
Chaque être dit la sienne et la murmure à part;
L’antilope en a peur quand c’est le léopard.
Qui le proclame au fond de la forêt sonore;
Et la nuit le prononce autrement, que l’aurore.
L’homme à saisir ce mot s’est parfois occupé;
Mais en vain; car ce nom ineffable est coupé
En autant de tronçons qu’il est de créatures;
Il est épars au loin dans les autres natures;
Personne n’a l’alpha, personne l’oméga;
Ce nom, qu’en expirant le passé nous légua,
Sera continué par ceux qui sont à naître;
Et tout l’univers n’a qu’un objet: nommer l’être!

Et des soleils sont morts et des soleils mourront,
Et l’espace où l’étoile éclôt, la flamme au front,
A vu naître et pâlir dans ses profondeurs fauves
Des feux qui ne sont plus que de vieux astres chauves;
L’heure apporte et reprend les jours, les mois, les ans,
Et la mémoire avorte à compter ces passants,
Et l’ombre épouvantable en ses aveugles ondes
Roule des millions de millions de mondes,
Et le sillon engendre et la fosse enfouit,
Et tout se développe et tout s’évanouit,
Et tout brille et s’éteint; mon phosphore et le vôtre,
Et les êtres confus tombent l’un après” l’autre,
Et toujours, à jamais, sans qu’il cesse un moment
D’emplir le jour, la nuit,l’éther, le firmament,
Sans qu’aucun autre bruit l’interrompe et s’y mêle,
Le nom infini sort de la bouche éternelle!
De la ronce hideuse et de l’âme méchante;
Tendre, il plane au-dessus du cirque horrible et chante
Pour les martyrs un chant qui fait honte aux lions;
À la guerre civile il fait dire: oublions!
Il prend les cœurs lointains des peuples et les mêle,
Accouple à la raison la foi, sa sœur jumelle,
Calme la foule, endort le flot, dompte le feu,
Change l’homme; il peut tout; hors ceci: nommer Dieu.
Nommer Dieu de façon que l’abîme comprenne.
Il peut tout, hors ceci: faire à l’aube sereine,
Au lys, à l’astre, à l’hydre, à l’éclair enflammé,
Dire dans l’étendue obscure: il, l’a nommé!

== VIII. Une autre voix

Est-ce que, voyageur fatal, tu prémédites
Des actions de rêve étranges et maudites,
D’aller, de forcer l’Ombre, et fouillant, et bravant,
De t’enfoncer plus loin que les ailes du vent?
Dis. Parle. Oh! les songeurs ont une sombre envie
Ils voudraient tous avoir déjà franchi la vie,

Pour connaître, pour être ailleurs, pour voir plus loin.
Pour eux, vivre est l’Obstacle et savoir le besoin.
En attendant la tombe, ils s’en vont aux nuées,
Par les rêves de l’homme en bas continuées,
Aux vents, aux monts; aux lieux déserts, aux lieux secrets,
À tout ce qui contient de l’abîme, forêts,
Antres, écueils des mers, nids d’où tombe la plume,
À la, fleur qui s’entr’ouvre, à l’astre qui s’allume,
À tout ce qui voit l’ombre et tremble sur le bord,
Désaltérer leur soif lugubre de la mort.
As-tu donc aussi, toi, cette soif surhumaine?
Veux-tu voir? Est-ce là, passant, ce qui t’amène?
Sois tranquille, homme. Attends. Cela finit toujours
Par s’ouvrir devant toi, pauvre ombre aux instants courts.
Le mystère, à présent sans clef, sans déchirure,
Clos, fermé par la nuit, la sinistre serrure,
T’apparaît, recouvrant on ne sait quel écrou,
Barré, farouche, ayant tout l’azur pour verrou;
Ton cadavre en tombant défonce cette porte.
Le ciel noir plie et s’ouvre au poids de la chair morte.
L’homme entre enfin au gouffre exécrable ou béni.
Par la fente que fait la mort à l’infini.
Attends donc cette mort qui fait l’âme complète,
La pénétration de Dieu dans ton squelette,
Les astres, plus nombreux, quand l’homme n’est pas noir,
Dans les plis du linceul que dans les plis du soir;
Attends l’ascension suprême de la chute;
Attends la fin du songe, homme, et de la minute.
Cette explication qu’on nomme éternité.

Tout ce que tu peux faire en ton humanité,
— Écoute, dans, ta chair, homme, dans ta bassesse,
C’est de chercher, partout, de contempler sans, cesse,
De loin, de près, avec ton cœur et ta raison,
Le trépas qui jamais ne manque à l’horizon,
C’est d’observer toujours, à travers ta souffrance,
Ce visage sinistre et noir de l’espérance,

Homme, et de ne jamais quitter des yeux la mort,
Et de vivre tourné, comme l’aiguille au nord,
Vers ce but de ta route; ô pauvre âme asservie!

La mort est la veilleuse étrange de la vie,
La lueur allumée au sommet du destin.
Rougeur du soir ayant des blancheurs de matin,
Elle fait apparaître à sa clarté des rives,
Des cieux toute l’énigme en pâles perspectives,
Les cimes des flots d’ombre au fond des gouffres noirs,
Et le bien et le mal, mystérieux miroirs;
Vivante, incorruptible, égale, elle prolonge
À travers l’apparence, et la brume, et le songe,
Et tout le faux dont l’être éperdu fait l’essai,
Une lumière intègre et terrible de vrai;
Elle montre la vie; elle met en saillie
Tous ces masques, amour, haine, raison, folie,
Qui flottent dans le vent pêle-mêle, et qui vont;
Elle blêmit le bord du sans fin, du sans fond
D’où l’on ne revient pas avec la même forme;
Elle jette un rayon sur une entrée énorme,
Effleure ces rondeurs, ciel, globe, crâne nu,
Et, tranquille; avertit, de quoi? de l’inconnu.
Elle éclaire un port vague où l’on se réfugie.
On voit sur l’infini cette sombre vigie.
Donc, attends.

Autrement, sache, qui que tu sois,
Qu’un voyage en cette ombre est un lugubre choix;
Le vertige saisit les noirs plongeurs tenaces
Qui du grand ciel farouche affrontent les menaces;
L’immobile infini, fait un nain du géant.
Avant d’aller plus loin, regarde ton néant.
Car tu ne pourras, pas, quelle que soit ta course,
Aborder l’inconnu, l’origine, la source,
Le lieu fatal où tout s’explique et se rejoint,

Car tu n’entreras point, car tu n’atteindras point,
Car, l’océan de nuit, de bitume et de soufre,
Jamais tu ne pourras le franchir, car, le gouffre,
Tu ne le vaincras pas, quand même tu serais
Une espèce d’esprit des monts et des forêts,
Un cœur sentant en soi la nature bruire;
Un homme traversé par une énorme lyre!
Quand même tu serais une âme aux yeux ardents
Dont la fauve pensée a pris le mors aux dents,
Et qui, dans la caverne où le trépas seul entre,
Fuit, terrible, aspirant tous les souffles de l’antre!
Quand même tu serais un de ces mages fiers
Que nous voyons parfois, blêmes passants des airs,

Se ruer dans le gouffre où, comme eux, tu te plonges,
Pâles, les poings crispés aux rênes de leurs songes,
Se penchant, se dressant, lâchant et retenant
On ne sait quoi d’obscur, d’envolé, de tonnant,
Regardant, dispersant leurs prunelles livides,
Comme s’ils conduisaient dans l’ombre à grandes guides
À travers l’éther vague et le tourbillon fou,
Dans la brume, au hasard, devant eux, n’importe où,
Peut-être vers la nuit, peut-être vers la cime,
Un char que, traîneraient, avec un bruit d’abîme,
Croupes sombres, fuyant, s’abaissant, s’élevant;
Six cents chevaux d’éclair, de nuée et de vent!
Te figures-tu donc être, par aventure,
Autre chose qu’un point dans l’aveugle nature?
Toi, l’homme, cendre et chair, te persuades-tu
Que d’une fonction l’ombre t’a revêtu?
Quel droit te crois-tu donc à chercher, à poursuivre,
À saisir ce qui peut exister, durer, vivre,
À surprendre, à connaître, à savoir, toi qui n’es
Qu’une larve, et qui meurs aussitôt que tu nais?
J’admire ton néant inouï s’il suppose
Qu’il est par l’absolu compté pour quelque chose!
Quelle idée, ô songeur du songe humanité,

As-tu de ton cerveau pour croire, en vérité,
Qu'il peut prendre ou laisser une empreinte à l'abîme?
Ta pensée est abjecte; étroite, folle, infime
L'homme est de la fumée obscure qui descend.
T'imagines-tu donc laisser trace; ô passant?
Rêves-tu l'absolu comme ton fleuve Seine.
Coulant entre les quais de ta ville malsaine,
Recueillant les égouts de toutes tes maisons,
Doctrines, volontés, illusions, raisons;
Ayant dans son courant, si quelqu'un te réclame,
Quelque pont de Saint-Cloud où l'on repêche l'âme?
Crois-tu que cette eau vaste et sourde, Immensité,
Ne t'enveloppe pas d'oubli, de cécité,
De silence, et sanglote à ta chute,:et soit triste?
Crois-tu que ta chimère en ce gouffre persiste,
Qu'elle y garde sa forme, espoir, rêve, action;
Et qu'on retrouve, après ta disparition,

Quelque chose de toi, ton cadavre ou ton ombre,
Aux noirs filets flottants de l'éternité sombre?

X. Une autre voix

As-tu vu les penseurs s’en aller dans les cieux?
Les as-tu vus partir, hautains, séditieux,
Jetant dans l’inconnu leur voix terrifiante,
Espérant abuser de la nuit confiante,
Méditant des larcins prodigieux, rêvant
D’aller toujours plus loin et toujours plus avant,
Se proposant d’atteindre à la source première,
Au centre, au but; de prendre ou l’ombre ou la lumière
Ou l’être, et de saisir le météore au vol,
Emportés comme Élie, ailés comme saint Paul,
Et de trouver le fond, dût-on faire le vide,
Dût-on escalader le mystère livide,
L’obscurité, les cieux brumeux, les cieux vermeils,
Avec effraction d’azurs et de soleils!
Les as-tu vus, fuyants, blanche robe du prêtre,
Bras levés du devin, décroître et disparaître
Dans la profondeur sourde où tout s’évanouit?
Parle? et les as-tu vus devenir de la nuit?
Es-tu resté tremblant, cherchant leur trace vague?
Puis, regardant l’éther, les ténèbres, le vague,
Passant les jours, les nuits, debout sur une tour,
Ô songeur, as-tu vu ces hommes au retour?
Les as-tu vus de l’ombre énorme redescendre?
Et toi, l’obscur veilleur vêtu du sac de cendre,
Te dressant au-devant de leur vol éperdu,
Leur as-tu dit: — Eh bien? — Et qu’ont-ils répondu,
Ces noirs navigateurs sans navire et sans voiles?
Et qu’ont-ils rapporté, ces oiseleurs d’étoiles?

Ils n’ont rien rapporté que des fronts sans couleur
Où rien n’avait grandi, si ce n’est la pâleur.

Tous sont hagards après cette aventure étrange;
Songeur! tous ont, empreints au front, des ongles d’ange,

Tous ont dans le regard comme un songe qui fuit,
Tous ont l’air monstrueux en sortant de la nuit!
On en voit quelques-uns dont l’âme saigne et souffre,
Portant de toutes parts les morsures du gouffre.

XI. Une autre voix

Les monts sont vieux; cent fois et cent fois séculaires,
Muets, drapés de nuit sous leurs manteaux polaires,
Leur âge monstrueux épouvante l’esprit;
Sur leur front ténébreux tout l’abîme est écrit;
Une neige de jours a neigé sur leur tête;
Le temps est un morceau de leur masse; leur faîte,
De loin morne profil qui s’efface de près,
Livre au vent une barbe épaisse de forêts;
Ils ont vu tous les deuils, toutes les défaillances,
Toutes les morts passer autour de leurs silences;
Ils ont vu s’écrouler des mondes dans le puits
De l’horreur infinie et sourde; ils ont depuis
Bien des millions d’ans la lassitude d’être;
Eh bien, sur leurs noirs flancs décrépits, le vent traître,
L’orage furieux, l’éclair fauve, ce ver
Qui serpente dans l’ombre immense de l’hiver,
L’ouragan qui, farouche, aux grands sommets essuie
Sa chevelure d’air, de tempête et de pluie,
L’aquilon qui revient quand on croit qu’il s’enfuit,
La grêle, et l’avalanche, et la trombe, et le bruit,
Toutes les visions des affreuses nuées,
La tourmente et ses chocs, la bise et ses huées,
S’acharnent; et ne font, sous leurs dais de brouillards,
Pas même remuer ces effrayants vieillards.
Sois comme eux: si tu vas dans l’espace terrible,
Ne chancelle pas, homme; et garde un calme horrible.

XII AUTRES VOIX

Remonte aux premiers jours de ton globe; voilà
Une muraille; elle est prodigieuse; elle a
Dix mille pieds de haut, et de largeur dix lieues.
Falaise, alluvion, dans les profondeurs bleues
Ce haut boulevard monte, altier; froid, surprenant,
Et d’une mer à l’autre il barre un continent:
Vaste géométrie, on dirait que l’équerre;
Assise par assise, a fait ce mont calcaire,
Et que, forgeant l’espace, on ne sait quels marteaux
L’un sur l’autre ont cloué ses plans horizontaux.
L’escarpement à pic montre en bandes étroites
Ses couches s’allongeant fermes, égales, droites,
Rides profondes, plis de ce front de la nuit.
Contre ce mur se heurte et flotte et roule, et fuit
Ce que chaque saison pêle-mêle charrie.
Ce massif colossal de la maçonnerie
Terrible, que construit et détruit l’élément,
Semble un coffre de pierre immense renfermant
Les archives d’une âpre et sombre catastrophe,
Et tout un monde mort ployé comme une étoffe,
Avec ses fleurs, ses champs, ses rocs boisés ou nus,
Et ses fourmillements de monstres inconnus.
Dans des millions d’ans, ses pierres ruinées,
Ses moellons croulants seront les Pyrénées.

En attendant, vois: large, auguste, encombrant l’air,
Il est encor tout neuf, comme bâti d’hier;
Rien n’ébrèche sa ligne entière et régulière;
Et son sommet correct semble une seule pierre
Plate comme le toit d’un palais d’orient;
Le matin et le soir, en se contrariant,
Font de cette muraille épouvantable et sombre
Tantôt un banc d’aurore et tantôt un bloc d’ombre.

Et fais attention à présent: — l’air s’émeut;
Voici que sur le haut, du mur géant, il pleut.
La pluie erre et s’en va, par le vent emportée;
Mais une goutte d’eau sur le faîte est restée.
Le lendemain, la brume, humide et blanc rideau,
Revient; il pleut encore; une autre goutte d’eau
S’ajoute à la première; et; sous cette:rosée,
Une vasque s’ébauche, et la pierre est creusée.
Désormais sur ce point l’eau va s’obstiner. Vois;
Il pleut; et l’on entend comme une triste voix;
Peut-être est-ce un démon sous la roche, qui grince
De sentir l’eau plus forte et la pierre plus mince.
Il pleut, il pleut, il pleut; janvier lugubre et mort
Passe avec l’ombre, il pleut; la goutte tombe, mord,
Et creuse; avril arrive et rapporte la nue,
Il pleut; la goutte d’eau, féroce, continue;
Et la première assise est percée; et déjà
La deuxième, qu’en vain le granit protégea,
Est atteinte; et la goutte, implacable, acharnée,

Qui dépense le siècle aussi bien que l’année,
Revient, et plonge, et troue et mine, dur foret,
Et le dedans du mont, formidable, apparaît,
Zone à zone, et voilà que, là-haut, l’aube éclaire,
La goutte étant sphérique, un bassin circulaire.
Un étang que le ciel dore, azure, rougit,
Sur le plateau désert s’étale et s’élargit.
La goutte d’eau revient, revient, revient encore,
Et tombe opiniâtre, et se fait dès l’aurore
Rapporter par le vent qui, la nuit, l’enleva,
Et fait ses volontés dans la montagne, et va,
Vient, soumettant le marbre à ses lois triomphantes,
Et passe entre deux plans, et glisse entre deux fentes,
Et démolit et sculpte, infatigable main.
Urne hier, aujourd’hui réservoir, lac demain,
L’œuvre augmente et s’enfonce, et l’œil qui veut la suivre
Croit voir un-trou qu’un ver fait aux pages d’un livre.

Penche-toi: devant nous, comme si nous rêvions,
Forant ce monstrueux monceau d’alluvions,
D’une lame percée allant à l’autre lame,.
Obéissant au poids qui d’en bas la réclame,
Hydre outil, vilbrequin; pioche, trompe, suçoir,
Commençant le matin, recommençant le soir,
Descendant l’escalier de l’épaisseur des couches,
Polissant leurs largeurs en murailles farouches,
Élargissant le haut, baissant l’âpre fond noir,
Évasant et fouillant sans cesse l’entonnoir,
Cognant partout, toujours, hiver, printemps, automne,
